—de·ter'mi·nate·ness n.

de·ter·mi·nat·er (dĭ-tŭr'mə-nā'tər) n. A determiner.

de·ter·mi·na·tion (dĭ-tŭr'mə-nā'shən) n. 1. a. The act of making or arriving at a decision. See Synonyms at decision. b. The decision reached.

2. a. Firmness of purpose; resolve: approached the task with determination and energy. b. A fixed intention or resolution: returned to school with a determination to finish. 3. a. The settling of a question or case by an authoritative decision or pronouncement, especially by a judicial body: The choice of a foster home was left to the determination of the court. b. The decision or pronouncement made.

4. a. The ascertaining or fixing of the quantity, quality, position, or character of something: a determination of the ship's longitude; a determination of the mass of the universe. b. The result of such ascertaining. 5. A fixed movement or tendency toward an object or end. 6. Logic. a. The defining of a concept through its constituent elements. b. The qualification of a concept or proposition to render it more definite or specific.

de·ter·mi·na·tive (dĭ-tŭr'mə-nā'tĭv, -nə-) adj. Tending, able, or serving to determine. See Synonyms at decisive. — n. A determining factor.

—de·ter'mi·na'tive·ly adv. —de·ter'mi·na'tive·ness n.

de·ter·mine (dĭ-tŭr'mĭn) v. de·ter·mined, de·ter·min·ing, de·ter·mines.

— v. tr. 1. a. To decide or settle (a dispute, for example) conclusively and authoritatively. b. To end or decide, as by judicial action. 2. To establish or ascertain definitely, as after consideration, investigation, or calculation. See Synonyms at discover. 3. To cause (someone) to come to a conclusion or resolution. 4. To be the cause of; regulate: Demand determines production. 5. To give direction to: The management committee determines departmental policy. 6. To limit in scope or extent. 7. Mathematics. To fix or define the position, form, or configuration of. 8. Logic. To explain or limit by adding differences. 9. Law. To put an end to; terminate. — v. intr. 1. To reach a decision; resolve. See Synonyms at decide. 2. Law. To come to an end. [Middle English determinen, from Old French determiner, from Latin dētermināre, to limit : dē-, de- + terminus, boundary.]

de·ter·mined (dī-tūr'mīnd) adj. 1. Marked by or showing determination; resolute: was engaged in a protracted struggle with a determined enemy. 2. Decided or resolved. —de·ter'mined·ly adv. —de·ter'mined·ness n.

de·ter·min·er (dī-tūr'mə-nər) n. 1. One that determines. 2. Grammar. A word belonging to a group of noun modifiers, which include articles, demonstratives, possessive adjectives, and words such as any, both, or whose, and occupying the first position in a noun phrase or the second or third position after another determiner.

de·ter·min·ism (dī-tūr'mə-nīz'əm) n. The philosophical doctrine that every event, act, and decision is the inevitable consequence of antecedents that are independent of the human will. —de·ter'min·ist n. —de·ter'min·is'tic adj. —de·ter'min·is'ti·cal·ly adv.

de·ter·rence (dī-tūr'əns, -tūr'-) n. 1. The act or a means of deterring. 2. Measures taken by a state or an alliance of states to prevent hostile action by another state.

de·ter·rent (dī-tūr'ənt, -tūr'-) adj. Tending to deter: deterrent weapons. — n. 1. Something that deters: a deterrent to theft. 2. A retaliatory means of discouraging enemy attack: a nuclear deterrent.

de·ter·sive (dī-tūr'sīv, -zīv) adj. Detergent. [French détersif, from Latin dētersus, past participle of dētergēre, to deterge. See DETERGE.] —de·ter'sive n.

de·test (dī-tĕst') v. tr. de·test·ed, de·test·ing, de·tests. To dislike intensely; abhor. [French détester, from Latin dētestārī, to curse : dē-, de- + testārī, to invoke (from testis, witness); see trei- in Appendix.] —de·test'er n.

de·test·a·ble (dī-tĕs'tə-bəl) adj. Inspiring or deserving abhorrence or scorn. See Synonyms at hateful. —de·test'a·bil'i·ty, de·test'a·ble·ness n. —de·test'a·bly adv.

de·tes·ta·tion (dē'tĕ-stā'shən) n. 1. Strong dislike or hatred; abhorrence. 2. One that is detested.

de·thatch (dē-thäch') v. de·thatched, de·thatch·ing, de·thatch·es. — v. tr. To remove (dead grass) from a lawn, usually to aerate the soil. — v. intr. To remove dead grass from a lawn. —de·thatch'er n.

de·throne (dē-thrōn') v. tr. de·throned, de·thron·ing, de·thrones. 1. To remove from the throne; depose. 2. To remove from a prominent or powerful position. —de·throne'ment n.

det·i·nue (dĕt'n-ōō', -yōō') n. Law. 1. a. An action to recover possession or the value of property wrongfully detained. b. The writ authorizing such action. 2. The act of unlawfully detaining personal property. [Middle English detenue, from Old French, detention, from past participle of detenir, to detain. See DETAIN.]

Det·mold (dĕt'mōld', -mōlt') A city of west-central Germany east of Münster. Charlemagne defeated the Saxons nearby in 783. Population, 66,282.

det·o·na·ble (dět'n-ə-bəl) adj. That can be detonated: detonable warheads; detonable bombs.

det·o·nate (dět'n-āt') v. intr. tr. det·o·nat·ed, det·o·nat·ing, det·o·nates.

To explode or cause to explode. [Latin dētonāre, dētonāt-, to thunder down : dē-, de- + tonāre, to thunder; see (s)tenə- in Appendix.] —det'·o·nat'·a·ble adj.

det·o·na·tion (dět'n-ā'shən) n. 1. The act of exploding. 2. An explosion.

det·o·na·tor (dět'n-ā'tər) n. 1. A device, such as a fuse or percussion cap, used to set off an explosive charge. 2. An explosive.

de·tour (dē'tōor', dī-tōor') n. 1. A roundabout way or course, especially a road used temporarily instead of a main route. 2. A deviation from a direct course of action. — v. intr. tr. de·toured, de·tour·ing, de·tours. To go or cause to go by a roundabout way. [French détour, from Old French destor, from destorner, to turn away : des-, de- + torner, to turn; see TURN.] de·tox (dē-tōks') Informal. v. tr. de·tox·ed, de·tox·ing, de·tox·es. To subject to detoxification. — n. (dē'tōks') A section of a hospital or clinic in which patients are detoxified. [Short for DETOXIFY.] de·tox·i·cate (dē-tōk'sī-kāt') v. tr. de·tox·i·cat·ed, de·tox·i·cat·ing, de·tox·i·cates. To detoxify.

de·tox·i·fi·ca·tion (dē-tōk'sə-fī-kā'shən) n. 1. The process of detoxifying. 2. The state or condition of being detoxified. 3. Physiology. The metabolic process by which the toxic qualities of a poison or toxin are reduced by the body. 4. A medically supervised treatment program for alcohol or drug addiction designed to purge the body of intoxicating or addictive substances. Such a program is used as a first step in overcoming physiological or psychological addiction.

de·tox·i·fy (dē-tōk'sə-fī') v. tr. de·tox·i·fied, de·tox·i·fy·ing, de·tox·i·fies.

1. To counteract or destroy the toxic properties of. 2. To remove the effects of poison from. 3. To treat (an individual) for alcohol or drug dependence, usually under a medically supervised program designed to rid the body of intoxicating or addictive substances. [DE- + TOXI(C) + -FY.] de·tract (dī-trākt') v. de·tract·ed, de·tract·ing, de·tracts. — v. tr. 1. To draw or take away; divert: They could detract little from so solid an argument. 2. Archaic. To speak ill of; belittle. — v. intr. 1. To undergo reduction in value, importance, or quality; become reduced, as in effect. Often used with from: testimony that only detracts from the strength of the plaintiff's case. 2. To divert or draw away qualities or a quality essential to the value, importance, or effect of something: a decorating scheme that detracts but does not enhance. [Middle English detracten, from Latin dētrahere, dētrāct-, to remove : dē-, de- + trahere, to pull. Sense 2, from Latin dētrāctāre, frequentative of dētrahere, to take away.] —de·trac'tor n.

de·trac·tion (dī-trāk'shən) n. 1. The act of detracting or taking away. 2. A derogatory or damaging comment on a person's character or reputation; disparagement: The candidate responded sharply to the long list of detractions concocted by his opponent. —de·trac'tive adj. —de·trac'tive-ly adv.

de·train (dē-trān') v. intr. tr. de·trained, de·train·ing, de·trains. To leave or cause to leave a railroad train. —de·train'ment n.

de·trib·al·ize (dē-trī'bə-līz') v. tr. de·trib·al·ized, de·trib·al·iz·ing, de·trib·al·iz·es. To cause to lose tribal membership and customs. —de·trib'al-i-za'tion (-trī'bə-lī-zā'shən) n.

det·ri·ment (dět'rə-mənt) n. 1. Damage, harm, or loss: took a long leave of absence without detriment to her career. See Synonyms at disadvantage. 2. Something that causes damage, harm, or loss: Smoking is now considered a detriment to good health. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin dētrīmentum, from dētrītus, past participle of dēterere, to lessen, wear down : dē-, de- + terere, to rub; see terə¹ in Appendix.]

det·ri·men·tal (dět'rə-měnt'l) adj. Causing damage or harm; injurious. —det'ri-men'tal-ly adv.

de·tri·tion (dī-trīsh'ən) n. The act of wearing away by friction: beach pebbles worn smooth by detrition. [Medieval Latin dētrītiō, dētrītiōn-, from Latin dētrītus, past participle of dēterere, to lessen, rub away. See DETRIMENT.]

de·tri·tus (dī-trī'təs) n. pl. detritus. 1. Loose fragments or grains that have been worn away from rock. 2. a. Disintegrated or eroded matter: the detritus of past civilizations. b. Accumulated material; debris: "Poems, engravings, press releases—he eagerly scrutinizes the detritus of fame" (Carlin Romano). [French détritus, from Latin dētrītus, from past participle of dēterere, to lessen, wear away. See DETRIMENT.] —de·tri'tal (-trīt'l) adj.

De·troit (dī-troit') A city of southeast Michigan opposite Windsor, Ontario, on the Detroit River, about 51 km (32 mi) long. Founded by French settlers in 1701, Detroit became known as "the automobile capital of the world" in the early 20th century. Population, 1,027,974.

de trop (də trō') adj. Too much or too many; excessive or superfluous: In retrospect the elaborate preparations seemed de trop. [French : de, in, of + trop, excess.]

de·tu·mes·cence (dē'tōō-měs'əns, -tyōō-) n. Reduction or lessening of a swelling, especially the restoration of a swollen organ or part to normal size. [From Latin dētumēscere, to subside : dē-, de- + tumēscere, to swell, inchoative of tumēre; see teuə- in Appendix.] —de'tu-mes'cent adj.

Deu·ca·li·on (dōō-kā'lē-ən, dyōō-) n. Greek Mythology. A son of Prometheus who with his wife, Pyrrha, built an ark and floated in it to survive the deluge sent by Zeus. The couple became the ancestors of the renewed human race.

deuce¹ (dōōs, dyōōs) n. 1. Games. a. A playing card having two spots or the side of a die bearing two pips. b. A cast of dice totaling two. 2. Sports. A tied score in tennis in which each player or side has 40 points, or 5 or more games, and one player or side must win 2 successive points to win the game, or 2 successive games to win the set. — v. tr. deuced, deuc-ing, deuc-es. Sports. To make the score of (a tennis game or set) deuce. [Middle English deus, from Old French, two, from Latin duōs, masculine accusative of duo. See dwo- in Appendix.]

deuce² (dōos, dyōos) Informal. n. 1. The devil: “Love is a bodily infirmity... which breaks out the deuce knows how or why” (Thackeray). 2. An outstanding example, especially of something difficult or bad: had a deuce of a time getting out of town; a deuce of a family row. 3. A severe reprimand or expression of anger: got the deuce for being late. 4. Informal. Used as an intensive: What the deuce were they thinking of? [Probably from Low German duus, a throw of two in dice games, bad luck, ultimately from Latin duo, two. See DEUCE¹.]

deuc-ed (dōo'sid, dyōo'-) adj. Informal. Darned; confounded. [From DEUCE².]

deuc-es wild (dōo'siz wīld, dyōo'-) n. Games. A variation of certain card games, such as poker, in which each deuce may represent any card the holder chooses.

Deur-ne (dūr'nə) A city of northern Belgium, a manufacturing suburb of Antwerp. Population, 80,766.

De-us (dā'əs) n. Abbr. D. God. [Middle English, from Latin. See deiw- in Appendix.]

deus ex ma-chi-na (dā'əs ěks mä'kə-nə, -nä', māk'ə-nə) n. 1. In Greek and Roman drama, a god lowered by stage machinery to resolve a plot or extricate the protagonist from a difficult situation. 2. An unexpected, artificial, or improbable character, device, or event introduced suddenly in a work of fiction or drama to resolve a situation or untangle a plot. 3. A person or event that provides a sudden and unexpected solution to a difficulty. [New Latin deus ex machinā: deus, god + ex, from + machina, machine (translation of Greek theos apo mēkhanēs).]

De-us Ra-mos (dē'ōosh rä'mōosh), João de. 1830-1896. Portuguese poet regarded as the foremost of his time. He is best remembered for his love poems.

Deut. abbr. Bible. Deuteronomy.

deut- pref. Variant of deuto-.

deuter- pref. Variant of deutero-.

deu-ter-ag-o-nist (dōo'tə-räg'ə-nīst, dyōo-) n. The character second in importance to the protagonist in classical Greek drama. [Greek deuteragōnistēs, an actor of second-class parts : deuteros, second; see deu-¹ in Appendix + agō-nistēs, actor; see PROTAGONIST.]

deu-ter-a-no-pi-a (dōo'tər-ə-nō'pē-ə, dyōo'-) n. A form of colorblindness characterized by insensitivity to green. [DEUTER(O)- + AN- + -OPIA, so called because green is considered the second of the primary colors.]

—deu'ter-a-nope' (-nōp') n. —deu'ter-a-nop'ic (-nōp'ik, -nō'pik) adj.

deu-ter-ate (dōō'tə-rāt', dyōō'-) v. tr. deu-ter-at-ed, deu-ter-at-ing, deu-ter-ates. To introduce deuterium into (a chemical compound). [DEUTER(IUM) + -ATE¹.] —deu'te-ra'tion n.

deu-te-ri-um (dōō-tîr'ē-əm, dyōō-) n. An isotope of hydrogen with one proton and one neutron in the nucleus having an atomic weight of 2.014. [DEUTER(O)- + -IUM.]

deuterium oxide (dōō-tîr'ē-əm ðk'sîd') n. An isotopic form of water with composition D₂O, isolated for use as a moderator in certain nuclear reactors.

deutero- or deuter- pref. Second; secondary: deuterocanonical. [Greek deuteros, second, secondary. See deu-¹ in Appendix.]

deu-ter-o-ca-non-i-cal (dōō'tə-rō'kə-nŏn'î-kəl, dyōō'-) adj. Bible. Of, relating to, or being a second canon, especially that consisting of sections of the Old and New Testaments not included in the original Roman Catholic canon but accepted by theologians in 1548 at the Council of Trent.

deu-ter-og-a-my (dōō'tə-rŏg'ə-mē, dyōō'-) n. See digamy.

deu-ter-on (dōō'tə-rŏn', dyōō'-) n. Abbr. d The nucleus of a deuterium atom, consisting of a proton and a neutron, regarded as a subatomic particle with unit positive charge. [DEUTER(IUM) + -ON¹.]

Deu-ter-on-o-my (dōō'tə-rŏn'ə-mē, dyōō'-) n. Abbr. Deut., Dt. Bible. A book of the Bible. See Table at Bible. [Late Latin deuteronomium, from Greek deuteronomion, a second law (from (to) deuteronomion (touto), Septuagint mistranslation of Hebrew mišnê hattôrâ hazzô't, a copy of this law) : deuteros, second; see deu-¹ in Appendix + nomos, law; see nem- in Appendix.]

—Deu'ter-o-nom'ic (-tər-ə-nŏm'ik) adj.

deuto- or deut- pref. Second; secondary: deutoplasm. [Alteration of DEUTERO-.]

deu-to-plasm (dōō'tə-plăz'əm, dyōō'-) n. The nutritive substances or yolk in the cytoplasm of an ovum or other cell. —deu'to-plas'mic adj.

deut-sche mark also deut-sche-mark (doi'chə-mărk') n. Abbr. DM A basic unit of currency in Germany. See Table at currency. [German : deutsch, German + Mark, mark.]

deut-zi-a (dōōt'sē-ə, dyōōt'-) n. Any of various shrubs of the genus Deutzia, cultivated for their clusters of white or pinkish flowers. [After Jan van der Deutz, 18th-century Dutch patron of botany.]

dev. abbr. Deviation.

De Va-le-ra (dĕv'ə-lĕr'ə, -lîr'ə), Eamon. 1882-1975. American-born Irish political leader who fought in the 1916 Easter Rebellion and was president of Sinn Fein (1918-1926) before becoming three-time prime minister of the Irish Free State and the first president of the Republic of Ireland (1959-1973).

De Val-ois (də văl'wä), Dame Ninette. Originally Edris Stannus. Born 1898. Irish-born British dancer and choreographer who danced with the Ballets Russes from 1926 to 1929 and then returned to London, where she later founded the Sadler's Wells Ballet, which became the Royal Ballet at Covent Garden (1956).

de-val-ue (dē-vāl'yōō) also de-val-u-ate (-vāl'yōō-āt') v. de-val-ued also de-valu-at-ed, de-val-u-ing also de-val-u-at-ing, de-val-ues also de-val-u-ates. — v. tr. 1. To lessen or cancel the value of. 2. To lower the exchange value of (a currency) by lowering its gold equivalency. — v. intr. To lower the exchange value of a currency by lowering its gold equivalency.

—de-val'u-a'tion n.

De·va·na·ga·ri (dā'və-nā'gə-rē) n. The alphabet in which Sanskrit and many modern Indian languages are written. [Sanskrit devanāgarī: deva-, divine; see deiw- in Appendix + nāgarī, feminine of nāgara-, of a town (from nagaram, town, probably of Dravidian origin).]

dev-as-tate (dēv'ə-stāt') v. tr. dev-as-tat-ed, dev-as-tat-ing, dev-as-tates.

1. To lay waste; destroy. 2. To overwhelm; confound; stun: was devastated by the rude remark. [Latin dēvāstāre, dēvāstāt-: dē-, de- + vāstāre, to lay waste (from vāstus, empty, desolate); see eu-² in Appendix.] —dev/as-tat'ing-ly adv.

—dev/as-ta'tion n. —dev/as-ta'tor n.

de-vel-op (dī-věl'əp) v. de-vel-oped, de-vel-op-ing, de-vel-ops. — v. tr.

1. To bring from latency to or toward fulfillment: an instructor who develops the capabilities of each student. 2. a. To expand or enlarge: developed a national corporation into a worldwide business. b. To aid in the growth of; strengthen: exercises that develop muscles. c. To improve the quality of; refine: develops his recipes to perfection; an extra year of study to develop virtuosic technique. 3. a. To cause to become more complex or intricate; add detail and fullness to; elaborate: began with a good premise but developed it without imagination. b. Music. To elaborate (a theme) with rhythmic and harmonic variations. 4. a. To bring into being gradually: develop a new cottage industry. b. To set forth or clarify by degrees: developed her thesis in a series of articles. 5. a. To come to have gradually; acquire: develop a taste for opera; develop a friendship. b. To become affected with; contract: developed a rash; developed agoraphobia. 6. To cause gradually to acquire a specific role, function, or form, as: a. To influence the behavior of toward a specific end: an investigator who develops witnesses through flattery and intimidation. b. To cause (a tract of land) to serve a particular purpose: developed the site as a community of condominiums. c. To make available and effective to fulfill a particular end or need: develop the state's water resources to serve a growing population. d. To convert or transform: developed the play into a movie. 7. Games. To move (a chess piece) to or toward a more strategic position.

8. a. To process (a photosensitive material), especially with chemicals, in order to render a recorded image visible. b. To render (an image) visible by this means.

— v. intr. 1. a. To grow by degrees into a more advanced or mature state: With hard work, she developed into a great writer. See Synonyms at mature. b. To increase or expand. c. To improve; advance: Their skill developed until it rivaled their teacher's. 2. To come gradually into existence or activity: Tension developed between students and faculty. 3. To come gradually to light; be disclosed: reports the news as it develops. 4. Biology. a. To progress from earlier to later stages of a life cycle: Caterpillars develop into butterflies. b. To progress from earlier to later or from simpler to more complex stages of evolution. [French développer, from Old French desveloper: des-, dis- + voloper, to wrap (possibly of Celtic origin).]

—de·vel'op-a-ble adj.

de·vel·oped (dī-vĕl'əpt) adj. Advanced in industrial capability, technological sophistication, and economic productivity: traveled through the least developed areas of the world.

de·vel·op·er (dī-vĕl'ə-pĕr) n. 1. One that develops: a developer of hidden talent. 2. A person who develops real estate, especially by preparing a site for residential or commercial use. 3. A chemical used to render visible the image recorded on a photosensitive surface.

de·vel·op·ing (dī-vĕl'ə-pīng) adj. Having a relatively low level of industrial capability, technological sophistication, and economic productivity: studied the economies of developing nations.

de·vel·op·ment (dī-vĕl'əp-mənt) n. 1. The act of developing. 2. The state of being developed. 3. A significant event, occurrence, or change. 4. A group of dwellings built by the same contractor. 5. Determination of the best techniques for applying a new device or process to production of goods or services. 6. Music. a. Elaboration of a theme with rhythmic and harmonic variations. b. The part of a movement in sonata form in which the theme is elaborated and explored.

—de·vel'op-men'tal (-mĕn'tl) adj. —de·vel'op-men'tal-ly adv.

SYNONYMS: development, evolution, progress. The central meaning shared by these nouns is “a progression from a simpler or lower to a more advanced, mature, or complex form or stage”: the development of an aptitude into an accomplishment; the evolution of a plant from a seed; attempts made to foster social progress.

developmental disability (dī-vĕl'əp-mĕn'tl dīs'ə-bīl'ī-tē) n. A mental or physical incapacity, such as cerebral palsy, arising before adulthood and usually lasting throughout life.

developmental psychology (dī-vĕl'əp-mĕn'tl sī-kŏl'ə-jē) n. The branch of psychology concerned with the study of behavioral changes in an individual from birth until death.

dé·vel·op·pé (də-vĕl'ə-pā') n. A ballet movement in which one leg is raised to the knee of the supporting leg and fully extended. [French, from past participle of développer, to develop. See DEVELOP.]

De·ven·ter (dā'vən-tər) A city of east-central Netherlands on the Ijssel River east-northeast of Utrecht. A member of the Hanseatic League, it was a noted center of piety and learning during the Middle Ages. Population, 64,823.

de·ver·bal n. See deverbative.

de·verb·a·tive (dē-vûr'bə-tív) Grammar. adj. 1. Formed from a verb, such as the noun worker derived from the verb work. 2. Used in derivation from a verb, such as the suffix -er in teacher. — n. A deverbative word or element. Also called deverbal de Vere (də vîr'), Aubrey Thomas. 1814-1902. Irish poet and critic who wrote devotional verse and hymns and also studied Irish bardic lore.

Dev·er·eux (dĕv'ə-rōō'), Robert Second Earl of Essex. 1566-1601. English nobleman and favorite of Elizabeth I. He was executed for treason after taking part in an uprising of the people of London.

de·vest (dī-vĕst') v. tr. de·vest·ed, de·vest·ing, de·vests. 1. Law. To take away (a right or possession, for example). 2. Archaic. a. To remove the clothing or covering of. b. To deprive of a title, right, or item of property. [Obsolete French desvestir, to undress, from Medieval Latin disvestire: Latin dis-, dis- + Latin vestis, garment; see wes-² in Appendix.]

De·vi (dā'vĕ) n. Hinduism. A mother goddess having various manifestations and roles, especially that of consort to Shiva. [Sanskrit devī, feminine of devah, god. See deiw- in Appendix.]

de·vi·ant (dē'vĕ-ənt) adj. Differing from a norm or from the accepted standards of a society. — n. One that differs from a norm, especially a person whose behavior and attitudes differ from accepted social standards. [Middle English deviaunt, from Late Latin dēviāns, dēviānt- present participle of dēviāre, to deviate. See DEVIATE.] — de'vi·ance, de'vi·an·cy n.

de·vi·ate (dē'vĕ-āt') v. de·vi·at·ed, de·vi·at·ing, de·vi·ates. — v. intr. 1. To turn aside from a course or way. 2. To depart, as from a norm, a purpose, or a subject; stray. See Synonyms at swerve. — v. tr. To cause to turn aside or differ. — n. (-ĭt) A deviant. [Late Latin dēviāre, dēviāt-: Latin dē-, de- + Latin via, road; see wegh- in Appendix.] — de'vi·a'tor n. — de'vi·a'to'ry (-ə-tôr'ĕ, -tôr'ĕ) adj.

de·vi·a·tion (dē'vĕ-ā'shən) n. Abbr. dev. 1. The act of deviating or turning aside. 2. An abnormality; a departure: "Vice was a deviation from our nature" (Henry Fielding). 3. Deviant behavior or attitudes. 4. Divergence from an accepted political policy or party line. 5. Deflection of a compass needle caused by local magnetic influence, especially on a ship. 6. Statistics. The difference, especially the absolute difference, between one number in a set and the mean of the set. — de'vi·a'tion·ism n. — de'vi·a'tion·ist adj. & n.

SYNONYMS: deviation, aberration, divergence. The central meaning shared by these nouns is “a departure from what is prescribed or expected”: tolerates no deviation from the rules; regretted the aberrations of her early life; the divergence of two cultures.

de-vice (dī-vīs') n. 1. A contrivance or an invention serving a particular purpose, especially a machine used to perform one or more relatively simple tasks. 2. a. A technique or means. b. A plan or scheme, especially a malign one. 3. A literary contrivance, such as parallelism or personification, used to achieve a particular effect. 4. A decorative design, figure, or pattern, as one used in embroidery. See Synonyms at figure. 5. A graphic symbol or motto, especially in heraldry. 6. Archaic. The act, state, or power of devising. —idiom. leave to (one's) own devices. To allow to do as one pleases: left the child to her own devices for an hour in the afternoon. [Middle English, from Old French devis, division, wish, and Old French devise, design both from Latin dīvīsus, dīvīsa, past participle of dīvidere, to divide, separate.]

dev-il (dēv'əl) n. 1. Often Devil. Theology. In many religions, the major personified spirit of evil, ruler of Hell, and foe of God. Used with the. 2. A subordinate evil spirit; a demon. 3. A wicked or malevolent person. 4. A person: a handsome devil; the poor devil. 5. An energetic, mischievous, daring, or clever person. 6. Printing. A printer's devil. 7. A device or machine, especially one having teeth or spikes and used for tearing. 8. An outstanding example, especially of something difficult or bad: has a devil of a temper. 9. A severe reprimand or expression of anger: gave me the devil for cutting class. 10. Informal. Used as an intensive: Who the devil do you think you are? 11. Christian Science. The opposite of Truth; error. — v. tr. dev-iled or dev-illed, dev-il-ing or dev-il-ling, dev-ils or dev-ils. 1. To season (food) heavily. 2. To annoy, torment, or harass. 3. To tear up (cloth or rags) in a toothed machine. —idioms. between the devil and the deep blue sea. Between two equally unacceptable choices. give the devil his due. To give credit to a disagreeable or malevolent person. go to the devil. 3. To be unsuccessful; fail. 4. To become depraved. 5. Used in the imperative to express anger or impatience. play the devil with. To upset or ruin. the devil take the hindmost. Let each person follow self-interest, leaving others to fare as they may. the devil to pay. Trouble to be faced as a result of an action: There'll be the devil to pay if you allow the piglets inside the house. [Middle English devel, from Old English dēofol, from Latin diabolus, from Late Greek diabolos, from Greek, slanderer, from diaballein, to slander : dia-, dia- + ballein, to hurl; see g^welə- in Appendix.]

dev-il-fish (dēv'əl-fish') n. pl. devilfish or dev-il-fish-es. 1. See manta (n., sense 2). 2. See octopus (n., sense 1). 3. See gray whale.

dev-il-ish (dēv'ə-līsh) adj. 1. Of, resembling, or characteristic of a devil, as:
a. Malicious; evil. b. Mischievous, teasing, or annoying. 2. Excessive; extreme:

devilish heat. — adv. Extremely; very. —dev'il-ish-ly adv. —dev'il-ish-ness n.

dev-il-kin (dĕv'əl-kĭn) n. A little devil; an imp.

dev-il-may-care (dĕv'əl-mā-kâr') adj. 1. Heedless of caution; reckless.

2. Jovial and rakish in manner.

dev-il-ment (dĕv'əl-mənt) n. Devilish behavior; mischief.

dev-il-ry (dĕv'əl-rĕ) n. Variant of deviltry.

dev-il's advocate (dĕv'əlz äd'və-kāt') n. 1. One who argues against a cause or position, not as a committed opponent but simply for the sake of argument or to determine the validity of the cause or position. 2. Roman Catholic Church. An official appointed to present arguments against a proposed canonization or beatification.

devil's bit (dĕv'əlz bĭt) n. See blazing star (n., sense 1).

devil's club (dĕv'əlz klŭb) n. A spiny shrub (Oplopanax horridus) of western North America, having greenish-white flowers and scarlet fruit clustered in umbels.

devil's darning needle (dĕv'əlz dār'nĭng nĕd'l) n. 1. Upper Northern U.S.

See dragonfly. See Regional note at dragonfly. 2. See damselfly.

devil's food cake (dĕv'əlz fōd kāk) n. A rich chocolate cake.

Dev-il's Island (dĕv'ĭlz ī'lənd) An island in the Caribbean Sea off French Guiana. A French penal colony after the 1850's, it was used mainly for political prisoners, including Alfred Dreyfus (sequestered 1894-1899).

devil's paintbrush (dĕv'əlz pānt'brŭsh') n. See orange hawkweed.

devil's walking stick (dĕv'əlz wô'kĭng stĭk) n. See Hercules' club (n., sense 1).

dev-il-try (dĕv'əl-trĕ) or dev-il-ry (-əl-rĕ) n. pl. dev-il-tries or dev-il-ries.

1. Reckless mischief. 2. Extreme cruelty; wickedness. 3. Evil magic; witchcraft.

4. An act of mischief, cruelty, or witchcraft. [Alteration of DEVILRY.]

dev-il-wood (dĕv'əl-wōd') n. A tree (Osmanthus americanus) of the southeast United States, having fragrant greenish flowers, hard wood, and whitish bark. Also called wild olive de-vi-ous (dĕ'vĕ-əs) adj. 1. Not straightforward; shifty: a devious character.

De Vin-ne (də vĭn'ĕ), Theodore Low. 1828-1914. American printer who did much to advance fine typography through his workmanship and his writings, including The Practice of Typography (1900-1904).

2. Departing from the correct or accepted way; erring: achieved success by devious means. 3. Deviating from the straight or direct course; roundabout: a devious route. 4. Away from a main road or course; distant or removed. [From Latin dēvius, out-of-the-way : dē-, de- + via, road; see wegh- in Appendix.]

—de'vi-ous-ly adv. —de'vi-ous-ness n.

de-vise (dī-vīz') v. tr. de-vised, de-vis-ing, de-vis-es. 1. To form, plan, or arrange in the mind; design or contrive: devised a new system for handling mail orders. 2. Law. To transmit or give (real property) by will. 3. Archaic. To suppose; imagine. — n. Law. 1. a. The act of transmitting or giving real property by will. b. The property or lands so transmitted or given. 2. A will or clause in a will transmitting or giving real property. [Middle English devisen, from Old French deviser, from Vulgar Latin dēvisāre*, from Latin dīvīsāre*, frequentative of dīvidere, to divide.] —de-vis/a-ble adj. —de-vis'er n.

de-vi-see (dī-vī'zē', dēv'ī-zē') n. Law. One to whom a devise is made.

de-vi-sor (dī-vī'zər, dēv'ī-zôr') n. Law. One that makes a devise.

de-vi-tal-ize (dē-vīt'l-īz') v. tr. de-vi-tal-ized, de-vi-tal-iz-ing, de-vi-tal-iz-es. To diminish or destroy the strength or vitality of.

—de-vit'al-i-za'tion (-ī-zā'shən) n.

de-vit-ri-fy (dē-vīt'rə-fī') v. tr. de-vit-ri-fied, de-vit-ri-fy-ing, de-vit-ri-fies.

To cause (a glassy material) to become crystalline and brittle.

—de-vit'ri-fi/a-ble adj. —de-vit'ri-fi-ca'tion (-fī-kā'shən) n.

de-vo-cal-ize (dē-vō'kə-līz') v. tr. de-vo-cal-ized, de-vo-cal-iz-ing, de-vo-cal-iz-es. Linguistics. To devoice. —de-vo'cal-i-za'tion (-kə-lī-zā'shən) n.

de-voice (dē-vois') v. tr. de-voiced, de-voic-ing, de-voic-es. Linguistics. To pronounce (a normally voiced sound) without vibration of the vocal chords so as to make it wholly or partly voiceless.

de-void (dī-void') adj. Completely lacking; destitute or empty: a novel devoid of wit and inventiveness. [Middle English, past participle of devoiden, to remove, eliminate, from Old French desvoidier: des-, de- + voidier, to empty (from voide, empty); see VOID.]

de-voir (dəv-wär', dēv-wär') n. 1. Often devoirs. An act or expression of respect or courtesy; civility: pay one's devoirs. 2. Duty or responsibility. [Middle English, duty, from Old French, from devoir, to owe, from Latin dēbere. See ghabh- in Appendix.]

de-vol-a-til-ize (dē-vōl'ə-tl-īz') v. tr. de-vol-a-til-ized, de-vol-a-til-iz-ing, de-vol-a-til-iz-es. To remove volatile material from: devolatilize coal.

—de-vol'a-til-i-za'tion (-ī-zā'shən) n.

dev-o-lu-tion (dēv'ə-lōō'shən, dē'və-) n. 1. A passing down or descent through successive stages of time or a process. 2. Transference, as of rights, or qualities, to a successor. 3. Delegation of authority or duties to a subordinate or substitute. 4. A transfer of powers from a central government to local units. 5. Biology. Degeneration. [Late Latin dēvolūtiō, dēvolūtiōn-, from Latin dēvolūtus, past participle of dēvolvere, to roll down, fall to. See DEVOLVE.] —dev'o-lu'-tion-ar'y (-shə-nēr'ē) adj. —dev'o-lu'tion-ist n.

de·volve (dī-vōlvʹ) v. de·volved, de·volv·ing, de·volves. — v. tr. 1. To pass on or delegate to another: The senator devolved the duties of office upon a group of aides. 2. Archaic. To cause to roll onward or downward. — v. intr. 1. To be passed on or transferred to another: The burden of proof devolved upon the defendant. The estate devolved to an unlikely heir. 2. Archaic. To roll onward or downward. [Middle English devolven, to transfer, from Old French devolver, to confer, ascribe, from Latin dēvolvere, to roll down, fall to : dē-, de- + volvere, to roll; see wel-² in Appendix.] —de·volve/ment n.

Dev·on¹ (dēvʹən) A region of southwest England bordering on the English Channel. Occupied in Paleolithic times, it became part of Wessex in the eighth century.

Dev·on² (dēvʹən) n. Any of a breed of reddish cattle originally developed in the English county of Devon and raised primarily for beef.

De·vo·ni·an (dī-vōʹnē-ən) adj. Of, belonging to, or designating the geologic time, system of rocks, or sedimentary deposits of the fourth period of the Paleozoic Era, after the Silurian and before the Mississippian or Carboniferous Period, and characterized by the appearance of forests and amphibians. — n. The Devonian Period or its system of deposits. [After Devon, a county of southwest England.]

Devon Island (dēvʹən īʹlənd) An island of northeast Northwest Territories, Canada, between Baffin and Ellesmere islands.

Dev·on·shire cream (dēvʹən-shîrʹ krēm, -shər) n. See clotted cream. [After Devonshire, or Devon, a county of southwest England.]

de·vote (dī-vōtʹ) v. tr. de·vot·ed, de·vot·ing, de·votes. 1. To give or apply (one's time, attention, or self) entirely to a particular activity, pursuit, cause, or person. 2. To set apart for a specific purpose or use: land devoted to mining. 3. To set apart by or as if by a vow or solemn act; consecrate: a temple devoted to Apollo. [Latin dēvovēre, dēvōt-, to vow : dē-, de- + vovēre, to vow.] —de·vote/-ment n.

SYNONYMS: devote, dedicate, consecrate, pledge. These verbs are compared as they mean “to give to a particular end and especially to a higher purpose.” Devote implies faithfulness and loyalty: Nurses devote themselves to the care of the sick. Dedicate connotes a solemn, often formal commitment: “To such a task we can dedicate our lives and our fortunes, everything that we are and everything that we have” (Woodrow Wilson). Consecrate suggests sacred commitment: His entire life is consecrated to science. To pledge is to back a personal commitment by a solemn promise: “I pledge you, I pledge myself, to a new deal for the American people” (Franklin D. Roosevelt).

de·vot·ed (dī-vō'tīd) adj. 1. Feeling or displaying strong affection or attachment; ardent: a devoted friend. 2. Having been consecrated; dedicated.

—de·vot'ed·ly adv. —de·vot'ed·ness n.

dev·o·tee (dĕv'ə-tē', -tā') n. 1. One who is ardently devoted to something; an enthusiast or advocate: a devotee of sports. 2. An ardent or fanatical adherent of a religion. See Synonyms at votary.

de·vo·tion (dī-vō'shən) n. 1. Ardent, often selfless affection and dedication, as to a person. See Synonyms at love. 2. Religious ardor or zeal; piety. 3. Often devotions. a. An act of religious observance or prayer, especially when private. b. devotions. Prayers or religious texts: a book of devotions. 4. The act of devoting or the state of being devoted.

de·vo·tion·al (dī-vō'shə-nəl) adj. Of, relating to, expressive of, or used in devotion, especially of a religious nature. — n. A short religious service.

—de·vo'tion·al·ly adv.

De Vo·to (də vō'tō), Bernard Augustine. 1897-1955. American historian and critic noted for his studies of the impact of the West on the American mind.

de·vour (dī-vour') v. tr. de·voured, de·vour·ing, de·vours. 1. To eat up greedily. See Synonyms at eat. 2. To destroy, consume, or waste: Flames devoured the structure in minutes. 3. To take in eagerly: devour a novel. 4. To prey upon voraciously: was devoured by jealousy. [Middle English devouren, from Old French devourer, from Latin dēvorāre: dē-, de- + vorāre, to swallow.]

—de·vour'er n. —de·vour'ing·ly adv.

de·vout (dī-vout') adj. de·vout·er, de·vout·est. 1. Devoted to religion or to the fulfillment of religious obligations. See Synonyms at religious.

2. Displaying reverence or piety. 3. Sincere; earnest: devout wishes for their success. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin dēvōtus, past participle of dēvovēre, to vow. See DEVOTE.] —de·vout'ly adv. —de·vout'ness n.

De Vries (də vrēs'), Hugo. 1848-1935. Dutch botanist who studied evolution by observing mutations rather than natural selection. He was an early proponent of the works of Gregor Mendel.

De Vries (də vrēs'), Peter. Born 1910. American writer whose comic short stories and novels, including Sauce for the Goose (1981), detail the foibles and follies of the middle class in a witty, pun-laden style.

dew (dōō, dyōō) n. 1. Water droplets condensed from the air, usually at night, onto cool surfaces. 2. Something moist, fresh, pure, or renewing: "The timely dew of sleep/... inclines/Our eye-lids" (John Milton). 3. Moisture, as in the form of tears or perspiration, that appears in small drops. — v. tr. dewed, dew·ing, dews. To wet with or as if with dew. [Middle English deu, from Old English dēaw. See dheu-¹ in Appendix.]

DEW abbr. Distant early warning.

de-wan (dī-wän') n. Any of various government officials in India, especially a regional prime minister. [Hindi dīvān, from Persian, account book.]

Dew-ar (dōō'ər, dyōō'-), Sir James. 1842-1923. Scottish-born chemist and physicist who studied the liquefaction of gases and the properties of matter at very low temperatures and invented cordite (1889) with Sir Frederick Abel.

Dewar flask (dōō'ər fläsk) n. An insulated container used especially to store liquefied gases, having a double wall with a vacuum between the walls and silvered surfaces facing the vacuum. [After Sir James DEWAR.]

de-wat-er (dē-wô'tər, -wöt'ər) v. tr. de-wat-ered, de-wat-er-ing, de-wat-ers. To remove water from (a waste product or streambed, for example).

dew-ber-ry (dōō'bēr'ē, dyōō'-) n. 1. Any of several trailing forms of the blackberry, such as Rubus hispidus of North America and R. caesius of Europe. 2. The fruit of any of these plants.

dew-claw (dōō'klô', dyōō'-) n. A vestigial digit or claw not reaching the ground and found on the feet of certain mammals. [Origin unknown, perhaps from alteration of TOE.] —dew/clawed' adj.

dew-drop (dōō'dröp', dyōō'-) n. A drop of dew.

De Wet (də wět', vāt'), Christiaan Rudolph. 1854-1922. Boer general who was particularly successful as a guerrilla leader during the war with Great Britain (1899-1902).

Dew-ey (dōō'ē, dyōō'ē), George. 1837-1917. American naval officer known for his victory at Manila Bay (May 1, 1898) in the Spanish-American War.

Dew-ey (dōō'ē, dyōō'ē), John. 1859-1952. American philosopher and educator who was a leading exponent of philosophical pragmatism and rejected traditional methods of teaching by rote in favor of a broad-based system of practical experience.

Dew-ey (dōō'ē, dyōō'ē), Melvil. 1851-1931. American librarian and founder of the decimal system of classification (1876).

Dew-ey (dōō'ē, dyōō'ē), Thomas Edmund. 1902-1971. American politician who was the Republican nominee for President in 1944 and 1948. In the latter election he was unexpectedly beaten by Harry S Truman's whistle-stop campaign.

Dewey decimal classification (dōō'ē dēs'ə-məl kläs'ə-fī-kā'shən) n. A system used in libraries for organizing nonfiction publications into subject categories corresponding to three-digit numerals, with further specification expressed by numerals following a decimal point. [After Melvil DEWEY.]

dew-fall (dōō'fôl', dyōō'-) n. 1. The formation of dew. 2. The time of evening when dew begins to form.

De Witt (də wīt', vīt'), Jan. 1625-1672. Dutch politician. He and his brother Cornelius (1623-1672) were murdered by an angry mob for their opposition to William of Orange.

dew·lap (dōo'läp', dyōo'-) n. 1. A fold of loose skin hanging from the neck of certain animals. 2. A pendulous part similar to this, such as the wattle of a bird. [Middle English dewlappe: dew, origin unknown + lappe, fold; see LAP².]

DEW line (dōo līn, dyōo) n. A line of radar stations near the 70th parallel across the North American continent, maintained by the United States and Canada and intended to give advance warning of approaching enemy aircraft and missiles. [D(istant) E(arly) W(arning).]

de·worm (dē-wûrm') v. tr. de·wormed, de·worm·ing, de·worms. To cure (an animal) of worms; worm. —de·worm'er n.

dew point (dōo point) n. Abbr. DP The temperature at which air becomes saturated and produces dew.

dew-worm also dew worm (dōo'wûrm', dyōo'-) n. An earthworm found on or near the surface of the ground and used as fishing bait.

dew·y (dōo'ē, dyōo'ē) adj. dew·i·er, dew·i·est. 1. Moist with or as if with dew: dewy grass in early morning. 2. Accompanied by dew: a dewy morning. 3. Suggestive of the freshness or purity of dew, as in innocence or naiveté: never gave up the dewy outlook of youth. —dew'i·ly adv. —dew'i·ness n.

dew·y·eyed (dōo'ē-īd', dyōo'-) adj. Innocent; naive.

dex (dĕks) n. Slang. Dextroamphetamine.

dex·a·meth·a·sone (dĕk'sə-mĕth'ə-sōn', -zōn') n. A synthetic glucocorticoid used primarily in the treatment of inflammatory disorders. [Dexa(myl), a dextroamphetamine compound + METH(YL) + (CORTI)SONE.]

Dex·e·drine (dĕk'sī-drīn, -drĕn') A trademark used for dextroamphetamine.

dex·ie (dĕk'sē) n. Slang. A pill or tablet containing dextroamphetamine.

dex·ter (dĕk'stər) adj. 1. Of or located on the right side. 2. Heraldry. Situated on or being the side of a shield on the wearer's right and the observer's left.

3. Obsolete. Auspicious; favorable. [Latin.]

dex·ter·i·ty (dĕk-stĕr'ī-tē) n. 1. Skill and grace in physical movement, especially in the use of the hands; adroitness. 2. Mental skill or adroitness; cleverness. [French dextérité, from Latin dexteritās, from dexter, skillful.]

dex·ter·ous (dĕk'stər-əs, -strəs) also dex·trous (-strəs) adj. 1. Skillful in the use of the hands. 2. Having mental skill or adroitness. 3. Done with dexterity. [From Latin dexter, skillful.] —dex'ter·ous·ly adv. —dex'ter·ous·ness n.

SYNONYMS: dexterous, deft, adroit, handy, nimble. These adjectives refer to skill and ease in performance. Dexterous implies physical or mental agility: dexterous fingers. “This study [of law] renders men acute, inquisitive, dexterous, prompt in attack, ready in defense, full of resources” (Edmund Burke). Deft suggests quickness, sureness, neatness, and lightness of touch: decorated the cake with a few deft strokes; defused the hostility with a deft turn of phrase. Adroit implies ease and natural skill, especially in dealing with challenging situations: an adroit skier; an adroit negotiator. Handy suggests a more modest aptitude, principally in manual work: handy with a saw and hammer. Nimble stresses quickness and lightness in physical or mental performance: nimble feet; nimble wits.

dextr- pref. Variant of dextro-.

dex·tral (dĕk'strəl) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or located on the right side; right.

2. Right-handed. 3. Zoology. Of or relating to a gastropod shell that coils clockwise and has its aperture to the right when facing the observer with the apex upward. —dex·tral·i·ty (dĕk-strəl'ī-tē) n. —dex'tral·ly adv.

dex·tran (dĕk'strän', -strən) n. Any of a group of long-chain polymers of glucose with various molecular weights that are used in confections, in lacquers, as food additives, and as plasma volume expanders. [DEXTR(OSE) + -AN².]

dex·trin (dĕk'strīn) also dex·trine (dĕk'strīn, -strēn') n. Any of various soluble polysaccharides obtained from starch by the application of heat or acids and used mainly as adhesives and thickening agents.

dex·tro (dĕk'strō) adj. Dextrorotatory.

dextro- or dextr- pref. 1. On or to the right; right: dextrorotation.

2. Dextrorotatory: dextrose. [Latin, from dexter, on the right side.]

dex·tro·am·phet·a·mine (dĕk'strō-ăm-fĕt'ə-mĕn', -mīn) n. A white crystalline compound, C₉H₁₃N, that is the dextrorotatory isomer of amphetamine and is used in the form of its phosphate or sulfate salt as a central nervous system stimulant.

dex·tro·glu·cose (dĕk'strə-glōō'kōs') n. See dextrose.

dex·tro·ro·ta·tion (dĕk'strə-rō-tā'shən) n. A turning to the right. Used especially of the plane of polarization of light.

dex·tro·ro·ta·to·ry (dĕk'strə-rō'tə-tōr'ē, -tōr'ē) also dex·tro·ro·ta·ry (-rō'tə-rē) adj. Turning or rotating the plane of polarization of light to the right or clockwise: a dextrorotatory solution.

dex·trorse (dĕk'strōrs') adj. Botany. Growing upward in a spiral that turns from left to right: a dextrorse vine. [Latin dextrōrsus, from dextrōvorsus, turning toward the right : dexter, right + versus, past participle of vertere, to turn; see wer-² in Appendix.] —dex'torse'ly adv.

dex·trose (dĕk'strōs') n. The dextrorotatory form of glucose, C₆H₁₂O₆·H₂O, found naturally in animal and plant tissue and derived synthetically from starch. Also called dextroglucose dex·trous (dĕk'strəs) adj. Variant of dexterous.

dey (dā) n. 1. Used formerly as the title of the governor of Algiers before the French conquest in 1830. 2. Used formerly as the title for rulers of the states of Tunis and Tripoli. [French, from Turkish dayı, maternal uncle.]

Dezh-nev (dĕzh'nəf, dĕzh'nĕ-ôf', dĭzh-nyôf'), Cape. Also East Cape.. A cape of extreme northeast Russia on the Bering Strait opposite Alaska. It is the easternmost point of Asia.

DF abbr. Distance finder.

D.F. abbr. Defender of the Faith.

D.F.A. abbr. Doctor of Fine Arts.

DFC or D.F.C. abbr. Distinguished Flying Cross.

dft. abbr. 1. Defendant. 2. Draft.

dg abbr. Decigram.

DH or dh abbr. Baseball. Designated hitter.

D.H. abbr. Doctor of Humanities.

Dha·ka (dăk'ə, dă'kə) See Dacca.

dhar·ma (dăr'mə, dūr'-) n. 1. Hinduism & Buddhism. a. The principle or law that orders the universe. b. Individual conduct in conformity with this principle. c. The essential function or nature of a thing. 2. Hinduism. Individual obligation with respect to caste, social custom, civil law, and sacred law. 3. Buddhism. a. The body of teachings expounded by the Buddha. b. Knowledge of or duty to undertake conduct set forth by the Buddha as a way to enlightenment. c. One of the basic, minute elements from which all things are made. [Sanskrit, statute, law. See dher- in Appendix.] —dhar'mic adj.

dhar·na (dăr'nə, dūr'-) also dhur·na (dūr'nə) n. A fast conducted at the door of an offender, especially a debtor, in India as a means of obtaining compliance with a demand for justice, such as payment of a debt. [Hindi dharnā, from Prakrit dharāṇa. See dher- in Appendix.]

Dhau·la·gi·ri (dou'lə-gĭr'ē) A peak, 8,177.1 m (26,810 ft) high, in the Himalaya Mountains of west-central Nepal. It was first scaled in 1960.

Dhe·gi·ha (dă'jĕ-hă') n. pl. Dhegiha or Dhe-gi-has. 1. A branch of the Siouan linguistic family comprising the Omaha, Ponca, Osage, Kansa, and Quapaw languages. 2. a. The peoples speaking Dhegiha. b. A member of any of these peoples.

D.H.L. abbr. 1. Doctor of Hebrew Letters. 2. Doctor of Hebrew Literature.

dhole (dōl) n. A wild Asian dog (Cuon alpinus) having reddish fur and usually hunting with a pack. [Perhaps from Kanarese tōla, wolf.]

dho·ti (dō'tĕ) also dhoo·tie (dōō'-) n. pl. dho·tis also dhoo·ties. 1. A loin-cloth worn by Hindu men in India. 2. The cotton fabric used for such loincloths. [Hindi dhotī.]

dhow (dou) n. Nautical. A lateen-rigged ship used especially by Arabs along the coasts of the Indian Ocean. [Arabic dāw.]

Dhu'l-Hij-jah (dōōl-hĭj'ă) n. The 12th month of the year in the Muslim calendar. See Table at calendar. [Arabic ḍū-l-ḥijjah : ḍū, the one + al, of + ḥijja, pilgrimage.]

Dhu-li-a (dōō'lē-ə, dōōl'yə) A city of west-central India northeast of Bombay. It is an important cotton market. Population, 210,759.

Dhu'l-Qa'dah (dōōl-kā'dä) n. The 11th month of the year in the Muslim calendar. See Table at calendar. [Arabic dū-l-qa'dah : dū, the one + al, of + qa'da, sitting.]

dhur-na (dûr'nə) n. Variant of dharna.

dhur-rie (dûr'ē) n. A flat-woven cotton rug made in India. [Hindi darī.]

Di The symbol for didymium (n., sense 1).

DI abbr. Drill instructor.

di¹ pref. 1. Two; twice; double: dichromatic. 2. Containing two atoms, radicals, or groups: dichloride. [Greek. See dwo- in Appendix.]

di² pref. Variant of dia-.

dia. abbr. Diameter.

dia- or di- pref. 1. Through: diachronic. 2. Across: diatropism. [Greek, from dia, through.]

di-a-base (dī'ə-bās') n. A dark-gray to black, fine-textured igneous rock composed mainly of feldspar and pyroxene and used for monuments and as crushed stone. [French, partly from Greek diabasis, a crossing over (from diabainein, to pass through or over); see DIABETES, and partly from diabase (dia-, two alteration of di-, from Greek di-; see di¹ + base, basis from Old French); see BASE¹.]

di-a-be-tes (dī'ə-bē'tis, -tēz) n. Any of several metabolic disorders marked by excessive discharge of urine and persistent thirst, especially one of the two types of diabetes mellitus. [Middle English diabete, from Medieval Latin diabētēs, from Latin, from Greek, siphon, diabetes, from diabainein, to cross over, straddle : dia-, dia- + bainein, to go; see g^wa- in Appendix.]

WORD HISTORY: Diabetes is named for one of its distressing symptoms. The disease was known to the Greeks as diabētēs, a word derived from the verb diabainein, made up of the prefix dia-, “across, apart,” and the word bainein, “to walk, stand.” The verb diabeinein meant “to stride, walk, or stand with legs asunder”; hence, its derivative diabētēs meant “one that straddles,” or specifically “a compass, siphon.” The sense “siphon” gave rise to the use of diabētēs as the name for a disease involving the discharge of excessive amounts of urine. Diabetes is first recorded in English, in the form diabete, in a medical text written around 1425.

diabetes in-sip-i-dus (dī'ə-bē'tis ĩn-sĭp'ĩ-dəs) n. A chronic metabolic disorder characterized by intense thirst and excessive urination, caused by a deficiency of the pituitary hormone vasopressin. [New Latin diabētēs ĩnsĭpidus : Latin diabētēs, diabetes + Latin ĩnsĭpidus, insipid.]

diabetes mel-li-tus (dī'ə-bē'tīs mə-lī'təs, mēl'ī-) n. 1. A severe, chronic form of diabetes caused by insufficient production of insulin and resulting in abnormal metabolism of carbohydrates, fats, and proteins. The disease, which typically appears in childhood or adolescence, is characterized by increased sugar levels in the blood and urine, excessive thirst, frequent urination, acidosis, and wasting. Also called insulin-dependent diabetes 2. A mild form of diabetes that typically appears first in adulthood and is exacerbated by obesity and an inactive lifestyle. This disease often has no symptoms, is usually diagnosed by tests that indicate glucose intolerance, and is treated with changes in diet and an exercise regimen. Also called non-insulin-dependent diabetes [New Latin diabētēs mellītus: Latin diabētēs, diabetes + Latin mellītus, honey-sweet.]

di-a-bet-ic (dī'ə-bēt'īk) adj. 1. Of, relating to, having, or resulting from diabetes: diabetic patients; a diabetic coma. 2. Intended for use by a person with diabetes: diabetic candy. — n. A person who has diabetes.

di-ab-le (dē-ä'blə) adj. Flavored with hot spices: sauce diable. [French (à la diable, from diable, devil, from Old French. See DIABLERIE.)] di-a-ble-rie (dē-ä'blə-rē, -äb'lə-) n. 1. Sorcery; witchcraft. 2. Representation of devils or demons, as in paintings or fiction. 3. Devilish conduct; deviltry. [French, from Old French, from diable, devil, from Latin diabolus. See DEVIL.]

di-ab-lo (dē-ä'blō) adj. Diable. [Alteration (influenced by Spanish diablo, devil, from Latin diabolus); see DEVIL, of DIABLE.]

di-a-bol-i-cal (dī'ə-bōl'ī-kəl) also di-a-bol-ic (-īk) adj. 1. Of, concerning, or characteristic of the devil; satanic. 2. Appropriate to a devil, especially in degree of wickedness or cruelty. [From Middle English deabolik, from Old French diabolique, from Late Latin diabolicus, from Latin diabolus, devil. See DEVIL.]

—di'a-bol'i-cal-ly adv. —di'a-bol'i-cal-ness n.

di-ab-o-lism (dī-äb'ə-līz'əm) n. 1. Dealings with or worship of the devil or demons; sorcery. 2. Devilish conduct or character. —di-ab'o-list n.

di-ab-o-lize (dī-äb'ə-līz') v. tr. di-ab-o-lized, di-ab-o-liz-ing, di-ab-o-liz-es. 1. To cause to be devilish or diabolical. 2. To represent as diabolical.

di-a-ce-tyl-mor-phine (dī'ə-sēt'l-môrf'fēn', dī-äs'ī-tl-) n. See heroin. [DI-¹ + ACETYL + MORPHINE.]

di-a-chron-ic (dī'ə-krōn'īk) adj. Of or concerned with phenomena, especially of language, as they change through time. [From DIA- + Greek khronos, time.] —di'a-chron'i-cal-ly adv.

di-ach-ro-ny (dī-äk'rə-nē) n. 1. Diachronic or historical arrangement or analysis, especially of language. 2. Change, as in language, occurring over time. [DIACHRON(IC) + -Y².]

di-ac-o-nal (dī-äk'ə-nəl) adj. Of or concerning a deacon or the diaconate. [Late Latin diāconālis, from diāconus, deacon. See DEACON.]

di·ac·o·nate (dī-āk'ə-nīt, -nāt') n. 1. The rank, office, or tenure of a deacon.

2. Deacons considered as a group. [Late Latin diāconātus, from diāconus, deacon.

See DEACON.]

di·a·crit·ic (dī'ə-krīt'īk) adj. 1. Diacritical. 2. Medicine. Diagnostic or distinctive. — n. A mark, such as the cedilla of façade or the acute accents of résumé, added to a letter to indicate a special phonetic value or distinguish words that are otherwise graphically identical. [Greek diakritikos, distinguishing, from diakritos, distinguished, from diakrinein, to distinguish : dia-, apart; see DIA- + krinein, to separate; see krei- in Appendix.]

di·a·crit·i·cal (dī'ə-krīt'ī-kəl) adj. 1. Marking a distinction; distinguishing.

2. Able to discriminate or distinguish: a mind of great diacritical power.

3. Serving as a diacritic. [From DIACRITIC.] —di'·a·crit'·i·cal·ly adv.

Dí·a de la Ra·za (dē'ä də lä rä' sä, thě lä) n. October 12, celebrated as a holiday in Spain, Latin America, and Hispanic regions and territories of the United States to commemorate the discovery in 1492 of the New World by Christopher Columbus.

di·a·del·phous (dī'ə-děl'fəs) adj. Botany. Having the filaments of a flower united into two groups: diadelphous stamens.

di·a·dem (dī'ə-dēm', -dəm) n. 1. A crown worn as a sign of royalty. 2. Royal power or dignity. — v. tr. di·a·demed, di·a·dem·ing, di·a·dems. To adorn with or as if with a diadem. [Middle English diademe, from Old French, from Latin diadēma, from Greek, band, from diadein, to bind around : dia-, dia- + dein, dē-, to bind.]

di·aer·e·sis (dī-ēr'ī-sīs) n. Variant of dieresis.

diag. abbr. 1. Diagonal. 2. Diagram.

di·a·gen·e·sis (dī'ə-jěn'ī-sīs) n. The process of chemical and physical change in deposited sediment during its conversion to rock. —di'·a·ge·net'ic (-jə-nēt'īk) adj.

di·a·ge·ot·ro·pism (dī'ə-jē-öt'rə-pīz'əm) n. Botany. The tendency of growing parts, such as roots, to become oriented at right angles to the direction of gravitational force. —di'·a·ge'·o·trop'ic (-ə-tröp'īk, -trō'pīk) adj.

Dia·ghi·lev (dē-ä'gə-lěf', dyä'gī-lif), Sergei Pavlovich. 1872-1929. Russian ballet impresario whose Ballets Russes company, founded in Paris in 1909, featured the extraordinary talents of, among others, the dancers Nijinsky and Pavlova, the choreographers Fokine and Massine, the composers Ravel and Stravinsky, and the artists Léger and Picasso.

di·ag·nose (dī'æg-nōs', -nōz') v. di·ag·nosed, di·ag·nos·ing, di·ag·nos·es. — v. tr. To distinguish or identify (a disease, for example) by diagnosis. — v. intr. To make a diagnosis. [Back-formation from DIAGNOSIS.] —di'·ag·nos'·a·ble adj.

di·ag·no·sis (dī'æg-nō'sīs) n. pl. di·ag·no·ses (-sēz). 1. Medicine. a. The act or process of identifying or determining the nature and cause of a disease or injury through evaluation of patient history, examination, and review of laboratory data. b. The opinion derived from such an evaluation. 2. a. A critical analysis of the nature of something. b. The conclusion reached by such analysis. 3. Biology. A brief description of the distinguishing characteristics of an organism, as for taxonomic classification. [Greek diagnōsis, discernment, from diagignōskein, to distinguish : dia-, apart; see DIA- + gignōskein, gnō-, to come to know, discern; see gnō- in Appendix.]

di·ag·nos·tic (dī'æg-nōs'tīk) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or used in a diagnosis. 2. Serving to identify a particular disease; characteristic. — n. 1. Often diagnostics. (used with a sing. verb). The art or practice of medical diagnosis. 2. A symptom or a distinguishing feature serving as supporting evidence in a diagnosis. 3. An instrument or a technique used in medical diagnosis. [Greek diagnōstikos, able to distinguish, from diagnōstos, distinguished, from diagignōskein, to distinguish. See DIAGNOSIS.] —di'ag·nos'ti·cal·ly adv.

di·ag·nos·ti·cian (dī'æg-nō-stīsh'ən) n. A person who diagnoses, especially a physician specializing in medical diagnostics.

di·ag·o·nal (dī-äg'ə-nəl) adj. Abbr. diag. 1. Mathematics. a. Joining two non-adjacent vertices of a polygon. b. Joining two vertices of a polyhedron not in the same face. 2. Having a slanted or oblique direction. 3. Having oblique lines or markings. — n. 1. Abbr. diag. Mathematics. A diagonal line or plane. 2. Something, such as a row, course, or part, that is arranged obliquely. 3. A fabric woven with diagonal lines. [Latin diagōnālis, from Greek diagōnios, from angle to angle : dia-, dia- + gōnia, angle, corner; see genu-¹ in Appendix.] —di·ag'o·nal·ly adv.

di·a·gram (dī'ə-grām') n. Abbr. diag. 1. A plan, sketch, drawing, or outline designed to demonstrate or explain how something works or to clarify the relationship between the parts of a whole. 2. Mathematics. A graphic representation of an algebraic or geometric relationship. 3. A chart or graph. — v. tr.

di·a·grammed or di·a·gramed, di·a·gram·ming or di·a·gram·ing, di·a·grams or di·a·grams. To indicate or represent by or as if by a diagram. [Latin diagramma, figure, from Greek, a figure worked out by lines, plan, from diagraphēin, to mark out, delineate : dia-, dia- + graphein, to write; see gerbh- in Appendix.] —di'ā·gram'ma·ble adj. —di'ā·gram·mat'ic (-grə-măt'īk), di'ā·gram·mat'i·cal adj. —di'ā·gram·mat'i·cal·ly adv.

di·a·ki·ne·sis (dī'ə-kə-nē'sīs, -kī-) n. pl. di·a·ki·ne·ses (-sēz). Genetics. The final stage of the prophase in meiosis, characterized by shortening and thickening of the paired chromosomes, formation of the spindle fibers, disappearance of the nucleolus, and degeneration of the nuclear membrane. —di'ā·ki·net'ic (-nēt'īk) adj.

di-al (dī'əl) n. 1. A graduated surface or face on which a measurement, such as speed, is indicated by a moving needle or pointer. 2. a. The face of a clock. b. A sundial. 3. a. The panel or face on a radio or television receiver on which the frequencies or channels are indicated. b. A movable control knob or other device on a radio or television receiver used to change the frequency. 4. A rotatable disk on a telephone with numbers and letters, used to signal the number to which a call is made. — v. di-aled or di-alled, di-al-ing or di-al-ling, di-als or di-als. — v. tr. 1. To measure with or as if with a dial. 2. To point to, indicate, or register by means of a dial. 3. To control or select by means of a dial. 4. To call (a party) on a telephone. — v. intr. To use a dial, as on a telephone. [Middle English, sundial, clock, from Old French dyal, from Medieval Latin diāle, from diālis, daily, from Latin diēs, day. See deiw- in Appendix.] — di'al-er n.

dial. abbr. 1. a. Dialect. b. Dialectal. 2. a. Dialectic. b. Dialectical. 3. Dialogue.

di-a-lect (dī'ə-lĕkt') n. Abbr. dial. 1. a. A regional variety of a language distinguished by pronunciation, grammar, or vocabulary, especially a variety of speech differing from the standard literary language or speech pattern of the culture in which it exists: Cockney is a dialect of English. b. A variety of language that with other varieties constitutes a single language of which no single variety is standard: the dialects of Ancient Greek. 2. The language peculiar to an occupational group or a particular social class; jargon: the dialect of science. 3. The manner or style of expressing oneself in language or the arts. 4. A language considered as part of a larger family of languages or a linguistic branch: Spanish and French are Romance dialects. [French dialecte, from Old French, from Latin dialectus, form of speech, from Greek dialektos, speech, from dialegesthai, to discourse, use a dialect : dia-, between, over; see DIA- + legesthai, middle voice of legein, to speak; see leg- in Appendix.] — di'a-lec'tal adj. — di'a-lec'tal-ly adv.

SYNONYMS: dialect, vernacular, jargon, cant, argot, lingo, patois. These nouns denote forms of language that vary from the standard. Dialect applies to the vocabulary, grammar, and pronunciation characteristic of a specific geographic area or locality. The vernacular is the everyday language spoken by a people as distinguished from the literary language. Jargon is the specialized language used by a social or occupational group but not understood by the general public. Cant now usually refers to the specialized vocabulary of a group or trade and is often marked by the use of stock phrases. Argot applies especially to the language of the underworld or, by extension, to that of any specific group. Lingo is applied, often humorously or contemptuously, to language that is unfamiliar or so specialized that it is difficult to understand. Patois refers especially to a regional dialect without a literary tradition or to a creole.

dialect atlas (dī'ə-lĕkt' ät'ləs) n. See linguistic atlas.

dialect geography (dī'ə-lĕkt' jĕ-ög'rə-fĕ) n. See linguistic geography.

di·a·lec·tic (dī'ə-lĕk'tik) n. Abbr. dial. 1. The art or practice of arriving at the truth by the exchange of logical arguments. 2. a. The process especially associated with Hegel of arriving at the truth by stating a thesis, developing a contradictory antithesis, and combining and resolving them into a coherent synthesis.

b. Hegel's critical method for the investigation of this process. 3. a. Often dialectics. (used with a sing. or pl. verb). The Marxian process of change through the conflict of opposing forces, whereby a given contradiction is characterized by a primary and a secondary aspect, the secondary succumbing to the primary, which is then transformed into an aspect of a new contradiction. b. The Marxian critique of this process. 4. dialectics. (used with a sing. verb). A method of argument or exposition that systematically weighs contradictory facts or ideas with a view to the resolution of their real or apparent contradictions. 5. The contradiction between two conflicting forces viewed as the determining factor in their continuing interaction. [Middle English dialetik, from Old French dialetique, from Latin dialectica, logic, from Greek dialektikē (tekhnē), (art of) debate, from dialektos, speech, conversation. See DIALECT.] —di'a-lec'ti-cal, di'a-lec'tic adj.

—di'a-lec'ti-cal-ly adv.

dialectical materialism (dī'ə-lĕk'tī-kəl mə-tîr'ĕ-ə-lĭz'əm) n. The Marxian interpretation of reality that views matter as the sole subject of change and all change as the product of a constant conflict between opposites arising from the internal contradictions inherent in all events, ideas, and movements.

di·a·lec·ti·cian (dī'ə-lĕk-tīsh'ən) n. 1. One who specializes in the study of dialects. 2. One who practices or is skilled in dialectic.

di·a·lec·tol·o·gy (dī'ə-lĕk-tŏl'ə-jĕ) n. The study of dialects.

—di'a-lec'to-log'i-cal (-tə-lŏj'i-kəl) adj. —di'a-lec'to-log'i-cal-ly adv.

—di'a-lec-tol'o-gist n.

di·a·log (dī'ə-lŏg', -lŏg') n. & v. Variant of dialogue.

di·a·log·ic (dī'ə-lŏj'ik) also di·a·log·i·cal (-i-kəl) adj. Of, relating to, or written in dialogue. —di'a-log'i-cal-ly adv.

di·al·o·gist (dī-äl'ə-jĭst, dī'ə-lŏ'gĭst, -lŏg'ĭst) n. 1. A writer of dialogue.

2. One who speaks in a dialogue. —di'a-lo-gis'tic (dī'ə-lə-jĭs'tik), di'a-lo-gis'ti-cal adj.

di·a·logue or di·a·log (dī'ə-lŏg', -lŏg') n. Abbr. dial. 1. A conversation between two or more people. 2. a. Conversation between characters in a drama or narrative. b. The lines or passages in a script that are intended to be spoken.

3. A literary work written in the form of a conversation: the dialogues of Plato.

4. Music. A composition or passage for two or more parts, suggestive of conversational interplay. 5. An exchange of ideas or opinions: achieving constructive dialogue with all political elements.

— v. di-a-logged or di-a-logged, di·a·logu·ing or di·a·log·ing, di·a·logues or di·a·logs. — v. tr. To express as or in a dialogue. — v. intr. 1. To converse in a dialogue. 2. Usage Problem. To engage in an informal exchange of views. [Middle English dialog, from Old French dialogue, from Latin dialogus, from Greek dialogos, conversation, from dialegesthai, to discuss. See DIALECT.] —di'a·log'uer n.

USAGE NOTE: In recent years the verb sense of dialogue meaning “to engage in an informal exchange of views” has been revived, particularly with reference to communication between parties in institutional or political contexts. Although Shakespeare, Coleridge, and Carlyle used it, this usage today is widely regarded as jargon or bureaucratese. For example, 98 percent of the Usage Panel rejects the sentence Critics have charged that the department was remiss in not trying to dialogue with representatives of the community before hiring the new officers.

dial tone (dī'əl tōn) n. A low, steady tone in a telephone receiver indicating that a number may be dialed.

di·al·y·sis (dī-ăl'ī-sis) n. pl. di·al·y·ses (-sēz'). 1. The separation of smaller molecules from larger molecules or of dissolved substances from colloidal particles in a solution by selective diffusion through a semipermeable membrane.

2. Hemodialysis. [Greek dialysis, separating, dissolution, from dialuein, to break up, dissolve : dia-, apart; see DIA- + luein, to loosen; see leu- in Appendix.]

—di'a·lyt'ic (-ə-līt'ik) adj. —di'a·lyt'i·cal·ly adv.

di·a·lyze (dī'ə-līz') v. tr. intr. di·a·lyzed, di·a·lyz·ing, di·a·lyz·es. To subject to or undergo dialysis. [Back-formation from DIALYSIS.] —di'a·lyz'a·bil'i·ty n.

—di'a·lyz'a·ble adj.

di·a·lyz·er (dī'ə-lī'zər) n. A machine equipped with a semipermeable membrane and used for performing dialysis.

diam. abbr. Diameter.

di·a·mag·net (dī'ə-măg'nīt) n. A diamagnetic substance. [From DIAMAGNETIC.]

di·a·mag·net·ic (dī'ə-măg-nět'ik) adj. Of or relating to a substance that is repelled by a magnet. —di'a·mag'ne·tism (-nī-tīz'əm) n.

di·a·man·te or di·a·man·té (dē'ə-măn-tā') n. 1. A small, glittering ornament, such as a rhinestone or a sequin, applied to fabric or a garment. 2. Fabric that has been covered with many of these ornaments. [French diamanté, decorated with diamonds, from diamant, diamond. See DIAMOND.]

Di·a·man·ti·na (dī'ə-mən-tē'nə) A river, about 901 km (560 mi) long, of east-central Australia flowing generally southwest as a tributary of the Warburton River.

di·am·e·ter (dī-ăm'ī-tər) n. 1. Abbr. dia., diam. Mathematics. a. A straight line segment passing through the center of a figure, especially of a circle or sphere, and terminating at the periphery. b. The length of such a segment.

2. Thickness or width. [Middle English diametre, from Old French, from Latin diametrus, from Greek diametros: dia-, dia- + metron, measure; see mē-² in Appendix.] — di·am'e·tral (-trəl) adj.

di·a·met·ri·cal (dī'ə-mět'ri-kəl) also di·a·met·ric (-rĭk) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or along a diameter. 2. Exactly opposite; contrary. — di·a·met'ri·cal·ly adv.

di·am·ine (dī-əm'ēn', -ĭn, dī'ə-mēn', -mĭn) n. Any of various chemical compounds containing two amino groups, especially hydrazine.

di·a·mond (dī'ə-mənd, dī'mənd) n. 1. An extremely hard, highly refractive crystalline form of carbon that is usually colorless and is used as a gemstone and in abrasives, cutting tools, and other applications. 2. A figure with four equal sides forming two inner obtuse angles and two inner acute angles; a rhombus or lozenge. 3. Games. a. A red, lozenge-shaped figure on certain playing cards.

b. A playing card with this figure. c. diamonds. (used with a sing. or pl. verb).

The suit of cards represented by this figure. 4. Baseball. a. An infield. b. The whole playing field. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: a diamond bracelet; diamond jewelry. — v. tr. di·a·mond·ed, di·a·mond·ing, di·a·monds. To adorn with or as if with diamonds. [Middle English diamant, from Old French diamant, from Medieval Latin diamas, diamant-, alteration of Latin adamas. See ADAMANT.]

di·a·mond·back moth (dī'ə-mənd-bāk' mōth, dī'mənd-) n. One of several small moths of the family Plutellidae having brightly patterned front wings that reveal light diamond-shaped spots when folded.

diamondback rattlesnake (dī'ə-mənd-bāk' răt'l-snāk') n. Either of two large venomous rattlesnakes (Crotalus adamanteus or C. atrox) found in the southern and western United States and in Mexico and having diamond-shaped markings on the back.

diamondback terrapin (dī'ə-mənd-bāk' tēr'ə-pĭn) n. One of several turtles of the genus Malaclemys of the southern Atlantic and Gulf coasts of the United States, having edible flesh and a carapace with diamond-shaped ridged or knobbed markings.

Di·a·mond Head (dī'ə-mənd hĕd, dī'mənd) A promontory, 232.1 m (761 ft) high, on the southeast coast of Oahu, Hawaii.

di·a·mond·if·er·ous (dī'ə-mən-dĭf'ər-əs, dī'mən-) adj. Bearing or yielding diamonds.

diamond in the rough (dī'ə-mənd ĭn thē rūf) n. pl. diamonds in the rough. One having exceptionally good qualities or the potential for greatness but lacking polish and refinement.

Di·an·a (dī-än'ə) n. Roman Mythology. The virgin goddess of hunting and child-birth, traditionally associated with the moon and identified with the Greek Artemis. [Middle English, from Latin Diāna. See deiw- in Appendix.]

Di-an-a (dī-än'ə), Princess of Wales Title of Lady Diana Frances Spencer. Born 1961. Consort (since 1981) of Charles, Prince of Wales, heir to the British throne.

di-an-drous (dī-än'drəs) adj. Botany. Having two stamens, as in the flowers of the sage.

Di-ane de Poi-tiers (dē-än' də pwä-tyā'), Duchesse de Valentinois. 1499-1566. French noblewoman and mistress of Henry II. Her influence, lasting throughout his reign (1547-1559), overshadowed that of his wife, Catherine de Médicis.

di-an-thus (dī-än'thəs) n. A plant of the genus Dianthus, which includes carnations and pinks. [New Latin Dianthus, genus name, probably alteration (influenced by DI-¹), of Greek diosanthos, carnation : Dios-, of Zeus; see DIOSCURI + anthos, flower.]

di-a-pa-son (dī'ə-pā'zən, -sən) n. Music. 1. A full, rich outpouring of harmonious sound. 2. The entire range of an instrument or voice. 3. Either of the two principal stops on a pipe organ that form the tonal basis for the entire scale of the instrument. 4. The interval and the consonance of an octave. 5. A standard indication of pitch. 6. A tuning fork. [Middle English diapasoun, from Latin diapāsōn, the whole octave, from Greek (dia) pasōn (khordōn), (through) all (the notes), feminine genitive pl. of pas. See pant- in Appendix.]

di-a-pause (dī'ə-pôz') n. Zoology. A period during which growth or development is suspended and physiological activity is diminished, as in certain insects in response to adverse environmental conditions. [Greek diapausis, pause, from diapauēin, to pause : dia-, between; see DIA- + pauein, to stop.]

di-a-pe-de-sis (dī'ə-pī-dē'sis) n. pl. di-a-pe-de-ses (-sēz). The movement or passage of blood cells, especially white blood cells, through intact capillary walls into surrounding body tissue. [Greek diapēdēsis, transudation, from diapēdan, to ooze through : dia-, dia- + pēdan, to leap, throb; see ped- in Appendix.]

—di'a-pe-det'ic (-dēt'ik) adj.

di-a-per (dī'ə-pər, dī'pər) n. 1. a. A folded piece of absorbent material, such as paper or cloth, that is placed between a baby's legs and fastened at the waist to contain excretions. b. A similar piece of material, worn by incontinent adults. 2. a. A white cotton or linen fabric patterned with small, duplicative diamond-shaped figures. b. A piece of such cloth. c. Such a pattern. — v. tr.

di-a-pered, di-a-per-ing, di-a-pers. 1. To put a diaper on. 2. To weave or decorate in a diamond-shaped pattern. [Middle English, a patterned fabric, from Old French diapre, diaspre, from Medieval Latin diasprum, a white silken material, from Medieval Greek diaspros, pure white : dia-, intensive pref.; see DIA- + aspros, white (probably from Latin asper, rough).]

di-aph-a-nous (dī-äf'ə-nəs) adj. 1. Of such fine texture as to be transparent or translucent: diaphanous tulle. 2. Characterized by delicacy of form. See Synonyms at airy. 3. Vague or insubstantial: diaphanous dreams of glory. [From

Medieval Latin diaphanus, transparent, from Greek diaphanēs, from diaphainein, to be transparent : dia-, dia- + phainein, phan-, to show; see bhā-¹ in Appendix.]

—di'a-pha-ne'i-ty (dī'ə-fə-nē'ī-tē), di-aph'a-nous-ness n.

—di-aph'a-nous-ly adv.

di-a-pho-re-sis (dī'ə-fə-rē'sīs, dī-ăf'ə-) n. Perspiration, especially when copious and medically induced. [Late Latin diaphoresis, from Greek, from diaphorein, to disperse : dia-, dia- + phorein, to convey, frequentative of pherein, to carry; see bher-¹ in Appendix.]

di-a-pho-ret-ic (dī'ə-fə-rēt'īk, dī-ăf'ə-) adj. Producing or increasing perspiration. — n. A medicine or other agent that produces perspiration. [DIA-PHOR(ESIS) + -ETIC.]

di-a-phragm (dī'ə-frām') n. 1. Anatomy. A muscular membranous partition separating the abdominal and thoracic cavities and functioning in respiration. Also called midriff 2. A membranous part that divides or separates. 3. A thin disk, especially in a microphone or telephone receiver, that vibrates in response to sound waves to produce electric signals, or that vibrates in response to electric signals to produce sound waves. 4. A contraceptive device consisting of a thin flexible disk, usually made of rubber, that is designed to cover the uterine cervix to prevent the entry of sperm during sexual intercourse. 5. A disk having a fixed or variable opening used to restrict the amount of light traversing a lens or optical system. [Middle English diafragma, from Late Latin diaphragma, midriff, from Greek, partition, from diaphrassein, to barricade : dia-, intensive pref.; see DIA- + phrassein, phrag-, to enclose.] —di'a-phrag-mat'ic (-frăg-măt'īk) adj.

—di'a-phrag-mat'i-cal-ly adv.

di-aph-y-sis (dī-ăf'ī-sīs) n. pl. di-aph-y-ses (-sēz'). Anatomy. The shaft of a long bone. [Greek diaphusis, spinous process of the tibia, from diaphuesthai, to grow between : dia-, dia- + phuesthai, to grow, middle voice of phuein; see bheuə- in Appendix.] —di'a-phys'i-al, di'a-phys'e-al (dī'ə-fīz'ē-əl) adj.

di-a-pir (dī'ə-pîr') n. An anticlinal fold in which a mobile core, such as salt or gypsum, has pierced through the more brittle overlying rock. [French, from Greek diapeirein, to push through : dia-, dia- + peirein, to pierce; see per-² in Appendix.] —di'a-pir'ic adj.

di-a-poph-y-sis (dī'ə-pŏf'ī-sīs) n. pl. di-a-poph-y-ses (-sēz'). Anatomy. The superior or articular surface of the transverse process of a vertebra. [DI(A)- + APOPHYSIS.] —di-ap'o-phys'i-al (-ăp'ə-fīz'ē-əl) adj.

di-ar-chy also dy-ar-chy (dī'ăr'kē) n. pl. di-ar-chies. Government by two joint rulers.

di-a-rist (dī'ə-rīst) n. A person who keeps a diary.

di-ar-rhe-a also di-ar-rhoe-a (dī'ə-rē'ə) n. Excessive and frequent evacuation of watery feces, usually indicating gastrointestinal distress or disorder. [Middle English diaria, from Medieval Latin, from Late Latin diarrhoea, from Greek diar- rhoia, from diarrhein, to flow through : dia-, dia- + rhein, to flow, run; see sreu- in Appendix.] —di'ar-rhe'al, di'ar-rhe'ic (-'ik) , di'ar-rhet'ic (-rēt'ik) adj.

di·ar·thro·sis (dī'är-thrō'sis) n. pl. di·ar·thro·ses (-sēz). Any of several types of bone articulation permitting free motion in a joint, as that of the shoulder or hip. [Greek diarthrosis, from diarthron, to articulate : dia-, between; see DIA- + arthron, to fasten by a joint (from arthron, joint); see ar- in Appendix.]

—di'ar·thro'di·al (-dē-əl) adj.

di·a·ry (dī'ə-rē) n. pl. di·a·ries. 1. A daily record, especially a personal record of events, experiences, and observations; a journal. 2. A book for use in keeping a personal record, as of experiences. [Latin diarium, daily allowance, daily journal, from diēs, day. See deiw- in Appendix.]

Di·as (dē'əs, -əsh), Bartolomeu. 1450?-1500. Portuguese navigator who was the first to round the Cape of Good Hope. Because of storms he did not actually sight it until the return leg of his voyage (May 1488).

Di·as·po·ra (dī-äs'pər-ə) n. 1. The dispersion of Jews outside of Israel from the sixth century B.C., when the Jews were exiled to Babylonia, until the present time. 2. Often diaspora. The body of Jews or Jewish communities outside Palestine or modern Israel. 3. diaspora. A dispersion of an originally homogeneous people. 4. diaspora. A dispersion of an originally homogeneous entity, such as a language or a culture: “the diaspora of English into several mutually incomprehensible languages” (Randolph Quirk). [Greek diaspora, dispersion, from diaspeirein, to spread about : dia-, apart; see DIA- + speirein, to sow, scatter; see sper- in Appendix.]

di·a·spore (dī'ə-spôr', -spör') n. 1. A white, pearly hydrous aluminum oxide, $AlO(OH)$, found in bauxite, corundum, and dolomite and used as a refractory and abrasive. 2. Botany. See disseminule. [From Greek diaspora, dispersion, scattering. See DIASPORA.]

di·a·stase (dī'ə-stās', -stāz') n. An amylase or a mixture of amylases that converts starch to maltose, found in certain germinating grains such as malt. [French, from Greek diastasis, separation. See DIASTASIS.] —di'a·sta'sic (-stā'sik, -z'ik) adj.

di·as·ta·sis (dī-äs'tə-sis) n. pl. di·as·ta·ses (-sēz'). 1. Pathology. Separation of normally joined parts, such as the separation of adjacent bones without fracture or of certain abdominal muscles during pregnancy. 2. Physiology. The last stage of diastole in the heart, occurring just before contraction and during which little additional blood enters the ventricle. [Greek, separation, from diistanai, to separate : dia-, apart; see DIA- + histanai, to cause to stand; see stā- in Appendix.]

—di'a·stat'ic (dī'ə-stät'ik) adj.

di·a·ste·ma (dī'ə-stē'mə) n. pl. di·a·ste·ma·ta (-mə-tə). A gap or space between two teeth. [Late Latin, interval, from Greek diastēma, from diastēnai, to separate, second aorist of diistanai. See DIASTASIS.] —di'a-ste-mat'ic (-stə-mät'ik) adj.

di-as-to-le (dī-äs'tə-lē) n. 1. Physiology. The normal rhythmically occurring relaxation and dilatation of the heart chambers, especially the ventricles, during which they fill with blood. 2. The lengthening of a normally short syllable in Greek and Latin verse. [Greek diastolē, dilation, separation, from diastellein, to expand : dia-, apart; see DIA- + stellein, to place, send; see stel- in Appendix.]

—di'a-stol'ic (dī'ə-stöl'ik) adj.

di-as-tro-phism (dī-äs'trə-fiz'əm) n. The process of deformation by which the major features of the earth's crust, including continents, mountains, ocean beds, folds, and faults, are formed. [From Greek diastrophē, distortion, from diastrephein, to distort : dia-, apart; see DIA- + strephein, to twist; see streb(h)- in Appendix.] —di'a-stroph'ic (dī'ə-strōf'ik, -strō'fik) adj.

di-a-tes-sa-ron (dī'ə-tēs'ər-ən) n. The four Gospels combined into a single narrative. [Middle English, interval of a fourth, from Latin diatessarōn, made of four (ingredients), from Greek dia tessarōn, out of four : dia-, according to; see DIA- + tessarōn, genitive of tessares, four; see k^wetwer- in Appendix.]

di-a-ther-my (dī'ə-thūr'mē) n. The therapeutic generation of local heat in body tissues by high-frequency electromagnetic currents. —di'a-ther'mic (-mīk) adj.

di-ath-e-sis (dī-äth'i-sis) n. pl. di-ath-e-ses (-sēz'). A hereditary predisposition of the body to a disease, a group of diseases, an allergy, or another disorder. [Greek, disposition, condition, from diatithenai, to dispose : dia-, dia- + tithenai, to place, set; see dhē- in Appendix.] —di'a-thet'ic (dī'ə-thēt'ik) adj.

di-a-tom (dī'ə-tōm') n. Botany. Any of various microscopic one-celled or colonial algae of the class Bacillariophyceae, having cell walls of silica consisting of two interlocking symmetrical valves. [New Latin diatoma, from Greek diatomos, cut in half, from diatemnein, to cut in half : dia-, dia- + temnein, to cut; see tem- in Appendix.]

di-a-to-ma-ceous (dī'ə-tə-mā'shəs, dī-ät'ə-) adj. Consisting of diatoms or their skeletons.

diatomaceous earth (dī'ə-tə-mā'shəs ūrth) n. A light-colored porous rock composed of the shells of diatoms.

di-a-tom-ic (dī'ə-tōm'ik) adj. Made up of two atoms: a diatomic molecule.

di-at-o-mite (dī-ät'ə-mīt') n. A fine, powdered diatomaceous earth used in industry as a filler, a filtering agent, an absorbent, a clarifier, and an insulator. Also called kieselguhr di-a-ton-ic (dī'ə-tōn'ik) adj. Music. Of or using only the eight tones of a standard major or minor scale without chromatic deviations. [Late Latin diatonicus, from Greek diatonikos : dia-, dia- + tonos, tone; see TONE.] —di'a-ton'i-cal-ly adv. —di'a-ton'i-cism (-i-sīz'əm) n.

di·a·tribe (dī'ə-trīb') n. A bitter, abusive denunciation. [Latin diatriba, learned discourse, from Greek diatribē, pastime, lecture, from diatribein, to consume, wear away : dia-, intensive pref.; see DIA- + tribein, to rub; see terə-¹ in Appendix.]

WORD HISTORY: Listening to a lengthy diatribe may seem like a waste of time, an attitude for which there is some etymological justification. The Greek word diatribē, the ultimate source of our word, is derived from the verb diatribein, made up of the prefix dia-, “completely,” and tribein, “to rub,” “to wear away, spend, or waste time,” “to be busy.” The verb diatribein meant “to rub hard,” “to spend or waste time,” and the noun diatribē meant “wearing away of time, amusement, serious occupation, study,” as well as “discourse, short ethical treatise or lecture, debate, argument.” It is the serious occupation of time in discourse, lecture, and debate that gave us the first use of diatribe recorded in English (1581), in the now archaic sense “discourse, critical dissertation.” The critical element of this kind of diatribe must often have been uppermost, explaining the origin of the current sense of diatribe, “a bitter criticism.”

di·at·ro·pism (dī-ăt'rə-pīz'əm) n. The tendency of certain plants or their parts to arrange themselves at right angles to a stimulus. —di·a·trop'ic (dī'ə-tröp'ik, -trō'pik) adj.

Dí·az (dē'äs, -äz), (José de la Cruz) Porfirio. 1830-1915. Mexican soldier and politician who became president after a coup in 1876 and governed the country until 1911 (except for the years 1880-1884). His increasingly dictatorial methods led to his overthrow and flight to Peru, where he died in exile.

Dí·az del Cas·til·lo (dē'äth thĕl kă-stĕl'yô), Bernal. 1492?-1581. Spanish soldier and historian whose eyewitness account of the conquest of Mexico (1519-1521) remains a classic depiction of the 16th-century conquistadors.

Dí·az de Vi·var (dē'äth thĕ vĕ-vär'), Rodrigo. See the Cid.

di·az·e·pam (dī-äz'ə-päm') n. A tranquilizer, C₁₆H₁₃CIN₂O, used in the treatment of anxiety and tension and as a sedative, a muscle relaxant, and an anticonvulsant. [DIAZ(O) + EP(OXIDE) + AM(MONIA).]

di·a·zine (dī'ə-zĕn', dī-äz'in) n. A compound containing a benzene ring in which two of the carbon atoms have been replaced by nitrogen atoms, especially any of three isomers having the composition C₄H₄N₂. [DI-¹ + AZ(O)- + -INE².]

di·az·i·non (dī-äz'ə-nŏn') n. An amber liquid, C₁₂H₂₁N₂O₃PS, used as an insecticide. [DIAZ(O) + -IN(E)² + -ON³.]

di·az·o (dī-äz'ō) adj. Relating to or containing a pair of bonded nitrogen atoms, one of which is also bonded to an aromatic hydrocarbon.

di·a·zo·ni·um (dī'ə-zō'nĕ-əm) n. The univalent cation RN₂, in which R is an aromatic hydrocarbon. [DIAZ(O) + (AMM)ONIUM.]

di·ba·sic (dī-bā'sīk) adj. 1. Containing two replaceable hydrogen atoms. 2. Or or relating to salts or acids forming salts with two atoms of a univalent metal.

dib·ber (dīb'ər) n. A dibble. [Alteration of DIBBLE.]

dib·ble (dīb'əl) n. A pointed gardening implement used to make holes in soil, especially for planting bulbs or seedlings. — v. tr. dib·bled, dib·bling, dib·bles. 1. To make holes in (soil) with a pointed implement. 2. To plant by means of a pointed implement. [Middle English dibbel.] — dib'bler n.

di·bran·chi·ate (dī-bräng'kē-īt) n. A member of the order Dibranchiata, a classification formerly used for the two-gilled cephalopods, which include the octopuses, cuttlefish, and squids. — adj. Of or belonging to the order Dibranchiata. [From New Latin Dibranchiata, order name : DI-¹ + Greek brankhia, gills.]

di·bro·mide (dī-brō'mīd', -mīd) n. A chemical compound containing two bromine atoms bound to another element or radical.

dibs (dībz) pl.n. Slang. 1. A claim; rights: I have dibs on that last piece of pie. 2. Money, especially in small amounts. [Short for dibstones, counters used in a game, probably from obsolete dib, to tap.]

di·car·box·yl·ic (dī-kär'bök-sīl'īk) adj. Containing two carboxyl groups per molecule.

di·cast (dī'kăst', dīk'ăst') n. One of the 6,000 citizens chosen each year in ancient Athens to sit in the law courts, with functions resembling those of a judge and juror. [Greek dikastēs, judge, from dikazein, to judge, from dikē, right, custom. See deik- in Appendix.] — di·cas'tic adj.

dice (dīs) n. 1. Games. Plural of die² (n., sense 3). 2. pl. dice also dices. A small cube, as of food. — v. diced, dic·ing, dic·es. — v. intr. Games. To play or gamble with dice. — v. tr. 1. Games. To win or lose (money) by gambling with dice. 2. To cut (food) into small cubes. 3. To decorate with dicelike figures. [Pl. of DIE².]

di·cen·tra (dī-sĕn'trə) n. A plant of the genus Dicentra, which includes the bleeding heart and Dutchman's breeches. [New Latin Dicentra, genus name : DI-¹ + Greek kentron, point (from kentein, to prick); see kent- in Appendix.]

di·ceph·a·lous (dī-sĕf'ə-ləs) adj. Having two heads.

dic·er (dī'sər) n. A device used for dicing food.

dic·ey (dī'sē) adj. dic·i·er, dic·i·est. Involving or fraught with danger or risk: “an extremely dicey future on a brave new world of liquid nitrogen, tar, and smog” (New Yorker). [From DICE.]

dich- pref. Variant of dicho-.

di·cha·si·um (dī-kā'zē-əm, -zhē-əm, -zhəm) n. pl. di·cha·si·a (-zē-ə, -zhē-ə, -zhə). Botany. A cyme having two lateral flowers or branches originating from opposite points beneath a terminal flower. [New Latin, from Greek dikhasis, division, from dikhazein, to divide in two, from dikha, in two. See dwo- in Appendix.] —di·cha'si·al (-zē-əl, -zhē-əl, -zhəl) adj. —di·cha'si·al·ly adv.

di·chlo·ride (dī-klôr'īd', -klôr'-) n. A chemical compound containing two chlorine atoms bound to another element or radical. Also called bichloride di·chlo·ro·di·phen·yl·tri·chlo·ro·eth·ane (dī-klôr'ō-dī-fēn'əl-trī-klôr'ō-ēth'ān', -klôr'-, -fē'nəl-, dī-klôr'-) n. DDT.

di·chlor·vos (dī-klôr'vōs', -vəs, -klôr'-) n. A nonpersistent organophosphorous pesticide, $C_4H_7O_4Cl_2P$, of low toxicity to human beings. [DI-¹ + CHLOR(O)- + V(INYL) + (PH)OS(PHATE).]

dicho- or dich- pref. In two; into two parts: dichogamous. [Greek dikho-, from dikha, in two. See dwo- in Appendix.]

di·chog·a·mous (dī-kōg'ə-məs) adj. Botany. Having pistils and stamens that mature at different times, thus promoting cross-pollination rather than self-pollination. —di·chog'a·my (-mē) n.

di·chon·dra (dī-kōn'drə) n. A small creeping herb (Dichondra micrantha) commercially cultivated as a substitute for lawn grass. [New Latin, genus name : DI-¹ + Greek khondros, granule; see CHONDRO-.]

di·chot·o·mize (dī-kōt'ə-mīz') v. di·chot·o·mized, di·chot·o·miz·ing, di·chot·o·miz·es. — v. tr. To separate into two parts or classifications. — v. intr. To be or become divided into parts or branches; fork. —di·chot'o·mist (-mīst) n. —di·chot'o·mi·za'tion (-mī-zā'shən) n.

di·chot·o·mous (dī-kōt'ə-məs) adj. 1. Divided or dividing into two parts or classifications. 2. Characterized by dichotomy. —di·chot'o·mous·ly adv. —di·chot'o·mous·ness n.

di·chot·o·my (dī-kōt'ə-mē) n. pl. di·chot·o·mies. 1. Division into two usually contradictory parts or opinions: “the dichotomy of the one and the many” (Louis Auchincloss). 2. Astronomy. The phase of the moon, Mercury, or Venus when half of the disk is illuminated. 3. Botany. Branching characterized by successive forking into two approximately equal divisions. [Greek dikhotomia, from dikhotos, divided in two : dikho-, dicho- + temnein, to cut; see tem- in Appendix.]

di·chro·ic (dī-krō'īk) adj. 1. Manifesting dichroism. 2. Pathology. Dichromatic. [From Greek dikhroos, bicolored : di-, two; see DI-¹ + khros, color, skin.]

di·chro·ism (dī'krō-īz'əm) n. Chemistry. 1. The property possessed by some solutions of showing different colors at different concentrations. 2. The property possessed by some crystals of exhibiting two different colors when viewed along different axes.

di·chro·ite (dī-krō'īt') n. See cordierite. [DICHRO(IC) + -ITE¹.]

di·chro·mate (dī-krō'māt', dī'krō-) n. A compound containing the divalent negative ion, Cr_2O_7 , usually having a characteristic orange-red color. Also called bichromate di·chro·mat·ic (dī'krō-măt'ĭk) adj. 1. Possessing or exhibiting two colors.

2. Zoology. Having two distinct color phases not associated with season, sex, or age, as do certain species of birds. 3. Pathology. Of or relating to dichromatism.

di·chro·ma·tism (dī-krō'mə-tĭz'əm) also di·chro·mism (-mĭz'əm) n. 1. The quality or condition of being dichromatic. 2. Pathology. A form of colorblindness in which only two of the three fundamental colors can be distinguished due to a lack of one of the cone pigments.

di·chro·mic (dī-krō'mĭk) adj. 1. Pathology. Dichromatic. 2. Chemistry. Containing two chromium atoms per molecule.

dichromic acid (dī-krō'mĭk äs'ĭd) n. An acid, $H_2Cr_2O_7$, known only in solution.

di·chro·mism (dī-krō'mĭz'əm) n. Variant of dichromatism.

dick¹ (dĭk) n. Slang. A detective. [Shortening and alteration of DETECTIVE.]

dick² (dĭk) n. 1. Chiefly British. A fellow; a guy. 2. Vulgar Slang. A penis. [From Dick, nickname for Richard.]

Dick (dĭk), George Frederick. 1881-1967. American medical researcher who teamed with his wife, Gladys Henry Dick (1881-1963), to isolate the germ that causes scarlet fever. They developed a serum for the disease (1923) and the Dick test for susceptibility (1924).

dick·cis·sel (dĭk-sĭs'əl, dĭk'sĭs'-) n. A sparrowlike bird (Spiza americana) native to southern Ontario and the central United States, of which the male has a yellow breast marked with a small black bib on the throat. [Imitative of its song.]

dick·ens (dĭk'ənz) n. Informal. 1. A severe reprimand or expression of anger: gave me the dickens for being late. 2. Used as an intensive: What in the dickens is that? [Perhaps from the name Dickens, from diminutive of Dick. See DICK².]

Dick·ens (dĭk'ĭnz), Charles John Huffam. Pen name Boz. 1812-1870. British writer known for his tales of Victorian life and times. Immensely popular both then and now, his works include The Pickwick Papers (1836-1837), Oliver Twist (1837-1838), and David Copperfield (1849-1850). —Dick·en'si·an (dĭ-kĕn'zē-ən) adj.

dick·er (dĭk'ər) v. intr. dick·ered, dick·er·ing, dick·ers. To bargain; barter. — n. The act or process of bargaining. [Probably from dicker, a quantity of ten, ten hides, from Middle English diker, perhaps from Old English dīcor*, from Latin decuria, set of ten, from decem, ten. See dek in Appendix.]

WORD HISTORY: Perhaps a desire to see history repeat itself has been at work in the case of an etymology suggested for the verb dicker, first recorded in 1802 with reference to horse trading and the haggling that accompanies it. In a work published in 1848 James Fenimore Cooper used the word with reference to frontier trade. This use would support a connection with the noun dicker, which denotes a quantity of ten and was a common unit used in trading hides or furs. If the verb dicker originated in the fur trade, a parallel would exist with the noun dicker. The noun may have come into the Germanic languages and hence to English by way of trade or tribute in furs between the Germanic peoples and the Roman Empire, with the Germanic word coming from the Latin word decuria, “a group of ten men,” which in Late Latin was used as a measure of skins. The difficulty with this parallel is that no existing evidence proves conclusively the derivation of the verb dicker from the noun dicker.

dick·ey also dick·ie or dick·y (dĭk'ē) n. pl. dick·eys also dick·ies. 1. a. A woman's blouse front worn under a suit jacket or low-necked garment. b. A man's detachable shirt front. c. A collar for a shirt. d. A child's bib or pinafore. 2. A donkey. 3. A small bird. 4. a. The driver's seat on a carriage. b. A rear seat for servants on a carriage. [From diminutive of Dick, nickname for Richard.]

Dick·ey (dĭk'ē), James Lafayette. Born 1923. American writer, especially of poetry, although he is perhaps best known for his novel Deliverance (1970).

Dick·in·son (dĭk'in-sən) A city of southwest North Dakota west of Bismarck. It is a processing and shipping center in an agricultural region. Population, 16,097.

Dick·in·son (dĭk'in-sən), Emily Elizabeth. 1830-1886. American poet who was virtually a recluse at her home in Amherst, Massachusetts, where she wrote more than a thousand verses infused with emotional depth and subtlety. The first volume of her poetry was not published until 1890.

Dick·in·son (dĭk'in-sən), John. 1732-1808. American Revolutionary politician and pamphleteer who became the leading conservative voice of opposition to Great Britain through his Letters from a Farmer in Pennsylvania (1767-1768).

Dick test (dĭk tĕst) n. A skin test used to determine immunity or susceptibility to scarlet fever. [After George Frederick DICK, and Gladys Henry DICK.]

dick·y¹ (dĭk'ē) n. Variant of dickey.

dick·y² (dĭk'ē) adj. Informal. Impaired; faulty; weak: “I've got this dicky heart, he'd say to the fool” (John le Carré). [Origin unknown.]

di·cli·nous (dī-klī'nəs) adj. Botany. Having stamens and pistils in separate flowers: a declinous plant. [DI-¹ + Greek klinē, bed, couch; see klei- in Appendix + -OUS.] —di'cli'ny (dī'klī'nē) n.

di·co·fol (dī-kō'fōl, -fōl, -fōl) n. A pesticide, C₁₄H₉Cl₅O, containing a small percentage of DDT and used primarily to control mites on crops. [Origin unknown.]

di·cot·y·le·don (dī'kōt'l-ēd'n) also di·cot (dī'kōt') n. A flowering plant with two embryonic seed leaves or cotyledons that usually appear at germination.

—di'cot'y·le'don·ous (-l-ēd'n-əs) adj.

di·cro·tism (dī'krə-tĭz'əm) n. A condition in which the pulse is felt as two beats per single heartbeat. [From Greek dikrotos, double-beating : di-, two; see DI-¹ + krotos, rattling noise.] —di·crot'ic (-krōt'ĭk) adj.

dict. abbr. 1. Dictation. 2. Dictionary.

dic·ta (dĭk'tə) n. A plural of dictum.

Dic·ta·phone (dĭk'tə-fōn') A trademark used for an apparatus that records and reproduces dictation for transcription. This trademark sometimes occurs in print in lowercase: “the master himself, alone and hunched over his dictaphone far into the night” (New Republic). “There’s a dictaphone in the lab, so we’re talking as we work” (Chicago Tribune).

dic·tate (dĭk'tāt', dĭk-tāt') v. dic·tat·ed, dic·tat·ing, dic·tates. — v. tr.

1. To say or read aloud to be recorded or written by another: dictate a letter.

2. a. To prescribe with authority; impose: dictated the rules of the game. b. To control or command: “Foreign leaders were... dictated by their own circumstances, bound by the universal imperatives of politics” (Doris Kearns Goodwin). — v. intr.

1. To say or read aloud material to be recorded or written by another: dictated for an hour before leaving for the day. 2. To issue orders or commands. — n. (dĭk'tāt')

1. A directive; a command. 2. A guiding principle: followed the dictates of my conscience. [Latin dictāre, dictāt- frequentative of dīcere, to say. See deik- in Appendix.]

SYNONYMS: dictate, decree, impose, ordain, prescribe. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to set forth expressly and authoritatively”: victors dictating the terms of surrender; confiscation of alien property decreed by the legislature; impose obedience; a separation seemingly ordained by fate; taxes prescribed by law.

dic·ta·tion (dĭk-tā'shən) n. Abbr. dict. 1. a. The act or process of dictating material to another for transcription. b. The material so dictated. 2. An authoritative command or order.

dic·ta·tor (dĭk'tā'tər, dĭk-tā'-) n. 1. a. An absolute ruler. b. A tyrant; a despot. 2. An ancient Roman magistrate appointed temporarily to deal with an immediate crisis or emergency. 3. One who dictates: These initials are those of the dictator of the letter.

dic·ta·to·ri·al (dĭk'tə-tōr'ē-əl, -tōr'-) adj. 1. Tending to dictate; domineering. 2. Of, relating to, or characteristic of a dictator or dictatorship; autocratic.

—dic'ta-to'ri-al-ly adv. —dic'ta-to'ri-al-ness n.

SYNONYMS: dictatorial, authoritarian, dogmatic, doctrinaire, imperious, overbearing. These adjectives mean asserting or tending to assert one’s authority or to impose one’s will on other persons. Dictatorial stresses the inclination to exercise authority in the highhanded, peremptory manner characteristic of a dictator: The hostess indicated where the guests were to sit in her usual dictatorial manner. Authoritarian implies the expectation of unquestioning obedience: the timid, compliant child of authoritarian parents. Dogmatic suggests the imposing of one’s will or opinion as though these were beyond challenge: “When people are least sure, they are often most dogmatic” (John Kenneth Galbraith). Doctrinaire implies the imposition of one’s theories, beliefs, or doctrines: “They didn’t know the facts... and I don’t think it would’ve mattered in the slightest if they had. Very doctrinaire” (George V. Higgins). Imperious suggests the arrogant manner of one accustomed to commanding: She dismissed my opinion with an imperious wave of her hand. Overbearing implies a tendency to be oppressively or rudely domineering: His behavior toward the waiter was insufferably overbearing.

dic·ta·tor·ship (dĭk-tā’tər-ship’, dĭk’tā’-) n. 1. The office or tenure of a dictator. 2. A state or government under dictatorial rule. 3. Absolute or despotic control or power.

dic·tion (dĭk’shən) n. 1. Choice and use of words in speech or writing. 2. Degree of clarity and distinctness of pronunciation in speech or singing; enunciation. [Middle English diccion, a saying, word, from Old French, from Latin dictiō, dictiōn-, rhetorical delivery, from dictus, past participle of dīcere, to say, speak. See deik- in Appendix.] —dic’tion·al adj. —dic’tion·al·ly adv.

SYNONYMS: diction, wording, vocabulary, phraseology, phrasing. These nouns denote choice of words and the way in which they are used. Diction is the selection and arrangement of words in relation to effective expression: very poor diction in the essay; a new poetic diction. Wording stresses style or manner of expression: writing in which the wording takes on a regional flavor. Vocabulary is the aggregate of words a person understands or uses: the general vocabulary of an educated native speaker of English. Phraseology and phrasing include vocabulary, characteristic style, and the way in which words are grouped: the abstruse phraseology of physics; a composition marked by elegant phrasing.

dic·tion·ar·y (dĭk’shə-nĕr’ē) n. pl. dic·tion·ar·ies. Abbr. dict. 1. A reference book containing an alphabetical list of words, with information given for each word, usually including meaning, pronunciation, and etymology. 2. A book listing the words of a language with translations into another language. 3. A book listing words or other linguistic items in a particular category or subject with specialized information about them: a medical dictionary. 4. Computer Science. a. A list of words stored in machine-readable form for reference as by spelling-checking software. b. An electronic spelling checker. [Medieval Latin dictiōnārium, from Latin dictiō, dictiōn-, diction. See DICTION.] dic·tum (dĭk’təm) n. pl. dic·ta (-tə) or dic·tums. 1. An authoritative, often formal, pronouncement: “He cites Augustine’s dictum that ‘If you understand it, it is not God’” (Joseph Sobran). 2. Law. See obiter dictum (n., sense 1). [Latin, from neuter past participle of dīcere, to say. See deik- in Appendix.]

dic·ty·o·some (dik'tē-ə-sōm') n. Botany. The Golgi apparatus in plant cells.

[Greek diktuon, net (from dikein, to throw); see deik- in Appendix + -SOME³.]

did (dɪd) v. Past tense of do¹.

di·dact (dī'däkt') n. A didactic person. [Back-formation from DIDACTIC.]

di·dac·tic (dī-däk'tik) also di·dac·ti·cal (-tī-kəl) adj. 1. Intended to instruct.

2. Morally instructive. 3. Inclined to teach or moralize excessively. [Greek didaktikos, skillful in teaching, from didaktos, taught, from didaskein, didak-, to teach, educate.] —di·dac'ti·cal·ly adv. —di·dac'ti·cism (-tī-sīz'əm) n.

di·dac·tics (dī-däk'tiks) n. (used with a sing. or pl. verb). Instruction; teaching; pedagogy.

di·dap·per (dī'däp'ər) n. A small grebe, such as the dabchick. [Middle English didopper, alteration of divedap : from Old English dūfedoppa, pelican dūfan, to dive; see DIVE¹ + -doppa, a kind of bird.]

did·dle¹ (dɪd'l) v. did·dled, did·dling, did·dles. — v. tr. 1. Slang. To cheat; swindle: "The Swiss have special laws for people who diddle hotels" (John le Carré).

2. Computer Science. To fabricate, change, or otherwise manipulate (data) illegally. [Perhaps; akin to Old English dydrian, to deceive, or from variant of dialectal doodle, fool, simpleton; akin to Low German dudeldopp.] —did'dler n.

did·dle² (dɪd'l) v. did·dled, did·dling, did·dles. — v. tr. 1. To jerk up and down or back and forth. 2. Vulgar Slang. a. To have intercourse with (a woman). b. To practice masturbation upon. — v. intr. 1. To shake rapidly; jiggle.

2. Slang. To play with: The children diddled with the knobs on the television all afternoon. 3. Slang. To waste time: diddled around all morning. [Probably alteration of dialectal diddler, to quiver, tremble, from Middle English dideren, variant of daderen, doderen, perhaps from Low German.]

did·dly (dɪd'lē) n. Slang. A small or worthless amount: His advice wasn't worth diddly to me. [Short for diddlyshit. See DIDDLYSQUAT.]

did·dly·squat (dɪd'lē-skwɒt') n. Slang. Diddly. [Alteration of diddlyshit : did·dly (alteration of DOODLE) + SHIT.]

Di·de·rot (dē'də-rō', dē-drō'), Denis. 1713-1784. French philosopher and writer whose supreme accomplishment was his work on the Encyclopédie (1751-1772), which epitomized the spirit of Enlightenment thought. He also wrote novels, plays, critical essays, and brilliant letters to a wide circle of friends and colleagues.

did·n't (dɪd'nt) Did not.

di·do (dī'dō) n. pl. di·dos or di·does. A mischievous prank or antic; a caper. [Origin unknown.]

Di·do (dī'dō) n. Roman Mythology. The founder and queen of Carthage, who fell in love with Aeneas and killed herself when he abandoned her.

Did·rik·son (dɪd'rik-sən), Mildred Ella. In full Mildred Ella Didrikson Zaharias. Known as "Babe." 1914-1956. American athlete who excelled in basketball, baseball, and track, winning two gold medals at the 1932 Summer Olympics. She later took up golf and won the U.S. (1946) and British (1947) amateur titles and the U.S. Open (1948, 1950, and 1954).

didst (dɪdst) v. Archaic. Second person singular past tense of do¹.

di-dym-i-um (dī-dīm'ē-əm) n. 1. Symbol Di A metallic mixture, once considered an element, composed of neodymium and praseodymium. 2. A mixture of rare-earth elements and oxides used chiefly in manufacturing and coloring various forms of glass. [From Greek didumos, twin, double. See dwo- in Appendix.]

did-y-mous (dɪd'ə-məs) adj. Arranged or occurring in pairs; twin. [From Greek didumos, twin. See dwo- in Appendix.]

di-dyn-a-mous (dī-dīn'ə-məs) adj. Botany. Having four stamens in two pairs of unequal length. [From New Latin Didynamia, former class name : DI⁻¹ + Greek dunamis, power; see DYNAMIC.]

die¹ (dī) v. intr. died, dy-ing (dī'ɪŋ), dies. 1. To cease living; become dead; expire. 2. To cease existing, especially by degrees; fade: The sunlight died in the west. 3. To experience an agony or suffering suggestive of that of death: nearly died of embarrassment. 4. Informal. To desire something greatly: I am dying for a box of chocolates. She was dying to see the exhibit. 5. a. To cease operation; stop: If your vehicle dies, stay with it. b. To be destroyed, as in combat: could see the remains of two aircraft that had died in the attack. —phrasal verbs. die back. Botany. To be affected by dieback. die down. To lose strength; subside: The winds died down. die off. To undergo a sudden, sharp decline in population: Rabbits were dying off in that county. die out. To cease living completely; become extinct: tribes and tribal customs that died out centuries ago. —idiom. die hard.

1. To take a long time in passing out of existence: racial prejudices that die hard.

2. To resist against overwhelming, hopeless odds: radicalism that dies hard.

[Middle English dien, probably from Old Norse deyja. See dheu-² in Appendix.]

die² (dī) n. pl. dies or dice (dīs). 1. pl. dies. A device used for cutting out, forming, or stamping material, especially: a. An engraved metal piece used for impressing a design onto a softer metal, as in coining money. b. One of several component pieces that are fitted into a diestock to cut threads on screws or bolts. c. A part on a machine that punches shaped holes in, cuts, or forms sheet metal, cardboard, or other stock. d. A metal block containing small conical holes through which plastic, metal, or other ductile material is extruded or drawn. 2. pl. dies. Architecture. The dado of a pedestal, especially when cube-shaped. 3. pl. dice. Games. a. A small cube marked on each side with from one to six dots, usually used in pairs in gambling and in various other games. b. dice. (used with a sing. verb). A game of chance using dice. — v. tr. died, die-ing, dies. To cut, form, or stamp with or as if with a die. —idioms. load the dice. 1. To make an outcome highly probable; predetermine a result: “These factors merely load the dice, upping the odds that a household will fall into a certain... income dis- tribution" (Thomas G. Exter). 2. To put another at a distinct disadvantage, as through prior maneuver: The dice were loaded against the defendant before the trial. no dice. 3. Of no use; futile. 4. Used as a refusal to a request. the die is cast. The decision has been made and is irrevocable. [Middle English de, gaming die, from Old French, from Latin datum, from neuter past participle of dare, to give. See dō- in Appendix.]

die-back (dī'bāk') n. Botany. The gradual dying of plant shoots, starting at the tips, as a result of various diseases or climatic conditions.

di-e-cious (dī-ē'shəs) adj. Botany. Variant of dioecious.

Die-fen-ba-ker (dē'fən-bā'kər), John George. 1895-1979. Canadian politician who served as prime minister (1957-1963).

dief-fen-bach-i-a (dē'fən-bä'kē-ə, -bäk'ē-ə) n. Any of several plants of the genus Dieffenbachia native to tropical America, having stout, jointed stems and large, variegated leaves and widely cultivated as an indoor plant. Also called dumb cane, dumb plant. [New Latin, genus name, after Ernst Dieffenbach (1811-1855), German naturalist.]

die-hard also die-hard (dī'härd') adj. Stubbornly resisting change or clinging to a seemingly hopeless or outdated cause. — n. One who stubbornly resists change or tenaciously adheres to a seemingly hopeless or outdated cause: rebel die-hards who refused to surrender. — die'-hard'ism n.

diel-drin (dēl'drīn) n. A chlorinated hydrocarbon, C₁₂H₈Cl₆O, used as an insecticide and in mothproofing. [From Diel(s-A)ld(e)r (reaction), after Otto Paul Hermann DIELS, and Kurt ALDER.]

di-e-lec-tric (dī'ī-lĕk'trĭk) n. A nonconductor of electricity, especially a substance with electrical conductivity less than a millionth (10⁻⁶) of a siemens. [DI(A)- + ELECTRIC.] — di'e-lec'tric adj. — di'e-lec'tri-cal·ly adv.

dielectric constant (dī'ī-lĕk'trĭk kŏn'stənt) n. Physics. See permittivity.

dielectric heating (dī'ī-lĕk'trĭk hē'tĭng) n. The heating of electrically nonconducting materials by a rapidly varying electromagnetic field.

Diels (dēlz, dēls), Otto Paul Hermann. 1876-1954. German chemist. He shared a 1950 Nobel Prize for discoveries concerning the structure of organic matter.

Di-em (dē-ēm', dyēm'), Ngo Dinh. 1901-1963. Vietnamese political leader who became president of South Vietnam in 1954. He was assassinated in a military coup d'état.

Dien Bien Phu (dyĕn' byĕn' fōō') A town of northwest Vietnam near the Laos border. The French military base here fell to Vietminh troops on May 7, 1954, after a 56-day siege, leading to the end of France's involvement in Indochina.

di-en-ceph-a-lon (dī'ĕn-sĕf'ə-lŏn', -lən) n. The posterior part of the forebrain that connects the mesencephalon with the cerebral hemispheres, encloses the third ventricle, and contains the thalamus and hypothalamus. Also called betweenbrain, interbrain, thalamencephalon. [DI(A)- + ENCEPHALON.]

—di-en-ce-phal'ic (-sə-fäl'ik) adj.

die-off (dī'ôf', -ôf') n. The elimination of a species, population, or community of plants or animals as a result of natural causes.

Di-eppe (dē-ěp', dyěp) A city of northeast France on the English Channel north of Rouen. It is a port for channel steamers and a beach resort. Allied forces led a disastrous commando attack on the city (August 19, 1942) to test the strength of German defenses. Population, 35,957.

di-er-e-sis or di-aer-e-sis (dī-ěr'ĭ-sīs) n. pl. di-er-e-ses (-sēz'). 1. Linguistics.

a. A mark (¨) placed over the second of two adjacent vowels to indicate that they are to be pronounced as separate sounds rather than a diphthong, as in naïve. b. A mark (¨) placed over a vowel, such as the final vowel in Brontë, to indicate that the vowel is not silent. 2. Poetry. A break or pause in a line of verse that occurs when the end of a word and the end of a metric foot coincide. [Late Latin diaeresis, from Greek diairesis, from diairein, to divide : dia-, apart; see DIA- + hairein, to take.]

Dies (dīz), Martin. 1901-1972. American legislator known for his controversial leadership (1938-1945) of the House Un-American Activities Committee.

die-sel (dē'zəl, -səl) n. 1. A diesel engine. 2. A vehicle powered by a diesel engine.

Die-sel (dē'zəl), Rudolf. 1858-1913. German engineer who devised and patented (1892) an internal-combustion engine.

diesel engine (dē'zəl ɛn'jĭn) n. An internal-combustion engine that uses the heat of highly compressed air to ignite a spray of fuel introduced after the start of the compression stroke. [After Rudolf DIESEL.]

die-sink-er (dī'sĭng'kər) n. One that makes or engraves metal dies for stamping or shaping. —die/sink'ing n.

Di-es I-rae (dē'ās ĭr'ā') n. A medieval Latin hymn describing Judgment Day, used in some masses for the dead. [Medieval Latin Diēs ĭrae, day of wrath (the first words of the hymn) : Latin diēs, day + Latin ĭrae, genitive of ĭra, wrath.]

di-e-sis (dī'ĭ-sīs) n. pl. di-e-ses (-sēz'). Printing. See double dagger. [Medieval Latin, semitone (which was indicated by a double dagger), from Latin, quarter tone, from Greek diesis, a letting through, from diiēnai, to send through : dia-, dia- + hienai, to send; see yē- in Appendix.]

die-stock (dī'stök') n. An apparatus for holding the dies that cut threads on screws, bolts, pipes, or rods.

di-es-trus (dī-ěs'trəs) also di-es-trum (-trəm) n. The sexually inactive period of the estrous cycle. [DI(A)- + ESTRUS.] —di-es'trous adj.

di-et¹ (dī'ĭt) n. 1. The usual food and drink of a person or animal. 2. A regulated selection of foods, especially as prescribed for medical reasons.

3. Something used, enjoyed, or provided regularly: subsisted on a diet of detective novels during his vacation. — v. di-et-ed, di-et-ing, di-ets. — v. intr. To eat and drink according to a regulated system, especially so as to lose weight or control a medical condition. — v. tr. To regulate or prescribe food and drink for. [Middle English diete, from Old French, from Latin diaeta, way of living, diet, from Greek diaita.] — di'et-er n.

di-et² (dī'īt) n. 1. A national or local legislative assembly in certain countries, such as Japan. 2. A formal general assembly of the princes or estates of the Holy Roman Empire. [Middle English diete, day's journey, day for meeting, assembly, from Medieval Latin diēta, alteration (influenced by Latin diēs, day); see dei- in Appendix, of Latin diaeta, daily routine. See DIET¹.]

di-e-tar-y (dī'ī-tēr'ē) adj. Of or relating to diet. — n. pl. di-e-tar-ies. 1. A system or regimen of dieting. 2. A regulated daily food allowance. — di'e-tar'i-ly (-târ'ə-lē) adv.

dietary law (dī'ī-tēr'ē lô) n. Judaism. The body of regulations prescribing the kinds and combinations of food that may be eaten.

di-e-tet-ic (dī'ī-tět'ik) adj. 1. Of or relating to diet or its regulation.

2. Specially prepared or processed for restrictive diets. [Late Latin diaetēticus, from Greek diaitētikos, from diaita, diet.] — di'e-tet'i-cal-ly adv.

di-e-tet-ics (dī'ī-tět'iks) n. (used with a sing. verb). The study of nutrition as it relates to health. Also called sitology di-eth-yl-car-bam-a-zine citrate (dī-ěth'əl-kār-băm'ə-zēn' sīt'rāt') n. An anthelmintic agent, C₁₆H₂₉O₈N₃, used especially in the treatment of ascariasis and filariasis. [DI-¹ + ETHYL + CARBAM(IC ACID) + (PIPER)AZINE.]

di-eth-yl ether (dī-ěth'əl ē'thər) n. See ether (n., sense 2).

di-eth-yl-stil-bes-trol (dī-ěth'əl-stīl-bēs'trôl', -trôl', -trôl') n. DES.

diethyl tol-u-am-ide (dī-ěth'əl tōl'yōō-ăm'id', -id) n. Deet. [DI-¹ + ETHYL + TOLU(ENE) + AMIDE.]

di-e-ti-tian or di-e-ti-cian (dī'ī-tīsh'ən) n. A person specializing in dietetics. [DIET¹ + -itian (alteration of -ICIAN).]

Die-trich (dē'trīk, -trīKH), Marlene. 1901-1992. German-born American actress and singer whose first internationally famous role was the sultry-voiced temptress in The Blue Angel (1930).

dif. abbr. Difference.

diff. abbr. Difference.

dif-fer (dīf'ər) v. intr. dif-fered, dif-fer-ing, dif-fers. 1. To be dissimilar or unlike in nature, quality, amount, or form: Ambition differs from greed. 2. To be of a different opinion; disagree: The critic differed with the author on several facts. 3. Obsolete. To quarrel; dispute. [Middle English differren, from Old French differer, from Latin differre, to differ, delay : dis-, apart; see DIS- + ferre, to carry; see bher¹ in Appendix.]

SYNONYMS: differ, disagree, vary. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to be unlike or dissimilar”: Birds differ from mammals. The testimony of the two witnesses disagreed on significant points. People vary in intelligence.

ANTONYM: agree

dif·fer·ence (dɪf'ər-əns, dɪf'rəns) n. Abbr. dif., diff. 1. The quality or condition of being unlike or dissimilar. 2. a. An instance of disparity or unlikeness. b. A degree or amount by which things differ. c. A specific point or element that distinguishes one thing from another. 3. A noticeable change or effect: Exercise has made a difference in her health. 4. a. A disagreement or controversy. b. A cause of a disagreement or controversy. 5. Discrimination in taste or choice; distinction. 6. Mathematics. a. The amount by which one quantity is greater or less than another. b. The amount that remains after one quantity is subtracted from another. 7. Archaic. A distinct mark or peculiarity. — v. tr. dif·fer·enced, dif·fer·enc·ing, dif·fer·enc·es. To distinguish or differentiate.

SYNONYMS: difference, dissimilarity, unlikeness, divergence, variation, distinction, discrepancy. These nouns refer to a lack of correspondence or agreement. Difference is the most general: differences in color and size; a difference of opinion. Dissimilarity is difference between things otherwise alike or capable of close comparison: a striking dissimilarity between the personalities of the sisters. Unlikeness usually implies greater and more obvious difference: more likeness than unlikeness among children of that age. Divergence suggests an often gradually increasing difference between things originally similar: points of divergence between British and American English. Variation is difference between things of the same class or species; often it refers to modification of something original, prescribed, or typical: variations in temperature; a variation in shape. Distinction often means a difference in detail between like or related things, determinable only by close inspection: the distinction in meaning between “good” and “excellent.” A discrepancy is a difference between things that should correspond or match, as a conflict in two accounts of an incident: a discrepancy between what was promised and what was done.

dif·fer·ent (dɪf'ər-ənt, dɪf'rənt) adj. 1. Unlike in form, quality, amount, or nature; dissimilar: took different approaches to the problem. 2. Distinct or separate: That's a different issue altogether. 3. Various or assorted: interviewed different members of the community. 4. Differing from all others; unusual: a different point of view. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin differēns, differēt- present participle of differre, to differ. See DIFFER.] —dif'fer·ent·ly adv.
—dif'fer·ent·ness n.

USAGE NOTE: Different from and different than are both common in British and American English. Critics since the 18th century have singled out different than as incorrect, though it is well attested in the works of reputable writers. Where the comparison is drawn directly between two persons or things, from is usually the safer choice: My book is different from (not than) yours. But different than is more acceptably used, particularly in American usage, where the object of comparison is expressed by a full clause: The campus is different than it was 20 years ago (or The campus is different from how it was 20 years ago). As a result, a simple noun phrase following different than is often construed as elliptical for a clause, which allows for a subtle distinction in meaning between the two constructions. How different this seems from Paris suggests that the object of comparison is the city of Paris itself, whereas How different this seems than Paris suggests that the object of comparison is something like “the way things were in Paris” or “what happened in Paris.” • The construction different to is chiefly British.

dif·fer·en·ti·a (dĭf'ə-rĕn'shĕ-ə, -shə) n. pl. dif·fer·en·ti·ae (-shĕ-ĕ'). An attribute that distinguishes one entity from another, especially an attribute that distinguishes one species from others of the same genus. [Latin, difference, from differĕns, differĕnt- present participle of differre, to differ. See DIFFER.]

dif·fer·en·tia·ble (dĭf'ə-rĕn'shə-bəl, -shĕ-ə-) adj. 1. That can be differentiated: differentiable species. 2. Mathematics. Possessing a derivative.

—dif'fer·en'tia·bil'i·ty n.

dif·fer·en·ti·ae (dĭf'ə-rĕn'shĕ-ĕ') n. Plural of differentia.

dif·fer·en·tial (dĭf'ə-rĕn'shəl) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or showing a difference. 2. Constituting or making a difference; distinctive. 3. Dependent on or making use of a specific difference or distinction. 4. Mathematics. Of or relating to differentiation. 5. Involving differences in speed or direction of motion. — n.

1. Mathematics. a. An infinitesimal increment in a variable. b. The product of the derivative of a function containing one variable multiplied by the increment of the independent variable. 2. Differential gear. 3. A difference in wage rate or in price. —dif'fer·en'tial·ly adv.

differential analyzer (dĭf'ə-rĕn'shəl ăn'ə-līz'ər) n. Computer Science. A mechanical or electronic analog computer used to solve especially complicated differential equations.

differential calculus (dĭf'ə-rĕn'shəl kăl'kyə-ləs) n. Mathematics. 1. The mathematics of the variation of a function with respect to changes in independent variables. 2. The study of slopes of curves, accelerations, maxima, and minima by means of derivatives and differentials.

differential coefficient (dĭf'ə-rĕn'shəl kō'ə-fīsh'ənt) n. Mathematics. See derivative (n., sense 3).

differential equation (dĭf'ə-rĕn'shəl ȷ-kwā'zhən) n. Mathematics. An equation that expresses a relationship between functions and their derivatives.

differential gear (dĭf'ə-rĕn'shəl ġĭr) n. An arrangement of gears in an epicyclic train permitting the rotation of two shafts at different speeds, used on the rear axle of automotive vehicles to allow different rates of wheel rotation on curves.

differential rate (dĭf'ə-rĕn'shəl rāt) n. 1. A difference in wage rate paid for the same work performed under differing conditions. 2. a. A difference in the transportation rate or the number of vehicles per unit time to the same destination over different routes, so as to equalize traffic. b. A difference in rates over the same route owing to differences in the commodities being transported.

differential windlass (dĭf'ə-rĕn'shəl wĭnd'ləs) n. A hoisting device that has two drums of different sizes on the same axis. A line wound on the larger and unwound from the smaller provides extra lifting power. Also called Chinese windlass dif·fer·en·ti·ate (dĭf'ə-rĕn'shĕ-āt') v. dif·fer·en·ti·at·ed, dif·fer·en·ti·at·ing, dif·fer·en·ti·ates. — v. tr. 1. To constitute the distinction between: subspecies that are differentiated by the markings on their wings.

2. To perceive or show the difference in or between; discriminate. 3. To make different by alteration or modification. 4. Mathematics. To calculate the derivative or differential of (a function). — v. intr. 1. To become distinct or specialized; acquire a different character. 2. To make distinctions; discriminate.

3. Biology. To undergo a progressive, developmental change to a more specialized form or function. Used especially of embryonic cells or tissues.

—dif·fer·en·ti·a·tion n.

dif·fi·cult (dĭf'ȷ-kŭlt', -kəlt) adj. 1. Hard to do or accomplish; demanding considerable effort or skill; arduous: "To entertain is far more difficult than to enlighten" (Anthony Burgess). See Synonyms at hard. 2. Hard to endure; trying: fell upon difficult times. 3. Hard to comprehend or solve: a difficult puzzle.

4. Hard to please, satisfy, or manage: a difficult child. 5. Hard to persuade or convince; stubborn. [Middle English, back-formation from difficulte, difficulty. See DIFFICULTY.] —dif·fi·cult·ly adv.

dif·fi·cul·ty (dĭf'ȷ-kŭl'tĕ, -kəl-) n. pl. dif·fi·cul·ties. 1. The condition or quality of being difficult: the difficulty of a task. 2. Something not easily done, accomplished, comprehended, or solved. 3. Often difficulties. A troublesome or embarrassing state of affairs, especially of financial affairs. 4. A laborious effort; a struggle; trouble: had difficulty walking; completed the test with difficulty. 5. A disagreement or dispute. 6. Reluctance or an objection; unwillingness. [Middle English difficulte, from Old French dificulte, from Latin difficultās, from difficilis, difficult : dis-, dis- + facilis, easy; see dhĕ- in Appendix.]

SYNONYMS: difficulty, hardship, rigor, vicissitude. The central meaning shared by these nouns is “something that requires great effort to overcome”: grappling with financial difficulties; a life of hardship; undergoing the rigors of prison; withstood the vicissitudes of an army career.

dif·fi·dence (dɪf'ɪ-dəns, -dəns') n. The quality or state of being diffident; timidity or shyness.

dif·fi·dent (dɪf'ɪ-dənt, -dənt') adj. 1. Lacking or marked by a lack of self-confidence; shy and timid. See Synonyms at shy¹. 2. Reserved in manner. [Middle English, from Latin diffidēns, diffident- present participle of diffidere, to mistrust : dis-, dis- + fīdere, to trust; see bheidh- in Appendix.] —dif'fi-dent-ly adv.

dif·fract (dɪ-frækt') v. intr. tr. dif·fract-ed, dif·fract-ing, dif·fracts. To undergo or cause to undergo diffraction. [Back-formation from DIFFRACTION.] —dif·frac'tive adj. —dif·frac'tive-ly adv. —dif·frac'tive-ness n.

dif·frac-tion (dɪ-frækt'shən) n. Change in the directions and intensities of a group of waves after passing by an obstacle or through an aperture. [New Latin diffraçtiō, diffraçtiōn-, from Latin diffraçtus, past participle of diffringere : dis-, apart; see DIS- + frangere, to break; see bhreg- in Appendix.]

diffraction grating (dɪ-frækt'shən grā'tɪŋ) n. A usually glass or polished metal surface having a large number of very fine parallel grooves or slits cut in the surface and used to produce optical spectra by diffraction of reflected or transmitted light.

dif·fuse (dɪ-fyooz') v. dif·fused, dif·fus-ing, dif·fus-es. — v. tr. 1. To pour out and cause to spread freely. 2. To spread about or scatter; disseminate. 3. To make less brilliant; soften. — v. intr. 1. To become widely dispersed; spread out. 2. Physics. To undergo diffusion. — adj. (dɪ-fyooz') 1. Widely spread or scattered; not concentrated. 2. Characterized by verbosity; wordy. See Synonyms at wordy. [From Middle English, dispersed, from Anglo-Norman diffus, from Latin diffūsus, past participle of diffundere, to spread : dis-, out, apart; see DIS- + fundere, to pour; see gheu- in Appendix.] —dif·fuse/ly (-fyooz'lē) adv. —dif·fuse/ness (-fyooz'nɪs) n.

dif·fus·er (dɪ-fyoo'zər) n. 1. One that diffuses, as: a. A light fixture, such as a frosted globe, that spreads light evenly. b. A medium that scatters light, used in photography to soften shadows. c. A device, such as a cone or baffle, placed in front of a loudspeaker diaphragm to diffuse the sound waves. 2. A flow passage in a wind tunnel that decelerates a stream of gas or liquid from a high to a low velocity.

dif·fus·i·ble (dɪ-fyoo'zə-bəl) adj. Capable of diffusing or of undergoing diffusion: diffusible dyes. —dif·fus'i-bly adv.

dif·fu·sion (dī-fyŭō'zhən) n. 1. The process of diffusing or the condition of being diffused. 2. Needless profusion of words; prolixity. 3. Physics. a. The scattering of incident light by reflection from a rough surface. b. The transmission of light through a translucent material. c. The spontaneous intermingling of the particles of two or more substances as a result of random thermal motion.

—dif·fu'sion-al adj.

dif·fu·sive (dī-fyŭō'siv, -zīv) adj. Characterized by diffusion. —dif·fu/sive-ly adv. —dif·fu/sive-ness n.

dig (dĭg) v. dug (dŭg), dig·ging, digs. — v. tr. 1. To break up, turn over, or remove (earth or sand, for example), as with a shovel, a spade, or the hands.

2. To make or form by removing earth or other material: dug my way out of the snow. 3. To obtain or unearth by digging: dig coal; a dog digging bones. 4. To learn or discover by careful research or investigation: dug up the evidence; dug out the real facts. 5. To force down and into something; thrust: dug his foot in the ground. 6. To poke or prod: dug me in the ribs. 7. Slang. a. To understand fully: Do you dig what I mean? b. To like, enjoy, or appreciate: "They really dig our music and, daddy, I dig swinging for them" (Louis Armstrong). c. To take notice of: Dig that wild outfit.

— v. intr. 1. To loosen, turn over, or remove earth or other material. 2. To make one's way by or as if by pushing aside or removing material: dug through the files. 3. Slang. To have understanding: Do you dig?

— n. 1. A poke or thrust: a sharp dig in the ribs. 2. A sarcastic, taunting remark; a gibe. 3. An archaeological excavation. 4. digs. Chiefly British. Lodgings.

—phrasal verb. dig in. 1. To dig trenches for protection. 2. To hold on stubbornly, as to a position; entrench oneself. 3. a. To begin to work intensively. b. To begin to eat heartily. [Middle English diggen, perhaps akin to Old French digue, dike, trench; see dhīg^w- in Appendix. V., tr., sense 7 and intr., sense 3, perhaps influenced by Wolof degg, to hear, find out, understand or Irish Gaelic tuigim, I understand; see TWIG².]

dig. abbr. Digest.

di·gam·ma (dī-gām'ə) n. A letter occurring in certain early forms of Greek and transliterated in English as w. [Latin, from Greek : di-, two; see DI-¹ + gamma, gamma; see GAMMA.]

dig·a·my (dĭg'ə-mē) n. Remarriage after the death or divorce of one's first husband or wife. Also called deuterogamy —dig'a-mous (-məs) adj.

di·gas·tric (dī-gās'trĭk) Anatomy. adj. Having two fleshy ends connected by a thinner tendinous portion. Used of certain muscles. — n. A muscle of the lower jaw that elevates the hyoid bone and assists in lowering the jaw.

Dig·by (dĭg'bē), Sir Kenelm. 1603-1665. English naval officer, diplomat, and philosopher who reputedly discovered the necessity of oxygen to plant life.

di·gest (dī-jĕst', dī-) v. di·gest·ed, di·gest·ing, di·gests. — v. tr.

1. Physiology. To convert (food) into simpler chemical compounds that can be absorbed and assimilated by the body, as by chemical and muscular action in the alimentary canal. 2. To absorb or assimilate mentally. 3. a. To organize into a systematic arrangement, usually by summarizing or classifying. b. To condense or abridge (a written work). 4. To endure or bear patiently. 5. Chemistry. To soften or disintegrate by means of chemical action, heat, or moisture. — v. intr.

1. Physiology. a. To become assimilated into the body. b. To assimilate food substances. 2. Chemistry. To undergo exposure to heat, liquids, or chemical agents.

— n. (dī'jĕst') 1. Abbr. dig. A collection of previously published material, such as articles, essays, or reports, usually in edited or condensed form. 2. Law. A systematic arrangement of statutes or court decisions. 3. A periodical containing literary abridgments or other condensed works. 4. Digest. See pandect (n., sense 3). [Middle English digesten, from Latin dīgerere, dīgest-, to separate, arrange : dī-, dis-, apart; see DIS- + gerere, to carry. N., from Latin dīgēsta, neuter pl. of dīgēstus past participle of dīgerere, to separate.]

di-gest-er (dī-jĕs'tər, dī-) n. 1. One that makes a digest. 2. Chemistry. A vessel in which substances are softened or decomposed, usually for further processing.

di-gest-i-ble (dī-jĕs'tə-bəl, dī-) adj. Readily or easily digested: digestible meals.

—di-gest'i-bil'i-ty, di-gest'i-ble-ness n. —di-gest'i-bly adv.

di-ges-tion (dī-jĕs'chən, dī-) n. 1. Physiology. a. The process by which food is converted into substances that can be absorbed and assimilated by the body. It is accomplished in the alimentary canal by the mechanical and enzymatic breakdown of foods into simpler chemical compounds. b. The result of this process. c. The ability to digest food. 2. The process of decomposing organic matter in sewage by bacteria. 3. Assimilation of ideas or information; understanding.

di-ges-tive (dī-jĕs'tiv, dī-) adj. 1. Relating to or aiding digestion.

2. Functioning to digest food. — n. A substance that aids digestion.

—di-ges'tive-ly adv. —di-ges'tive-ness n.

digestive gland (dī-jĕs'tiv gländ) n. A gland, such as the liver or pancreas, that secretes into the alimentary canal substances necessary for digestion.

digestive system (dī-jĕs'tiv sīs'təm) n. The alimentary canal and digestive glands regarded as an integrated system responsible for the ingestion, digestion, and absorption of food.

digestive tract (dī-jĕs'tiv trākt) n. See alimentary canal.

dig-ger (dĭg'ər) n. 1. a. One that digs: a digger of gardens; a digger for information; a digger of bones. b. A tool or machine used for digging or excavating.

2. Informal. A soldier from New Zealand or Australia in World War I.

digger wasp (dĭg'ər wɔsp) n. Any of various wasps of the family Sphecidae that burrow into the ground to build their nests and that paralyze their prey by stinging.

dig-gings (dĭg'ɪŋgz) pl.n. 1. An excavation site, as for digging ore. 2. Materials that have been excavated. 3. Chiefly British. Rooms; lodgings.

dight (dīt) v. tr. dight or dight-ed, dight-ing, dights. Archaic. To dress; adorn. [Middle English dighten, from Old English dihtan, to arrange, from Latin dictāre, to dictate. See DICTATE.]

dig·it (dij'īt) n. 1. a. A human finger or toe. b. A corresponding part in other vertebrates. 2. A unit of length derived from the breadth of a finger and equal to about 4 of an inch (2.0 centimeters). 3. a. One of the ten Arabic number symbols, 0 through 9. b. Such a symbol used in a system of numeration. [Middle English, from Latin digitus, finger, toe. See deik- in Appendix.]

dig·i·tal (dij'ī-tl) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or resembling a digit, especially a finger. 2. Operated or done with the fingers: a digital switch. 3. Having digits. 4. Expressed in digits, especially for use by a computer. 5. Using or giving a reading in digits: a digital clock. — n. A key played with the finger, as on a piano. —dig'ī-tal·ly adv.

digital computer (dij'ī-tl kəm-pyōō'tər) n. Computer Science. A computer that performs calculations and logical operations with quantities represented as digits, usually in the binary number system.

dig·i·tal·in (dij'ī-tāl'īn) n. 1. A white crystalline glycoside, C₃₆H₅₆O₁₄, that is obtained from the seeds of the common foxglove. 2. One of several mixtures of digitalis glycosides that are extracted from the leaves or seeds of the common foxglove. [DIGITAL(IS) + -IN.]

dig·i·tal·is (dij'ī-tāl'īs) n. 1. A plant of the genus Digitalis, which includes the foxgloves. 2. A drug prepared from the seeds and dried leaves of this plant, used in medicine as a cardiac stimulant. [Latin digitālis, of a finger (from the finger-shaped corollas of foxglove), from digitus, finger. See DIGIT.]

WORD HISTORY: The name of the plant genus Digitalis, whose member the foxglove provides an important drug used to treat heart disease, is associated with another part of the body, the finger. In Digitalis, which comes from the Latin word digitālis, meaning “relating to a finger,” we recognize digit, which derives from Latin digitus, “finger, toe.” In Modern Latin the genus name was chosen because the German name for the foxglove is Fingerhut, “thimble,” or literally “finger hat.” The second part of our word foxglove also refers to the similarity of the foxglove blossoms to the fingers of a glove. Digitalis is first recorded in English in a work published in 1664.

dig·i·tal·ize (dij'ī-tl-īz') v. tr. dig·i·tal·ized, dig·i·tal·iz·ing, dig·i·tal·iz·es.

1. To administer digitalis in a dosage sufficient to achieve the maximum therapeutic effect without producing toxic symptoms. 2. To digitize.

—dig'ī-tal·i·za'tion (-ī-zā'shən) n.

- digital recording (dij'ī-tl rī-kôr'ding) n. 1. A method of recording in which portions of sound waves are converted into numbers and stored for later reproduction. 2. A record, tape, or disk that is recorded using this process.
- dig·i·tate (dij'ī-tāt') also dig·i·tat·ed (-tā'tīd) adj. 1. Having digits or fingerlike projections. 2. Botany. Having distinct parts arising from a common point or center; palmate. —dig'·i·tate'ly adv.
- dig·i·ta·tion (dij'ī-tā'shən) n. 1. Division into fingerlike parts. 2. A fingerlike part or process.
- dig·i·ti·grade (dij'ī-tī-grād') adj. Relating to an animal, such as a horse, cat, or dog, whose weight is borne on the toes. [French : Latin digitus, toe; see DIGIT + Latin gradus, step; see GRADE.]
- dig·i·tize (dij'ī-tīz') v. tr. dig·i·tized, dig·i·tiz·ing, dig·i·tiz·es. To put (data, for example) into digital form. —dig'·i·ti·za'tion (-tī-zā'shən) n.
—dig'·i·tiz'er n.
- dig·i·tox·in (dij'ī-tōk'sīn) n. A highly active glycoside, C₄₁H₆₄O₁₃, derived from digitalis and prescribed in the treatment of certain cardiac conditions. [DIGI(TALIS) + TOXIN.]
- dig·los·si·a (dī-glōs'ē-ə, glō'sē-ə) n. A sociolinguistic situation in which complementary social functions are distributed between two different varieties of a language, a prestigious, formal, or high variety and a common, colloquial, or low variety, as in Italian, German, or Scottish English. [From Greek diglōssos, speaking two languages : di-, two; see DI-¹ + glōssa, tongue, language.]
- di·glyc·er·ide (dī-glīs'ə-rīd') n. An ester of two fatty acids and glycerol.
- dig·ni·fied (dig'nə-fīd') adj. Having or expressing dignity. —dig'·ni·fied'ly (-fīd'lē, -fī'id-lē) adv.
- dig·ni·fy (dig'nə-fī') v. tr. dig·ni·fied, dig·ni·fy·ing, dig·ni·fies. 1. To confer dignity or honor on; give distinction to: dignified him with a title. 2. To raise the status of (something unworthy or lowly); make honorable: would not dignify the insulting question with a response. [Middle English dignifien, from Old French dignifier, from Late Latin dignificāre : Latin dignus, worthy; see dek- in Appendix + Latin -ficāre, -fy.]
- dig·ni·tar·y (dig'nī-tēr'ē) n. pl. dig·ni·tar·ies. A person of high rank or position.
- dig·ni·ty (dig'nī-tē) n. pl. dig·ni·ties. 1. The quality or state of being worthy of esteem or respect. 2. Inherent nobility and worth: the dignity of honest labor. 3. a. Poise and self-respect. b. Stateliness and formality in manner and appearance. 4. The respect and honor associated with an important position. 5. A high office or rank. 6. dignities. The ceremonial symbols and observances attached to high office. 7. Archaic. A dignitary. [Middle English dignite, from Old French, from Latin dignitās, from dignus, worthy. See dek- in Appendix.]

dig-ox-in (dij-ök'sin) n. A cardiac glycoside, $C_{41}H_{64}O_{14}$, obtained from the leaves of a foxglove, Digitalis lanata, with pharmacological effects similar to digitalis. [DIG(ITALIS) + (T)OXIN.]

di-graph (dī'gräf') n. 1. A pair of letters representing a single speech sound, such as the ph in pheasant or the ea in beat. 2. A single character consisting of two letters run together and representing a single sound, such as Old English æ. —di-graph'ic (dī-gräf'ik) adj.

di-gress (dī-grēs', dī-) v. intr. di-gressed, di-gress-ing, di-gress-es. To turn aside, especially from the main subject in writing or speaking; stray. See Synonyms at swerve. [Latin dīgredī, dīgress- : dī-, dis-, apart; see DIS- + gradī, to go; see ghredh- in Appendix.]

di-gres-sion (dī-grēs'hən, dī-) n. 1. The act of digressing. 2. An instance of digressing, especially a written or spoken passage that has no bearing on the main subject. —di-gres'sion-al adj.

di-gres-sive (dī-grēs'iv, dī-) adj. Characterized by digressions; rambling. —di-gres'sive-ly adv. —di-gres'sive-ness n.

di-he-dral (dī-hē'drəl) adj. Mathematics. 1. Formed by or having two plane faces; two-sided. 2. Relating to, having, or forming a dihedral angle. — n. 1. Mathematics. A dihedral angle. 2. Aeronautics. The upward or downward inclination of an aircraft wing from true horizontal.

dihedral angle (dī-hē'drəl äng'gəl) n. 1. Mathematics. The angle formed by two intersecting planes. 2. Aeronautics. The dihedral of an aircraft wing.

di-hy-brid (dī-hī'brīd) n. Genetics. The hybrid of parents that differ at only two gene loci, for which each parent is homozygous with different alleles.

di-hy-dric (dī-hī'drīk) adj. Containing two hydroxyl radicals.

di-hy-drox-y-phen-yl-al-a-nine (dī'hī-drök'sē-fēn'əl-äl'ə-nēn', -fē'nəl-) n. Dopa.

Di-jon (dē-zhōn') A city of eastern France north of Lyons. It is an industrial center and a transportation hub noted for its foodstuffs, including mustard and casis. Population, 140,942.

di-kar-y-on (dī-kär'ē-ön', -ən) n. The state in certain fungi in which each compartment of a hypha contains two nuclei, each derived from a different parent. [DI-¹ + Greek karuon, nut, kernel; see KARYO-.]

dik-dik (dik'dik') n. Any of several very small African antelopes of the genus Madoqua. [Perhaps of East African origin.]

dike¹ also dyke (dik) n. 1. a. An embankment of earth and rock built to prevent floods. b. Chiefly British. A low wall, often of sod, dividing or enclosing lands. 2. A barrier blocking a passage, especially for protection. 3. A raised causeway. 4. A ditch; a channel. 5. Geology. A long mass of igneous rock that cuts across the structure of adjacent rock. — v. tr. diked also dyked, dik-ing also dyk-ing, dikes also dykes. 1. To protect, enclose, or provide with a dike.

2. To drain with dikes or ditches. [Middle English, from Old English dīc, trench; see dhig^w- in Appendix, and from Old Norse dīki, ditch.] —dik'er n.

dike² (dīk) n. Offensive Slang. Variant of dyke².

dik·tat (dīk-tăt') n. 1. A harsh, unilaterally imposed settlement with a defeated party. 2. An authoritative or dogmatic statement or decree. [German, from Latin dictātum, from neuter past participle of dictāre, to dictate. See DICTATE.]

dil. abbr. Dilute.

Di·lan·tin (dī-lăn'tīn) A trademark used for phenytoin.

di·lap·i·date (dī-lăp'ī-dāt') v. tr. intr. di·lap·i·dat·ed, di·lap·i·dat·ing, di·lap·i·dates. 1. To bring or fall into a state of partial ruin, decay, or disrepair.

2. Archaic. To squander; waste. [Latin dīlapidāre, dīlapidāt-, to demolish, destroy : dis-, apart; see DIS- + lapidāre, to throw stones (from lapis, lapid-, stone); see LAPIDARIAN.] —di·lap'ī·da'tion n.

di·lap·i·dat·ed (dī-lăp'ī-dā'tīd) adj. Having fallen into a state of disrepair or deterioration, as through neglect; broken-down and shabby.

di·la·tan·cy (dī-lăt'n-sē, dī-) n. pl. di·la·tan·cies. 1. The increase in volume of a granular substance when its shape is changed, because of greater distance between its component particles. 2. The phenomenon whereby a viscous substance solidifies under pressure.

di·la·tant (dī-lăt'nt, dī-) adj. 1. Tending to dilate; dilating. 2. Exhibiting dilatancy. — n. A dilator.

dil·a·ta·tion (dīl'ə-tā'shən, dī'lə-) n. 1. a. The act or process of expanding; dilation. b. The condition of being expanded or stretched. c. A dilated formation or part. 2. Medicine. The condition of being abnormally enlarged or dilated, as of an organ, an orifice, or a tubular structure: dilatation of the stomach. Also called dilation 3. Lengthy explanation or elaboration of a subject in writing or speech. —dil'a·ta'tion·al adj.

dilatation and curettage (dīl'ə-tā'shən ənd kyŭŕ'ī-tăzh') n. Dilation and curettage.

dil·a·ta·tor (dīl'ə-tā'tər, dī'lə-) n. A dilator.

di·late (dī-lăt', dī'lăt') v. di·lat·ed, di·lat·ing, di·lates. — v. tr. To make wider or larger; cause to expand. — v. intr. 1. To become wider or larger; expand. 2. To speak or write at great length on a subject; expatiate. [Middle English dīlaten, from Old French dīlater, from Latin dīlātāre, to enlarge : dis-, apart; see DIS- + lātus, wide.] —di·lat'a·bil'ity n. —di·lat'a·ble adj.

—di·lat'a·bly adv. —di·la'tive adj.

di·lat·ed (dī-lā'tīd, dī'lā'-) adj. 1. Having been widened; expanded.

2. Distended. —di·lat'ed·ness n.

di·la·tion (dī-lā'shən, dī-) n. 1. The act of expanding or the state of being expanded. 2. Medicine. See dilatation (n., sense 2).

dilation and curettage (dī-lā'shən ənd kyōōr'ī-tāzh') n. A surgical procedure in which the cervix is expanded using a dilator and the uterine lining scraped with a curette, performed for the diagnosis and treatment of various uterine conditions.

dil-a-tom-e-ter (dīl'ə-tōm'ī-tər, dī'lə-) n. An instrument used to measure thermal expansion and dilation in solids and liquids. [DILATE + -METER.]

—dil'a-to-met'ric (-tə-mēt'rik) adj. —dil'a-tom'e-try n.

di-la-tor (dī-lā'tər, dī'lā'-, dī-lā'-) n. 1. A muscle that dilates a body part, such as a blood vessel or the pupil of the eye. 2. An instrument that dilates a body part, such as a cavity, canal, or orifice.

dil-a-to-ry (dīl'ə-tōr'ē, -tōr'ē) adj. 1. Intended to delay. 2. Tending to postpone or delay: dilatory in his work habits. See Synonyms at slow. [Middle English dilatorie, from Latin dilātōrius, from dilātor, delayer, from dilātus, past participle of differre, to delay : dis-, apart; see DIS- + lātus, carried; see telə- in Appendix.] —dil'a-to-ri-ly adv. —dil'a-to-ri-ness n.

dil-do also dil-doe (dīl'dō) n. pl. dil-dos also dil-does. An object used as a substitute for an erect penis. [Origin unknown.]

di-lem-ma (dī-lēm'ə) n. 1. A situation that requires a choice between options that are or seem equally unfavorable or mutually exclusive. 2. Usage Problem. A problem that seems to defy a satisfactory solution. 3. Logic. An argument that presents an antagonist with a choice of two or more alternatives, each of which contradicts the original contention and is conclusive. [Late Latin, from Greek dilēmma, ambiguous proposition : di-, two; see DI-¹ + lēmma, proposition; see LEMMA¹.] —dil'em-mat'ic (dīl'ə-măt'ik) adj.

USAGE NOTE: In its primary sense dilemma denotes a situation in which a choice must be made between alternative courses of action or argument. Although citational evidence attests to widespread use of the term meaning simply “problem” or “predicament” and involving no issue of choice, 74 percent of the Usage Panel rejected the sentence Juvenile drug abuse is the great dilemma of the 1980's.

• It is sometimes claimed that because the di- in dilemma comes from a Greek prefix meaning “two,” the word should be used only when exactly two choices are involved. But 64 percent of the Usage Panel accepts its use for choices among three or more options in the example Ph.D. students who haven't completed their dissertations by the time their fellowships expire face a difficult dilemma: whether to take out loans to support themselves, to try to work part-time at both a job and their research, or to give up on the degree entirely.

dil-et-tante (dīl'ī-tānt', dīl'ī-tānt', -tānt'tē, -tānt', -tānt'tē) n. pl. dil-et-tantes also dil-et-tan-ti (-tānt'tē, -tānt'-). 1. A dabbler in an art or a field of knowledge. See Synonyms at amateur. 2. A lover of the fine arts; a connoisseur. — adj.

Superficial; amateurish. [Italian, lover of the arts, from present participle of dil-ettare, to delight, from Latin dēlectāre. See DELIGHT.] —dil/et-tan'tish adj.

—dil/et-tan'tism n.

dil·i·gence¹ (dĭl'ə-jəns) n. 1. Earnest and persistent application to an undertaking; steady effort; assiduity. 2. Attentive care; heedfulness.

dil·i·gence² (dĭl'ə-jəns, dē'lē-zhāns') n. A large stagecoach. [French, from (carrosse de) diligence, speed (coach), from Old French, diligence, dispatch, from Latin diligentia, from diligēns, diligent-, diligent. See DILIGENT.]

dil·i·gent (dĭl'ə-jənt) adj. Marked by persevering, painstaking effort. See Synonyms at busy. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin diligēns, diligent- present participle of diligere, to esteem, love : dī-, dis-, apart; see DIS- + legere, to choose; see leg- in Appendix.] —dil/i-gent-ly adv.

dill (dĭl) n. 1. An aromatic herb (Anethum graveolens) native to Eurasia, having finely dissected leaves and small yellow flowers clustered in umbels. 2. The leaves or seeds of this plant, used as a seasoning. [Middle English dile, from Old English.]

Dil·lin·ger (dĭl'ɪn-jər), John. 1902-1934. American gangster who was declared Public Enemy Number One by the F.B.I. in 1933 for his role in a string of bank robberies and at least three murders. He died in a gun battle with F.B.I. agents in front of the Biograph Theater in Chicago.

Dil·lon (dĭl'ən), John. 1851-1927. Irish politician who led the Irish Nationalist Party in 1918.

dill pickle (dĭl pĭk'əl) n. A pickled cucumber flavored with dill.

dil·ly (dĭl'ē) n. pl. dil·lies. Slang. One that is remarkable or extraordinary, as in size or quality: had a dilly of a fight. [Obsolete dilly, delightful, alteration of DELIGHTFUL.]

dil·ly-dal·ly (dĭl'ē-dəl'ē) v. intr. dil·ly-dal·lied, dil·ly-dal·lying, dil·ly-dal·lies. To waste time, especially in indecision; dawdle or vacillate. [Reduplication of DALLY.] —dil/ly-dal/li-er n.

dil·u·ent (dĭl'yoo-ənt) adj. Serving to dilute. — n. Chemistry. An inert substance used to dilute. [Latin diluēns, diluent- present participle of diluere, to dilute. See DILUTE.]

di·lute (dī-lōot', dī-) v. tr. di·lut·ed, di·lut·ing, di·lutes. 1. To make thinner or less concentrated by adding a liquid such as water. 2. To lessen the force, strength, purity, or brilliance of, especially by admixture. — adj. Abbr. dil. Weakened; diluted. [Latin diluere, dilūt- : dī-, dis-, apart, away; see DIS- + -luere, to wash (from lavere); see leu(ə)- in Appendix.] —di-lut'er, di-lut'or n.

—di-lu'tive adj.

di·lu·tion (dī-lōo'shən, dī-) n. 1. a. The process of making weaker or less concentrated. b. A dilute or weakened condition. 2. A diluted substance. 3. A decrease in the equity position of a share of stock because of the issuance of additional shares.

di·lu·vi·al (dī-lōō'vē-əl) also di·lu·vi·an (-ən) adj. Of, relating to, or produced by a flood. [Late Latin diluviālis, from Latin diluvium, flood, from diluerē, to wash away. See DILUTE.]

dim (dīm) adj. dim·mer, dim·mest. 1. a. Lacking in brightness: a dim room. b. Emitting only a small amount of light; faint: a dim lightbulb. 2. Lacking luster; dull and subdued. 3. a. Faintly outlined; indistinct: a dim figure in the distance. b. Obscure to the mind or the senses: a dim recollection of the accident. 4. Lacking sharpness or clarity of understanding or perception. See Synonyms at dark. 5. Lacking keenness or vigor. 6. Negative, unfavorable, or disapproving: took a dim view of their prospects. — v. tr. intr. dimmed, dim·ming, dims. To make or become dim. — n. 1. a. A parking light on a motor vehicle. b. Low beam. 2. Archaic. Dusk. [Middle English, from Old English.] —dim'ly adv. —dim'ness n.

dim. abbr. 1. Dimension. 2. Diminished. 3. Music. Diminuendo. 4. Diminutive.

Di·Mag·gio (də-mä'zhē-ō, -mäj'ē-ō), Joseph Paul. Known as “Jolting Joe” and “the Yankee Clipper.” Born 1914. American baseball player. A center fielder for the New York Yankees (1936-1951), he is considered the best all-around player ever at that position. In 1941 he hit safely in 56 consecutive games.

dime (dīm) n. 1. A coin of the United States or Canada worth ten cents. 2. Slang. A dime bag. —idioms. a dime a dozen. Overly abundant; commonplace. on a dime. At a precise point; within a narrowly defined area: a sports car that stops on a dime. [Middle English, tenth part, from Old French disme, from Latin decima (pars), tenth (part), from decem, ten. See dekṃ in Appendix.]

dime bag (dīm bæg) n. Slang. A specified amount of an unlawful drug, packaged and sold for a fixed price, usually about ten dollars.

di·men·hy·dri·nate (dī'měn-hī'drə-nāt') n. An antihistamine, $C_{24}H_{28}ClN_5O_3$, used to treat motion sickness and allergic disorders. [DIME(THYL) + (AMI)N(E) + hydrinate (HYDR(AM)IN(E) + -ATE²).]

dime novel (dīm nōv'əl) n. A melodramatic novel of romance or adventure, usually in paperback. [After the Dime Book Series, published by Erastus Flavel Beadle.] —dime novelist n.

di·men·sion (dī-měn'shən, dī-) n. Abbr. dim. 1. A measure of spatial extent, especially width, height, or length. 2. Often dimensions. Extent or magnitude; scope: a problem of alarming dimensions. 3. Aspect; element: “He’s a good newsman, and he has that extra dimension” (William S. Paley). 4. Mathematics. a. One of the least number of independent coordinates required to specify uniquely a point in space or in space and time. b. The range of such a coordinate.

5. Physics. A physical property, such as mass, length, time, or a combination thereof, regarded as a fundamental measure or as one of a set of fundamental measures of a physical quantity: Velocity has the dimensions of length divided by time. — v. tr. di·men·sioned, di·men·sion·ing, di·men·sions. 1. To cut or shape to specified dimensions. 2. To mark with specified dimensions. [Middle English dimensioun, from Latin dīmēnsiō, dīmēnsiōn-, extent, from dīmēnsus, past participle of dīmētīrī, to measure out : dis-, dis- + mētīrī, to measure; see mē-² in Appendix.] — di·men'sion·al adj. — di·men'sion·al'i·ty (-shə-nāl'ī-tē) n. — di·men'sion·al·ly adv. — di·men'sion·less adj.

di·mer (dī'mər) n. 1. A molecule consisting of two identical simpler molecules.

2. A chemical compound consisting of such molecules. [DI-¹ + (POLY)MER.]

— di·mer'ic (dī-mər'ik) adj.

di·mer·cap·rol (dī'mər-kăp'rôl, -rôl, -rôl) n. A colorless, oily, viscous liquid, C₃H₈OS₂, used as an antidote for poisoning caused by lewisite, organic arsenic compounds, and heavy metals including mercury and gold. Also called British anti-lewisite [DI-¹ + MERCAP(TAN) + (P)R(OPANE) + -OL(E).]

dim·er·ous (dīm'ər-əs) adj. 1. Consisting of two parts or segments, as the tarsus in certain insects. 2. Botany. Having flower parts, such as petals, sepals, and stamens, in sets of two. — dim'er·ism n.

dime store (dīm stôr) n. See five-and-ten.

dim·e·ter (dīm'ī-tər) n. A line of verse consisting of two metrical feet. [Late Latin, from Greek dimetros, having two meters : di-, two; see DI-¹ + metron, meter; see METER¹.]

di·meth·o·ate (dī-měth'ō-āt') n. A crystalline compound, C₅H₁₂NO₃PS₂, used as an insecticide. [Probably DIMETH(YL) + (THI)O- + -ATE².]

di·meth·yl (dī-měth'əl) n. An organic compound, especially ethane, containing two methyl groups.

di·meth·yl·ni·tros·a·mine (dī-měth'əl-nī-trô'sə-mēn', -nī'trô-săm'īn) n. A carcinogenic nitrosamine, C₂H₆N₂O, that occurs in tobacco smoke and certain foods.

di·meth·yl·sulf·ox·ide (dī-měth'əl-sŭl-fök'sid') n. DMSO.

dimin. abbr. 1. Music. Diminuendo. 2. Diminutive.

di·min·ish (dī-mīn'ish) v. di·min·ished, di·min·ish·ing, di·min·ish·es. — v. tr. 1. a. To make smaller or less or to cause to appear so. b. To detract from the authority, reputation, or prestige of. 2. To cause to taper. 3. Music. To reduce (a perfect or minor interval) by a semitone. — v. intr. 1. To become smaller or less. See Synonyms at decrease. 2. To taper. [Middle English diminishen, blend of diminuen, to lessen (from Old French diminuer, from Latin dīmīnuere, variant of dēminuere : dē-, de- + minuere, to lessen), minishen, to reduce (from Old French minuiser, from Vulgar Latin minūtiāre*, from Latin minūtia, smallness, from minūtus, small, from past participle of minuere, to lessen); see mei-² in Appendix.] —di-min'ish-a-ble adj. —di-min'ish-ment n.

di-min-ished capacity (dī-mīn'isht kə-pās'ī-tē) n. Law. Lack of ability to achieve the state of mind necessary for the commission of a particular crime.

di-min-ish-ing returns (dī-mīn'ī-shīng rī-tûrn'z) pl.n. A yield rate that after a certain point fails to increase proportionately to additional outlays of capital or investments of time and labor.

di-min-u-en-do (dī-mīn'yōō-ēn'dō) n., adv. & adj. Abbr. dim., dimin.

Music. Decrescendo. [Italian, present participle of diminuire, to diminish, from Latin dīminuere. See DIMINISH.]

dim-i-nu-tion (dīm'ə-nōō'shən, -nyōō'-) n. 1. a. The act or process of diminishing; a lessening or reduction. b. The resulting reduction; decrease. 2. Music. Repetition of a theme in notes one-quarter or one-half the duration of the original. [Middle English diminucioun, from Old French diminution, from Latin dīminūtiō, dīminūtiōn-, from dīminūtus, past participle of dīminuere. See DIMINISH.] —dim'i-nu'tion-al adj.

di-min-u-tive (dī-mīn'yə-tīv) adj. Abbr. dim., dimin. 1. Extremely small in size; tiny. See Synonyms at small. 2. Grammar. Of or being a suffix that indicates smallness, youth, familiarity, affection, or contempt, as -let in booklet, -kin in lambkin, or -et in nymphet. — n. 1. Grammar. A diminutive suffix, word, or name. 2. A very small person or thing. [Middle English diminutif, from Old French, from Latin dīminūtīvus, from dīminūtus, present participle of dīminuere. See DIMINISH.] —di-min'u-tive-ly adv. —di-min'u-tive-ness n.

dim-i-ty (dīm'ī-tē) n. pl. dim-i-ties. A sheer, crisp cotton fabric with raised woven stripes or checks, used chiefly for curtains and dresses. [Middle English demyt, from Medieval Latin dimitum, from Greek dimiton, from neuter of dimitos, double-threaded : di-, two; see DI-¹ + mitos, thread.]

dim-mer (dīm'ər) n. 1. A rheostat or other device used to vary the intensity of an electric light. 2. a. A parking light on a motor vehicle. b. Low beam.

di-mor-phic (dī-môr'fīk) also di-mor-phous (-fəs) adj. Existing or occurring in two distinct forms; exhibiting dimorphism: a dimorphic crystal; dimorphic organisms.

di-mor-phism (dī-môr'fīz'əm) n. 1. Biology. The existence within a species of two distinct forms that differ in one or more characteristics, such as coloration, size, or shape. 2. Botany. The occurrence of two distinct forms of the same parts in one plant, as in the juvenile and adult leaves of ivy. 3. Chemistry & Physics. Dimorphic crystallization.

di-mor-phous (dī-môr'fəs) adj. Variant of dimorphic.

dim-out (dīm'out') n. 1. Restricted use of lights at night, as to make a city less visible from the air in wartime. 2. The semidarkness resulting from restricted use of lights at night.

dim·ple (dīm'pəl) n. 1. A small natural indentation in the flesh on a part of the human body, especially in the cheek or on the chin. 2. A slight depression or indentation in a surface. — v. dim·pled, dim·pling, dim·ples. — v. intr. To form dimples by smiling. — v. tr. To produce dimples in. [Middle English dimpel, from Old English dympele*.] — dim'ply adj.

dim sum (dīm' sōm', sŭm') n. A traditional Chinese cuisine in which small portions of a variety of foods, including an assortment of steamed or fried dumplings, are served in succession. [Chinese (Cantonese) dim sem, from Chinese (Mandarin) diǎn xīn, light refreshments : diǎn, spot, drop + xīn, heart, center.]

dim·wit (dīm'wīt') n. Slang. A stupid person. — dim'wit'ted adj.
— dim'wit'ted·ly adv. — dim'wit'ted·ness n.

din (dĭn) n. A jumble of loud, usually discordant sounds. See Synonyms at noise. — v. dinned, din·ning, dins. — v. tr. 1. To stun with deafening noise. 2. To instill by wearying repetition: dinned the Latin conjugations into the student's heads. — v. intr. To make a loud noise. [Middle English dine, from Old English dyne.]

di·nar (dĭ-nār', dē'nār') n. Abbr. din. 1. A basic unit of currency in Algeria, Bahrain, Iraq, Jordan, Kuwait, Libya, Tunisia, Yemen, and Yugoslavia; a unit of currency in Iran. See Table at currency. 2. Any of several units of gold and silver currency formerly used in the Middle East. [Arabic dīnār, from Late Greek dēnāron, from Latin dēnārius. See DENARIUS.]

Di·nar·ic Alps (dĭ-nār'ĭk əlps) A range of the Balkan Peninsula extending about 644 km (400 mi) along the eastern coast of the Adriatic Sea. The partially submerged western part of the system forms numerous islands along the coastline.

dine (dĭn) v. dined, din·ing, dines. — v. intr. To have dinner. — v. tr. To give dinner to; entertain at dinner: wined and dined the visiting senators. [Middle English dinen, from Old French diner, disner, from Vulgar Latin disiūnāre*, from disiēiūnāre* : Latin dis-, dis- + Latin iēiūnium, fast.]

Dine (dĭn), Jim. Born 1935. American artist noted for his autobiographical paintings and sculptures of objects such as tools and bathrobes.

din·er (dĭ'nər) n. 1. One that dines: midnight diners enjoying the meal after the theater. 2. See dining car. 3. A small, usually inexpensive restaurant with a long counter and booths and housed in a building designed to resemble a dining car.

Di·ne·sen (dē'nĭ-sən, dĭn'ĭ-), Isak. Pen name of Baroness Karen Blixen. 1885-1962. Danish writer who lived in Kenya from 1914 to 1933 and is best known for her sensitive memoir Out of Africa (1937).

di-nette (dī-nĕt') n. 1. A nook or alcove located in or near a kitchen and used for informal meals. 2. The table and chairs used to furnish such an area. [DINE + -ETTE.]

ding¹ (dĭng) v. dinged, ding-ing, dings. — v. intr. 1. To ring; clang. 2. To speak persistently and repetitiously. — v. tr. 1. To cause to clang, as by striking. 2. To instill with constant repetition: dinged advice into my head. — n. A ringing sound. [Partly imitative, and partly alteration of DIN.]

ding² (dĭng) n. Informal. A small dent or nick, as in the body of a car. [From ding, to strike, beat on, pound (from Middle English dingen; akin to Old Norse dengja), and from DING¹.] — ding v.

ding-a-ling (dĭng'ə-lĭng) n. Slang. A scatterbrained or eccentric person.

ding-bat (dĭng'băt') n. 1. Slang. An empty-headed or silly person. 2. An object, such as a brick or stone, used as a missile. 3. Slang. An unspecified gadget or other small article, especially one whose name is unknown or forgotten.

4. Printing. A typographical ornament or symbol. [Origin unknown.]

ding-dong (dĭng'dông', -dông') n. 1. The peal of a bell. 2. Slang. An empty-headed person; a fool. — v. intr. ding-donged, ding-dong-ing, ding-dongs. To ring; jingle. — adj. Characterized by a hammering exchange, as of blows: a ding-dong fight. [Imitative.]

ding-ghy (dĭng'ĕ) n. pl. ding-ghies. Nautical. 1. A small open boat carried as a tender, lifeboat, or pleasure craft on a larger boat. 2. A small rowboat. 3. An inflatable rubber life raft. [Hindi ḍīngī, diminutive of deṅgā, boat.]

ding-gle (dĭng'gəl) n. A small, wooded valley; a dell. [Middle English, dell, hollow.]

Ding Ling (dĭng' lĭng'), 1904-1986. Chinese writer known for her novels, stories, and plays that explore the evolving role of women in Communist China.

ding-go (dĭng'gō) n. pl. ding-goes. A wild dog (Canis dingo) of Australia, having a reddish-brown or yellowish-brown coat. [Dharuk (Aboriginal language of southeast Australia) dingu.]

ding-gus (dĭng'əs) n. Slang. An article whose name is unknown or forgotten. [Dutch dinges, probably from German, genitive of Ding, thing, from Old High German.]

ding-gy (dĭn'jĕ) adj. ding-gi-er, ding-gi-est. 1. Darkened with smoke and grime; dirty or discolored. 2. Shabby, drab, or squalid. [Possibly from Middle English dinge, dung, variant of dung. See DUNG.] — ding-gi-ly adv. — ding-gi-ness n.

ding-ing car (dī'nĭng kār) n. A railroad car in which meals are served. Also called diner dining room (dī'nĭng rōom) n. Abbr. DR A room, as in a house or hotel, in which meals are eaten.

di-ni-tro-ben-zene (dī-nī'trō-bĕn'zĕn', -bĕn-zĕn') n. Any of three isomeric compounds, C₆H₄(NO₂)₂, made from a mixture of nitric acid, sulfuric acid, and heated benzene and used in celluloid manufacture, in dyes, and in organic synthesis.

dink (dĭngk) n. Sports. A drop shot. [Perhaps alteration of DINKY.]

DINK or dink (dĭnk) n. A two-career couple with no children. [D(ual) I(ncome) N(o) K(ids).] din·key also din·ky (dĭng'kē) n. pl. din·keys also din·kies. A small locomotive used in a railroad yard, as for shunting. [From DINKY.]

din·kum (dĭn'kəm) Australian. adj. Genuine; real. — adv. Honestly; truly. [From English dialectal, and Australian, work.]

din·ky (dĭng'kē) adj. din·ki·er, din·ki·est. Informal. 1. Of small size or consequence; insignificant. 2. Of poor quality; shabby. — n. Variant of dinkey. [Probably from Scots dink, neat, trim.]

din·ner (dĭn'ər) n. 1. a. The chief meal of the day, eaten in the evening or at midday. b. A banquet or formal meal in honor of a person or an event. c. The food prepared for either of these meals. 2. A full-course meal served at a fixed price; table d'hôte. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: dinner dishes; dinner music; dinner attire. [Middle English diner, morning meal, from Old French disner, diner, to dine, morning meal. See DINE.]

WORD HISTORY: Eating foods such as pizza and ice cream for breakfast may be justified by the fact that in Middle English dinner meant “breakfast,” as did the Old French word disner, or diner, which was the source of our word. The Old French word came from the Vulgar Latin word ·disiūnāre, meaning “to break one’s fast; that is, to eat one’s first meal,” a notion also contained in our word breakfast. The Vulgar Latin word was derived from an earlier word, ·disiēiūnāre, the Latin elements of which are dis-, denoting reversal, and iēiūnium, “fast.” Middle English diner not only meant “breakfast” but, echoing usage of the Old French word diner, more commonly meant “the first big meal of the day, usually eaten between 9 A.M. and noon.” Customs change, however, and over the years we have let the chief meal become the last meal of the day, by which time we have broken our fast more than once.

dinner jacket (dĭn'ər jăk'ĭt) n. See tuxedo (n., sense 1).

dinner theater (dĭn'ər thē'ə-tər) n. A restaurant that presents a play during or after dinner.

din·ner·time (dĭn'ər-tīm') n. The time during which dinner is normally eaten.

din·ner·ware (dĭn'ər-wâr') n. 1. The plates, serving bowls, platters, and other tableware used in serving a meal. 2. A set of dishes.

di·no·flag·el·late (dī'nō-flăj'ə-lĭt, -lăt', -flə-jĕl'ĭt) n. Any of numerous minute, chiefly marine protozoans of the order Dinoflagellata, characteristically having two flagella and a cellulose covering and forming one of the chief constituents of plankton. They include bioluminescent forms and forms that produce red tide. [From New Latin Dinoflagellata, class name : Greek dinos, eddy (from dinein, to whirl) + Latin flagellum, flagellum; see FLAGELLUM.]

di-no-saur (dī'nə-sôr') n. 1. Any of various extinct, often gigantic, carnivorous or herbivorous reptiles of the orders Saurischia and Ornithischia that were chiefly terrestrial and existed during the Mesozoic era. 2. A relic of the past: "living dinosaurs of the world of vegetation" (John Olmsted). 3. One that is hopelessly outmoded or unwieldy: "The old, big-city teaching hospital is a dinosaur" (Peggy Breault). [Greek deinos, monstrous + Greek sauros, lizard.] —di'no-sau'ric (-sôr'ik) adj.

di-no-sau-ri-an (dī'nə-sôr'ē-ən) adj. Of, relating to, or characteristic of a dinosaur. — n. A dinosaur.

di-no-there (dī'nə-thîr') n. Any of various extinct elephantlike mammals of the genus Dinotherium that existed during the Miocene, Pliocene, and Pleistocene epochs. [From New Latin Dinotherium, genus name : Greek deinos, monstrous + Greek thērion, diminutive of thēr, beast; see ghwer- in Appendix.]

Dins-la-ken (dīns'lă'kən) A city of western Germany north of Duisburg. It was chartered in 1273. Population, 60,430.

dint (dīnt) n. 1. Force or effort; power: succeeded by dint of hard work. 2. A dent. — v. tr. dint-ed, dint-ing, dints. 1. To put a dent in. 2. To impress or drive in forcibly. [Middle English. See DENT¹.]

di-nu-cle-o-tide (dī-nōō'klē-ə-tīd', -nyōō'-) n. A nucleotide molecule that consists of a combination of two nucleotide units.

Din-wid-die (dīn-wīd'ē, dīn'wīd-ē), Robert. 1693-1770. Scottish-born British colonial administrator in Virginia. As lieutenant governor of the colony (1751-1758) he attempted unsuccessfully to secure the frontier regions against the encroachments of the French.

di-oc-e-san (dī-ōs'ī-sən) adj. Of or relating to a diocese. — n. The bishop of a diocese.

di-o-cese (dī'ə-sīs, -sēs', -sēz') n. The district or churches under the jurisdiction of a bishop; a bishopric. [Middle English diocise, from Old French, from Late Latin diocēsis, from Latin dioecēsis, jurisdiction, from Greek dioikēsis, administration, from dioikein, to keep house, administer : dia-, intensive pref.; see DIA- + oikein, oikē-, to inhabit (from oikos, house); see weik-¹ in Appendix.]

Di-o-cle-tian (dī'ə-klē'shən), Originally Gaius Aurelius Valerius Diocletianus. A.D. 245?-313?. Emperor of Rome (284-305) who divided the empire into east and west (286) in an attempt to rule the territory more effectively. His desire to revive the old religion of Rome led to the last major persecution of the Christians (303).

di-ode (dī'ōd') n. 1. An electronic device that restricts current flow chiefly to one direction. 2. An electron tube having a cathode and an anode. 3. A two-terminal semiconductor device used chiefly as a rectifier.

di-oe-cious also di-e-cious (dī-ē'shəs) adj. Botany. 1. Having the male and female reproductive organs borne on separate individuals of the same species. 2. Characterized by species in which the male and female reproductive organs occur on different individuals; sexually distinct. [From New Latin Dioecia, former class name : DI-¹ + Greek oikia, a dwelling; see weik-¹ in Appendix.]
—di-oe'cious-ly adv. —di-oe'cism (-sīz'əm) n.

Di-og-e-nes (dī-ōj'ə-nēz'), Died c. 320 B.C. Greek philosopher who founded the Cynic school of philosophy, stressing self-control and the pursuit of virtue. He is said to have once wandered through the streets of Athens with a lantern, searching for an honest man.

di-oi-cous (dī-oi'kəs) adj. Botany. Having sex organs on separate plants; unisexual. Used of mosses and related plants. [From New Latin dioecus : DI-¹ + Greek oikos, house; see weik-¹ in Appendix.]

Di-o-mede Islands (dī'ə-mēd' ī'ləndz) Two rocky islands in the Bering Strait between Alaska and Siberia. Little Diomede belongs to the United States; Big Diomede, to Russia. The islands were discovered and named by Vitus Bering in 1728.

Di-o-me-des (dī'ə-mē'dēz) n. Greek Mythology. One of the Greek heroes of the Trojan War.

Di-o-ne (dī-ō'nē) n. 1. Greek Mythology. The mother of Aphrodite by Zeus. 2. The satellite of Saturn that is 11th in distance from the planet. [Greek Diōnē, from Dios, genitive of Zeus, Zeus. See deiw- in Appendix.]

Dione B (dī-ō'nē bē) n. The satellite of Saturn that is 12th in distance from the planet.

Di-o-nys-i-a (dī'ə-nīz'ē-ə, -nīzh'ē-ə, -nīs'ē-ə) pl.n. Ancient Greek festivals held seasonally, chiefly at Athens, in honor of Dionysus, especially those held in the fall and connected with the development of early Greek drama. [Latin Dionysia, from Greek (ta) Dionusia (hiera), (festivities) of Dionysus, neuter pl. of Dionysios. See DIONYSIAN.]

Di-o-nys-i-ac (dī'ə-nīs'ē-āk') adj. 1. a. Greek Mythology. Of or relating to Dionysus. b. Of or relating to the Dionysia. 2. Often dionysiac. Ecstatic or wild; Dionysian. [Latin Dionysiacus, from Greek Dionusiakos, from Dionusios. See DIONYSIAN.]

Di-o-nys-i-an (dī'ə-nīsh'ən, -nīzh'ən, -nīs'ē-ən) adj. 1. Greek Mythology. a. Of or relating to Dionysus. b. Of or devoted to the worship of Dionysus. 2. Often dionysian. Of an ecstatic, orgiastic, or irrational nature; frenzied or undisciplined: “remained the nearest to the instinctual, the irrational in music, and thus to the Dionysian spirit in art” (Musco Carner). 3. Often dionysian. In the philosophy of Nietzsche, of or displaying creative-intuitive power as opposed to critical-rational power. [From Latin Dionysius, from Greek Dionusios, from Dionusos, Dionysus.]

Di·o·ny·si·us (dī-ə-nīsh'ē-əs, -nīsh'əs, -nī'sē-əs), Known as “the Elder.” 430?-367 B.C. Tyrant of Syracuse (405-367) noted for his campaigns against the Carthaginians in Sicily. His son Dionysius (395?-343?), known as “the Younger,” succeeded him as tyrant in 367 and was exiled in 343 for his despotic rule.

Di·o·ny·si·us Ex·ig·u·us (dī-ə-nīsh'ē-əs ěg-zĭg'yōō-əs, ěk-sĭg'-, -nīsh'əs, -nī'sē-əs), A.D. 500?-560?. Scythian monk and scholar who introduced the method of reckoning the Christian era from the birth of Christ.

Di·o·ny·si·us of Al·ex·an·dri·a (dī-ə-nīsh'ē-əs ũv əl'ĭg-zăn'drē-ə, -nīsh'əs, -nī'sē-əs; əl-ĭg-zăn'drē-ə), Saint. A.D. 200?-265?. Greek Christian theologian who was bishop of Alexandria after 247.

Di·o·ny·si·us of Hal·i·car·nas·sus (dī-ə-nīsh'ē-əs ũv həl'ĭ-kār-nəs'əs, -nīsh'əs, -nī'sē-əs; həl'ĭ-kār-nəs'əs), First century B.C. Greek historian whose 20-volume history of Rome, of which 10 volumes are extant, is a valuable source for early Roman history.

Di·o·ny·si·us Thrax (dī-ə-nīsh'ē-əs thrăks, -nīsh'əs-, -nī'sē-əs-), fl. 100 B.C. Greek grammarian who taught at Rhodes and Rome and wrote an influential synthesis of Greek grammar, the Art of Grammar.

Di·o·ny·sus (dī'ə-nī'səs, -nē'-) n. Greek Mythology & Roman Mythology. The god of wine and of an orgiastic religion celebrating the power and fertility of nature. Also called Bacchus [Latin Dionysus, from Greek Dionusos.]

di·o·phan·tine analysis (dī'ə-făn'tĭn' ə-năl'ĭ-sĭs, -tĭn) n. A method for determining integral solutions of certain algebraic equations. [After Diophantus, third-century A.D. Greek mathematician.]

di·op·side (dī-öp'sĭd') n. A light green, monoclinic pyroxene mineral, $\text{CaMgSi}_2\text{O}_6$, used as a gemstone and refractory. [French : di-, two (from Greek); see DI^{-1} + Greek opsis, -opsis.]

di·op·ter (dī-öp'tər) n. Abbr. D. A unit of measurement of the refractive power of lenses equal to the reciprocal of the focal length measured in meters. [Obsolete dioptra, an instrument for measuring angles, from Latin dioptra, from Greek : dia-, dia- + optos, visible; see ok^w- in Appendix.] —di·op'tral (-trəl) adj.

di·op·tom·e·ter (dī'öp-tōm'ĭ-tər) n. An instrument used for measuring ocular refraction. [DI(A) - + OPT(IC) + -METER .] —di'op·tom'e·try n.

di·op·tric (dī-öp'trĭk) also di·op·tri·cal (-trĭ-kəl) adj. 1. Of or relating to dioptrics. 2. Relating to optical refraction; refractive. [From Greek dioptrikos, of a diopter, from dioptra, diopter. See DIOPTER.]

di·op·trics (dī-öp'trĭks) n. (used with a sing. verb). The study of the refraction of light. [From DIOPTRIC.]

Di-or (dē-ôr'), Christian. 1905-1957. French fashion designer noted for his New Look of 1947 that emphasized narrow shoulders, tight waists, and long, full skirts.

di-o-ram-a (dī'ə-răm'ə, -ră'mə) n. 1. A three-dimensional miniature or life-size scene in which figures, stuffed wildlife, or other objects are arranged in a naturalistic setting against a painted background. 2. A scene reproduced on cloth transparencies with various lights shining through the cloths to produce changes in effect, intended for viewing at a distance through an aperture. [French, blend of dia-, through (from Greek); see DIA-, panorama, panorama (from English); see PANORAMA.] —di'o-ram'ic (-răm'ik) adj.

di-o-rite (dī'ə-rīt') n. Any of various dark, granite-textured, crystalline rocks rich in plagioclase and having little quartz. [French, from Greek diorizein, to distinguish : dia-, apart, between; see DIA- + horizein, to divide, limit; see HORIZON.] —di'o-rit'ic (-rīt'ik) adj.

Di-os-cu-ri (dī-ös'kyə-rī', dī'ə-skyōōr'ī) pl.n. Greek Mythology. Castor and Pollux, the twin sons of Leda and brothers of Helen and Clytemnestra, who were transformed by Zeus into the constellation Gemini. [Greek Dioskouroi : Dios, genitive of Zeus, Zeus; see deiw- in Appendix + kouroi, pl. of kouros, boy; see ker-² in Appendix.]

di-ox-ane (dī-ök'sān') n. A flammable, potentially explosive, colorless liquid, C₄H₈O₂, used as a solvent for fats, greases, and resins and in various products including paints, lacquers, glues, cosmetics, and fumigants.

di-ox-ide (dī-ök'sīd) n. A compound with two oxygen atoms per molecule.

di-ox-in (dī-ök'sīn) n. Any of several carcinogenic or teratogenic heterocyclic hydrocarbons that occur as impurities in petroleum-derived herbicides. [DI-¹ + OX(O)- + -IN.]

dip (dĭp) v. dipped, dip-ping, dips. — v. tr. 1. To plunge briefly into a liquid, as in order to wet, coat, or saturate. 2. To color or dye by immersing: dip Easter eggs. 3. To immerse (a sheep or other animal) in a disinfectant solution. 4. To form (a candle) by repeatedly immersing a wick in melted wax or tallow. 5. To galvanize or plate (metal) by immersion. 6. To scoop up by plunging the hand or a receptacle below the surface, as of a liquid; ladle: dip water out of a bucket. 7. To lower and raise (a flag) in salute. 8. To lower or drop (something) suddenly: dipped my head to avoid the branch. — v. intr. 1. To plunge into water or other liquid and come out quickly. 2. To plunge the hand or a receptacle into liquid or a container, especially so as to take something up or out: I dipped into my pocket for some coins. 3. To make inroads into funds: We dipped into our savings. 4. To drop down or sink out of sight suddenly: The sun dipped below the horizon. 5. To drop suddenly before climbing. Used of an aircraft. 6. To slope downward; decline: The road dipped. 7. To decline slightly and usually temporarily: Sales dipped after Christmas. 8. Geology. To lie at an angle to the horizontal plane, as a rock stratum or vein. 9. a. To read here and there at random; browse: dipping into Chaucer. b. To investigate a subject superficially; dabble: dipped into psychology. — n. 1. A brief plunge or immersion, especially a quick swim. 2. A liquid into which something is dipped, as for dyeing or disinfecting. 3. A savory creamy mixture into which crackers, raw vegetables, or other foods may be dipped. 4. An amount taken up by dipping. 5. A container for dipping. 6. A candle made by repeated dipping in tallow or wax. 7. A downward slope; a decline. 8. A sharp downward course; a drop: a dip in prices. 9. Geology. The downward inclination of a rock stratum or vein in reference to the plane of the horizon. 10. Magnetic dip. 11. A hollow or depression. 12. Sports. A gymnastic exercise on the parallel bars in which the body is lowered by bending the elbows until the chin reaches the level of the bars and then is raised by straightening the arms. 13. Slang. A pickpocket. 14. Slang. A foolish or stupid person. [Middle English dippen, from Old English dyppan. See dheub- in Appendix.]

SYNONYMS: dip, douse, duck, dunk, immerse, souse, submerge. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to plunge briefly into a liquid”: dipped a doughnut into his coffee; doused her head in the shower; playmates ducking each other in the pool; dunked the dirty shirt into soapsuds; immersed the tomatoes in boiling water; managed to avoid falling and being soused in the puddle; tents and trailers submerged by the deluge.

dip. abbr. Diploma.

di·pep·ti·dase (dī-pĕp'tī-dās', -dāz') n. An enzyme that hydrolyzes dipeptides into their constituent amino acids.

di·pep·tide (dī-pĕp'tīd') n. A peptide that, on hydrolysis, yields two amino acid molecules.

di·pet·al·ous (dī-pĕt'l-əs) adj. Having two petals.

di·phase (dī'fāz') also di·pha·sic (dī-fā'zīk) adj. Having two phases.

di·phen·yl (dī-fĕn'əl, -fĕ'nəl) n. See biphenyl.

di·phen·yl·a·mine (dī-fĕn'əl-ə-mĕn', -ām'ĭn, -fĕ'nəl-) n. A colorless crystalline compound, (C₆H₅)₂NH, used as a stabilizer for plastics and in the manufacture of dyes, explosives, pesticides, and pharmaceuticals.

di·phen·yl·a·mine·chlo·ro·ar·sine (dī-fĕn'əl-ə-mĕn'klōr'ō-ār-sĕn', -ār'sĕn', -ām'ĭn-, -klōr'-, -fĕ'nəl-) n. See phenarsazine chloride.

di·phen·yl·hy·dan·to·in (dī-fĕn'əl-hī-dăn'tō-ĭn, -fĕ'nəl-) n. See phenytoin. [DIPHENYL + hydantoin (HYD(ROGEN) + (ALL)ANTO(IS) + -IN).]

di·phen·yl·ke·tone (dī-fĕn'əl-kĕ'tōn, -fĕ'nəl-) n. See benzophenone.

di·phos·gene (dī-fōz'jĕn') n. A colorless liquid, ClCO₂CCl₃, used in organic synthesis. Its vapor was used as a poison gas in World War I.

di-phos-phate (dī-fōs'fāt') n. An ester of phosphoric acid containing two phosphate groups.

di-phos-pho-gly-cer-ic acid (dī-fōs'fō-gli-sēr'ik əs'īd) n. A diphosphate of glyceric acid that is an important intermediate in various metabolic processes, such as photosynthesis, glycolysis, and fermentation.

diph-the-ri-a (dīf-thīr'ē-ə, dīp-) n. An acute infectious disease caused by the bacillus Corynebacterium diphtheriae, characterized by the production of a systemic toxin and the formation of a false membrane on the lining of the mucous membrane of the throat and other respiratory passages, causing difficulty in breathing, high fever, and weakness. The toxin is particularly harmful to the tissues of the heart and central nervous system. [New Latin diphthēria, from French diphthérie, from Greek diphthera, piece of hide, leather.] —diph'the-rit'ic (-thə-rīt'ik), diph-ther'ic (-thēr'ik), diph-the'ri-al adj.

diph-thong (dīf'thōng', -thōng', dīp'-) n. Linguistics. A complex speech sound or glide that begins with one vowel and gradually changes to another vowel within the same syllable, as (oi) in boil or (ī) in fine. [Middle English diptonge, from Old French diptongue, from Late Latin diphthongus, from Greek diphthongos: di-, two; see DI⁻¹ + phthongos, sound.] —diph-thon'gal adj.

diph-thong-ize (dīf'thōng-īz', -thōng-, dīp'-) v. tr. intr. diph-thong-ized, diph-thong-iz-ing, diph-thong-iz-es. Linguistics. To pronounce as or become a diphthong. —diph'thong-i-za'tion (-ī-zā'shən) n.

diph-y-cer-cal (dīf'ī-sūr'kəl) adj. Having or designating a tail fin in which the vertebral column extends to the tip, with symmetrical upper and lower parts. [Greek diphuēs, double; see DIPHYDONT + kerkos, tail + *-AL*¹.] —diph-y-cer'cy (-sūr'sē) n.

di-phy-let-ic (dī'fī-lēt'ik) adj. Descended from two ancestral lines or individuals.

di-phy-lous (dī-fīl'əs) adj. Botany. Having two leaves.

di-phy-o-dont (dī-fī'ə-dōnt') adj. Having two successive sets of teeth, deciduous and permanent. [From Greek diphuēs, double (di-, two); see DI⁻¹ + phuein, to grow; see bheuə- in Appendix + -ODONT.]

dipl. abbr. Diplomat; diplomatic.

dipl- pref. Variant of diplo-.

di-ple-gia (dī-plē'jə, -jē-ə) n. Paralysis of corresponding parts on both sides of the body.

di-plex (dī'plēks') adj. Capable of simultaneous transmission or reception of two messages in the same radio channel. [DI⁻¹ + (DU)PLEX.]

di-plex-er (dī'plēk-sər) n. A coupling device that permits two radio transmitters to share the same antenna.

diplo- or dipl- pref. 1. Double: diplococcus. 2. Having double the basic number of chromosomes; diploid: diploint. [From Greek, from diploos, double. See dwo- in Appendix.]

dip-lo-blas-tic (dĭp'lō-blăs'tĭk) adj. Derived from two embryonic germ layers, the ectoderm and the endoderm. Used of lower invertebrates, such as sponges and coelenterates.

dip-lo-coc-cus (dĭp'lō-kök'əs) n. pl. dip-lo-coc-ci (-kök'sī', -kök'ī'). Any of various paired spherical bacteria, including those of the genus Diplococcus, some of which are pathogenic. —dip'lo-coc'cal (-kök'əl), dip'lo-coc'cic (-kök'sĭk, -kök'ĭk) adj.

di-plod-o-cus (dĭ-plöd'ə-kəs, dĭ-) n. A very large herbivorous dinosaur of the genus Diplodocus that existed during the Jurassic period. [New Latin Diplodocus, genus name : Greek diplo-, diplo- + Greek dokos, beam; see dek- in Appendix.]

dip-lo-e (dĭp'lō-ē') n. The spongy, porous, bony tissue between the hard outer and inner bone layers of the cranium. [New Latin diploē, from Greek, a fold, doubling, from feminine of diploos, twofold. See dwo- in Appendix.]

—dip'lo-ic (-lō-ĭk) adj.

dip-loid (dĭp'lōid') adj. 1. Double or twofold. 2. Genetics. Having two sets of chromosomes: diploid somatic cells. — n. Genetics. An organism having diploid cells. [Greek diplous, double; see dwo- in Appendix + -oid.]

dip-loi-dy (dĭp'loi'dē) n. The state or condition of being diploid.

dip-lo-ma (dĭ-plō'mə) n. Abbr. dipl. 1. A document issued by an educational institution, such as a university, testifying that the recipient has earned a degree or has successfully completed a particular course of study. 2. A certificate conferring a privilege or honor. 3. An official document or charter. [Latin diplōma, letter of introduction, from Greek, document, folded paper, from diploos, double. See dwo- in Appendix.]

di-plo-ma-cy (dĭ-plō'mə-sē) n. 1. The art or practice of conducting international relations, as in negotiating alliances, treaties, and agreements. 2. Tact and skill in dealing with people. See Synonyms at tact.

dip-lo-mat (dĭp'lə-măt') n. 1. Abbr. dipl. One, such as an ambassador, who has been appointed to represent a government in its relations with other governments. 2. One who uses skill and tact in dealing with others. [French diplomate, back-formation from diplomatique, diplomatic. See DIPLOMATIC.]

dip-lo-mate (dĭp'lə-măt') n. One who has received a diploma, especially a physician certified as a specialist by a board of examiners.

dip-lo-mat-ic (dĭp'lə-măt'ĭk) adj. 1. Abbr. dipl. Of, relating to, or involving diplomacy or diplomats. 2. Using or marked by tact and sensitivity in dealing with others. See Synonyms at suave. 3. a. Of or relating to diplomatics.

b. Being an exact copy of the original: a diplomatic edition. [French diploma- tique, from New Latin diplōmaticus, from Latin diplōma, diplōmat-, letter of introduction. See DIPLOMA.] —dip'lo-mat'i-cal-ly adv.

diplomatic corps (dĭp'lə-măt'ĭk kôr) n. The body of diplomatic personnel in residence at a nation's capital.

diplomatic immunity (dĭp'lə-măt'ĭk ĭ-myōō'nĭ-tē) n. The exemption from taxation and ordinary processes of law afforded to diplomatic personnel in a foreign country.

dip-lo-mat-ics (dĭp'lə-măt'ĭks) n. (used with a sing. verb). The branch of paleography that deals with the study of old official documents and determines their age and authenticity.

di-plo-ma-tist (dĭ-plō'mə-tĭst) n. A diplomat.

dip-lont (dĭp'lōnt') n. An organism having somatic cells with the diploid number of chromosomes. —dip-lont'ic (-lōn'tik) adj.

dip-lo-pi-a (dĭ-plō'pē-ə) n. See double vision. —dip-lo'pic (-plō'pĭk, dĭ-plōp'ĭk) adj.

dip-lo-pod (dĭp'lə-pōd') n. See millipede. —dip-lop'o-dous (-lōp'ə-dəs) adj.

dip-lo-sis (dĭ-plō'sĭs) n. The formation during fertilization of the diploid number of chromosomes by the fusion of the nuclei of two haploid gametes. [New Latin diplōsis, from Greek, a doubling, from diploun, to double, from diploos, double. See DIPLO-.]

dip-no-an (dĭp'nō-ən) n. Any of various fishes of the group Dipnoi, which includes the lungfishes, characterized by modified lungs that enable them to breathe atmospheric air. — adj. Of or belonging to the Dipnoi. [From New Latin Dipnoi, order name, from Greek, pl. of dipnoos, having two apertures for breathing : di-, two; see DI-¹ + -pnoos, breathing (from pnoē, breath, from pnein, to breathe); see pneu- in Appendix.]

dip-o-dy (dĭp'ə-dē) n. pl. dip-o-dies. A prosodic unit consisting of two feet. [Late Latin dipodia, from Greek, from dipous, two-footed : di-, two; see DI-¹ + pous, pod-, foot; see -POD.]

di-pole (dĭ'pōl') n. 1. Physics. A pair of electric charges or magnetic poles, of equal magnitude but of opposite sign or polarity, separated by a small distance. 2. Electronics. An antenna, usually fed from the center, consisting of two equal rods extending outward in a straight line. —di-pol'ar adj.

dipole moment (dĭ'pōl' mō'mənt) n. 1. The product of either charge in an electric dipole with the distance separating them. 2. The product of the strength of either pole in a magnetic dipole with the distance separating them.

dip-per (dĭp'ər) n. 1. One that dips, especially a container for taking up water. 2. One of several small birds of the genus Cinclus that dive into swift-moving streams and feed along the bottom. In this sense, also called water ouzel Dip-per (dĭp'ər) n. 1. The Big Dipper. 2. The Little Dipper.

dip-py (dĭp'ē) adj. dip-pi-er, dip-pi-est. Slang. Not sensible; foolish. [Origin unknown.]

di-pro-pel-lant (dī'prə-pĕl'ənt) n. See bipropellant.

di-prot-ic (dī-prŏt'ĭk) adj. Having two hydrogen ions to donate to bases in an acid-base reaction. [DI⁻¹ + PROT(ON) + -IC.]

dip-so-ma-ni-a (dĭp'sə-mā'nē-ə, -mān'yə) n. An insatiable, often periodic craving for alcoholic beverages. [Greek dipsa, thirst + -MANIA.]

—dip'so-ma'ni-ac (-ăk') adj., n. —dip'so-ma-ni'a-cal (-mə-nī'ə-kəl) adj.

dip-stick (dĭp'stĭk') n. A graduated rod for measuring the depth or amount of liquid in a container, as of oil in a crankcase.

dip-ter-an (dĭp'tər-ən) also dip-ter-on (-tə-rŏn') n. A dipterous insect. — adj. Of or belonging to the order Diptera; dipterous.

dip-ter-ous (dĭp'tər-əs) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or belonging to the Diptera, a large order of insects that includes the true flies and mosquitoes, characterized by a single pair of membranous wings and a pair of club-shaped balancing organs.

2. Having two wings, as certain insects, or winglike appendages, as certain fruits and seeds: the dipterous fruit of the maple. [From New Latin Diptera, order name, from Greek dipteros, having two wings : di-, two; see DI⁻¹ + pteron, wing; see -PTER.]

dip-tych (dĭp'tĭk) n. 1. An ancient writing tablet having two leaves hinged together. 2. A work consisting of two painted or carved panels that are hinged together. [Late Latin diptycha, from Greek diptukha, from neuter pl. of dip-tukhos, folded double : di-, two; see DI⁻¹ + ptukhē, fold (from ptussein, ptukh-, to fold).]

di-pyr-id-a-mole (dī-pĭr'ĭ-də-mŏl', -pə-rĭd'ə-) n. A drug, C₂₄H₄₀N₈O₄, that acts as a coronary vasodilator and is used, for example, in the long-term treatment of angina pectoris. [DI⁻¹ + PYRID(INE) + -AM(INE) + -OLE.]

di-quat (dī'kwăt') n. A strong, nonpersistent, yellow, crystalline herbicide, C₁₂H₁₂Br₂N₂, used to control water weeds. [DI⁻¹ + QUAT(ERNARY).]

dir. abbr. Director.

Di-rac (dī-răk'), Paul Adrien Maurice. 1902-1984. British mathematician and physicist. He shared a 1933 Nobel Prize for new formulations of the atomic theory.

dire (dĭr) adj. dir-er, dir-est. 1. Warning of or having dreadful or terrible consequences; calamitous: a dire economic forecast; dire threats. 2. Urgent; desperate: in dire need; dire poverty. [Latin dĭrus, fearsome, terrible; akin to Greek deinos.]

—dire'ly adv. —dire'ness n.

di-rect (dĭ-rĕkt', dī-) v. di-rect-ed, di-rect-ing, di-rects. — v. tr. 1. To manage or conduct the affairs of; regulate. 2. To have or take charge of; control. See Synonyms at conduct. 3. To give authoritative instructions to: directed the student to answer. See Synonyms at command. 4. To cause to move toward a goal;

aim. See Synonyms at aim. 5. To show or indicate the way for: directed us to the airport. 6. To cause to move in or follow a straight course: directed their fire at the target. 7. To indicate the intended recipient on (a letter, for example). 8. To address or adapt (remarks, for example) to a specific person, audience, or purpose. 9. a. To give guidance and instruction to (actors or musicians, for example) in the rehearsal and performance of a work. b. To supervise the performance of. — v. intr. 1. To give commands or directions. 2. To conduct a performance or rehearsal. — adj. 1. Proceeding without interruption in a straight course or line; not deviating or swerving: a direct route.

2. Straightforward and candid; frank: a direct response. 3. Having no intervening persons, conditions, or agencies; immediate: direct contact; direct sunlight. 4. Effected by action of the voters, rather than through elected representatives or delegates: direct elections. 5. Being of unbroken descent; lineal: a direct descendant of the monarch. 6. Consisting of the exact words of the writer or speaker: a direct quotation. 7. Lacking compromising or mitigating elements; absolute: direct opposites. 8. Mathematics. Varying in the same manner as another quantity, especially increasing if another quantity increases or decreasing if it decreases. 9. Astronomy. Designating west-to-east motion of a planet in the same direction as the sun's movement against the stars. — adv. Straight; directly. [Middle English directen, from Latin dīrigere, dīrēct-, to give direction to : dī-, dis-, apart; see DIS- + regere, to guide; see reg- in Appendix.]

direct access storage device (dĭ-rĕkt'ăk'sĕs stôr'ij dĭ-vĭs') n. Abbr.

DASD Computer Science. A type of storage device, such as a magnetic disk, in which bits of data are stored at precise locations, enabling the computer to retrieve information directly without having to scan a series of records.

direct action (dĭ-rĕkt'ăk'shən) n. The strategic use of immediately effective acts, such as strikes, demonstrations, or sabotage, to achieve a political or social end.

di-rect-ac-tion (dĭ-rĕkt'ăk'shən, dĭ-) adj. Operating without intermediate ingredients, components, stages, or processes.

direct current (dĭ-rĕkt'kûr'ənt) n. Abbr. dc, DC An electric current flowing in one direction only.

di-rect-ed angle (dĭ-rĕk'tĭd ăng'gəl, dĭ-) n. Mathematics. An angle having an indicated positive sense.

directed distance (dĭ-rĕk'tĭd dĭs'təns) n. Mathematics. A segment of a line having an indicated positive sense.

di-rec-tion (dĭ-rĕk'shən, dĭ-) n. 1. The act or function of directing.

2. Management, supervision, or guidance of an action or operation. 3. The art or action of musical or theatrical directing. 4. Music. A word or phrase in a score indicating how a passage is to be played or sung. 5. Often directions. An instruction or series of instructions for doing or finding something. 6. An authoritative indication; an order or a command. 7. a. The distance-independent relationship between two points in space that specifies the angular position of either with respect to the other; the relationship by which the alignment or orientation of any position with respect to any other position is established. b. A position to which motion or another position is referred. c. A line leading to a place or point. d. The line or course along which a person or thing moves.

8. The statement in degrees of the angle measured between due north and a given line or course on a compass. 9. A course or area of development; a tendency toward a particular end or goal: charting a new direction for the company. [Middle English, arrangement, from Latin dīrēctiō, dīrēctiōn-, from dīrēctus, past participle of dīrigere, to direct. See DIRECT.] —di-rec'tion-less adj.

di-rec-tion-al (dī-rĕk'shə-nəl, dī-) adj. 1. Of or indicating direction: an automobile's directional lights. 2. Electronics. Capable of receiving or sending signals in one direction only. 3. Relating to guidance in effort, behavior, or thought: directional training. 4. Serving to point the future direction, as of fashion: "A directional group of sweater knit colors are winter pastels" (Women's Wear Daily). — n. A directional signal. —di-rec'tion-al/i·ty (-shə-nəl'ī-tē) n.

directional antenna (dī-rĕk'shə-nəl ən-tĕn'ə) n. An antenna that receives or sends signals most effectively in a particular direction.

directional signal (dī-rĕk'shə-nəl sĭg'nəl) n. One of two lights on the front and rear of an automotive vehicle that flash to indicate the direction of a turn. Also called turn signal direction finder (dī-rĕk'shən fĭn'dər) n. A device for determining the source of a transmitted signal, consisting mainly of a radio receiver and a coiled rotating antenna.

di-rec-tive (dī-rĕk'tĭv, dī-) n. An order or instruction, especially one issued by a central authority. — adj. Serving to direct, indicate, or guide.

di-rec-tly (dī-rĕkt'lē, dī-) adv. 1. In a direct line or manner; straight: The road runs directly north. 2. Without anyone or anything intervening: directly responsible. 3. Exactly or totally: directly opposite. 4. At once; instantly: Leave directly. 5. Candidly; frankly: answered very directly. 6. Chiefly Southern U.S. In a little while; shortly: He'll be coming directly. — conj. Chiefly British. As soon as.

direct mail (dī-rĕkt' māl) n. Advertising circulars or other printed matter sent directly through the mail to prospective customers or contributors. —di-rec't/-mail' (dī-rĕkt'māl', dī-) adj. —direct mailer n.

direct object (dī-rĕkt' ōb'jĕkt) n. Grammar. In English and some other languages, the word or phrase in a sentence referring to the person or thing receiving the action of a transitive verb. For example, in mail the letter and call him, letter and him are direct objects.

di-rec-tor (dī-rĕk'tər, dī-) n. Abbr. dir. 1. One that supervises, controls, or manages. 2. A member of a group of persons chosen to control or govern the affairs of an institution or a corporation. 3. A person who supervises the creative aspects of a dramatic production or film and instructs the actors and crew.

4. Music. The conductor of an orchestra or a chorus. 5. An electronic device that continually calculates and displays information used for firing weapons at moving targets, such as missiles or aircraft. —di-rec'tor-ship' n.

di-rec-tor-ate (dī-rĕk'tər-ĭt, dī-) n. 1. The office or position of a director. 2. A board of directors, as of a corporation. 3. The entire staff of a bureau or department.

di-rec-to-ri-al (dī-rĕk'tôr'ē-əl, -tôr'-, dī-) adj. 1. Of or relating to a director or directorate. 2. Serving to direct; directive. —di-rec'to'ri-al-ly adv.

di-rec-tor's chair (dī-rĕk'tərz châr, dī-) n. A light, folding armchair having a plastic, wooden, or metal frame and a back and seat usually made of canvas. [From its use by motion picture directors on the set.]

di-rec-to-ry (dī-rĕk'tə-rĕ, dī-) n. pl. di-rec-to-ries. 1. A book containing an alphabetical or classified listing of names, addresses, and other data, such as telephone numbers, of specific persons, groups, or firms. 2. Computer Science. a. A listing of the files contained in a storage device, such as a magnetic disk. b. A description of the various characteristics of a file, such as the layout of the fields in it. 3. A book of rules or directions. 4. A group or body of directors. — adj. Serving to direct.

direct primary (dī-rĕkt' prī'mĕr'ē) n. A preliminary election in which a party's candidates for public office are nominated by direct vote of the people.

di-rec-trix (dī-rĕk'triks, dī-) n. pl. di-rec-trix-es or di-rec-tri-ces (dī'rĕk-trī'sĕz). 1. Mathematics. The fixed curve traversed by a generatrix in generating a conic section or a cylinder. 2. The median line in the trajectory of fire of an artillery piece.

direct tax (dī-rĕkt' tākz) n. A tax, such as an income or a property tax, levied directly on the taxpayer.

dire-ful (dīr'fəl) adj. 1. Inspiring dread; terrible. 2. Foreshadowing evil or disaster; ominous. —dire'ful-ly adv. —dire'ful-ness n.

dire wolf (dīr wōōlf) n. A large wolflike mammal (Canis dirus) that inhabited North America during the Pleistocene epoch.

dirge (dūrj) n. 1. Music. a. A funeral hymn or lament. b. A slow, mournful musical composition. 2. A mournful or elegiac poem or other literary work. 3. Roman Catholic Church. The Office for the Dead. [Middle English, an antiphon at Matins in the Office for the Dead, from Medieval Latin dirige Domine, direct, O Lord (the opening words of the antiphon), imperative of dirigere, to direct. See DIRECT.] —dirge'ful adj.

WORD HISTORY: The history of the word dirge illustrates how a word with neutral connotations, such as direct, can become emotionally charged because of a specialized use. The Latin word dīrige is a form of the verb dīrigere, “to direct, guide,” that is used in uttering commands. In the Office for the Dead dīrige is the first word in the antiphon for the first nocturn of matins. The complete opening words of this antiphon are “Dirige, Domine, Deus meus, in conspectu tuo viam meam,” “Direct, O Lord, my God, my way in thy sight.” The part of the Office for the Dead that begins with this antiphon was named Dīrige in Ecclesiastical Latin, a use of dirige as an English word that is first recorded in a work possibly written before 1200. Dirige was then extended to refer to the chanting or reading of the Office for the Dead as part of a funeral or memorial service. In Middle English the word was shortened to dirge, although it was pronounced as two syllables. After the Middle Ages the word took on its more general senses of “a funeral hymn or lament” and “a mournful poem or musical composition” and developed its one-syllable pronunciation.

dir·ham (də-rāmʹ) n. A basic unit of currency in Morocco and United Arab Emirates; a unit of currency in Libya and Qatar. See Table at currency. [Arabic, from Greek drakhmē, drachma.]

dir·i·gi·ble (dīr'ə-jə-bəl, də-rīj'ə-bəl) n. See airship. [Latin dīrigere, to direct; see DIRECT + -IBLE.]

dirk (dûrk) n. A dagger. — v. tr. dirked, dirk-ing, dirks. To stab with a dirk. [Scots durk.]

Dirk-sen (dûrk'sən), Everett McKinley. 1896-1969. American politician who represented Illinois in the U.S. Congress (1933-1969) and was known for his flamboyant oratory.

dirn·dl (dûrn'dl) n. 1. A full-skirted dress with a tight bodice, low neck, and short, full sleeves. 2. A full skirt with a gathered waistband. [German, short for Dirndlkleid: German dialectal Dirndl, diminutive of Dirne, girl (from Old High German diorna) + Kleid, dress.]

dirt (dûrt) n. 1. Earth or soil. 2. a. A filthy or soiling substance, such as mud or dust. b. Excrement. 3. A squalid or filthy condition. 4. One that is mean, contemptible, or vile. 5. a. Obscene language or subject matter. b. Malicious or scandalous gossip. c. Information that embarrasses or accuses. 6. Unethical behavior or practice; corruption. 7. Material, such as gravel or slag, from which metal is extracted in mining. [Middle English, variant of drit, excrement, filth, mud, from Old Norse.]

dirt bike (dûrt bik) n. A motorbike or bicycle designed for use on rough surfaces, such as dirt roads or trails.

dirt-cheap (dûrt'chēpʹ) adv. & adj. Very cheap: bought the property dirt-cheap; a dirt-cheap piece of property.

dirt dauber (dûrt dôb'ər) n. Chiefly Southern U.S. See potter wasp.

dirt farmer (dûrt fär'mär) n. Informal. A farmer who does all the work on his or her property. —dirt farming n.

dirt-poor (dûrt'pöör') adj. Lacking most of the necessities of life.

dirt-y (dûr'tē) adj. dirt-i-er, dirt-i-est. 1. a. Soiled, as with dirt; unclean.

b. Spreading dirt; polluting: The air near the foundry was always dirty. c. Apt to soil with dirt or grime: a dirty job at the garage. 2. Squalid or filthy; run-down: dirty slums. 3. a. Obscene or indecent: dirty movies; a dirty joke. b. Malicious or scandalous: a dirty lie. 4. a. Unethical or corrupt; sordid: dirty politics. b. Not sportsmanlike: dirty players; a dirty fighter. c. Acquired by illicit or improper means: dirty money. d. Slang. Possessing or using illegal drugs.

5. a. Unpleasant or distasteful; thankless: Laying off workers is the dirty part of this job. b. Extremely unfortunate or regrettable: a dirty shame. 6. Expressing disapproval or hostility: gave us a dirty look. 7. Not bright and clear in color; somewhat dull or drab. Often used in combination: dirty-blonde hair; dirty-green walls. 8. Producing a very great amount of long-lived radioactive fallout. Used of nuclear weapons. 9. Stormy; rough: dirty weather. — v. dirt-ied, dirt-y-ing, dirt-ies. — v. tr. 1. To make soiled. 2. To stain or tarnish with dishonor. — v. intr. To become soiled. —dirt'i-ly adv. —dirt'i-ness n.

SYNONYMS: dirty, filthy, foul, nasty, squalid, grimy. These adjectives apply to what is unclean, impure, or unkempt. Dirty, the most general, describes what is covered or stained with dirt: dirty clothes; dirty feet; dirty sidewalks. Something that is filthy is disgustingly dirty: filthy rags; a room as filthy as a pigsty. Foul suggests gross offensiveness, particularly to the sense of smell: a foul exudation; a foul pond. Nasty can refer to what is unpleasant because of the presence of dirt (Scrubbing bathrooms is a nasty job) but is often applied to what is merely annoying or unpleasant (nasty ideas; a nasty trick). Squalid suggests dirtiness, wretchedness, and sordidness: lived in a squalid apartment. Grimy describes something whose surface is smudged with dirt such as grime or soot: grimy hands.

dirty linen (dûr'tē lĭn'ən) n. Informal. Personal affairs that could cause embarrassment or distress if made public. Also called dirty laundry dirty old man (dûr'tē öld mǎn) n. Informal. A middle-aged or elderly man with lewd or lecherous inclinations.

dirty pool (dûr'tē pōöl) n. Slang. Unjust or dishonest conduct. [From POOL².]

dirty rice (dûr'tē rĭs) n. Southern Louisiana. A side dish of white rice cooked with chicken livers and gizzards and seasoned with herbs and spices.

dirty tricks (dûr'tē trĭk's) pl.n. Informal. 1. Covert intelligence operations designed to disrupt the economy or upset the political situation in another country. 2. Unethical behavior in politics, especially acts undertaken to destroy the credibility or reputation of an opponent. 3. Commercial espionage. —dirty trickster n.

dirty word (dûr'tē wûrd) n. A word, an expression, or a concept that is inappropriate or offensive from a particular point of view.

dis. abbr. 1. Discharge. 2. Discount. 3. Distance. 4. Distant.

dis- pref. 1. Not: dissimilar. 2. a. Absence of: disinterest. b. Opposite of: disfavor. 3. Undo; do the opposite of: disarrange. 4. a. Deprive of: disfranchise. b. Remove: disbud. 5. Free from: disintoxicate. 6. Used as an intensive: disannul. [Middle English, from Old French des-, from Latin dis-, dī-, from dis, apart, asunder.]

dis-a-bil-i-ty (dĭs'ə-bĭl'ĭ-tē) n. pl. dis-a-bil-i-ties. 1. a. The condition of being disabled; incapacity. b. The period of such a condition: never received a penny during her disability. 2. A disadvantage or deficiency, especially a physical or mental impairment that prevents or restricts normal achievement. 3. Something that hinders or incapacitates. 4. Law. A legal incapacity or disqualification.

dis-a-ble (dĭs-ā'bəl) v. tr. dis-a-bled, dis-a-bling, dis-a-bles. 1. To deprive of capability or effectiveness, especially to impair the physical abilities of. 2. Law. To render legally disqualified. 3. Computer Science. To suppress (an interrupt feature). —dis-a'ble-ment n. —dis-a'bling adj. —dis-a'bling-ly adv.

dis-a-bled (dĭs-ā'bəld) adj. 1. Inoperative: a disabled vehicle. 2. Impaired, as in physical functioning: a disabled veteran; disabled children. — n. Physically impaired people considered as a group. Often used with the: “I have a terrible responsibility now. I'm... representing the disabled. That feeling fills me with pride” (Christopher Nolan). See Usage Note at handicapped.

dis-a-buse (dĭs'ə-byōōz') v. tr. dis-a-bused, dis-a-bus-ing, dis-a-bus-es. To free from a falsehood or misconception: I must disabuse you of your feelings of grandeur. [French désabuser: dés-, dis- + abuser, to delude (from Old French, to misuse); see ABUSE.]

di-sac-cha-ri-dase (dī-sāk'ər-ĭ-dās', -dāz') n. An enzyme, such as invertase or lactase, that catalyzes the hydrolysis of disaccharides to monosaccharides.

di-sac-cha-ride (dī-sāk'ə-rĭd') n. Any of a class of carbohydrates, including lactose and sucrose, that yield two monosaccharides upon hydrolysis.

dis-ac-cord (dĭs'ə-kōrd') n. Lack of harmony; disagreement. — v. intr.

dis-ac-cord-ed, dis-ac-cord-ing, dis-ac-cords. To disagree. [From Middle English disaccorden, to disagree, from Old French desacorder: des-, dis- + acorder, to agree; see ACCORD.]

dis-ac-cus-tom (dĭs'ə-kūs'təm) v. tr. dis-ac-cus-tomed, dis-ac-cus-tom-ing, dis-ac-cus-toms. To render (a person) unaccustomed to something to which the person has been previously accustomed; cause to break a habit. [Middle English disacustome, from Old French desacostumer: des-, dis- + acostumer, to accustom; see ACCUSTOM.]

dis-ad-van-tage (dɪs'əd-vən'tɪj) n. 1. An unfavorable condition or circumstance. 2. Something that places one in an unfavorable condition or circumstance. 3. Damage or loss, especially to reputation or finances; detriment. — v. tr. dis-ad-van-taged, dis-ad-van-tag-ing, dis-ad-van-tag-es. To put at a disadvantage; hinder or harm. [Middle English disavauntage, from Old French desavantage: des-, dis- + avantage, advantage; see ADVANTAGE.]

SYNONYMS: disadvantage, detriment, drawback, handicap. The central meaning shared by these nouns is “a condition, circumstance, or characteristic unfavorable to success”: poor health, a disadvantage to an athlete; is free to do as she wishes without detriment; responsibilities that are a drawback to our pleasure; illiteracy, a serious handicap in life.

ANTONYM: advantage

dis-ad-van-taged (dɪs'əd-vən'tɪjd) adj. 1. Deprived of some of the basic necessities or advantages of life, such as adequate housing, medical care, or educational facilities. 2. Being at a disadvantage, especially with respect to competitive or opposing elements or forces: “We can't have... disadvantaged conventional forces on one hand and strategic nuclear forces on the other” (Bernard Rogers). — n. (used with a pl. verb). Deprived people considered as a group. — dis-ad-van'taged-ness n.

dis-ad-van-ta-geous (dɪs-əd'vən-tā'jəs, dɪs'əd-vən-) adj. Detrimental; unfavorable. — dis-ad'van-ta'geous-ly adv. — dis-ad'van-ta'geous-ness n.

dis-af-fect (dɪs'ə-fɛkt') v. tr. dis-af-fect-ed, dis-af-fect-ing, dis-af-fects. To cause to lose affection or loyalty. See Synonyms at estrangle. — dis'af-fec-tion n.

dis-af-fect-ed (dɪs'ə-fɛkt'ɪd) adj. Resentful and rebellious, especially against authority. — dis'af-fect'ed-ly adv.

dis-af-fil-i-ate (dɪs'ə-fɪl'ē-āt') v. dis-af-fil-i-at-ed, dis-af-fil-i-at-ing, dis-af-fil-i-ates. — v. tr. To remove from association. — v. intr. To end an affiliation. — dis'af-fil'i-a'tion n.

dis-af-firm (dɪs'ə-fûrm') v. tr. dis-af-firm-ed, dis-af-firm-ing, dis-af-firms. 1. To deny or contradict. See Synonyms at deny. 2. Law. To repudiate. — dis'af-fir-mance (dɪs'ə-fûr'məns), dis-af'fir-ma'tion (dɪs-äf'ər-mā'shən) n.

dis-ag-gre-gate (dɪs-äg'rɪ-gāt') v. dis-ag-gre-gat-ed, dis-ag-gre-gat-ing, dis-ag-gre-gates. — v. tr. To divide into constituent parts. — v. intr. To break up or break apart. — dis-ag'gre-ga'tion (-grə-gā'shən) n. — dis-ag'gre-ga'tive adj.

dis-a-gree (dɪs'ə-grē') v. intr. dis-a-greed, dis-a-gree-ing, dis-a-grees. 1. To fail to correspond: our figures disagree. See Synonyms at differ. 2. a. To have a differing opinion: She disagrees with him on everything. They say it will rain, but I disagree. b. To dispute or quarrel. 3. To cause adverse effects: Caffeine disagrees with me. [Middle English disagreeen, from Old French desagreer: des-, dis- + agreer, to agree; see AGREE.]

dis·a·gree·a·ble (dɪs'ə-grē'ə-bəl) adj. 1. Not to one's liking; unpleasant or offensive. 2. Having a quarrelsome, bad-tempered manner.

—dis'a-gree'a-ble-ness n. —dis'a-gree'a-bly adv.

dis·a·gree·ment (dɪs'ə-grē'mənt) n. 1. A failure or refusal to agree. 2. A disparity; an inconsistency. 3. a. A conflict or difference of opinion. b. A quarrel.

dis·al·low (dɪs'ə-lou') v. tr. dis·al·lowed, dis·al·low·ing, dis·al·lows. 1. To refuse to allow: “[The government] disallowed his aging and dying parents any reunion with their only child” (John Simon). 2. To reject as invalid, untrue, or improper. [Middle English disallowen, from Old French desalouer, to reprimand: des-, dis- + alouer, to approve; see ALLOW.] —dis'al-low'a-ble adj. —dis'al-low'ance n.

dis·am·big·u·ate (dɪs'əm-bɪg'yō-āt') v. tr. dis·am·big·u·at·ed, dis·am·big·u·at·ing, dis·am·big·u·ates. To establish a single grammatical or semantic interpretation for. —dis'am-big'u-a'tion n.

dis·an·nul (dɪs'ə-nŭl') v. tr. dis·an·nulled, dis·an·null·ing, dis·an·nuls. To annul or cancel. —dis'an-nul'ment n.

dis·ap·pear (dɪs'ə-pîr') v. intr. dis·ap·peared, dis·ap·pear·ing, dis·ap·pears. 1. To pass out of sight; vanish. 2. To cease to exist. —dis'ap-pear'ance n.

SYNONYMS: disappear, evanesce, evaporate, fade, vanish. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to pass out of sight or existence”: a skyscraper disappearing in the fog; time seeming to evanesce; courage evaporating; hopes fading away; memories vanishing slowly but surely.

ANTONYM: appear

dis·ap·point (dɪs'ə-pɔɪnt') v. dis·ap·point·ed, dis·ap·point·ing, dis·ap·points. — v. tr. 1. To fail to satisfy the hope, desire, or expectation of. 2. To frustrate or thwart. — v. intr. To cause disappointment. [Middle English disappointen, from Old French desapointier, to remove from office: des-, dis- + apointer, to appoint; see APPOINT.]

dis·ap·point·ed (dɪs'ə-pɔɪnt'ɪd) adj. Thwarted in hope, desire, or expectation: President James A. Garfield was shot by a disappointed office seeker on July 2, 1881. —dis'ap-point'ed-ly adv.

dis·ap·point·ing (dɪs'ə-pɔɪnt'ɪŋ) adj. Not up to expectations: finished the marathon in a disappointing 12th place. —dis'ap-point'ing-ly adv.

dis·ap·point·ment (dɪs'ə-pɔɪnt'mənt) n. 1. a. The act of disappointing.

b. The condition or feeling of being disappointed. 2. One that disappoints.

Dis·ap·point·ment (dɪs'ə-pɔɪnt'mənt), Cape. A cape of southwest Washington on the northern side of the mouth of the Columbia River. It was named in 1788 by a British sea captain who was searching for the fabled River of the West and was disappointed when he did not discover a wide river mouth.

dis·ap·pro·ba·tion (dɪs-əp'rə-bā'shən) n. Moral disapproval; condemnation.

dis·ap·prov·al (dɪs'ə-prōv'vəl) n. The act of disapproving; condemnation or censure.

dis·ap·prove (dɪs'ə-prōv'v) v. dis·ap·proved, dis·ap·prov·ing, dis·ap·proves. — v. tr. 1. To have an unfavorable opinion of; condemn. 2. To refuse to approve; reject. — v. intr. To have an unfavorable opinion: disapproves of drinking. — dis'ap·prov'er n. — dis'ap·prov'ing·ly adv.

dis·arm (dɪs-ärm') v. dis·armed, dis·arm·ing, dis·arms. — v. tr. 1. a. To divest of a weapon or weapons. b. To deprive of the means of attack or defense; render harmless. "Have the courage to appear poor, and you disarm poverty of its sharpest sting" (Washington Irving). 2. a. To overcome or allay the suspicion, hostility, or antagonism of. b. To win the confidence of. — v. intr. 1. To lay down arms. 2. To reduce or abolish armed forces. [Middle English disarmen, from Old French desarmer: des-, dis- + armer, to arm (from Latin armāre, from arma, weapons); see ar- in Appendix.] — dis·arm'er n.

dis·ar·ma·ment (dɪs-är'mə-mənt) n. 1. The act of laying down arms, especially the reduction or abolition of a nation's military forces and armaments.

2. The condition of being disarmed.

dis·arm·ing (dɪs-är'mɪŋ) adj. Tending to allay suspicion or hostility; winning favor or confidence: a disarming smile. — dis·arm'ing·ly adv.

dis·ar·range (dɪs'ə-rānj') v. tr. dis·ar·ranged, dis·ar·rang·ing, dis·ar·rang·es. To upset the proper arrangement or order of. — dis'ar·range'ment n.

dis·ar·ray (dɪs'ə-rā') n. 1. A state of disorder; confusion. 2. Disorderly dress.

— v. tr. dis·ar·rayed, dis·ar·ray·ing, dis·ar·rays. 1. To throw into confusion; upset. 2. To undress.

dis·ar·tic·u·late (dɪs'är-tɪk'yə-lāt') v. dis·ar·tic·u·lat·ed, dis·ar·tic·u·lat·ing, dis·ar·tic·u·lates. — v. tr. To separate at the joints; disjoint. — v. intr. To become disjointed. — dis'ar·tic'u·la'tion n. — dis'ar·tic'u·la'tor n.

dis·as·sem·ble (dɪs'ə-sēm'bəl) v. dis·as·sem·bled, dis·as·sem·bling, dis·as·sem·bles. — v. tr. To take apart: disassemble a toaster. — v. intr. 1. To come apart: The unit disassembles easily. 2. To break up in random fashion: The spectators began to disassemble. — dis'as·sem'bly n.

dis-as-so-ci-ate (dĭs'ə-sō'shē-āt', -sē-) v. tr. dis-as-so-ci-at-ed, dis-as-so-ci-at-ing, dis-as-so-ci-ates. To remove from association; dissociate.

—dis'as-so'ci-a'tion n.

dis-as-ter (dĭ-zās'tər, -sās'-) n. 1. a. An occurrence causing widespread destruction and distress; a catastrophe. b. A grave misfortune. 2. Informal. A total failure: The dinner party was a disaster. 3. Obsolete. An evil influence of a star or planet. [French désastre, from Italian disastro: dis-, pejorative pref. (from Latin dis-); see DIS- + astro, star (from Latin astrum, from Greek astron); see ster-³ in Appendix.]

SYNONYMS: disaster, calamity, catastrophe, cataclysm. These nouns refer to an event having fatal or ruinous results. Disaster generally implies great destruction, hardship, or loss of life: “A nuclear disaster, spread by winds and waters and fear, could well engulf the great and the small, the rich and the poor, the committed and the uncommitted alike” (John F. Kennedy). Calamity emphasizes distress, grief, or the sense of loss: “the heaviest calamity in English history, the breach with America” (James George Frazer). Catastrophe especially stresses the sense of a tragic final outcome: “The unleashed power of the atom has changed everything save our modes of thinking, and we thus drift toward unparalleled catastrophes” (Albert Einstein). A cataclysm is a violent upheaval that brings about a fundamental change: old aristocratic institutions destroyed by the revolutionary cataclysm.

disaster area (dĭ-zās'tər âr'ē-ə) n. An area that officially qualifies for emergency governmental aid as a result of a catastrophe, such as an earthquake or a flood.

dis-as-trous (dĭ-zās'trəs, -sās'-) adj. 1. Accompanied by or causing distress or disaster; calamitous. 2. Extremely bad; terrible: a disastrous report card.

—dis-as'trous-ly adv. —dis-as'trous-ness n.

dis-a-vow (dĭs'ə-vou') v. tr. dis-a-vowed, dis-a-vow-ing, dis-a-vows. To disclaim knowledge of, responsibility for, or association with. [Middle English disavowen, from Old French desavouer: des-, dis- + avouer, to avow; see AVOW.]

—dis'a-vow'a-ble adj. —dis'a-vow'al n.

dis-band (dĭs-bänd') v. dis-band-ed, dis-band-ing, dis-bands. — v. tr. To dissolve the organization of (a corporation, for example). — v. intr. To cease to function as an organization; disperse. [Obsolete French desbander, to separate someone from a troop: des-, dis- + Old French band, troop; see BAND².]

—dis-band'ment n.

dis-bar (dĭs-bär') v. tr. dis-barred, dis-bar-ring, dis-bars. Law. To expel (an attorney) from the practice of law by official action or procedure. —dis-bar'-ment n.

dis-be-lief (dĭs'bĭ-lēf') n. Refusal or reluctance to believe.

dis·be·lieve (dɪs'bi-lēv') v. dis·be·lieved, dis·be·liev·ing, dis·be·lieves.

— v. tr. To refuse to believe in; reject. — v. intr. To withhold or reject belief.

—dis'be·liev'er n. —dis'be·liev'ing·ly adv.

dis·branch (dɪs-brānč') v. tr. dis·branched, dis·branch·ing, dis·branch·es. 1. To cut or break a branch from (a tree). 2. To remove (a limb or branch) from a tree.

dis·bud (dɪs-būd') v. tr. dis·bud·ded, dis·bud·ding, dis·buds. 1. To remove buds from (a plant) to promote better blooms from the remaining buds or control the shape of the plant. 2. a. To prevent the growth of newly developing horns on (livestock). b. To remove such horns from (livestock).

dis·bur·den (dɪs-bûr'dn) v. dis·bur·dened, dis·bur·den·ing, dis·bur·dens. — v. tr. 1. a. To relieve (a pack animal, for example) of a burden. b. To free of a burden or trouble: disburden one's mind. 2. To unload: disburdened the goods in the shipping room. — v. intr. To unload a burden.

—dis·bur'den·ment n.

dis·bur·sal (dɪs-bûr'səl) n. Disbursement.

dis·burse (dɪs-bûrs') v. tr. dis·bursed, dis·burs·ing, dis·burs·es. To pay out, as from a fund; expend. See Synonyms at spend. [Obsolete French desbourser, from Old French desborser: des-, dis- + burse, purse (from Late Latin bursa, purse); see BURSA.] —dis·burs'a·ble adj. —dis·burs'er n.

dis·burse·ment (dɪs-bûrs'mənt) n. 1. The act or process of disbursing.

2. Money paid out; expenditure.

disc (dɪsk) n. & v. Variant of disk.

disc. abbr. Discount.

disc- pref. Variant of disco-.

dis·calced (dɪs-kălst') adj. Barefoot or wearing sandals. Used of certain religious orders. [From Latin discalceātus: dis-, dis- + calceātus, shod (from calceus, shoe, from calx, calc-, heel).]

dis·cant (dɪs'kănt') Music. n. Variant of descant (n., sense 1). — v.

(dɪs'kănt', dɪ-skănt') Variant of descant (v. intr., sense 2).

dis·card (dɪ-skärd') v. dis·card·ed, dis·card·ing, dis·cards. — v. tr. 1. To throw away; reject. 2. Games. a. To throw out (a playing card) from one's hand.

b. To play (a card other than a trump) from a suit different from that of the card led. — v. intr. Games. To discard a playing card. — n. (dɪs'kărd') 1. Games.

a. The act of discarding in a card game. b. A discarded playing card. 2. One that is discarded or rejected. —dis·card'a·ble adj. —dis·card'er n.

dis·car·nate (dɪs-kär'nīt, -nāt') adj. Having no material body or form: a discarnate spirit. [DIS- + (IN)CARNATE.] —dis·car'nate n.

disc brake also disk brake (dɪsk brāk) n. A brake in which the friction is caused by a set of pads that press against a rotating disk.

dis·cern (dĭ-sûrn', -zûrn') v. dis·cerned, dis·cern·ing, dis·cerns. — v. tr.

1. To perceive with the eyes or intellect; detect. 2. To recognize or comprehend mentally. 3. To perceive or recognize as being different or distinct; distinguish. See Synonyms at see¹. — v. intr. To perceive differences. [Middle English discernen, from Old French discerner, from Latin discernere, to separate : dis-, apart; see DIS- + cernere, to perceive; see krei- in Appendix.] — dis·cern'er n.

dis·cern·i·ble (dĭ-sûr'nə-bəl, -zûr'-) adj. Perceptible, as by the faculty of vision or the intellect. See Synonyms at perceptible. — dis·cern'i·bly adv.

dis·cern·ing (dĭ-sûr'nĭng, -zûr'-) adj. Exhibiting keen insight and good judgment; perceptive. — dis·cern'ing·ly adv.

dis·cern·ment (dĭ-sûrn'mənt, -zûrn'-) n. 1. The act or process of exhibiting keen insight and good judgment. 2. Keeness of insight and judgment.

dis·charge (dĭs-chärj') v. dis·charged, dis·charg·ing, dis·charg·es. Abbr.

dis. — v. tr. 1. a. To relieve of a burden or of contents; unload. b. To unload or empty (contents). 2. a. To release, as from confinement, care, or duty: discharge a patient; discharge a soldier. b. To let go; empty out: a train discharging commuters. c. To pour forth; emit: a vent discharging steam. d. To shoot: discharge a pistol. 3. To remove from office or employment. See Synonyms at dismiss. 4. To perform the obligations or demands of (an office, duty, or task). See Synonyms at perform. 5. To comply with the terms of (a debt or promise, for example). 6. Law. a. To acquit completely: discharged the defendant. b. To set aside; annul: discharge a court order. 7. To remove (color) from cloth, as by chemical bleaching. 8. Electricity. To cause the release of stored energy or electric charge from (a battery, for example). 9. Architecture. a. To apportion (weight) evenly, as over a door. b. To relieve (a part) of excess weight by distribution of pressure. — v. intr. Abbr. dis. 1. To get rid of a burden, load, or weight.

2. a. To go off; fire: The musket discharged loudly. b. To pour forth, emit, or release contents. c. To become blurred, as a color or dye; run. 3. To undergo the release of stored energy or electric charge. — n. (dĭs'chärj', dĭs-chärj') Abbr.

dis. 1. The act of removing a load or burden. 2. The act of shooting or firing a projectile or weapon. 3. a. A flowing out or pouring forth; emission; secretion: a discharge of pus. b. The amount or rate of emission or ejection. c. Something that is discharged, released, emitted, or excreted: a watery discharge. 4. The act or an instance of removing an obligation, a burden, or a responsibility.

5. a. Fulfillment of the terms of something, such as a debt or promise.

b. Performance, as of an office or a duty. 6. a. Dismissal or release from employment, service, care, or confinement. b. An official document certifying such release, especially from military service. 7. Law. An annulment or acquittal; dismissal, as of a court order. 8. Electricity. a. Release of stored energy in a capacitor by the flow of current between its terminals. b. Conversion of chemical energy to electric energy in a storage battery. c. A flow of electricity in a dielec-tric, especially in a rarefied gas. d. Elimination of net electric charge from a charged body. [Middle English dischargen, from Old French deschargier, from Late Latin discarricāre: Latin dis-, dis- + Late Latin carricāre, to load; see CHARGE.]

—dis-charge/a-ble adj. —dis'charg-ee' n. —dis-charge'er n.

discharge lamp (dĭs-chärj' lämp) n. A lamp that generates light by means of an internal electrical discharge between electrodes in a gas.

discharge tube (dĭs-chärj' tōōb) n. A closed insulating vessel containing a gas at low pressure through which an electric current flows when sufficient voltage is applied to its electrodes.

disc harrow (dĭsk häř'ō) n. Variant of disk harrow.

disci- pref. Variant of disco-.

dis-ci-form (dĭs'ə-fōrm', dĭs'kə-) adj. Flat and rounded in shape; discoid: disciform fungi.

dis-ci-ple (dĭ-sī'pəl) n. 1. a. One who embraces and assists in spreading the teachings of another. b. An active adherent, as of a movement or philosophy. 2. Often Disciple. One of the 12 original followers of Jesus. 3. Disciple. A member of the Disciples of Christ. [Middle English, from Old English discipul, and from Old French desceple both from Latin discipulus, pupil, from discere, to learn. See dek- in Appendix.] —dis-ci'ple-ship' n.

Dis-ci-ples of Christ (dĭ-sī'pəlz ūv krĭst) pl.n. (used with a sing. or pl. verb). A Christian denomination founded in 1809 that accepts the Bible as the only rule of Christian faith and practice, rejects denominational creeds, and practices baptism by immersion.

dis-ci-plin-a-ble (dĭs'ə-plĭn'ə-bəl, dĭs'ə-plĭn'-) adj. 1. Deserving of or subject to discipline: a disciplinable misdeed. 2. Responsive to training; easily taught.

dis-ci-pli-nar-i-an (dĭs'ə-plə-när'ē-ən) n. One that enforces or believes in strict discipline. — adj. Disciplinary.

dis-ci-pli-nar-y (dĭs'ə-plə-när'ē) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or used for discipline: disciplinary training; disciplinary measures. 2. Of or relating to a specific field of academic study. —dis'ci-pli-nar'i-ly (-när'ə-lē) adv. —dis'ci-pli-nar'i-ty (-när'ī-tē, -när'-) n.

dis-ci-pline (dĭs'ə-plĭn) n. 1. Training expected to produce a specific character or pattern of behavior, especially training that produces moral or mental improvement. 2. Controlled behavior resulting from disciplinary training; self-control. 3. a. Control obtained by enforcing compliance or order. b. A systematic method to obtain obedience: a military discipline. c. A state of order based on submission to rules and authority: a teacher who demanded discipline in the classroom. 4. Punishment intended to correct or train. 5. A set of rules or methods, as those regulating the practice of a church or monastic order. 6. A branch of knowledge or teaching. — v. tr. dis-ci-plined, dis-ci-plin-ing, dis-ci-plines. 1. To train by instruction and practice, especially to teach self-control to. 2. To teach to obey rules or accept authority. See Synonyms at teach.

3. To punish in order to gain control or enforce obedience. See Synonyms at punish. 4. To impose order on: needed to discipline their study habits. [Middle English, from Old French descepline, from Latin disciplīna, from discipulus, pupil.

See DISCIPLE.] —dis'ci-pli-nal (-plə-nəl) adj. —dis'ci-plin'er n.

dis-ci-plined (dɪs'ə-plɪnd) adj. Possessing or indicative of discipline: a dancer's disciplined body; a disciplined set of work habits.

disc jockey also disk jockey (dɪsk ʒɒk'ē) n. Abbr. DJ An announcer who presents and comments on popular recorded music, especially on the radio.

dis-claim (dɪs-klām') v. dis-claimed, dis-claim-ing, dis-claims. — v. tr.

1. To deny or renounce any claim to or connection with; disown. 2. To deny the validity of; repudiate. 3. Law. To renounce one's right or claim to. — v. intr.

Law. To renounce a right or claim. [Middle English disclaimen, from Anglo-Norman desclaimer: des-, dis- + claimer, to claim (from Latin clāmāre, to cry out); see CLAIM.]

dis-claim-er (dɪs-klā'mər) n. 1. A repudiation or denial of responsibility or connection. 2. Law. A renunciation of one's right or claim. [Middle English, denial of a feudal claim, from Anglo-Norman desclaimer, to disclaim, denial of a feudal claim. See DISCLAIM.]

dis-cla-ma-tion (dɪs'klə-mā'shən) n. The act or an instance of disavowing; renunciation. [Probably from Anglo-Norman desclaimer, disclaimer, to disclaim. See DISCLAIM.]

dis-cli-max (dɪs-klī'mäks') n. Ecology. A climax community that has been disturbed by various influences, especially by human beings and domestic animals, such as a grassland community that has been altered to desert by overgrazing.

dis-close (dɪ-sklōz') v. tr. dis-closed, dis-clos-ing, dis-clos-es. 1. To expose to view, as by removing a cover; uncover. 2. To make known (something heretofore kept secret). See Synonyms at reveal¹. [Middle English disclosen, from Old French desclorre, desclos-: des-, dis- + clorre, to close (from Latin claudere).]

—dis-clos'a-ble adj. —dis-clos'er n.

dis-clos-ing agent (dɪ-sklō'zɪŋ ə'ʒənt) n. A dye used in dentistry as a diagnostic aid, applied to the teeth to reveal the presence of dental plaque. Also called disclosing solution dis-clo-sure (dɪ-sklō'zhər) n. 1. The act or process of revealing or uncovering. 2. Something uncovered; a revelation.

dis-co (dɪs'kō) n. pl. dis-cos. 1. A discotheque. 2. a. Music. Popular dance music characterized by strong repetitive bass rhythms. b. A style of dancing done especially to disco music. — v. intr. dis-coed, dis-co-ing, dis-cos. To dance to disco music. [Short for DISCOTHEQUE.] —dis'co adj.

disco- or disc- also disci- pref. 1. Disk: discoīd. 2. Phonograph record: discophile. [Latin, from Greek disko-, from diskos, disk. See DISK.]

dis-cog-ra-phy (dĭ-skŏg'rə-fē) n. pl. dis-cog-ra-phies. 1. The study and cataloguing of phonograph records. 2. A comprehensive list of the recordings made by a particular performer or of a particular composer's works.

—dis-cog/ra-pher n. —dis/co-graph/i-cal (dĭs'kə-gräf'ĭ-kəl), dis/co-graph'ic (-gräf'ĭk) adj.

dis-coid (dĭs'koid') also dis-coi-dal (dĭ-skoid'l) adj. 1. Having a flat, circular form; disk-shaped. 2. Related to or having a disk. 3. Botany. Having disk flowers only. Used of a composite flower head. —dis/coid' n.

dis-col-or (dĭs-kŭl'ər) v. dis-col-ored, dis-col-or-ing, dis-col-ors. — v. tr. To alter or spoil the color of; stain. — v. intr. To become altered or spoiled in color. [Middle English discolouren, from Old French discolerer : des-, dis- + colourer, to color (from Latin colōrāre, from color, color); see COLOR.]

dis-col-or-a-tion (dĭs-kŭl'ə-rā'shən) n. 1. a. The act of discoloring. b. The condition of being discolored. 2. A discolored spot, smudge, or area; a stain.

dis-com-bob-u-late (dĭs'kəm-bŏb'yə-lāt') v. tr. dis-com-bob-u-lat-ed, dis-com-bob-u-lat-ing, dis-com-bob-u-lates. To throw into a state of confusion. See Synonyms at confuse. [Perhaps alteration of DISCOMPOSE.] —dis/com-bob'u-la'tion n.

dis-com-fit (dĭs-kŭm'fĭt) v. tr. dis-com-fit-ed, dis-com-fit-ing, dis-com-fits. 1. To make uneasy or perplexed; disconcert. See Synonyms at embarrass. 2. To thwart the plans of; frustrate. 3. Archaic. To defeat in battle; vanquish. — n. Discomfiture. [Middle English discomfĭten, from Old French desconfit, past participle of desconfire, descumfire, to defeat : des-, dis- + confire, to make (from Latin cōnficere, to prepare); see COMFIT.]

USAGE NOTE: It is true that discomfit originally meant “to defeat, frustrate,” and that its newer use meaning “to embarrass, disconcert,” probably arose in part through confusion with discomfort. But the newer sense is now the most common use of the verb in all varieties of writing and should be considered entirely standard.

dis-com-fi-ture (dĭs-kŭm'fĭ-chŏŏr', -chər) n. 1. Frustration or disappointment. 2. Lack of ease; perplexity and embarrassment. 3. Archaic. Defeat.

dis-com-fort (dĭs-kŭm'fərt) n. 1. Mental or bodily distress. 2. Something that disturbs one's comfort; annoyance. — v. tr. dis-com-fort-ed, dis-com-fort-ing, dis-com-forts. To make uncomfortable; distress. See Usage Note at discomfit. [Middle English, from Old French desconfort, from desconforter, to discourage : des-, dis- + conforter, to strengthen; see COMFORT.]

—dis-com/fort-a-ble (-kŭm'fər-tə-bəl, -kŭmf'tə-bəl) adj. —dis-com/fort-ing-ly adv.

dis-com-mend (dɪs'kə-mɛnd/) v. tr. dis-com-mend-ed, dis-com-mend-ing, dis-com-mends. 1. To show or voice disapproval of.

2. To cause to come into disfavor or ill regard. —dis'com-mend'a-ble adj.

dis-com-mode (dɪs'kə-mōd/) v. tr. dis-com-mod-ed, dis-com-mod-ing, dis-com-modes. To put to inconvenience; trouble. [DIS- + commode, to suit (from Latin commodāre, from commodus, convenient); see COMMODIOUS.]

dis-com-pose (dɪs'kəm-pōz/) v. tr. dis-com-posed, dis-com-pos-ing, dis-com-pos-es. 1. To disturb the composure or calm of; perturb. 2. To put into a state of disorder. —dis'com-pos'ed-ly (-pō'zɪd-lē) adv. —dis'-com-pos'ing-ly adv.

dis-com-po-sure (dɪs'kəm-pō'zhər) n. Absence of composure.

dis-con-cert (dɪs'kən-sûrt/) v. tr. dis-con-cert-ed, dis-con-cert-ing, dis-con-certs. 1. To upset the self-possession of; ruffle. See Synonyms at embarrass. 2. To frustrate (plans, for example) by throwing into disorder; disarrange. [Obsolete French disconcerter, from Old French desconcerter: des-, dis- + concerter, to bring into agreement (from Old Italian concertare).] —dis'-con-cert'ing-ly adv.

dis-con-form-i-ty (dɪs'kən-fôr'mĭ-tē) n. pl. dis-con-form-i-ties. 1. Geology.

A type of unconformity in which the rock layers are parallel. 2. Refusal or failure to conform; nonconformity.

dis-con-nect (dɪs'kə-nɛkt/) v. dis-con-nect-ed, dis-con-nect-ing, dis-con-nects. — v. tr. 1. To sever or interrupt the connection of or between: disconnected the hose. 2. Electricity. To shut off the current in (an appliance) by removing its connection to a power source. — v. intr. To sever or interrupt a connection. —dis'con-nect-ion n.

dis-con-nect-ed (dɪs'kə-nɛk'tɪd) adj. 1. Not connected; separate or detached.

2. Marked by unrelated parts; incoherent: described the accident in a disconnected way. —dis'con-nect'ed-ly adv. —dis'con-nect'ed-ness n.

dis-con-so-late (dɪs-kɔn'sə-lĭt) adj. 1. Seeming beyond consolation; extremely dejected: disconsolate at the loss of the dog. 2. Cheerless; gloomy: a disconsolate winter landscape. [Middle English, from Medieval Latin discōnsōlātus: Latin dis-, dis- + cōnsōlātus, past participle of cōnsōlārī, to console; see CONSOLE¹.]

—dis-con'so-late-ly adv. —dis-con'so-late-ness, dis-con'so-la'tion (-kɔn'sə-lā'shən) n.

dis-con-tent (dɪs'kən-tɛnt/) n. 1. a. Absence of contentment; dissatisfaction.

b. A restless longing for better circumstances. 2. One who is discontented. — adj. Discontented. — v. tr. dis-con-tent-ed, dis-con-tent-ing, dis-con-tents. To make discontented. —dis'con-tent'ment n.

dis-con-tent-ed (dɪs'kən-tɛn'tɪd) adj. Restlessly unhappy; malcontent.

—dis'con-tent'ed-ly adv. —dis'con-tent'ed-ness n.

dis-con-tin-u-ance (dɪs'kən-tɪn'yoʊ-əns) n. 1. The act or an instance of discontinuing or the condition of being discontinued; cessation. 2. Law. Termination of an action by the plaintiff.

dis-con-tin-u-a-tion (dɪs'kən-tɪn'yoʊ-ā'shən) n. A cessation; a discontinuance.

dis-con-tin-ue (dɪs'kən-tɪn'yoʊ) v. dis-con-tin-ued, dis-con-tin-u-ing, dis-con-tin-ues. — v. tr. 1. To put a stop to; terminate. 2. To cease trying to accomplish or continue; abandon. 3. Law. To terminate (an action) by discontinuance. — v. intr. To come to an end. See Synonyms at stop. [Middle English discontinuen, from Old French descontinuer, from Medieval Latin discontinuāre: Latin dis-, dis- + Latin continuāre, to continue; see CONTINUE.]

dis-con-ti-nu-i-ty (dɪs-kɒn'tə-nōʊ'ɪ-tē, -nyōʊ'-) n. pl. dis-con-ti-nu-i-ties. 1. Lack of continuity, logical sequence, or cohesion. 2. A break or gap. 3. Geology. A surface at which seismic wave velocities change. 4. Mathematics. a. A point at which a function is defined but is not continuous. b. A point at which a function is undefined.

dis-con-tin-u-ous (dɪs'kən-tɪn'yoʊ-əs) adj. 1. a. Marked by breaks or interruptions; intermittent: discontinuous applause. b. Consisting of distinct or unconnected elements, such as the physical features of a landscape. c. Being without sequential order or coherent form. 2. Mathematics. Possessing one or more discontinuities, as a function. —dis'con-tin'u-ous-ly adv. —dis'-con-tin'u-ous-ness n.

discontinuous variation (dɪs'kən-tɪn'yoʊ-əs vâ'r'ē-ā'shən) n. Biology. Variation within a population in which few or no intermediate phenotypes fall between the extremes.

dis-co-phil (dɪs'kə-fɪl') n. A collector of or specialist in phonograph records.

dis-cord (dɪs'kôrd') n. 1. a. Lack of agreement among persons, groups, or things. b. Tension or strife resulting from a lack of agreement; dissension. 2. A confused or harsh sound or mingling of sounds. 3. Music. Inharmonious combination of simultaneously sounded tones; dissonance. — v. intr. dis-cord-ed, dis-cord-ing, dis-cords (dɪ-skôrd', dɪs'kôrd'). To fail to agree or harmonize; clash. [Middle English, from Old French descorde, from Latin discordia, from discors, discord-, disagreeing: dis-, apart; see DIS- + cor, heart; see kerd- in Appendix.]

SYNONYMS: discord, strife, contention, dissension, conflict, clash, variance. These nouns are compared as they mean a state of disagreement and disharmony. Discord is a lack of harmony often marked by bickering and antipathy: family discord. Strife usually implies a struggle, often destructive, between rivals or factions: a measure intended to end party strife. Contention in this sense is largely limited to dispute in the form of heated debate or quarreling: Political discussions often give rise to lively contention. Dissension implies difference of opinion that disrupts unity within a group: Dissension is rampant among the members of the committee. Conflict suggests antagonism of ideas or interests that often results in hostility or divisiveness: conflict between smoking and nonsmoking factions. Clash implies sharp conflict involving irreconcilable ideas or interests: had to exercise all her tact to prevent clashes between the two opinionated guests. Variance usually suggests discrepancy or incompatibility: His actions are often at variance with his principles.

dis·cord·ance (dĭ-skôr'dns) n. 1. The state or an instance of disagreement; discord. 2. Genetics. The presence of a given genetic trait in only one member of a pair of identical twins.

dis·cor·dant (dĭ-skôr'dnt) adj. 1. Not being in accord; conflicting. See Synonyms at inconsistent. 2. Disagreeable in sound; harsh or dissonant.

—dis·cor'dan·cy n. —dis·cor'dant·ly adv.

Dis·cor·di·a (dĭ-skôr'dē-ə) n. Roman Mythology. The goddess of strife, identified with the Greek Eris. [Latin, from discordia, discord. See DISCORD.]

dis·co·theque also dis·co·thèque (dĭs'kə-tĕk', dĭs'kə-tĕk') n. A nightclub that features dancing to recorded or sometimes live music and often has showy decor and elaborate lighting. [French, record library, discothèque, from Italian discoteca, record library : disco, disk, record (from Latin discus, quoit); see DISCUS + biblioteca, library (from Latin bibliothēca); see BIBLIOTHECA.]

dis·count (dĭs'kount', dĭs-kount') v. dis·count·ed, dis·count·ing, dis·counts. Abbr. dis., disc. — v. tr. 1. To deduct or subtract from a cost or price. 2. a. To purchase or sell (a bill, note, or other commercial paper) at a reduction equal to the amount of interest that will accumulate before it matures. b. To lend money on (a commercial paper not immediately payable) after deducting the interest. 3. a. To sell or offer for sale at a reduced price. b. To reduce in quantity or value. 4. a. To leave out of account as being untrustworthy or exaggerated; disregard: discount a rumor. b. To underestimate the significance or effectiveness of; minimize: took care not to discount his wife's accomplishments. c. To regard with doubt or disbelief. 5. To anticipate and make allowance for; reckon with in advance. — v. intr. To lend money after deduction of interest. — n. (dĭs'kount') 1. A reduction from the full or standard amount of a price or debt. 2. The interest deducted prior to purchasing, selling, or lending a commercial paper; the discount rate. 3. The act or an instance of discounting a bill of exchange, note, or other commercial paper. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: a discount market; discount merchandise. [Alteration (influenced by DIS-, and COUNT¹), of French décompter, from Old French desconter : des-, away; see DIS- + conter, to count; see COUNT¹.] —dis'count'a·ble adj.

discount broker (dɪs'kount' brō'kər) n. 1. An agent who discounts a bill, note, or other commercial paper. 2. A stockbroker or brokerage house that gives a discount on commission fees. —discount brokerage n.

dis-coun·te-nance (dɪs-koun'tə-nəns) v. tr. dis-coun·te-nanced, dis-coun·te-nanc-ing, dis-coun·te-nanc-es. 1. To view or treat with disfavor.

2. To put out of countenance; disconcert. — n. Disfavor or disapproval.

dis-count-er (dɪs-koun'tər) n. 1. One that discounts, as a person who runs a discount store or business. 2. See discount store.

discount house (dɪs'kount' hous) n. See discount store.

discount rate (dɪs'kount' rāt) n. 1. The interest deducted in advance in purchasing, selling, or lending a commercial paper. 2. The interest rate charged by the Federal Reserve Bank on loans to its member banks. A change in the discount rate is usually followed by similar changes in the interest rates charged by banks and money markets.

discount store (dɪs'kount' stôr) n. A store that sells merchandise, especially consumer goods, at a discount from the manufacturer's suggested retail price.

Also called discounter, discount house.

dis-cour-age (dɪ-skûr'ij, -skûr'-) v. tr. dis-cour-aged, dis-cour-ag-ing, dis-cour-age-es. 1. To deprive of confidence, hope, or spirit. 2. To hamper by discouraging; deter. 3. To try to prevent by expressing disapproval or raising objections. [Middle English discoragen, from Old French descoragier : des-, dis- + corage, courage; see COURAGE.] —dis-cour'age-a-ble adj. —dis-cour'ag-er n.

—dis-cour'ag-ing-ly adv.

SYNONYMS: discourage, dishearten, dispirit. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to make less hopeful or enthusiastic”: discouraged by the magnitude of the problem; lack of interest that disheartened the instructor; a failure that dispirited the team. See also Synonyms at dissuade dis-cour-age-ment (dɪ-skûr'ij-mənt, -skûr'-) n. 1. a. The act of discouraging. b. The condition of being discouraged. See Synonyms at despair.

ANTONYM: encourage

2. Something that discourages; a deterrent.

dis-course (dɪs'kôrs', -kôrs') n. 1. Verbal expression in speech or writing.

2. Verbal exchange; conversation. 3. A formal, lengthy discussion of a subject, either written or spoken. 4. Archaic. The process or power of reasoning. — v.

dis-coursed, dis-cours-ing, dis-cours-es (dɪ-skôrs', -skôrs'). — v. intr.

1. To speak or write formally and at length. See Synonyms at speak. 2. To engage in conversation or discussion; converse. — v. tr. Archaic. To narrate or discuss. [Middle English discours, process of reasoning, from Medieval Latin discursus, from Latin, a running about, from past participle of discurrere, to run about : dis-, apart; see DIS- + currere, to run; see kers- in Appendix.]

—dis-cours'er n.

dis-cour-te-ous (dīs-kûr'tē-əs) adj. Exhibiting no courtesy; rude.

—dis-cour'te-ous-ly adv. —dis-cour'te-ous-ness n.

dis-cour-te-sy (dīs-kûr'tī-sē) n. pl. dis-cour-te-sies. 1. Lack of courtesy; rudeness. 2. A rude act or statement.

dis-cov-er (dī-sküv'ər) v. tr. dis-cov-ered, dis-cov-er-ing, dis-cov-ers. 1. To obtain knowledge of, as through observation or study. 2. To be the first to find, learn of, or observe. 3. Archaic. To reveal or expose. [Middle English discoveren, to reveal, from Old French descovrir, from Late Latin discooperire : dis-, dis- + cooperire, to cover; see COVER.] —dis-cov'er-a-ble adj. —dis-cov'er-er n.

SYNONYMS: discover, ascertain, determine, learn. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to gain knowledge or awareness of something not known before”: discovered that the world is round; ascertaining the facts; tried to determine the date of delivery; learned that her friend had married.

dis-cov-er-y (dī-sküv'ər-ē) n. pl. dis-cov-er-ies. 1. The act or an instance of discovering. 2. Something discovered. 3. Law. Data or documents that a party to a legal action is compelled to disclose to another party either before or during a proceeding.

dis-cred-it (dīs-krəd'it) v. tr. dis-cred-it-ed, dis-cred-it-ing, dis-cred-its.

1. To damage in reputation; disgrace. 2. To cause to be doubted or distrusted.

3. To refuse to believe. — n. 1. Loss of or damage to one's reputation. See Synonyms at disgrace. 2. Lack or loss of trust or belief; doubt. 3. Something damaging to one's reputation or stature.

dis-cred-it-a-ble (dīs-krəd'ī-tə-bəl) adj. Harmful to one's reputation; blame-worthy: discreditable behavior. —dis-cred'it-a-bly adv.

dis-creet (dī-skrēt') adj. 1. Marked by, exercising, or showing prudence and wise self-restraint in speech and behavior; circumspect. 2. Free from ostentation or pretension; modest. [Middle English, from Old French discret, from Medieval Latin discrētus, from Latin, past participle of discernere, separate, to discern. See DISCERN.] —dis-creet'ly adv. —dis-creet'ness n.

dis-crep-ance (dī-skrēp'əns) n. Discrepancy.

dis-crep-an-cy (dī-skrēp'ən-sē) n. pl. dis-crep-an-cies. 1. Divergence or disagreement, as between facts or claims; difference. 2. An instance of divergence or disagreement. See Synonyms at difference.

dis-crep-ant (dī-skrēp'ənt) adj. Marked by discrepancy; disagreeing. See Synonyms at inconsistent. [Middle English discrepaunt, from Latin discrepāns, discrepant- present participle of discrepāre, to disagree : dis-, apart; see DIS- + crepāre, to rattle.] —dis-crep'ant-ly adv.

dis-crete (dĭ-skrĕt') adj. 1. Constituting a separate thing; distinct.

2. Consisting of unconnected distinct parts. See Synonyms at distinct.

3. Mathematics. Defined for a finite set of values; not continuous. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin discrĕtus, past participle of discernere, to separate. See DISCREET.] —dis-crete/ly adv. —dis-crete/ness n.

discrete variable (dĭ-skrĕt' vâ-r'ĕ-ə-bəl) n. Mathematics. A variable that assumes only whole number values.

dis-cre-tion (dĭ-skrĕsh'ən) n. 1. The quality of being discreet; circumspection. See Synonyms at prudence. 2. Ability or power to decide responsibly.

3. Freedom to act or judge on one's own: All the decisions were left to our discretion. —dis-cre'tion-al adj. —dis-cre'tion-al-ly adv.

dis-cre-tion-ar-y (dĭ-skrĕsh'ə-nĕr'ĕ) adj. 1. Left to or regulated by one's own discretion or judgment. 2. Available for use as needed or desired: a discretionary fund. —dis-cre'tion-ar/i-ly (-nâr'ə-lĕ) adv.

discretionary account (dĭ-skrĕsh'ə-nĕr'ĕ ə-kount') n. A stock or commodity account in which an agent is free to trade without prior consultation with the customer.

discretionary income (dĭ-skrĕsh'ə-nĕr'ĕ ĭn'kŭm') n. Individual income that is not allocated for necessary items such as food and shelter.

dis-cret-i-za-tion (dĭ-skrĕ'tĭ-zā'shən) n. Mathematics. The act of making mathematically discrete.

dis-crim-i-na-bil-i-ty (dĭ-skrĭm'ə-nə-bĭl'ĭ-tĕ) n. 1. The quality of being discriminable. 2. The capacity or power to discriminate.

dis-crim-i-na-ble (dĭs-krĭm'ə-nə-bəl) adj. That can be discriminated; distinguishable: discriminable faults; a skyline that was discriminable even through smog. —dis-crim'i-na-bly adv.

dis-crim-i-nant (dĭ-skrĭm'ə-nənt) n. Mathematics. An expression used to distinguish or separate other expressions in a quantity or an equation.

discriminant function (dĭ-skrĭm'ə-nənt fŭngk'shən) n. Statistics. A function of a set of variables used to classify an object or event.

dis-crim-i-nate (dĭ-skrĭm'ə-nāt') v. dis-crim-i-nat-ed, dis-crim-i-nat-ing, dis-crim-i-nates. — v. intr. 1. a. To make a clear distinction; distinguish: discriminate among the options available. b. To make sensible decisions; judge wisely. 2. To make distinctions on the basis of class or category without regard to individual merit; show preference or prejudice: was accused of discriminating against women; discriminated in favor of his cronies. — v. tr. 1. To perceive the distinguishing features of; recognize as distinct: discriminate right from wrong. 2. To distinguish by noting differences; differentiate: unable to discriminate colors. [Latin discrĭmināre, discrĭmināt-, from discrĭmen, discrĭmin-, distinction. See krei- in Appendix.] —dis-crim/i-nate (-nĭt) adj. —dis-crim/i-nate-ly adv.

dis·crim·i·nat·ing (dī-skrīm'ə-nā'ting) adj. 1. a. Able to recognize or draw fine distinctions; perceptive. b. Showing careful judgment or fine taste: a discriminating collector of rare books; a dish for the discriminating palate. 2. Separating into distinct parts or components; analytical. 3. Serving to distinguish; distinctive: a discriminating characteristic. 4. Marked by or showing bias; discriminatory. —dis·crim'i·nat'ing·ly adv.

dis·crim·i·na·tion (dī-skrīm'ə-nā'shən) n. 1. The act of discriminating. 2. The ability or power to see or make fine distinctions; discernment. 3. Treatment or consideration based on class or category rather than individual merit; partiality or prejudice: "It's necessary to eliminate all forms of sexual discrimination" (Jimmy Carter). See Usage Note at bias. —dis·crim'i·na'tion·al adj.

dis·crim·i·na·tive (dī-skrīm'ə-nā'tiv, -nə-tiv) adj. 1. Drawing distinctions. 2. Marked by or showing prejudice: discriminative hiring practices. —dis·crim'i·na'tive·ly adv.

dis·crim·i·na·tor (dī-skrīm'ə-nā'tər) n. 1. One that discriminates. 2. Electronics. A device that converts a property of an input signal, such as frequency or phase, into an amplitude variation, depending on how the signal differs from a standard or reference signal.

dis·crim·i·na·to·ry (dī-skrīm'ə-nə-tōr'ē, -tōr'ē) adj. 1. Marked by or showing prejudice; biased. 2. Making distinctions. —dis·crim'i·na·to'ri·ly adv.

dis·cur·sive (dī-skūr'siv) adj. 1. Covering a wide field of subjects; rambling. 2. Proceeding to a conclusion through reason rather than intuition. [Medieval Latin discursivus, from Latin discursus, running about. See DISCOURSE.] —dis·cur'sive·ly adv. —dis·cur'sive·ness n.

dis·cus (dīs'kəs) n. pl. dis·cus·es. 1. Sports. a. A disk, typically wooden or plastic with a metal rim, that is thrown for distance in athletic competitions. b. A track-and-field event in which a discus is thrown. 2. A small, brilliantly colored South American freshwater fish (Symphysodon discus) that has a disk-shaped body and is popular in home aquariums. 3. Something resembling a flat, circular plate; a disk. 4. Botany. See disk (n., sense 5). [Latin. See DISK.]

dis·cuss (dī-skūs') v. tr. dis·cussed, dis·cuss·ing, dis·cuss·es. 1. To speak with others about; talk over. 2. To examine or consider (a subject) in speech or writing. [Middle English discussen, to examine, from Anglo-Norman discusser, from Latin discussus, past participle of discutere, to break up : dis-, apart; see DIS- + quaterē, to shake; see kwēt- in Appendix.] —dis·cuss'a·ble, dis·cuss'i·ble adj. —dis·cuss'er n.

SYNONYMS: discuss, argue, debate, dispute, contend. These verbs mean to talk with others in an effort to reach agreement, to ascertain truth, or to convince. Discuss involves close examination of a subject with interchange of opinions:

“Men are never so likely to settle a question rightly as when they discuss it freely” (Macaulay). Argue emphasizes the presentation of facts and reasons in support of a position opposed by others: “There is no good in arguing with the inevitable” (James Russell Lowell). Debate involves formal, often public argument: The candidates agreed to debate the campaign issues face to face. Dispute implies differences of opinion and usually sharp argument: members of the legislature disputing over increases in the military budget. To contend is to strive in debate or controversy: “Letting a hundred flowers blossom and a hundred schools of thought contend is the policy” (Mao Zedong).

dis·cuss·ant (dī-skūs'ənt) n. A participant in a formal discussion.

dis·cus·sion (dī-skūsh'ən) n. 1. Consideration of a subject by a group; an earnest conversation. 2. A formal discourse on a topic; an exposition.

dis·dain (dīs-dān') v. tr. dis·dained, dis·dain·ing, dis·dains. 1. To regard or treat with haughty contempt; despise. See Synonyms at despise. 2. To consider or reject as beneath oneself. — n. A feeling or show of contempt and aloofness; scorn. [Middle English disdeinen, from Old French desdeignier, from Vulgar Latin disdignāre*, from Latin dēdignāri: dē-, de- + dignāri, to deem worthy (from dignus, worthy); see dek- in Appendix.]

dis·dain·ful (dīs-dān'fəl) adj. Expressive of disdain; scornful and contemptuous. See Synonyms at proud. — dis·dain·ful·ly adv. — dis·dain·ful·ness n.

dis·ease (dī-zēz') n. 1. A pathological condition of a part, an organ, or a system of an organism resulting from various causes, such as infection, genetic defect, or environmental stress, and characterized by an identifiable group of signs or symptoms. 2. A condition or tendency, as of society, regarded as abnormal and harmful. 3. Obsolete. Lack of ease; trouble. [Middle English dise, from Old French : des-, dis- + aise, ease; see EASE.]

dis·eased (dī-zēzd') adj. 1. Affected with disease. 2. Unsound or disordered.

dis·em·bark (dīs'ēm-bärk') v. dis·em·barked, dis·em·bark·ing, dis·em·barks. — v. intr. 1. To go ashore from a ship. 2. To leave a vehicle or aircraft. — v. tr. To take ashore from a ship. [Probably obsolete French desembarquer: des-, dis- + embarquer, to embark; see EMBARK.]

— dis·em·bar·ka'tion n.

dis·em·bar·rass (dīs'ēm-bär'əs) v. tr. dis·em·bar·rassed, dis·em·bar·rass·ing, dis·em·bar·rass·es. To free from something bothersome or encumbering; relieve. — dis·em·bar·rass·ment n.

dis·em·bod·y (dīs'ēm-bōd'ē) v. tr. dis·em·bod·ied, dis·em·bod·y·ing, dis·em·bod·ies. 1. To free (the soul or spirit) from the body. 2. To divest of material existence or substance. — dis·em·bod·i·ment n.

dis·em·bogue (dīs'ēm-bōg') v. dis·em·bogued, dis·em·bogu·ing, dis·em·bogues. — v. intr. To flow out or empty, as water from a channel: “the river whose dirty waters disembogue into the harbor" (John Updike). — v. tr. To discharge or pour forth (water, for example). [From Spanish desembogue, mouth of a river, from desembocar, to flow out : des-, reversal (from Latin dis-); see DIS- + embocar, to put into the mouth (en-, in from Latin in-; see in-² + boca, mouth from Latin bucca, cheek).] — dis'em·bogue'ment n.

dis·em·bow·el (dɪs'ēm-bou'əl) v. tr. dis·em·bow·eled or dis·em·bow·elled, dis·em·bow·el·ing or dis·em·bow·el·ling, dis·em·bow·els or dis·em·bow·els. 1. To remove the entrails from. 2. To deprive of meaning or substance. — dis'em·bow'el·ment n.

dis·em·ploy (dɪs'ēm-plei') v. tr. dis·em·ployed, dis·em·ploy·ing, dis·em·ploys. To deprive of employment. — dis'em·ploy'ment n.

dis·em·pow·er (dɪs'ēm-pou'ər) v. tr. dis·em·pow·ered, dis·em·pow·er·ing, dis·em·pow·ers. To deprive of power or influence. — dis'em·pow'er·ment n.

dis·en·a·ble (dɪs'ē-nā'bəl) v. tr. dis·en·a·bled, dis·en·a·bling, dis·en·a·bles. To make unable or incapable; prevent.

dis·en·chant (dɪs'ēn-chānt') v. tr. dis·en·chant·ed, dis·en·chant·ing, dis·en·chants. To free from illusion or false belief; undeceive. [Obsolete French desenchanter, from Old French, to break a spell : des-, dis- + enchanter, to enchant; see ENCHANT.] — dis'en·chant'er n. — dis'en·chant'ing·ly adv. — dis'en·chant'ment n.

dis·en·cum·ber (dɪs'ēn-kūm'bər) v. tr. dis·en·cum·bered, dis·en·cum·ber·ing, dis·en·cum·bers. To relieve of burdens or hardships. [Obsolete French desencombrer, from Old French : des-, dis- + encombrer, to encumber; see ENCUMBER.] — dis'en·cum'ber·ment n.

dis·en·dow (dɪs'ēn-dou') v. tr. dis·en·dowed, dis·en·dow·ing, dis·en·dows. To deprive of financial endowment: disendow a college. — dis'en·dow'er n. — dis'en·dow'ment n.

dis·en·fran·chise (dɪs'ēn-frān'chīz') v. tr. dis·en·fran·chised, dis·en·fran·chis·ing, dis·en·fran·chis·es. To disfranchise. — dis'en·fran'chise'ment (-chīz'mənt, -chīz-) n.

dis·en·gage (dɪs'ēn-gāj') v. dis·en·gaged, dis·en·gag·ing, dis·en·gag·es. — v. tr. 1. To release from something that holds fast, connects, or entangles. See Synonyms at extricate. 2. To release (oneself) from an engagement, pledge, or obligation. — v. intr. To free or detach oneself; withdraw. — dis'en·gage'ment n.

dis·en·tail (dɪs'ēn-tāl') v. tr. dis·en·tailed, dis·en·tail·ing, dis·en·tails. Law. To release (an estate) from entail. — dis'en·tail'ment n.

dis·en·tan·gle (dɪs'ēn-tāng'gəl) v. dis·en·tan·gled, dis·en·tan·gling, dis·en·tan·gles. — v. tr. 1. To extricate from entanglement or involvement; free. See Synonyms at extricate. 2. To clear up or resolve (a plot, for example); unravel. — v. intr. To become free of entanglement. — dis'en-tan'gle-ment

n.

dis-en-thrall (dīs'ĕn-thrôl') v. tr. dis-en-thralled, dis-en-thrall-ing, dis-en-thralls. To free from a controlling force or influence.

dis-en-tomb (dīs'ĕn-tōm') v. tr. dis-en-tombed, dis-en-tomb-ing, dis-en-tombs. To remove from or as if from a tomb.

dis-en-twine (dīs'ĕn-twīn') v. tr. intr. dis-en-twined, dis-en-twin-ing, dis-en-twines. To untwine or become untwined.

dis-e-quil-i-brate (dīs'ī-kwīl'ə-brāt') v. tr. dis-e-quil-i-brat-ed, dis-e-quil-i-brat-ing, dis-e-quil-i-brates. To upset the equilibrium of (the economy, for example); unbalance. — dis'e-quil'i-bra'tion n.

dis-e-qui-lib-ri-um (dīs-ē'kwə-līb'rē-əm, -ĕk'wə-) n. Loss or lack of stability or equilibrium.

dis-es-tab-lish (dīs'ī-stāb'līsh) v. tr. dis-es-tab-lished, dis-es-tab-lish-ing, dis-es-tab-lish-es. 1. To alter the status of (something established by authority or general acceptance). 2. To deprive (a church) of official governmental support. — dis'es-tab'lish-ment n.

dis-es-tab-lish-men-tar-i-an (dīs'ī-stāb'līsh-mən-tār'ē-ən) n. Often Dis-establishmentarian. An opponent of an established order, especially one who opposes state support of an established church. — dis-es-tab'lish-men-tar'i-an adj.

dis-es-teem (dīs'ī-stēm') v. tr. dis-es-teemed, dis-es-teem-ing, dis-es-teems. To hold in disfavor. — n. Lack of esteem; disfavor.

di-seur (dē-zûr', -zœr') n. A man who is a skilled and usually professional performer of monologues. [French, from Old French, from dire, dis-, to say, from Latin dīcere. See DICTION.] di-seuse (dē-zœz', də-) n. A woman who is a skilled and usually professional performer of monologues. [French, feminine of diseur, monologist. See DIS-EUR.] dis-fa-vor (dīs-fā'vər) n. 1. Unfavorable opinion or regard; disapproval. 2. The condition of being regarded with disapproval. — v. tr. dis-fa-vored, dis-fa-vor-ing, dis-fa-vors. To view or treat with dislike or disapproval.

dis-fea-ture (dīs-fē'chər) v. tr. dis-fea-tured, dis-fea-tur-ing, dis-fea-tures. To disfigure: a face disfigured by a deep scar. — dis-fea-ture-ment n.

dis-fig-ure (dīs-fīg'yər) v. tr. dis-fig-ured, dis-fig-ur-ing, dis-fig-ures. To mar or spoil the appearance or shape of; deform. [Middle English disfiguren, from Old French desfigurer : des-, dis- + figure, figure (from Latin figūra, shape); see dheigh- in Appendix.] — dis-fig'u-ra'tion, dis-fig'ure-ment n.
— dis-fig'ur-er n.

dis·fran·chise (dĭs-frăn'chīz') v. tr. dis·fran·chised, dis·fran·chis·ing, dis·fran·chis·es. 1. To deprive of a privilege, an immunity, or a right of citizenship, especially the right to vote; disenfranchise. 2. To deprive (a corporation, for example) of a privilege or franchise. —dis·fran'chise'ment (-chīz'mənt, -chīz-) n. —dis·fran'chis'er n.

dis·frock (dĭs-frŏk') v. tr. dis·frocked, dis·frock·ing, dis·frocks. To unfrock.

dis·func·tion (dĭs-fŭngk'shən) n. Variant of dysfunction.

dis·gorge (dĭs-gŏrj') v. dis·gorged, dis·gorg·ing, dis·gorg·es. — v. tr. 1. To bring up and expel from the throat or stomach; vomit. 2. To discharge violently; spew. 3. To surrender (stolen goods or money, for example) unwillingly. — v. intr. To discharge or pour forth contents. [Middle English disgorgen, from Old French desgorger : des-, dis- + gorger, to pack (from gorge, throat); see GORGE.] —dis·gorge'ment n.

dis·grace (dĭs-grās') n. 1. Loss of honor, respect, or reputation; shame. 2. The condition of being strongly and generally disapproved. 3. One that brings disfavor or discredit: Your handwriting is a disgrace. — v. tr. dis·graced, dis·grac·ing, dis·grac·es. 1. To bring shame or dishonor on: disgraced the entire community. 2. To deprive of favor or good repute; treat with disfavor: The family was disgraced by the scandal. [French disgrâce, from Italian disgrazia : dis-, not (from Latin); see DIS- + grazia, favor (from Latin grātia, from grātus, pleasing); see g^werə-² in Appendix.] —dis·grac'er n.

SYNONYMS: disgrace, dishonor, shame, infamy, ignominy, odium, obloquy, opprobrium, disrepute, discredit. These nouns denote the condition of being held in low regard. Disgrace implies strong disfavor or ostracism: “Between the possibility of being hanged in all innocence, and the certainty of a public and merited disgrace, no gentleman of spirit could long hesitate” (Robert Louis Stevenson). Dishonor means loss of esteem, respect, or good reputation previously enjoyed: To fail while trying hard is no dishonor. Shame suggests mortifying loss of status, such as that which might result from the commission of a moral offense: “only the deep sense of some deathless shame” (John Webster). Infamy is public disgrace or shameful notoriety: “December 7, 1941—a date which will live in infamy” (Franklin D. Roosevelt). Ignominy implies public contempt: suffered the ignominy of being sent to prison. Odium adds to disgrace the sense of being the object of general dislike or detestation: “It was his lot to taste the bitterness of popular odium” (Nathaniel Hawthorne). Obloquy implies being subjected to abuse and vilification: “his long public life, so singularly checkered with good and evil, with glory and obloquy” (Macaulay). Opprobrium is the condition of being harshly condemned: “The name [was] a by-word of scorn and opprobrium throughout the city” (Washington Irving). Disrepute involves lack or loss of a good name: Because of the scandal the school has fallen into disrepute. Discredit implies loss of esteem resulting from personal misconduct: Your actions will bring discredit to your name.

dis·grace·ful (dĭs-grās'fəl) adj. Bringing or warranting disgrace; shameful.
—dis·grace'ful·ly adv. —dis·grace'ful·ness n.

dis·grun·tle (dĭs-grŭn'tl) v. tr. dis·grun·tled, dis·grun·tling, dis·grun·tles. To make discontented. [DIS- + gruntle, to grumble (from Middle English gruntelen, frequentative of grunten, to grunt); see GRUNT.] —dis·grun'tle·ment n.

dis·guise (dĭs-gīz') v. tr. dis·guised, dis·guis·ing, dis·guis·es. 1. a. To modify the manner or appearance of in order to prevent recognition. b. To furnish with a disguise. 2. To conceal or obscure by dissemblance or false show; misrepresent: disguise one's true intentions. — n. 1. a. The act or an instance of disguising. b. The condition of being disguised. 2. Clothes or accessories worn to conceal one's true identity. 3. a. Appearance that misrepresents the true character of something: a blessing in disguise. b. A pretense or misrepresentation: His repeated references to his dangerous hobbies were only a disguise to cover up his insecurity. [Middle English disguisen, from Old French desguiser: des-, dis- + guise, manner; see GUISE.] —dis·guis'ed·ly (-gī'zĭd-lē) adv. —dis·guise'ment n. —dis·guis'er n.

SYNONYMS: disguise, camouflage, cloak, dissemble, dissimulate, mask. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to change or modify so as to conceal the true identity or character of”: disguised her interest with nonchalance; trying to camouflage their impatience; cloaked his anxiety with a smile; dissembling ill will with false solicitude; couldn't dissimulate her vanity; ambition that is masked as altruism.

dis·gust (dĭs-gŭst') v. tr. dis·gust·ed, dis·gust·ing, dis·gusts. 1. To excite nausea or loathing in; sicken. 2. To offend the taste or moral sense of; repel. — n. Profound aversion or repugnance excited by something offensive. [French dégoûter, from Old French desgouster, from Old French, to lose one's appetite: des-, dis- + gouster, to eat, taste (from Latin gustāre); see geus- in Appendix.]

SYNONYMS: disgust, nauseate, repel, revolt, sicken. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to offend the senses or feelings of”: a stench that disgusted us; hypocrisy that nauseated me; was repelled by such ruthlessness; brutality that revolts the sensibilities of civilized people; a fetid odor that sickened the hospital workers.

dis·gust·ed (dĭs-gŭs'tĭd) adj. Filled with disgust or irritated impatience.
—dis·gust'ed·ly adv.

dis-gust-ful (dīs-güst'fəl) adj. 1. Causing disgust; repugnant. 2. Full of or marked by disgust. —dis-gust'ful-ly adv.

dis-gust-ing (dīs-güs'tĩng) adj. Arousing disgust; repugnant. See Synonyms at offensive. —dis-gust'ing-ly adv.

dish (dĩsh) n. 1. a. An open, generally shallow concave container for holding or serving food. b. dishes. The containers and often the utensils used when eating: took out the dishes and silverware; washed the dishes. c. A shallow concave container used for purposes other than eating: an evaporating dish. 2. The amount that a dish can hold. 3. a. The food served or contained in a dish: a dish of ice cream. b. A particular variety or preparation of food: Chowder is a good dish for a cold winter evening. 4. a. A depression similar to that in a shallow concave container for food. b. The degree of concavity in such a depression. 5. Electronics. A dish antenna. 6. Slang. A good-looking person, especially an attractive woman. — v. dished, dish-ing, dish-es. — v. tr. 1. To serve (food) in or as if in a dish: dished up the potatoes. 2. To present: dished up an excellent entertainment. 3. To hollow out; make concave. 4. Chiefly British. To foil or cheat; ruin. — v. intr. Informal. To talk idly, especially to gossip. —phrasal verb. dish out. To give out; dispense freely: likes to dish out advice. [Middle English, from Old English disc, from Latin discus. See DISK.]

dis-ha-bille (dĩs'ə-bēl', -bē') also des-ha-bille (dēs'-) n. 1. The state of being partially or very casually dressed. 2. Casual or lounging attire. 3. An intentionally careless manner. [French déshabillé, from past participle of déshabiller, to undress : des-, dis- + habiller, to clothe; see HABILIMENT.]

dish antenna (dĩsh ən-tě'nə) n. Electronics. A microwave transmitter or receiver consisting of a concave parabolic reflector.

dis-har-mo-ni-ous (dĩs'här-mō'nē-əs) adj. Lacking in harmony. —dis-har-mo'ni-ous-ly adv.

dis-har-mo-nize (dĩs-här'mə-nīz') v. tr. dis-har-mo-nized, dis-har-mo-niz-ing, dis-har-mo-niz-es. To make disharmonious.

dis-har-mo-ny (dĩs-här'mə-nē) n. Lack of harmony; discord.

dish-cloth (dĩsh'klôth', -klôth') n. A cloth for washing dishes. Also called dishrag dishcloth gourd (dĩsh'klôth' gôrd) n. See loofa (n., sense 2).

dis-heart-en (dĩs-här'tn) v. tr. dis-heart-ened, dis-heart-en-ing, dis-heart-ens. To shake or destroy the courage or resolution of; dispirit. See Synonyms at discourage. —dis-heart'en-ing-ly adv. —dis-heart'en-ment n.

dished (dĩst) adj. 1. Concave. 2. Slanting toward one another at the bottom. Used of a pair of wheels.

di-shev-el (dĩ-shěv'əl) v. tr. di-shev-eled or di-shev-elled, di-shev-el-ing or di-shev-el-ling, di-shev-els or di-shev-els. 1. a. To loosen and let fall (hair or clothing) in disarray. b. To disarrange the hair or clothing of. 2. To throw into disorder. [Back-formation from DISHEVELED.] —di·shev'el·ment n.

di·shev·eled or di·shev·elled (dī-shěv'əld) adj. 1. Being in loose disarray; unkempt, as hair or clothing. 2. Marked by disorder; untidy: a disheveled pile of books on the library table. [Middle English discheveled, from Old French deschevele, past participle of descheveler, to disarrange the hair : des-, apart; see DIS- + chevel, hair (from Latin capillus).]

dis·hon·est (dīs-ŏn'ĭst) adj. 1. Disposed to lie, cheat, defraud, or deceive. 2. Resulting from or marked by a lack of honesty. [Middle English dishoneste, dishonorable, from Old French deshoneste, probably from Medieval Latin dishonestus* : Latin dis-, dis- + Latin honestus, honorable; see HONEST.]

—dis·hon'est·ly adv.

SYNONYMS: dishonest, lying, untruthful, deceitful, mendacious. These adjectives mean lacking honesty or truthfulness. Dishonest is the least specific: a dishonest answer; a dishonest car dealer; dishonest profits. Lying conveys a blunt accusation of untruth: Inconsistencies in his testimony made it obvious that he was a lying witness. Untruthful is a softer but closely related term; it suggests both lack of veracity and divergence from fact: made an untruthful statement. As experiments are completed the hypothesis seems increasingly untruthful. Deceitful implies misleading by falsehood or by concealment of the truth: deceitful advertising; a deceitful person. Mendacious, a more formal equivalent of lying, suggests a chronic inclination toward untruth when it is applied to persons: submitted a mendacious insurance claim. Even when she is not being overtly mendacious, she tinkers with the truth.

dis·hon·es·ty (dīs-ŏn'ĭ-stē) n. dis·hon·es·ties. 1. Lack of honesty or integrity; improbity. 2. A dishonest act or statement.

dis·hon·or (dīs-ŏn'ər) n. 1. Loss of honor, respect, or reputation. See Synonyms at disgrace. 2. The condition of having lost honor or good repute. 3. A cause of loss of honor: had become a dishonor to the club. 4. Failure to pay or refusal to accept a note, a bill, or another commercial obligation. — v. tr.

dis·hon·ored, dis·hon·or·ing, dis·hon·ors. 1. To bring shame or disgrace upon. 2. To treat in a disrespectful or demeaning manner. 3. To fail or refuse to accept or pay (a note, bill, or check, for example). [Middle English dishonour, from Old French deshonor : des-, dis- + honor, honor; see HONOR.]

—dis·hon'or·er n.

dis·hon·or·a·ble (dīs-ŏn'ər-ə-bəl) adj. 1. Characterized by or causing dishonor or discredit. 2. Lacking integrity; unprincipled.

—dis·hon'or·a·ble·ness n. —dis·hon'or·a·bly adv.

dishonorable discharge (dĭs-ŏn'ər-ə-bəl dĭs-chärj') n. Abbr. D.D. Discharge from the armed forces for a grave offense, such as cowardice, murder, sabotage, or espionage.

dish-pan (dĭsh'pän') n. A flat-bottomed basin for washing dishes.

dishpan hands (dĭsh'pän' händz) pl.n. (used with a sing. or pl. verb). A rough, dry, scaly condition of the hands typically caused by sensitivity to or excessive use of household detergents or cleaning agents.

dish-rag (dĭsh'räg') n. See dishcloth.

dish-tow-el (dĭsh'tou'əl) n. A towel for drying dishes.

dish-ware (dĭsh'wâr') n. Dishes, as of glass, plastic, or china, used in serving food.

dish-wash-er (dĭsh'wŏsh'ər, -wŏ'shər) n. 1. A person who washes dishes, especially one hired to wash dishes in a restaurant. 2. A machine for washing dishes.

dish-wash-ing (dĭsh'wŏsh'ing, -wŏ'shing) n. The act or process of washing dishes. — adj. Of, relating to, or used for washing dishes: a dishwashing liquid.

dish-wa-ter (dĭsh'wŏ'tər, -wŏt'ər) n. Water in which dishes are to be or have been washed.

dish-y (dĭsh'ē) adj. dish-i-er, dish-i-est. Chiefly British. Good-looking; attractive.

dis-il-lu-sion (dĭs'ĭ-lŏō'zhən) v. tr. dis-il-lu-sioned, dis-il-lu-sion-ing, dis-il-lu-sions. To free or deprive of illusion. — n. 1. The act of disenchanting. 2. The condition or fact of being disenchanted. — dis'il-lu'sion-ment n. — dis'il-lu'sive (-sĭv, -zĭv) adj.

dis-in-cen-tive (dĭs'in-sĕn'tĭv) n. Something that prevents or discourages action; a deterrent.

dis-in-cli-na-tion (dĭs-ĭn'klə-nā'shən) n. A lack of inclination; a mild aversion or reluctance.

dis-in-cline (dĭs'ĭn-klĭn') v. dis-in-clined, dis-in-clin-ing, dis-in-clines. — v. tr. To make reluctant or averse. — v. intr. To be unwilling.

dis-in-clined (dĭs'ĭn-klĭnd') adj. Unwilling or reluctant: They were usually disinclined to socialize.

dis-in-cor-po-rate (dĭs'ĭn-kŏr'pə-rāt') v. tr. intr. dis-in-cor-po-rat-ed, dis-in-cor-po-rat-ing, dis-in-cor-po-rates. To remove or become removed from the status of a corporation. — dis'in-cor'po-ra'tion n.

dis-in-fect (dĭs'ĭn-fĕkt') v. tr. dis-in-fect-ed, dis-in-fect-ing, dis-in-fects. To cleanse so as to destroy or prevent the growth of disease-carrying microorganisms: disinfect a wound. — dis'in-fec'tion n.

dis-in-fec-tant (dĭs'ĭn-fĕk'tənt) n. An agent, such as heat, radiation, or a chemical, that disinfects by destroying, neutralizing, or inhibiting the growth of disease-carrying microorganisms. — adj. Serving to disinfect.

dis-in-fest (dɪs'ɪn-fɛst/) v. tr. dis-in-fest-ed, dis-in-fest-ing, dis-in-fests. To rid of vermin. — dis-in-fes-ta'tion (-fɛ-stā'shən) n.

dis-in-fes-tant (dɪs'ɪn-fɛs'tənt) n. An agent that eradicates an infestation, as of vermin.

dis-in-fla-tion (dɪs'ɪn-flā'shən) n. Downward movement of inflated prices to a more normal level. — dis-in-fla'tion-ar'y (-shə-něr'ē) adj.

dis-in-form (dɪs'ɪn-fōrm/) v. tr. dis-in-formed, dis-in-form-ing, dis-in-forms. To give disinformation to. [Back-formation from DISINFORMA-TION.] — dis-in-form'er, dis-in-form'ant n.

dis-in-for-ma-tion (dɪs-ɪn'fər-mā'shən) n. 1. Deliberately misleading information announced publicly or leaked by a government or especially by an intelligence agency in order to influence public opinion or the government in another nation: "He would be the unconscious channel for a piece of disinformation aimed at another country's intelligence service" (Ken Follett). 2. Dissemination of such misleading information. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: disinformation operations; disinformation experts. [Possibly translation of Russian dezinformatsiya.] dis-in-gen-u-ous (dɪs'ɪn-jěn'yōō-əs) adj. Not straightforward or candid; crafty: "an ambitious, disingenuous, philistine, and hypocritical operator, who... exemplified... the most disagreeable traits of his time" (David Cannadine). — dis-in-gen'u-ous-ly adv. — dis-in-gen'u-ous-ness n.

dis-in-her-it (dɪs'ɪn-hěr'ɪt) v. tr. dis-in-her-it-ed, dis-in-her-it-ing, dis-in-her-its. 1. To exclude from inheritance or the right to inherit. 2. To deprive of a natural or an established right or privilege. — dis-in-her'i-tance n.

dis-in-hib-it (dɪs'ɪn-hīb'ɪt) v. tr. dis-in-hib-it-ed, dis-in-hib-it-ing, dis-in-hib-its. To free from inhibitions.

dis-in-hi-bi-tion (dɪs'ɪn-hə-bɪsh'ən, -ɪn-ə-, dɪs-ɪn'-) n. 1. A loss of inhibition, as through the influence of drugs or alcohol. 2. Psychology. A temporary loss of an inhibition caused by an unrelated stimulus, such as a loud noise. In conditioning experiments, disinhibition may result in the revival of a suppressed conditioned response.

dis-in-te-grate (dɪs-ɪn'tɪ-grāt/) v. dis-in-te-grat-ed, dis-in-te-grat-ing, dis-in-te-grates. — v. intr. 1. To become reduced to components, fragments, or particles. 2. Chemistry & Physics. To decompose, decay, or undergo a nuclear transformation. — v. tr. To cause to disintegrate. See Synonyms at decay. — dis-in'te-gra'tive adj. — dis-in'te-gra'tor n.

dis-in-te-gra-tion (dɪs-ɪn'tɪ-grā'shən) n. 1. The act or process of disintegrating. 2. The state of being disintegrated. 3. Chemistry & Physics. The natural or induced transformation of an atomic nucleus from a more massive to a less massive configuration by the emission of particles or radiation.

dis-in-ter (dĭs'ĭn-tŭr') v. tr. dis-in-tered, dis-in-ter-ring, dis-in-ters. 1. To dig up or remove from a grave or tomb; exhume. 2. To bring to public notice; disclose. —dis'in-ter-ment n.

dis-in-ter-est (dĭs-ĭn'tər-ĭst, -ĭn'trĭst) n. 1. Freedom from selfish bias or self-interest; impartiality. 2. Lack of interest; indifference. — v. tr. To divest of interest.

dis-in-ter-est-ed (dĭs-ĭn'trĭ-stĭd, -ĭn'tə-rĕs'tĭd) adj. 1. Free of bias and self-interest; impartial: “disinterested scientific opinion on fluorides in the water supply” (Ellen R. Shell). 2. a. Not interested; indifferent: “supremely disinterested in all efforts to find a peaceful solution” (C.L. Sulzberger). b. Having lost interest. —dis'in-ter-est-ed-ly adv. —dis'in-ter-est-ed-ness n.

USAGE NOTE: Despite critical disapproval, disinterested has come to be widely used by many educated writers to mean “uninterested” or “having lost interest,” as in Since she discovered skiing, she is disinterested in her schoolwork (a sense it had at an earlier stage of English, but which had in the interim become outmoded). Many maintain that the word can legitimately be used only in its sense of “having no stake in (an outcome or issue),” as in Since the judge stands to profit from the sale of the company, she cannot be considered a disinterested party in the dispute. In our most recent survey, 89 percent of the Usage Panel rejected the sentence His unwillingness to give five minutes of his time proves that he is disinterested in finding a solution to the problem, a proportion that is not significantly different from the 93 percent who disapproved of the same usage in an earlier survey.

dis-in-ter-me-di-a-tion (dĭs-ĭn'tər-mĕ'dĕ-ā'shən) n. Withdrawal of funds from intermediary financial institutions, such as banks and savings and loan associations, in order to invest in instruments yielding a higher return.

dis-in-tox-i-cate (dĭs'ĭn-tŏk'sĭ-kāt') v. tr. dis-in-tox-i-cat-ed, dis-in-tox-i-cat-ing, dis-in-tox-i-cates. To free from the effects of intoxication or from dependence on intoxicating agents. —dis'in-tox'i-ca'tion n.

dis-in-vent (dĭs'ĭn-vĕnt') v. tr. dis-in-vent-ed, dis-in-vent-ing, dis-in-vents. To rescind the invention or existence of: “The atomic bomb... cannot be disinvented” (Patrick J. Buchanan). —dis'in-ven'tion n.

dis-in-vest-ment (dĭs'ĭn-vĕst'mənt) n. Withdrawal of capital investment from a company or country.

dis-in-vite (dĭs'ĭn-vīt') v. tr. dis-in-vit-ed, dis-in-vit-ing, dis-in-vites. To rescind an invitation to: disinvited our friends for dinner because of an emergency. —dis-in-vi-ta'tion (-vĭ-tā'shən) n.

dis-join (dĭs-join') v. dis-joined, dis-join-ing, dis-joins. — v. tr. To undo the joining of; separate. — v. intr. To become separated. [Middle English dis- joinen, from Old French desjoindre, from Latin disiungere : dis-, dis- + iungere, to join; see JOIN.]

dis-joint (dīs-jɔɪnt/) v. dis-joint-ed, dis-joint-ing, dis-joints. — v. tr. 1. To put out of joint; dislocate. 2. To take apart at the joints. 3. To destroy the coherence or connections of. 4. To separate; disjoin. — v. intr. 1. To come apart at the joints. 2. To become dislocated. — adj. Mathematics. Having no elements in common. Used of sets. [Middle English disjointen, to destroy, ultimately from Old French desjoint, past participle of desjoindre, to disjoin. See DISJOIN.]

dis-joint-ed (dīs-jɔɪntʹtɪd) adj. 1. Separated at the joints. 2. Out of joint; dislocated. 3. Lacking order or coherence: disjointed sentences. —dis-joint/ed-ly adv. —dis-joint/ed-ness n.

dis-junct (dīs-jʌŋkt/) adj. 1. Characterized by separation. 2. Music. Relating to progression by intervals larger than major seconds. 3. Zoology. Having deep constrictions separating the head, thorax, and abdomen, as in insects. [Middle English disjuncte, from Latin disiunctus, past participle of disiungere, to disjoin. See DISJOIN.]

dis-junc-tion (dīs-jʌŋktʹʃən) n. 1. The act of disjoining or the condition of being disjointed. 2. Logic. A proposition that presents two or more alternative terms, with the assertion that only one is true. 3. Genetics. The separation of homologous chromosomes during meiosis.

dis-junc-tive (dīs-jʌŋktʹtɪv) adj. 1. Serving to separate or divide. 2. Grammar. Serving to establish a relationship of contrast or opposition. The conjunction but in the phrase poor but comfortable is disjunctive. 3. Logic. a. Of a proposition that presents two or more alternative terms. b. Of a syllogism that contains a disjunction as one premise. — n. Grammar. A disjunctive conjunction. —dis-junc/tive-ly adv.

dis-junc-ture (dīs-jʌŋktʹchər) n. Disjunction; disunion; separation.

disk also disc (dɪsk) n. 1. A thin, flat, circular object or plate. 2. Something resembling such an object: The moon's disk was reflected in the pond. 3. a. The disk used in a disc brake. b. A disk used on a disk harrow. 4. A round, flattened, platelike structure in an animal, such as an intervertebral disk. 5. Botany. The enlarged area bearing numerous tiny flowers, as in the flower head of composite plants, such as the daisy. Also called discus. 6. a. A phonograph record. b. An optical disk, especially a compact disk. c. Computer Science. A magnetic disk. 7. A circular grid in a phototypesetting machine. — v. tr. disked also disced, disk-ing also disc-ing, disks also discs. 1. To work (soil) with a disk harrow. 2. To make (a recording) on a phonograph record. [Latin discus, quoit, from Greek diskos, from dikein, to throw. See deik- in Appendix.]

disk brake (dɪsk brāk) n. Variant of disc brake.

disk drive (dɪsk drɪv) n. Computer Science. A device that reads data stored on a magnetic or optical disk and writes data onto the disk for storage.

disk·ette (dĭ-skĕt'ŭ) n. Computer Science. See floppy disk.

disk flower (dĭsk flou'ər) n. Any of the tiny tubular flowers in the central portion of the flower head of certain composite plants, such as the daisy.

disk harrow or disc harrow (dĭsk hār'ō) n. A harrow equipped with a series of disks set on edge or at an angle on one or more axles.

disk jockey (dĭsk jŏk'ē) n. Variant of disc jockey.

disk operating system (dĭsk ɔp'ə-rā'tĭng sĭs'təm) n. DOS.

disk pack (dĭsk pāk) n. A computer storage device consisting of several magnetic disks that can be used and stored as a unit.

disk sander (dĭsk sän'dər) n. An electric sander that uses a revolving abrasive disk.

disk wheel (dĭsk hwĕl) n. A spokeless wheel in which a disk joins the hub to the rim.

dis·like (dĭs-lik') v. tr. dis-liked, dis-lik-ing, dis-likes. To regard with distaste or aversion. — n. An attitude or a feeling of distaste or aversion.

—dis-lik'a-ble adj.

dis·lo·cate (dĭs'lō-kāt', dĭs-lō'kāt) v. tr. dis-lo-cat-ed, dis-lo-cat-ing, dis-lo-cates. 1. To put out of usual or proper place, position, or relationship.

2. To displace (a body part), especially to displace a bone from its normal position.

3. To throw into confusion or disorder; disrupt: a continuing drought that dislocated the state's economy. [Medieval Latin dislocāre, dislocāt- : dis-, dis- + Latin locāre, to place (from locus, place).]

dis·lo·ca·tion (dĭs'lō-kā'shən) n. 1. The act or process of dislocating or the state of having been dislocated: "the severe emotional dislocation experienced by millions of immigrants... who were forced to separate themselves forever from the... circle of people and places on which they had depended" (Doris Kearns Goodwin).

2. Displacement of a body part, especially the temporary displacement of a bone from its normal position. 3. Chemistry. An imperfection in the crystal structure of a metal or other solid resulting from an absence of an atom or atoms in one or more layers of a crystal. 4. Geology. See displacement (n., sense 4).

dis·lodge (dĭs-lŏj') v. dis-lodged, dis-lodg-ing, dis-lodg-es. — v. tr. To remove or force out from a position or dwelling previously occupied. — v. intr.

To move or go from a dwelling or former position. [Middle English disloggen, from Old French deslogier : des-, dis- + logier, to lodge (from loge, shed, of Germanic origin).] —dis-lodge'ment, dis-lodg'ment n.

dis·loy·al (dĭs-loi'əl) adj. Lacking loyalty. See Synonyms at faithless. [Middle English disloial*, from Old French desloial : des-, dis- + loial, loyal; see LOYAL.] dis·loy·al·ty (dĭs-loi'əl-tē) n. pl. dis-loy-al-ties. 1. The quality of being disloyal; faithlessness. 2. A disloyal act.

—dis-loy'al·ly adv.

dis-mal (dīz'məl) adj. 1. Causing gloom or depression; dreary: dismal weather; took a dismal view of the economy. 2. Characterized by ineptitude, dullness, or a lack of merit: a dismal book; a dismal performance on the cello. 3. Obsolete. Dreadful; disastrous. — n. Chiefly South Atlantic U.S. See pocosin. See Regional note at pocosin. [Middle English, unlucky days, unlucky, from Anglo-Norman, unlucky days, from Medieval Latin diēs malī: Latin diēs, day; see deiw- in Appendix + Latin malī, pl. of malus, evil; see mel-³ in Appendix.] —dis'-mal-ly adv. —dis'mal-ness n.

Dis-mal Swamp (dīz'məl swŏmp) A swampy region of southeast Virginia and northeast North Carolina. The heavily forested area has been greatly reduced by drainage. George Washington surveyed the Dismal Swamp in 1763.

dis-man-tle (dīs-măn'tl) v. tr. dis-man-tled, dis-man-ting, dis-man-tles. 1. a. To take apart; disassemble; tear down. b. To put an end to in a gradual systematic way: dismantling the cumbersome regulations for interstate trucking. 2. To strip of furnishings or equipment: dismantled the house before knocking it down. 3. To strip of covering or clothing. [Obsolete French desmanteler, to raze fortifications round a town, from Old French : des-, dis- + emmanteler, to cover with a coat, shelter (ultimately from mantel, cloak); see MANTLE.] —dis-man'-tle-ment n.

dis-mast (dīs-măst') v. tr. dis-mast-ed, dis-mast-ing, dis-masts. Nautical. To remove or break off the mast of.

dis-may (dīs-mā') v. tr. dis-mayed, dis-may-ing, dis-mays. 1. To destroy the courage or resolution of by exciting dread or apprehension. 2. To cause to lose enthusiasm; disillusion: was dismayed to learn that her favorite dancer used drugs. 3. To upset or alarm. — n. A sudden or complete loss of courage in the face of trouble or danger. [Middle English dismaien, from Anglo-Norman desmaier*: probably de-, intensive pref.; see DE- + Old French esmaier, to frighten (from Vulgar Latin exmagāre*, to deprive of power : Latin ex-, ex- + Germanic magan*, to be able to); see magh- in Appendix.] —dis-may'ing-ly adv.

SYNONYMS: dismay, appall, daunt, horrify, shake. These verbs mean to deprive a person of courage or the power to act as a result of fear or anxiety. Dismay is the least specific: The news of plummeting stock prices dismayed speculators. Appall implies a sense of helplessness caused by an awareness of the enormity of something: “for as this appalling ocean surrounds the verdant land” (Herman Melville). Daunt suggests an abatement of courage: “captains courageous, whom death could not daunt” (Anonymous ballad). Horrify implies dread, shock, or revulsion: horrified by the possibility of nuclear war. To shake is to dismay profoundly: “A little swift brutality shook him to the very soul” (John Galsworthy). See also Synonyms dis·mem·ber (dīs-mēm'bər) v. tr. dis·mem·bered, dis·mem·ber·ing, dis·mem·bers. 1. To cut, tear, or pull off the limbs of. 2. To divide into pieces. [Middle English dismembren, from Old French desmembrer, from Vulgar Latin dismembrāre* : Latin dis-, dis- + Latin membrum, limb; see MEMBER.]

—dis·mem'ber·ment n.

dis·miss (dīs-mīs') v. tr. dis·missed, dis·miss·ing, dis·miss·es. 1. To end the employment or service of; discharge. 2. To direct or allow to leave: dismissed troops after the inspection; dismissed the student after reprimanding him. 3. a. To stop considering; rid one's mind of; dispel: dismissed all thoughts of running for office. b. To refuse to accept or recognize; reject: dismissed the claim as highly improbable. 4. Law. To put (a claim or action) out of court without further hearing. 5. Sports. To put out (a batter) in cricket. [Middle English dismissen, from Medieval Latin dismissere, dismiss-, variant of Latin dīmittere : dī-, dis-, apart; see DIS- + mittere, to send.] —dis·miss'i·ble adj. —dis·mis'sion (-mīsh'ən) n.

SYNONYMS: dismiss, boot, bounce, can, cashier, discharge, drop, fire, sack. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to terminate the employment of”: was dismissed for insubordination; was booted for being habitually tardy; afraid of being bounced for union activities; wasn't canned because his father-in-law owns the business; will be cashiered from the army; resort workers discharged at the end of the season; was dropped for incompetence; was fired on the spot for insolence; a reporter sacked for revealing a confidential source. See also Synonyms at eject dis·miss·al (dīs-mīs'əl) n. 1. a. The act of dismissing. b. The condition of being dismissed. 2. An order or notice of discharge.

dis·mis·sive (dīs-mīs'iv) adj. 1. Serving to dismiss. 2. Showing indifference or disregard: a dismissive shrug.

dis·mount (dīs-mount') v. dis·mount·ed, dis·mount·ing, dis·mounts.
— v. intr. To get off or down, as from a horse or vehicle. — v. tr. 1. To remove from a support, setting, or mounting. 2. To unseat or throw off, as from a horse. 3. To disassemble (a mechanism, for example). — n. (dīs'mount') 1. The act or manner of dismounting, especially from a horse. 2. Sports. A move in gymnastics whereby the gymnast gets off an apparatus or completes a floor exercise, typically landing on both feet. [Probably alteration of obsolete French desmonter, to unseat : des-, dis- + monter, to mount; see MOUNT¹.] —dis·mount'a·ble adj.

Dis·ney (dīz'nē), Walter Elias. Known as “Walt.” 1901-1966. American animator, showman, and film producer. Noted for his creation of the cartoon characters Mickey Mouse and Donald Duck, he produced the first animated film with sound, Steamboat Willie (1928), and the first full-length animated feature, Snow White (1938).

dis·o·be·di·ence (dɪs'ə-bē'dē-əns) n. Refusal or failure to obey.

—dis'·o·be/di·ent adj. —dis'·o·be/di·ent·ly adv.

dis·o·bey (dɪs'ə-bā') v. dis·o·beyed, dis·o·bey·ing, dis·o·beys. — v. intr.

To refuse or fail to follow an order or a rule. — v. tr. To refuse or fail to obey (an order or a rule). [Middle English disobeien, from Old French desobeir, from Vulgar Latin disobedire*: Latin dis-, dis- + Latin oboedire, to obey; see OBEY.]

—dis'·o·bey'er n.

dis·o·blige (dɪs'ə-blɪj') v. tr. dis·o·bliged, dis·o·blig·ing, dis·o·blig·es.

1. To refuse or neglect to act in accord with the wishes of. 2. To inconvenience.

3. To give offense to; affront. —dis'·o·blig'ing·ly adv.

dis·or·der (dɪs-ôr'dər) n. 1. A lack of order or regular arrangement; confusion.

2. A breach of civic order or peace; a public disturbance. 3. An ailment that affects the function of mind or body: eating disorders and substance abuse. — v.

tr. dis·or·dered, dis·or·der·ing, dis·or·ders. 1. To throw into confusion or disarray. 2. To disturb the normal physical or mental health of; derange.

dis·or·dered (dɪs-ôr'dərd) adj. 1. Being in a condition of confusion or disarray.

2. Physically or mentally ill. —dis·or'dered·ly adv. —dis·or/- dered·ness n.

dis·or·der·ly (dɪs-ôr'dər-lē) adj. 1. Lacking regular or logical order or arrangement:

a disorderly pile of clothes. 2. Undisciplined; unruly: disorderly youths.

3. Law. Disturbing the public peace or decorum. —dis·or'der·li·ness n.

disorderly conduct (dɪs-ôr'dər-lē kən-dʌkt') n. Law. An offense involving disturbance of the public peace and decency.

dis·or·gan·ize (dɪs-ôr'gə-nīz') v. tr. dis·or·gan·ized, dis·or·gan·iz·ing, dis·or·gan·iz·es. To destroy the organization, systematic arrangement, or unity of. —dis·or'gan·i·za'tion (-gə-nī-zā'shən) n.

dis·o·ri·ent (dɪs-ôr'ē-ěnt', -ōr'-) v. tr. dis·o·ri·ent·ed, dis·o·ri·ent·ing, dis·o·ri·ents. To cause (a person, for example) to experience disorientation.

dis·o·ri·en·ta·tion (dɪs-ôr'rē-ěn-tā'shən) n. 1. Loss of one's sense of direction, position, or relationship with one's surroundings. 2. Intellectual or moral confusion. 3. Psychology. A temporary or permanent state of confusion regarding place, time, or personal identity.

dis·own (dɪs-ōn') v. tr. dis·owned, dis·own·ing, dis·owns. To refuse to acknowledge or accept as one's own; repudiate.

disp. abbr. Dispensary.

dis·par·age (dɪ-spär'ij) v. tr. dis·par·aged, dis·par·ag·ing, dis·par·ag·es.

1. To speak of in a slighting way; belittle. See Synonyms at decry. 2. To reduce in esteem or rank. [Middle English disparagen, to degrade, from Old French desparager : des-, dis- + parage, high birth (from per, peer); see PEER².]

—dis-par'age-ment n. —dis-par'ag-er n. —dis-par'ag-ing-ly adv.

dis-pa-rate (dīs'pər-īt, dī-spār'īt) adj. Fundamentally distinct or different in kind; entirely dissimilar. [Latin disparātus, past participle of disparāre, to separate : dis-, apart; see DIS- + parāre, to prepare; see perə¹ in Appendix.] —dis-'pa-rate-ly adv. —dis'pa-rate-ness n.

dis-par-i-ty (dī-spār'ī-tē) n. pl. dis-par-i-ties. 1. The condition or fact of being unequal, as in age, rank, or degree; difference: “narrow the economic disparities among regions and industries” (Courtenay Slater). 2. Unlikeness; incongruity. [French disparité, from Old French desparite, from Late Latin disparitās : Latin dis-, dis- + Late Latin paritās, equality; see PARITY¹.]

dis-par-lure (dīs'pär-loör') n. 1. A pheromone, C₁₉H₃₈O, produced by female gypsy moths. 2. A synthetic substance used to attract male gypsy moths to traps. [New Latin (Porthetria) dispār, gypsy moth (from dispār : dis-, dis- + pār, equal); see PAR + LURE.]

dis-pas-sion (dīs-pāsh'ən) n. Freedom from passion, bias, or emotion; objectivity.

dis-pas-sion-ate (dīs-pāsh'ə-nīt) adj. Devoid of or unaffected by passion, emotion, or bias. See Synonyms at fair¹. —dis-pas'sion-ate-ly adv.

—dis-pas'sion-ate-ness n.

dis-patch also des-patch (dī-späch') v. tr. dis-patched, dis-patch-ing, dis-patch-es. 1. To relegate to a specific destination or send on specific business. See Synonyms at send¹. 2. a. To complete, transact, or dispose of promptly. b. To eat up (food); finish off (a dish or meal). 3. To put to death summarily. — n. 1. The act of sending off, as to a specific destination. 2. The act of putting to death. 3. Speed in performance or movement. See Synonyms at haste. 4. (also dīs'päch') a. A written message, particularly an official communication, sent with speed. b. An important message sent by a diplomat or an officer in the armed forces. 5. (also dīs'päch') A news item sent to a news organization, as by a correspondent. 6. An organization or a conveyance for delivering goods. [Spanish despachar, or Italian dispacciare both probably ultimately from Old Provençal empachar, to impede, from Vulgar Latin impāctāre*, frequentative of Latin impingere, dash against. See IMPINGE.]

dis-patch-er (dīs-päch'ər) n. One that dispatches, as: a. One that sends out trains, buses, trucks, or cars according to a schedule. b. Computer Science. A routine that controls the order in which input and output devices obtain access to the processing system.

dis-pel (dī-spěł') v. tr. dis-pelled, dis-pel-ling, dis-pels. 1. To rid one's mind of: managed to dispel my doubts. 2. To drive away or off by or as if by scattering. See Synonyms at scatter. [Middle English dispellen, from Latin dispellere : dis-, apart; see DIS- + pellere, to drive; see pel⁵ in Appendix.]

dis-pen-sa-ble (dī-spĕn'sə-bəl) adj. 1. Not essential; unimportant: dispensable items of personal property. 2. Capable of being dispensed, administered, or distributed: dispensable drugs. 3. Subject to dispensation, as a vow or church law. —dis-pen'sa-bil'i-ty, dis-pen'sa-ble-ness n.

dis-pen-sa-ry (dī-spĕn'sə-rē) n. pl. dis-pen-sa-ries. Abbr. disp. 1. An office in a hospital, school, or other institution from which medical supplies, preparations, and treatments are dispensed. 2. A public institution that dispenses medicines or medical aid.

dis-pen-sa-tion (dīs'pən-sā'shən, -pĕn-) n. 1. a. The act of dispensing. b. Something dispensed. c. A specific arrangement or system by which something is dispensed. 2. An exemption or a release from an obligation or a rule, granted by or as if by an authority. 3. a. An exemption from a church law, a vow, or another similar obligation granted in a particular case by an ecclesiastical authority. b. The document containing this exemption. 4. Theology. a. The divine ordering of worldly affairs. b. A religious system or code of commands considered to have been divinely revealed or appointed. —dis'pen-sa'tion-al adj.

dis-pen-sa-to-ry (dī-spĕn'sə-tōr'ē, -tōr'ē) n. pl. dis-pen-sa-to-ries. A book in which the contents, preparation, and uses of medicines are described; a pharmacopoeia.

dis-pense (dī-spĕns') v. dispensed, dis-pens-ing, dis-pens-es. — v. tr. 1. To deal out in parts or portions; distribute. See Synonyms at distribute. 2. To prepare and give out (medicines). 3. To administer (laws, for example). 4. To exempt or release, as from a duty or religious obligation. — v. intr. To grant a dispensation or an exemption. —phrasal verb. dispense with. 1. To manage without; forgo: Let's dispense with the formalities. 2. To get rid of; do away with: a country that has dispensed with tariff barriers. [Middle English dispensen, from Old French dispenser, from Latin dispēnsāre, to distribute, frequentative of dispendere, to weigh out : dis-, out; see DIS- + pendere, to weigh; see (s)pen- in Appendix.]

dis-pens-er (dī-spĕn'sər) n. One that dispenses or gives out, especially a machine or container that allows the contents to be removed and used in convenient or prescribed amounts.

dis-peo-ple (dīs-pē'pəl) v. tr. dis-peo-pled, dis-peo-pling, dis-peo-ples. To depopulate.

dis-per-sal (dī-spŭr'səl) n. The act or process of dispersing or the condition of being dispersed; distribution.

dis-pers-e (dī-spŭr's') v. dispersed, dis-pers-ing, dis-pers-es. — v. tr. 1. a. To drive off or scatter in different directions: The police dispersed the crowd. b. To strew or distribute widely: The airplane dispersed the leaflets over the city. 2. To cause to vanish or disappear. See Synonyms at scatter. 3. To disseminate disperse phase (dĭ-spûrs' fāz) n. The particles or droplets in a disperse system that are dispersed throughout a medium.

(knowledge, for example). 4. To separate (light) into spectral rays. 5. To distribute (particles) evenly throughout a medium. — v. intr. 1. To move in different directions; scatter. 2. To vanish; dissipate: The storm clouds had dispersed by noon. [Middle English dispersen, from Old French disperser, from Latin dispergere, dispers-, to disperse : dis-, apart; see DIS- + spargere, to scatter.]

—dis-per'sant n. —dis-pers'ed-ly (-spûr'sîd-lē) adv. —dis-pers'er n. —dis-pers'i-ble adj.

disperse system (dĭ-spûrs' sĭs'təm) n. Chemistry. A system, such as a colloid, consisting of a disperse phase in a dispersion medium. Also called dispersion dis-per-sion (dĭ-spûr'zhən, -shən) n. 1. a. The act or process of dispersing. b. The state of being dispersed. 2. Statistics. The degree of scatter of data, usually about an average value, such as the median. 3. Physics. a. Separation of a complex wave into its component parts according to a given characteristic, such as frequency or wavelength. b. Separation of visible light into colors by refraction or diffraction. 4. Chemistry. See disperse system.

dispersion medium (dĭ-spûr'zhən mē'dē-əm) n. The continuous medium, such as a gas, liquid, or solid, in which a disperse phase is distributed.

dis-per-sive (dĭ-spûr'sĭv, -zĭv) adj. 1. Tending to become dispersed.

2. Tending to produce dispersion. —dis-per'sive-ly adv. —dis-per'sive-ness n.

dis-pir-it (dĭ-spĭr'ĭt) v. tr. dis-pir-it-ed, dis-pir-it-ing, dis-pir-its. To lower in or deprive of spirit; dishearten. See Synonyms at discourage. [DI(S)- + SPIRIT.]

dis-pir-it-ed (dĭ-spĭr'ĭ-tĭd) adj. Affected or marked by low spirits; dejected. See Synonyms at depressed. —dis-pir'it-ed-ly adv.

dis-place (dĭs-plās') v. tr. dis-placed, dis-plac-ing, dis-plac-es. 1. To move or shift from the usual place or position, especially to force to leave a homeland: millions of refugees who were displaced by the war. 2. To take the place of; supplant. 3. To discharge from an office or position. —dis-place'a-ble adj.

—dis-plac'er n.

dis-placed homemaker (dĭs-plāst' hōm'mā'kər) n. A woman who, after managing a household for years, is forced by financial necessity to find a wage-paying job.

displaced person (dĭs-plāst' pûr'sən) n. Abbr. DP, D.P. One who has been driven from one's homeland by war or internal upheaval.

dis-place-ment (dĭs-plās'mənt) n. 1. a. The act of displacing. b. The condition of having been displaced. 2. Chemistry. A reaction in which an atom, a radical, or a molecule replaces another in a compound. 3. Physics. a. The weight or volume of a fluid displaced by a floating body, used especially as a measurement of the weight or bulk of ships. b. A vector or the magnitude of a vector from the initial position to a subsequent position assumed by a body. 4. Geology. a. The relative movement between the two sides of a fault. b. The distance between the two sides of a fault. Also called dislocation 5. Psychiatry. A defense mechanism in which there is an unconscious shift of emotions, affect, or desires from the original object to a more acceptable or immediate substitute.

displacement ton (dīs-plās'mənt tŭn) n. Nautical. A unit for measuring the displacement of a ship afloat, equivalent to one long ton or about one cubic meter of salt water.

dis-play (dī-splā') v. dis-played, dis-play-ing, dis-plays. — v. tr. 1. a. To present or hold up to view. b. Computer Science. To provide (information or graphics) on a screen. 2. To give evidence of; manifest. 3. To exhibit ostentatiously; show off. 4. To be endowed with an identifiable form or character: a shrub that displays hardiness. 5. To express, as by gestures or bodily posture: a smirk that displayed contempt. 6. To spread out; unfurl: The peacock displayed its fan. — v. intr. Computer Science. To provide information or graphics on a screen: a personal computer that displays and prints. — n. 1. a. The act of displaying. b. A public exhibition. c. Objects or merchandise set out for viewing by the public. 2. A demonstration or manifestation: a display of temper.

3. a. Biology. A specialized pattern of behavior used to communicate visually, such as the presentation of colors or plumage by male birds as part of courtship or intimidation. b. An instance of such behavior. 4. Ostentatious exhibition. 5. An advertisement or headline designed to catch the eye. 6. a. Computer Science. A device that gives information in a visual form, as on a screen. b. A visual representation of information. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: a display cabinet; picked display type for the new advertising campaign.

[Middle English displayen, from Anglo-Norman despleier, from Medieval Latin displicāre, to unfold, from Latin, to scatter : dis-, apart; see DIS- + plicāre, to fold; see plek- in Appendix.]

SYNONYMS: display, array, panoply, parade, pomp. The central meaning shared by these nouns is “an impressive or ostentatious exhibition”: a tasteless display of wealth; an array of diamond rings in a showcase; a panoply of alpine peaks; a parade of knowledge and virtue; the pomp of a coronation ceremony. See also Synonyms at show dis-please (dīs-plēz') v. dis-pleased, dis-pleas-ing, dis-pleas-es. — v. tr. To cause annoyance or vexation to. — v. intr. To cause annoyance or displeasure. [Middle English displezen, from Old French desplaire, desplais-, from Vulgar Latin displacēre*, from Latin displicēre : Latin dis-, dis- + Latin placēre, to please; see PLEASE.] — dis-pleas'ing-ly adv.

dis-pleas-ure (dɪs-plɛzh'ər) n. 1. The condition or fact of being displeased; dissatisfaction. 2. Discomfort, uneasiness, or pain. 3. Archaic. An injurious offense. [Middle English displesure, from Old French desplaisir : des-, dis- + plaisir, pleasure; see PLEASURE.]

dis-plode (dɪ-splɒd') v. tr. intr. dis-plod-ed, dis-plod-ing, dis-plodes. Archaic. To explode. [Latin displōdere : dis-, dis- + plaudere, to clap, beat.]

dis-port (dɪ-spɔrt', -spɔrt') v. dis-port-ed, dis-port-ing, dis-ports. — v. intr. To amuse oneself in a light, frolicsome manner. — v. tr. 1. To amuse (oneself) in a light, frolicsome manner. 2. To display. — n. Frolicsome diversion. [Middle English disporten, from Old French desporter, to divert : des-, apart; see DIS- + porter, to carry (from Latin portāre); see PORT⁵.]

dis-pos-a-ble (dɪ-spɔ'zə-bəl) adj. 1. Designed to be disposed of after use: disposable diapers; disposable razors. 2. a. Remaining to a person after taxes have been deducted: disposable income. b. Free for use; available: Every disposable piece of equipment was sent to the fire. — n. An article, such as a paper diaper or hypodermic syringe, that can be disposed of after one use. — dis-pos'a-bil'i-ty n.

dis-pos-al (dɪ-spɔ'zəl) n. 1. A particular order, distribution, or placement: a pleasing disposal of plants and lawn. 2. A particular method of attending to or settling matters. 3. Transference by gift or sale. 4. The act or process of getting rid of something. 5. An electric device installed below a sink that grinds garbage so it can be flushed away. 6. The liberty or power to dispose of: funds at our disposal.

dis-pose (dɪ-spɔz') v. dis-posed, dis-pos-ing, dis-pos-es. — v. tr. 1. To place or set in a particular order; arrange. 2. To put (business affairs, for example) into correct, definitive, or conclusive form. 3. To put into a willing or receptive frame of mind; incline. See Synonyms at incline. — v. intr. To settle or decide a matter. — n. Obsolete. 1. Disposal. 2. Disposition; demeanor.

—phrasal verb. dispose of. 1. To attend to; settle: disposed of the problem quickly. 2. To transfer or part with, as by giving or selling. 3. To get rid of; throw out. 4. To kill or destroy: a despot who disposed of all his enemies, real or imagined. [Middle English disposen, from Old French disposer, alteration (influenced by poser, to put, place); see POSE¹ : of Latin dispōnere, to arrange dis-, apart; see DIS- + pōnere, to put; see apo- in Appendix.] — dis-pos'er n.

dis-po-si-tion (dɪs'pə-zɪʃ'ən) n. 1. One's usual mood; temperament: a sweet disposition. 2. a. A habitual inclination; a tendency: a disposition to disagree. b. A physical property or tendency: a swelling with a disposition to rupture. 3. Arrangement, positioning, or distribution: a cheerful disposition of colors and textures; a convoy oriented into a north-south disposition. 4. A final settlement: disposition of the deceased's property. 5. An act of disposing of; a bestowal or transfer to another. 6. a. The power or liberty to control, direct, or dispose.

b. Management; control. [Middle English disposicioun, from Old French disposition, from Latin dispositiō, dispositiōn-, from dispositus, past participle of disponere, to dispose. See DISPOSE.]

SYNONYMS: disposition, temperament, character, personality, nature. These nouns refer to the combination of qualities that identify a person. Disposition is approximately equivalent to prevailing frame of mind or spirit: “A patronizing disposition always has its meaner side” (George Eliot). Temperament applies broadly to the sum of physical, emotional, and intellectual characteristics that affect or determine a person’s actions and reactions: “Her highly strung temperament made her uncertain... capricious... enchanting” (George Bernard Shaw). Character especially emphasizes moral and ethical qualities: “Education has for its object the formation of character” (Herbert Spencer). Personality is the sum of distinctive traits that give a person individuality: “The meeting of two personalities is like the contact of two chemical substances: if there is any reaction, both are transformed” (Carl Jung). Nature denotes native or inherent qualities: “It is my habit,—I hope I may say, my nature,—to believe the best of people” (George W. Curtis).

dis·pos·sess (dɪs'pə-zɛs') v. tr. dis·pos·sessed, dis·pos·sess·ing, dis·pos·sess·es. To deprive (another) of the possession or occupancy of something, such as real property. —dis'pos·ses'sion (-zɛsh'ən) n. —dis'pos·ses'sor n. —dis'pos·ses'so·ry (-zɛs'ə-rē) adj.

dis·pos·sessed (dɪs'pə-zɛst') adj. 1. Deprived of possession. 2. Spiritually impoverished or alienated. —dis'pos·sessed' n.

dis·praise (dɪs-prāz') v. tr. dis·praised, dis·prais·ing, dis·prais·es. To express disapproval of; censure. — n. Disapproval; censure. [Middle English dispreisen, from Old French despreiser, variant of desprisier, from Late Latin dēpretiāre. See DEPRECIATE.] —dis·prais'er n. —dis·prais'ing·ly adv.

dis·prize (dɪs-prīz') v. tr. dis·prized, dis·priz·ing, dis·priz·es. Archaic. To disdain or undervalue; scorn. [Middle English disprisen, from Old French desprisier. See DISPRAISE.]

dis·proof (dɪs-prōōf') n. 1. The act of refuting or disproving. 2. Evidence that refutes or disproves.

dis·pro·por·tion (dɪs'prə-pôr'shən, -pôr'-) n. 1. Absence of proportion, symmetry, or proper relation: the disproportion between the gravity of geopolitical events and the time available to deal with them. 2. An instance of a disproportionate relation. — v. tr. dis·pro·por·tioned, dis·pro·por·tion·ing, dis·pro·por·tions. To make disproportionate.

dis·pro·por·tion·al (dɪs'prə-pôr'shə-nəl, -pôr'-) adj. Disproportionate. —dis'pro·por'tion·al·ly adv.

dis-pro-por-tion-ate (dĭs'prə-pôr'shə-nĭt, -pôr'-) adj. Out of proportion, as in size, shape, or amount. —dis'pro-por'tion-ate-ly adv. —dis'pro-por'tion-ate-ness n.

dis-prove (dĭs-prōv') v. tr. dis-proved, dis-prov-ing, dis-proves. To prove to be false, invalid, or in error; refute. [Middle English disproven, from Old French desprover : des-, dis- + prover, to prove; see PROVE.] —dis-prov'a-ble adj. —dis-prov'al n.

dis-put-a-ble (dĭ-spyōō'tə-bəl, dĭs'pyə-) adj. Open to dispute; debatable: disputable testimony. —dis-put'a-bil'i-ty n. —dis-put'a-bly adv.

dis-pu-tant (dĭ-spyōōt'nt, dĭs'pyə-tənt) adj. Engaged in dispute or argument. — n. One engaged in a dispute.

dis-pu-ta-tion (dĭs'pyə-tā'shən) n. 1. The act of disputing; debate. 2. An academic exercise consisting of a formal debate or an oral defense of a thesis.

dis-pu-ta-tious (dĭs'pyə-tā'shəs) adj. Inclined to dispute. See Synonyms at argumentative. —dis'pu-ta'tious-ly adv. —dis'pu-ta'tious-ness n.

dis-pute (dĭ-spyōōt') v. dis-put-ed, dis-put-ing, dis-put-es. — v. tr. 1. To argue about; debate. 2. To question the truth or validity of; doubt: Her friends disputed her intentions. 3. To strive to win (a prize, for example); contest for: Our team disputed the visitors' claim to the championship. 4. To strive against; resist: disputed the actions of his competitors. — v. intr. 1. To engage in discussion or argument; debate. See Synonyms at discuss. 2. To quarrel angrily. — n. 1. A verbal controversy; a debate. 2. An angry altercation; a quarrel. See Synonyms at argument. [Middle English disputen, from Old French desputer, from Latin disputāre, to examine : dis-, apart; see DIS- + putāre, to reckon; see peu- in Appendix.] —dis-put'er n.

dis-qual-i-fi-ca-tion (dĭs-kwōl'ə-fĭ-kā'shən) n. 1. The act of disqualifying or the condition of having been disqualified. 2. Something that disqualifies: illness as a disqualification for enlistment in the army.

dis-qual-i-fy (dĭs-kwōl'ə-fĭ') v. tr. dis-qual-i-fied, dis-qual-i-fy-ing, dis-qual-i-fies. 1. a. To render unqualified or unfit. b. To declare unqualified or ineligible. 2. To deprive of legal rights, powers, or privileges.

dis-qui-et (dĭs-kwĭ'ĭt) v. tr. dis-qui-et-ed, dis-qui-et-ing, dis-qui-ets. To deprive of peace or rest; trouble. — n. Absence of peace or rest; anxiety. — adj. Archaic. Uneasy; restless. —dis-qui/et-ing-ly adv. —dis-qui/et-ly adv. —dis-qui/et-ness n.

dis-qui-e-tude (dĭs-kwĭ'ĭ-tōōd', -tyōōd') n. Worried unease; anxiety: a state of brooding disquietude about a colleague's success.

dis-qui-si-tion (dĭs'kwĭ-zĭsh'ən) n. A formal discourse on a subject, often in writing. [Latin disquĭsītĭō, disquĭsītĭōn-, investigation, from disquĭsītus, past participle of disquĭrere, to investigate : dis-, dis- + quaerere, to search for.]

- Dis-rae-li (dĭz-rā'lē), Benjamin First Earl of Beaconsfield. Known as “Dizzy.” 1804-1881. British politician who served as prime minister (1868 and 1874-1880) and was instrumental in extending the power and scope of the British Empire.
- dis-rate (dĭs-rāt') v. tr. dis-rat-ed, dis-rat-ing, dis-rates. To reduce in rank or rating; demote.
- dis-re-gard (dĭs'rĭ-gārd') v. tr. dis-re-gard-ed, dis-re-gard-ing, dis-re-gards. 1. To pay no attention or heed to; ignore. 2. To treat without proper respect or attentiveness. — n. Lack of thoughtful attention or due regard. — dis're-gard'er n. — dis're-gard'ful adj.
- dis-rel-ish (dĭs-rĕl'ĭsh) v. tr. dis-rel-ish-ed, dis-rel-ish-ing, dis-rel-ish-es. To have distaste for; dislike. — n. Distaste; aversion.
- dis-re-mem-ber (dĭs'rĭ-mĕm'bər) v. dis-re-mem-ber-ed, dis-re-mem-ber-ing, dis-re-mem-bers. Informal. — v. tr. To fail to remember. — v. intr. To forget.
- dis-re-pair (dĭs'rĭ-pār') n. The condition of being in need of repair: a house in disrepair.
- dis-rep-u-ta-ble (dĭs-rĕp'yə-tə-bəl) adj. Lacking respectability, as in character, behavior, or appearance. — dis-rep'u-ta-bil'i-ty, dis-rep'u-ta-ble-ness n. — dis-rep'u-ta-bly adv.
- dis-re-pu-te (dĭs'rĭ-pyōt') n. Damage to or loss of reputation. See Synonyms at disgrace.
- dis-re-spect (dĭs'rĭ-spĕkt') n. Lack of respect, esteem, or courteous regard. — v. tr. dis-re-spect-ed, dis-re-spect-ing, dis-re-spects. To show a lack of respect for: disrespected her elders; disrespected the law.
- dis-re-spect-a-ble (dĭs'rĭ-spĕk'tə-bəl) adj. Unworthy of respect. — dis're-spect'a-bil'i-ty n.
- dis-re-spect-ful (dĭs'rĭ-spĕkt'fəl) adj. Having or exhibiting a lack of respect; rude and discourteous. — dis're-spect'ful-ly adv. — dis're-spect'ful-ness n.
- dis-robe (dĭs-rōb') v. dis-robed, dis-rob-ing, dis-robes. — v. tr. To remove the clothing or covering from. — v. intr. To undress oneself. — dis-rob'er n.
- dis-rupt (dĭs-rŭpt') v. tr. dis-rupt-ed, dis-rupt-ing, dis-rupts. 1. To throw into confusion or disorder: Protesters disrupted the candidate's speech. 2. To interrupt or impede the progress, movement, or procedure of: Our efforts in the garden were disrupted by an early frost. 3. To break or burst; rupture. [Latin dis-rumpere, disrupt-, to break apart : dis-, dis- + rumpere, to break apart; see reup- in Appendix.] — dis-rupt'er, dis-rup'tor n. — dis-rup'tion n.
- dis-rupt-ive (dĭs-rŭp'tĭv) adj. Relating to, causing, or produced by disruption. — dis-rupt'ive-ly adv.
- diss. abbr. Dissertation.
- dis-sat-is-fac-tion (dĭs-săt'ĭs-făk'shən) n. 1. The condition or feeling of being displeased or unsatisfied; discontent. 2. A cause of discontent.

dis-sat-is-fac-to-ry (dīs-săt'is-făk'tə-rē) adj. Unsatisfactory.

dis-sat-is-fied (dīs-săt'is-fīd') adj. Feeling or exhibiting a lack of contentment or satisfaction. —dis-sat'is-fied'ly adv.

dis-sat-is-fy (dīs-săt'is-fī') v. tr. dis-sat-is-fied, dis-sat-is-fy-ing, dis-sat-is-fies. To fail to satisfy; disappoint.

dissd. abbr. Dissolved.

dis-seat (dīs-sēt') v. tr. dis-seat-ed, dis-seat-ing, dis-seats. Archaic. To unseat.

dis-sect (dī-sĕkt', dī-, dī'sĕkt') v. tr. dis-sect-ed, dis-sect-ing, dis-sects.

1. To cut apart or separate (tissue), especially for anatomical study. 2. To examine, analyze, or criticize in minute detail: dissected the plan afterward to learn why it had failed. See Synonyms at analyze. [Latin dissecāre, dissect-, to cut apart : dis-, dis- + secāre, to cut up; see sek- in Appendix.] —dis-sec'ti-ble adj.

—dis-sec'tor n.

dis-sect-ed (dī-sĕk'tīd, dī-) adj. 1. Botany. Divided into many deep, narrow segments: dissected leaves. 2. Geology. Cut by irregular valleys and hills.

dis-sec-tion (dī-sĕk'shən, dī-) n. 1. The act or an instance of dissecting.

2. Something that has been dissected, such as a tissue specimen under study. 3. A detailed examination or analysis.

dis-seise (dīs-sēz') v. Law. Variant of disseize.

dis-sei-sin (dīs-sē'zīn) n. Law. Variant of disseizin.

dis-seize also dis-seise (dīs-sēz') v. tr. dis-seized also dis-seised, dis-seiz-ing also dis-seis-ing, dis-seiz-es also dis-seis-es. Law. To dispossess unlawfully of real property; oust. [Middle English disseisen, from Anglo-Norman disseisir, variant of Old French dessaisir : des-, dis- + saisir, to seize; see SEIZE.]

dis-sei-zin also dis-sei-sin (dīs-sē'zīn) n. Law. Wrongful dispossession of one in the possession of real property. [Middle English disseisine, from Anglo-Norman, variant of Old French dessaisine : des-, dis- + seisine, seisin; see SEISIN.]

dis-sem-ble (dī-sĕm'bəl) v. dis-sem-bled, dis-sem-bling, dis-sem-bles.

— v. tr. 1. To disguise or conceal behind a false appearance. See Synonyms at disguise. 2. To make a false show of; feign. — v. intr. To disguise or conceal one's real nature, motives, or feelings behind a false appearance. [Middle English dissemblen, from Old French dessembler, to be different : des-, dis- + sembler, to appear, seem; see SEMBLABLE.] —dis-sem'blance n. —dis-sem'bler n.

—dis-sem'bling-ly adv.

dis-sem-i-nate (dī-sĕm'ə-nāt') v. dis-sem-i-nat-ed, dis-sem-i-nat-ing, dis-sem-i-nates. — v. tr. 1. To scatter widely, as in sowing seed. 2. To spread abroad; promulgate: disseminate information. — v. intr. To become diffused; spread. [Latin dissēmināre, dissēmināt- : dis-, dis- + sēmināre, to sow (from sēmen, sēmin-, seed); see sē- in Appendix.] —dis-sem'i-na'tion n.

—dis-sem'i-na'tor n.

dis-sem-i-nat-ed (dī-sēm'ə-nā'tīd) adj. Spread over a large area of a body, a tissue, or an organ.

dis-sem-i-nule (dī-sēm'ə-nyōōl') n. A reproductive plant part, such as a seed, fruit, or spore, that is modified for dispersal. Also called diaspore [DISSEMIN(ATE) + -ULE.]

dis-sen-sion (dī-sĕn'shən) n. Difference of opinion; disagreement. See Synonyms at discord. [Middle English dissencioun, from Old French dissension, from Latin dissēnsiō, dissēnsiōn-, from dissēnsus, past participle of dissentīre, to dissent. See DISSENT.]

dis-sent (dī-sĕnt') v. intr. dis-sent-ed, dis-sent-ing, dis-sents. 1. To differ in opinion or feeling; disagree. 2. To withhold assent or approval. — n.

1. Difference of opinion or feeling; disagreement. 2. The refusal to conform to the authority or doctrine of an established church; nonconformity. 3. Law. A justice's refusal to concur with the opinion of a majority, as on a higher court. In this sense, also called dissenting opinion [Middle English dissentēn, from Latin dissentīre : dis-, dis- + sentīre, to feel; see sent- in Appendix.] — dis-sent'ing-ly adv.

dis-sent-er (dī-sĕn'tər) n. 1. One who dissents: political dissenters. 2. Often Dissenter. One who refuses to accept the doctrines or usages of an established or a national church, especially a Protestant who dissents from the Church of England.

dis-sen-tient (dī-sĕn'shənt) adj. Dissenting, especially from the sentiment or policies of a majority. — n. A dissenter. — dis-sen'tience n.

dis-sent-ing opinion (dī-sĕn'tĭŋ ə-pĭn'yən) n. Law. See dissent (n., sense 3).

dis-sep-i-ment (dī-sĕp'ə-mənt) n. Botany. A partition dividing an organ, such as an ovary or a fruit, into chambers. [Latin dissaepĭmentum, partition, from dis-saepĭre, to divide : dis-, dis- + saepĭre, hedge off (from saepēs, hedge).]

— dis-sep'i-men'tal (-mĕn'tl) adj.

dis-ser-tate (dīs'sĕr-tāt') also dis-sert (dī-sŭrt') v. intr. dis-ser-tat-ed also dis-sert-ed, dis-ser-tat-ing also dis-sert-ing, dis-ser-tates also dis-serts. To discourse formally. [Latin dissertāre, dissertāt- frequentative of disserere, to discuss : dis-, dis- + serere, to connect; see ser-² in Appendix.] — dis'ser-ta'tor n.

dis-ser-ta-tion (dīs'sĕr-tā'shən) n. Abbr. diss. A lengthy, formal treatise, especially one written by a candidate for the doctoral degree at a university; a thesis.

dis-serve (dīs-sŭrv') v. tr. dis-served, dis-serv-ing, dis-serves. To treat badly; harm.

dis-serv-ice (dīs-sŭr'vĭs) n. A harmful action; an injury.

dis-sev-er (dī-sĕv'ĕr) v. dis-sev-ered, dis-sev-er-ing, dis-sev-ers. — v. tr.

1. To separate; sever. 2. To divide into parts; break up. — v. intr. To become separated or disunited. [Middle English disseveren, from Old French dessevrer, from Late Latin dissēparāre : Latin dis-, dis- + Latin sēparāre, to separate; see SEPARATE.] — dis·sev'er·ance, dis·sev'er·ment n.

dis·si·dence (dɪs'ɪ-dəns) n. Disagreement, as of opinion or belief; dissent.

dis·si·dent (dɪs'ɪ-dənt) adj. Disagreeing, as in opinion or belief. — n. One who disagrees; a dissenter. [Latin dissidēns, dissident- present participle of dissidēre, to disagree : dis-, apart; see DIS- + sedēre, to sit; see sed- in Appendix.]

dis·sil·i·ent (dɪ-sɪl'ē-ənt) adj. Botany. Bursting apart, as some seed pods when ripe. [Latin dissiliēns, dissilient- present participle of dissilīre, to fly apart : dis-, apart; see DIS- + salīre, to leap; see sel- in Appendix.]

dis·sim·i·lar (dɪ-sɪm'ə-lər) adj. Unlike; different. — dis·sim'i·lar·ly adv.

dis·sim·i·lar·i·ty (dɪ-sɪm'ə-lār'ɪ-tē) n. pl. dis·sim·i·lar·i·ties. 1. The quality of being distinct or unlike; difference. 2. A point of distinction or difference. See Synonyms at difference.

dis·sim·i·late (dɪ-sɪm'ə-lāt') v. dis·sim·i·lat·ed, dis·sim·i·lat·ing, dis·sim·i·lates. — v. tr. 1. To make unlike or dissimilar. 2. Linguistics. To cause to undergo dissimilation. — v. intr. 1. To become unlike or dissimilar.

2. Linguistics. To undergo dissimilation. [DIS- + (AS)SIMILATE.]

dis·sim·i·la·tion (dɪ-sɪm'ə-lā'shən) n. 1. The act or process of making or becoming dissimilar. 2. Linguistics. The process by which one of two similar or identical sounds in a word becomes less like the other, such as the l in English marble (from French marbre).

dis·si·mil·i·tude (dɪs'ə-mɪl'ɪ-tōd', -tyōd') n. Lack of resemblance; dissimilarity. [Middle English, from Latin dissimilitūdō, from dissimilis, different : dis-, dis- + similis, like; see SIMILAR.]

dis·sim·u·late (dɪ-sɪm'yə-lāt') v. dis·sim·u·lat·ed, dis·sim·u·lat·ing, dis·sim·u·lates. — v. tr. To disguise (one's intentions, for example) under a feigned appearance. See Synonyms at disguise. — v. intr. To conceal one's true feelings or intentions. [Middle English dissimulaten, from Latin dissimulāre, dissimulāt- : dis-, dis- + simulāre, to simulate; see SIMULATE.] — dis·sim'u·la'tion n. — dis·sim'u·la'tive adj. — dis·sim'u·la'tor n.

dis·si·pate (dɪs'ə-pāt') v. dis·si·pat·ed, dis·si·pat·ing, dis·si·pates. — v. tr.

1. To drive away; disperse. 2. To attenuate to or almost to the point of disappearing: The wind finally dissipated the smoke. See Synonyms at scatter.

3. a. To spend or expend intemperately or wastefully; squander. b. To use up, especially recklessly; exhaust: dissipated their energy. See Synonyms at waste.

4. To cause to lose (energy, such as heat) irreversibly. — v. intr. 1. To vanish by dispersion: The dark clouds finally dissipated. 2. To indulge in the intemperate pursuit of pleasure. [Middle English dissipaten, from Latin dissipāre, dissipāt-.]

— dis'si·pat'er, dis'si·pa'tor n. — dis'si·pa'tive adj.

dis-si-pat-ed (dīs'ə-pā'tīd) adj. 1. Intemperate in the pursuit of pleasure; dissolute. 2. Wasted or squandered. 3. Irreversibly lost. Used of energy. —dis-'si-pat'ed-ly adv. —dis'si-pat'ed-ness n.

dis-si-pa-tion (dīs'ə-pā'shən) n. 1. The act of dissipating or the condition of having been dissipated. 2. Wasteful expenditure or consumption. 3. Dissolute indulgence in sensual pleasure; intemperance. 4. An amusement; a diversion.

dis-so-cia-ble (dī-sō'shə-bəl, -shē-ə-bəl) adj. That can be dissociated; separable: To many, drugs and crime are not dissociable. —dis-so'cia-bil'i-ty, dis-so'cia-ble-ness n. —dis-so'cia-bly adv.

dis-so-ci-ate (dī-sō'shē-āt', -sē-) v. dis-so-ci-at-ed, dis-so-ci-at-ing, dis-so-ci-ates. — v. tr. 1. To remove from association; separate: "Marx never dissociated man from his social environment" (Sidney Hook). 2. Chemistry. To cause to undergo dissociation. — v. intr. 1. To cease associating; part.

2. Biology. To mutate or change morphologically, often reversibly. 3. Chemistry. To undergo dissociation. [Latin dissociāre, dissociāt-: dis-, dis- + sociāre, to unite (from socius, companion); see sek^w-1 in Appendix.] —dis-so'ci-a'tive adj.

dis-so-ci-a-tion (dī-sō'sē-ā'shən, -shē-) n. 1. The act of dissociating or the condition of having been dissociated. 2. Chemistry. a. The chemical process by means of which a change in physical condition, as in pressure or temperature, or the action of a solvent causes a molecule to split into simpler groups of atoms, single atoms, or ions. b. The separation of an electrolyte into ions of opposite charge. 3. Biology. The process by which some microbes differentiate or mutate. 4. Psychiatry. Separation of a group of related psychological activities into autonomously functioning units, as in the generation of multiple personalities.

dis-sol-u-ble (dī-sōl'yə-bəl) adj. That can be dissolved: dissoluble airborne pollutants brought back to the earth as rain. [Latin dissolūbilis, from dissolūtus, past participle of dissolvere, to dissolve. See DISSOLVE.] —dis'sol-u-bil'i-ty, dis-sol'u-ble-ness n.

dis-so-lute (dīs'ə-lōōt') adj. Lacking moral restraint; indulging in sensual pleasures or vices. [Middle English, from Latin dissolūtus, past participle of dissolvere, to dissolve. See DISSOLVE.] —dis'so-lute'ly adv. —dis'so-lute'ness n.

dis-so-lu-tion (dīs'ə-lōō'shən) n. 1. Decomposition into fragments or parts; disintegration. 2. Indulgence in sensual pleasures; debauchery. 3. Termination or extinction by disintegration or dispersion: The dissolution of the empire was remarkably swift. 4. Extinction of life; death. 5. Annulment or termination of a formal or legal bond, tie, or contract. 6. Formal dismissal of an assembly or legislature. 7. Reduction to a liquid form; liquefaction. —dis'so-lu'tive adj.

dis-solve (dī-zōlv') v. dis-solved, dis-solv-ing, dis-solves. — v. tr. 1. To cause to pass into solution: dissolve salt in water. 2. To reduce (solid matter) to liquid form; melt. 3. To cause to disappear or vanish; dispel. 4. To break into component parts; disintegrate. 5. To bring to an end by or as if by breaking up; terminate. 6. To dismiss (a legislative body, for example): dissolved parliament and called for new elections. 7. To cause to break down emotionally or psychologically; upset. 8. To cause to lose definition; blur; confuse: “Morality has finally been dissolved in pity” (Leslie Fiedler). 9. Law. To annul; abrogate. — v. intr.

1. To pass into solution. 2. To become liquid; melt. 3. To break up or disperse. 4. To become disintegrated; disappear. 5. To be overcome emotionally or psychologically: I dissolved into helpless laughter. 6. To lose clarity or definition; fade away. 7. To shift scenes in a motion-picture film or videotape by having one scene fade out while the next scene appears behind it and grows clearer as the first one dims. — n. A scene transition in a motion-picture film or videotape made by fading out one scene while the next scene grows clearer. Also called lap dissolve [Middle English dissolven, from Latin dissolvere : dis-, dis- + solvere, to release; see leu- in Appendix.] — dis·solv’able adj. — dis·solv’er n.

dis·sol·vent (dī-zōl’vənt) adj. Capable of dissolving a substance; solvent. — n. A solvent.

dis·so·nance (dīs’ə-nəns) n. 1. A harsh, disagreeable combination of sounds; discord. 2. Lack of agreement, consistency, or harmony; conflict. 3. Music. A combination of tones conventionally considered to suggest unrelieved tension and require resolution.

dis·so·nan·cy (dīs’ə-nən-sē) n. pl. dis·so·nan·cies. Dissonance.

dis·so·nant (dīs’ə-nənt) adj. 1. Harsh and inharmonious in sound; discordant. 2. Being at variance; disagreeing. 3. Music. Constituting or producing a dissonance. [Middle English dissonaunt, from Old French dissonant, from Latin dissonāns, dissonant- present participle of dissonāre, to be dissonant : dis-, apart; see DIS- + sonāre, to sound; see swen- in Appendix.] — dis’so·nant·ly adv.

dis·suade (dī-swād’) v. tr. dis·suad·ed, dis·suad·ing, dis·suades. To deter (a person) from a course of action or a purpose by persuasion or exhortation: dissuaded my friend from pursuing such a rash scheme. [Latin dissuādēre : dis-, dis- + suādēre, to advise; see swād- in Appendix.] — dis·suad’er n.

SYNONYMS: dissuade, deter, discourage. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to persuade someone not to do something”: tried to dissuade the general from taking disciplinary action; couldn’t be deterred from smoking; discouraged her from accepting the offer.

ANTONYM: persuade dis·sua·sion (dī-swā’zhən) n. The act or an instance of dissuading. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin dissuāsiō, dissuāsiōn-, from dissuāsus, past participle of dissuādēre, to dissuade. See DISSUADE.] — dis·sua’sive adj.

— dis·sua’sive·ly adv. — dis·sua’sive·ness n.

dis·syl·la·ble (dī’sil’ə-bəl, dī-sil’-, dī-) n. Variant of disyllable.

dis·sym·me·try (dīs-sīm'ī-trē) n. pl. dis·sym·me·tries. Lack of symmetry.
—dis'sym·met'ric (dīs'sī-mět'rik), dis'sym·met'ri·cal (-rī-kəl) adj. —dis·sym·met'ri·cal·ly adv.

dist. abbr. 1. Distance; distant. 2. District.

dis·taff (dīs'täf') n. 1. a. A staff that holds on its cleft end the unspun flax, wool, or tow from which thread is drawn in spinning by hand. b. An attachment for a spinning wheel that serves this purpose. 2. Work and concerns traditionally considered important to women. 3. Women considered as a group. [Middle English distaf, from Old English distæf: dis-, bunch of flax + stæf, staff.]

distaff side (dīs'täf' sīd) n. The female line or maternal branch of a family. [From the idea that spinning is women's work.]

dis·tal (dīs'təl) adj. 1. Anatomically located far from a point of reference, such as an origin or a point of attachment. 2. Situated farthest from the middle and front of the jaw, as a tooth or tooth surface. [DIST(ANT) + -AL¹.] —dis'tal·ly adv.

dis·tance (dīs'təns) n. Abbr. dist., dis. 1. The extent of space between two objects or places; an intervening space. 2. The fact or condition of being apart in space; remoteness. 3. Mathematics. The length or numerical value of a straight line or curve. 4. a. The extent of space between points on a measured course. b. The length of a race, especially of a horserace. 5. a. A point or an area that is far away: “Telephone poles stretched way into a distance I couldn't quite see” (Leigh Allison Wilson). b. A depiction of a point or an area that is far away. 6. A stretch of space without designation of limit; an expanse: a land of few hills and great distances. 7. The extent of time between two events; an intervening period. 8. A point removed in time: At a distance of 11 years, the details of the crime were clouded in his mind. 9. The period or length of a contest: The challenger had never attempted the distance of 12 rounds. 10. An amount of progress: The curriculum committee is a distance from where it was two months ago. 11. Difference or disagreement: The candidates could not be at a greater distance on this issue.

12. Chillness of manner; aloofness. — v. tr. dis·tanced, dis·tanc·ing, dis·tanc·es. 1. To place or keep at or as if at a distance: “To understand Russian strategy... it is necessary for us to distance ourselves from our own myths and to enter into theirs” (Freeman J. Dyson). 2. To cause to appear at a distance. 3. To leave far behind; outrun.

dis·tant (dīs'tənt) adj. Abbr. dist., dis. 1. a. Separate or apart in space. b. Far removed; remote: distant lands. 2. Coming from or going to a distance: a distant sound; a distant telephone call. 3. Far removed or apart in time: the distant past; distant events. 4. Far apart in relationship: a distant cousin. 5. Minimally similar: a distant likeness. 6. Far removed mentally: distant thoughts. 7. Aloof or chilly: a distant smile. [Middle English distaunt, from Old French, from Latin distāns, distant- present participle of distāre, to be remote : dis-, apart; see DIS- + stāre, to stand; see stā- in Appendix.] —dis'tant·ly adv.

SYNONYMS: distant, far, far-off, faraway, remote, removed. These adjectives mean apart from others in space, time, or relationship. Distant can indicate a specific separation (a house a mile distant from town), or it can indicate an indefinite but sizable interval (heard the sound of distant traffic). Far applies to what is a great distance off: “We be come from a far country” (Joshua 9:6). “He seems so near, and yet so far” (Tennyson). Far-off and faraway imply an even greater distance than far: troops landing on far-off shores; faraway mountains and lakes. Remote not only means faraway but suggests isolation from the speaker’s locality or point in time: remote stars; a remote outpost of civilization; the remote past. Removed implies distinct separation between two entities in place, time, kind, or character: a civilization ten centuries removed from modern times; a hideaway far removed from towns and cities.

dis·taste (dīs-tāst′) n. Dislike or aversion. — v. tr. dis·tast·ed, dis·tast·ing, dis·tastes. Archaic. 1. To feel repugnance for; dislike. 2. To offend; displease.

dis·taste·ful (dīs-tāst′fəl) adj. 1. a. Unpleasant; disagreeable: found cocktail parties distasteful. b. Objectionable; offensive: used distasteful language.

2. Expressing aversion or dislike: shot me a distasteful glance. — dis·taste′ful·ly adv. — dis·taste′ful·ness n.

Dist. Atty. abbr. Law. District attorney.

dis·tem·per¹ (dīs-tēm′pər) n. 1. a. An infectious viral disease occurring in dogs, characterized by loss of appetite, a catarrhal discharge from the eyes and nose, vomiting, fever, lethargy, partial paralysis caused by destruction of myelinated nerve tissue, and sometimes death. Also called canine distemper. b. A similar viral disease of cats characterized by fever, vomiting, diarrhea leading to dehydration, and sometimes death. Also called feline distemper, panleukopenia.

c. Any of various similar mammalian diseases. 2. An illness or a disease; an ailment: “He died... of a broken heart, a distemper which kills many more than is generally imagined” (Henry Fielding). 3. Ill humor; testiness. 4. Disorder or disturbance, especially of a social or political nature. — v. tr. dis·tem·pered, dis·tem·per·ing, dis·tem·pers. 1. To put out of order. 2. Archaic. To unsettle; derange. [From Middle English distemperen, to upset the balance of the humors, from Old French destemperer, to disturb, from Late Latin distemperāre: Latin dis-, dis- + Latin temperāre, to mix properly.]

dis·tem·per² (dīs-tēm′pər) n. 1. a. A process of painting in which pigments are mixed with water and a glue-size or casein binder, used for flat wall decoration or scenic and poster painting. b. The paint used in this process. 2. A painting made by this process. — v. tr. dis·tem·pered, dis·tem·per·ing, dis·tem·pers. 1. To mix (powdered pigments or colors) with water and size.

2. To paint (a work) in distemper. [Middle English distemperen, to dilute. See DISTEMPER¹.]

dis·tend (dī-stěnd') v. dis·tend·ed, dis·tend·ing, dis·tends. — v. intr. To swell out or expand from or as if from internal pressure. — v. tr. 1. To cause to expand by or as if by internal pressure; dilate. 2. To extend. [Middle English distenden, from Latin distendere : dis-, dis- + tendere, to stretch; see ten- in Appendix.]

dis·ten·si·ble (dī-stěn'sə-bəl) adj. That can be distended: a fish with a distensible stomach. — dis·ten'si·bil'i·ty n.

dis·ten·tion also dis·ten·sion (dī-stěn'shən) n. The act of distending or the state of being distended. [Middle English distensioun, from Old French, from Latin distēnsiō, distēnsiōn-, alteration of distentiō, from distentus, past participle of distendere, to distend. See DISTEND.]

dis·tich (dīs'tīk) n. pl. dis·tichs. 1. A unit of verse consisting of two lines, especially as used in Greek and Latin elegiac poetry. 2. A rhyming couplet. [Latin distichon, from Greek distikhon, from neuter of distikhos, having two rows or verses : di-, two; see DI⁻¹ + stikhos, line of verse; see steigh- in Appendix.]

dis·ti·chous (dīs'tī-kəs) adj. Botany. Arranged in two vertical rows on opposite sides of an axis: distichous leaves. [From Latin distichus, having two rows, from Greek distikhos. See DISTICH.] — dis'ti·chous·ly adv.

dis·till also dis·til (dī-stīl') v. dis·tilled also dis·tilled, dis·till·ing also dis·til·ling, dis·tills also dis·tills. — v. tr. 1. To subject (a substance) to distillation. 2. To separate (a distillate) by distillation. 3. To increase the concentration of, separate, or purify by or as if by distillation. 4. To separate or extract the essential elements of: distill the crucial points of the book. 5. To exude or give off (matter) in drops or small quantities. — v. intr. 1. To undergo or be produced by distillation. 2. To fall or exude in drops or small quantities. [Middle English distillen, from Old French distiller, from Latin distillāre, variant of dēstillāre, to trickle : dē-, de- + stillāre, to drip (from stillā, drop).] — dis·till'a·ble adj.

dis·til·late (dīs'tā-lāt', -līt, dī-stīl'īt) n. 1. A liquid condensed from vapor in distillation. 2. A purified form; an essence: "Finally the President knows the most crucial things about every facet of reality, the pristine distillate of the world's critical information" (Peregrine Worsthorpe).

dis·til·la·tion (dīs'tā-lā'shən) n. 1. The evaporation and subsequent collection of a liquid by condensation as a means of purification: the distillation of water. 2. The extraction of the volatile components of a mixture by the condensation and collection of the vapors that are produced as the mixture is heated: petroleum distillation. 3. A distillate.

distillation column (dīs'tā-lā'shən kōl'əm) n. A tall metal cylinder internally fitted with perforated horizontal plates used to promote separation of miscible liquids ascending in the cylinder as vapor.

dis-till-er (dī-stīl'ər) n. 1. One that distills, as a condenser. 2. One that makes alcoholic liquors by the process of distillation.

dis-till-er-y (dī-stīl'ər-ē) n. pl. dis-till-er-ies. An establishment for distilling, especially for distilling alcoholic liquors.

dis-tinct (dī-stīngkt') adj. 1. Readily distinguishable from all others; discrete: on two distinct occasions. 2. Easily perceived by the senses or intellect; clear: a distinct flavor. 3. Clearly defined; unquestionable: at a distinct disadvantage.

4. Very likely; probable: There is a distinct possibility that she won't come.

5. Notable: a distinct honor and high privilege. [Middle English, past participle of distincen, to distinguish, discern, from Old French destincter, from Latin distīnc-tus, past participle of distinguere, to distinguish. See DISTINGUISH.] —dis-tinct'ly

adv. —dis-tinct'ness n.

SYNONYMS: distinct, discrete, separate, several. The central meaning shared by these adjectives is “distinguished from others in nature or qualities”: six distinct colors; a government with three discrete divisions; a problem consisting of two separate issues; performed the several steps of the process. See also Synonyms at apparent

USAGE NOTE: A thing is distinct if it is sharply distinguished from other things; a property or attribute is distinctive if it enables us to distinguish one thing from another. The warbler is not a distinct species means that the warbler is not a clearly defined type of bird. The warbler has a distinctive song means that the warbler's song enables us to distinguish the warbler from other birds.

dis-tinc-tion (dī-stīngk'tshən) n. 1. The act of distinguishing; differentiation. 2. The condition or fact of being dissimilar or distinct; difference: “the crucial distinction between education and indoctrination” (A. Bartlett Giamatti). See Synonyms at difference. 3. A distinguishing factor, attribute, or characteristic.

4. a. Excellence or eminence, as of performance, character, or reputation: a diplomat of distinction. b. A special feature or quality conferring superiority.

5. Recognition of achievement or superiority; honor: graduated with distinction.

dis-tinc-tive (dī-stīngk'tiv) adj. 1. Serving to identify; distinguishing: distinctive tribal tattoos. See Usage Note at distinct. 2. Characteristic or typical: “Jerusalem has a distinctive Middle East flavor” (Curtis Wilkie). 3. Linguistics.

Phonemically relevant and capable of conveying a difference in meaning, as nasalization in the initial sound of mat versus bat. —dis-tinc'tive-ly adv.

—dis-tinc'tive-ness n.

dis-tin-gué (dēs'tāng-gā', dīs'-, dī-stāng'gā) adj. Distinguished in appearance, manner, or bearing. [French, past participle of distinguer, to distinguish, from Old French. See DISTINGUISH.]

dis·tin·guish (dĭ-stĭng'gwĭsh) v. dis·tin·guished, dis·tin·guish·ing, dis·tin·guish·es. — v. tr. 1. To perceive as being different or distinct. 2. To perceive distinctly; discern: distinguished the masts of ships on the horizon. 3. To make noticeable or different; set apart. 4. To cause (oneself) to be eminent or recognized: They have distinguished themselves as dedicated social workers. — v. intr. To perceive or indicate differences; discriminate: distinguish between right and wrong. [Alteration of obsolete distingue, from Middle English distinguen, from Old French distinguer, from Latin distinguere, to separate. See steig- in Appendix.] — dis·tin'guish·a·ble adj. — dis·tin'guish·a·bly adv.

dis·tin·guished (dĭ-stĭng'gwĭsh't) adj. 1. Characterized by excellence or distinction; eminent. 2. Dignified in conduct or appearance.

Dis·tin·guished Conduct Medal (dĭ-stĭng'gwĭsh't kən-dŭkt' mĕd'l) n. Abbr. DCM, D.C.M. A British military decoration for distinguished conduct in the field.

Distinguished Flying Cross (dĭ-stĭng'gwĭsh't flī'ing krōs) n. Abbr. DFC, D.F.C. 1. A U.S. military decoration awarded for heroism or extraordinary achievement in aerial combat. 2. A British military decoration awarded to officers of the Royal Air Force for extraordinary achievement.

Distinguished Service Cross (dĭ-stĭng'gwĭsh't sŭr'vĭs krōs) n. Abbr. DSC, D.S.C. 1. A U.S. Army decoration awarded for exceptional heroism in combat. 2. A British military decoration awarded to officers of the Royal Navy for gallantry in action.

Distinguished Service Medal (dĭ-stĭng'gwĭsh't sŭr'vĭs mĕd'l) n. Abbr. DSM, D.S.M. 1. A U.S. military decoration awarded for distinguished performance in a duty of great responsibility. 2. A British military decoration awarded to noncommissioned officers and men in the Royal Navy and Royal Marines for distinguished conduct in war.

Distinguished Service Order (dĭ-stĭng'gwĭsh't sŭr'vĭs ôr'dər) n. Abbr. DSO, D.S.O. A British military decoration for gallantry in action.

dis·tort (dĭ-stôrt') v. tr. dis·tort·ed, dis·tort·ing, dis·torts. 1. To twist out of a proper or natural relation of parts; misshape. 2. To give a false or misleading account of; misrepresent. 3. To cause to work in a twisted or disorderly manner; pervert. [Latin distorquĕre, distort- : dis-, apart; see DIS- + torquĕre, to twist; see terk^w- in Appendix.] — dis·tort'er n.

SYNONYMS: distort, twist, deform, contort, warp. These verbs mean to change and spoil the form or character of something. To distort is to alter in shape, as by torsion or wrenching; the term also applies to verbal or pictorial misrepresentation and to alteration or perversion of the meaning of something: “The human understanding is like a false mirror, which, receiving rays irregularly, distorts and discolors the nature of things by mingling its own nature with it” (Francis Bacon).

Twist applies to distortion of form or meaning: a mouth twisted with pain. He accused me of twisting his words to mean what I wanted them to. Deform refers to change that disfigures and often implies the loss of desirable qualities such as beauty: Great erosion deformed the landscape. "The earlier part of his discourse was deformed by pedantic divisions and subdivisions" (Macaulay). Contort implies violent change that produces unnatural or grotesque effects: a face contorted with rage; a contorted line of reasoning. Warp can refer to a turning or twisting from a flat or straight form (floorboards that had warped over the years). It also can imply the bending or turning of something from a true course or direction: Prejudice warps the judgment.

dis·tor·tion (dī-stôr'shən) n. 1. a. The act or an instance of distorting. b. The condition of being distorted. 2. A statement that twists fact; a misrepresentation. 3. A change in the shape of an image resulting from imperfections in an optical system, such as a lens. 4. Electronics. a. An undesired change in the waveform of a signal. b. A consequence of such a change, especially a lack of fidelity in reception or reproduction. 5. Psychology. The modification of unconscious impulses into forms acceptable by conscious or dreaming perception.

—dis·tor'tion·al, dis·tor'tion·ar'y adj.

dis·tor·tive (dī-stôr'tiv) adj. Serving to distort: harsh and distortive peaks in the recorded music; a robust fortissimo without distortive vibration.

distr. abbr. 1. Distribution. 2. Distributor.

dis·tract (dī-străkt') v. tr. dis·tract·ed, dis·tract·ing, dis·tracts. 1. To cause to turn away from the original focus of attention or interest; divert. 2. To pull in conflicting emotional directions; unsettle. [Middle English distracten, from Latin distrahere, distrāct-, to pull away : dis-, apart; see DIS- + trahere, to draw.]

—dis·tract'ing·ly adv. —dis·trac'tive adj.

dis·tract·ed (dī-străkt'tid) adj. 1. Having the attention diverted. 2. Suffering conflicting emotions; distraught. —dis·tract'ed·ly adv.

dis·tract·er also dis·trac·tor (dī-străkt'tər) n. One of the incorrect answers presented as a choice in a multiple-choice test.

dis·trac·tion (dī-străkt'shən) n. 1. The act of distracting or the condition of being distracted. 2. Something, especially an amusement, that distracts. 3. Extreme mental or emotional disturbance; obsession: loved the puppy to distraction.

dis·trac·tor (dī-străkt'tər) n. Variant of distracter.

dis·train (dī-strān') v. dis·trained, dis·train·ing, dis·trains. Law. — v. tr. 1. To seize and hold (property) to compel payment or reparation, as of debts. 2. To seize the property of (a person) in order to compel payment of debts; distress. — v. intr. To levy a distress. [Middle English distreinen, from Old French destreindre, destreign-, from Medieval Latin distringere, distrinct-, from Latin, to hinder : dis-, apart; see DIS- + stringere, to draw tight; see streig- in Appendix.]

—dis-train/a-ble adj. —dis-train/ment n. —dis-trai/nor, dis-train'er n.

dis-train-ee (dĭs'trā-nē') n. Law. One that has been distrained.

dis-traint (dĭ-strānt') n. Law. The act or process of distraining; distress. [From DISTRAIN.]

dis-trait (dĭ-strā') adj. Inattentive or preoccupied, especially because of anxiety: “When she did not occupy her accustomed chair at the seminar, Freud felt uneasy and distrait” (Times Literary Supplement). [Middle English, from Old French, past participle of distraine, to distract, from Latin distrāhere. See DISTRACT.]

dis-traught (dĭ-strôt') adj. 1. Deeply agitated, as from emotional conflict. See Synonyms at abstracted. 2. Mad; insane. [Middle English, alteration of distract, past participle of distracten, to distract. See DISTRACT.]

dis-tress (dĭ-strēs') v. tr. dis-tressed, dis-tress-ing, dis-tress-es. 1. To cause strain, anxiety, or suffering to. See Synonyms at trouble. 2. Law. To hold the property of (a person) against the payment of debts. 3. To mar or otherwise treat (an object or a fabric, for example) to give the appearance of an antique or of heavy prior use: “There are the fakes—new rugs which have been intentionally distressed for an older look” (Hatfield MA Valley Advocate). 4. Archaic. To constrain or overcome by harassment. — n. 1. Anxiety or mental suffering. 2. a. Severe strain resulting from exhaustion or an accident. b. Acute physical discomfort. c. Physical deterioration, as of a highway, caused by hard use over time: pavement distress. 3. The condition of being in need of immediate assistance: a motorist in distress. 4. Law. a. The act of distraining or seizing to compel payment. b. The goods thus seized. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: distress merchandise; a distress sale. [Middle English distressen, from Old French destresser, from destresse, constraint, from Vulgar Latin districtia*, from Latin districtus, past participle of distringere, to hinder. See DISTRAIN.] —dis-tress/ing-ly adv.

dis-tressed (dĭ-strēs't) adj. 1. Suffering distress: the distressed parents of wayward youths. 2. Damaged or previously used: distressed merchandise. 3. Having been foreclosed and offered for sale, usually at a price below market value: distressed real estate. 4. Intentionally marred or faded to convey an antique or a used look: distressed furniture; distressed denim.

dis-tress-ful (dĭ-strēs'fəl) adj. Causing or experiencing distress. —dis-tress/ful-ly adv. —dis-tress/ful-ness n.

distress signal (dĭ-strēs' sig'nəl) n. An international signal used by a distressed ship or aircraft to request help, as by radio broadcasts, flags, or flares.

dis-trib-u-tar-y (dĭ-strĭb'yə-tēr'ē) n. pl. dis-trib-u-tar-ies. A branch of a river that flows away from the main stream.

dis-trib-ute (dĭ-strĭb'yōt) v. dis-trib-ut-ed, dis-trib-ut-ing, dis-trib-utes. — v. tr. 1. To divide and dispense in portions. 2. a. To supply (goods) to retailers. b. To deliver or pass out: distributing handbills on the street. 3. a. To spread or diffuse over an area; scatter: distribute grass seed over the lawn. b. To apportion so as to be evenly spread throughout a given area: 180 pounds of muscle that were well distributed over his 6-foot frame. 4. To separate into categories; classify. 5. Logic. To use (a term) so as to include all individuals or entities of a given class. — v. intr. Mathematics. To be distributive. [Middle English distributen, from Latin distribuere, distribūt- : dis-, apart; see DIS- + tribuere, to give; see TRIBUTE.]

SYNONYMS: distribute, divide, dispense, dole, deal, ration. These verbs mean to give out in portions or shares. Distribute is the least specific: In the 19th century the government distributed land to settlers willing to cultivate it. Divide implies giving out portions, often equal, on the basis of a plan or purpose: The estate will be divided among the heirs. Dispense stresses the careful determination of portions, often according to measurement or weight: dispensing medication; dispensed tax dollars judiciously; dispense advice and sympathy. Dole, often followed by out, implies careful, usually sparing measurement of portions; it can refer to the distribution of charity (surplus milk and cheese doled out to the needy) but more often suggests lack of generosity: The professor seldom doled out praise, and even when he did it was with reluctance. Deal implies orderly, equitable distribution, often piece by piece: dealt out one hamburger each to the children. Ration refers to equitable division of scarce items, often necessities, in accordance with a system that limits individual portions: ration fuel in wartime; rationing water during the drought.

dis·tri·bu·tion (dĭs'trĭ-byōō'shən) n. Abbr. distr. 1. The act of distributing or the condition of being distributed; apportionment. 2. Something distributed; an allotment. 3. The act of dispersing or the condition of being dispersed; diffusion. 4. a. The geographic occurrence or range of an organism. b. The geographic occurrence or range of a custom, a usage, or another feature. 5. Division into categories; classification. 6. The process of marketing and supplying goods, especially to retailers. 7. A spatial or temporal array of objects or events: the distribution of theaters on Broadway. 8. Law. The division of an estate or property among rightful heirs. 9. Statistics. A set of numbers collected from a well-defined universe of possible measurements arising from a property or relationship under study. —dis'tri·bu'tion·al adj.

dis·trib·u·tive (dĭ-strĭb'yə-tĭv) adj. 1. a. Of, relating to, or involving distribution. b. Serving to distribute. 2. Mathematics. Of or relating to a rule that the same product results in multiplication when performed on a set of numbers as when performed on members of the set individually. If $a \times (b + c) = a \times b + a \times c$, then \times is distributive over $+$. 3. Grammar. Referring to each individual or entity of a group separately rather than collectively, as every in the sentence Every employee attended the meeting. — n. A distributive word or term.

—dis-trib'u-tive-ly adv. —dis-trib'u-tive-ness n.

distributive education (dī-strīb'yə-tīv ěj'ə-kā'shən) n. An educational program in which students receive both classroom instruction and on-the-job training.

dis-trib-u-tor (dī-strīb'yə-tər) n. Abbr. distr. 1. One that distributes, especially a device that applies electric current in proper sequence to the spark plugs of an engine. 2. One that markets or sells merchandise, especially a wholesaler.

—dis-trib'u-tor-ship' n.

dis-trict (dīs'trīkt) n. Abbr. dist. 1. A division of an area, as for administrative purposes. 2. A region or locality marked by a distinguishing feature: went to the lake district for their vacation. See Synonyms at area. — v. tr. dis-trict-ed, dis-trict-ing, dis-tricts. To mark off or divide into districts. [French, from Old French, from Medieval Latin districtus, from Latin, past participle of distringere, to hinder. See DISTRAIN.] —dis'trict-wide' adv. & adj.

district attorney (dīs'trīkt ə-tūr'nē) n. Abbr. D.A., DA, Dist. Atty. Law. The prosecuting officer of a judicial district.

district court (dīs'trīkt kôrt) n. Law. 1. A U.S. federal trial court serving a judicial district. 2. A state court of general jurisdiction in some states.

Dis-trict of Co-lum-bi-a (dīs'trīkt' ūf kə-lŭm'bē-ə) Abbr. DC, D.C. A federal district of the eastern United States on the Potomac River between Virginia and Maryland. Coextensive with the city of Washington, it was established by congressional acts of 1790 and 1791 on a site selected by George Washington.

dis-trust (dīs-trŭst') n. Lack of trust or confidence. — v. tr. dis-trust-ed, dis-trust-ing, dis-trusts. To have no confidence in.

dis-trust-ful (dīs-trŭst'fəl) adj. Feeling or showing doubt. —dis-trust'ful-ly adv. —dis-trust'ful-ness n.

dis-turb (dī-stŭrb') v. tr. dis-turbed, dis-turb-ing, dis-turbs. 1. To break up or destroy the tranquillity or settled state of: "Subterranean fires and deep unrest disturb the whole area" (Rachel Carson). 2. To trouble emotionally or mentally; upset. 3. a. To interfere with; interrupt: noise that disturbed my sleep. b. To intrude on; inconvenience: Constant calls disturbed her work. 4. To put out of order; disarrange. [Middle English distourben, from Old French destourber, from Latin disturbāre: Latin dis-, dis- + Latin turbāre, to agitate (from turba, confusion, probably from Greek turbē).] —dis-turb'er n. —dis-turb'ing-ly adv.

dis-tur-bance (dī-stŭrb'əns) n. 1. a. The act of disturbing. b. The condition of being disturbed: "The forest... is in various stages of disturbance. Only the biggest trees... have been left standing" (Alex Shoumatoff). 2. Something that disturbs, as a commotion, scuffle, or public tumult. 3. Mental or emotional unbalance or disorder. 4. A variation in normal wind conditions. 5. Geology. Folding or faulting that affects a relatively large area.

di-sul-fide (dī-sŭl'fīd') n. A chemical compound containing two sulfur atoms combined with other elements or radicals. Also called bisulfide di-sul-fo-ton (dī-sŭl'fə-tŏn') n. A pale yellow, highly toxic systemic insecticide, C₈H₁₉O₂PS₃, used for some vegetables and flowers. [di(ethyl), containing two ethyls (DI⁻¹ + ETHYL) + SULFO- + probably t(hi)on(ate), salt or ester of a thionic acid (THION- + -ATE²).]

dis-un-ion (dīs-yŏŏn'yən) n. 1. The state of being disunited; separation.

2. Lack of unity; discord.

dis-un-ion-ist (dīs-yŏŏn'yə-nīst) n. An advocate of disunion, especially a secessionist during the U.S. Civil War.

dis-u-nite (dīs'yŏŏ-nīt') v. tr. intr. dis-u-nit-ed, dis-u-nit-ing, dis-u-nites. To separate or become separate.

dis-u-ni-ty (dīs-yŏŏ'nī-tē) n. pl. dis-u-ni-ties. Lack of unity.

dis-use (dīs-yŏŏs') n. The state of not being used or of being no longer in use.

dis-u-til-i-ty (dīs'yŏŏ-tīl'ī-tē) n. The state or fact of being useless or counter-productive.

dis-val-ue (dīs-vāl'yŏŏ) v. tr. dis-val-ued, dis-val-u-ing, dis-val-ues. 1. To regard as of little or no value. 2. Archaic. To disparage. — n. 1. A negative value of something. 2. Obsolete. Disesteem.

di-syl-la-ble also dis-syl-la-ble (dī'sīl'ə-bəl, dī-sīl'-, dī-) n. Linguistics. A word with two syllables. — di'syl-lab'ic (dī'sī-lāb'īk, dīs'sī-) adj.

dit (dīt) n. The spoken representation of the dot in radio and telegraph code. [Imitative.]

ditch (dīch) n. A long narrow trench or furrow dug in the ground, as for irrigation, drainage, or a boundary line. — v. ditched, ditch-ing, ditch-es. — v. tr. 1. To dig or make a long narrow trench or furrow in. 2. To surround with a long narrow trench or furrow. 3. a. To drive (a vehicle) into a long narrow trench, as one beside a road. b. To derail (a train). 4. Slang. a. To get rid of; discard: ditched the old yard furniture. b. To get away from (a person, especially a companion). c. To skip (class or school). 5. To crash-land (an aircraft) on water. — v. intr. 1. To dig a ditch. 2. To crash-land in water. Used of an aircraft or a pilot. [Middle English dich, from Old English dīc. See dhīg^{w-} in Appendix.]

dith-er (dīth'ər) n. A state of indecisive agitation. — v. intr. dith-ered, dith-er-ing, dith-ers. To be nervously irresolute in acting or doing. [Alteration of didder, from Middle English didderen, to tremble.]

dith-y-ramb (dīth'y-rām', -rāmb') n. 1. A frenzied, impassioned choric hymn and dance of ancient Greece in honor of Dionysus. 2. An irregular poetic expression suggestive of the ancient Greek dithyramb. 3. A wildly enthusiastic speech or piece of writing. [Latin dithyrambus, from Greek dithurambos.]

—dith'y-ramb'ic adj.

Dit·mars (dīt'märz'), Raymond Lee. 1876-1942. American naturalist and writer who was a noted authority on reptiles.

dit·sy also dit·zy (dīt'sē) adj. dit·si·er also dit·zi·er, dit·si·est also dit·zi·est. Slang. Eccentrically scatterbrained or inane: “Needless to say, this ditsy crew succeeds in spite of itself” (David Ansen). [Perhaps blend of DOTTY + DIZZY.]

dit·ta·ny (dīt'n-ē) n. pl. dit·ta·nies. 1. An aromatic woolly plant (Origanum dictamnus) native to Crete, formerly believed to have magical powers. 2. See stone mint. 3. See gas plant. [Middle English ditaine, from Old French ditan, from Latin dictamnus, from Greek diktamnon, perhaps after Mount Diktē (Dhikti), a peak in eastern Crete.]

Dit·ters·dorf (dīt'ərz-dôrf', -ərs-), Karl Ditters von. 1739-1799. Austrian violinist and composer who is considered a precursor of Mozart in his use of operatic and symphonic forms.

dit·to (dīt'ō) n. pl. dit·tos. Abbr. do. 1. The same as stated above or before. 2. A duplicate; a copy. 3. A pair of small marks (“”) used to indicate that the word, phrase, or figure given above is to be repeated. — adv. As before. — v. tr. dit·toed, dit·to·ing, dit·tos. To duplicate (a document, for example). [Italian dialectal, past participle of Italian dire, to say, from Latin dīcere. See deik- in Appendix.]

WORD HISTORY: Ditto, which at first glance seems a handy and insignificant sort of word, actually has a Roman past, for it comes from dictus, “having been said,” the past participle of the verb dīcere, “to say.” In Italian dīcere became dire and dictus became detto, or in the Tuscan dialect ditto. Italian detto or ditto meant what said does in English, as in the locution “the said story.” Thus in a construction such as December 22 the word detto or ditto could be used by itself instead of the month name at the next mention of a date in the same month, for example, 26 detto. The first recorded use (1625) of ditto occurs in English in such a construction. The sense “copy” is an English development, first recorded in 1818. Ditto has even become a trademark for a duplicating machine, something that has not happened to said yet.

dit·ty (dīt'ē) n. pl. dit·ties. A simple song. [Middle English dite, a literary composition, from Old French dite, from Latin dictātum, thing dictated, from past participle of dictāre, to dictate frequentative of dīcere, to say. See deik- in Appendix.]

ditty bag (dīt'ē bǎg) n. A bag used by armed forces personnel to carry small items such as sewing implements. [Origin unknown.]

dit·zy (dīt'sē) adj. Slang. Variant of ditsy.

Di·u (dē'ōō) An island of western India northwest of Bombay. A Portuguese possession after 1535, Diu was invaded by India in 1961 and annexed the following year.

di·u·re·sis (dī'ə-rē'sīs) n. Excessive discharge of urine. [New Latin, from Late Latin diūrēticus, diuretic. See DIURETIC.]

di·u·ret·ic (dī'ə-rēt'ik) adj. Tending to increase the discharge of urine. — n. A substance or drug that tends to increase the discharge of urine. [Middle English diuretik, from Old French diuretique, from Late Latin diūrēticus, from Greek diourētikos, from diourein, to pass urine : dia-, dia- + ourein, to urinate.] — di'·u·ret'ic·al·ly adv.

di·ur·nal (dī-ūr'nəl) adj. 1. Relating to or occurring in a 24-hour period; daily. 2. Occurring or active during the daytime rather than at night: diurnal animals. 3. Botany. Opening during daylight hours and closing at night. — n. 1. A book containing all the offices for the daily canonical hours of prayer except matins. 2. Archaic. a. A diary or journal. b. A daily newspaper. [Middle English, from Late Latin diurnālis, from Latin diurnus, from diēs, day. See deiw- in Appendix.] — di·ur'nal·ly adv.

di·u·ron (dī'ə-rŏn') n. A white, crystalline solid, C₉H₁₀Cl₂N₂O, used as an agricultural herbicide. [DI⁻¹ + UR(EA) + -ON³.]

div. abbr. 1. Divergence; divergency. 2. Diversion. 3. Divided; division. 4. Dividend. 5. Divorced.

di·va (dē'və) n. pl. di·vas or di·ve (-vā). Music. An operatic prima donna. [Italian, from Latin dīva, goddess, feminine of dīvus, god. See deiw- in Appendix.]

di·va·gate (dī'və-gāt', dīv'ə-) v. intr. di·va·gat·ed, di·va·gat·ing, di·va·gates. 1. To wander or drift about. 2. To ramble; digress. [Late Latin dīvagārī, dīvagāt- : Latin dī-, dis-, apart; see DIS- + Latin vagārī, to wander (from vagus, wandering).] — di'·va·ga'tion n.

di·va·lent (dī-vā'lənt) adj. Having a valence of 2.

di·van (dī-vān') n. 1. (also dī'vān') A long backless sofa, especially one set with pillows against a wall. 2. (also dī-vān', dī-vān') a. A counting room, tribunal, or public audience room in Muslim countries. b. The seat used by an administrator when holding audience. c. A government bureau or council chamber. 3. (also dī-vān', dī-vān') A coffeehouse or smoking room. 4. (also dī-vān', dī-vān') A book of poems, especially one written in Arabic or Persian by a single author. [French, from Turkish, from Persian dīvān, place of assembly, roster, probably from Old Iranian dīpivahanam*, document house : Old Persian dīpī-, writing, document (from Akkadian tuppu, tablet, letter, from Sumerian dub, to write) + Old Persian vahanam, house; see wes-¹ in Appendix.]

di·var·i·cate (dī-vār'i-kāt', dī-) v. intr. di·var·i·cat·ed, di·var·i·cat·ing, di·var·i·cates. To diverge at a wide angle; spread apart. — adj. (dī-vār'ə-kīt, - kāt', dī-) 1. Biology. Branching or spreading widely from a point or axis, as branches or on an insect's wings; diverging. 2. Relating to a separation of two bones normally adjacent or attached but not located in a joint; distatic. [Latin dīvāricāre, dīvāricāt-: dī, dis-, dis- + vāricāre, to straddle (from vārus, bent).]

—di·var'i·cate'ly adv.

di·var·i·ca·tion (dī-vār'ī-kā'shən, dī-) n. 1. The act of divaricating. 2. The point at which branching occurs. 3. A divergence of opinion.

dive¹ (dīv) v. dived or dove (dōv), dived, div-ing, dives. — v. intr.

1. a. To plunge, especially headfirst, into water. b. To execute a dive in athletic competition. c. To participate in the sport of competitive diving. 2. a. To go toward the bottom of a body of water; submerge. b. To engage in the activity of scuba diving. c. To submerge under power. Used of a submarine. 3. a. To fall head down through the air. b. To descend nose down at an acceleration usually exceeding that of free fall. Used of an airplane. c. To engage in the sport of skydiving. 4. To drop sharply and rapidly; plummet: Stock prices dove 100 points in a single day of trading. 5. a. To rush headlong and vanish into: dive into a crowd. b. To plunge one's hand into. 6. To lunge: dove for the loose ball. 7. To plunge into an activity or enterprise with vigor and gusto. — v. tr. To cause (an aircraft, for example) to dive. — n. 1. a. A plunge into water, especially done headfirst and in a way established for athletic competition. b. The act or an instance of submerging, as of a submarine or a skin diver. c. A nearly vertical descent at an accelerated speed through the air. d. A quick, pronounced drop. 2. Slang. A disreputable or run-down bar or nightclub. 3. A knockout feigned by prearrangement between prizefighters: The challenger took a dive. 4. a. A lunge or a headlong jump: made a dive to catch the falling teacup. b. Football. An offensive play in which the carrier of the ball plunges into the opposing line in order to gain short yardage. [Middle English dīven, from Old English dýfan, to dip, and from dūfan, to sink; see dheub- in Appendix.]

USAGE NOTE: Either dove or dived is acceptable as the past tense of dive. Dived is actually the earlier form, and the emergence of dove may appear anomalous in light of the general tendencies of change in English verb forms. Old English had two classes of verbs: strong verbs, whose past tense was indicated by a change in their vowel (a process that survives in such present-day English verbs as drive/drove or fling/flung); and weak verbs, whose past was formed with a suffix related to -ed in Modern English (as in present-day English live/lived and move/moved). Since the Old English period, many verbs have changed from the strong pattern to the weak one; for example, the past tense of help, formerly healp, became helped, and the past tense of step, formerly stop, became stepped. Over the years, in fact, the weak pattern has become so prevalent that we use the term regular to refer to verbs that form their past tense by suffixation of -ed. However, there have occasionally been changes in the other direction: the past tense of wear, now wore, was once werede; that of spit, now spat, was once spitede; and the development of dove is an additional example of the small group of verbs that have swum against the historical tide.

di·ve² (dē'vā) n. Music. A plural of diva.

dive-bomb (dīv'bŏm') v. tr. dive--bombed, dive--bomb-ing, dive--bombs. To bomb from an airplane at the end of a steep dive toward the target. —dive'-bomb'er n.

dive brake (dīv brāk) n. A flap that can be extended on an aircraft to increase drag and reduce the speed of descent.

div·er (dī'vər) n. 1. One that dives: a high diver who excelled in performing the jackknife. 2. One that works under water, especially one equipped with breathing apparatus and weighted clothing. 3. Any of several diving water birds, especially the loon.

di·verge (dī-vûrj', dī-) v. di-verged, di-verg-ing, di-verg-es. — v. intr.

1. To go or extend in different directions from a common point; branch out.

2. To differ, as in opinion or manner. 3. To depart from a set course or norm; deviate. See Synonyms at swerve. 4. Mathematics. To fail to approach a limit, as an infinite sequence. — v. tr. To cause (light rays, for example) to diverge; deflect. [Latin dīvergere: Latin dis-, apart; see DIS- + Latin vergere, to bend; see wer-² in Appendix.]

di·ver·gence (dī-vûr'jəns, dī-) n. Abbr. div. 1. a. The act of diverging. b. The state of being divergent. c. The degree by which things diverge. 2. Physiology. A turning of both eyes outward from a common point or of one eye when the other is fixed. 3. Departure from a norm; deviation. 4. Difference, as of opinion. See Synonyms at deviation. See Synonyms at difference. 5. Biology. The evolutionary tendency or process by which animals or plants that are descended from a common ancestor evolve into different forms when living under different conditions. 6. Mathematics. The property or manner of diverging; failure to approach a limit. 7. A meteorological condition characterized by the uniform expansion in volume of a mass of air over a region, usually accompanied by fair dry weather.

di·ver·gen·cy (dī-vûr'jən-sē) n. pl. di-ver-gen-cies. Abbr. div. Divergence.

di·ver·gent (dī-vûr'jənt, dī-) adj. 1. Drawing apart from a common point; diverging. 2. Departing from convention. 3. Differing from another: a divergent opinion. 4. Mathematics. Failing to approach a limit; not convergent.

—di-ver'gent-ly adv.

di·vers (dī'vərz) adj. Various; several; sundry. [Middle English. See DIVERSE.]

di·verse (dī-vûrs', dī-, dī'vûrs') adj. 1. Differing one from another. 2. Made up of distinct characteristics, qualities, or elements: "Prague... offers visitors a series of excursions into a rich and diverse past" (Olivier Bernier). [Middle English divers, from Old French divers, from Latin dīversus, past participle of dīvertere, to divert. See DIVERT.] —di-verse/ly adv. —di-verse/ness n.

di-ver-si-form (dī-vûr'sə-fôrm', dī-) adj. Having different forms; variform.

di-ver-si-fy (dī-vûr'sə-fī', dī-) v. di-ver-si-fied, di-ver-si-fy-ing, di-ver-si-fies. — v. tr. 1. a. To give variety to; vary: diversify a menu. b. To extend (business activities) into disparate fields. 2. To distribute (investments) among different companies or securities in order to limit losses in the event of a fall in a particular market or industry. — v. intr. To spread out activities or investments, especially in business. [Middle English diversifien, from Old French diversifier, from Medieval Latin dīversificāre : Latin dīversus; see DIVERSE + Latin -ficāre, -fy.] —di-ver'si-fi-ca'tion (-fī-kā'shən) n.

di-ver-sion (dī-vûr'zhən, -shən, dī-) n. Abbr. div. 1. The act or an instance of diverting or turning aside; deviation. 2. Something that distracts the mind and relaxes or entertains. 3. A maneuver that draws the attention of an opponent away from a planned point of action, especially as part of military strategy. [Late Latin dīversiō, dīversiōn-, act of turning aside, from Latin dīversus, past participle of dīvertere, to divert. See DIVERT.] —di-ver'sion-ar'y adj.

di-ver-sion-ist (dī-vûr'zhə-nĭst, -shə-, dī-) n. One engaged in diversionary, disruptive, or subversive activities.

di-ver-si-ty (dī-vûr'sī-tē, dī-) n. pl. di-ver-si-ties. 1. a. The fact or quality of being diverse; difference. b. A point or respect in which things differ. 2. Variety or multiformity: "Charles Darwin saw in the diversity of species the principles of evolution that operated to generate the species: variation, competition and selection" (Scientific American).

di-vert (dī-vûrt', dī-) v. di-vert-ed, di-vert-ing, di-verts. — v. tr. 1. To turn aside from a course or direction: Traffic was diverted around the scene of the accident. 2. To distract: My attention was diverted by an argument between motorists. 3. To entertain by distracting the attention from worrisome thoughts or cares; amuse. See Synonyms at amuse. — v. intr. To turn aside. [Middle English diverten, from Old French divertir, from Latin dīvertere : dī-, dis-, aside; see DIS- + vertere, to turn; see ver-² in Appendix.] —di-vert'er n. —di-vert/ing-ly adv.

di-ver-tic-u-la (dī'vûr-tĭk'yə-lə) n. Plural of diverticulum.

di-ver-tic-u-li-tis (dī'vûr-tĭk'yə-lĭ'tĭs) n. Inflammation of a diverticulum or of diverticula in the intestinal tract, causing fecal stagnation and pain.

di-ver-tic-u-lo-sis (dī'vûr-tĭk'yə-lō'sis) n. A condition characterized by the presence of numerous diverticula in the colon.

di-ver-tic-u-lum (dī'vûr-tĭk'yə-ləm) n. pl. di-ver-tic-u-la (-lə). A pouch or sac branching out from a hollow organ or structure, such as the intestine. [New Latin, from Latin dēverticulum, by-path, from dēvertere, to turn aside : dē-, de- + vertere, to turn; see DIVERT.] —di'ver-tic'u-lar adj.

di-ver-ti-men-to (dī-vēr'tə-mĕn'tō) n. pl. di-ver-ti-men-tos also di-ver-ti-men-ti (-tē). Music. A chiefly 18th-century form of instrumental chamber music having several short movements. Also called divertissement [Italian, from divertire, to divert, from Old French divertir. See DIVERT.] di-ver-tisse-ment (də-vûr'tis-mənt, də-vĕr-tēs-män') n. 1. A short performance, typically a ballet, that is presented as an interlude in an opera or a play. 2. Music. See divertimento. 3. A diversion; an amusement. [French, from divertir, to divert, from Old French. See DIVERT.]

Di-ves (dī'vĕz') n. A man of great wealth. [Middle English, from Latin dīves. See deiw- in Appendix.]

di-vest (dī-vĕst', dī-) v. tr. di-vest-ed, di-vest-ing, di-vests. 1. To strip, as of clothes. 2. a. To deprive, as of rights or property; dispossess. See Synonyms at strip¹. b. To free of; rid: "Most secretive of men, let him at last divest himself of secrets, both his and ours" (Brendan Gill). 3. To sell off or otherwise dispose of (a subsidiary company or an investment). 4. Law. To divest. [Alteration (influenced by Medieval Latin dīvestīre, to undress); see DIVESTITURE, of DEVEST.]

—di-vest'ment n.

di-ves-ti-ture (dī-vĕs'tī-chər, -chōr', dī-) n. 1. An act of divesting. 2. The sale, liquidation, or spinoff of a corporate division or subsidiary. [From Medieval Latin dīvestītus, past participle of dīvestīre, to undress, variant of disvestīre: Latin dis-, dis- + Latin vestīre, to dress; see VESTMENT.]

di-vid (dī-vīd') v. di-vid-ed, di-vid-ing, di-vides. — v. tr. 1. a. To separate into parts, sections, groups, or branches. See Synonyms at separate. b. To sector into units of measurement; graduate. c. To separate and group according to kind; classify. 2. a. To separate into opposing factions; disunite: "They want not to divide either the Revolution or the Church but to be an integral part of both" (Conor Cruise O'Brien). b. To cause (members of a parliament) to vote by separating into groups, as pro and con. 3. To separate from something else; cut off: divided the boys from the girls for gym class. 4. To apportion among a number. See Synonyms at distribute. 5. Mathematics. a. To subject to the process of division. b. To be an exact divisor of. — v. intr. 1. a. To become separated into parts. b. To branch out, as a river. c. To form into factions; take sides. d. To vote by dividing. 2. Mathematics. To perform the operation of division.

3. Biology. To undergo cell division. — n. 1. A dividing point or line: "would clearly tip the court... across a dangerous constitutional divide" (Lawrence H. Tribe). 2. A ridge of land; a watershed. [Middle English dividen, from Latin dīvidere: dī-, dis-, dis- + -videre, to separate.] —di-vid'a-ble adj.

di-vid-ed (dī-vī'dĭd) adj. Abbr. div. 1. Separated into parts or pieces. 2. Being in a state of disagreement or disunity: a divided nation. 3. Moved by conflicting interests, emotions, or activities: divided loyalties. 4. Separated by distance: a child divided from her familiar surroundings. 5. Having the lanes for opposing traffic separated: divided highways. 6. Botany. Having indentations extending to the midrib or base and forming distinct lobes: divided leaves.

div-i-dend (dĭv'ī-dĕnd') n. Abbr. div. 1. Mathematics. A quantity to be divided. 2. a. A share of profits received by a stockholder or by a policyholder in a mutual insurance society. b. A payment pro rata to a creditor of a person adjudged bankrupt. 3. a. A share of a surplus; a bonus. b. An unexpected gain, benefit, or advantage. [Alteration (influenced by French dividende, dividend), of Middle English divident, from Latin dīvidēns, dīvident- present participle of dīvidere, to divide. See DIVIDE.]

di-vid-er (dĭ-vī'dər) n. 1. a. One that divides, especially a screen or other partition. b. Chiefly British. A highway median strip. 2. A device resembling a compass, used for dividing lines and transferring measurements.

div-i-div-i (dĭv'ē-dĭv'ē) n. pl. div-i-div-is. 1. A small tree (Caesalpinia coriaria) of the West Indies and South America, having compound leaves and long pods. 2. Tannin extracted from the pods of this tree. [Spanish dividivi, probably of Cariban or Arawakan origin.]

div-i-na-tion (dĭv'ə-nā'shən) n. 1. The art or act of foretelling future events or revealing occult knowledge by means of augury or an alleged supernatural agency. 2. An inspired guess or presentiment. 3. Something that has been divined. — di-vin'a-to'ry (dĭ-vĭn'ə-tōr'ē, -tōr'ē) adj.

di-vine (dĭ-vīn') adj. di-vin-er, di-vin-est. 1. a. Having the nature of or being a deity. b. Of, relating to, emanating from, or being the expression of a deity: sought divine guidance through meditation. c. Being in the service or worship of a deity; sacred. 2. Superhuman; godlike. 3. a. Supremely good or beautiful; magnificent: a divine performance of the concerto. b. Extremely pleasant; delightful: had a divine time at the ball. 4. Heavenly; perfect. — n. 1. A cleric. 2. A theologian. — v. di-vined, di-vin-ing, di-vines. — v. tr. 1. To foretell through or as if through the art of divination. See Synonyms at foretell. 2. a. To know by inspiration, intuition, or reflection. b. To guess. 3. To locate (underground water or minerals) with a divining rod; douse. — v. intr. 1. To practice divination. 2. To guess. [Middle English, from Old French devine, from Latin dīvīnus, divine, foreseeing, from dīvus, god; see deiw- in Appendix. V., Middle English divinen from Old French deviner, from Latin dīvīnāre, from dīvīnus, foreseeing.] — di-vine'ly adv. — di-vine'ness n. — di-vin'er n.

Di-vine Liturgy (dĭ-vīn' lĭt'ər-jĕ) n. The Eastern Orthodox Eucharistic rite.

Divine Office (dĭ-vīn' ô'fĭs) n. The office of the breviary.

divine right (dĭ-vīn' rīt) n. The doctrine that monarchs derive their right to rule directly from God and are accountable only to God.

div-ing beetle (dĭv'ĭng bĕt'l) n. Any of various predatory aquatic beetles of the family Dytiscidae.

diving bell (dī'vɪŋ bɛl) n. A large vessel for underwater work, open on the bottom and supplied with air under pressure.

diving board (dī'vɪŋ bɔrd) n. Sports. A flexible board from which a dive may be executed, secured at one end and projecting over water at the other. Also called springboard diving reflex (dī'vɪŋ rē'flɛks') n. A reflexive response to diving in many aquatic mammals and birds, characterized by physiological changes that decrease oxygen consumption, such as slowed heart rate and decreased blood flow to the abdominal organs and muscles, until breathing resumes. Though less pronounced, the reflex also occurs in certain nonaquatic animals, including human beings, upon submersion in water.

diving suit (dī'vɪŋ sōt) n. A heavy waterproof garment with a detachable air-fed helmet, used for underwater work.

di·vin·ing rod (dī-vī'nɪŋ rɔd) n. A forked branch or stick that is believed to indicate subterranean water or minerals by bending downward when held over a source.

di·vin·i·ty (dī-vɪn'ī-tē) n. pl. di·vin·i·ties. 1. The state or quality of being divine. 2. a. Divinity. godhead; God. b. A deity, such as a god or goddess. Used with the. 3. Godlike character. 4. Theology. 5. A soft, white candy, usually containing nuts.

Di·vi·nó·po·lis (dē'vē-nô'pō-lēs) A city of southeast Brazil west-southwest of Belo Horizonte. It is a railroad junction and an agricultural trade center. Population, 108,279.

di·vis·i·ble (dī-vɪz'ə-bəl) adj. Capable of being divided, especially with no remainder: 15 is divisible by 3 and 5. —di·vis'·i·bil'·i·ty, di·vis'·i·ble·ness n. —di·vis'·i·bly adv.

di·vi·sion (dī-vɪzh'ən) n. Abbr. div. 1. a. The act or process of dividing. b. The state of having been divided. 2. The proportional distribution of a quantity or entity. 3. Something, such as a boundary or partition, that serves to divide or keep separate. 4. One of the parts, sections, or groups into which something is divided. 5. a. An area of government or corporate activity organized as an administrative or functional unit. b. A territorial section marked off for political or governmental purposes. 6. a. An administrative and tactical military unit that is smaller than a corps but is self-contained and equipped for prolonged combat activity. b. A group of several ships of similar type forming a tactical unit under a single command in the U.S. Navy. c. A unit of the U.S. Air Force larger than a wing and smaller than an air force. 7. Botany. The highest taxonomic category, consisting of one or more related classes, and corresponding approximately to a phylum in zoological classification. See Table at taxonomy. 8. A category created for purposes of competition, as in boxing. 9. a. Variance of opinion; disagreement. b. A splitting into factions; disunion. 10. The physical separation and regrouping of members of a parliament according to their stand on an issue put to vote. 11. Mathematics. The operation of determining how many times one quantity is contained in another; the inverse of multiplication. 12. Biology. Cell division. 13. A type of propagation characteristic of plants that spread by means of newly formed parts such as bulbs, suckers, or rhizomes. [Middle English divisioun, from Old French division, from Latin divisiō, divisiōn-, from divisus, past participle of dividere, to divide. See DIVIDE.] —di-vi'sion-al adj.

di-vi-sion-ism (də-vīzh'ə-nīz'əm) n. A branch of neoimpressionism in which colors are divided into their components and mechanically arranged so that the eye organizes the shape. —di-vi'sion-ist n.

division sign (dī-vīzh'ən sīn) n. Mathematics. 1. The symbol (÷) placed between two quantities written on a single line to indicate the division of the first by the second. 2. The symbol (/) placed between two quantities written horizontally, as in 3, or the symbol (—) placed between two quantities written vertically, as in 3, to indicate a fraction.

di-vi-sive (dī-vī'sīv) adj. Creating dissension or discord. —di-vi'sive-ly adv. —di-vi'sive-ness n.

di-vi-sor (dī-vī'zər) n. Mathematics. The quantity by which another quantity, the dividend, is to be divided.

di-vo-rcé (dī-vôrs', -vôrs') n. 1. The legal dissolution of a marriage. 2. A complete or radical severance of closely connected things. — v. di-vo-rced, di-vo-rc-ing, di-vo-rc-es. — v. tr. 1. To dissolve the marriage bond between. 2. To end marriage with (one's spouse) by way of legal divorce. 3. To cut off; separate or disunite: an idea that was completely divorced from reality. See Synonyms at separate. — v. intr. To obtain a divorce. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin divortium, from divortere, to divert, variant of divertere. See DIVERT.]

di-vo-rc-é (dī-vôr-sā', -sē', -vôr-, -vôr'sā', -sē', -vôr'-) n. A divorced man. [French, masculine past participle of divorcer, to divorce, from Old French, from divorce, divorce. See DIVORCE.]

di-vo-rc-ée (dī-vôr-sā', -sē', -vôr-, -vôr'sā', -sē', -vôr'-) n. A divorced woman. [French, feminine past participle of divorcer, to divorce, from Old French, from divorce, divorce. See DIVORCE.]

di-vo-rc-ement (dī-vôrs'mənt, -vôrs'-) n. Complete separation.

div-ot (dīv'ət) n. 1. Sports. A piece of turf torn up by a golf club in striking a ball. 2. Scots. A thin square of turf or sod used for roofing. [Scots, a turf.]

di-vulge (dī-vŭlj') v. tr. di-vulged, di-vulg-ing, di-vulg-es. 1. To make known (something private or secret). See Synonyms at reveal¹. 2. Archaic. To proclaim publicly. [Middle English divulgen, from Old French divulguer, from Latin divulgāre, to publish : dī-, dis-, among; see DIS- + vulgāre, to spread among the multitude (from vulgus, common people).] —di-vul'gence n.

—di-vulger n.

div-vy (dīv'ē) Slang. v. tr. div-vied, div-vy-ing, div-vies. To divide: divvied up the loot. — n. pl. div-vies. A share or portion. [Shortening and alteration of DIVIDEND.]

Dix (dīks), Dorothea Lynde. 1802-1887. American philanthropist, reformer, and educator who was a pioneer in the movement for specialized treatment of the mentally ill.

Dix (dīks), Dorothy. See Elizabeth Meriwether Gilmer.

Dix·ie¹ (dīk'sē) A region of the southern and eastern United States, usually comprising the states that joined the Confederacy during the Civil War. The term was popularized in the minstrel song “Dixie’s Land,” written by Daniel D. Emmett (1815-1904) in 1859.

Dix·ie² (dīk'sē) n. Any one of several songs bearing this name, popular as Confederate war songs. —idiom. whistle Dixie. Slang. To engage in unrealistically rosy fantasizing: “If you think mass transportation is going to replace the automobile I think you’re whistling Dixie” (Henry Ford II). [After Dixie¹.]

Dix·ie·crat (dīk'sē-krāt') n. A member of a dissenting group of Democrats in the South who formed the States’ Rights Party in 1948. [Dixie¹ + (DEMO)CRAT.] —Dix'ie·crat'ic adj.

Dix·ie·land (dīk'sē-länd') n. Music. A style of instrumental jazz associated with New Orleans and characterized by a relatively fast two-beat rhythm and by group and solo improvisations.

Dix·on (dīk'sən) A city of northern Illinois south-southwest of Rockford. Founded in 1830, it is a manufacturing center. Population, 15,144.

Di·yar·ba·kir (dī-yār'bə-kîr', dē-yār'bük-ər) A city of southeast Turkey on the Tigris River. It was a Roman colony called Amida from A.D. 230 to 363 and was finally captured by the Ottoman Turks in 1515. Population, 235,617.

di·zen (dī'zən, dīz'ən) v. tr. di-zened, di-zen-ing, di-zens. Archaic. To deck out in fine clothes and ornaments; bedizen. [Possibly Middle Dutch disen, to prepare a distaff with flax for spinning, from Middle Low German dise, disene, bunch of flax.] —di'zen·ment n.

di·zy·got·ic (dī'zī-gōt'ik) or di·zy·gous (dī'zī'gəs) adj. Derived from two separately fertilized eggs. Used especially of fraternal twins.

diz·zy (dīz'ē) adj. diz·zi·er, diz·zi·est. 1. Having a whirling sensation and a tendency to fall. See Synonyms at giddy. 2. Bewildered or confused.

3. a. Producing or tending to produce giddiness: a dizzy height. b. Caused by giddiness; reeling. 4. Characterized by impulsive haste; very rapid: “The American language had begun its dizzy onward march before the Revolution” (H.L. Mencken). 5. Slang. Scatterbrained or silly. — v. tr. diz·zied, diz·zy·ing, diz·zies. 1. To make dizzy. 2. To confuse or bewilder. [Middle English dusie, disi, from Old English dysig, foolish.] —diz'zi-ly adv. —diz'zi-ness n.

—diz'zy-ing-ly adv.

dj abbr. Dust jacket.

DJ abbr. Disc jockey.

D.J. abbr. 1. Law. District judge. 2. Latin. Doctor Juris (Doctor of Law).

Dja-kar-ta (jə-kär'tə) See Jakarta.

djel-la-ba or djel-la-bah also jel-la-ba (jə-lä'bə) or ga-la-bi-a (-bē-ə) n. A long, loose, hooded garment with full sleeves, worn especially in Muslim countries. [French, from Arabic jallābīyah, from jallāb, attractive.]

Dji-bou-ti (jī-bōō'tē) 1. or Formerly A-fars and Is-sas (ə-färs'; ī'səs) A country of eastern Africa on the Gulf of Aden. A French colony from 1896 until 1946 and a territory thereafter, it became independent in 1977. Population, 226,000. 2. The capital and largest city of Djibouti, in the southeast part of the country on an inlet of the Gulf of Aden. It was founded by the French in 1888. Population, 120,000.

Dji-las (jil'äs), Milovan. 1911-1995. Yugoslavian writer and politician who was a prominent member of Tito's resistance movement during World War II and later held high government and Communist Party positions before his dismissal in 1954 for criticizing the regime.

djin-ni or djin-ny (jīn'ē, jī-nē') n. Variant of jinni.

Djok-ja-kar-ta (jök'yə-kär'tə) See Jogjakarta.

dk. abbr. 1. Dark. 2. Deck. 3. Dock.

dkg abbr. Dekagram.

dkl abbr. Dekaliter.

dkm abbr. Dekameter.

dl abbr. Deciliter.

D/L abbr. Demand loan.

D layer (dē lä'ər) n. The lowest layer of the ionosphere, existing only during the day.

D.Lit. or D.Litt. abbr. Latin. Doctor Litterarum (Doctor of Letters; Doctor of Literature).

DLO abbr. Dead letter office.

dlr. abbr. Dealer.

D.L.S. abbr. Doctor of Library Science.

dm abbr. Decimeter.

DM abbr. 1. Data management. 2. Deutsche mark.

D.M.A. abbr. Doctor of Musical Arts.

D.M.D. abbr. Latin. Dentariae Medicinae Doctor (Doctor of Dental Medicine).

D.M.L. abbr. Doctor of Modern Languages.

DMSO (dē'ēm-ēs-ō') n. A colorless hygroscopic liquid, (CH₃)₂SO, obtained from lignin, used as an industrial solvent and in medicine as a penetrant to convey medications into the tissues. [D(I)M(ETHYL)S(ULF)O(XIDE).]

DMZ abbr. Demilitarized zone.

Dn abbr. Bible. Daniel.

dn. abbr. Down.

DNA (dē'ēn-ā') n. A nucleic acid that carries the genetic information in the cell and is capable of self-replication and synthesis of RNA. DNA consists of two long chains of nucleotides twisted into a double helix and joined by hydrogen bonds between the complementary bases adenine and thymine or cytosine and guanine. The sequence of nucleotides determines individual hereditary characteristics.

[D(EOXYRIBO)N(UCLEIC) A(CID).]

DNAase (dē'ēn-ā'ās) n. Variant of DNase.

DNA fingerprint (dē'ēn-ā' fīng'gər-prīnt') n. The distinctive patterns of an individual's DNA, used as a means of identification. —DNA fingerprinting n.

DNA polymerase (dē'ēn-ā' pōl'ə-mə-rās') n. An enzyme that catalyzes the replication and repair of DNA by using single-stranded DNA as a template.

DNase also DNAse (dē-ēn'ās) also DNAase (dē'ēn-ā'ās) n. An enzyme that catalyzes the hydrolysis of DNA. [DN(A) + -ASE.]

DNA virus (dē'ēn-ā' vī'rəs) n. A virus that possesses a genome composed of DNA.

Dne-pro-dzer-zhinsk (něp'rō-dər-zhīnsk', dnyǐ'prə-dzīr-zhīnsk') A city of east-central Ukraine on the Dnieper River south-southwest of Kharkov. It is a port and major industrial center. Population, 271,000.

Dne-pro-pe-trovsk (něp'rō-pə-trôfsk', dnyǐ'prə-pyǐ-trôfsk') A city of east-central Ukraine on the Dnieper River south-southwest of Kharkov. Founded in 1787 on the site of a Cossack village, it has a huge iron and steel industry. Population, 1,153,000.

Dnie-per (nē'pər, dnyě'pər) A river rising in west-central Russia near Smolensk and flowing about 2,285 km (1,420 mi) southward through Belarus and the Ukraine to the Black Sea. It has been a major commercial waterway since the ninth century.

Dnies-ter (nē'stər, dnyě'stər) A river rising in western Ukraine and flowing about 1,368 km (850 mi) generally southeast through eastern Moldavia then back into the Ukraine, where it empties into the Black Sea near Odessa. It formed the Soviet-Romanian border from 1918 to 1940.

do¹ (dō) v. did (dīd), done (dūn), do-ing, does (düz). — v. tr. 1. a. To perform or execute: do one's assigned task; do a series of business deals. b. To fulfill the requirements of: did my duty at all times. c. To carry out; commit: a crime that had been done on purpose. 2. a. To produce, especially by creative effort: do a play on Broadway. b. To play the part or role of in a creative production: did Elizabeth I in the film. c. To mimic: “doing the Southern voice, improvising it inventively as he goes along” (William H. Pritchard). 3. a. To bring about; effect: Crying won’t do any good now. b. To render; give: do equal justice to the opposing sides; do honor to one’s family. 4. To put forth; exert: Do the best you can. 5. a. To attend to in such a way as to take care of or put in order: did the bedrooms before the guests arrived. b. To prepare for further use especially by washing: did the dishes. 6. a. To set or style (the hair). b. To apply cosmetics to: did her face. 7. To have as an occupation or a profession: Have you decided what you will do after graduate school? 8. To work out by studying: do a homework assignment. 9. Informal. a. To travel (a specified distance): do a mile in four minutes. b. To make a tour of; visit: “[He] did 15 countries of Western Europe in only a few days” (R.W. Apple, Jr.). 10. a. To be sufficient in meeting the needs of; serve: This room will do us very nicely. b. Informal. To serve (a prison term). 11. Slang. To cheat; swindle: do a relative out of an inheritance. 12. Slang. To take (drugs) illegally: “If you do drugs you are going to be in continual trouble” (Jimmy Breslin). — v. intr. 1. To behave or conduct oneself; act: Do as I say and you won’t get into trouble. 2. a. To get along; fare: students who do well at school. b. To carry on; manage: We can very easily do without your interference. c. To make good use of something because of need: I could do with a nice hot bath. 3. a. To serve a specified purpose: This coat will do for another season. b. To be proper or fitting: Such behavior just won’t do. 4. To take place; happen: What’s doing in London this time of year? 5. Used as a substitute for an antecedent verb: worked as hard as everyone else did. 6. Used after another verb for emphasis: Run quickly, do! — v. aux. 1. Used with the infinitive without to in questions, negative statements, and inverted phrases: Do you understand? I did not sleep well. Little did we know what was in store for us. 2. Used as a means of emphasis: I do want to be sure. Do be still! — n. pl. do’s or dos. 1. A statement of what should be done: a list of the do’s and don’ts of management. 2. Informal. An entertainment; a party: attended a big do at the embassy. 3. Regional. A commotion. 4. Chiefly British. A swindle; a cheat. 5. Archaic. Duty; deed. — phrasal verbs. do by. To behave with respect to; deal with: The children have done well by their aged parents. do for. To care or provide for; take care of. do in. Slang. 3. To tire completely; exhaust: The marathon did me in. 4. To kill. 5. To ruin utterly: Huge losses on the stock market did many investors in. do up. 6. To adorn or dress lavishly: The children were all done up in matching outfits. 7. To wrap and tie (a package). 8. To fasten: do up the buttons on a dress. do without. To manage in spite of a lack or absence: There was no television on the island, but we soon learned to do without. — idioms. do a disappearing act. Informal. To vanish. do away with. 2. To make an end of; eliminate. 3. To destroy; kill. do (one) proud. To act or perform in a way that gives cause for pride. do (one’s) bit. To make an individual contribution toward an overall effort. do (one’s) own thing. Slang. To do what one does best or finds most enjoyable: “I get paid to try cases and to do my thing on trial” (Bruce Cutler). do or die. To exert supreme effort. [Middle English don, from Old English dōn. See dhē- in Appendix.]

do² (dō) n. Music. The first tone of the diatonic scale in solfeggio. [Italian, more singable replacement of ut. See GAMUT.]

do. abbr. Ditto.

D.O. abbr. 1. Doctor of Optometry. 2. Doctor of Osteopathy.

DOA abbr. Dead on arrival.

do-a-ble (dōʹə-bəl) adj. Possible to do: a program that is tough but doable.

DOB abbr. Date of birth.

dob·bin (dōbʹin) n. A horse, especially a working farm horse. [From Dobbin, alteration of Robin, nickname for Robert.]

dob·by (dōbʹē) n. pl. dob·bies. 1. A mechanical part in a loom that controls the harnesses so as to permit weaving of small geometric figures. 2. a. A small geometric figure woven into fabric. b. A fabric with such figures. [Perhaps from Dobbie, diminutive of Dob, alteration of Rob, nickname for Robert.]

Do·ber·man pin·scher (dōʹbər-mən pɪnʹshər) n. A medium-sized to large dog of a breed originating in Germany, having short hair and a smooth, usually dark brown or black coat. [German Dobermann (after Ludwig Dobermann, 19th-century German dog breeder) + German Pinscher, terrier (probably from PINCH, from the cropping of its ears and tail).]

WORD HISTORY: The word Doberman in Doberman pinscher comes from the last name of the German breeder Ludwig Dobermann, who is thought to have developed this breed in the latter half of the 19th century. He crossed a number of breeds, including a type of German terrier called a Pinscher. The name Doberman pinscher thus reminds us of one of its ancestors and of the person without whom the breed would possibly not exist. The dog’s name is first recorded in English in 1917 in the Policeman’s Monthly.

Do·bie (dōʹbē), James Frank. 1888-1964. American historian best known for his works on the history and folklore of the Southwest, including The Longhorns (1941).

Dö·blin (dœʹblēn), Alfred. 1878-1957. German psychiatrist and writer whose realistic novels, including Berlin Alexanderplatz (1929), are major works of expressionism.

do·bra (dōʹbrə) n. A basic unit of currency in São Tomé. See Table at currency. [Portuguese, ultimately from Latin duplus, double. See DUPLÉ.]

Do·bro (dōʹbrō) A trademark used for stringed musical instruments, specifically guitars and banjos.

dob·son (dōbʹsən) n. See hellgrammite. [Probably from the name Dobson.]

Dob-son (dɒb'sən), (Henry) Austin. 1840-1921. British writer known for his light verse in traditionally French forms such as the triolet and rondeau.

dob-son-fly (dɒb'sən-flī') n. An insect (Corydalus cornutus) having four large, many-veined wings and in the male long, pincerlike mandibles.

doc (dɒk) n. Informal. A physician, dentist, or veterinarian. [Short for DOCTOR.]

doc. abbr. Document.

do-cent (dɔ'sənt, dɔ-sɛnt') n. 1. A teacher or lecturer at some universities who is not a regular faculty member. 2. A lecturer or tour guide in a museum or cathedral. [Obsolete German, from Latin docēns, docent- present participle of docēre, to teach. See dek- in Appendix.]

Do-ce-tism (dɔ-sē'tiz'əm, dɔ'sə-tiz'əm) n. An opinion especially associated with the Gnostics that Jesus had no human body and only appeared to have died on the cross. [Probably from Late Greek Dokētai, espousers of Docetism, from Greek dokein, to seem. See dek- in Appendix.] — Do-ce'tist n.

doc-ile (dɒs'əl, -īl') adj. 1. Ready and willing to be taught; teachable.

2. Yielding to supervision, direction, or management; tractable. See Synonyms at obedient. [Latin docilis, from docēre, to teach. See dek- in Appendix.]

— doc'ile-ly adv. — do-cil'i-ty (dɔ-sīl'i-tē, dɔ-) n.

dock¹ (dɒk) n. Abbr. dk. 1. The area of water between two piers or alongside a pier that receives a ship for loading, unloading, or repairs. 2. A pier; a wharf. 3. Often docks. A group of piers on a commercial waterfront that serve as a general landing area for ships or boats. 4. A platform at which trucks or trains load or unload cargo. — v. docked, dock-ing, docks. — v. tr. 1. To maneuver (a vessel or vehicle) into or next to a dock. 2. Aerospace. To couple (two or more spacecraft, for example) in space. — v. intr. To move or come into a dock. [Dutch dok, from Middle Dutch doc, from dūken, to go under water, dive.]

dock² (dɒk) n. 1. The solid or fleshy part of an animal's tail. 2. The tail of an animal after it has been bobbed or clipped. — v. tr. docked, dock-ing, docks. 1. To clip short or cut off (an animal's tail, for example). 2. To deprive of a benefit or a part of one's wages, especially as a punishment: The company docks its employees for unauthorized absences. 3. To withhold or deduct a part from (one's salary or wages). [Middle English dok.] dock³ (dɒk) n. An enclosed place where the defendant stands or sits in a court of law. — idiom. in the dock. On trial or under intense scrutiny. [Obsolete Flemish docke, cage.]

dock⁴ (dɒk) n. See sorrel¹ (n., sense 1). [Middle English, from Old English docce.]

dock-age (dɒk'ij) n. 1. A charge for docking privileges. 2. Facilities for docking vessels. 3. The docking of ships.

dock-er¹ (dɒk'ər) n. A dockworker; a longshoreman.

dock-er² (dɒk'ər) n. One that docks something, such as the tail of an animal.

dock-et (dɒk'ɪt) n. 1. Law. a. A calendar of the cases awaiting action in a court. b. A brief entry of the court proceedings in a legal case. c. The book containing such entries. 2. A summary or other brief statement of the contents of a document; an abstract. 3. A list of things to be done; an agenda. 4. A label or ticket affixed to a package listing the contents or directions for assembling or operating. — v. tr. dock-et-ed, dock-et-ing, dock-ets. 1. Law. To enter in a court calendar or in a record of court proceedings. 2. To provide with a brief identifying statement. 3. To label or ticket (a parcel). [Middle English doggett, summary, digest.]

dock-hand (dɒk'hænd') n. A dockworker; a longshoreman.

dock-mack-ie (dɒk'mæk'ē) n. A shrub (Viburnum acerifolium) of eastern North America, having clusters of white flowers. Also called possum haw [Probably from American Dutch, perhaps of Mahican origin.]

dock-o-min-i-um (dɒk'ə-mɪn'ē-əm) n. pl. dock-o-mini-ums. 1. A dockside community of privately owned boats moored in slips that are purchased for year-round living. 2. A slip in such a community. [DOCK¹ + (COND)OMINIUM.]

dock-side (dɒk'sīd') n. The area adjacent to a boating dock.

dock-work-er (dɒk'wûr'kər) n. A dockhand; a longshoreman.

dock-yard (dɒk'yärd') n. 1. An area, often bordering a body of water, with facilities for building, repairing, or dry-docking ships. 2. Chiefly British. A navy yard.

doc-tor (dɒk'tər) n. 1. A person, especially a physician, dentist, or veterinarian, trained in the healing arts and licensed to practice. 2. a. A person who has earned the highest academic degree awarded by a college or university in a specified discipline. b. A person awarded an honorary degree by a college or university. 3. Abbr. Dr. Used as a title and form of address for a person holding the degree of doctor. 4. Roman Catholic Church. An eminent theologian. 5. A rig or device contrived for remedying an emergency situation or for doing a special task. 6. Any of several brightly colored artificial flies used in fly fishing. — v.

doc-tored, doc-tor-ing, doc-tors. Informal. — v. tr. 1. Informal. To give medical treatment to: “[He] does more than practice medicine. He doctors people. There’s a difference” (Charles Kuralt). 2. To repair, especially in a makeshift manner; rig. 3. a. To falsify or change in such a way as to make favorable to oneself: doctored the evidence. b. To add ingredients so as to improve or conceal the taste, appearance, or quality of: doctor the soup with a dash of sherry. See Synonyms at adulterate. c. To alter or modify for a specific end: doctored my standard speech for the small-town audience. — v. intr. Informal. To practice medicine. [Middle English, an expert, authority, from Old French docteur, from Latin doc-tor, teacher, from docēre, to teach. See dek- in Appendix.] —doc'tor-al adj. —doc'tor-ly adj.

doc-tor-ate (dɒk'tər-īt) n. The degree or status of a doctor as conferred by a university.

Doc-tor-ow (dɒk'tə-rō'), E(dgar) L(awrence). Born 1931. American writer noted for his artful blend of history and fiction in novels such as The Book of Daniel (1971).

doc-tri-naire (dɒk'trə-nâr') n. A person inflexibly attached to a practice or theory without regard to its practicality. — adj. Of, relating to, or characteristic of a person inflexibly attached to a practice or theory. See Synonyms at dictatorial. [French, from doctrine, doctrine, from Old French. See DOCTRINE.]

—doc'tri-nair'ism n. —doc'tri-nar'i-an n.

doc-tri-nal (dɒk'trə-nəl) adj. Characterized by, belonging to, or concerning doctrine. —doc'tri-nal-ly adv.

doc-trine (dɒk'trīn) n. 1. A principle or body of principles presented for acceptance or belief, as by a religious, political, scientific, or philosophic group; dogma. 2. A rule or principle of law, especially when established by precedent. 3. A statement of official government policy, especially in foreign affairs and military strategy. 4. Archaic. Something taught; a teaching. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin doctrīna, from doctor, teacher, from docēre, to teach. See dek- in Appendix.]

SYNONYMS: doctrine, dogma, tenet. The central meaning shared by these nouns is “a principle taught, advanced, or accepted, as by a group of philosophers”: the legal doctrine of due process; church dogma; experimentation, one of the tenets of the physical sciences.

doc-u-dra-ma (dɒk'yə-drä'mə, -dräm'ə) n. A television or movie dramatization of events based on fact. [DOCU(MENTARY) + DRAMA.] —doc'u-dra-mat'ic (-drə-mät'ik) adj.

doc-u-ment (dɒk'yə-mənt) n. Abbr. doc. 1. a. A written or printed paper that bears the original, official, or legal form of something and can be used to furnish decisive evidence or information. b. Something, such as a recording or a photograph, that can be used to furnish evidence or information. c. A writing that contains information. 2. Something, especially a material substance such as a coin bearing a revealing symbol or mark, that serves as proof or evidence. — v. tr. doc-u-ment-ed, doc-u-ment-ing, doc-u-ments (-mənt'). 1. To furnish with a document or documents. 2. To support (an assertion or a claim, for example) with evidence or decisive information. 3. To support (statements in a book, for example) with written references or citations; annotate. [Middle English, precept, from Old French, from Latin documentum, example, proof, from docēre, to teach. See dek- in Appendix.] —doc'u-ment'al (-mənt'l) adj. —doc'u-ment'er n.

doc·u·ment·a·ble (dɒk'yə-mɛn'tə-bəl) adj. Being such that documenting is possible: a fact, easily documentable; a documentable case of theft.

doc·u·ment·al·ist (dɒk'yə-mɛn'tl-ɪst') n. A specialist in documentation.

doc·u·men·tar·i·an (-mɛn-târ'ē-ən, -mən-) also doc·u·men·ta·rist (dɒk'yə-mɛn'tər-ɪst) n. One that makes documentaries or a documentary.

doc·u·men·ta·ry (dɒk'yə-mɛn'tə-rē) adj. 1. Consisting of, concerning, or based on documents. 2. Presenting facts objectively without editorializing or inserting fictional matter, as in a book or film. — n. pl. doc·u·men·ta·ries. A work, such as a film or television program, presenting political, social, or historical subject matter in a factual and informative manner and often consisting of actual news films or interviews accompanied by narration.

doc·u·men·ta·tion (dɒk'yə-mɛn-tā'shən) n. 1. a. The act or an instance of the supplying of documents or supporting references or records. b. The documents or references so supplied. 2. The collation, synopsis, and coding of printed material for future reference. 3. Computer Science. The organized collection of records that describe the structure, purpose, operation, maintenance, and data requirements for a computer program.

doc·u·tain·ment (dɒk'yə-tān'mənt) n. See infotainment. [DOCU(MEN-TARY) + (ENTER)TAINMENT.]

DOD abbr. Department of Defense.

dod·der¹ (dɒd'ɛr) v. intr. dod·dered, dod·der·ing, dod·ders. 1. To shake or tremble, as from old age; totter. 2. To progress in a feeble, unsteady manner. [Alteration of Middle English daderen.] —dod·der·er n.

dod·der² (dɒd'ɛr) n. Any of various leafless, annual parasitic herbs of the genus Cuscuta that lack chlorophyll and have slender, twining, yellow or reddish stems and small whitish flowers. [Middle English doder, possibly from Middle Dutch, yolk of an egg (from the yellow color of the blossom of one species of this plant).]

dod·dered (dɒd'ɛrd) adj. 1. Botany. Lacking the top branches as a result of age or decay. 2. Infirm; feeble. [Probably alteration of dodded, past participle of dialectal dod, to lop off, from Middle English dodden, perhaps from dodde, a measure of grain.]

dod·der·ing (dɒd'ɛr-ɪŋ) adj. Infirm, feeble, and often senile.

do·dec·a·gon (dō-dɛk'ə-gɒn') n. A polygon with 12 sides. [Greek dōdekagōnon : dōdeka, twelve (duo, two; see dwo- in Appendix + deka, ten); see dek in Appendix + -gōnon, -gon.] —do·de·cag·o·nal (dō'dɛ-kəg'ə-nəl) adj.

do·dec·a·he·dron (dō'dɛk-ə-hē'drən) n. pl. do·dec·a·he·drons or do·dec·a·he·dra (-drə). A polyhedron with 12 faces. [Greek dōdekaedron : dōdeka, twelve; see DODECAGON + -edron, -hedron.] —do·dec·a·he·dral adj.

Do·dec·a·nese (dō-dɛk'ə-nēz', -nēs') An island group of southeast Greece in the Aegean Sea between Turkey and Crete. The name means "12 islands," although there are also several islets. The islands were held by Turkey from 1522 until 1912.

do·dec·a·phon·ic (dō'dĕk-ə-fŏn'ik) adj. Music. Relating to, composed in, or consisting of twelve-tone music. [Greek dōdeka, twelve; see DODECAGON + PHON(O)-, tone, pitch + -IC.] — do·dec'a·phon·ist (dō-dĕk'ə-fə-nĭst, dō'də-kăf'ə-) n. — do·dec'a·phon'y (dō-dĕk'ə-fŏ'nĕ, dō'də-kăf'ə-), do·dec'a·phon·ism n.

dodge (dŏj) v. dodged, dodg·ing, dodg·es. — v. tr. 1. To avoid (a blow, for example) by moving or shifting quickly aside. 2. To evade (an obligation, for example) by cunning, trickery, or deceit: kept dodging the reporter's questions. 3. To blunt or reduce the intensity of (a section of a photograph) by shading during the printing process. — v. intr. 1. To move aside or in a given direction by shifting or twisting suddenly: The child dodged through the crowd. 2. To practice trickery or cunning; prevaricate. — n. 1. The act of dodging. 2. An ingenious expedient intended to evade or trick. See Synonyms at artifice. [Origin unknown.]

Dodge (dŏj), Grenville Mellen. 1831-1916. American civil engineer and politician noted for his efforts to expand railroad lines in the West and Southwest.

Dodge (dŏj), Mary Elizabeth Mapes. 1831-1905. American editor and writer best known for her children's classic Hans Brinker, or the Silver Skates (1865).

dodge ball (dŏj bŏl) n. Games. A game in which players outside a circle try to eliminate players on the inside by hitting them with an inflated ball.

Dodge City (dŏj sĭt'ē) A city of southwest Kansas on the Arkansas River west of Wichita. Laid out on the Santa Fe Trail in 1872, it soon became a wild and rowdy cow town whose residents included such legendary figures as Wyatt Earp and Bat Masterson. Population, 21,129.

dodg·er (dŏj'ər) n. 1. One that dodges or evades: a skilled dodger of reporters' questions. 2. A shifty, dishonest person; a trickster. 3. A small printed handbill. 4. Chiefly Southern U.S. See corndodger.

Dodg·son (dŏj'sən), Charles Lutwidge. Pen name Lewis Carroll. 1832-1898. British mathematician and writer. His stories about Alice, invented to amuse the young daughter of a friend, appear in the classics Alice's Adventures in Wonderland (1865) and Through the Looking-Glass (1872).

dodg·y (dŏj'ē) adj. dodg·i·er, dodg·i·est. Chiefly British. 1. Evasive; shifty. 2. Unsound, unstable, and unreliable. 3. So risky as to require very deft handling.

do·do (dō'dō) n. pl. do·does or do·dos. 1. A large, clumsy, flightless bird (Raphus cucullatus), formerly of the island of Mauritius in the Indian Ocean, that has been extinct since the late 17th century. 2. Informal. One whose dress, lifestyle, and ideas are hopelessly passé. 3. Informal. A stupid person; an idiot. [Portuguese dodó, alteration of obsolete Dutch dodors : Dutch dot, tuft of feathers + obsolete Dutch ors, tail (from Middle Dutch ærs); see ors- in Appendix.]

Do·do·ma (dō'də-mä, -dō-) The official capital of Tanzania, in the central part of the country. Population, 46,000.

Do·do·na (də-dō'nə) An ancient city of northwest Greece. It was a center of Pelasgian worship dedicated to Zeus.

doe (dō) n. pl. doe or does. 1. The female of a deer or related animal. 2. The female of various mammals, such as the hare, goat, or kangaroo. [Middle English do, from Old English dā.]

Doe·nitz also Dö·nitz (dœ'nīts), Karl. 1891-1980. German naval officer who was chief naval commander during World War II and briefly headed the German government after the death of Adolf Hitler (1945).

do·er (dō'ər) n. 1. One who does something: a doer of evil deeds. 2. A particularly active, energetic person: a real doer in party politics.

does (düz) v. Third person singular present tense of do¹.

doe·skin (dō'skīn') n. 1. a. The skin of a doe, deer, or goat. b. Leather made from this skin, used especially for gloves. 2. A fine, soft, smooth woolen fabric. 3. A densely napped finish for certain woolen fabrics, such as flannel.

does·n't (düz'ənt) Does not.

do·est (dō'ĭst) v. Archaic. A second person singular present tense of do¹.

do·eth (dō'əth) v. Archaic. A third person singular present tense of do¹.

doff (dôf, dôf) v. tr. doffed, doff·ing, doffs. 1. To take off; remove: doff one's clothes. 2. To tip or remove (one's hat) in salutation. 3. To put aside; discard.

[Middle English doffen, from don off, to do off : don, to do; see DO¹ + off, off; see OFF.]

dog (dôg, dôg) n. 1. A domesticated carnivorous mammal (Canis familiaris) related to the foxes and wolves and raised in a wide variety of breeds. 2. Any of various carnivorous mammals of the family Canidae, such as the dingo. 3. A male animal of the family Canidae, especially of the fox or a domesticated breed. 4. Any of various other animals, such as the prairie dog. 5. Informal. a. A person: You won, you lucky dog. b. A person regarded as contemptible: You stole my watch, you dog. 6. Slang. a. A person regarded as unattractive or uninteresting. b. A hopelessly inferior product or creation: "The President had read the speech to some of his friends and they told him it was a dog" (John P. Roche). 7. dogs. Slang. The feet. 8. See andiron. 9. Slang. A hot dog; a wiener. 10. Any of various hooked or U-shaped metallic devices used for gripping or holding heavy objects. 11. Astronomy. A sun dog. — adv. Totally; completely. Often used in combination: dog-tired. — v. tr. dogged, dog·ging, dogs. 1. To track or trail persistently: "A stranger then is still dogging us" (Arthur Conan Doyle). 2. To hold or fasten with a mechanical device: "Watertight doors and hatches were dropped into place and dogged down to give the ship full watertight integrity" (Tom Clancy). —idioms. dog it. Slang. To fail to expend the required effort to do or accomplish something. go to the dogs. To go to ruin; degenerate. put on the dog. Informal. To make an ostentatious display of elegance, wealth, or culture.

[Middle English dogge, from Old English docga.]

dog-and-po-ny show (dôg'ən-pō'nē shō, dôg'-) n. Slang. An elaborate presentation orchestrated to gain approval, as for a policy or product. [From the razzle-dazzle of trained animal acts at circuses.]

dog-bane (dôg'bān', dôg'-) n. Any of several plants of the genus Apocynum, having milky juice and bell-shaped white or pink flowers.

dog-ber-ry (dôg'bēr'ē, dôg'-) n. 1. A wild gooseberry (Ribes cynosbati) of eastern North America, bearing large, prickly berries. 2. A wild mountain ash (Pyrus decora) of eastern North America. 3. The fruit of either of these plants.

dog biscuit (dôg bīs'kīt) n. A hard cracker for dogs.

dog-cart (dôg'kärt', dôg'-) n. 1. A vehicle drawn by one horse and accommodating two persons seated back to back. 2. A small cart pulled by dogs.

dog-catch-er (dôg'käch'ər, dôg'-) n. A dog officer.

dog chew (dôg chō) n. A leather object intended as a chewing toy for dogs.

dog collar (dôg kōl'ər) n. 1. A collar for a dog. 2. Informal. A clerical collar. 3. A choker: a duchess resplendent in ermine robes, a tiara, and a diamond dog collar.

dog days (dôg dāz) pl.n. 1. The hot, sultry period of summer between early July and early September. 2. A period of stagnation. [Translation of Late Latin diēs canīculārēs, Dog Star days (so called because the Dog Star (Sirius) rises and sets with the sun during this time) : Latin diēs, days + Late Latin canīculāris, of the Dog Star.]

doge (dōj) n. The elected chief magistrate of the former republics of Venice and Genoa. [Italian dialectal, from Latin dux, duc-, leader, from dūcere, to lead. See deuk- in Appendix.]

dog-ear (dôg'îr', dôg'-) n. A turned-down corner of a page in a book. — v. tr. dog--eared, dog--ear-ing, dog--ears. 1. To turn down the corner of (the page of a book). 2. To make worn or shabby from overuse. —dog'-eared' adj.

dog-eat-dog (dôg'ēt-dôg', dôg'ēt-dôg') adj. Ruthlessly acquisitive or competitive: a dog-eat-dog society.

dog-face (dôg'fās', dôg'-) n. Slang. A U.S. Army foot soldier, especially in World War II.

dog fennel (dôg fĕn'əl) n. 1. A strong-smelling European weed (Anthemis cotula) naturalized in North America. 2. A weedy plant (Eupatorium capillifolium) of the southeast United States, having pinnately divided leaves and long clusters of greenish flowers.

dog-fight (dôg'fīt', dôg'-) n. 1. a. A violent fight between or as if between dogs. b. An illegal, organized fight between dogs, arranged for spectator entertainment and betting. 2. An aerial battle between fighter planes. —dog'fight-er n.

dog-fight-ing (dôg'fī'ting, dôg'f-) n. An illegal, organized activity in which dogs are fought for spectator entertainment and betting.

dog-fish (dôg'fish', dôg'f-) n. pl. dogfish or dog-fish-es. 1. Any of various small sharks, chiefly of the family Squalidae, of Atlantic and Pacific coastal waters. Also called grayfish 2. See bowfin.

dog-ged (dô'gĭd, dôg'id) adj. Stubbornly persevering; tenacious. See Synonyms at obstinate. —dog'ged-ly adv. —dog'ged-ness n.

Dog-ger Bank (dô'gər bāngk, dôg'ər) An extensive sandbank of the central North Sea between Great Britain and Denmark. It is a major breeding ground for fish.

dog-ger-el (dô'gər-əl, dôg'ər-) also dog-grel (dôg'rəl, dôg'f-) n. Crudely or irregularly fashioned verse, often of a humorous or burlesque nature. [From Middle English, poor, worthless, from dogge, dog. See DOG.] —dog'ger-el adj.

dog-gie (dô'gē, dôg'ē) n. & adj. Variant of doggy.

doggie bag (dô'gē bāg) n. Variant of doggy bag.

dog-gish (dô'gĭsh, dôg'ĭsh) adj. 1. Relating to or suggestive of a dog. 2. Surly; gruff. 3. Informal. Showily stylish. —dog'gish-ly adv. —dog'gish-ness n.

dog-go (dô'gō, dôg'ō) adv. Informal. In concealment: “You'd better lie doggo, I advised her out of my own nervousness” (John M. Myers). [Probably from DOG.]

dog-gone (dôg'gōn', -gōn', dôg'f-) Informal. v. tr. intr. To damn. — interj., n., adv. & adj. Damn. See Regional note at damned. [Alteration of Scots dagone, from dag on (it): dag, confound (probably alteration of goddamn) + ON.]

dog-grel (dôg'rəl, dôg'f-) n. Variant of doggerel.

dog-gy or dog-gie (dô'gē, dôg'ē) n. pl. dog-gies. A dog, especially a small one. — adj. dog-gi-er, dog-gi-est. Of or suggestive of a dog; doggish.

doggy bag or doggie bag (dô'gē bāg) n. A bag for leftover food that a customer of a restaurant may take home after a meal. [From the assumption that such food would be given to the customer's dog.]

dog-hanged (dôg'hāngd, dôg'f-) adj. Chiefly Southern U.S. Hangdog. See Regional note at everywhere.

dog-house (dôg'hous', dôg'f-) n. A small shelter for a dog. —idiom. in the doghouse. Slang. In great disfavor or trouble.

do-gie also do-gy (dô'gē) n. pl. do-gies. Western U.S. A stray or motherless calf. [Origin unknown.]

REGIONAL NOTE: In the language of the American West, a motherless calf is known as a dogie. In Western Words Ramon F. Adams gives one possible etymology for dogie, whose origin is unknown. During the 1880's, when a series of harsh winters left large numbers of orphaned calves, the little calves, weaned too early, were unable to digest coarse range grass, and their swollen bellies “very much resembled a batch of sourdough carried in a sack.” Such a calf was referred to as dough-guts. The term, altered to dogie according to Adams, “has been used ever since throughout cattelnd to refer to a pot-gutted orphan calf.” Another possibility is that dogie is an alteration of Spanish dogal, “lariat.”

dog in the manger (dôg ĩn thē măn'jər) n. pl. dogs in the manger. One who prevents others from enjoying what one has no use for oneself. [From a fable in which a dog prevented an ox from eating hay he did not want himself.]

dog iron (dôg ĩ'ərŋ) n. Upper Southern U.S. See andiron. [(FIRE)DOG + (AND)IRON.]

dog-leg (dôg'lĕg', dög'-) n. 1. a. Something that has a sharp bend, especially a road or route that bends abruptly. b. A sharp bend or turn: Make a dogleg at the fire station and continue south. 2. Sports. A golf hole in which the fairway is abruptly angled. — v. intr. dog-legged, dog-leg-ging, dog-legs. To make a sharp bend or turn: The street doglegs to the left. —dog/leg'ged (-lĕg'id, -lĕgd') adj.

dog-ma (dôg'mə, dög'-) n. pl. dog-mas or dog-ma-ta (-mə-tə). 1. Theology. A doctrine or a corpus of doctrines relating to matters such as morality and faith, set forth in an authoritative manner by a church. 2. An authoritative principle, belief, or statement of ideas or opinion, especially one considered to be absolutely true. See Synonyms at doctrine. 3. A principle or belief or a group of them: “The dogmas of the quiet past are inadequate to the stormy present” (Abraham Lincoln). [Latin, from Greek, opinion, belief, from dokein, to seem, think. See dek- in Appendix.]

dog-mat-ic (dôg-măt'ĭk, dög-) adj. 1. Relating to, characteristic of, or resulting from dogma. 2. Characterized by an authoritative, arrogant assertion of unproved or unprovable principles. See Synonyms at dictatorial. [Late Latin dogmaticus, from Greek dogmatikos, from dogma, dogmat-, belief. See DOGMA.] —dog-mat'i-cal-ly adv.

dog-mat-ics (dôg-măt'ĭks, dög-) n. (used with a sing. verb). The study of religious dogmas, especially those of a Christian church.

dog-ma-tism (dôg'mə-tĭz'əm, dög'-) n. Arrogant, stubborn assertion of opinion or belief.

dog-ma-tist (dôg'mə-tĭst, dög'-) n. 1. An arrogantly assertive person. 2. One who expresses or sets forth dogma.

dog-ma-tize (dôg'mə-tĭz', dög'-) v. dog-ma-tized, dog-ma-tiz-ing, dog-ma-tiz-es. — v. intr. To express oneself dogmatically in writing or speech. — v. tr. To proclaim as dogma. —dog'ma-ti-za'tion (-tĭ-zā'shən) n.

dog-nap (dôg'năp', dög'-) v. tr. dog-napped or dog-naped, dog-nap-ping or dog-nap-ing, dog-naps or dog-naps. To steal (a dog), especially for the purpose of selling it to a research laboratory. [DOG + (KID)NAP.] —dog'nap'per

n.

dog officer (dôg ô'fî-sər) n. One appointed or elected to impound stray dogs.

do-good (dōō'gōōd') adj. Naively idealistic in the support of philanthropic or humanitarian causes. —do'-good'ism n.

do-good-er (dōō'gōōd'ər) n. A naive idealist who supports philanthropic or humanitarian causes or reforms.

do-good-ing (dōō'gōōd'ing) adj. Of or characteristic of a naive philanthropist or humanitarian: “his do-gooding mother” (John Updike). —do'-good'ing
n.

dog paddle (dôg păd'l) n. Sports. A prone swimming stroke in which the arms and legs remain submerged and each limb paddles in alternation.

Dog-rib (dôg'rîb', dôg'-) n. pl. Dogrib or Dog-ribs. 1. a. A Native American people inhabiting an area between the Great Bear and Great Slave lakes in the Northwest Territories of Canada. b. A member of this people. 2. The Athabaskan language of this people. [Translation of Cree atimospikay.]

dog rose (dôg rōz) n. A prickly wild rose (Rosa canina) native to Europe and naturalized in eastern North America, having fragrant pink or white flowers.

dogs-bod-y (dôgz'bōd'ē, dôgz'-) n. Chiefly British. One who does menial work; a drudge. [British slang, naval rations (obsolete), midshipman.]

dog's chance (dôgz chăns, dôgz) n. Slang. A very slim chance.

dog-sled or dog sled (dôg'slĕd', dôg'-) n. A sled pulled by one or more dogs. —dog'sled' v. —dog'sled'der n. —dog'sled'ding n.

dog's life (dôgz lîf) n. Slang. A miserably unhappy existence.

dog's mercury (dôgz mûr'kyə-rĕ) n. A creeping, ill-smelling Old World weed (Mercurialis perennis) having small greenish flowers.

Dog Star (dôg stār, dôg) n. 1. See Sirius. 2. See Procyon. [The brightest star in the constellation Canis Major, the Big Dog.]

dog tag (dôg tăg) n. 1. A metal identification disk attached to a dog's collar. 2. A metal identification tag worn on a chain around the neck by members of the armed forces.

dog-tooth (dôg'tōōth', dôg'-) n. 1. A canine tooth; an eyetooth.

2. Architecture. A medieval ornament consisting of four leaflike projections radiating from a raised center.

dogtooth violet (dôg'tōōth' vî'ə-lît) n. Any of several plants of the genus Erythronium, having leaves with reddish blotches and nodding, colorful, solitary, lilylike flowers on leafless stems. Also called adder's-tongue, trout lily.

dog-trot (dôg'trōt', dôg'-) n. 1. A steady trot like that of a dog. 2. Chiefly Southern U.S. A roofed passage between two parts of a structure. — v. intr.

dog-trot-ted, dog-trot-ting, dog-trots. To move at a steady trot.

dog-watch (dôg'wöch', dôg'-) n. 1. Nautical. Either of two short periods of watch duty, from 4 to 6 P.M. or 6 to 8 P.M. 2. A late night shift. [Probably from dog-sleep, a light or interrupted sleep.]

dog-wood (dôg'wôod', dôg'-) n. 1. A tree (Cornus florida) of eastern North America, having small greenish flowers surrounded by four large, showy white or pink bracts that resemble petals. 2. Any of several trees or shrubs of the genus Cornus. Also called flowering dogwood do-gy (dô'gē) n. Western U.S. Variant of dogie.

Do-ha (dô'hə, -hä) The capital of Qatar, on the Persian Gulf. It was a tiny village before oil production began in 1949. Population, 190,000.

Do-her-ty (dô'ər-tē), Henry Latham. 1870-1939. American engineer and utilities magnate whose financial manipulations were largely responsible for the passage of New Deal legislation regulating such unorthodox and underhand practices.

doi-ly (doi'lē) n. pl. doi-lies. 1. A small ornamental mat, usually of lace or linen. 2. A small table napkin. [After Doily or Doyly, 18th-century London draper.]

do-ing (dô'ing) n. 1. Performance of an act: a job not worth the doing. 2. doings. a. Activities that go on every day: "A motley crew they are, their doings as dark as they are ludicrous" (John Simon). b. Social events and activities.

Doi-sy (doi'zē), Edward Adelbert. 1893-1986. American biochemist. He shared a 1943 Nobel Prize for the discovery of vitamin K.

do-it-yourself (dô'it-yər-sëlf') adj. Of, relating to, or designed to be done by an amateur or as a hobby: do-it-yourself home repairs; a do-it-yourself sailboat kit. —do'-it-yourself'er n.

do-jo (dô'jô) n. A school for training in Japanese arts of self-defense, such as judo and karate. [Japanese dôjô.]

dol. abbr. 1. Dollar. 2. Music. Dolce.

do-lab-ri-form (dô-lăb'rə-fôrm') also do-lab-rate (-răt') adj. Biology. Having the shape of the head of an ax. [Latin dolābra, pickax (from dolāre, to hew) + -FORM.]

Dol-by (dôl'bē) A trademark used for an electronic device that eliminates noise from recorded sound and audio signals.

dol-ce (dôl'chā') Music. adv. & adj. Abbr. dol. Gently and sweetly. Used chiefly as a direction. [From Italian, sweet, from Latin dulcis.]

dolce vi-ta (dôl'chā' vē'tə, -tā) n. A luxurious, self-indulgent way of life. [Italian : dolce, sweet + vita, life.]

dol-drums (dôl'drəmz', dôl'-, dôl'-) pl.n. (used with a sing. or pl. verb). 1. a. A period of stagnation or slump. b. A period of depression or unhappy listlessness. 2. a. A region of the ocean near the equator, characterized by calms, light winds, or squalls. b. The weather conditions characteristic of these regions of the ocean.

[Alteration (influenced by TANTRUM), of obsolete doldrum, dullard, from Middle English dold, past participle of dullen, to dull, from dul, dull. See DULL.]

dole¹ (dōl) n. 1. Charitable dispensation of goods, especially money, food, or clothing. 2. A share of money, food, or clothing that has been charitably given. 3. Chiefly British. The distribution by the government of relief payments to the unemployed; welfare. 4. Archaic. One's fate. — v. tr. doled, dol-ing, doles.

1. To dispense as charity. 2. To give out in small portions; distribute sparingly. See Synonyms at distribute. — idiom. on the dole. Receiving regular relief payments from or as if from the government. [Middle English dol, part, share, from Old English dāl. See dail- in Appendix.]

dole² (dōl) n. Archaic. Sorrow; grief; dolor. [Middle English dol, from Old French dol, deul, from Late Latin dolus, from Latin dolēre, to feel pain, grieve.]

Dole (dōl), Sanford Ballard. 1844-1926. American jurist and first governor of the Territory of Hawaii (1900-1903).

dole-ful (dōl'fəl) adj. 1. Filled with or expressing grief; mournful. See Synonyms at sad. 2. Causing grief: a doleful loss. — dole'ful-ly adv. — dole'-ful-ness n.

dol-er-ite (dōl'ə-rīt') n. Chiefly British. A dark, fine-grained igneous rock; diabase. [French dolérite, from Greek doleros, deceitful (from its easily being mistaken for diorite), from dolos, trick. See del-² in Appendix.] — dol'er-it'ic (ə-rīt'ik) adj.

dol-i-cho-ce-phal-ic (dōl'ī-kō-sə-fāl'ik) also dol-i-cho-ceph-a-lous (-sēf'ə-ləs) adj. Having a relatively long head with a cephalic index below 76. [Greek dolikhos, long; see del-¹ in Appendix + -CEPHALIC.] — dol'i-cho-ceph'a-lism (-sēf'ə-līz'əm), dol'i-cho-ceph'a-ly (-sēf'ə-lē) n.

dol-i-cho-cra-ni-al (dōl'ə-kō-krā'nē-əl) also dol-i-cho-cra-nic (-nīk) adj. Having a relatively long skull with a cranial index of 74.9 or less. [Greek dolikhos, long; see del-¹ in Appendix + CRANIAL.] — dol'i-cho-cra'ny n.

Do-lin (dō'līn), Sir Anton. Originally Patrick Healey-Kay. 1904-1983. British ballet dancer noted for his frequent performances with Alicia Markova and his staging of classical ballets.

do-lit-tle (dōō'līt'l) n. Informal. A lazy person.

doll (dōl) n. 1. A child's usually small toy representing a human being. 2. A pretty child. 3. Slang. a. An attractive person. b. A woman. c. A sweetheart or darling. d. A helpful or obliging person. — phrasal verb. doll up. Slang.

1. To dress oneself smartly and often ostentatiously, especially for a special occasion. 2. To add embellishing details to in order to make much more attractive.

[From Doll, nickname for Dorothy.]

WORD HISTORY: The word doll has come up in the world, at least if up means moving from the backstairs to the nursery. Doll and Dolly were originally nicknames for Dorothy Doll, along with other names like Jill and Nan, took on the generic sense of “a mistress,” so we have Shakespeare’s Doll Tearsheet and Ben Jonson’s Doll Common. This association probably caused the name Dorothy to go out of use temporarily, about the time near the beginning of the 18th century when we find doll first recorded for a child’s toy. Doll came to refer to larger beings again, however, for in the latter part of the 18th century it was once more applied to women, this time to pretty, empty-headed women. Doll has gone on to more general applications, and a man can be a doll as well.

dol·lar (dŏl'ər) n. Abbr. dol. 1. A basic unit of currency in Australia, Bahamas, Barbados, Belize, Brunei, Canada, Cayman Islands, Dominica, Fiji, Grenada, Guyana, Hong Kong, Jamaica, Kiribai, Liberia, Nauru, New Zealand, Saint Lucia, Saint Vincent and the Grenadines, Singapore, Solomon Islands, Trinidad and Tobago, Tuvalu, United States, and Zimbabwe. See Table at currency. 2. A coin or note worth one dollar. [Low German Daler, taler, from German Taler, short for Joachimstaler, after Joachimstal (Jáchymov), a town of northeast Bohemia where similar coins were first minted.]

dol·lar-a-year (dŏl'ər-ə-yîr') adj. Of, relating to, or being an official, an employee, or a consultant who receives token payment for services rendered: a dollar-a-year senator.

dollar cost averaging (dŏl'ər kôst äv'rîj-îng) n. Periodic investment of a fixed dollar amount.

dollar day (dŏl'ər dā) n. A day on which a store offers its merchandise on sale for one dollar or at greatly reduced prices.

Dol·lard des Or·meaux or Dol·lard-des-Or·meaux (dŏ-yär' dā-zôr-mŏ') A town of southern Quebec, Canada, a residential suburb of Montreal. Population, 39,940.

dollar diplomacy (dŏl'ər dī-plŏ'mə-sē) n. 1. A policy aimed at furthering the interests of the United States abroad by encouraging the investment of U.S. capital in foreign countries. 2. A policy intended to safeguard a nation’s foreign investments.

dol·lar·fish (dŏl'ər-fîsh') n. pl. dollarfish or dol·lar·fish·es. See moonfish (n., sense 1).

dollar sign (dŏl'ər sîn) n. The symbol ($) for a dollar when placed before a numeral.

Doll·fuss (dŏl'fŏs'), Engelbert. 1892-1934. Austrian politician who as chancellor (1932-1934) established an authoritarian, one-party state. He was assassinated by Austrian Nazis.

doll·house (dŏl'hous') n. 1. A small model house used as a children’s toy or to display miniature dolls and furniture. 2. A house so small that it is likened to a toy house.

dol·lop (dōl'əp) n. 1. A large lump or portion of a solid matter: a dollop of ice cream. 2. A small quantity or splash of a liquid: a dollop of whiskey. 3. A modicum; a bit: not a dollop of truth to the story. [Earlier tuft, clump perhaps akin to Norwegian dolp, lump.]

dol·ly (dōl'ē) n. pl. dol·lies. 1. Informal. A child's doll. 2. a. A hand truck or low mobile platform that rolls on casters, used for transporting heavy loads. b. Such a platform as used by one working underneath a motor vehicle. 3. A wheeled apparatus used to transport a movie or television camera about a set. 4. A small locomotive, as for use in a railroad yard or on a construction site. 5. A wooden implement for stirring clothes in a washtub. 6. A tool used to hold one end of a rivet while the opposite end is being hammered to form a head. 7. A small piece of wood or metal placed on the head of a pile to prevent damage to the pile while it is being driven. — v. intr. dol·lied, dol·ly·ing, dol·lies. To move the wheeled apparatus on which a movie or television camera is mounted toward or away from the scene of action.

Dol·ly Var·den (dōl'ē vār'dn) n. A colorfully spotted trout (Salvelinus malma) of northwest North America and eastern Asia. [After Dolly Varden, a character known for her colorful costume in the novel Barnaby Rudge by Charles Dickens.]

dol·ma (dōl'mə, -mä) n. pl. dol·mas or dol·ma·des (dōl-mä'dēs). A grape leaf stuffed and cooked with ingredients such as ground beef, minced lamb, herbs, or rice. [Turkish, filling.]

dol·man (dōl'mən) n. A woman's garment having capelike arm pieces. [French, from German, from Magyar dolmany, from Turkish dōlāmān, robe, from dolamak, to wind.]

dolman sleeve (dōl'mən slēv) n. A full sleeve that is very wide at the armhole and narrow at the wrist.

dol·men (dōl'mən, dōl'-) n. A prehistoric megalithic structure consisting of two or more upright stones with a capstone, typically forming a chamber. [French, from Breton taolvean*: taol* alteration (influenced by taol, table, from Latin tabula), of tol, key + men, stone; see MENHIR.]

dol·o·mite (dō'lə-mīt', dōl'ə-) n. 1. A white or light-colored mineral, essentially $\text{CaMg}(\text{CO}_3)_2$, used in fertilizer, as a furnace refractory, and as a construction and ceramic material. 2. A magnesia-rich sedimentary rock resembling limestone. [French, after Déodat de Dolomieu (1750-1801), French geologist.] — dol'·o·mit'ic (-mīt'ik) adj. — dol'·o·mit'·i·za'tion (-mīt'ī-zā'shən) n. — dol'·o·mit·ize' (-mī-tīz') v.

Do·lo·mite Alps (dō'lə-mīt' əlps, dōl'ə-) A range of the eastern Alps in northeast Italy rising to 3,344.3 m (10,965 ft). The dolomitic limestone peaks of the range are famous for their vivid coloring at sunrise and sunset.

do·lor (dō'lər) n. Sorrow; grief. [Middle English dolour, from Old French, from Latin dolor, pain, from dolēre, to suffer, feel pain.]

do·lo·ro·so (dō'lə-rō'sō) Music. adv. With a mournful or plaintive tempo or quality. Used chiefly as a direction. — adj. Mournful; plaintive. [Italian, from Latin dolōrōsus, dolorous. See DOLOROUS.]

do·lor·ous (dō'lər-əs, dōl'ər-) adj. Marked by or exhibiting sorrow, grief, or pain. [Middle English, from Old French doloros, from Late Latin dolōrōsus, from dolor, dolor. See DOLOR.] — do'lor·ous·ly adv. — do'lor·ous·ness n.

do·lour (dō'lər) n. Chiefly British. Variant of dolor.

dol·phin (dōl'fīn, dōl'-) n. 1. Any of various marine cetacean mammals, such as the bottle-nosed dolphin, of the family Delphinidae, related to the whales but generally smaller and having a beaklike snout. 2. Either of two marine game fishes (Coryphaena hippurus or C. equisetis) having iridescent coloring. [Middle English, from Old French daulfin, blend of daufin, and Old Provençal dalfin both from Medieval Latin dalfinus*, from Latin delphinus, from Greek delphis, delfin-, from delphus, womb (from its shape).]

dolphin striker (dōl'fīn strī'kər) n. Nautical. A small vertical spar under the bowsprit of a sailboat that extends and helps support the martingale.

dolt (dōlt) n. A person regarded as stupid. [Middle English dulte, from past participle of dullen, to dull, from dul, dull. See DULL.] — dolt'ish adj. — dolt'ish·ly adv. — dolt'ish·ness n.

Dol·ton (dōl'tən) A village of northern Illinois south of Chicago. It is a manufacturing center in a truck-farming area. Population, 23,930.

Dom (dōm; Portuguese dōN) n. 1. Used formerly as a title for men of Portuguese and Brazilian royalty, aristocracy, and hierarchy, preceding the given name. 2. Roman Catholic Church. Used as a title before the names of Benedictine and Carthusian monks in major or minor orders. [Portuguese, from Latin dominus, lord, master. See dem- in Appendix.]

dom. abbr. 1. Domestic. 2. Dominant. 3. Dominion.

Dom. abbr. Roman Catholic Church. Dominican.

D.O.M. abbr. Latin. Deo Optimo Maximo (to God, the best and the greatest).

-dom suff. 1. State; condition: stardom. 2. a. Domain; position; rank: dukedom. b. Those that collectively have a specified position, office, or character: officialdom. [Middle English, from Old English -dōm. See dhē- in Appendix.]

Do·magk (dō'mäk'), Gerhard. 1895-1964. German biochemist. He won a 1939 Nobel Prize for his work on the antibacterial effect of sulfa drugs.

do·main (dō-mān') n. 1. A territory over which rule or control is exercised. 2. A sphere of activity, concern, or function; a field: the domain of history. See Synonyms at field. 3. Physics. Any of numerous contiguous regions in a ferromagnetic material in which the direction of spontaneous magnetization is uniform and different from that in neighboring regions. 4. Law. a. The land of one with paramount title and absolute ownership. b. Public domain.

5. Mathematics. a. The set of all possible values of an independent variable of a function. b. An open connected set that contains at least one point. [French domaine, blend of Old French demaine (from Late Latin dominicum), and Latin dominium, property both from dominus, lord. See dem- in Appendix.]

dome (dōm) n. 1. a. A hemispherical roof or vault. b. A structure or other object resembling such a hemispherical roof or vault. 2. Slang. The human head. 3. Chemistry. A form of crystal with two similarly inclined faces that meet at an edge parallel to the horizontal axis. 4. Archaic. A large, stately building. — v.

domed, dom-ing, domes. — v. tr. 1. To cover with or as if with a hemispherical roof or vault. 2. To shape like such a roof or vault. — v. intr. To rise or swell into the shape of a hemispherical roof or vault. [From French dôme, dome, cathedral (from Italian duomo, cathedral, from Latin domus, house); see dem- in Appendix, and from French dôme, roof (from Provençal doma, from Greek dōma, house); see dem- in Appendix.]

Do-me-ni-chi-no (dō-mā'nə-kē'nō, dō-mě'nē-kē'nō), 1581-1641. Italian painter of the baroque eclectic school who is noted for his religious and mythological works, including several frescoes of Saint Cecilia.

Domes-day Book (dōmz'dā' bōök, dōmz'-) also Dooms-day Book (dōmz'-) n. The written record of a census and survey of English landowners and their property made by order of William the Conqueror in 1085-1086.

[From Middle English domesday, doomsday. See DOOMSDAY.]

do-mes-tic (də-mēs'tik) adj. Abbr. dom. 1. Of or relating to the family or household: domestic chores. 2. Fond of home life and household affairs. 3. Tame or domesticated. Used of animals. 4. Of or relating to a country's internal affairs: domestic issues such as tax rates and highway construction.

5. Produced in or indigenous to a particular country: domestic oil; domestic wine.

— n. Abbr. dom. 1. A household servant. 2. a. Cotton cloth. b. Often domestics. Household linens. 3. A product or substance discovered in, developed in, or exported from a particular country. [Middle English, from Old French domestique, from Latin domesticus, from domus, house. See dem- in Appendix.] —do-mes'ti-cal-ly adv.

do-mes-ti-cate (də-mēs'ti-kāt') v. tr. do-mes-ti-cat-ed, do-mes-ti-cat-ing, do-mes-ti-cates. 1. To cause to feel comfortable at home; make domestic. 2. To adopt or make fit for domestic use or life. 3. a. To train or adapt (an animal or a plant) to live in a human environment and be of use to human beings. b. To introduce and accustom (an animal or a plant) into another region; naturalize. 4. To bring down to the level of the ordinary person. —do-mes'ti-ca'tion n.

do-mes-tic-i-ty (dō'mě-stis'ī-tē) n. pl. do-mes-tic-i-ties. 1. The quality or condition of being domestic. 2. Home life or devotion to it. 3. domesticities. Household affairs.

do·mes·ti·cize (də-mēs'tī-sīz') v. tr. do·mes·ti·cized, do·mes·ti·ciz·ing, do·mes·ti·ciz·es. To domesticate.

domestic partner (də-mēs'tīk pārt'nər) n. A person with whom one cohabits in a sexual relationship.

domestic prelate (də-mēs'tīk prēl'īt) n. Roman Catholic Church. A priest who is an honorary member of the papal household.

domestic relations court (də-mēs'tīk rī-lā'shənz kōrt) n. Law. In certain U.S. states, a court with jurisdiction over family disputes, especially those involving the custody, support, and welfare of children.

do·mi·cal (dō'mī-kəl, dōm'i-) adj. Shaped like or having a dome. [DOM(E) + (CON)ICAL.] —do'mi·cal·ly adv.

dom·i·cile (dōm'i-sīl', -səl, dō'mī-) n. 1. A residence; a home. 2. One's legal residence. — v. dom·i·ciled, dom·i·cil·ing, dom·i·ciles. — v. tr. 1. To establish (oneself or another person) in a residence. 2. To provide with often temporary lodging. — v. intr. To reside; dwell. [Middle English domicilie, from Old French domicile, from Latin domicilium, from domus, house. See dem- in Appendix.] —dom'i·cil'i·ar'y (-sīl'ē-ēr'ē) adj.

dom·i·nance (dōm'ə-nəns) n. The condition or fact of being dominant.

dom·i·nant (dōm'ə-nənt) adj. Abbr. dom. 1. Exercising the most influence or control. 2. Most prominent, as in position; ascendant. 3. Genetics. Of, relating to, or being an allele that produces the same phenotypic effect whether inherited with a homozygous or heterozygous allele. 4. Ecology. Of, relating to, or being a species that is most characteristic of an ecological community and usually determines the presence, abundance, and type of other species. 5. Music. Relating to or based on the fifth tone of a diatonic scale. — n. Abbr. dom. 1. Genetics. A dominant allele or trait. 2. Ecology. A dominant species. 3. Music. The fifth tone of a diatonic scale. [Middle English dominaunt, from Old French, from Latin domināns, dominant- present participle of dominārī, to dominate. See DOMINATE.] —dom'i·nant·ly adv.

SYNONYMS: dominant, predominant, preponderant, paramount, preeminent. These adjectives mean surpassing all others in power, influence, or position. Dominant applies to what exercises principal control or authority or is unmistakably ascendant: The Soviet Union is the dominant nation of Eastern Europe. Predominant is often nearly identical with dominant but more often implies being uppermost at a particular time or for the time being: "Egrets, gulls and small mammals are the predominant wildlife on the island these days" (Dan McCoubrey). Preponderant implies superiority as the result of outweighing or outnumbering all others: "No big modern war has been won without preponderant sea power" (Samuel Eliot Morison). Paramount means first in importance, rank, or regard: "My paramount object in this struggle is to save the Union" (Abraham Lincoln). Preeminent especially suggests generally recognized supremacy: He is the preeminent tenor of the modern era.

dom·i·nate (dŏm'ə-nāt') v. dom·i·nat·ed, dom·i·nat·ing, dom·i·nates.

— v. tr. 1. To control, govern, or rule by superior authority or power: Successful leaders dominate events rather than react to them. 2. To exert a supreme, guiding influence on or over: Ambition dominated their lives. 3. To enjoy a commanding, controlling position in: a drug company that dominates the tranquilizer market.

4. To overlook from a height: a view from the cliffside chalet that dominates the valley. — v. intr. 1. To have or exert strong authority or mastery. 2. To be situated in or occupy a position that is more elevated or decidedly superior to others. [Latin dominārī, domināt-, to rule, from dominus, lord. See dem- in Appendix.]

—dom'i·na'tive adj. —dom'i·na'tor n.

dom·i·na·tion (dŏm'ə-nā'shən) n. 1. a. Mastery or supremacy over another or others. b. The exercise of such mastery or supremacy. 2. dominations.

Theology. The fourth of the nine orders of angels. In this sense, also called dominions dom·i·na·trix (dŏm'ə-nā'trīks) n. pl. dom·i·na·trix·es or dom·i·na·tri·ces (-nā'trī-sēz', -nə-trī'sēz). 1. A woman who acts out the role of the dominating partner in a sadomasochistic relationship. 2. A woman regarded as overbearing.

[DOMINA(TE) + -TRIX.]

dom·i·neer (dŏm'ə-nîr') v. dom·i·neered, dom·i·neer·ing, dom·i·neers.

— v. tr. To rule over or control arbitrarily or arrogantly; tyrannize. — v. intr. To exercise arbitrary or arrogant rule or control. [Dutch domineren, from French dominer, from Latin dominārī, to dominate. See DOMINATE.]

dom·i·neer·ing (dŏm'ə-nîr'ing) adj. Tending to domineer; overbearing.

—dom'i·neer'ing·ly adv.

Do·min·go (də-mīng'gō, dō-měng'gō), Placido. Born 1941. Spanish-born opera singer known for his outstanding performances as a lyric-dramatic tenor.

Dom·i·nic (dŏm'ə-nīk), Saint. 1170?-1221. Spanish-born priest who preached against the Albigensian heresy and founded the Dominican order of friars (1216).

Dom·i·ni·ca (dŏm'ə-nē'kə, də-mīn'ī-kə) An island country of the eastern Caribbean between Guadeloupe and Martinique. Discovered by Christopher Columbus in 1493, the island became a British colony in the early 1800's and gained its independence in 1978. Roseau is the capital. Population, 77,000. —Dom'i·ni·can adj. & n.

do·min·i·cal (də-mīn'ī-kəl) adj. Ecclesiastical. 1. Of or associated with Jesus as the Lord. 2. Relating to Sunday as the Lord's day. [Late Latin dominicālis, from Latin dominicus, of a lord, from dominus, lord. See dem- in Appendix.]

Do·min·i·can¹ (də-mɪn'ɪ-kən) adj. Of or relating to the Dominican Republic or its people or culture. — n. 1. A native or inhabitant of the Dominican Republic. 2. A person of Dominican ancestry.

Do·min·i·can² (də-mɪn'ɪ-kən) n. Abbr. Dom. Roman Catholic Church. A member of an order of preaching friars established in 1216 by Saint Dominic. — Do·min'·i·can adj.

Dominican Republic (də-mɪn'ɪ-kən rɪ-pʊb'lɪk) A country of the West Indies on the eastern part of the island of Hispaniola. The country became independent from Haiti in 1844 but has had a turbulent history, including many years of dictatorship under Rafael Trujillo Molina (1930-1961). Santo Domingo is the capital and the largest city. Population, 5,674,977.

Dom·i·nick (dɒm'ə-nɪk) n. Variant of Dominique.

dom·i·nie (dɒm'ə-nē', dɒ'mə-) n. Scots. 1. A cleric. 2. A schoolmaster.

[Obsolete domine, clergyman, from Latin, vocative of dominus, lord. See dem- in Appendix.]

do·min·ion (də-mɪn'yən) n. Abbr. dom. 1. Control or the exercise of control; sovereignty: "The devil... has their souls in his possession, and under his dominion" (Jonathan Edwards). 2. A territory or sphere of influence or control; a realm. 3. Often Dominion. One of the self-governing nations within the British Commonwealth. 4. dominions. Theology. See domination (n., sense 2). [Middle English dominioun, from Old French dominion, from Medieval Latin dominiō, dominion-, from Latin dominium, property, from dominus, lord. See dem- in Appendix.]

Dominion Day (də-mɪn'yən dā) n. July 1, observed in Canada in commemoration of the formation of the Dominion in 1867.

Dom·i·nique (dɒm'ə-nēk', dɒm'ə-nɪk) also Dom·i·nick (dɒm'ə-nɪk) n. One of a breed of American domestic fowl having gray, barred plumage, yellow legs, and a rose-colored comb. [After Dominica.]

dom·i·no¹ (dɒm'ə-nō') n. pl. dom·i·noes or dom·i·nos. 1. Games. a. A small, rectangular, wood or plastic block, the face of which is divided into halves, each half being blank or marked by one to six dots resembling those on dice.

b. dominoes or dominos. (used with a sing. or pl. verb). A game played with a set of these small blocks, generally 28 in number. 2. A country expected to react politically to events as predicted by the domino theory: "The dominos did indeed fall in Indochina" (Arthur M. Schlesinger, Jr.). [French, probably from domino, mask, perhaps because of the resemblance between the eyeholes and the spots on some of the tiles. See DOMINO².]

dom·i·no² (dɒm'ə-nō') n. pl. dom·i·noes or dom·i·nos. 1. a. A costume consisting of a hooded robe worn with an eye mask at a masquerade. b. The mask so worn. 2. One wearing this costume. [French, probably from Latin (benedicāmus) dominō, (let us praise) the Lord, from dominus, lord. See dem- in Appendix.]

Dom·i·no (dōm'ə-nō'), Fats. Originally Antoine Domino. Born 1928. American singer, pianist, and songwriter whose popular rhythm and blues songs of the early 1950's include Ain't It A Shame and Blue Monday.

domino effect (dōm'ə-nō' ĭ-fěkt') n. A cumulative effect produced when one event sets off a chain of similar events: the domino effect of increasing the speed limit in one of several contiguous states. [So called from the fact that a row of dominoes stood on end will fall in succession if the first one is knocked over.]

domino theory (dōm'ə-nō' thē'ə-rē) n. 1. A theory that if one nation comes under Communist control, then neighboring nations will also come under Communist control. 2. A theory that one event will set off a train of similar events.

Do·mi·tian (də-mīsh'ən), A.D. 51-96. Emperor of Rome (81-96) who completed the conquest of Britain. After 89 his government became dictatorial, leading to a reign of terror. Domitian was assassinated by a freedman in connivance with his empress and officers of the court.

Dom·ré·my·la·Pu·celle (dōn-rā-mē-lä-pü-sěl') A village of northeast France on the Meuse River east of Troyes. Joan of Arc was born here.

don¹ (dōn) n. 1. Don. Abbr. D. Used as a courtesy title before the name of a man in a Spanish-speaking area. 2. Chiefly British. a. A head, tutor, or fellow at a college of Oxford or Cambridge. b. A college or university professor. 3. The leader of an organized-crime family. 4. Archaic. An important personage. [Spanish dialectal, and Italian both from Latin dominus, lord. See dem- in Appendix.]

don² (dōn) v. tr. donned, don·ning, dons. 1. To put on (clothing). 2. To assume or take on: donned the air of the injured party. [Middle English, contraction of do on, to put on. See DO¹.]

Do·ña (dō'nyä) n. Used as a courtesy title before the name of a woman in a Spanish-speaking area. [Spanish, from Latin domina, feminine of dominus, lord. See DON¹.]

do·nate (dō'nāt', dō-nāt') v. tr. do·nat·ed, do·nat·ing, do·nates. To present as a gift to a fund or cause; contribute. [Back-formation from DONATION.] —do'na·tor n.

Don·a·tel·lo (dōn'ə-těl'ō, dō'nä-těl'lō), 1386?-1466. Italian sculptor renowned as a pioneer of the Renaissance style with his natural, lifelike figures, such as the bronze statue David.

do·na·tion (dō-nā'shən) n. 1. The act of giving to a fund or cause. 2. A gift or grant; a contribution. [Middle English donacioun, gift, benefice, from Old French, from Latin dōnātiō, dōnātiōn-, from dōnātus, past participle of dōnāre, to give, from dōnum, gift. See dō- in Appendix.]

Don-a-tist (dɔ̃n'ə-tɪst, dō'nə-) n. A member of a rigorist, schismatic Christian sect, strongly opposed by Saint Augustine, that arose in North Africa in the fourth century A.D. and believed in sanctity as requisite for church membership and administration of all sacraments. [Medieval Latin Donatista, after Donatus, fourth-century A.D. ecclesiastic and rival claimant of the bishopric of Carthage.]

—Don'a-tism n.

don-a-tive (dō'nə-tív, dɔ̃n'ə-) n. A special donation; a gift. — adj. Characterized by, constituting, or subject to donation. [Latin dōnātívum, from neuter of dōnātívus, of a donation, from dōnātus, past participle of dōnāre, to give. See DONATION.]

Don-bas (dɔ̃n'bäs) See Donets Basin.

Don-cas-ter (dɔ̃ng'kə-stər) A borough of north-central England northeast of Sheffield. A manufacturing center, it is the site of a famous annual horserace, the St. Leger. Population, 81,900.

done (dũn) v. Past participle of do¹. — adj. 1. Having been carried out or accomplished; finished: a done deed. 2. Cooked adequately. 3. Socially acceptable: Spitting on the street is just not done in polite society. 4. Informal. Totally worn out; exhausted. —idiom. done for. Informal. Doomed to death or destruction. —done'ness n.

do-nee (dō-nē') n. The recipient of a gift. [DON(OR) + -EE¹.]

Do-nets (də-něts', dũ-nyěts') A river rising in western Russia and flowing about 1,046 km (650 mi) through eastern Ukraine to join the Don River.

Donets Basin also Don-bas (dɔ̃n'bäs) A major industrial region of eastern Ukraine and southwest Russia lying north of the Sea of Azov and west of the Donets River. Developed after the 1870's, it is one of the densest industrial concentrations in the world.

Do-netsk (də-nětsk', dũ-nyěts') A city of eastern Ukraine east-southeast of Kiev. Founded c. 1870, it is the leading industrial center of the region. Population, 1,073,000.

dong¹ (dɔ̃ng, dɔ̃ng) n. A basic unit of currency in Vietnam. See Table at currency. [Vietnamese, from Chinese tóng, copper coin.]

dong² (dɔ̃ng, dɔ̃ng) n. Vulgar Slang. A penis. [Origin unknown.]

Dö-nitz (dœ'nɪts), Karl. See Karl Doenitz.

Don-i-zet-ti (dɔ̃n'ĩ-zět'ē, dō'nē-dzět'tē), Gaetano. 1797-1848. Italian composer of some 75 operas, including Lucia di Lammermoor (1835).

don-jon (dɔ̃n'jən, dũn'-) n. The fortified main tower of a castle; a keep. [Variant of DUNGEON.]

Don Juan (dɔ̃n wɔ̃n', hwɔ̃n', jɔ̃o'ən) n. 1. A libertine; a profligate. 2. A man who is an obsessive seducer of women. [After Don Juan, legendary 14th-century Spanish nobleman and libertine.]

don·key (dǒng'kē, dǔng'-, dōng'-) n. pl. don-keys. 1. The domesticated ass (Equus asinus). 2. Slang. An obstinate person. 3. Slang. A stupid person. [Perhaps from the name Duncan, or of imitative origin.]

donkey engine (dǒng'kē ěn'jǐn) n. 1. A small auxiliary steam engine used for hoisting or pumping, especially aboard ship. 2. A small locomotive.

don·key's tail (dǒng'kēz tāl, dǔng'-, dōng'-) n. See burro's tail.

don·key·work (dǒng'kē-wūr'k', dǔng'-, dōng'-) n. Slang. Hard physical labor.

Don·na (dǒn'ə, dōn'nä) n. Used as a courtesy title before the name of a woman in an Italian-speaking area. [Italian, from Latin domina. See DOÑA.]

Donne (dǔn), John. 1572-1631. English metaphysical poet and divine who served as chaplain to James I and dean of Saint Paul's Cathedral (after 1621). His works include Divine Poems (1607).

don·née (dǒ-nā', dō-) n. 1. A set of literary or artistic principles or assumptions on which a creative work is based: "He worked outward from the donnée toward the expression of some general theme or idea" (Hugh Honour). 2. A set of notions, facts, or conditions that governs and shapes an act or a way of life: "His heart, his mind, his body, composed the donnée of his life" (Louis Auchincloss). [French, from feminine past participle of donner, to give, from Old French, from Latin dōnāre. See DONATE.]

Don·nel·ly (dǒn'ə-lē), Ignatius. 1831-1901. American politician and reformer who was active in the foundation of the Populist Party.

Don·ner Pass (dǒn'ər päs) A pass, 2,162.1 m (7,089 ft) high, in the Sierra Nevada of eastern California near Lake Tahoe. It is named after the Donner Party of westward migrants whose survivors supposedly practiced cannibalism after being trapped in a snowstorm near here in October 1846.

don·nish (dǒn'ish) adj. Of, relating to, or held to be characteristic of a university don; bookish or pedantic. See Synonyms at pedantic.

don·ny·brook (dǒn'ē-brōōk') n. An uproar; a free-for-all. See Synonyms at brawl. [After Donnybrook fair, held annually in Donnybrook, a suburb of Dublin, Ireland, and noted for its brawls.]

do·nor (dō'nər) n. 1. One that contributes something, such as money, to a cause or fund. 2. Medicine. One from whom blood, tissue, or an organ is taken for use in a transfusion or transplant. 3. Electronics. An element introduced into a semiconductor with a negative valence greater than that of the pure semiconductor. [Middle English, from Anglo-Norman donour, from Latin dōnātor, from dōnāre, to give. See DONATION.]

donor card (dō'nər kărd) n. A card, usually carried on one's person, authorizing the use of one's bodily organs for transplantation in the event of one's death.

do-no·thing (dō'nūth'ɪŋ) Informal. adj. Offering no initiative for change, especially in politics. — n. An idle or lazy person. — do'-no'thing-ism n.

Don-o-van (dɒn'ə-vən), William Joseph. Known as “Wild Bill.” 1883-1959. American army officer and public official who founded and directed (1942-1945) the Office of Strategic Services, an intelligence-gathering agency that was a forerunner of the CIA.

Don Qui-xo-te (dɒn' kē-hō'tē, kwɪk'sət) n. An impractical idealist bent on righting incorrigible wrongs. [After Don Quixote, hero of a satirical chivalric romance by Miguel de Cervantes.]

Don River (dɒn rɪv'ər) A river of western Russia flowing about 1,963 km (1,220 mi) generally south then west into the northeast Sea of Azov. It is linked with the Volga River by a canal near Volgograd.

don't (dɒnt) 1. Do not. 2. Non-Standard. Does not. — n. pl. don'ts (dɒnts). A statement of what should not be done: a list of the do's and don'ts.

do-nut (dō'nūt', -nət) n. Variant of doughnut.

doo-dad (dō'dād') n. Informal. An unnamed or nameless gadget or trinket.

doo-dle (dōd'l) v. doo-dled, doo-dling, doo-dles. — v. intr. 1. To scribble aimlessly, especially when preoccupied. 2. To kill time. — v. tr. To draw (figures) while preoccupied. — n. A figure, design, or scribble drawn or written absent-mindedly. [English dialectal, to fritter away time, perhaps from doodle, fool. See DOODLEBUG.]

WORD HISTORY: One might wonder what, if any, connection exists among Yankee Doodle, a doodlebug, and the doodle that one draws when one is bored or abstracted. The word doodle in the latter two uses may come from a Low German word meaning “fool.” “Fool,” the first (and now probably obsolete) sense of the word doodle to be recorded in English (1628), would seem naturally to have been used in Yankee Doodle, the name of a tune composed in 1755 to mock the American colonists. However, the origin of Doodle in this expression is unknown; it may be from tootle, because the piece was apparently composed originally for flute or fife. In the case of doodlebug, it is thought that doodle, meaning “simpleton,” is the first part of the insect name. The sense “absent-minded scrawl” may come directly from the sense “fool” or from a British dialectal verb, meaning “to cheat, fritter time away,” that was derived from the noun sense “fool.”

doo-dle-bug (dōd'l-bŭg') n. 1. See ant lion (n., sense 2). 2. A divining rod. [Perhaps dialectal doodle, fool, simpleton (from Low German dudel-) + BUG.]

doo-doo (dō'dō) n. Slang. Fecal matter or something likened to it. [Of baby-talk origin.]

doo-hick-ey (dō'hɪk'ē) n. pl. doo-hick-eyes. Informal. An unnamed gadget or trinket. [Perhaps DOO(DAD) + HICKEY.]

Doo-lit-tle (dōō'lit'l), Hilda. Pen name H.D. 1886-1961. American poet whose imagist verse was published in works such as Sea Garden (1916) and Helen in Egypt (1961).

Doo-lit-tle (dōō'lit'l), James Harold. Known as "Jimmy." 1896. American army officer and aviator who commanded daring bombing raids of Tokyo and other Japanese cities in April 1942.

doom (dōōm) n. 1. A decision or judgment, especially an official condemnation to a severe penalty. 2. Fate, especially a tragic or ruinous one. 3. Inevitable destruction or ruin. 4. Judgment Day. 5. A statute or ordinance, especially one in force in Anglo-Saxon England. — v. tr. doomed, doom-ing, dooms.

1. To condemn to ruination or death. See Synonyms at condemn. 2. To destine to an unhappy end. [Middle English dom, from Old English dōm, judgment. See dhē- in Appendix.]

doom palm (dōōm pä̃m) n. A palm (Hyphaene thebaica) native to the Nile Valley of northeast Africa and having oblong or ovoid fruits the size of an orange with a distinctive aroma and taste. Also called doum, gingerbread palm. [Probably from Arabic dialectal dōm.]

doom-say-er (dōōm'sā'ər) n. One who predicts calamity at every opportunity.

dooms-day (dōōmz'dā') n. Judgment Day. [Middle English domesday, from Old English dōmes dæg: dōm, judgment; see DOOM + dæg, day; see DAY.]

Dooms-day Book (dōōmz'dā' böök) n. Variant of Domesday Book.

Doon (dōōn) A river, about 48 km (30 mi) long, of southeast Scotland flowing through Loch Doon to the Firth of Clyde south of Ayr. The river is immortalized in the poetry of Robert Burns.

door (dōr, dōr) n. 1. a. A movable structure used to close off an entrance, typically consisting of a panel that swings on hinges or that slides or rotates. b. A similar part on a piece of furniture or a vehicle. 2. A doorway. 3. The room or building to which a door belongs: They live three doors down the hall. 4. A means of approach or access: looking for the door to success. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: a door chain; a door handle. — v. tr. doored, door-ing, doors. 1. Slang. To strike (a passing bicyclist, for example) by suddenly opening a vehicular door. 2. To serve as a doorman or doorwoman of (a nightclub, for example). — idioms. at (one's) door. Within one's sphere of accountability. close the door on (or shut the door on). To refuse to allow for the possibility of: The secretary of state closed the door on future negotiations. leave the door open. To allow for the possibility of: Let's leave the door open for future stylistic changes. show (someone) the door. Informal. 4. To eject (someone) from the premises. 5. To terminate the employment of; fire. [Middle English dor, from Old English duru, dor. See dhwer- in Appendix.] — door'less adj.

door-bell (dôr'bĕl', dōr'-) n. A bell, chime, or buzzer outside a door that is rung to announce the presence of a visitor or caller.

door-jamb (dôr'jăm', dōr'-) n. Either of the two vertical pieces framing a doorway and supporting the lintel. Also called doorpost door-keep-er (dôr'kē'pər, dōr'-) n. One who is employed to guard an entrance or gateway.

door-knob (dôr'nŏb', dōr'-) n. A knob-shaped handle for opening and closing a door.

door-man (dôr'măn', -mən, dōr'-) n. A man employed to attend the entrance of a hotel, an apartment house, or other building.

door-mat (dôr'măt', dōr'-) n. 1. A mat placed before a doorway for wiping the shoes. 2. Slang. One who submits meekly to domination or mistreatment by others.

door-nail (dôr'nāl', dōr'-) n. A large-headed nail. —idiom. dead as a doornail. Undoubtedly dead.

door opener (dôr ō'pə-nər) n. 1. An electromechanical or electronic device for automatically opening a door, as one to a garage. 2. Informal. An effective means of gaining success or seizing an opportunity.

Door Peninsula (dôr pə-nĭn'syə-lə) A peninsula of eastern Wisconsin between Green Bay and Lake Michigan. It is a cherry-growing region.

door-post (dôr'pŏst', dōr'-) n. See doorjamb.

door prize (dôr prĭz) n. A prize awarded by lottery to the holder of a ticket purchased at or before a function.

door-sill (dôr'sĭl', dōr'-) n. The threshold of a doorway.

door-step (dôr'stĕp', dōr'-) n. A step leading to a door.

door-stop (dôr'stŏp', dōr'-) n. 1. A wedge inserted beneath a door to hold it open at a desired position. 2. A weight or spring that prevents a door from slamming. 3. A rubber-tipped projection attached to a wall to protect it from the impact of an opening door.

door-way (dôr'wā', dōr'-) n. The entranceway to a room, building, or passage.

door-wom-an (dôr'wŏm'ən, dōr'-) n. A woman employed to attend the entrance of a hotel, an apartment house, or another building.

door-yard (dôr'yărd', dōr'-) n. The yard in front of the door of a house.

doo-wop or doo-wop (dōō'wŏp') n. Music. A style of music popularized in the 1950's and characterized by words and nonsense syllables sung in harmony by small groups against a stylized rhythmic melody. [Imitative.] —doo'-wop' adj.

doo-zy or doo-zie (dōō'zē) n. pl. doo-zies. Slang. Something extraordinary or bizarre: "Among the delicious names taken by, or given to, minor political parties in the United States... are these doozies: Quids, Locofocos, Barnburners, Coodies, Hunkies, Bucktails" (Saturday Review). [Possibly blend of DAISY, and Duesenberg, a luxury car of the late twenties and thirties.]

do·pa (dō'pə) n. An amino acid, C₉H₁₁NO₄, formed in the liver from tyrosine and converted to dopamine in the brain. [d(ihydr)o(xy)p(henyl)a(lanine).] do·pa·mine (dō'pə-mēn') n. A monoamine neurotransmitter formed in the brain by the decarboxylation of dopa and essential to the normal functioning of the central nervous system. A reduction in its concentration within the brain is associated with Parkinson's disease. [DOP(A) + AMINE.]

dop·ant (dō'pənt) n. Electronics. A substance, such as boron, added in small amounts to a pure semiconductor material to alter its conductive properties for use in transistors and diodes. [DOP(E) + -ANT.]

dope (dōp) n. 1. Informal. a. A narcotic, especially an addictive narcotic. b. Narcotics considered as a group. c. An illicit drug, especially marijuana. 2. A narcotic preparation used to stimulate a racehorse. 3. Informal. A person regarded as stupid. 4. Informal. Factual information, especially of a private nature. 5. Chemistry. An absorbent or adsorbent material used in certain manufacturing processes, such as the nitroglycerin used in making dynamite. 6. A type of lacquer formerly used to protect, waterproof, and tauten the cloth surfaces of airplane wings. 7. Chiefly Southern U.S. See cola¹. 8. Lower Northern U.S. Syrup or sweet sauce poured on ice cream. — v. doped, dop·ing, dopes. — v. tr. 1. Informal. a. To administer a narcotic to: was doped up for the operation. b. To add a narcotic to: They doped his drink before robbing him. 2. Informal. To figure out (a puzzle, for example). 3. Informal. To make a rough plan of: doped out our proposal on scratch paper. 4. Electronics. To treat (a semiconductor) with a dopant. — v. intr. Informal. To take narcotics. [Dutch doop, sauce, from doopen, to dip.] —dop'er n.

REGIONAL NOTE: Before it came to mean “a narcotic or narcotics considered as a group,” dope was borrowed into English from the Dutch word doop, “sauce.” Throughout the 19th century it meant “gravy.” In the lower northern United States, from Pennsylvania westward to Missouri, dope still means “a sauce of sorts”; it is now the term for a topping for ice cream, such as syrup or a chocolate or fruit sauce. In the South, on the other hand, dope means “a cola-flavored soft drink.” The term might be related to the northern usage as a reference to the sweet syrup base of a cola drink. However, folk wisdom has it that dope recalls the inclusion of minute amounts of cocaine in the original Atlanta recipe for Coca-Cola, which was named after this exotic ingredient.

dope sheet (dōp shēt) n. Slang. A scratch sheet.

dope·ster (dōp'stər) n. One that analyzes and forecasts future events, as in sports or politics.

dop·ey also dop·y (dō'pē) adj. dop·i·er, dop·i·est. Slang. 1. Dazed or lethargic, as if drugged. 2. Stupid; doltish: a dopey kid. 3. Silly; foolish: a dopey answer.

dop·pel·gāng·er or dop·pel·gang·er (döp'əl-gāng'ər, dōp'əl-gēng'ər) n. A ghostly double of a living person, especially one that haunts its fleshly counterpart. [German, a double : doppel, double (from French double); see DOUBLE + Gānger, goer (from Gang, a going, from Middle High German ganc, from Old High German).]

Dop·pler (döp'lər) adj. Of, relating to, or using the Doppler effect or Doppler radar.

Dop·pler (döp'lər), Christian Johann. 1803-1853. Austrian physicist and mathematician who first enunciated the principle known as the Doppler effect in 1842.

Doppler effect (döp'lər ĭ-fěkt') n. Physics. An apparent change in the frequency of waves, as of sound or light, occurring when the source and observer are in motion relative to each other, with the frequency increasing when the source and observer approach each other and decreasing when they move apart. [After Christian Johann DOPPLER.] Doppler radar (döp'lər rā'där) n. Radar that uses the Doppler effect to measure velocity.

dop·y (dō'pē) adj. Slang. Variant of dopey.

Dor. abbr. Doric.

Do·ra·do (də-rā'dō) n. A constellation of the Southern Hemisphere near Reticulum and Pictor, containing a great portion of the large Magellanic Cloud. [Spanish, dolphin (fish), from Late Latin deaurātus, past participle of deaurāre, to gild. See DORY².]

Do·ra·ti (dō-rā'tē), Antal. 1906-1988. Hungarian-born American conductor and composer whose recordings include a complete cycle of Haydn symphonies.

dor·bee·tle (dōr'bēt'l) n. A European dung beetle (Geotrupes stercorarius) that flies with a droning sound. [Obsolete dor, a buzzing bee or beetle (from Middle English dorre, from Old English dora) + BEETLE¹.]

Dor·ches·ter (dōr'chēs'tər, -chī-stər) A municipal borough of southern England west of Poole. An agricultural market, it was the model for Casterbridge in Thomas Hardy's novels. Population, 14,049.

Dor·dogne (dōr-dōn', -dōn'yə) A river rising in the Auvergne Mountains of south-central France and flowing about 483 km (300 mi) southwest to join the Garonne River north of Bordeaux and form the Gironde estuary.

Dor·drecht (dōr'drēkt', -drĕkht') also Dort (dōrt) A city of southwest Netherlands on the Meuse River southeast of Rotterdam. Founded in the 11th century, it is a railroad junction and river port. Population, 107,475.

Do·ré (dô·rā'), (Paul) Gustave. 1832-1883. French artist best known for his imaginative drawings and lithographs in editions of Balzac's Droll Stories (1856) and Cervantes's Don Quixote (1863).

Do·ri·an (dôr'ē-ən, dōr'-) n. One of a Hellenic people that invaded Greece around 1100 B.C. and remained culturally and linguistically distinct within the Greek world. [Latin Dōriānus, from Dōrius, from Greek Dōrios, from Dōris, Doris.] —Do'ri-an adj.

Dor·ic (dôr'ik, dōr'-) n. Abbr. Dor. A dialect of ancient Greek spoken in the Peloponnesus, Crete, certain of the Aegean Islands, Sicily, and southern Italy. — adj. Abbr. Dor. 1. Of, relating to, characteristic of, or designating Doric. 2. In the style of or designating the Doric order. [Latin Dōricus, from Greek Dōrikos, from Dōris, Doris.]

Doric order (dôr'ik ôr'dər) n. The oldest and simplest of the three orders of classical Greek architecture, characterized by heavy, fluted columns with plain, saucer-shaped capitals and no base.

Dor·is (dôr'is, dōr'-, dōr'-) An ancient region of central Greece. It was the traditional homeland of the Dorians.

Dor·king (dôr'kĭŋ) n. A heavy-bodied domestic fowl having five toes on each foot and raised chiefly for table use. [After Dorking, an urban district of southern England.]

dorm (dôrm) n. Informal. A dormitory.

Dor·ma·gen (dôr'mä-gən, dōr'-) A city of west-central Germany south of Düsseldorf. It is a manufacturing center. Population, 56,985.

dor·mant (dôr'mənt) adj. 1. Lying asleep or as if asleep; inactive. 2. Latent but capable of being activated: "a harrowing experience which... lay dormant but still menacing" (Charles Jackson). 3. Temporarily quiescent: a dormant volcano. See Synonyms at inactive. See Synonyms at latent. 4. In a condition of biological rest or inactivity characterized by cessation of growth or development and the suspension of many metabolic processes. [Middle English, from Old French, from present participle of dormir, to sleep, from Latin dormire.] —dor'man·cy n.

dor·mer (dôr'mər) n. 1. A window set vertically into a small gable projecting from a sloping roof. 2. The gable holding such a window. [Obsolete French dormeor, sleeping room, from dormir, to sleep. See DORMANT.]

dor·mie (dôr'mē) adj. Sports. Variant of dormy.

dor·min (dôr'mĭn) n. Abscisic acid. [DORM(ANCY) + -IN.]

dor·mi·to·ry (dôr'mĭ-tōr'ē, -tōr'ē) n. pl. dor-mi-to-ries. 1. A room providing sleeping quarters for a number of persons. 2. A building for housing a number of persons, as at a school or resort. 3. A residential community whose inhabitants commute to a nearby metropolis for employment and recreation. [Latin dormītōrium, from dormītōrius, of sleep, from dormītus, past participle of dormīre, to sleep.]

dor-mouse (dôr'mous') n. Any of various small, squirrellike Old World rodents of the family Gliridae. [Middle English, probably alteration (influenced by mouse); see MOUSE, of Anglo-Norman dormeus, inclined to sleep, hibernating, from Old French dormir, to sleep. See DORMANT.]

dor-my also dor-mie (dôr'mē) adj. Sports. Ahead of an opponent in a golf match by as many strokes as there are holes remaining to be played. [Origin unknown.]

dor-nick¹ (dôr'nĭk) n. A coarse damask. [Middle English, after Doornik (Tournai), a city of southwest Belgium.]

dor-nick² (dôr'nĭk) n. Lower Northern U.S. A stone small enough to throw from a field being cleared. [Probably from Irish Gaelic dornóg, a small round stone.]

REGIONAL NOTE: The word dornick is used from Pennsylvania westward to Illinois. It probably comes from Irish Gaelic dornóg, “a small round stone.” However, it is not clear which group of Gaelic-speaking Irish immigrants brought the word with them. Craig M. Carver, author of American Regional Dialects, thinks it unlikely that dornick came over with the large numbers of Irish immigrants after the famine of 1846-1847 since the word was apparently well established in Missouri and Arkansas by the middle of the 19th century. Carver attributes the introduction of the term to the Scotch-Irish Protestants from Northern Ireland who emigrated to America in the 18th century. Dornick must have been one of the “few purely Irish terms” in the otherwise English and Scots lexicon of the Scotch-Irish.

Dor-nier (dôr-nyā'), Claude. 1884-1969. German aircraft builder who designed the first all-metal airplane (1911).

do-ron-i-cum (də-rŏn'ĭ-kəm) n. A plant of the genus Doronicum, which includes the leopard's bane. [New Latin, from Arabic dorūnaj, from Persian darūnak.]

Dorr (dôr), Thomas Wilson. 1805-1854. American politician and reformer who led Dorr's Rebellion (1842), a campaign to change Rhode Island's antiquated suffrage laws.

dors- pref. Variant of dorso-.

dor-sa (dôr'sə) n. Anatomy. Plural of dorsum.

dor-sad (dôr'săd') adv. Anatomy. In the direction of the back; dorsally.

dor-sal (dôr'səl) adj. 1. Anatomy. Of, toward, on, in, or near the back or upper surface of an organ, a part, or an organism. 2. Botany. Of or on the outer surface, underside, or back of an organ. [Middle English, from Late Latin dorsālis, from Latin dorsuālis, from dorsum, back.] —dor'sal-ly adv.

dorsal fin (dôr'səl fɪn) n. The main fin located on the back of fishes and certain marine mammals.

dorsal root (dôr'səl rōōt) n. The more posterior of the two nerve fiber bundles of a spinal nerve that carries sensory information to the central nervous system.

Dor-set (dôr'sīt) A region of southwest England on the English Channel. Part of the Anglo-Saxon kingdom of Wessex, it was used as the setting for many of Thomas Hardy's novels.

Dor-set (dôr'sīt), First Earl of. See Thomas Sackville.

Dorset Horn (dôr'sīt hôrn) n. A domestic sheep of a breed having large horns and medium-length, fine-textured wool. [After Dorset, England.]

Dor-sey (dô'sē), Tommy. 1905-1956. American band leader. He and his brother Jimmy (1904-1957) were known for their swing bands that were particularly popular in the 1930's and 1940's.

dorsi- pref. Variant of dorso-.

dor-si-ven-tral (dôr'sī-vĕn'trəl) or dor-so-ven-tral (-sō-) adj. 1. Botany. Flattened and having distinct upper and lower surfaces, as most leaves do.

2. Biology. Extending from a dorsal to a ventral surface: dorsiventral muscles.

—dor'si-ven'tral-ly adv.

dorso- or dorsi- or dors- pref. 1. Back: dorsad. 2. Dorsal: dorsoventral. [From Latin dorsum, back.]

dor-so-lat-er-al (dôr'sō-lăt'ər-əl) adj. Of or involving both the back and the side. —dor'so-lat'er-al-ly adv.

dor-so-ven-tral (dôr'sō-vĕn'trəl) adj. Biology & Botany. Variant of dorsiventral.

Dor-sten (dôr'stən, dôr'-) A city of west-central Germany north of Essen. Founded in the 11th century, it was heavily bombed during World War II. Population, 72,020.

dor-sum (dôr'səm) n. pl. dor-sa (-sə). Anatomy. 1. The back. 2. The upper, outer surface of an organ, an appendage, or a part: the dorsum of the foot. [Latin, back.]

Dort (dôrt) See Dordrecht.

Dort-mund (dôrt'mənd, -mōōnt') A city of west-central Germany north-northeast of Cologne. First mentioned c. 885, it flourished from the 13th to the 17th century as a member of the Hanseatic League. Population, 579,697.

Dor-val (dôr-văl') A town of southern Quebec, Canada, a residential suburb of Montreal on the southern shore of Montreal Island. Population, 17,722.

do-ry¹ (dôr'ē, dôr'ē) n. pl. do-ries. Nautical. A small, narrow, flat-bottomed fishing boat with high sides and a sharp prow. [Origin unknown.]

do-ry² (dôr'ē, dōr'ē) n. pl. do-ries. 1. John Dory. 2. See walleye (n., sense 3). [Middle English dorre, from Old French doree, from feminine past participle of dorer, to gild, from Late Latin deaurāre: Latin de-, de- + Latin aurum, gold.]

DOS (dōs, dôs) n. Computer Science. An operating system that resides on a disk. [D(ISK) O(PERATING) S(YSTEM).]

dos·age (dō'sij) n. 1. a. Administration of a therapeutic agent in prescribed amounts. b. Determination of the amount to be so administered. c. The amount so administered. 2. Addition of an ingredient to a substance in a specific amount, especially to wine.

dose (dōs) n. Abbr. d., D. 1. Medicine. a. A specified quantity of a therapeutic agent, such as a drug or medicine, prescribed to be taken at one time or at stated intervals. b. The amount of radiation administered as therapy to a given site. 2. An ingredient added, especially to wine, to impart flavor or strength. 3. Informal. An amount, especially of something unpleasant, to which one is subjected: a dose of hard luck. 4. Slang. A venereal infection. — v. tr. dosed, dos·ing, dos·es. 1. To give (someone) a dose, as of medicine. 2. To give or prescribe (medicine) in specified amounts. [French, from Late Latin dosis, from Greek dosis, something given, from didonai, to give. See dō- in Appendix.] —dos'er n.

Dos Her·ma·nas (dōs' hær-mä'nəs, dôs' ər-mä'näs) A city of southwest Spain, an industrial suburb of Seville. Population, 60,563.

do-si-do (dō'sē-dō') n. pl. do-si--dos. 1. A movement in square dancing in which two dancers approach each other and circle back to back, then return to their original positions. 2. The call given to signal such a movement. [Alteration of French dos à dos, back to back, from dos, back, from Old French. See DOSSIER.]

do·sim·e·ter (dō-sim'ī-tər) n. An instrument that measures and indicates the amount of x-rays or radiation absorbed in a given period. [DOS(E) + -METER.]

do·sim·e·try (dō-sim'ī-trē) n. Medicine. The accurate measurement of doses, especially of radiation. [DOS(E) + -METRY.] —do-si·met'ric (-sə-mět'rik) adj.

Dos Pas·sos (dōs päs'ōs), John Roderigo. 1896-1970. American writer whose works, such as the trilogy U.S.A. (1930-1936), combine narrative, stream of consciousness, biography, and newspaper quotations to depict American life.

doss (dōs) Chiefly British. n. A crude or makeshift bed. — v. intr. dosed, dos·ing, doss·es. To go to bed; sleep. [Perhaps alteration of dorse, back, from Latin dorsum.]

dos·sal also dos·sel (dōs'əl) n. An ornamental hanging of rich fabric, as behind an altar. [Medieval Latin dossāle, from neuter of dossālis, dorsal, from Late Latin dorsālis. See DORSAL.]

dos·si·er (dōs'ē-ā', dō'sē-ā') n. A collection of papers giving detailed information about a particular person or subject. [French, from Old French, bundle of papers labeled on the back, from dos, back, from Latin dorsum.]

do·st (düst) v. Archaic. A second person singular present tense of do¹.

Dos-to-yev-sky or Dos-to-ev-ski (dös'tə-yef'skē, -toi-, dūs-), Feodor Mikhailovich. 1821-1881. Russian writer whose works combine religious mysticism with profound psychological insight. His four great novels are Crime and Punishment (1866), The Idiot (1868-1869), The Possessed (1871), and The Brothers Karamazov (1879-1880). —Dos'to-yev'ski-an adj.

dot¹ (döt) n. 1. a. A tiny round mark made by or as if by a pointed instrument; a spot. b. Such a mark used in orthography, as above an i. 2. A tiny amount.

3. In Morse and similar codes, the short sound or signal used in combination with the dash and silent intervals to represent letters, numbers, or punctuation.

4. Mathematics. a. A decimal point. b. A symbol of multiplication. 5. Music. A mark after a note indicating an increase in time value by half. — v. dot-ted, dot-ting, dots. — v. tr. 1. To mark with a dot. 2. To form or make with dots.

3. To cover with or as if with dots: “Campfires, like red, peculiar blossoms, dotted the night” (Stephen Crane). — v. intr. To make a dot. —idiom. on the dot

(or at the dot). Exactly at the appointed time; punctual or punctually: arrived at nine o'clock on the dot. [Middle English dot*, from Old English dott, head of a boil.] —dot'ter n.

dot² (döt, dō) n. A woman's marriage portion; a dowry. [French, from Latin dōs, dōt-, dowry. See dō- in Appendix.] —do'tal (döt'l) adj.

dot-age (dō'tij) n. A deterioration of mental faculties; senility. [Middle English, from doten, to dote.]

dot-ard (dō'tərd) n. A person who is in his or her dotage. [Middle English, from doten, to dote.]

dote (dōt) v. intr. dot-ed, dot-ing, dotes. To show excessive love or fondness: parents who dote on their only child. See Synonyms at like¹. [Middle English doten.] —dot'er n.

doth (düth) v. Archaic. A third person singular present tense of do¹.

Do·than (dō'thən) A city of southeast Alabama near the Florida border. Settled in 1885, it is a trading center for a large agricultural area. Population, 53,589.

dot matrix (döt mā'triks) n. Computer Science. A dense grid of dots or pins used to form alphanumeric characters or designs, as by some computer printers and visual display units.

dot product (döt pröd'əkt) n. Mathematics. See scalar product. [From the use of a dot to indicate the function, as in x·y.]

dot-ted swiss (döt'id swis) n. A crisp cotton fabric, embellished with woven, flocked, or embroidered dots.

dot-tle (döt'l) n. The plug of tobacco ash left in the bowl of a pipe after it has been smoked. [From DOT¹, lump (obsolete).]

dot-ty (döt'tē) adj. dot-ti-er, dot-ti-est. 1. a. Mentally unbalanced; crazy.

b. Amusingly eccentric or unconventional. c. Ridiculous or absurd: a dotty scheme. 2. Having a feeble or unsteady gait; shaky. 3. Obsessively infatuated or enamored. [Probably alteration of Scots dottle, silly, from Middle English doten, to dote.] —dot/ti-ly adv. —dot/ti-ness n.

Dou or Douw (dou), Gerard or Gerrit. 1613-1675. Dutch genre painter whose works, such as Woman with Dropsy, are brighter and more detailed than those of his mentor, Rembrandt.

Dou-ai (dōō-ā′) Formerly Dou-ay (dōō-ā′). A town of northern France north-east of Amiens. Under the patronage of Philip II of Spain a Roman Catholic college for English priests was established here and produced the first English translation of the Old Testament in the early 1600's. Population, 42,576.

Dou-a-la also Du-a-la (dōō-ā′lä) The largest city of Cameroon, in the southwest part of the country on the Bight of Biafra. It is the country's chief port. Population, 841,000.

Dou-ay (dōō-ā′) See Douai.

Dou-ay Bible (dōō'ā bī'bəl, dōō-ā′) n. Abbr. D.Bib. An English translation of the Latin Vulgate Bible by Roman Catholic scholars. Also called Douay Version [After Douai, France.]

dou-ble (düb'əl) adj. Abbr. dbl. 1. Twice as much in size, strength, number, or amount: a double dose. 2. Composed of two like parts: double doors.

3. Composed of two unlike parts; dual: a double meaning; a double role for an actor. 4. Accommodating or designed for two: a double bed; a double room.

5. Characterized by duplicity; deceitful: speak with a double tongue. 6. Botany. Having many more than the usual number of petals, usually in a crowded or an overlapping arrangement: a double chrysanthemum. — n. Abbr. dbl.

1. Something increased twofold. 2. One that closely resembles another; a duplicate. 3. a. An actor's understudy. b. An actor who takes the place of another actor in scenes requiring special skills or preparations: a stunt double; a body double. 4. An apparition; a wraith. 5. a. A sharp turn in a direction of movement; a reversal. b. A sharp, often devious change in position or argument; a shift.

6. doubles. Sports. A form of a game, such as tennis or handball, having two players on each side. 7. Baseball. See two-base hit. 8. Games. a. A bid in bridge indicating strength to one's partner; a request for a bid. b. A bid doubling one's opponent's bid in bridge, thus increasing the penalty for failure to fulfill the contract. c. A hand justifying such a bid. — v. dou-bled, dou-bling, dou-bles. — v. tr. 1. To make twice as great. 2. To be twice as much as: dou-bled the score of his opponent. 3. To fold in two. 4. To clench (one's fist). 5. To duplicate; repeat. 6. To turn (an enemy spy) into a double agent. 7. Baseball.

a. To cause the scoring of (a run) by hitting a two-base hit. b. To advance or score (a runner) by hitting a two-base hit. 8. Baseball. To put out (a runner) as the second part of a double play. 9. Games. To challenge (an opponent's bid) with a double in bridge. 10. Music. To duplicate (another part or voice) an octave higher or lower or in unison. 11. Nautical. To sail around: double a cape. — v. intr. 1. To be increased twofold: The debt soon doubled. 2. To turn sharply or all the way around; reverse one's course: had to double back to touch the missed base. 3. To serve in an additional capacity: a frying pan that doubles as a pie tin; a conductor who doubles as a pianist. 4. To replace an actor in the actor's absence or in a certain scene. 5. Baseball. To hit a two-base hit. 6. Games. To announce a double in bridge. — adv. 1. To twice the amount or extent; doubly: paid double for the customized car. 2. Two together; in pairs: sleeping double. 3. In two: bent double. — phrasal verb. double up. 1. To bend suddenly, as in pain or laughter. 2. To share accommodations meant for one person. — idiom. on the double (or at the double). 1. Immediately. 2. In double time. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin duplus. See dwo- in Appendix.]

—dou'ble-ness n.

double agent (düb'əl ā'jənt) n. A person pretending to work as a spy for one government while actually working as a spy for another government.

double bar (düb'əl bär) n. Music. A double vertical or heavy black line drawn through a staff to indicate the end of any of the main sections of a composition.

dou-ble-bar-reled (düb'əl-bär'əld) adj. 1. Having two barrels mounted side by side: a double-barreled shotgun. 2. Serving two purposes; twofold.

double bass (düb'əl bās) n. Music. The largest bowed stringed instrument in the modern orchestra, also used frequently in jazz ensembles, especially played pizzicato. The double bass, usually considered a member of the violin family, is tuned in fourths and has the sloping shoulders and flat back characteristic of the viols. It has a deep range beginning about three octaves below middle C. Also called bass fiddle, bass viol, bull fiddle, contrabass, string bass.

double bassoon (düb'əl bə-sōon') n. See contrabassoon.

double bind (düb'əl bīnd) n. 1. A psychological impasse created when contradictory demands are made of an individual, such as a child or an employee, so that no matter which directive is followed, the response will be construed as incorrect. 2. A situation in which a person must choose between equally unsatisfactory alternatives; a punishing and inescapable dilemma.

double blind (düb'əl blīnd) n. A testing procedure, designed to eliminate biased results, in which the identity of those receiving a test treatment is concealed from both administrators and subjects until after the study is completed.

—dou'ble-blind' (düb'əl-blīnd') adj.

double boiler (düb'əl boi'lər) n. A cooking utensil consisting of two nested pans, designed to allow slow, even cooking or heating of food in the upper pan by the action of water boiling in the lower.

double bond (düb'əl bönd) n. A covalent bond in which two electron pairs are shared between two atoms.

dou-ble-breast-ed (düb'əl-brēs'tid) adj. 1. Fastened by lapping one edge of the front of a garment well over the other and usually having a double row of buttons with a single row of buttonholes. Used especially of a coat or jacket.

2. Having a double-breasted coat: a double-breasted suit.

double check (düb'əl chĕk) n. A careful reinspection or reexamination to assure accuracy or proper condition; verification.

dou-ble-check (düb'əl-chĕk') v. dou-ble--checked, dou-ble--check-ing, dou-ble--checks. — v. tr. To inspect or examine again; verify: double-checked the fuel gauge before taking off. — v. intr. To make a double check.

double chin (düb'əl chĭn) n. A fold of fatty flesh beneath the chin.

double coconut (düb'əl kō'kə-nūt') n. See coco-de-mer.

dou-ble-cross (düb'əl-krōs', -krōs') v. tr. dou-ble--crossed, dou-ble--cross-ing, dou-ble--cross-es. To betray by acting in contradiction to a prior agreement. See Synonyms at deceive. — n. 1. Often double cross. An act of betraying an ally, a friend, or an associate. 2. double cross. Genetics. A cross in which each parent is the product of a single cross. It can be represented as AB × CD, where A, B, C, and D are inbred lines. —dou'ble-cross'er n.

double dagger (düb'əl däg'ər) n. Printing. A reference mark (‡) used in printing and writing. Also called diesis double date (düb'əl dāt) n. A date in which two couples participate.

—dou'ble-date' (düb'əl-dāt') v.

Dou-ble-day (düb'əl-dā'), Abner. 1819-1893. American army officer traditionally considered the inventor of baseball, although a game similar to baseball predates him.

Dou-ble-day (düb'əl-dā'), Frank Nelson. 1862-1934. American publisher who founded Doubleday and McClure Company (1897).

dou-ble-deal-ing (düb'əl-dē'ling) adj. Duplicitous or deceitful; treacherous. — n. Duplicity or deceit; treachery. —dou'ble-deal'er n.

dou-ble-deck-er (düb'əl-dĕk'ər) n. Something, such as a vehicle, structure, or sandwich, that has two decks, floors, or layers.

double decomposition (düb'əl dē-kōm'pə-zĭsh'ən) n. A chemical reaction between two compounds in which the first and second parts of one reactant are united, respectively, with the second and first parts of the other reactant.

dou-ble-dig-it (düb'əl-dij'it) adj. Being between 10 and 99 percent: double-digit inflation.

double dip-ping (düb'əl dĭp'ing) n. The practice of drawing two incomes from the government, usually by holding a government job and receiving a pension, as for prior military service. —double dipper n.

double dribble (düb'əl drĭb'əl) n. Basketball. An illegal dribble in which a player uses both hands simultaneously to dribble the ball or begins to dribble the ball a second time after having come to a complete stop.

double dutch also double Dutch (düb'əl düch) n. A game of jump rope in which players jump over two ropes swung in a crisscross formation by two turners.

dou-ble-edged (düb'əl-ēj'd') adj. 1. Having two cutting edges: a double-edged blade. 2. a. Effective or capable of being interpreted in two ways: double-edged praise. b. Having a dual purpose: combat troops with a double-edged mission.

dou-ble-en-ten-dre (düb'əl-än-tän'drə, dōō-blän-tän'drə) n. 1. A word or phrase having a double meaning, especially when the second meaning is risqué. 2. The use of such a word or phrase; ambiguity. [Obsolete French : double, double + entendre, meaning, interpretation.]

double entry (düb'əl ɛn'trē) n. A method of bookkeeping in which a transaction is entered both as a debit to one account and a credit to another account, so that the totals of debits and credits are equal.

dou-ble-faced (düb'əl-fāst') adj. 1. Having two faces or aspects. 2. Usable on both sides: double-faced fabric. 3. Duplicitous; hypocritical.

double feature (düb'əl fē'chər) n. A movie program consisting of two full-length films.

double fertilization (düb'əl fûr'tl-ĩ-zā'shən) n. The union in flowering plants of two sperm nuclei. One sperm nucleus unites with the egg to form the diploid zygote, from which the embryo develops, and the other unites with two polar nuclei to form the triploid, primary endosperm nucleus.

dou-ble-head-er also dou-ble-head-er (düb'əl-hěd'ər) n. 1. Sports. Two games or events held in succession on the same program, especially in baseball. 2. A train pulled by two locomotives.

double helix (düb'əl hē'liks) n. The coiled structure of double-stranded DNA in which strands linked by hydrogen bonds form a spiral configuration.

dou-ble-hung window (düb'əl-hüŋg' wĩn'dō) n. A window having two sashes that slide up and down.

double indemnity (düb'əl ĩn-děm'nĩ-tē) n. A clause in an insurance policy that provides for payment of double the face value of the contract in case of accidental death.

double jeopardy (düb'əl jěp'ər-dē) n. Law. The act of putting a person through a second trial for an offense for which he or she has already been prosecuted or convicted.

dou-ble-joint-ed (düb'əl-join'tĩd) adj. Having unusually flexible joints, especially of the limbs or fingers.

double knit also dou-ble-knit (düb'əl-nĩt') n. A jerseylike fabric knitted on a machine equipped with two sets of needles so that a double thickness of fabric is produced in which the two sides of the fabric are interlocked. —dou'ble-knit' adj.

double negative (düb'əl nĕg'ə-tiv) n. Grammar. A construction that employs two negatives, especially to express a single negation.

USAGE NOTE: Double or multiple negatives are acceptably used when they combine to form an affirmative: He cannot just do nothing (that is, “he must do something”). An affirmative meaning is also assigned when not is used together with an adjective or adverb that begins with a negative prefix such as in- or un-, as in a not infrequent visitor, a not unwisely chosen plan. In these expressions the double negative conveys a weaker affirmative than would be conveyed by the positive adjective or adverb by itself; for example, a not infrequent visitor may visit less frequently than a frequent visitor. • A double (or more accurately, multiple) negative is considered unacceptable when it is used to convey or reinforce a negative meaning, as in He didn't say nothing (meaning in Standard English “he said nothing” or “he didn't say anything”). Such constructions—common usage in many other languages—were once wholly acceptable in English as well, so that Chaucer could say of the Friar, “Ther nas no man nowher so vertuous”; and Shakespeare could allow Viola to say of her heart, “Nor never none/Shall mistress of it be, save I alone.” But in the 18th century the view was advanced that, as one grammarian put it, “two Negatives in English destroy one another, or are equivalent to an Affirmative”; and today this view is accepted as dogma by all but those few scholars who are aware of just how pliable such logic can be. • The restriction on multiple negatives extends to the combination of negatives with adverbs such as hardly and scarcely; therefore it is regarded as incorrect to say I couldn't hardly do it or It scarcely needs no oil. These adverbs are “negatives” not in the sense that they express logical negation but rather in the sense that they derive their meaning by reference to the negative case; thus, hardly means “almost not at all.” Multiple negatives continue to be widely used in a number of nonstandard varieties of English and are quite often used by speakers of all backgrounds and educational levels when they want to strike a colloquial or popular note, as in We don't need no badges or You don't go nowhere 'til you clean up that room! But constructions like these are considered marks of ignorance or illiteracy when they appear in formal speech or in writing. • The canonical stricture on the use of double negatives to convey emphasis is suspended when the second negative appears in a separate clause, as in I will not surrender, not today, not ever or He does not seek money, no more than he seeks fame. Commas must be used to separate the negative phrases in these examples. The sentence He does not seek money no more than he seeks fame is unacceptable, whereas the equivalent sentence with any requires no comma: He does not seek money any more than he seeks fame. See Usage Note at hardly. See Usage Note at scarcely.

dou-ble-park (düb'əl-pärk') v. tr. intr. dou-ble--parked, dou-ble-park-ing, dou-ble--parks. To park alongside another vehicle already parked parallel to the curb. —dou'ble-park'er n.

double play (düb'əl plā) n. Abbr. DP Baseball. A play in which two players are put out.

double pneumonia (düb'əl nöō-mōn'yə) n. Pneumonia affecting both lungs.

dou-ble-quick (düb'əl-kwĭk') adj. Very quick; rapid. — n. A marching cadence; double time. — v. intr. tr. dou-ble--quicked, dou-ble--quick-ing, dou-ble--quicks. To double-time.

dou-bler (düb'lər) n. A device that doubles the frequency or voltage of an input signal.

double reed (düb'əl rēd) n. Music. 1. A pair of joined reeds that vibrate together to produce sound in certain wind instruments, such as bassoons and oboes. 2. An instrument in which sound is produced by a pair of joined reeds. —dou'ble-reed' adj.

double refraction (düb'əl rĭ-frăk'shən) n. See birefringence.

double rhyme (düb'əl rĭm) n. A two-syllable feminine rhyme, as in regal/eagle or attic/dramatic.

double salt (düb'əl sôlt) n. A salt, such as alum, that ionizes in solution as if it were two separate salts but forms a single substance upon crystallization.

dou-ble-space (düb'əl-spās') v. intr. tr. dou-ble--spaced, dou-ble-pac-ing, dou-ble--pac-es. To type so that there is a full space between lines.

dou-ble-speak (düb'əl-spēk') n. See double talk (n., sense 2).

double standard (düb'əl stän'dərd) n. A set of principles permitting greater opportunity or liberty to one than to another, especially the granting of greater sexual freedom to men than to women.

double star (düb'əl stār) n. See binary star.

dou-blet (düb'lĭt) n. 1. A close-fitting jacket, with or without sleeves, worn by European men between the 15th and 17th centuries. 2. a. A pair of similar or identical things. b. A member of such a pair. c. Physics. A multiplet with two members. 3. Linguistics. One of two words derived from the same historical source by different routes of transmission, such as skirt from Scandinavian and shirt from English. 4. doublets. Games. A throw of two dice in which the same number of dots appears on the upper face of each. [Middle English, from Old French, diminutive of double, double. See DOUBLE.] double take (düb'əl tāk) n. A delayed reaction to an unusual remark or circumstance, often used as a comic device.

double talk (düb'əl tōk) n. 1. Meaningless speech that consists of nonsense syllables mixed with intelligible words; gibberish. 2. Deliberately ambiguous or evasive language. In this sense, also called doublespeak dou·ble·team (düb'əl-tēm') v. tr. dou·ble·teamed, dou·ble·team·ing, dou·ble·teams. Sports. To guard or cover (an offensive player) with two defensive players simultaneously.

dou·ble·think (düb'əl-thĩngk') n. Thought marked by the acceptance of gross contradictions and falsehoods, especially when used as a technique of self-indoctrination: “Doublethink... is a vast system of mental cheating” (George Orwell).

double time (düb'əl tīm) n. Abbr. d.t. 1. A marching pace of 180 three-foot steps per minute. 2. Music. Duple time. 3. A rate of pay, as for overtime work, that is twice the regular rate.

dou·ble·time (düb'əl-tīm') v. intr. tr. dou·ble·timed, dou·ble·tim·ing, dou·ble·times. To move or cause to move at double time: The troops double-timed to the mess hall. The sergeant double-timed the platoon.

dou·ble·ton (düb'əl-tən) n. Games. A pair of cards that are the only ones of their suit in a hand dealt to a player. [DOUBLE + SINGLE(TON).]

dou·ble·tongue (düb'əl-tüŋg') v. intr. dou·ble·tongued, dou·ble·tongu·ing, dou·ble·tongues. Music. To play a rapidly repeated series of notes on a wind instrument by placing the tongue alternately between the positions for t and k.

dou·ble·tree (düb'əl-trē') n. A crossbar on a wagon or carriage to which two whiffletrees are attached for harnessing two animals abreast.

dou·ble·u (düb'əl-yōō') n. The letter w.

double vision (düb'əl vīzh'ən) n. A disorder of vision in which a single object appears double. Also called diplopia dou·ble·wide (düb'əl-wīd') n. Two mobile homes, each 24 feet in width, bolted together as a single unit and used as a permanent residence.

—dou·ble·wide' adj.

dou·ble·word also double word (düb'əl-wûrd') n. Computer Science. Two computer words considered as a single storage entity.

dou·bloon (dü-blōōn') n. A gold coin formerly used in Spain and Spanish America. [Spanish doblón, augmentative of dobla, Spanish coin, from Latin dupla, feminine of duplus, double. See dwo- in Appendix.]

dou·bly (düb'lē) adv. 1. To a double degree; twice: doubly protected; made doubly certain. 2. In a twofold manner.

Doubs (dōō) A river rising in the Jura Mountains of eastern France and flowing about 434 km (270 mi) northeast to and along the French-Swiss border, into Switzerland, then back into France, where it meanders in a generally southwest course to the Saône River.

doubt (dout) v. doubt·ed, doubt·ing, doubts. — v. tr. 1. To be undecided or skeptical about: began to doubt some accepted doctrines. 2. To tend to disbelieve; distrust: doubts politicians when they make sweeping statements. 3. To regard as unlikely: I doubt that we'll arrive on time. 4. Archaic. To suspect; fear.

— v. intr. To be undecided or skeptical. — n. 1. A lack of certainty that often leads to irresolution. See Synonyms at uncertainty. 2. A lack of trust. 3. A point about which one is uncertain or skeptical: reassured me by answering my doubts. 4. The condition of being unsettled or unresolved: an outcome still in doubt. — idioms. beyond doubt (or without doubt). Without question; certainly; definitely. no doubt. 2. Certainly. 3. Probably. [Middle English douten, from Old French douter, from Latin dubitāre, to waver. See dwo- in Appendix.] — doubt'er n.

USAGE NOTE: Doubt and doubtful may be followed by clauses introduced by that, whether, or if. The choice among these three is partly guided by the intended meaning of the sentence but is not cast in stone. Whether normally introduces an indirect question and is therefore the traditional choice when the subject is in a state of genuine uncertainty about alternative possibilities: Sue has studied so much philosophy this year that she's begun to doubt whether she exists. At one time it was doubtful whether the company could recover from its financial difficulties, but the government loan seems to have helped. On the other hand, that is the choice when doubt is being used as an understated way of expressing disbelief: I doubt that we've seen the last of that problem (with the meaning “I think we haven't seen the last...”). That is also the usual choice when the truth of the clause following doubt is assumed, as in negative sentences and questions. Thus I never doubted for a minute that I would be rescued implies “I was certain that I would be rescued.” By the same token, Do you doubt that you will be paid? seems to pose a rhetorical question (“Surely you believe that you will be paid”), whereas Do you doubt whether you will be paid? may express a genuine request for information and might be followed by because if you do, you should make the client post a bond. In other cases, however, this distinction between whether and that is not always observed, and that is frequently used as a substitute for whether. If may also be used as a substitute for whether but is more informal in tone. • In informal speech the clause following doubt is sometimes introduced with but: I don't doubt but (or but what) he will come. Reputable precedent exists for this construction, as in “I do not doubt but England is at present as polite a Nation as any in the World” (Richard Steele), but modern critics sometimes object to its use in formal writing. See Usage Note at but. See Usage Note at if.

doubt-ful (dout'fəl) adj. 1. Subject to or causing doubt: a doubtful claim; doubtful prospects. 2. Experiencing or showing doubt: Doubtful that the cord would hold, we strengthened it. 3. Of uncertain outcome; undecided. 4. Raising doubts as to legitimacy, honesty, or respectability; suspicious: the candidate's doubtful past. See Usage Note at doubt. — doubt'ful-ly adv. — doubt'-ful-ness n.

SYNONYMS: doubtful, dubious, questionable. These adjectives express a degree of uncertainty or reservation about someone or something. Doubtful suggests pronounced lack of certainty: It is doubtful whether she will be admitted to graduate school. He is an author of doubtful reputation. Dubious expresses uncertainty less directly and less forcefully; often it suggests hesitancy, suspicion, or mistrust: dubious about agreeing to go; a painting of dubious value. Questionable can mean merely open to question (Whether this is true is questionable); often, however, it implies dubious morality, respectability, or propriety: questionable dealings; a questionable stockbroker.

doubt-ing Thom-as (dou'tĩng tŏm'əs) n. One who is habitually doubtful.

[After Saint. THOMAS, who doubted Jesus's resurrection until he had proof of it.]

doubt-less (dout'lis) adv. 1. Certainly: The wind was doubtless a factor.

2. Presumably; probably: as you doubtless already know. — adj. Certain; assured. — doubt'less-ly adv.

dou-ceur (dŏ-sûr', -sœr') n. Money given as a tip, gratuity, or bribe. [French, from Late Latin dulcor, sweetness, from Latin dulcis, sweet.]

douche (dŏosh) n. 1. a. A stream of water, often containing medicinal or cleansing agents, that is applied to a body part or cavity for hygienic or therapeutic purposes. b. A stream of air applied in a similar way. 2. The application of a douche. 3. An instrument for applying a douche. — v. douched, douch-ing, douch-es. — v. tr. To cleanse or treat by means of a douche. — v. intr. To cleanse or treat oneself with a douche. [French, shower, from Italian doccia, conduit, back-formation from doccione, pipe, from Latin ductiŏ, ductiŏn-, act of leading, from ductus, past participle of dŭcere, to lead. See deuk- in Appendix.]

dough (dŏ) n. 1. a. A soft, thick mixture of dry ingredients, such as flour or meal, and liquid, such as water, that is kneaded, shaped, and baked, especially as bread or pastry. b. A pasty mass similar to this mixture. 2. Slang. Money. [Middle English dogh, from Old English dāg. See dheigh- in Appendix.]

dough-boy (dŏ'boi') n. 1. A piece of bread dough that is rolled thin and fried in deep fat. 2. An American infantryman in World War I. [Sense 2, perhaps from the large buttons on American uniforms of the 1860's, said to resemble doughboys (sense 1).]

dough-face (dŏ'fās) n. A Northerner who sided with the South in the U.S. Civil War, especially a member of Congress who supported slavery.

dough-nut also do-nut (dŏ'nŭt', -nət) n. 1. A small ring-shaped cake made of rich, light dough that is fried in deep fat. Regional. Also called olicook

2. Something whose form is reminiscent of a ring-shaped cake. 3. A fast, tight 360° turn made in a motor vehicle or motorized boat.

dough·ty (dou'tē) adj. dough·ti·er, dough·ti·est. Marked by stouthearted courage. See Synonyms at brave. [Middle English, from Old English dohtig. See dheugh- in Appendix.] —dough'ti·ly adv. —dough'ti·ness n.

Dough·ty (dou'tē), Charles Montagu. 1843-1926. British traveler and writer best known for Travels in Arabia Deserta (1888).

dough·y (dō'ē) adj. dough·i·er, dough·i·est. Having the consistency or appearance of dough. —dough'i·ness n.

Doug·las (dŭg'ləs) A municipal borough of southeast Isle of Man, England, on the Irish Sea. It is a popular seaside resort and the most important city on the island. Population, 20,368.

Doug·las (dŭg'ləs), Lloyd Cassel. 1877-1951. American clergyman and writer whose novels include Magnificent Obsession (1929) and The Robe (1942).

Doug·las (dŭg'ləs), Stephen Arnold. Called "the Little Giant." 1813-1861. American politician who served as U.S. representative (1843-1847) and senator (1847-1861) from Illinois. He proposed legislation that allowed individual territories to determine whether they would allow slavery (1854) and in the senatorial campaign of 1858 engaged Abraham Lincoln in a famous series of debates.

Doug·las (dŭg'ləs), William Orville. 1898-1980. American jurist who served as an associate justice of the U.S. Supreme Court (1939-1975).

Douglas fir (dŭg'ləs fîr) n. A tall evergreen timber tree (Pseudotsuga menziesii formerly P. taxifolia) of northwest North America, having short needles and egg-shaped cones. [After David Douglas (1798-1834), Scottish botanist who traveled in North America.]

Doug·las·Home (dŭg'ləs-hyōm'), Sir Alexander Frederick. 1903-1995. British politician who served as prime minister (1963-1964). He renounced his peerage in order to take office.

Doug·lass (dŭg'ləs), Frederick. 1817-1895. American abolitionist and journalist who escaped from slavery (1838) and became an influential lecturer in the North and abroad. He wrote Narrative of the Life of Frederick Douglass (1845) and cofounded and edited the North Star (1847-1860), an abolitionist newspaper.

Dou·kho·bor (dōō'kə-bōr') n. Variant of Dukhobor.

doom (dōom) n. See doom palm. [French, probably from Arabic dialectal dōm.]

Dou·mergue (dōō-měrg'), Gaston. 1863-1937. French politician who served as prime minister (1913-1914) and president (1924-1931) of the Third Republic.

dour (dōor, dour) adj. dour·er, dour·est. 1. Marked by sternness or harshness; forbidding: a dour, self-sacrificing life. 2. Silently ill-humored; gloomy: the proverbially dour New England Puritan. See Synonyms at glum. 3. Sternly obstinate; unyielding: a dour determination. [Middle English, possibly from Middle Irish dúr, probably from Latin dūrus, hard. See deru- in Appendix.] —dour'ly adv. —dour'ness n.

dou-ra or dou-rah (dōōr'ə) n. Variants of durra.

dou-rine (dōō-rēn') n. Veterinary Medicine. A contagious disease of horses, asses, and mules caused by the protozoan parasite Trypanosoma equiperdum, which is transmitted during copulation. [French, from Arabic darina, to be dirty.]

Dou-ro (dōr'ōō, dō'rōō) also Due-ro (dwēr'ō) A river rising in north-central Spain and flowing about 772 km (480 mi) westward then southwestward along the Spanish-Portuguese border. It enters the Atlantic Ocean at Oporto.

douse¹ also dowse (dous) v. doused also dowsed, dousing also dowsing, dous-es also dows-es. — v. tr. 1. To plunge into liquid; immerse. See Synonyms at dip. 2. To wet thoroughly; drench. 3. To put out (a light or fire); extinguish. — v. intr. To become thoroughly wet. — n. A thorough drenching. [From obsolete douse, to strike.] —dous'er n.

douse² (douz) v. Variant of dowse¹.

Dou-vil-lier (dōō-vē-lyā'), Suzanne Théodore Vaillande. 1778-1826.

French-born American dancer and choreographer who appeared in The Bird Catcher (1792), believed to be the first ballet performed in New York City.

Douw (dou), Gerard. See Gerard Dou.

dove¹ (dūv) n. 1. Any of various widely distributed birds of the family Columbidae, which includes the pigeons, having a small head and a characteristic cooing call. 2. A gentle, innocent person. 3. A person who advocates peace, conciliation, or negotiation in preference to confrontation or armed conflict. [Middle English douve, from Old English dūfe*.] —dov'ish adj. —dov'ish-ness n.

dove² (dōv) v. A past tense of dive¹. See Usage Note at dive¹. See Regional note at wake¹.

Dove (dūv) n. See Columba.

dove-cote (dūv'kōt', -kōt') also dove-cot (-kōt') n. A compartmental structure, often raised on a pole, for housing domesticated pigeons.

dove-kie also dove-key (dūv'kē) n. A small black-and-white sea bird (Alle alle) of the Arctic and northern Atlantic oceans, having a short bill and a stout body. Also called little auk [Diminutive of DOVE¹.]

Do-ver (dō'vər) 1. A municipal borough of southeast England on the Strait of Dover opposite Calais, France. Site of a Roman lighthouse, it has been a strategic port since medieval times. The chalk cliffs rising above the city have caves and tunnels originally used by smugglers. Population, 33,700. 2. The capital of Delaware, in the central part of the state. Founded in 1683 on orders from William Penn, it became capital in 1777. Population, 27,630. 3. A city of southeast New Hampshire northwest of Portsmouth. It was the first permanent settlement in New Hampshire (c. 1623). Population, 25,042.

Dover, Strait of. A narrow channel at the eastern end of the English Channel between southeast England and northern France.

Do-ver's powder (dō'vərz pou'dər) n. A powdered drug containing ipecac and opium, formerly used to relieve pain and induce perspiration. [After Thomas Dover (1660-1742), British physician.]

dove-tail (dǔv'tāl') n. 1. A fan-shaped tenon that forms a tight interlocking joint when fitted into a corresponding mortise. 2. A joint formed by interlocking one or more such tenons and mortises. — v. dove-tailed, dove-tail-ing, dove-tails. — v. tr. 1. To cut into or join by means of dovetails. 2. To connect or combine precisely or harmoniously. — v. intr. 1. To be joined together by means of dovetails. 2. To combine or interlock into a unified whole: The nurses' schedules dovetailed, so that one was always on duty.

Dow (dou), Charles Henry. 1851-1902. American economist and publisher who with Edward D. Jones (1856-1920) established Dow Jones & Company (1882), a publisher of financial bulletins. In 1889 he founded the Wall Street Journal.

Dow (dou), Herbert Henry. 1866-1930. American chemist and manufacturer who developed and patented more than 100 chemical processes and founded the Dow Chemical Company (1897).

dow-a-ger (dou'ə-jər) n. 1. A widow who holds a title or property derived from her deceased husband. 2. An elderly woman of high social station. [Obsolete French douagière, from douage, dower, from douer, to endow, from Latin dōtāre, from dōs, dōt-, dowry. See dō- in Appendix.]

dow-a-ger's hump (dou'ə-jərz hŭmp) n. An abnormal curvature of the spine that is primarily manifested as a rounded hump in the upper back. Typically affecting older women, the curvature is a result of collapse of the spinal column, caused by osteoporosis.

Dow-den (doud'n), Edward. 1843-1913. Irish editor, writer, and critic noted for his works on Shakespeare.

dow-dy (dou'dē) adj. dow-di-er, dow-di-est. 1. Lacking stylishness or neatness; shabby: a dowdy gray outfit. 2. Old-fashioned; antiquated. — n. pl.

dow-dies. A dowdy person; a frump. [From Middle English doude, immoral, unattractive, or shabbily dressed woman.] — dow/di-ly adv. — dow/di-ness n. — dow/dy-ish adj.

dow-el (dou'əl) n. 1. A usually round pin that fits tightly into a corresponding hole to fasten or align two adjacent pieces. 2. A piece of wood driven into a wall to act as an anchor for nails. — v. tr. dow-eled also dow-elled, dow-el-ing also dow-el-ling, dow-els also dow-els. 1. To fasten or align with dowels: table legs that are doweled into the top. 2. To equip with dowels. [Middle English doule, part of a wheel, perhaps from Middle Low German dovel, plug, or from Old French doele, barrel stave (diminutive of douve, from Late Latin doga, vessel, from Greek dokhē, receptacle); see SYNECDOCHE.]

dow·er (dou'ər) n. 1. The part or interest of a deceased man's real estate allotted by law to his widow for her lifetime. Also called dowry 2. See dowry (n., sense 1). 3. A natural endowment or gift; a dowry. — v. tr. dow·ered, dow·er·ing, dow·ers. To give a dower to; endow. [Middle English douere, from Old French douaire, from Medieval Latin dōtārium, from Latin dōs, dōt-, dowry. See dō- in Appendix.]

dow·itch·er (dou'i-chər) n. Either of two shore birds (Limnodromus griseus or L. scolopaceus) of northern regions, having brownish plumage and a long, straight bill. [Perhaps from Mohawk tawistawis, snipe.]

Dow Jones Averages (dou jōnz äv'rīj-iz) A trademark used for an index of the relative price of selected industrial, transportation, and utility stocks based on a formula developed and periodically revised by Dow Jones & Company, Inc.

down¹ (doun) adv. Abbr. dn. 1. a. From a higher to a lower place or position: hiked down from the peak. b. Toward, to, or on the ground, floor, or bottom: tripped and fell down. 2. In or into a sitting or reclining position: knelt down; lying down. 3. Toward or in the south; southward: flew down to Florida. 4. a. Away from a place considered central or a center of activity, such as a city or town: down on the farm; sent down to work at the firm's regional office. b. Away from the present place. 5. To a specific location or source: tracking a rumor down. 6. Toward or at a low or lower point on a scale: from the biggest down to the smallest. 7. a. To or in a quiescent or subdued state: calmed down. b. In or into an inactive or inoperative state: The generators went down at midnight. 8. To or at a lower intensity. 9. To or into a lower or inferior condition, as of subjection, defeat, or disgrace. 10. To an extreme degree; heavily: worn down by worry. 11. Seriously or vigorously: get down to the project at hand. 12. From earlier times or people: tradition handed down from one generation to the next. 13. To a reduced or concentrated form: pared the term paper down to five pages. 14. In writing; on paper: wrote the statement down. 15. In partial payment at the time of purchase: put ten dollars down on the necklace. 16. Into or toward a secure position: nailed down the boards; bolted the furniture down. — adj. Abbr. dn. 1. a. Moving or directed downward: a down elevator. b. Low or lower: Stock prices were down today. c. Reduced; diminished: The wind is down. 2. Afflicted; sick: She's down with a bad cold. 3. Malfunctioning or not operating, especially temporarily: The computer is down. 4. Low in spirits; depressed: feeling down today. 5. a. Sports & Games. Trailing an opponent: a team down 20 points in the last quarter; down two pawns in the endgame. b. Football. Not in play: The ball is down on the 50-yard line. c. Baseball. Retired; out: two down in the last of the ninth. 6. Completed; done: three down, two to go. 7. Learned or known perfectly: had the algebra problems down. — prep. 1. In a descending direction along, upon, into, or through: rolled down the hill; floating down the river; went down cellar. 2. Along the course of: walking down the street. 3. In or at: The cans are stored down cellar. — n. Abbr. dn. 1. A downward movement; descent.

2. Football. Any of a series of four plays during which a team must advance at least ten yards to retain possession of the ball. — v. downed, down-ing, downs. — v. tr. 1. To bring, put, strike, or throw down: downed his opponent in the first round. 2. To swallow hastily; gulp: downed the glass of water.

3. Football. To put (the ball) out of play by touching it to the ground. — v. intr. To go or come down; descend. — idioms. down in the mouth (or down at the mouth). Discouraged; sad; dejected. down on. Informal. Hostile or negative toward; ill-disposed to: was down on jogging after his injury. down on (one's) luck. Afflicted by misfortune. [Middle English doun, from Old English dūne-, as in ofdūne, downwards, from dūne, dative of dūn, hill. See dhū-no- in Appendix.]

down² (doun) n. 1. Fine, soft, fluffy feathers forming the first plumage of a young bird and underlying the contour feathers in certain adult birds. 2. Botany. A covering of soft, short hairs, as on some leaves or fruit. 3. A soft, silky, or feathery substance, such as the first growth of a human beard. [Middle English doun, from Old Norse dūnn.]

down³ (doun) n. 1. Often downs. An expanse of rolling, grassy, treeless upland used for grazing. 2. Often Down. Any of several breeds of sheep having short wool, originally bred in the Downs of southern England. [Middle English doune, from Old English dūn. See dhū-no- in Appendix.]

down-and-out or down and out (doun'ænd-out', -ən-) adj. 1. Lacking funds, resources, or prospects; destitute. 2. Incapacitated; prostrate. — n. Also down-and-out-er (-ou'tər) One who is down-and-out.

down-at-heel (doun'ət-hēl') or down-at-the-heel (-ət-thə-) adj. 1. Worn out from long use or neglect; dilapidated. 2. Shabbily dressed because of poverty; seedy.

down-beat (doun'bēt') n. 1. Music. The downward stroke made by a conductor to indicate the first beat of a measure. 2. Informal. A period of stagnation or inactivity. — adj. Cheerless; pessimistic.

down-bow or down-bow (doun'bō') n. Music. A stroke made by drawing a bow from handle to tip across the strings of a violin or other bowed instrument.

down-burst (doun'būrst') n. An extremely powerful downward air current from a cumulonimbus cloud, typically associated with thunderstorm activity.

down-cast (doun'kăst') adj. 1. Directed downward: a downcast glance. 2. Low in spirits; depressed. See Synonyms at depressed.

down-court (doun-kôrt', -kört') adv. & adj. Sports. To, into, or in the far end of the court, especially in basketball.

down-draft (doun'drăft') n. 1. A strong downward current of air. 2. A downward trend; downturn: The business hit a downdraft.

Down East also down East (doun ēst') New England, especially Maine.

—Down East'er, down-East'er (down-ē'stər) n. —Down East'ern adj.

down·er (dou'nər) n. Slang. 1. A depressant or sedative drug, such as a barbiturate or tranquilizer. 2. A depressing experience or predicament.

Dow·ners Grove (dou'nərz grōv) A village of northeast Illinois, a manufacturing suburb of Chicago. Population, 42,572.

Dow·ney (dou'nē) A city of southern California, a residential and industrial suburb of Los Angeles. Population, 91,444.

down·fall (doun'fôl') n. 1. a. A sudden loss of wealth, rank, reputation, or happiness; ruin. b. A cause of sudden ruin. 2. A fall of rain or snow, especially a heavy or unexpected one.

down·fall·en (doun'fô'lən) adj. Fallen, as from high position; ruined.

down·field (doun'-fēld') adv. & adj. Sports. To, into, or in the defensive team's end of the field.

down·grade (doun'grād') n. 1. A descending slope, as in a road. 2. A turn or trend downward. 3. A decline, as in fortune, status, or condition: a neighborhood on the downgrade. — v. tr. down·grad·ed, down·grad·ing, down·grades.

1. To lower the status or salary of. 2. To minimize the importance, value, or reputation of. See Synonyms at decry. See Synonyms at demote.

down·haul (doun'hôl') n. Nautical. A rope or set of ropes for hauling down or securing a sail or spar.

down·heart·ed (doun'här'tid) adj. Low in spirit; depressed. See Synonyms at depressed. —down'heart'ed·ly adv. —down'heart'ed·ness n.

down·hill (doun'hil') adv. 1. Down the slope of a hill. 2. Toward a lower or worse condition: The alcoholic's health went downhill fast. — adj. (doun'hil')

1. Sloping downward; descending. 2. Sports. Of, relating to, or constituting skiing down a slope: a downhill racer. — n. 1. A downhill skiing race. 2. A downward gradient; a descending slope.

down·home (doun'hôm') adj. Of, relating to, or reminiscent of a simple, wholesome, unpretentious lifestyle, especially that associated with the rural southern United States.

Down·ing (dou'nɪŋ), Andrew Jackson. 1815-1852. American landscape architect and horticulturist who wrote the classic A Treatise on Landscape Gardening (1841) and designed the grounds of the White House and the U.S. Capitol.

Downing Street¹ (dou'nɪŋ strēt) A thoroughfare of Westminster in London, England, off Whitehall. No. 10 Downing Street is the official residence of the first lord of the Treasury, who is usually but not necessarily the prime minister of Great Britain. Nearly all prime ministers have lived at No. 10 since the time of Robert Walpole in the early 1700's.

Downing Street² (dou'nɪŋ strēt) n. The British government.

down·link (doun/'lɪŋk') n. A transmission path for the communication of signals and data from a communications satellite or other space vehicle to the earth and back. —down'link' v.

down·load (doun/'lōd') v. down·load·ed, down·load·ing, down·loads. — v. tr. 1. To unload: *download cargo from a transport aircraft. 2. Computer Science. To transfer (data or programs) from a central computer to a peripheral computer or device. — v. intr. Computer Science. To transfer data or programs to a peripheral computer or device.*

down·mar·ket also down·mar·ket (doun/'mār'kɪt) adj. Appealing to or designed for low-income consumers; downscale.

down payment (doun pā/'mənt) n. A partial payment made at the time of purchase, with the balance to be paid later.

down·play (doun/'plā') v. tr. down·played, down·play·ing, down·plays. To minimize the significance of; play down: downplayed the bad news.

down·pour (doun/'pōr', -pōr') n. A heavy fall of rain.

down quark (doun kwôrk) n. Abbr. d A quark with a charge of -3 , a mass about 607 times that of the electron, and a downward spin. It is a component of protons and neutrons.

down·range (doun/'rānj') adv. & adj. In a direction away from the launch site and along the flight line of a missile test range: landed a thousand miles down-range; the downrange target area.

down·rig·ger (doun/'rɪg'ər) n. Nautical. A trolling rig that consists of a weighted cable attached below the boat to a fishing line, used to troll live bait at or near the floor of a body of water and eliminating the need for a weight on the fishing line.

down·right (doun/'rīt') adj. 1. Thoroughgoing; unequivocal: a downright lie. 2. Forthright; candid. — adv. Thoroughly; absolutely.

down·riv·er (doun/'rɪv'ər) adv. & adj. Toward or near the mouth of a river; in the direction of the current: swam downriver; a downriver canoe race.

Downs (dounz) Two roughly parallel ranges of chalk hills in southeast England. The North Downs extend about 161 km (100 mi) from west to east; the South Downs, about 105 km (65 mi). Both are sheep-rearing areas.

down·scale (doun/'skāl') adj. Of, for, or relating to low-income consumers: mass-produced downscale versions of high-priced fashions. — v. tr. intr.

down·scaled, down·scal·ing, down·scales. To reduce in scale; scale down.

down·shift (doun/'shɪft') v. intr. down·shift·ed, down·shift·ing, down·shifts. To shift a motor vehicle into a lower gear. —down'shift' n.

down·side (doun/'sɪd') n. 1. The lower side or portion. 2. A disadvantageous aspect: an option with a downside as well as benefits. 3. A downward tendency, as in the price of a stock.

down-size (doun'sīz') v. tr. down-sized, down-siz-ing, down-siz-es. To make in a smaller size: cars that were downsized during the gasoline-conscious 1970's; a corporation that downsized its personnel in response to a poor economy.

down-slide (doun'slīd') n. A downward course; a decline: "a growing concern among... board leaders about whether the economy could be headed for a downslide" (Andrée Brooks).

down-spin (doun'spīn') n. An extremely swift, acute downturn, as in market activity.

down-spout (doun'spout') n. A vertical pipe for carrying rainwater down from a roof gutter.

Down's syndrome (dounz sīn'drōm') n. Variant of Down syndrome.

down-stage (doun'stāj') adv. Toward, at, or on the front part of a stage. — adj. (doun'stāj') Of or relating to the front part of a stage. — n. (doun'stāj') The front half of a stage.

down-stairs (doun'stārz') adv. 1. Down the stairs: raced my friend down-stairs. 2. To or on a lower floor: went downstairs to answer the front door. — adj. also down-stair (-stâr'; doun'stārz') Located on a lower or main floor. — n. (doun'stārz') (used with a sing. verb). The lower or main floor.

down-state (doun'stāt') n. The southerly section of a state in the United States. — adv. & adj. To, from, or in the southerly section of a state. — down'stat'er n.

down-stream (doun'strēm') adj. In the direction of a stream's current. — adv. (doun'strēm') Down a stream.

down-swing (doun'swīng') n. 1. A swing downward, as of a golf club. 2. A decline, as of a business.

Down syndrome (doun sīn'drōm') or Down's syndrome (dounz) n. A congenital disorder, caused by the presence of an extra 21st chromosome, in which the affected person has mild to moderate mental retardation, short stature, and a flattened facial profile. Also called trisomy 21 [After John L.H. Down (1828-1896), British physician.]

down-tick (doun'tīk') n. 1. A decrease, especially a small or incremental one. 2. A transaction in a stock market security below the price of the previous transaction.

down-time (doun'tīm') n. The period of time when something, such as a factory or a piece of machinery, is not in operation, especially as the result of a malfunction.

down-to-earth (doun'tō-ûrth', -tə-) adj. Realistic; sensible.

down-town (doun'toun') n. The lower part or the business center of a city or town. — adv. (doun'toun') To, toward, or in the lower part or the business center of a city or town. — adj. (doun'toun') Of, relating to, or located down-town.

down·trend (doun'trënd') n. A downward trend; a downturn.

—down'trend' v.

down·trod·den (doun'tröd'n) adj. Oppressed; tyrannized.

down·turn (doun'tûrn') n. A tendency downward, especially in business or economic activity.

down under (doun ün'dær) adv. Informal. To or in Australia or New Zealand.

down·ward (doun'wærd) adv. & adj. 1. From a higher to a lower place, point, level, or condition: floating downward; a downward trend. 2. From a prior source or earlier time: passed downward through the ages. —down'ward·ly adv.

—down'wards adv.

down·wind (doun'wînd') adv. In the direction in which the wind blows.

—down'wind' adj.

down·y (dou'nē) adj. down·i·er, down·i·est. 1. Made of or covered with down. 2. a. Resembling down: downy white clouds. b. Quietly soothing; soft.

downy mildew (dou'nē mîl'dō') n. A disease of plants caused by fungi of the order Peronosporales and characterized by gray, velvety patches of spores on the lower surfaces of leaves.

downy woodpecker (dou'nē wōd'pĕk'ər) n. A black and white North American woodpecker (Picoides pubescens) having a solid white back and a small bill.

down·zone (doun'zōn') v. down·zoned, down·zon·ing, down·zones.

— v. tr. To reduce (density of housing or permitted expansion of construction) in a designated neighborhood: proposed to downzone residential areas near the shore. — v. intr. To reduce the permitted density of housing or the degree of proposed new construction in a designated neighborhood: the city's complex plan to downzone.

dow·ry (dou'rē) n. pl. dow·ries. 1. Money or property brought by a bride to her husband at marriage. Also called dower 2. A sum of money required of a postulant at a convent. 3. A natural endowment or gift; a talent. 4. Archaic. See dower (n., sense 1). [Middle English douerie, from Anglo-Norman douarie, from Medieval Latin dōtārium, dōārium, dōāria, dower. See DOWER.]

dowse¹ also douse (douz) v. intr. dowsed also doused, dows·ing also dous·ing, dows·es also dous·es. To use a divining rod to search for underground water or minerals. [Origin unknown.]

dowse² (dous) v. & n. Variant of douse¹.

dows·er (dou'zər) n. 1. A person who uses a divining rod to search for underground water or minerals. 2. A divining rod.

Dow·son (dou'sən), Ernest Christopher. 1867-1900. British Decadent poet best known for his refrain "I have been faithful to thee, Cynara, in my fashion."

Dow theory (dou thē'ə-rē) n. A theory of stock market forecasting based on price movements of selected industrial and transportation stocks. [After Charles Henry Dow.]

dox·ol·o·gy (dök-söl'ə-jē) n. pl. dox·ol·o·gies. An expression of praise to God, especially a short hymn sung as part of a Christian worship service. [Medieval Latin doxologia, from Greek, praise : doxa, glory, honor (from dokein, to seem); see dek- in Appendix + -logia, -logy.] —dox'·o·log'i·cal (dök'sə-lōj'ī-kəl) adj. —dox'·o·log'i·cal·ly adv.

dox·o·ru·bi·cin (dök'sə-rōō'бі-sīn) n. An antibiotic obtained from the bacterium Streptomyces peuceticus, used as an anticancer drug. [D(E)OX(Y)- + Latin ruber, red; see RUBRIC + -(MY)CIN.]

dox·y (dök'sē) n. pl. dox·ies. Slang. 1. A loose woman; a prostitute. 2. A paramour. [Perhaps from obsolete Dutch docke, doll.]

dox·y·cy·cline (dök'sī-sī'klēn', -klīn) n. A broad-spectrum antibiotic, C₂₂H₂₄N₂O₈, derived from tetracycline. [DE- + OXY- + (TETRA)CYCLINE.]

doy·en (doi-ēn', doi'ən, dwä-yän') n. A man who is the eldest or senior member of a group. [Probably French, from Old French doien, from Late Latin decānus, chief of ten. See DEAN.]

doy·enne (doi-ēn', dwä-yēn') n. A woman who is the eldest or senior member of a group. [French, feminine of doyen, senior member. See DOYEN.]

Doyle (doil), Sir Arthur Conan. 1859-1930. British writer known chiefly for a series of stories featuring the brilliant detective Sherlock Holmes, including The Hound of the Baskervilles (1902).

D'Oy·ly Carte (doi'lē kärt'), Richard. See Richard D'Oyly Carte.

doz. abbr. Dozen.

doze (dōz) v. dozed, doz·ing, doz·es. — v. intr. To sleep lightly and intermittently. — v. tr. To spend (time) dozing or as if dozing: dozed the summer away. — n. A short, light sleep. —phrasal verb. doze off. To fall into a light sleep. [Probably of Scandinavian origin.] —doz'er n.

doz·en (düz'ən) n. Abbr. doz., dz. 1. pl. dozen. A set of 12. 2. dozens. An indefinite, large number: dozens of errands to run. — adj. Twelve. [Middle English dozeine, from Old French dozaine, from doze, twelve, ultimately from Latin duodecim : duo, two; see dwo- in Appendix + decem, ten; see dek in Appendix.] —doz'enth (-ənth) adj.

do·zy (dō'zē) adj. do·zi·er, do·zi·est. Half asleep; drowsy. —doz'i·ly adv. —do'zi·ness n.

DP abbr. 1. Computer Science. Data processing. 2. Dew point. 3. Also D.P. Displaced person. 4. Baseball. Double play.

D.Ph. abbr. Doctor of Philosophy.

D.Phil. abbr. Doctor of Philosophy.

DPT abbr. Diphtheria, pertussis, tetanus.

dpt. abbr. 1. Department. 2. Deponent.

dr abbr. Dram.

DR abbr. 1. Dead reckoning. 2. Dining room.

dr. abbr. Debtor.

Dr. abbr. 1. Doctor. 2. Drive.

drab¹ (drăb) adj. drab·ber, drab·best. 1. Color. a. Of a dull light brown.

b. Of a light olive brown or khaki color. 2. Faded and dull in appearance.

3. Dull or commonplace in character; dreary: a drab personality. See Synonyms at dull. — n. 1. Color. A moderate to grayish or light grayish yellowish brown or light olive brown. 2. Cloth of a light dull brown or grayish brown or unbleached natural color, especially a heavy woolen or cotton fabric. [Alteration of obsolete French drap, cloth, from Old French. See DRAPE.] —drab'ly adv.

—drab'ness n.

drab² (drăb) n. 1. A slattern. 2. A prostitute. — v. intr. drabbed, drab·bing, drabs. To consort with prostitutes: “Even amid his drabbing, he him- self retained some virginal airs” (Stanislaus Joyce). [Possibly of Celtic origin; akin to Scottish Gaelic drābag Irish Gaelic drabóg, slattern., or Dutch drab, dregs.]

drab³ (drăb) n. A negligible amount: finished the work in dribs and drabs.

[Probably alteration of DRIB.] drab·ble (drăb'əl) v. tr. intr. drab·bled, drab·bling, drab·bles. To make or become wet and soiled by dragging; draggle. [Middle English drabelen.] dra·cae·na (drə-sē'nə) n. Any of several tropical plants of the genera Dracaena and Cordyline, some species of which are cultivated as house plants for their decorative foliage. [Late Latin, female dragon, from Greek drakaina, feminine of drakōn, serpent. See DRAGON.] drachm (drăm) n. 1. A dram. 2. A drachma.

drach·ma (drăk'mə) n. pl. drach·mas or drach·mae (-mē). Abbr. d., D. 1. A basic unit of currency in Greece. See Table at currency. 2. An ancient Greek silver coin. 3. One of several modern units of weight, especially the dram. [Latin, from Greek drakhmē, from drassesthai, drakh-, to grasp.]

Drach·mann (drăk'mən), Holger Henrik Herholdt. 1846-1908. Danish writer particularly noted for his modernist poetry.

Dra·co¹ (dră'kō), Seventh century B.C. Athenian politician who codified the laws of Athens (c. 621). Lauded for its impartiality, his code was unpopular for its severity. —Dra·co'ni·an adj.

Dra·co² (dră'kō) n. A constellation in the polar region of the Northern Hemisphere near Cepheus and Ursa Major. Also called Dragon [Latin dracō, dragon.

See DRAGON.]

dra·co·ni·an (dră-kō'nē-ən, drə-) adj. Exceedingly harsh; very severe: a draco- nian legal code; draconian budget cuts. [After DRACO¹.]

dra-con-ic¹ (drā-kōn'ik) adj. Of or suggestive of a dragon. [From Latin dracō, dracōn-, dragon. See DRAGON.]

dra-con-ic² (drā-kōn'ik, drə-) adj. Draconian. —dra-con'i-cal-ly adv.

Dra-cut (drā'kət) A town of northeast Massachusetts on the Merrimack River near the New Hampshire border. It was settled in 1664. Population, 25,594.

draft (drăft) n. Abbr. dft. 1. A current of air in an enclosed area. 2. A device that regulates the flow or circulation of air. 3. a. The act of pulling loads; traction. b. Something that is pulled or drawn; a load. c. A team of animals used to pull loads. 4. Nautical. The depth of a vessel's keel below the water line, especially when loaded: a river vessel of shallow draft. 5. A heavy demand on resources. 6. A written order directing the payment of money from an account or fund. 7. a. A gulp, a swallow, or an inhalation. b. The amount taken in by a single act of drinking or inhaling. c. A measured portion; a dose. 8. a. The drawing of a liquid, as from a cask or keg. b. An amount drawn: ordered two drafts of ale. 9. a. The process or method of selecting one or more individuals from a group, as for a service or duty: a candidate who did not pursue the nomination, but accepted a draft by the party convention. b. Compulsory enrollment in the armed forces; conscription. c. A body of people selected or conscripted.

10. Sports. A system in which the exclusive rights to new players are distributed among professional teams. 11. a. The act of drawing in a fishnet. b. The quantity of fish caught. 12. a. A preliminary outline of a plan, document, or picture: the first draft of a report. b. A representation of something to be constructed.

13. A narrow line chiseled on a stone to guide a stonecutter in leveling its surface.

14. A slight taper given a die to facilitate the removal of a casting. 15. An allowance made for loss in weight of merchandise. — v. draft-ed, draft-ing, drafts. — v. tr. 1. To select from a group for some usually compulsory service: drafted into the army. 2. To draw up a preliminary version of or plan for. 3. To create by thinking and writing; compose: draft a speech. — v. intr. To drive close behind another vehicle to take advantage of the reduced air pressure in its wake. — adj. 1. Suited for or used for drawing heavy loads: oxen and other draft animals. 2. Drawn from a cask or tap: draft beer. —idiom. on draft.

Drawn from a large container, such as a keg. [Middle English draught, act of drawing or pulling, from Old English dreaht*; akin to dragan, to draw.]

draft board (drăft bôrd) n. A local board of civilians in charge of the selection of persons for compulsory military service.

draft-ee (drăf-tē') n. One who is drafted, especially for military service.

draft-er (drăf'tər) n. One that drafts, especially a person who drafts plans or designs or a person who composes a document.

draft-ing (drăf'ting) n. The systematic representation and dimensional specification of mechanical and architectural structures.

drafts-man (dräfts'mən) n. 1. A man who draws plans or designs, as of structures to be built. 2. A man who draws, especially an artist. —draftsman-ship n.

drafts-person (dräfts'pûr'sən) n. A drafter.

drafts-woman (dräfts'wōm'ən) n. 1. A woman who draws plans or designs, as of structures to be built. 2. A woman who draws, especially an artist.

draft-y (drăf'tē) adj. draft-i-er, draft-i-est. Having or exposed to drafts of air. —draft/i-ly adv. —draft/i-ness n.

drag (drăg) v. dragged, drag-ging, drags. — v. tr. 1. To pull along with difficulty or effort; haul: dragged the heavy box out of the way. See Synonyms at pull. 2. To cause to trail along a surface, especially the ground. 3. To move or bring by force or with great effort: had to drag me to the dentist; dragged the truth out of the reluctant witness. 4. a. To search or sweep the bottom of (a body of water), as with a grappling hook or dragnet. b. To bring up or catch by such means. 5. To prolong tediously: dragged the story out. 6. Baseball. To hit (a bunt) while taking the first steps toward first base. — v. intr. 1. To trail along the ground: The dog's leash dragged on the sidewalk. 2. To move slowly or with effort. 3. To lag behind. 4. To pass or proceed slowly, tediously, or laboriously: The time dragged as we waited. 5. To search or dredge the bottom of a body of water: dragging for the sunken craft. 6. To take part in or as if in a drag race. 7. To draw on a cigarette, pipe, or cigar. — n. 1. The act of dragging. 2. Something, such as a harrow or an implement for spreading manure, that is dragged along the ground. 3. A device, such as a grappling hook, that is used for dragging under water. 4. A heavy sledge or cart for hauling loads. 5. A large four-horse coach with seats inside and on top. 6. Something, such as a sea anchor or a brake on a fishing reel, that retards motion. 7. One that impedes or slows progress; a drawback or burden: the drag of taxation on economic growth. 8. The degree of resistance involved in dragging or hauling. 9. The retarding force exerted on a moving body by a fluid medium such as air or water. 10. A slow, laborious motion or movement. 11. a. The scent or trail of a fox or another animal. b. Something that provides an artificial scent. 12. Slang. One that is obnoxiously tiresome: The evening was a real drag. 13. A puff on a cigarette, pipe, or cigar. 14. Slang. A street or road: the town's main drag. 15. The clothing characteristic of one sex when worn by a member of the opposite sex: an actor in drag. —idiom. drag (one's) feet (or drag (one's) heels). To act or work with intentional slowness; delay: "The bureaucracy has been known to drag its feet in implementing directives with which it disagrees" (Henry A. Kissinger). [Middle English dragen, from Old Norse draga, or variant of Middle English drawen; see DRAW.]

drag bunt (drăg būnt) n. Baseball. A bunt executed while taking the first steps toward first base.

dra-gée (drä-zhā') n. A small, often medicated candy. [French, from Old French dragie. See DREDGE².]

drag-ger (dräg'ər) n. One that drags, especially a vessel using nets dragged along the bottom to catch fish.

drag-gle (dräg'əl) v. drag-gled, drag-gling, drag-gles. — v. tr. To make wet and dirty by dragging on the ground. — v. intr. 1. To become wet and muddy by being dragged. 2. To follow slowly; straggle. [Probably frequentative of DRAG.]

drag-gy (dräg'ē) adj. drag-gi-er, drag-gi-est. 1. Dull and listless. 2. Slang. Very tiresome.

drag-lift (dräg'lift') n. Sports. A ski lift, such as a rope tow, a T-bar, or a J-bar, that pulls skiers up a slope.

drag-line (dräg'līn') n. 1. A line used for dragging. 2. A kind of dredging machine.

drag link (dräg līnk) n. A link for transmitting rotary motion between cranks on two parallel but slightly offset shafts, such as the rod connecting the lever of the steering gear to the steering arm in an automobile.

drag-net (dräg'nēt') n. 1. A system of coordinated procedures for apprehending criminal suspects or other wanted persons. 2. a. A net for trawling; a trawl. b. A net for catching small game.

drag-o-man (dräg'ə-mən) n. pl. drag-o-mans or drag-o-men. An interpreter or guide in countries where Arabic, Turkish, or Persian is spoken. [Middle English dragman, from Old French drugeman, from Medieval Latin dragumanus, from Medieval Greek dragoumanos, from Arabic tarjumān, from Aramaic tūrgemānā, from Akkadian targumānu, interpreter.]

drag-on (dräg'ən) n. 1. A mythical monster traditionally represented as a gigantic reptile having a lion's claws, the tail of a serpent, wings, and a scaly skin. 2. a. A fiercely vigilant or intractable person. b. Something very formidable or dangerous. 3. Any of various lizards, such as the Komodo dragon or the flying lizard. 4. Archaic. A large snake or serpent. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin dracō, dracōn-, large serpent, from Greek drakōn, perhaps from derkesthai, to look.]

Drag-on (dräg'ən) n. See Draco².

drag-on-et (dräg'ə-nīt) n. Any of various small, often brightly colored marine fishes of the family Callionymidae, having a slender body and a flattened head. [Middle English, young dragon, from Old French, diminutive of dragon, dragon. See DRAGON.]

drag-on-fly (dräg'ən-flī') n. pl. drag-on-flies. Any of various large insects of the order Odonata or suborder Anisoptera, having a long slender body and two pairs of narrow, net-veined wings that are usually held outstretched while the insect is at rest. Regional. Also called darning needleRegional., devil's darning needleRegional., ear sewerRegional., mosquito hawkRegional., skeeter hawkRegional., snake doctorRegional., snake feederRegional., spindle.

REGIONAL NOTE: Regional terms for the dragonfly are numerous, providing good evidence for dialect boundaries in the United States. The greatest variety of terms is to be found in the South, where the most widespread term is snake doctor (a name based on a folk belief that dragonflies take care of snakes). The Midland equivalent is snake feeder. Speakers from the Lower South, on the other hand, are more likely to refer to the same insect as a mosquito hawk or, in the South Atlantic states, a skeeter hawk. The imagery outside the South alludes more to the insect's shape than to its behavior or diet: Upper Northern speakers call it a darning needle or a devil's darning needle; those in Coastal New Jersey, a spindle; and Northern Californians, an ear sewer.

drag-on-head (dräg'ən-hěd') n. Any of several plants of the genera Dracocephalum and Physostegia, having terminal spikes of rose-pink or purplish flowers.

drag-on-root (dräg'ən-rōōt', -rōōt') n. See green dragon.

drag-on's blood (dräg'ənz blüd) n. 1. A red, resinous substance obtained from the fruit of a climbing palm (Daemonorops draco) of tropical Asia, formerly used in the manufacture of varnishes and lacquers. 2. Any of several resins similar to this substance.

dragon's mouth (dräg'ənz mouth) n. See swamp pink.

dragon tree (dräg'ən trē) n. A tree (Dracaena draco) of the Canary Islands, having a thick trunk, clusters of sword-shaped leaves, and orange fruit.

dra-goon (drə-gōōn', drä-) n. A heavily armed trooper in some European armies of the 17th and 18th centuries. — v. tr. dra-gooned, dra-goon-ing, dra-goons. 1. To subjugate or persecute by the imposition of troops. 2. To compel by violent measures or threats; coerce. [French dragon, carbine, dragoon, from Old French dragon, dragon. See DRAGON.]

drag queen (dräg kwēn) n. Offensive Slang. A man, especially a performer, who dresses as a woman.

drag race (dräg rās) n. A race between two cars to determine which can accelerate faster from a standstill. [From DRAG, an automobile (slang).] — drag racer n. — drag racing n.

drag-ster (dräg'stər) n. 1. An automobile specially built or modified for drag racing. 2. A person who races such an automobile.

drag strip (dräg strīp) n. A short, straight course or track for drag racing.

drain (drān) v. drained, drain-ing, drains. — v. tr. 1. To draw off (a liquid) by a gradual process: drained water from the sink. 2. a. To cause liquid to go out from; empty: drained the bathtub; drain the pond. b. To draw off the surface water of: The Mississippi River drains a vast area. 3. To drink all the contents of: drained the cup. 4. a. To deplete gradually, especially to the point of complete exhaustion. See Synonyms at deplete. b. To fatigue or spend emotionally or physically: The day's events completely drained me of all strength. — v. intr.

1. To flow off or out: Gasoline drained slowly from the tilted can. 2. To become empty by the drawing off of liquid: watched the tub slowly drain. 3. To discharge surface or excess water: The Niagara River drains into Lake Ontario. When flooded, the swamp drains northward. 4. To become gradually depleted; dwindle: felt his enthusiasm draining. — n. 1. A pipe or channel by which liquid is drawn off. 2. Medicine. A device, such as a tube, inserted into the opening of a wound or body cavity to facilitate discharge of fluid or purulent material. 3. The act or process of draining. 4. a. A gradual outflow or loss; consumption or depletion: the drain of young talent by emigration. b. Something that causes a gradual loss: interruptions that are a drain on my patience. — idiom. down the drain. To or into the condition of being wasted or lost: All of our best laid plans are down the drain. [Middle English dreinen, to strain, drain, from Old English drēahnian.]

—drain'a-ble adj. —drain'er n.

drain-age (drā'nij) n. 1. The action or a method of draining. 2. A system of drains. 3. Something that is drained off. 4. Medicine. The removal of fluid or purulent material from a wound or body cavity.

drainage basin (drā'nij bā'sin) n. An area drained by a river system.

drain-pipe (drān'pīp') n. A pipe for carrying off water or sewage.

drake¹ (drāk) n. A male duck. [Middle English.]

drake² (drāk) n. A mayfly used as fishing bait. Also called drake fly [Middle English, dragon, from Old English draca, from West Germanic drako*, from Latin dracō. See DRAGON.]

Drake (drāk), Sir Francis. 1540?-1596. English naval hero and explorer who was the first Englishman to circumnavigate the world (1577-1580) and was vice admiral of the fleet that destroyed the Spanish Armada (1588).

drake fly (drāk flī) n. See drake².

Dra-kens-burg Mountains (drā'kənz-bûrg' moun'tənz) A range of eastern South Africa, Lesotho, and Swaziland rising to 3,484.6 m (11,425 ft).

Drake Passage (drāk pās'ij) A strait between Cape Horn and Antarctica. It connects the southern Atlantic and Pacific oceans.

dram (drām) n. 1. Abbr. dr a. A unit of weight in the U.S. Customary System equal to 16 of an ounce or 27.34 grains (1.77 grams). b. A unit of apothecary weight equal to 8 of an ounce or 60 grains (3.89 grams). See Table at measurement. 2. a. A small draft: took a dram of brandy. b. A small amount; a bit: not a dram of compassion. [Middle English dragme, a drachma, a unit of weight, from Old French, from Late Latin dragma, from Latin drachma. See DRACHMA.]

dram. abbr. Dramatic; dramatist.

dra·ma (drä'mə, dräm'ə) n. 1. a. A prose or verse composition, especially one telling a serious story, that is intended for representation by actors impersonating the characters and performing the dialogue and action. b. A serious narrative work or program for television, radio, or the cinema. 2. Theatrical plays of a particular kind or period: Elizabethan drama. 3. The art or practice of writing or producing dramatic works. 4. A situation or succession of events in real life having the dramatic progression or emotional effect characteristic of a play: the drama of the prisoner's escape and recapture. 5. The quality or condition of being dramatic: a summit meeting full of drama. [Late Latin drāma, drāmat-, from Greek, from dran, to do, perform.]

Dram·a·mine (dräm'ə-mēn') A trademark used for dimenhydrinate.

dra·mat·ic (drə-măt'ik) adj. 1. Abbr. dram. Of or relating to drama or the theater. 2. Characterized by or expressive of the action or emotion associated with drama or the theatre: a dramatic rescue at sea. 3. Arresting or forceful in appearance or effect: a dramatic sunset. 4. Music. Having a powerful, expressive singing voice: a dramatic tenor. [Late Latin drāmaticus, from Greek dramatikos, from drama, dramat-, drama. See DRAMA.] —dra·mat'i·cal·ly adv.

SYNONYMS: dramatic, histrionic, melodramatic, stagy, theatrical. The central meaning shared by these adjectives is “suggestive of acting or of an emotional and often affected stage performance”: made a dramatic entrance in a swirling cape; a histrionic gesture; struck an attitude of melodramatic despair; stagy heroics; assumed a theatrical pose.

dramatic irony (drə-măt'ik ī'rə-nē) n. The dramatic effect achieved by leading an audience to understand an incongruity between a situation and the accompanying speeches, while the characters in the play remain unaware of the incongruity.

dramatic monologue (drə-măt'ik mōn'ə-lōg') n. A literary, usually verse composition in which a speaker reveals his or her character, often in relation to a critical situation or event, in a monologue addressed to the reader or to a presumed listener.

dra·mat·ics (drə-măt'iks) n. (used with a sing. or pl. verb). 1. The art or practice of acting and stagecraft. 2. Dramatic or stagy behavior: Cut the dramatics and get to the point.

dram·a·tis per·so·nae (dräm'ə-tīs pər-sō'nē, drä'mə-tīs pər-sō'nī') pl.n. 1. The characters in a play or story. 2. A list of the characters in a play or story. [Latin drāmatis, genitive of drāma, drama + persōnae, pl. of persona, character.]

dram·a·tist (dräm'ə-tīst, drä'mə-) n. Abbr. dram. One who writes plays; a playwright.

dram-a-ti-za-tion (dräm'ə-tī-zā'shən, drä'mə-) n. 1. The act or art of dramatizing: the dramatization of a novel. 2. A work adapted for dramatic presentation: a dramatization by actors of actual recorded events.

dram-a-tize (dräm'ə-tīz', drä'mə-) v. dram-a-tized, dram-a-tiz-ing, dram-a-tiz-es. — v. tr. 1. To adapt (a literary work) for dramatic presentation, as in a theater or on television or radio. 2. To present or view in a dramatic or melodramatic way. — v. intr. 1. To be adaptable to dramatic form. 2. To indulge in self-dramatization.

dram-a-turge (dräm'ə-tûrj', drä'mə-) n. A writer or adapter of plays; a playwright. [French, from Greek dramatourgos: drama, dramat-, drama; see DRAMA + ergon, work; see werg- in Appendix.]

dram-a-tur-gy (dräm'ə-tûr'jē, drä'mə-) n. The art of the theater, especially the writing of plays. — dram'a-tur'gic, dram'a-tur'gi-cal adj.

Dram-men (drä'mən) A city of southeast Norway southwest of Oslo. It is a commercial and fishing port with varied industries. Population, 50,605.

Dran-cy (drän-sē') A city of north-central France, an industrial suburb of Paris. Population, 60,183.

drank (drängk) v. Past tense of drink.

dr ap abbr. Apothecaries' dram.

drape (drāp) v. draped, drap-ing, drapes. — v. tr. 1. To cover, dress, or hang with or as if with cloth in loose folds: draped the coffin with a flag; a robe that draped her figure. See Synonyms at clothe. 2. To arrange or let fall in loose folds: draping the banner from the balcony. 3. To hang or rest limply: draped my legs over the chair. — v. intr. To fall or hang in loose folds: arranged the cloth to drape over the table legs. — n. 1. A drapery; a curtain. 2. A cloth arranged over a patient's body during a medical examination or treatment or during surgery, designed to provide a sterile field around the area being examined or treated or around the operative incision. 3. The way in which cloth falls or hangs: adjusted the drape of the gown. [Middle English drapen, to weave, from Old French draper, from drap, cloth, from Late Latin drappus.]

drap-er (drā'pər) n. Chiefly British. A dealer in cloth or clothing and dry goods. [Middle English, weaver or seller of cloth, from Old French drapier, from drap, cloth. See DRAPE.]

Dra-per (drā'pər), Henry. 1837-1882. American astronomer who developed methods for photographing the heavens and was the first to photograph a stellar spectrum (1872) and a nebula (1880).

Dra-per (drā'pər), John William. 1811-1882. British-born American chemist and historian noted for contributions to the fields of photography and telegraphy. His historical works include History of the Conflict between Religion and Science (1874).

Dra·per (drā'pər), Ruth. 1884-1956. American monologist whose sensitive portrayals of a large variety of characters were popular in America and Europe.

drap·er·y (drā'pə-rē) n. pl. drap·er·ies. 1. Cloth or clothing gracefully arranged in loose folds. 2. A piece or pieces of heavy fabric hanging straight in loose folds, used as a curtain. 3. Cloth; fabric. 4. Chiefly British. The business of a draper.

dras·tic (drās'tik) adj. 1. Severe or radical in nature; extreme: the drastic measure of amputating the entire leg; drastic social change brought about by the French Revolution. 2. Taking effect violently or rapidly: a drastic emetic. [Greek drastikos, active, from drastos, to be done, from dran, to do.] —dras'ti·cal·ly adv.

drat (drät) interj. Used to express annoyance. [Short for God rot.] drat·ted (drät'tid) adj. Damned; confounded.

Drau (drou) See Drava.

draught (dräft) n., v. & adj. Chiefly British. Variant of draft.

draughts (dräfts, dräfts) n. (used with a sing. or pl. verb.) Chiefly British. The game of checkers. [Middle English draughtes, pl. of draught, act of pulling, move at chess. See DRAFT.]

Dra·va or Dra·ve (drä'və) also Drau (drou) A river rising in the Carnic Alps of southern Austria and flowing about 724 km (450 mi) eastward into and across northern Yugoslavia to the Danube River.

dr avdp abbr. Avoirdupois dram.

Dra·ve (drä'və) See Drava.

Dra·vid·i·an (drə-vīd'ē-ən) n. 1. A large family of languages spoken especially in southern India and northern Sri Lanka that includes Tamil, Telugu, Malayalam, and Kannada. 2. A member of any of the peoples that speak one of the Dravidian languages, especially a member of one of the pre-Indo-European peoples of southern India. [From Sanskrit drāviḍaḥ, a Dravidian.] —Dra·vid'i·an,

Dra·vid'ic (-vīd'ik) adj.

draw (drô) v. drew (drō), drawn (drôn), draw·ing, draws. — v. tr.

1. a. To cause to move after or toward one by applying continuous force; drag: drew the chair closer to the table; a team of horses drawing a wagon. See Synonyms at pull. b. To cause to move in a given direction or to a given position, as by leading: The teacher drew the children into the room to see the decorations. c. To move or pull so as to cover or uncover something: draw the curtains. 2. To cause to flow forth: a pump drawing water; a blow that drew blood. 3. To suck or take in (air, for example); inhale. 4. To require (a specified depth of water) for floating: a boat drawing 18 inches. 5. To take or pull out: drew a gun from beneath the counter; drew out a fat wallet. 6. To extract or take from for one's own use: drew strength from their religious faith. 7. To eviscerate; disembowel. 8. a. To cause to come by attracting; attract: afraid the casino will draw undesirable elements to the town. b. To select or take in from a given group, type, or region: draw clients from all levels of society. 9. To bring to a certain condition or action; lead: drawn to despair; drew them to resign. 10. To bring on oneself as a result; provoke: drew enemy fire. 11. To evoke as a response; elicit: a performance that drew jeers from the audience. 12. To earn; gain: deposits that draw interest at a rate of 5 percent. 13. a. To withdraw (money). b. To use (a check, for example) when paying. c. To receive on a regular basis or at a specified time: draw a pension. 14. To take or receive by chance: draw lots. 15. Games. a. To take (cards) from a dealer or central stack. b. To force (a card) to be played. 16. To end or leave (a contest) tied or undecided. 17. To hit or strike (a ball) so as to give it backspin. 18. To pull back the string of (a bow). 19. To distort the shape of. 20. To stretch taut. 21. a. To flatten, stretch, or mold (metal) by hammering or die stamping. b. To shape or elongate (a wire, for example) by pulling through dies. 22. a. To inscribe (a line or lines) with a pencil or other marking implement. b. To make a likeness of on a surface, using mostly lines; depict with lines: drew a map of the area; drawing landscapes and still lifes. c. To portray in writing or speech; depict with words: draws moving scenes of ghetto life. 23. To formulate or devise from evidence or data at hand: draw a comparison. 24. To compose or write out in legal format: draw a deed. — v. intr. 1. To proceed or move steadily: a ship drawing near the shore. 2. To attract customers or spectators: The new play is drawing well. 3. To cause a flow of liquid: The patient's veins don't draw easily. 4. To cause suppuration. 5. To take in a draft of air: The flue isn't drawing. 6. To steep in or as if in the manner of tea. 7. To pull out a weapon for use. 8. To use or call upon part of a fund or supply: drawing on an account; drew from the experience of fellow workers. 9. To contract or tighten: material that draws when it dries. 10. To conclude a contest without either side winning; tie: The chess players drew in 32 moves. 11. To make a likeness with lines on a surface; sketch. — n. 1. a. An act of drawing. b. The result of drawing. 2. Something drawn, especially a lot, card, or cards drawn at random. 3. An inhalation, especially through a pipe or other smoking implement. 4. Something that attracts interest, customers, or spectators: a singer who is a popular draw. 5. The movable part of a drawbridge. 6. A special advantage; an edge: have the draw on one's enemies. 7. A contest ending without either side winning. 8. A small natural depression that water drains into; a shallow gully. 9. Games. A draw shot. —phrasal verbs. draw away. To move ahead of competitors. draw back. To retreat. draw down. To deplete by consuming or spending: drew down our food reserves. draw on. To approach: as evening draws on. draw out. 5. To prolong; protract. 6. To induce to speak freely: managed to draw the shy child out. draw up. 7. To compose or write in a set form; write out: draw up a contract; draw up a list. 8. To bring (troops, for example) into order. 9. To bring or come to a halt. 10. To bring (oneself) into an erect posture, often as an expression of dignity or indignation. 11. Chiefly Southern U.S. To shrink when washed. Used of clothes. — idioms. draw a blank. To fail to find or remember something. draw and quarter. 2. To execute (a prisoner) by tying each limb to a horse and driving the horses in different directions. 3. To disembowel and dismember after hanging. 4. Informal. To punish severely: The teenager was drawn and quartered for wrecking the family's only car. draw straws. To decide by a lottery with straws of unequal lengths. [Middle English drauen, from Old English dragan.]

draw-back (drô'bäk') n. 1. A disadvantage or inconvenience. See Synonyms at disadvantage. 2. A refund or remittance, such as a discount on duties or taxes for goods destined for reexport.

draw-bar (drô'bär') n. 1. A bar across the rear of a tractor for hitching machinery. 2. A railroad coupler.

draw-bridge (drô'brij') n. A bridge that can be raised or drawn aside either to prevent access or to permit passage beneath it.

draw-down (drô'doun') n. 1. The act, process, or result of depleting: the drawdown of oil supplies; a drawdown of investment capital. 2. A lowering of the water level in a reservoir or other body of water.

draw-ee (drô'ē') n. The party on which an order for the payment of money is drawn.

draw-er (drô'er) n. 1. One that draws, especially one that draws an order for the payment of money. 2. (also drôr) A boxlike compartment in furniture that can be pulled out and pushed in. 3. drawers (drôrz). Underpants.

draw-ing (drô'ing) n. 1. The act or an instance of drawing. 2. a. The art of representing objects or forms on a surface chiefly by means of lines. b. A work produced by this art.

drawing card (drô'ing kârd) n. An attraction drawing large audiences.

drawing pin (drô'ing pîn) n. Chiefly British. A thumbtack.

drawing room (drô'ing rōom) n. 1. A large room in which guests are entertained. 2. A ceremonial reception. 3. A large private room on a railroad sleeping car. [; akin to withdrawing room.]

draw-knife (drô'nīf') n. A knife with a handle at each end of the blade, used with a drawing motion to shave a surface. Also called drawshave drawl (drôl) v. drawled, drawl-ing, drawls. — v. intr. To speak with lengthened or drawn-out vowels. — v. tr. To utter with lengthened or drawn-out vowels: "We-e-ell," the clerk drawled. — n. The speech or manner of speaking of one who drawls: a Southern drawl. [Probably from Low German drauelen, to loiter, delay.] — drawl'er n.

drawn (drôn) v. Past participle of draw. — adj. Haggard, as from fatigue or ill health: a wan, drawn face.

drawn butter (drôn büt'er) n. Melted butter, often seasoned and used as a sauce. [drawn, past participle of DRAW, to bring to a proper consistency (obsolete).]

draw poker (drô pō'kær) n. Games. Poker in which each player is dealt five cards face down and may then discard and get replacements for a specified number of cards after the first round of betting.

draw-shave (drô'shāv') n. See drawknife.

draw shot (drô shōt) n. Games. A billiards shot in which the cue ball is struck below center so that it draws back from the object ball after impact.

draw-string (drô'strīng') n. A cord or ribbon run through a hem or casing and pulled to tighten or close an opening.

draw-tube (drô'tōōb', -tyōōb') n. A tube that slides within another tube, as in a small hand telescope.

dray (drā) n. A low, heavy cart without sides, used for haulage. — v. tr.

drayed, dray-ing, drays. To haul by means of a low, heavy sideless cart. [Middle English draie, sledge, cart, from Old English dragan, to draw.]

dray-age (drā'ij) n. 1. Transport by dray. 2. A charge for transport by dray.

dray-man (drā'mæn) n. A driver of a dray.

Dray-ton (drāt'n), Michael. 1563-1631. English poet who produced a wide range of works, including sonnets, dramas, satires, and eclogues, such as those in Idea, The Shepherd's Garland (1593).

Drayton Plains (drāt'n plānz) A community of southeast Michigan, a suburb of Pontiac. Population, 18,000.

dread (drēd) v. dread-ed, dread-ing, dreads. — v. tr. 1. To be in terror of.

2. To anticipate with alarm, distaste, or reluctance: dreaded the long drive home.

3. Archaic. To hold in awe or reverence. — v. intr. To be very afraid. — n.

1. Profound fear; terror. 2. Fearful or distasteful anticipation. See Synonyms at fear.

3. An object of fear, awe, or reverence. 4. Archaic. Awe; reverence. — adj.

1. Causing terror or fear: a dread disease. 2. Inspiring awe: the dread presence of the headmaster. [Middle English dreden, short for adreden, from Old English adrædan, from ondrædan, to advise against, fear : ond-, and-, against; see UN-² + rædan, to advise; see REDE.]

dread-ful (drēd'fəl) adj. 1. Inspiring dread; terrible. 2. Extremely unpleasant; distasteful or shocking: dreadful table manners; this dreadful heat. —dread-ful-ly adv. —dread'ful-ness n.

dread-locks (drēd'lōks') pl.n. Long, thin braids or natural locks of hair densely radiating from the scalp, in a style popularized by Rastafarians.

—dread'locked' adj.

dread-nought (drēd'nōt') n. A heavily armed battleship.

dream (drēm) n. 1. A series of images, ideas, emotions, and sensations occurring involuntarily in the mind during certain stages of sleep. 2. A daydream; a reverie. 3. A state of abstraction; a trance. 4. A wild fancy or hope. 5. A condition or achievement that is longed for; an aspiration: a dream of owning their own business. 6. One that is exceptionally gratifying, excellent, or beautiful: Our new car runs like a dream. — v. dreamed or dreamt (drĕmt), dream-ing, dreams. — v. intr. 1. To experience a dream in sleep: dreamed of meeting an old friend. 2. To daydream. 3. To have a deep aspiration: dreaming of a world at peace. 4. To regard something as feasible or practical: I wouldn't dream of trick skiing on icy slopes. — v. tr. 1. To experience a dream of while asleep: Did it storm last night, or did I dream it? 2. To conceive of; imagine. 3. To pass (time) idly or in reverie. — phrasal verb. dream up. To invent; concoct: dreamed up a plan to corner the market. [Middle English drem, from Old English drĕam, joy, music; akin to Old Saxon drōm, mirth, dream.]

dream·er (drĕ'mĕr) n. 1. One that dreams. 2. a. A visionary. b. An idealist. 3. A habitually impractical person.

dream·land (drĕm'lənd') n. 1. An ideal or imaginary land. 2. A state of sleep.

dream·scape (drĕm'skāp') n. A dreamlike scene or picture having surreal qualities.

dreamt (drĕmt) v. A past tense and a past participle of dream.

dream·time also Dream·time (drĕm'tīm') n. The time of the creation of the world in the mythology of the Australian aborigines: "Aboriginal myths tell of the legendary totemic beings who wandered across the country in the Dreamtime... singing the world into existence" (Bruce Chatwin).

dream vision (drĕm vĭzh'ən) n. A narrative poem, especially in medieval literature, in which the main character falls asleep and experiences events having allegorical, didactic, or moral significance.

dream·y (drĕ'mĕ) adj. dream·i·er, dream·i·est. 1. Resembling a dream; ethereal or vague. 2. Given to daydreams or reverie. 3. Soothing and serene.

4. Informal. Inspiring delight; wonderful. — dream/i·ly adv. — dream/i·ness n.

drear (drĭr) adj. Dreary.

drea·ry (drĭr'ĕ) adj. drea·ri·er, drea·ri·est. 1. Dismal; bleak. 2. Boring; dull: dreary tasks. [Middle English dreri, bloody, frightened, sad, from Old English drĕorig, bloody, sad, from drĕor, gore. See dhreu- in Appendix.] — drea/ri·ly adv. — drea/ri·ness n.

dreck (drĕk) n. Slang. Trash, especially inferior merchandise. [German Dreck, from Middle High German drĕc. See sker-³ in Appendix.] — dreck'y adj.

dredg¹ (drĕj) n. 1. Any of various machines equipped with scooping or suction devices and used to deepen harbors and waterways and in underwater mining. 2. Nautical. A boat or barge equipped with a dredge. 3. An implement consisting of a net on a frame, used for gathering shellfish. — v. dredged, dredg-ing, dredg-es. — v. tr. 1. To clean, deepen, or widen with a dredge. 2. To bring up with a dredge: dredged up the silt. 3. To come up with; unearth: dredged up bitter memories. — v. intr. To use a dredge: dredging for alluvial gold.

[Middle English dreg-, in dreg-boat, boat for dredging; akin to Old English dragan, to draw.]

dredge² (drěj) v. tr. dredged, dredg-ing, dredg-es. To coat (food) by sprinkling with a powder, such as flour or sugar. [From obsolete dredge, a sweetmeat, from Middle English dragge, from Old French dragie, alteration of Latin tragē-mata, confectionary, from Greek tragēmata, pl. of tragēma, sweetmeat. See terə-¹ in Appendix.]

dredg-er¹ (drěj'ər) n. 1. A dredging machine. 2. Nautical. A barge or boat equipped with a dredge.

dredg-er² (drěj'ər) n. A container with a perforated lid used for coating food with a powder, such as flour or sugar.

D region (dē' rē'jən) n. The region of the ionosphere about 40 to 65 kilometers (25 to 40 miles) above the earth.

dreg (drěj) n. 1. The sediment in a liquid; lees. Often used in the plural. 2. The basest or least desirable portion. Often used in the plural: the dregs of humanity. 3. A small amount; a residue. [Middle English dreg, from Old Norse dregg.]

drei-del also drei-dl (drād'l) n. A toy similar to a spinning top used in games of chance played by children and adults at Hanukkah. [Yiddish dreydl, from dreyen, to turn, from Middle High German dræjen, from Old High German drāen.]

Drei-ser (drī'sər, -zər), Theodore Herman Albert. 1871-1945. American writer and editor whose naturalistic novels, such as Sister Carrie (1900) and An American Tragedy (1925), portray life as a struggle against ungovernable forces.

drench (drěntʃ) v. tr. drenched, drench-ing, drench-es. 1. To wet through and through; soak. 2. To administer a large oral dose of liquid medicine to (an animal). 3. To provide with something in great abundance; surfeit: just drenched in money. — n. 1. The act of wetting or becoming wet through and through. 2. A large dose of liquid medicine, especially one administered to an animal by pouring down the throat. [Middle English drenchen, to drown, from Old English drencan, to give to drink, drown. See dhreg- in Appendix.] — drench'er n.

Dres-den (drěz'dən) A city of east-central Germany on the Elbe River east-southeast of Leipzig. An industrial and cultural center, it was severely damaged in bombing raids during World War II. Its china industry was moved to Meissen in the early 18th century. Population, 522,532.

Dresden china (drěz'dən chī'nə) n. Meissen porcelain. [After Dresden.]

dress (drēs) v. dressed, dress-ing, dress-es. — v. tr. 1. a. To put clothes on; clothe. b. To furnish with clothing. 2. To decorate or adorn: dress a Christmas tree. 3. To arrange a display in: dress a store window. 4. To arrange (troops) in ranks; align. 5. To apply medication, bandages, or other therapeutic materials to (a wound). 6. To arrange and groom (the hair), as by styling, combing, or washing. 7. To groom (an animal); curry. 8. To cultivate (land or plants). 9. To clean (fish or fowl) for cooking or sale. 10. To trim and finish the surface of:

dress a plank. — v. intr. 1. To put on clothes. 2. To wear clothes of a certain kind or style: dresses casually. 3. To wear formal clothes: dress for dinner. 4. To get into proper alignment with others: The troops dressed on the squad leader. — n. 1. Clothing; apparel. 2. A style of clothing: folk dancers in peasant dress. 3. A one-piece outer garment for women or girls. 4. Outer covering or appearance; guise: an ancient ritual in modern dress. — adj. 1. Suitable for formal occasions: dress shoes. 2. Requiring formal clothes: a dress dinner. — phrasal verbs. dress down. 1. To scold; reprimand: I was dressed down by the teacher for lateness. 2. To wear informal clothes, befitting an occasion or location: I dressed down for such a casual occasion. dress up. To wear formal or fancy clothes: They dressed up and went to the prom. — idiom. dress ship. Nautical. To display the ensign, signal flags, and bunting on a ship. [Middle English dressen, to arrange, put on clothing, from Old French drecier, to arrange, from Vulgar Latin directiāre*, from Latin directus, past participle of dīrigere, to direct. See DIRECT.]

WORD HISTORY: A dress is such a common article of modern attire that it is difficult to imagine that the word dress at one time did not refer to such a thing. The earliest sense of dress, recorded in a work written before 1450, was “speech, talk.” The relationship of our modern sense to this early sense is explained by the fact that the noun dress comes from the verb dress, which goes back through Old French drecier, “to arrange,” and the assumed Vulgar Latin dīrectiāre to Latin dīrectus, a form of the verb dīrigere, “to direct.” In accordance with its etymology the verb dress has meant or still means “to place,” “to arrange,” and “to put in order.” The sense “to clothe” is related to the notion of putting in order, specifically in regard to clothing. This verb sense then gave rise to the noun sense “personal attire” as well as to the important garment sense, which has made the fortune of many a fashion designer. The earliest noun sense, “speech,” comes from a verb sense having to do with addressing or directing words to other people.

dress-sage (drə-sāzh', drē-) n. Sports. The guiding of a horse through a series of complex maneuvers by slight movements of the rider's hands, legs, and weight. [French, preparation, training, dressage, from dresser, to set up, arrange, train, from Old French drecier, to set up, arrange. See DRESS.]

dress circle (drēs sūr'kəl) n. A section of seats in a theater or opera house, usually the first tier above the orchestra.

dress code (drēs kōd) n. A set of rules, as in a school, indicating the approved manner of dress: “the company's white-shirt black-tie dress code” (David Pauly).

dress-er¹ (drēs'ər) n. 1. One that dresses: a careful dresser. 2. A wardrobe assistant, as for an actor.

dress-er² (drēs'ər) n. 1. A low chest of drawers often supporting a mirror and typically used for holding clothes and personal items. 2. A cupboard or set of shelves for dishes or kitchen utensils. [Middle English dressour, table for preparing food, from Old French dreceur, from drecier, to set up, arrange. See DRESS.]

dress-ing (drēs'ing) n. 1. A therapeutic or protective material applied to a wound. 2. A sauce for certain dishes, such as salads. 3. A stuffing, as for poultry or fish. 4. Manure or other fertilizing material for soil.

dress-ing-down (drēs'ing-doun') n. A severe scolding.

dress-ing gown (drēs'ing gown) n. A robe worn for lounging or before dressing.

dress-ing room (drēs'ing rōom) n. A room, as in a theater, for changing costumes or clothes and applying makeup.

dress-ing table (drēs'ing tā'bəl) n. A low table with a mirror at which one sits while applying makeup. Also called vanity dress-mak-er (drēs'mā'kər) n. One that makes women's clothing, especially dresses. —dress'mak'ing n.

Dress-ler (drēs'lər), Marie. 1869-1934. Canadian-born American comic actress who won an Academy Award for Min and Bill (1931).

dress rehearsal (drēs rī-hûr'səl) n. A full, uninterrupted rehearsal of a play with costumes and stage properties.

dress-y (drēs'ē) adj. dress-i-er, dress-i-est. 1. Showy or elegant in dress or appearance. 2. Smart; stylish. —dress'i-ness n.

drew (drō) v. Past tense of draw.

Drew (drō) Family of American actors, including John (1827-1862), his wife, Louisa (1820-1897), and their son John (1853-1927).

Drew (drō), Daniel. 1797-1879. American financier who as a director of the Erie Railroad manipulated stock prices to his own advantage and with James Fisk and Jay Gould engaged Cornelius Vanderbilt in a bitter stock-market struggle (1866-1868) for control of the railroad.

Drex-el Hill (drēk'səl hīl) A community of southeast Pennsylvania, a residential suburb of Philadelphia. Population, 29,744.

Drey-fus (drī'fəs, drā-), Alfred. 1859-1935. French army officer of Jewish descent who was convicted of treason (1894), sentenced to life imprisonment, and ultimately acquitted when the evidence against him was shown to have been forged by anti-Semites.

drib (drīb) n. A negligible amount: finished the work in dribs and drabs. [Perhaps from DRIBLET.]

drib-ble (drīb'əl) v. drib-bled, drib-bling, drib-bles. — v. intr. 1. To flow or fall in drops or an unsteady stream; trickle: Water dribbled from the leaky faucet. 2. To let saliva drip from the mouth; drool. 3. Sports. a. To move a ball or puck with repeated light bounces or kicks. b. To advance by dribbling: dribbled down the court. — v. tr. 1. To let flow or fall in drops or an unsteady stream.

2. Sports. a. To move (a ball or puck) by repeated light bounces or kicks, as in basketball or soccer. b. To hit (a baseball, for example) so that it bounces slowly.

— n. 1. A weak, unsteady stream; a trickle. 2. A small quantity; a bit. 3. Sports. The act of dribbling a ball. [Frequentative of obsolete drib, alteration of DRIP.]

—drib'bler n.

drib·let (drīb'līt) n. 1. A tiny falling drop of liquid. 2. A small amount or portion. [From obsolete drib, to fall in drops, alteration of DRIP.]

dried (drīd) v. Past tense and past participle of dry.

dri·er¹ also dry·er (drī'ər) n. 1. One that dries. 2. A substance added to paint, varnish, or ink to speed drying.

dri·er² (drī'ər) adj. A comparative of dry.

dries (drīz) v. Third person singular present tense of dry.

Driesch (drēsh), Hans Adolf Eduard. 1867-1941. German biologist and philosopher noted for his works on embryology and vitalism.

dri·est (drī'ist) adj. A superlative of dry.

drift (drīft) v. drift·ed, drift·ing, drifts. — v. intr. 1. To be carried along by currents of air or water: a balloon drifting eastward; as the wreckage drifted toward shore. 2. To proceed or move unhurriedly and smoothly: drifting among the party guests. 3. To move leisurely or sporadically from place to place, especially without purpose or regular employment: a day laborer, drifting from town to town. 4. a. To wander from a set course or point of attention; stray. b. To vary from or oscillate randomly about a fixed setting, position, or mode of operation. 5. To be piled up in banks or heaps by the force of a current: snow drifting to five feet. — v. tr. 1. To cause to be carried in a current: drifting the logs downstream.

2. To pile up in banks or heaps: Wind drifted the loose straw against the barn.

3. Western U.S. To drive (livestock) slowly or far afield, especially for grazing.

— n. 1. The act or condition of drifting. 2. Something moving along in a current of air or water. 3. A bank or pile, as of sand or snow, heaped up by currents of air or water. 4. Geology. Rock debris transported and deposited by or from ice, especially by or from a glacier. 5. a. A general trend or tendency, as of opinion. See Synonyms at tendency. b. General meaning or purport; tenor: caught the drift of the conversation. 6. a. A gradual change in position. b. A gradual deviation from an original course, model, method, or intention. c. Variation or random oscillation about a fixed setting, position, or mode of behavior. 7. A gradual change in the output of a circuit or amplifier. 8. The rate of flow of a water current. 9. a. A tool for ramming or driving something down. b. A tapered steel pin for enlarging and aligning holes. 10. a. A horizontal or nearly horizontal passageway in a mine running through or parallel to a vein. b. A secondary mine passageway between two main shafts or tunnels. 11. A drove or herd, especially of swine. See Synonyms at flock¹. [From Middle English, drove, herd, act of driving. See dhreibh- in Appendix.] —drift'y adj.

drift-age (drif'tij) n. 1. Deviation from a set course caused by drifting.

2. Matter that has been carried along or deposited by air or water currents.

drift-er (drif'tər) n. One that drifts, especially a person who moves aimlessly from place to place or from job to job.

drift net (drift nēt) n. A large fishing net buoyed up by floats that is carried along with the current or tide.

drift-wood (drift'wōd') n. Wood floating in or washed up by the water.

drill¹ (drīl) n. 1. a. An implement with cutting edges or a pointed end for boring holes in hard materials, usually by a rotating abrasion or repeated blows; a bit.

b. The hand-operated or hand-powered holder for this implement. c. A loud, harsh noise made by or as if by a powered tool of this kind. 2. a. Disciplined, repetitious exercise as a means of teaching and perfecting a skill or procedure.

b. A task or exercise for teaching a skill or procedure by repetition: conducted an air-raid drill; a drill for learning the multiplication tables. 3. The training of soldiers in marching and the manual of arms. 4. Any of various marine gastropod mollusks, chiefly of the genus Urosalpinx, that bore holes into the shells of bivalve mollusks. U. cinera is destructive to oysters. — v. drilled, drill-ing, drills. —

v. tr. 1. a. To make a hole in (a hard material) with a drill: a bit for drilling masonry. b. To make (a hole) with or as if with a drill: drills holes in trees with its chisellike bill. 2. To strike or hit sharply: The batter drilled a single through the infield. 3. a. To instruct thoroughly by repetition in a skill or procedure: drill pupils in grammar. b. To infuse knowledge of or skill in by repetitious instruction. See Synonyms at practice. See Synonyms at teach. 4. To train (soldiers) in marching and the manual of arms. — v. intr. 1. To make a hole with or as if with a drill. 2. To perform a training exercise. [Obsolete Dutch dril, from drillen, to bore, from Middle Dutch drillen. See terə-¹ in Appendix.] —drill'er n.

drill² (drīl) n. 1. A shallow trench or furrow in which seeds are planted. 2. A row of planted seeds. 3. A machine or implement for planting seeds in holes or furrows. — v. tr. drilled, drill-ing, drills. 1. To sow (seeds) in rows. 2. To plant (a field) in drills. [Perhaps from drill, rill, from Middle English drille, sip.]

drill³ (drīl) n. Durable cotton or linen twill of varying weights, generally used for work clothes. [Short for drilling, alteration of German Drillich, from Middle High German drilich, from Old High German drilīh, alteration of Latin trilix, trilīc-, triple-twilled. See TRELLIS.]

drill⁴ (drīl) n. A baboon (Papio leucophaeus) of western Africa, related to and resembling the mandrill. [Possibly of West African origin.]

drill instructor (drīl in-strūk'tər) n. Abbr. DI A noncommissioned officer who instructs recruits in military drill and discipline.

drill-mas-ter (drīl'mās'tər) n. 1. A drill instructor. 2. An instructor given to extremely rigorous training.

drill press (drīl prēs) n. A powered vertical drilling machine in which the drill is pressed to the work automatically or by a hand lever.

drill steel (drīl stēl) n. A high-grade steel used in tools and dies that is made by fusing low-carbon steel with charcoal or cast iron. Formerly prepared in a graphite crucible, it is now produced in an electric furnace. Also called crucible steel drill-stock (drīl'stök') n. The part of a drilling tool or machine that holds the shank of a drill or bit.

Drin (drēn) A river, about 282 km (175 mi) long, of Albania flowing north and west to the Adriatic Sea.

Dri-na (drē'nə, -nä) A river, about 459 km (285 mi) long, of central Yugoslavia flowing generally north to the Sava River.

drink (drīŋk) v. drank (drāŋk), drunk (drūŋk), drink-ing, drinks. — v. tr. 1. To take into the mouth and swallow (a liquid). 2. To swallow the liquid contents of (a vessel): drank a cup of tea. 3. To take in or soak up; absorb: drank the fresh air; spongy earth that drank up the rain. 4. To take in eagerly through the senses or intellect: drank in the beauty of the day. 5. a. To give or make (a toast). b. To toast (a person or an occasion, for example): We'll drink your health. 6. To bring to a specific state by drinking alcoholic liquors: drank our sorrows away. — v. intr. 1. To swallow liquid: drank noisily; drink from a goblet. 2. To imbibe alcoholic liquors: They only drink socially. 3. To salute a person or an occasion with a toast: We will drink to your continued success. — n. 1. A liquid that is fit for drinking; a beverage. 2. An amount of liquid swallowed: took a long drink from the fountain. 3. An alcoholic beverage, such as a cocktail or highball. 4. Excessive or habitual indulgence in alcoholic liquor. 5. Slang. A body of water; the sea: The hatch cover slid off the boat and into the drink. [Middle English drinken, from Old English drincan. See dhreg- in Appendix.]

drink-a-ble (drīŋg'kə-bəl) adj. Suitable or fit for drinking; potable: drinkable water. — n. A beverage. — drink'a-bil'i-ty n.

drink-er (drīŋg'kər) n. 1. One that drinks. 2. One who drinks alcoholic liquors, especially habitually or excessively: a hard drinker.

drink-ing fountain (drīŋg'kīŋ foun'tən) n. A device equipped with a nozzle that when activated provides a stream of drinking water for public use.

Drink-wa-ter (drīŋk'wō'tər, -wōt'ər), John. 1882-1937. British writer noted for his poetry, children's literature, and dramas, including Abraham Lincoln (1918).

drip (drīp) v. dripped, drip-ping, drips. — v. intr. 1. To fall in drops: Water is dripping from that leaky faucet. 2. To shed drops: an umbrella that is dripping all over the floor. 3. To ooze or be saturated with or as if with liquid: "His playing drips with exaggerated rubato and unorthodox tempi" (Annalyn Swan). — v. tr.

To let fall in or as if in drops: a brush dripping paint; a speech that dripped invective. — n. 1. The process of forming and falling in drops. 2. a. Liquid or moisture that falls in drops. b. A slight intermittent flow or leak: fixed the drip in the faucet. 3. The sound made by liquid falling in drops: listened to the steady drip of the rain. 4. A projection on a cornice or sill that protects the area below from rainwater. 5. Slang. A tiresome or annoying person. [Middle English drip-pen. See dhreu- in Appendix.]

drip coffee (drĭp kô'fē) n. Coffee made by pouring boiling water through a perforated container holding ground coffee into a pot that is fitted underneath.

drip-dry (drĭp'drī') adj. Made of a fabric that will not wrinkle when hung dripping wet for drying. — v. intr. drip--dried, drip--dry-ing, drip--dries. To dry with no wrinkles when hung dripping wet.

drip feed (drĭp fēd) n. 1. Administration of blood, plasma, saline, or sugar solutions, usually intravenously, a drop at a time. 2. a. The device or tubes by which such a substance is administered. b. The substance administered.

—drip/-feed' (drĭp'fēd') v.

drip-less (drĭp'lis) adj. Made or designed to prevent dripping: a dripless faucet; a dripless paint roller.

drip pan (drĭp păn) n. A pan for catching the drippings from roasting meat. Regional. Also called bakersheet drip-ping (drĭp'ing) n. 1. The act or sound of something falling in drops. 2. Often drippings. The fat and juices exuded from roasting meat, often used in making gravy.

drip-py (drĭp'ē) adj. drip-pi-er, drip-pi-est. 1. Characterized by dripping; drizzly: a drippy, wet day. 2. Slang. a. Tiresome or annoying. b. Mawkishly sentimental: a drippy love scene. —drip/pi-ly adv. —drip/pi-ness n.

drip-stone (drĭp'stōn') n. 1. A protective drip made of stone, as on a cornice over a door or window. Also called hoodmold 2. Calcium carbonate in the form of stalactites or stalagmites.

drive (drīv) v. drove (drōv), driv-en (drĭv'ən), driv-ing, drives. — v. tr. 1. To push, propel, or press onward forcibly; urge forward: drove the horses into the corral. 2. To repulse forcefully; put to flight: drove the attackers away; drove out any thought of failure. 3. To guide, control, or direct (a vehicle). 4. a. To convey or transport in a vehicle: drove the children to school. b. To traverse in a vehicle: drive the freeways to work. 5. To supply the motive force or power to and cause to function: Steam drives the engine. 6. To compel or force to work, often excessively: “Every serious dancer is driven by notions of perfection—perfect expressiveness, perfect technique” (Susan Sontag). 7. To force into or from a particular act or state: Indecision drives me crazy. 8. To force to go through or penetrate: drove the stake into the ground. 9. To create or produce by penetrating forcibly: The nail drove a hole in the tire. 10. To carry through vigorously to a conclusion:

drove home his point. 11. a. Sports. To throw, strike, or cast (a ball, for example) hard or rapidly. b. Basketball. To move with the ball directly through: drove the lane and scored. c. Baseball. To cause (a run) to be scored. 12. a. To chase (game) into the open or into traps or nets. b. To search (an area) for game in such a manner. — v. intr. 1. To move along or advance quickly as if pushed by an impelling force. 2. To rush, dash, or advance violently against an obstruction: The wind drove into my face. 3. To operate a vehicle, such as a car. 4. To go or be transported in a vehicle: drove to the supermarket. 5. a. Sports. To hit, throw, or impel a ball or other missile forcibly. b. Basketball. To move directly to the basket with the ball. 6. To make an effort to reach or achieve an objective; aim. — n. 1. The act of driving. 2. A trip or journey in a vehicle. 3. Abbr. Dr. A road for automobiles and other vehicles. 4. a. The means or apparatus for transmitting motion or power to a machine or from one machine part to another. b. The means by which automotive power is applied to a roadway: four-wheel drive. c. The means or apparatus for controlling and directing an automobile: right-hand drive. 5. Computer Science. A device that reads data from and writes data onto a storage medium, such as a floppy disk. 6. A strong organized effort to accomplish a purpose. See Synonyms at campaign. 7. Energy, push, or aggressiveness. 8. Psychology. A strong motivating tendency or instinct, especially of sexual or aggressive origin, that prompts activity toward a particular end. 9. A massive, sustained military offensive. 10. a. Sports. The act of hitting, knocking, or thrusting a ball very swiftly. b. Sports. The stroke or thrust by which a ball is driven. c. Basketball. The act of moving with the ball directly to the basket. 11. a. A rounding up and driving of cattle to new pastures or to market. b. A gathering and driving of logs down a river. c. The cattle or logs thus driven. — phrasal verb. drive at. To mean to do or say: I don't understand what you're driving at. [Middle English driven, from Old English drifan. See dhreibh- in Appendix.] — driv'a·bil'i·ty n. — driv'a·ble adj.

drive-in (drīv'īn') n. An establishment designed to permit customers to remain in their motor vehicles while being accommodated. — drive'-in' adj.

driv-el (drīv'əl) v. driv-eled or driv-elled, driv-el-ing or driv-el-ling, driv-els or driv-els. — v. intr. 1. To slobber; drool. 2. To flow like spittle or saliva. 3. To talk stupidly or childishly. — v. tr. 1. To allow to flow from the mouth. 2. To say (something) stupidly. — n. 1. Saliva flowing from the mouth. 2. Stupid or senseless talk. [Middle English drevelen, from Old English dreflian.] — driv'el-er n.

drive-line (drīv'īlīn') n. The components of an automotive vehicle that connect the transmission with the driving axles and include the universal joint and drive shaft. Also called drive train driv-en (drīv'ən) v. Past participle of drive. — adj. 1. Piled up or carried along by a current: driven snow. 2. Motivated by or having a compulsive quality or need: a driven person.

driv-er (drī'vər) n. 1. One that drives, as the operator of a motor vehicle. 2. A tool, such as a screwdriver or hammer, that is used for imparting forceful pressure on another object. 3. A machine part that transmits motion or power to another part. 4. Sports. A golf club with a wide head and a long shaft, used for making long shots from the tee. 5. Nautical. A jib-headed spanker.

driver ant (drī'vər änt) n. See army ant.

driv-er's seat (drī'vərz sēt) n. A position of control or authority.

drive shaft also drive-shaft (drīv'shäft') n. A rotating shaft that transmits mechanical power from a motor or an engine to a point or region of application.

drive time (drīv tīm) n. 1. The time of day during which commuters go to and from work: interesting radio programming during drive time. 2. The time it takes to drive a specified distance or route: a drive time of 11 hours between Kansas City and Denver.

drive train (drīv trān) n. See driveline.

drive-up (drīv'ŭp') adj. Designed to permit customers to remain in their motor vehicles while being accommodated: a drive-up window at the bank. — drive'-up' n.

drive-way (drīv'wā') n. A private road that connects a house, a garage, or another building with the street.

driv-ing (drī'vīng) adj. 1. Transmitting power or motion. 2. Violent, intense, or forceful: a driving rain. 3. Energetic or active: a driving personality. — driv'ing-ly adv.

driz-zle (drīz'əl) v. driz-zled, driz-zling, driz-zles. — v. intr. To rain gently in fine, mistlike drops. — v. tr. 1. To let fall in fine drops or particles: drizzled melted butter over the asparagus. 2. To moisten with fine drops: drizzled the asparagus with melted butter. — n. A fine, gentle, misty rain. [Perhaps from Middle English drisning, fall of dew, from Old English -drysnian, in gedrysnian, to pass away, vanish. See dhreu- in Appendix.] — driz'zly adj.

Dro-ghe-da (drô'ĩ-də, drô'hĩ-) A municipal borough of eastern Ireland on the Boyne River. Oliver Cromwell stormed the town in 1649 and massacred the inhabitants. Population, 23,247.

drogue (drög) n. 1. Nautical. See sea anchor. 2. A drogue parachute. 3. A funnel-shaped or cone-shaped device towed behind an aircraft as a target. 4. A funnel-shaped device at the end of the hose of a tanker aircraft, used as a stabilizer and receptacle for the probe of a receiving aircraft, as in refueling. [Perhaps alteration of DRAG.]

drogue parachute (drög pär'ə-shōt') n. 1. A parachute used to stabilize or decelerate a fast-moving object, especially a small parachute used to slow down a reentering spacecraft or satellite prior to deployment of the main parachute. 2. A small parachute used to pull a main parachute from its storage pack.

droit (droit, drwä) n. Law. 1. A legal right. 2. Something to which one has legal right. [Middle English, a fee allowed by law, from Old French, right, from Late Latin dīrectum, from neuter of Latin dīrectus, straight. See DIRECT.]

droll (drōl) adj. droll-er, droll-est. Amusingly odd or whimsically comical. — n. Archaic. A buffoon. [French drôle, buffoon, droll, from Old French drolle, bon vivant, possibly from Middle Dutch drol, goblin.] — droll/ness n. — drol/ly adv.

droll-er-y (drō'lə-rē) n. pl. droll-er-ies. 1. A comical or whimsical quality. 2. A comical or whimsical way of acting, talking, or behaving. 3. a. The act of joking; clowning. b. Something, such as a story, that is comical or whimsical.

-drome suff. 1. Racecourse: hippodrome. 2. Field; arena: airdrome. 3. Running: palindrome. [Latin -dromos, from Greek dromos, racecourse.]

drom-e-dar-y (dröm'ī-dēr'ē, drüm'-) n. pl. drom-e-dar-ies. The one-humped domesticated camel (Camelus dromedarius), widely used as a beast of burden in northern Africa and western Asia. Also called Arabian camel [Middle English dromedarie, from Old French dromedaire, from Late Latin dromedārius, from Latin dromas, dromad-, from Greek, running.]

drom-ond (dröm'ənd, drüm'-) n. Nautical. A large medieval sailing galley. [Middle English, from Anglo-Norman dromund, from Late Latin dromō, dromōn-, a kind of ship, from Late Greek dromōn, from Greek dromos, race.]

-dromous suff. Running; moving: catadromous. [From New Latin -dromus, from Greek -dromos, from dromos, act of running.]

drone¹ (drōn) n. 1. A male bee, especially a honeybee, that is characteristically stingless, performs no work, and produces no honey. Its only function is to mate with the queen bee. 2. An idle person who lives off others; a loafer. 3. A pilotless aircraft operated by remote control. [Middle English, from Old English drān.]

drone² (drōn) v. droned, dron-ing, drones. — v. intr. 1. To make a continuous low dull humming sound: “Somewhere an electric fan droned without end” (William Styron). 2. To speak in a monotonous tone: The lecturer droned on for hours. 3. To pass or act in a monotonous way. — v. tr. To utter in a monotonous low tone: “The mosquitoes droned their angry chant” (W. Somerset Maugham). — n. 1. A continuous low humming or buzzing sound. 2. Music. a. Any of the pipes of a bagpipe tuned to produce a single tone. b. A single sustained tone. [Probably from DRONE¹ (from the bee's humming sound).]

drool (drōol) v. drooled, drool-ing, drools. — v. intr. 1. To let saliva run from the mouth; drivel. 2. Informal. To make an extravagant show of appreciation or desire. 3. Informal. To talk nonsense. — v. tr. To let run from the mouth. — n. 1. Saliva. 2. Informal. Senseless talk; drivel. [Perhaps alteration of DRIVEL.]

droop (drōop) v. drooped, droop-ing, droops. — v. intr. 1. To bend or hang downward: “His mouth drooped sadly, pulled down, no doubt, by the plump weight of his jowls” (Gore Vidal). 2. To bend or sag gradually: flowers drooping in the midday heat. 3. To sag in dejection or exhaustion: drooped from lack of sleep. — v. tr. To let bend or hang down: “He drooped his body over the rail” (Norman Mailer). — n. The act or condition of drooping. [Middle English droupen, from Old Norse drūpa. See dhreu- in Appendix.] —droop’i·ly, droop’ing-ly adv. —droop’y adj.

droop nose (drōop nōz) n. An aircraft nose section that can be inclined downward to increase runway visibility on takeoff and landing. Also called droop snoot drop (dröp) n. 1. The smallest quantity of liquid heavy enough to fall in a spherical mass. See Table at measurement. 2. A small quantity of a substance. 3. drops. Liquid medicine administered in drops. 4. A trace or hint: not a drop of pity. 5. a. Something shaped or hanging like a drop. b. A small globular piece of hard candy. 6. The act of falling; descent. 7. A swift decline or decrease, as in quality, quantity, or intensity. 8. a. The vertical distance from a higher to a lower level. b. The distance through which something falls or drops. 9. A sheer incline, such as the face of a cliff. 10. a. A descent by parachute. b. Personnel and equipment landed by means of parachute. 11. Something, such as a trap door on a gallows, that is arranged to fall or be lowered. 12. A drop curtain. 13. A slot through which something is deposited in a receptacle. 14. A central place or establishment where something, such as mail, is brought and subsequently distributed. 15. a. A predetermined location for the deposit and subsequent removal of secret communications or illicit goods, such as drugs. b. The act of depositing such communications or materials. 16. Electronics. A connection made available for an input or output unit on a transmission line. — v. dropped, drop-ping, drops. — v. intr. 1. To fall in drops. 2. To fall from a higher to a lower place or position. 3. To become less, as in number, intensity, or volume. 4. To descend from one level to another. 5. To fall or sink into a state of exhaustion or death. 6. To pass or slip into a specified state or condition: dropped into a doze. 7. Sports. To fall or roll into a basket or hole. Used of a ball. — v. tr. 1. To let fall by releasing hold of. 2. To let fall in drops. 3. To cause to become less; reduce: drop the rate of production. 4. To cause to fall, as by hitting or shooting. 5. Sports. To hurl or strike (a ball) into a basket or hole. 6. To give birth to. Used of animals. 7. To say or offer casually: drop a hint. 8. To write at one’s leisure: drop me a note. 9. To cease consideration or treatment of: dropped the matter altogether. 10. To terminate an association or a relationship with. See Synonyms at dismiss. 11. To leave unfinished: drop everything and help. 12. To leave out (a letter, for example) in speaking or writing. 13. To leave or set down at a particular place; unload. 14. To parachute. 15. To lower the level of (the voice). 16. To lose (a game or contest, for example). 17. Slang. To take, as a drug, by mouth: drop acid. 18. New England. To poach (an egg). —phrasal verbs. drop behind. To fall behind: dropped behind the rest of the class during her long illness. drop by. To stop in for a short visit. drop off. 3. To fall asleep. 4. To decrease: Sales dropped off in the fourth quarter. drop out. 5. To withdraw from participation, as in a game, club, or school. 6. To withdraw from established society, especially because of disillusion with conventional values. —idiom. get the drop on (or have the drop on). To achieve a distinct advantage over. [Middle English droppe, from Old English dropa. See dhreu- in Appendix.]

drop cloth (dröp klôth) n. A sheet, as of cloth or plastic, for protection against spills or dripping, used especially by painters.

drop curtain (dröp kûr'tn) n. 1. An unframed curtain that is lowered to a stage from the flies, often serving as background scenery. 2. A theater curtain that is lowered or raised vertically rather than drawn to the side.

drop-dead (dröp'dëd') adj. Slang. Very impressive; spectacular: “a special video of the best-dressed women making drop-dead, knockout entrances at parties and fashion shows in Paris and New York” (André Leon Talley).

drop-forge (dröp'fôrj', -fôrj') v. tr. drop-forged, drop-forging, drop-forges. To forge or stamp (a metal) between dies by the force of a falling weight such as a drop hammer.

drop hammer (dröp häm'ər) n. A machine consisting of an anvil or base aligned with a hammer that is raised and then dropped on molten metal, used to forge or stamp the metal resting on the anvil.

drop-in (dröp'in') n. 1. One who casually drops in, as to visit or obtain an appointment. 2. An informal social event.

drop kick (dröp kĭk) n. Football. A kick made by dropping the ball to the ground and kicking it just as it starts to rebound. —drop'-kick' (dröp'kĭk') v.

drop leaf (dröp lëf) n. A hinged wing on a table that can be folded down when not in use.

drop-let (dröp'lĭt) n. A tiny drop.

droplet infection (dröp'lĭt ĭn-fëk'shən) n. An infection transmitted from one individual to another by droplets of moisture expelled from the upper respiratory tract through sneezing or coughing.

drop letter (dröp lët'ər) n. A letter that is mailed and delivered from the same post office.

drop-light (dröp'lĭt') n. A hanging lamp that can be lowered and raised on its cord.

drop-off (dröp'ôf', -ôf') n. 1. A steep or abrupt downward slope. 2. A noticeable decrease: a drop-off in attendance.

drop-out (dröp'out') n. 1. a. One who quits school. b. One who has withdrawn from a given social group or environment. 2. Computer Science. a. A segment of magnetic tape on which expected information is absent. b. The failure to read a bit of stored information.

drop-per (dröp'ər) n. One that drops, especially a small tube with a suction bulb at one end for drawing in a liquid and releasing it in drops.

drop-ping (dröp'ing) n. 1. Something dropped. 2. droppings. The excrement of animals.

drop shot (dröp shöt) n. Sports. A shot in various racquet games in which a ball or shuttlecock drops quickly after crossing the net or hitting the wall.

drop-sy (dröp'sē) n. Edema. No longer in scientific use. [Middle English drope-sie, short for idropesie, from Old French ydropsie, from Medieval Latin ydrōpsia, from Latin hydrōpsis, from Greek hudrōpiasis, from hudrōps, dropsy, a dropsical person, from hudōr, water. See wed¹ in Appendix.] —drop'si-cal (-sī-kəl) adj.

—drop'si-cal-ly adv.

drop-wort (dröp'wört', -würt') n. A Eurasian plant (Filipendula vulgaris, formerly F. hexapetala) having finely divided leaflets and clusters of small white flowers.

dros-er-a (drös'ər-ə) n. See sundew. [Greek, feminine of droseros, dewy, from drosos, dew.]

drosh-ky (drösh'kē) also dros-ky (drös'-) n. pl. drosh-kies also drosh-kys. An open four-wheeled horse-drawn carriage formerly used in Russia and Poland. [Russian drozhki, diminutive of drogi, wagon plural of droga, shaft of a wagon.]

dro-soph-i-la (drō-söf'ə-lə, drə-) n. Any of various small fruit flies of the genus Drosophila, especially D. melanogaster, used extensively in genetic research. [New Latin Drosophila, genus name : Greek drosos, dew + New Latin -phila, pl. of -philus, -phile; see -PHILE.]

dross (drös, drôs) n. 1. A waste product or an impurity, especially an oxide, formed on the surface of molten metal. 2. Worthless, commonplace, or trivial matter: "He was wide-awake and his mind worked clearly, purged of all dross" (Vladimir Nabokov). [Middle English dros, from Old English drōs, dregs.]

—dross'y adj.

drought (drou) also drouth (drouth) n. 1. A long period of abnormally low rainfall, especially one that adversely affects growing or living conditions. 2. A prolonged dearth or shortage. [Middle English, from Old English drūgoth.]

—drought'y adj.

drove¹ (drōv) v. Past tense of drive.

drove² (drōv) n. 1. A flock or herd being driven in a body. 2. a. A large mass of people moving or acting as a body. b. A large body of like things. See Synonyms at flock¹. 3. a. A stonemason's broad-edged chisel used for rough hewing. b. A stone surface dressed with such a chisel. [Middle English, from Old English drāf, from drīfan, to drive. See dhreibh- in Appendix.]

drov·er (drō'vər) n. One that drives cattle or sheep.

drown (droun) v. drowned, drown·ing, drowns. — v. tr. 1. To kill by submerging and suffocating in water or another liquid. 2. To drench thoroughly or cover with or as if with a liquid. 3. To deaden one's awareness of; blot out: people who drowned their troubles in drink. 4. To muffle or mask (a sound) by a louder sound: screams that were drowned out by the passing train. — v. intr. To die by suffocating in water or another liquid. [Middle English drounen, probably of Scandinavian origin. See dhreg- in Appendix.]

drowse (drouz) v. drowsed, drows·ing, drows·es. — v. intr. To be half-asleep: drowsed in the warm sun. — v. tr. 1. To make drowsy: "drowsed with the fume of poppies" (John Keats). 2. To pass (time) by drowsing. — n. The condition of being sleepy. [Perhaps ultimately from Old English drūsiān, to sink, be sluggish. See dhreu- in Appendix.]

drows·y (drou'zē) adj. drows·i·er, drows·i·est. 1. Dull with sleepiness; sluggish. 2. Produced or characterized by sleepiness. 3. Inducing sleepiness; soporific. —drows'i·ly adv. —drows'i·ness n.

dr t abbr. Troy dram.

drub (drüb) v. drubbed, drub·bing, drubs. — v. tr. 1. To thrash with a stick. 2. To instill forcefully: drubbed the lesson into my head. 3. a. To defeat emphatically. b. To berate harshly. 4. To stamp (the feet). — v. intr. 1. To beat the ground; stamp. 2. To pound; throb. — n. A blow with a heavy instrument, such as a stick. [Perhaps Arabic ḍaraba, to beat.] —drub'ber n.

drub·bing (drüb'ɪŋ) n. 1. A severe thrashing. 2. A total defeat.

drudge¹ (drŭj) n. A person who does tedious, menial, or unpleasant work. — v. intr. drudged, drudg·ing, drudg·es. To do tedious, unpleasant, or menial work. [From Middle English druggen, to labor; akin to Old English drēogan, to work, suffer.] —drudg'er n. —drudg'ing·ly adv.

drudge² (drŭj) n. & v. Chesapeake Bay. Variant of dredge¹.

REGIONAL NOTE: "Out here on the Chesapeake, they call it 'drudging for arsters,'" says Charles Kuralt in his book On the Road with Charles Kuralt. The standard English verb dredge is pronounced with a centralized vowel by Chesapeake Bay oyster fishermen, yielding drudge. Drudge in turn has been picked up by city dwellers on the Delmarva Peninsula; a survey of some young people from Baltimore revealed that they did not even know that there was a standard English verb dredge. Kuralt gives the regional pronunciation a whimsical folk etymology with the standard meaning of drudge, "to do tedious, menial, or unpleasant work," observing, "Whatever you do for a living, it's not as hard as 'drudging for arsters.'" drudg-er-y (drŭj'ə-rē) n. pl. drudg-er-ies. Tedious, menial, or unpleasant work. See Synonyms at work.

drudge-work (drŭj'wŭrk') n. Drudgery: "This account... of decades of drudge-work amid others' possessions is drudgework for the reader as well" (New Yorker).

drug (drŭg) n. 1. a. A substance used in the diagnosis, treatment, or prevention of a disease or as a component of a medication. b. Such a substance as recognized or defined by the U.S. Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act. 2. A chemical substance, such as a narcotic or hallucinogen, that affects the central nervous system, causing changes in behavior and often addiction. 3. Obsolete. A chemical or dye. — v. tr. drugged, drug-ging, drugs. 1. To administer a drug to. 2. To poison or mix (food or drink) with a drug. 3. To stupefy or dull with or as if with a drug: drugged with sleep. [Middle English drogge, from Old French drogue, drug, perhaps from Middle Dutch droge (vate), dry (cases), pl. of drog, dry.]

drug-get (drŭg'ĭt) n. 1. a. A heavy felted fabric of wool or wool and cotton, used as a floor covering. b. A coarse rug of this fabric, made in India. 2. A fabric woven wholly or partly of wool, formerly used for clothing. [French droguet, probably from drogue, drug, worthless object. See DRUG.]

drug-gie also drug-gy (drŭg'ē) n. pl. drug-gies. Slang. One that takes or is addicted to drugs: "They're like druggies, but without drugs; they're drugged on their own apathy" (Pauline Kael).

drug-gist (drŭg'ĭst) n. 1. A pharmacist. 2. One who sells drugs.

drug-gy¹ (drŭg'ē) Slang. adj. drug-gi-er, drug-gi-est. Of or relating to drugs or drug use: "boozy, druggy confessions" (Vincent Canby).

drug-gy² (drŭg'ē) n. Variant of druggie.

drug-o-la (drŭg-ō'lə) n. Slang. Bribery with payment or kickbacks made by using illegal drugs as the medium of exchange. [DRUG + (PAY)OLA.]

drug-store also drug store (drŭg'stôr', -stôr') n. A store where prescriptions are filled and drugs and other articles are sold.

dru-id also Dru-id (drōō'ĭd) n. A member of an order of priests in ancient Gaul and Britain who appear in Welsh and Irish legend as prophets and sorcerers.

[From Latin druīdēs, druids, of Celtic origin. See deru- in Appendix.]

—dru-id/ic (drōō-ĭd'ĭk), dru-id/i-cal (-ĭ-kəl) adj. —dru-id/i-cal-ly adv.

—dru/id-ism n.

drum (drŭm) n. 1. Music. a. A percussion instrument consisting of a hollow cylinder or hemisphere with a membrane stretched tightly over one or both ends, played by beating with the hands or sticks. b. A sound produced by this instrument. 2. Something resembling a drum in shape or structure, especially a barrel-like metal container or a metal cylinder wound with cable, wire, or heavy rope. 3. Any of various marine and freshwater fishes of the family Sciaenidae that make a drumming sound. 4. Anatomy. The eardrum. — v. drummed, drum-ming, drums. — v. intr. 1. To play a drum or drums. 2. To thump or tap rhythmically or continually: nervously drummed on the table. 3. To produce a booming, reverberating sound by beating the wings, as certain birds do. — v. tr.

1. To perform (a piece or tune) on or as if on a drum. 2. To summon by or as if by beating a drum. 3. To make known to or force upon (a person) by constant repetition: drummed the answers into my head. 4. To expel or dismiss in disgrace: was drummed out of the army. — phrasal verb. drum up. 1. To bring about by continuous, persistent effort: drum up new business. 2. To devise; invent: drummed up an alibi. [Middle English drom, from Middle Dutch tromme, probably of imitative origin.]

drum·beat (drŭm'bēt') n. 1. The sound produced by beating a drum. 2. A cause supported ardently and vehemently.

drum·beat·er (drŭm'bē'tər) n. One that supports a cause, especially vehemently. — drum'beat'ing n.

drum·ette (drŭm-ět') n. The small fleshy part of a chicken wing, often fried and served as an appetizer.

drum·fire (drŭm'fir') n. 1. Heavy, continuous gunfire: a barrage of drumfire. 2. Something likened to continuous gunfire: a drumfire of criticism.

drum·head (drŭm'hĕd') n. 1. Music. The membrane stretched over the open end of a drum. 2. Nautical. The circular top part of a capstan, used to hold bars for turning.

drumhead court-martial (drŭm'hĕd' kōrt'mär'shəl) n. A court-martial held for the summary trial of an offense committed during military operations. [So called because it was sometimes held around a drumhead.]

drum·lin (drŭm'lin) n. An elongated hill or ridge of glacial drift. [From drum, ridge, from Irish Gaelic druim, back, ridge, from Old Irish.]

drum major (drŭm mā'jər) n. A man who leads a marching band or drum corps, often twirling a baton.

drum majorette (drŭm mā'jə-rĕt') n. A woman who leads a marching band or drum corps, often twirling a baton. See Usage Note at -ette.

drum memory (drŭm mĕm'ə-rĕ) n. Computer Science. A memory device consisting of a rotating metal cylinder with a magnetizable coating on its outer surface, usually used as a nonprogrammable random-access memory.

drum·mer (drŭm'ər) n. Music. One who plays a drum, as in a band.

Drum·mond (drŭm'ənd), Henry. 1851-1897. British clergyman and writer who sought to reconcile Christianity with evolution.

Drum·mond (drŭm'ənd), William Henry. 1854-1907. Irish-born Canadian poet whose works describe the French-Canadian habitants.

Drummond of Haw·thorn·den (drŭm'ənd ũv hō'thōrn'dən), William. 1585-1649. Scottish poet noted for his graceful works, such as Flowers of Zion (1623), and for his description of a memorable visit with Ben Jonson (1618).

Drum·mond·ville (drüm'ənd-vīl') A city of southern Quebec, Canada, northeast of Montreal. It is an industrial center. Population, 27,374.

drum printer (drüm prīn'tər) n. A line printer in which a revolving cylinder acts as the printing element.

drum·stick (drüm'stik') n. 1. Music. A stick for beating a drum. 2. The lower part of the leg of a cooked fowl.

drunk (drüŋk) v. Past participle of drink. — adj. Usage Problem.

1. a. Intoxicated with alcoholic liquor to the point of impairment of physical and mental faculties. b. Caused or influenced by intoxication. 2. Overcome by strong feeling or emotion: drunk with power. — n. 1. A drunkard. 2. A bout of drinking.

USAGE NOTE: As an adjective the form drunk is used predicatively while the form drunken is now used only attributively: He was drunk last night. A drunken man at the table beside us ruined our evening. In most contexts the attributive use of drunk is considered unacceptable in formal style. But the phrases drunk driver and drunk driving are supported not only by common usage but also, in many jurisdictions, by a legal distinction between the expressions drunk driver (a driver whose alcohol level exceeds the legal limit) and drunken driver (a driver who is inebriated).

drunk·ard (drüŋg'kərd) n. One who is habitually drunk.

drunk·en (drüŋg'kən) adj. Usage Problem. 1. Delirious with or as if with strong drink; intoxicated. 2. Habitually drunk. 3. Of, involving, or occurring during intoxication: a drunken brawl. See Usage Note at drunk. —drunk'en·ly adv. —drunk'en·ness n.

dru·pa·ceous (drōō-pā'shəs) adj. 1. Resembling, relating to, or consisting of a drupe: drupaceous fruit. 2. Producing drupes: a drupaceous tree.

drupe (drōōp) n. A fleshy fruit, such as a peach, plum, or cherry, usually having a single hard stone that encloses a seed. Also called stone fruit [Latin drūpa, druppa, overripe olive, from Greek, olive, possibly an alteration of drupepēs, ripened on the tree : dru-, tree; see deru- in Appendix + peptein, pep-, ripe; see pek^w- in Appendix.]

drupe·let (drōōp'līt) n. A small drupe, such as one of the many subdivisions of a raspberry or blackberry.

druse (drōōz) n. A crust of tiny crystals lining a rock cavity, usually composed of the same minerals that occur in the rock. [German Druse, weathered ore, probably from Middle High German druos, gland, tumor.]

Druse (drōōz) n. Variant of Druze.

Dru·sus (drōō'səs), Nero Claudius. Known as "Drusus Senior." 38-9 B.C. Roman general who sought to impose Roman rule on the Germanic tribes.

druth-ers (drūth'ərz) pl.n. Informal. A choice or preference: "Given their druth-ers, these hell-for-leather free marketeers might sell the post office" (George F. Will). [Alteration of the phrase 'd rather, from would rather.]

Druze also Druse (drōōz) n. A member of a Syrian people following a religion marked by monotheism and a belief in al-Hakim (985-1021), an Ismaili caliph, as the embodiment of God. [Arabic Durūz, pl. of durzī, a Druse, after Ismail al-Darazi (died c. 1019), Muslim religious leader.]

dry (drī) adj. dri-er (drī'əɹ) or dry-er, dri-est (drī'ɪst) or dry-est. 1. Free from liquid or moisture: changed to dry clothes. 2. Having or characterized by little or no rain: a dry climate. 3. Marked by the absence of natural or normal moisture: a dry month. 4. Not under water: dry land. 5. Having all the water or liquid drained away, evaporated, or exhausted: a dry river. 6. No longer yielding liquid, especially milk: a dry cow. 7. Lacking a mucous or watery discharge: a dry cough. 8. Not shedding tears: dry sobs. 9. Needing or desiring drink; thirsty: a dry mouth. 10. No longer wet: The paint is dry. 11. Of or relating to solid rather than liquid substances or commodities: dry weight. 12. Not sweet as a result of the decomposition of sugar during fermentation. Used of wines. 13. Having a large proportion of strong liquor to other ingredients: a dry martini. 14. Eaten or served without butter, gravy, or other garnish: dry toast; dry meat. 15. Having no adornment or coloration; plain: the dry facts. 16. Devoid of bias or personal concern: presented us with a dry critique. 17. a. Lacking tenderness, warmth, or involvement; severe: The actor gave a dry reading of the lines. b. Matter-of-fact or indifferent in manner: rattled off the facts in a dry mechanical tone.

18. Wearisome; dull: a dry lecture filled with trivial details. 19. Humorous or sarcastic in a shrewd, impersonal way: dry wit. 20. Prohibiting or opposed to the sale or consumption of alcoholic beverages: a dry county. 21. Unproductive of the expected results: a mind dry of new ideas. 22. Constructed without mortar or cement: dry masonry. — v. dried (drīd), dry-ing, dries (drīz). — v. tr.

1. To remove the moisture from; make dry: laundry dried by the sun. 2. To preserve (meat or other foods, for example) by extracting the moisture. — v. intr. To become dry: The sheets dried quickly in the sun. — n. pl. dries. Informal. A prohibitionist. — phrasal verbs. dry out. Informal. To undergo a cure for alcoholism. dry up. 2. To make or become unproductive, especially to do so gradually. 3. Informal. To stop talking. [Middle English drie, from Old English drȳge.] — dry'ly, dri'ly adv. — dry'ness n.

SYNONYMS: dry, dehydrate, desiccate, parch. The central meaning shared by these verbs is "to remove the moisture from": drying the dishes; add water to dehydrated eggs; a factory where coconut meat is shredded and desiccated; land parched by the sun. See also Synonyms at sour

- dry-ad (drī'əd, -äd') n. Greek Mythology. A divinity presiding over forests and trees; a wood nymph. [Middle English Driad, from Latin Dryas, Dryad-, from Greek Druas, from drus, tree. See deru- in Appendix.] —dry-ad'ic (-äd'ik) adj.
- dry-as-dust (drī'əz-düst') n. A dull, pedantic speaker or writer. [After Dr. Jonas Dryasdust, a fictitious character to whom Sir Walter Scott dedicated some of his novels.] —dry'as-dust' adj.
- dry cell (drī sĕl) n. A voltage-generating cell having an electrolyte in the form of moist paste. [So called because its contents cannot spill.]
- dry-clean (drī'klĕn') v. tr. dry--cleaned, dry--clean-ing, dry--cleans. To clean (clothing or fabrics) with chemical solvents that have little or no water. —dry cleaner n. —dry clean'ing (klĕ'nĭng) n.
- Dry-den (drīd'n), John. 1631-1700. English writer and poet laureate (after 1668). The outstanding literary figure of the Restoration, he wrote critical essays, poems, such as Absalom and Achitophel (1681), and dramas, including All for Love (1678).
- dry dock (drī dök) n. Nautical. A large dock in the form of a basin from which the water can be emptied, used for building or repairing a ship below its water line.
- dry-dock (drī'dök') v. tr. intr. dry--docked, dry--dock-ing, dry--docks. Nautical. To place in or go into a dry dock.
- dry-er (drī'ər) n. 1. An appliance that removes moisture by heating or another process: a clothes dryer; a hair dryer. 2. Variant of drier¹.
- dry farm-ing (drī fär'mĭng) n. A type of farming practiced in arid areas without irrigation by planting drought-resistant crops and maintaining a fine surface tilth or mulch that protects the natural moisture of the soil from evaporation. —dry farm n. —dry'-farm' (drī'färm') v. —dry farmer n.
- dry fly (drī flī) n. An artificial fly used in fishing that floats on the surface of the water when cast.
- dry gangrene (drī gäng'grĕn') n. Gangrene that develops as a result of arterial obstruction and is characterized by mummification of the dead tissue and absence of bacterial decomposition.
- dry goods (drī göödʒ) pl.n. Textiles, clothing, and related articles of trade. Also called soft goods
- dry hole (drī hōl) n. An unsuccessful venture, especially an exploratory oil well that produces no oil.
- dry ice (drī īs) n. Solid carbon dioxide that sublimates at -78.5°C (-110°F) and is used primarily as a coolant. [Originally a trademark.]

dry-ing oil (drī'ing oil) n. An organic oil, such as linseed oil, used as a binder in paints and varnishes. It dries into a tough elastic layer when applied in a thin film and exposed to air.

dry kiln (drī kīln) n. A heated chamber in which cut lumber is dried and seasoned.

dry measure (drī mēzh'ər) n. A system of units for measuring dry commodities such as grains, fruits, and vegetables.

dry mop (drī mōp) n. See dust mop.

dry nurse (drī nûrs) n. A nurse employed to care for but not breast-feed an infant. —dry'-nurse' (drī'nûrs') v.

dry-o-pith-e-cine (drī'ō-pīth'ī-sēn') n. An extinct ape of the genus Dryopithecus, known from Old World fossil remains of the Miocene and Pliocene epochs and believed to be an ancestor of the anthropoid apes and human beings. — adj. Of or belonging to the genus Dryopithecus. [From New Latin Dryopithecus, genus name : Greek drus, oak; see deru- in Appendix + Greek pithēkos, ape.]

dry point (drī point) n. 1. A technique of intaglio engraving in which a hard steel needle is used to incise lines in a metal, usually copper plate, with the rough burr at the sides of the incised lines often retained to produce a velvety black tone in the print. 2. An engraving or print made using this technique.

dry rot (drī rōt) n. 1. A fungous disease that causes timber to become brittle and crumble into powder. 2. A plant disease in which the plant tissue remains relatively dry while fungi invade and ultimately decay bulbs, fruits, or woody tissues.

dry run (drī rŭn) n. 1. A trial exercise; a rehearsal. 2. A test exercise in combat skills without the use of live ammunition.

dry-salt-er (drī'sōl'tər) n. Chiefly British. A dealer in chemical products and dyes. —dry'salt'er-y n.

dry socket (drī sōk'īt) n. A painful inflamed condition at the site of extraction of a tooth that occurs when a blood clot fails to form properly or is dislodged.

Dry Tor-tu-gas (drī tōr-tōō'gəz) An island group of southern Florida west of Key West. Famed for their marine life, the islands were named Tortugas (“turtles”) by the Spanish explorer Juan Ponce de León in 1513.

dry wall or dry-wall (drī'wōl') n. 1. a. Plasterboard. b. A wall or ceiling constructed of a prefabricated material, such as plasterboard or paneling. 2. A wall constructed from rocks that are not cemented together.

dry wash (drī wōsh) n. Laundry that has been washed and dried but not ironed.

dry well also dry-well (drī'wēl') n. A subterranean chamber near a building, having stones or gravel inside and used to collect rainwater runoff from the roof of the building as a means of avoiding soil erosion.

DS abbr. Computer Science. Data set.

d.s. abbr. 1. Also D.S.. Music. Dal segno. 2. Business. Days after sight.

3. Document signed.

DSC or D.S.C. abbr. Distinguished Service Cross.

DSM or D.S.M. abbr. Distinguished Service Medal.

DSO or D.S.O. abbr. Distinguished Service Order.

d.s.p. abbr. Latin. Decessit sine prole (died without issue).

DST or D.S.T. abbr. Daylight-saving time.

DT or D.T. abbr. Daylight time.

Dt. abbr. Bible. Deuteronomy.

d.t. abbr. Double time.

D.T. abbr. Doctor of Theology.

D.T.'s or d.t.'s (dē'tēz') n. (used with a sing. or pl. verb). Delirium tremens.

Du. abbr. 1. Duke. 2. Dutch.

du·ad (dōō'ād', dyōō'-) n. A unit of two objects; a pair. [Greek duas, duad-, two, from duo. See dwo- in Appendix.]

du·al (dōō'əl, dyōō'-) adj. 1. Composed of two usually like or complementary parts; double: dual controls for pilot and copilot; a car with dual exhaust pipes.

2. Having a double character or purpose: a belief in the dual nature of reality.

3. Grammar. Of, relating to, or being a number category that indicates two persons or things, as in Greek, Sanskrit, and Old English. — n. Grammar. 1. The dual number. 2. An inflected form of a noun, adjective, pronoun, or verb used with two items or people. [Latin duālis, from duo, two. See dwo- in Appendix.]

—du'al·ly adv.

Du·a·la (dōō-ä'lä) See Douala.

du·al·ism (dōō'ə-līz'əm, dyōō'-) n. 1. The condition of being double; duality.

2. Philosophy. The view that the world consists of or is explicable as two fundamental entities, such as mind and matter. 3. Psychology. The view that the mind and body function separately, without interchange. 4. Theology. a. The concept that the world is ruled by the antagonistic forces of good and evil. b. The concept that human beings have two basic natures, the physical and the spiritual.

—du'al·ist n. —du'al·is'tic adj. —du'al·is'ti·cal·ly adv.

du·al·i·ty (dōō-äl'i-tē, dyōō-) n. The quality or character of being twofold; dichotomy.

du·al·pur·pose (dōō'əl-pûr'pəs, dyōō'-) adj. Designed for or serving two purposes: dual-purpose technologies for commercial and military applications.

Duane (dwān), William. 1760-1835. American journalist and politician who edited the Aurora (1798-1822), a powerful Jeffersonian organ.

Duar·te (dwär'tē) A city of southern California east of Pasadena. It is mainly residential with varied light industries. Population, 20,688.

dub¹ (düb) v. tr. dubbed, dub·bing, dubs. 1. To tap lightly on the shoulder by way of conferring knighthood. 2. To honor with a new title or description.

3. To give a name to facetiously or playfully; nickname. 4. To strike, cut, or rub (timber or leather, for example) so as to make even or smooth. 5. To dress (a fowl). 6. To execute (a golf stroke, for example) poorly. — n. An awkward person or player; a bungler. [Middle English dubben, from Old English dubbian, perhaps from Old French aduber.]

dub² (düb) v. dubbed, dub-bing, dubs. — v. tr. 1. To thrust at; poke. 2. To beat (a drum). — v. intr. 1. To make a thrust. 2. To beat on a drum. — n. 1. The act of dubbing. 2. A drumbeat. [Perhaps from Low German dubben, to hit, strike.]

dub³ (düb) v. tr. dubbed, dub-bing, dubs. 1. a. To transfer (recorded material) onto a new recording medium. b. To copy (a record or tape). 2. To insert a new soundtrack, often a synchronized translation of the original dialogue, into (a film). 3. To add (sound) into a film or tape: dub in strings behind the vocal. — n. 1. The new sounds added by dubbing. 2. A dubbed copy of a tape or record. [Short for DOUBLE.] —dub'ber n.

dub⁴ (düb) n. Scots. A puddle or small pool. [Origin unknown.]

Du·bai (dōo-bī') A city and sheikdom of eastern United Arab Emirates on the Persian Gulf. Oil was discovered here in the 1960's. Population, 265,702.

Du Bar·ry (dōo bär'ē, dyōo-, dü bā-rē'), Comtesse Title of Marie Jeanne Bécu. 1743-1793. French courtier and influential mistress of Louis XV. She was guillotined for crimes against the state by a Revolutionary tribunal.

Du·bawnt (dōo-bônt') A river, about 933 km (580 mi) long, of southeast Northwest Territories, Canada, flowing through Dubawnt Lake and into Baker Lake.

dub·bin (düb'in) also dub-bing (-ing) n. An application of tallow and oil for dressing leather. [From DUB¹.]

Dub·ček (dōob'chĕk, dōop'-), Alexander. Born 1921. Czechoslovakian politician. As first secretary of the Communist Party (1968) he introduced reforms and pursued an independent foreign policy. In August 1968 Soviet authorities sent tanks into Prague and arrested Dubček, who was forced to resign.

du Bel·lay (dōo bə-lā', dü bĕ-lā'), Joachim. See Joachim du Bellay.

du·bi·e·ty (dōo-bī'ī-tē, dyōo-) n. pl. du·bi·e·ties. 1. A feeling of doubt that often results in wavering. See Synonyms at uncertainty. 2. A matter of doubt. [Late Latin dubietās, from Latin dubius, doubtful. See DUBIOUS.]

Du·bin·sky (dōo-bīn'skē), David. 1892-1982. Russian-born American labor leader who was president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union (1932-1966).

du·bi·ous (dōo'bē-əs, dyōo'-) adj. 1. Fraught with uncertainty or doubt; undecided. 2. Arousing doubt; doubtful: a dubious distinction. 3. Of questionable character: dubious profits. See Synonyms at doubtful. [From Latin dubius. See dwo- in Appendix.] —du'bi-ous-ly adv. —du'bi-ous-ness n.

du·bi·ta·ble (dōō'бі-tə-bəl, dyōō'-) adj. Subject to doubt or question; uncertain. [Latin dubitābilis, from dubitāre, to doubt. See DOUBT.] —du'bi·ta·bly adv.

Dub·lin (düb'līn) 1. The capital and largest city of Ireland, in the east-central part of the country on the Irish Sea. A Danish stronghold until 1014, Dublin was the scene of the Black Monday massacre of English residents in 1209 and the bloody Easter Rebellion of April 24, 1916. The Sinn Fein movement began here in the early 20th century. Population, 525,882. 2. An unincorporated town of western California, a residential suburb in the San Francisco-Oakland area. Population, 23,229. 3. A city of central Georgia east-southeast of Macon. It is a commercial center in a lumbering area. Population, 16,312. —Dub'lin·er n.

Du·bois (dōō-bwä', dyōō-, dü-), Eugène. 1858-1940. Dutch anatomist and paleontologist who in Java discovered in 1891 the skull and thigh bone of a hominid, Homo erectus, that came to be called “Java man.”

Du Bois (dōō bois'), William Edward Burghardt. 1868-1963. American civil rights leader who cofounded the NAACP, edited journals, such as Crisis (1910-1932), and wrote books, including Color and Democracy (1945), that promoted the concerns of Black Americans and Africans.

Du·bon·net (dōō'bə-nā', dyōō'-) A trademark used for apéritif wines.

Du·bos (dōō-bôś', -bō', dü-), René Jules. 1901-1982. French-born American bacteriologist noted for his research on natural antibiotics, tuberculosis, and environmental factors in disease.

Du·brov·nik (dōō'brôv-nīk') Formerly Ra·gu·sa (rə-gōō'zə, rä-gōō'zä). A city of southwest Yugoslavia on a promontory jutting into the Adriatic Sea. A popular tourist resort, it was a center of Serbo-Croatian culture and literature in medieval times. Population, 31,106.

Du·buf·fet (dōō-bə-fā', dü-bü-fě'), Jean. 1901-1985. French artist who developed art brut, “raw art,” to express the vitality and immediacy absent from some academic art.

Du·buque (də-byōōk') A city of eastern Iowa on the Mississippi River opposite the Illinois-Wisconsin border. It was first settled permanently in 1833 and is the oldest city in the state. Population, 57,546.

du·cal (dōō'kəl, dyōō'-) adj. Of or relating to a duke or dukedom: a ducal estate. [Middle English, from Old French, from Late Latin ducālis, from Latin dux, duc-, leader. See DUKE.] —du'cal·ly adv.

duc·at (dük'ət) n. 1. Any of various gold coins formerly used in certain European countries. 2. Slang. a. A piece of money. b. An admission ticket. [Middle English, from Old French, from Old Italian ducato, from Medieval Latin ducātus, duchy (a word used on one of the early ducats). See DUCHY.]

du·ce (dōō'chā) n. A leader or commander; a chief. [Italian, from Latin dux, duc-. See DUKE.]

Du Chail·lu (dōō shī'yōō, -shāl'-, dyōō, dü shä-yü'), Paul Belloni. 1831-1903. French-born American explorer who made two expeditions to Africa (1856-1859 and 1863-1865) and brought back animal specimens.

Du·champ (dōō-shän', dü), Marcel. 1887-1968. French-born modernist artist and a leader of the Dada movement in New York City who was the first to exhibit commonplace objects as art. His paintings include Nude Descending a Staircase (1912).

Du·chenne's muscular dystrophy (dōō-shēnz' mŭs'kyə-lər dīs'trə-fē) n. The most common form of muscular dystrophy, in which fat and fibrous tissue infiltrate muscle tissue, causing eventual weakening of the respiratory muscles and the myocardium. The disease, which almost exclusively affects males, begins in early childhood and usually causes death before adulthood. [After Guillaume B.A. Duchenne (1806-1875), French physician.]

Du·chesne (dōō-shēn', dü-), Rose Philippine. 1769-1852. French-born Catholic missionary who established schools, convents, and an orphanage in the American South. She was beatified in 1940.

duch·ess (düch'is) n. Abbr. D. 1. The wife or widow of a duke. 2. A woman holding title to a duchy in her own right. 3. Used as the title for such a noblewoman. [Middle English duchesse, from Old French, from Medieval Latin ducissa, from Latin dux, duc-, leader. See DUKE.]

duch·y (düch'ē) n. pl. duch·ies. The territory ruled by a duke or duchess; a dukedom. [Middle English duchie, from Old French duche, from Medieval Latin ducātus, from Latin dux, duc-, leader. See DUKE.]

duck¹ (dŭk) n. 1. Any of various wild or domesticated swimming birds of the family Anatidae, characteristically having a broad, flat bill, short legs, and webbed feet. 2. A female duck. 3. The flesh of a duck used as food. 4. Slang. A person, especially one thought of as peculiar. 5. Often ducks. (used with a sing. verb). Chiefly British. A dear. [Middle English doke, from Old English dūce, possibly from dūcan*, to dive. See DUCK².]

duck² (dŭk) v. ducked, duck·ing, ducks. — v. tr. 1. To lower quickly, especially so as to avoid something. 2. To evade; dodge: duck responsibility; ducked the reporter's question. 3. To push suddenly under water. See Synonyms at dip. 4. Games. To deliberately play a card that is lower than (an opponent's card). — v. intr. 1. To lower the head or body. 2. To move swiftly, especially so as to escape being seen: ducked behind a bush. 3. To submerge the head or body briefly in water. 4. To evade a responsibility or obligation. Often used with out: duck out on one's family. 5. Games. To lose a trick by deliberately playing lower than one's opponent. — n. 1. A quick lowering of the head or body. 2. A plunge into water. [Middle English douken, to dive, possibly from Old English dūcan*; akin to Middle Low German and Middle Dutch dūken.] —duck'er n.

duck³ (dūk) n. 1. A durable, closely woven heavy cotton or linen fabric.

2. ducks. Clothing made of duck, especially white trousers. [Dutch doek, cloth, from Middle Dutch doec.]

duck⁴ (dūk) n. 1. An amphibious military truck used during World War II.

2. An amphibious truck used in emergencies, as to evacuate flood victims.

[Alteration (influenced by DUCK¹), of DUKW, its code designation.]

duck-bill (dūk'bīl') n. See platypus.

duck-billed platypus (dūk'bīld' plăt'ī-pəs) n. See platypus.

duck blind (dūk blīnd) n. A shelter, often camouflaged with reeds and grasses, for concealing duck hunters.

duck-board (dūk'bôrd', -bôrd') n. A board or boardwalk laid across wet or muddy ground or flooring.

duck hawk (dūk hôk) n. See peregrine falcon.

duck-ing stool (dūk'īng stōol) n. A device formerly used in Europe and New England for punishment, consisting of a chair in which an offender was tied and ducked into water.

duck-ling (dūk'līng) n. A young duck.

duck-pin (dūk'pīn') n. Sports. 1. A bowling pin that is shorter and squatter than a tenpin. 2. duckpins. (used with a sing. verb). A bowling game played with such pins and a small ball. [From its squat appearance.]

ducks and drakes (düks ənd drāks) n. Games. The game of skipping flat stones along the surface of water. —idiom. make ducks and drakes of (or play ducks and drakes with). To squander; waste.

duck soup (dūk sōp) n. Slang. An easily accomplished task or assignment.

duck-tail (dūk'tāl') n. A hairstyle in which the hair is swept back at the sides to meet in an upturned point in back. Also called *DA*¹ duck-weed (dūk'wēd') n. Any of various small, free-floating, stemless aquatic flowering plants of the genus Lemna.

duck-y (dūk'ē) adj. duck-i-er, duck-i-est. Slang. Excellent; fine.

Du-com-mun (dü-kô-mœn'), Élie. 1833-1906. Swiss journalist who organized the International Bureau of Peace in Bern (1891). He shared the 1902 Nobel Peace Prize.

duct (dūkt) n. 1. An often enclosed passage or channel for conveying a substance, especially a liquid or gas. 2. Anatomy. A tubular bodily canal or passage, especially one for carrying a glandular secretion: a tear duct. 3. A tube or pipe for enclosing electrical cables or wires. — v. tr. duct-ed, duct-ing, ducts.

1. To channel through a duct: duct the moist air away. 2. To supply with ducts. [Latin ductus, act of leading, from past participle of dūcere, to lead. See deuk- in Appendix.] —duct'al adj. —duct'less adj.

duc-tile (dūk'təl, -tīl') adj. 1. Easily drawn into wire or hammered thin: ductile metals. 2. Easily molded or shaped. See Synonyms at malleable. 3. Capable of being readily persuaded or influenced; tractable. [Middle English ductil, from Old French, from Latin ductilis, from ductus, past participle of dūcere, to lead. See deuk- in Appendix.] —duc-til'i-ty (-tīl'ī-tē), duc'ti-li-bil'i-ty (-lə-bīl'ī-tē) n. duct-ing (dūk'tīng) n. 1. A duct or system of ducts. 2. Material for making ducts.

duct-less gland (dūkt'līs gländ) n. See endocrine gland.

duct-ule (dūk'tōol') n. A small duct.

duct-work (dūkt'wŭrk') n. A group or system of ducts: installed new ductwork in the building.

dud (dūd) n. 1. A bomb, shell, or explosive round that fails to detonate.

2. Informal. One that is disappointingly ineffective or unsuccessful. 3. duds.

Informal. a. Clothing. b. Personal belongings. [Middle English dudde, a cloak.]

dude (dōōd, dyōōd) n. 1. Informal. An Easterner or city person who vacations on a ranch in the West. 2. Informal. A man who is very fancy or sharp in dress and demeanor. 3. Slang. A fellow; a chap. — v. tr. dud-ed, dud-ing, dudes. Slang. To dress elaborately or flamboyantly: got all duded up for the show. [Origin unknown.]

du-deen (dōō-dēn') n. A short-stemmed clay pipe. [Irish Gaelic dúidin, diminutive of dúd, stump, pipe.]

dude ranch (dōōd rānch) n. A resort patterned after a Western ranch, featuring camping, horseback riding, and other outdoor activities.

dudg-eon¹ (dŭj'ən) n. A sullen, angry, or indignant humor: "Slamming the door in Meg's face, Aunt March drove off in high dudgeon" (Louisa May Alcott). [Origin unknown.]

dudg-eon² (dŭj'ən) n. 1. Obsolete. A kind of wood used in making knife handles. 2. Archaic. a. A dagger with a hilt made of this wood. b. The hilt of a dagger. [Middle English dogeon, possibly from Anglo-Norman.]

Dud-ley (dŭd'lē) A borough of west-central England west-northwest of Birmingham. It had thriving iron, coal, and limestone industries until the 1870's. Population, 300,700.

Dud-ley (dŭd'lē), Robert First Earl of Leicester. 1532?-1588. English courtier, politician, and favorite of Elizabeth I. Pardoned for his involvement in the plot to secure the throne for Lady Jane Grey (1553), he sought the hand of Elizabeth, who refused him, partly because his wife, Amy Robsart, had died (1560) under suspicious circumstances.

Dud-ley (dŭd'lē), Thomas. 1576-1653. English colonial administrator in America who served as governor of Massachusetts Bay Colony (1634, 1640, 1645, and 1650) and as one of Harvard College's first overseers. His son Joseph (1647-1720) was also governor of Massachusetts (1702-1715).

due (dōō, dyōō) adj. 1. Payable immediately or on demand. 2. Owed as a debt; owing: the amount still due. 3. In accord with right, convention, or courtesy; appropriate: due esteem; all due respect. 4. Meeting special requirements; sufficient: We have due cause to honor them. 5. Expected or scheduled, especially appointed to arrive: Their plane is due in 15 minutes. 6. a. Anticipated; looked for: a long due promotion. b. Expecting or ready for something as part of a normal course or sequence: We're due for some rain. This batter is due for another hit. 7. Usage Problem. Capable of being attributed. See Usage Note at due to. — n.

1. Something owed or deserved: You finally received your due. 2. dues. A charge or fee for membership, as in a club or organization. — adv. 1. Straight; directly: Go due west. 2. Archaic. Duly. [Middle English, from Old French deu, past participle of devoir, to owe, from Latin dēbēre. See ghabh- in Appendix.]

due bill (dōō bīl) n. A written acknowledgment of indebtedness to a particular party but not payable to the party's order or transferable by endorsement.

du-el (dōō'əl, dyōō'-) n. 1. A prearranged, formal combat between two persons, usually fought to settle a point of honor. 2. A struggle for domination between two contending persons, groups, or ideas. — v. du-elled or du-elled, du-el-ing or du-el-ling, du-els or du-els. — v. tr. 1. To engage (another) in or as if in formal combat. 2. To oppose actively and forcefully. — v. intr. To engage in or as if in formal combat. [Middle English duelle, from Medieval Latin duellum, from Latin, war, variant of bellum.] — du/el-er, du/el-ist n.

du-en-de (dōō-ĕn'dā') n. The ability to attract others through personal magnetism and charm. [Spanish dialectal, charm, from Spanish, ghost.]

due process (dōō prōs'ĕs') n. Law. An established course for judicial proceedings or other governmental activities designed to safeguard the legal rights of the individual.

Due-ro (dwĕr'ō) See Douro.

du-et (dōō-ĕt', dyōō-) n. 1. Music. a. A composition for two voices or instruments. b. The two performers of such a composition. 2. A pair. [Italian duetto, diminutive of duo, from Latin, two. See dwo- in Appendix.]

due to (dōō tōō) prep. Because of.

USAGE NOTE: Due to has been widely used for many years as a compound preposition like owing to, but some critics have insisted that the adjectival status of due must be retained. According to this view, it is incorrect to say The concert was canceled due to the rain, as opposed to the acceptable The cancellation of the concert was due to the rain, where due continues to function as an adjective modifying cancellation.

Du-fay (dōō-fā', dū-), Guillaume. 1400?-1474. Flemish composer regarded as the first great composer of the Renaissance. He is particularly known for his Mass compositions.

duff¹ (düf) n. A stiff flour pudding boiled in a cloth bag or steamed. [Dialectal variation of DOUGH.]

duff² (düf) n. 1. Decaying leaves and branches covering a forest floor. 2. Fine coal; slack. [Origin unknown.]

duff³ (düf) n. Slang. The buttocks. [Origin unknown.]

duf-fel or duf-fle (düf'əl) n. 1. A blanket fabric made of low-grade woolen cloth with a nap on both sides. 2. Clothing and other personal gear carried by a camper. [Dutch, after Duffel, a town of northern Belgium.]

duffel bag (düf'əl bäg) n. Variant of duffle bag.

duffel coat (düf'əl kōt) n. Variant of duffle coat.

duff-er (düf'ər) n. 1. Informal. a. An incompetent or dull-witted person. b. A casual or mediocre player of a sport, especially golf. 2. Slang. A peddler of cheap merchandise. 3. Slang. Something worthless or useless. [Origin unknown.]

Duf-fer-in and A-va (düf'ər-ĭn ənd ä'və), First Marquis of Title of Frederick Temple Hamilton-Temple Blackwood. 1826-1902. British diplomat and politician whose numerous posts included governor-general of Canada (1872-1878), ambassador to Russia (1879-1881), and governor-general of India (1884-1888).

Duff-Gor-don (düf'gōr'dn), Lady Lucie. 1821-1869. British writer and translator best known for her correspondence, including Letters from Egypt (1865).

duf-fle (düf'əl) n. Variant of duffel.

duffle bag or duffel bag (düf'əl bäg) n. A large cylindrical cloth bag of canvas or duck for carrying personal belongings.

duffle coat or duffel coat (düf'əl kōt) n. A warm, usually hooded coat made of duffel or a similar material and fastened with toggles.

Duf-fy (düf'ē), Sir Charles Gavan. 1816-1903. Irish-born writer and political leader in Ireland and Australia. A nationalist, he emigrated from Ireland to Australia after the breakup of the Independent Irish Party (1856). In Australia he held several posts, including prime minister (1871-1872).

Du-fy (dōō-fē', dü-), Raoul. 1877-1953. French painter noted for his brightly colored scenes of racing and the seaside and for the panel La Fée Électricité (1937).

dug¹ (düg) n. An udder, breast, or teat of a female animal. [Origin unknown.]

dug² (düg) v. Past tense and past participle of dig.

du-gong (dōō'gōng', -gōng') n. A herbivorous marine mammal (Dugong dugon), native to tropical coastal waters of the Indian Ocean, Red Sea, and southwest Pacific Ocean and having flipperlike forelimbs and a deeply notched tail fin. [New Latin Dugong, genus name, possibly from Malay duyong.]

dug-out (düg'out') n. 1. A boat or canoe made of a hollowed-out log. 2. A pit dug into the ground or on a hillside and used as a shelter. 3. Baseball. Either of two usually sunken shelters at the side of a field where the players stay while not on the field.

Du·ha·mel (dōō'ə-mĕl', dyōō'-, dü-ä-), Georges. 1884-1966. French writer and physician noted for his romans-fleuves, including the five-volume Life and Adventures of Salavin (1920-1932).

dui·ker (dī'kər) n. Any of various small African antelopes of the genera Cephalopus or Sylvicapra, having short, backward-pointing horns. [Afrikaans, from Dutch duiken, to dive, from Middle Dutch dūken.]

Duis·burg (dōōs'bûrg', dōōz'-, dūs'bōōrk') A city of west-central Germany at the confluence of the Rhine and Ruhr rivers. It is a major inland port and a steel-producing center. Population, 522,829.

duke (dōōk, dyōōk) n. Abbr. D., Du. 1. A nobleman with the highest hereditary rank, especially a man of the highest grade of the peerage in Great Britain. 2. A sovereign prince who rules an independent duchy in some European countries. 3. Used as the title for such a nobleman. 4. Often dukes. Slang. A fist: Put up your dukes! 5. Botany. A type of cherry intermediate between a sweet and a sour cherry. — v. intr. duked, duk-ing, dukes. To fight, especially with fists: duk-ing it out. [Middle English, from Old French duc, from Latin dux, duc-, leader, from dūcere, to lead; see deuk- in Appendix. N., sense 4, short for Duke of Yorks rhyming slang for forks, fingers.]

Duke (dōōk, dyōōk), Benjamin Newton. 1855-1929. American tobacco-industry leader who with his brother James Buchanan Duke (1856-1925) organized the American Tobacco Company (1890) and endowed Trinity College, which was renamed Duke University in their honor (1924).

duke·dom (dōōk'dəm, dyōōk'-) n. 1. A duchy. 2. The office, rank, or title of a duke.

Du·kho·bor also Dou·kho·bor (dōō'kə-bôr') n. A member of an 18th-century Russian Christian group, many of whom migrated to Canada in the 1890's to escape persecution for their views, which included rejection of ecclesiastical and state authority. [Russian Dukhobor : dukh, spirit, Holy Ghost + -bor, fighter (from borot'sya, to fight).]

Dul·bec·co (dül-bĕk'ō), Renato. Born 1914. Italian-born American virologist. He shared a 1975 Nobel Prize for research on the interaction of tumor viruses and genetic material.

dul·cet (dül'sit) adj. 1. a. Pleasing to the ear; melodious. b. Having a soothing, agreeable quality. 2. Archaic. Sweet to the taste. [Alteration (influenced by Latin dulcis), of Middle English doucet, from Old French, diminutive of douce feminine of doux, sweet, from Latin dulcis.] —dul'cet·ly adv.

dul·ci·fy (dül'sə-fī') v. tr. dul·ci·fied, dul·ci·fy·ing, dul·ci·fies. 1. To make agreeable or gentle; mollify. 2. To sweeten. [Late Latin dulcificāre, to sweeten : Latin dulcis, sweet + -ficāre, -fy.] —dul'ci·fi·ca'tion (-fī-kā'shən) n.

dul·ci·mer (dül'sə-mər) n. Music. An instrument with wire strings of graduated lengths stretched over a sound box, played by striking with two padded hammers or by plucking. [Alteration (influenced by Latin dulcis, sweet), of Middle English doucemer, from Old French doulcemer, doulcemele, probably from Latin dulce melos, sweet song : dulce, neuter of dulcis, sweet + melos, song (from Greek melos).]

dull (dŭl) adj. dull-er, dull-est. 1. Intellectually weak or obtuse; stupid. 2. Lacking responsiveness or alertness; insensitive. 3. Dispirited; depressed. 4. Not brisk or rapid; sluggish: Business is dull. 5. Not having a sharp edge or point; blunt: a dull knife. 6. Not intensely or keenly felt: a dull ache. 7. Arousing no interest or curiosity; boring: a dull play. 8. Not bright or vivid. Used of a color: a dull brown. 9. Cloudy or overcast: a dull sky. 10. Not clear or resonant: a dull thud. — v. tr. intr. dulled, dull-ing, dulls. To make or become dull. [Middle English dul; akin to Old English dol.] —dull'ish adj. —dull'ness, dul'ness n. —dul'ly adv.

SYNONYMS: dull, colorless, drab, humdrum, lackluster, pedestrian, stodgy, uninspired. The central meaning shared by these adjectives is “lacking in liveliness, charm, or surprise”: a competent but dull performance of the role; a colorless and unimaginative person; a drab and boring job; a humdrum conversation; a lackluster life; a pedestrian movie plot; a stodgy dinner party; an uninspired lecture. See also Synonyms at stupid dull-ard (dŭl'ərd) n. A person regarded as mentally dull; a dolt.

ANTONYM: lively

Dul-les (dŭl'is), Allen Welsh. 1893-1969. American public official. Director of the C.I.A. (1953-1961), he resigned after the failed invasion of the Bay of Pigs.

Dul-les (dŭl'is), John Foster. 1888-1959. American diplomat and politician who as U.S. secretary of state (1953-1959) pursued a policy of opposition to the U.S.S.R. largely through military and economic aid to American allies.

dulls-ville (dŭlz'vīl) n. Slang. A dull place, thing, or condition: “You’re on the down escalator to doubt, dullsville, and despair” (James Wolcott).

dulse (dŭls) n. An edible red alga (Palmaria palmata) that grows on rocky shores on both sides of the northern Atlantic Ocean. [Scottish Gaelic duileasg, from Old Irish duilesc.]

Du-luth (də-lōōth') A city of northeast Minnesota on Lake Superior opposite Superior, Wisconsin. Permanent settlement began here in the 1850's. The city's fine harbor accommodates oceangoing vessels. Population, 92,811.

du-ly (dōō'lē, dyōō'-) adv. 1. In a proper manner: a duly appointed official.

2. At the expected time. [Middle English duely, from due, due. See DUE.]

du-ma (dōō'mə) n. A Russian national parliament during czarist times. [Russian, of Germanic origin. See dhē- in Appendix.]

Du-mas (dōō-mā' , dyōō-, dü-), Alexandre. Known as “Dumas père.” 1802-1870. French writer of swashbuckling historical romances, such as The Count of Monte Cristo and The Three Musketeers (both 1844). His son Alexandre (1824-1895), known as “Dumas fils,” was a dramatist whose works include La Dame aux Camélias (1852).

du Mau-ri-er (dōō mōr'ē-ā' , dyōō, dü mō-ryā'), Dame Daphne. 1907-1989. British writer noted for her melodramatic novels, including Rebecca (1938).

du Mau-ri-er (dōō mōr'ē-ā' , dyōō, dü mō-ryā'), George Louis Palmella Busson. 1834-1896. British illustrator and writer known for his caricatures in Punch, his illustrations of the works of William Makepeace Thackeray among others, and his novels, such as Trilby (1894).

du Mau-ri-er (dōō mōr'ē-ā' , dyōō, dü mō-ryā'), Sir Gerald Hubert Edward Busson. 1873-1934. British actor and theatrical manager best remembered for his roles in the plays of J.M. Barrie.

dumb (düm) adj. dumb-er, dumb-est. 1. a. Lacking the power of speech. Used of animals and inanimate objects. b. Offensive. Incapable of using speech; mute. Used of human beings. 2. Temporarily speechless, as with shock or fear: I was dumb with disbelief. 3. Unwilling to speak; taciturn. 4. Not expressed or articulated in sounds or words: dumb resentment. 5. Nautical. Not self-propelling. 6. Conspicuously unintelligent; stupid: dumb officials; a dumb decision. 7. Unintentional; haphazard: dumb luck. 8. Computer Science. Incapable of processing data: a dumb terminal. — v. tr. dumbed, dumb-ing, dumbs. To make silent or dumb. — phrasal verb. dumb down (or dumb up). Slang. To rewrite for a less intelligent audience. [Middle English, from Old English.] — dumb'ly adv. — dumb'ness n.

SYNONYMS: dumb, inarticulate, mute, speechless. The central meaning shared by these adjectives is “lacking the faculty of speech or the power to speak”: dumb with fear; inarticulate with rage; mute with astonishment; speechless with horror. See also Synonyms at stupid dumb-bell (düm'bēl') n. 1. A weight consisting of a short bar with a metal ball or disk at each end that is lifted for muscular development and exercise. 2. Slang. A person regarded as stupid. [From an apparatus similar to that used in ringing a church bell, but without the bell, used for practice or physical exercise.]

dumb cane (düm kăn) n. See dieffenbachia. [So called because its leaves contain a substance that swells the throat when eaten.]

dumb-found also dum-found (düm'found') v. tr. dumb-found-ed, dumb-found-ing, dumb-found-s. To fill with astonishment and perplexity; confound. See Synonyms at surprise. [DUMB + (CON)FOUND.]

dum-bo (düm'bō) n. pl. dum-bos. Slang. A person regarded as stupid.

dumb plant (düm plänt) n. See dieffenbachia. [See DUMB CANE.]

dumb show (düm shō) n. 1. A part of a play, especially in medieval and Renaissance drama, that is enacted without speaking. 2. Communication or acting by means of expressive gestures; pantomime.

dumb-struck (düm'strük') adj. So shocked or astonished as to be rendered speechless.

dumb-wait-er (düm'wā'tər) n. 1. A small elevator used to convey food or other goods from one floor of a building to another. 2. A portable serving stand or table.

dum-dum (düm'düm') n. Slang. A person regarded as stupid. [Reduplication and alteration of DUMB.]

dum-dum bullet (düm'düm' bööl'it) n. A hollow-point small-arms bullet designed to expand upon impact, inflicting a gaping wound. [After Dum Dum, a town of northeast India.]

dum-found (düm'found') v. Variant of dumbfound.

Dum-fries (düm-frēs') A burgh of southern Scotland south-southwest of Edinburgh. Robert Burns is buried here. Population, 31,800.

dumm-kopf (dööm'kôf', -kôpf', düm'-) n. A person regarded as stupid. [German : dumm, dumb (from Middle High German tump, tumb, from Old High German tumb) + kopf, head (from Middle High German, cup, cranium, from Old High German, cup, from Late Latin cuppa).]

dum-my (düm'ē) n. pl. dum-mies. 1. An imitation of a real or original object, intended to be used as a practical substitute. 2. a. A mannequin used in displaying clothes. b. A figure of a person or an animal manipulated by a ventriloquist. c. A stuffed or pasteboard figure used as a target. d. Football. A heavy stuffed cylindrical bag used for blocking and tackling practice. 3. A person regarded as stupid. 4. A silent or taciturn person. 5. A person or an agency secretly in the service of another. 6. Printing. a. One of a set of model pages with text and illustrations pasted into place to direct the printer. Also called dummy page b. A set of bound blank pages used as a model to show the size and general appearance of a book being published. 7. Games. a. The partner in bridge who exposes his or her hand to be played by the declarer. b. The hand thus exposed. 8. Computer Science. A character or other piece of information entered into a computer only to meet prescribed conditions, such as word length, and having no effect on operations. — adj. 1. Simulating or replacing something but lacking its function: a dummy pocket. 2. Serving as a front or cover for another: a dummy corporation. 3. Games. Played with a dummy. 4. Computer Science. Entered or provided only to meet prescribed conditions: a dummy variable. — v. tr. dum-mied, dum-my-ing, dum-mies. Printing. To make a model of (a publication or page). — phrasal verb. dummy up. Slang. To keep silence; clam up. [From DUMB.]

Du-mont (dōō'mōnt', dyōō'-) A borough of northeast New Jersey, a residential suburb of Hackensack. It was settled by the Dutch in 1677. Population, 17,187.

du-mor-ti-er-ite (dōō-mōr'tē-ə-rīt', dyōō-) n. A glassy pink, green, violet, or blue aluminum borosilicate mineral, $\text{Al}_8\text{BSi}_3\text{O}_{19}\text{OH}$, used in spark-plug ceramics and as imitation lapis lazuli. [French, after Eugène Dumortier, 19th-century French paleontologist.]

dump (dümp) v. dumped, dump-ing, dumps. — v. tr. 1. To release or throw down in a large mass. 2. a. To empty (material) out of a container or vehicle: dumped the load of stones. b. To empty out (a container or vehicle), as by overturning or tilting. 3. a. To get rid of; discard: a fine for dumping trash on public land; dumped the extra gear overboard. b. Informal. To discard or reject unceremoniously: dump an old friend. 4. To place (goods or stock, for example) on the market in large quantities and at a low price. 5. Computer Science. To transfer (data stored internally in a computer) from one place to another, as from a memory to a printout, without processing. 6. Slang. To knock down; beat. — v. intr. 1. To fall or drop abruptly. 2. To discharge cargo or contents; unload. 3. Slang. To criticize another severely: was always dumping on me. — n. 1. A place where refuse is dumped: a garbage dump; a nuclear waste dump. 2. A storage place for goods or supplies; a depot: an ammunition dump. 3. An unordered accumulation; a pile. 4. Computer Science. An instance or the result of dumping stored data. 5. Slang. A poorly maintained or disreputable place. [Middle English dumpen, dompen, to fall suddenly, drop, of Scandinavian origin.]

—dump'er n.

dump-ling (dümp'ling) n. 1. A small ball of dough cooked with stew or soup. 2. Sweetened dough wrapped around fruit, such as an apple, baked and served as a dessert. 3. Informal. A short, chubby creature. [Origin unknown.]

dumps (dümps) pl.n. A gloomy, melancholy state of mind; depression. Often used with the: felt down in the dumps. [Probably from Dutch domp, haze, from Middle Dutch damp, vapor.]

dump-site (dümp'sīt') n. The location of a dump, especially a garbage dump.

Dump-ster (dümp'stər) A trademark used for containers designed for receiving, transporting, and dumping waste materials. This trademark often occurs in print in lowercase: “[He] testified that he had seen the motorcycle parked for a number of days next to a trash dumpster” (Legal Times). “[The street is] lined with low-cost apartment buildings and strewn with blue dumpsters” (Chicago Tribune).

dump truck (dümp trūk) n. A heavy-duty truck having a bed that tilts backward to dump loose material.

dump-y¹ (düm'pē) adj. dump-i-er, dump-i-est. Short and stout; squat. [Probably from dump, lump.] —dump'i-ly adv. —dump'i-ness n.

dum-py² (dŭm'pē) adj. dump-i-er, dump-i-est. Resembling a dump, as in shabbiness; disreputable: “The place had a dark and dumpy look” (Washington Post).

dumpy level (dŭm'pē lēv'əl) n. A surveyor's instrument having a short telescope fixed rigidly to a horizontally rotating table.

Dum-yat (dŏom-yät') See Damietta.

dun¹ (dŭn) v. tr. dunned, dun-ning, duns. To importune (a debtor) for payment: a dunning letter. — n. 1. One that duns. 2. An importunate demand for payment. [Origin unknown.]

dun² (dŭn) n. 1. Color. An almost neutral brownish gray to dull grayish brown. 2. A fishing fly having this color. 3. A horse of this color. [Middle English, from Old English dunn, perhaps of Celtic origin.]

Du-nant (dŏo-nän', dü-), Jean Henri. 1828-1910. Swiss philanthropist who founded the International Red Cross (1864). He shared the 1901 Nobel Peace Prize.

Dun-bar (dŭn-bär') A burgh of southeast Scotland on the North Sea east of Edinburgh. Oliver Cromwell defeated the Covenanters here on September 3, 1650. Population, 4,609.

Dun-bar (dŭn'bär'), Paul Laurence. 1872-1906. American writer primarily noted for his poetry, which reflects Black American life and dialect.

Dun-bar (dŭn-bär'), William. 1460?-1520?. Scottish poet known for his allegorical works, such as The Thrissill and the Rois (1503), and an elegy on bygone poets, Lament of the Makaris (c. 1508).

Dun-can (dŭng'kən) A city of southern Oklahoma south-southwest of Oklahoma City. It is the center of an oil-producing region. Population, 21,732.

Dun-can (dŭng'kən), Isadora. 1878-1927. American dancer whose use of simple costumes and free movement greatly influenced modern dance.

Dun-can-ville (dŭng'kən-vil') A city of northeast Texas, a residential suburb of Dallas. Population, 35,748.

dunce (dŭns) n. A person regarded as stupid. [After John DUNS SCOTUS, whose writings and philosophy were ridiculed in the 16th century.]

dunce cap (dŭns kăp) also dunce's cap (dŭn'siz kăp) n. A cone-shaped paper cap, formerly placed on the head of a slow or lazy pupil. Also called fool's cap

Dun-dalk (dŭn'dôk) An unincorporated community of northeast Maryland, a residential and industrial suburb of Baltimore. Population, 71,293.

Dun-das (dŭn'dəs) A town of southeast Ontario, Canada, a manufacturing suburb of Hamilton. Population, 19,586.

Dun-dee (dŭn-dē') A burgh of east-central Scotland on the northern bank of the Firth of Tay. It was a stronghold of the Covenanters in the religious wars of the Scottish Reformation. Population, 185,616.

dun-der-head (dŭn'dər-hĕd') n. A dunce. [Perhaps Dutch donder, thunder (from Middle Dutch doner); see (s)tenə- in Appendix + HEAD.]

dun-drear-ies (dŭn-drĭr'ēz) pl.n. Long sideburns worn with a clean-shaven chin. [After Lord Dundreary, a character in the play Our American Cousin by Tom Taylor.]

dune (dōon, dyōon) n. A hill or ridge of wind-blown sand. [French, from Old French, from Middle Dutch dūne. See dhū-no- in Appendix.]

dune buggy (dōon būg'ē) n. A recreational vehicle having oversize tires designed for use on sand dunes or beaches, especially a light vehicle with a modified engine mounted on an open chassis. Also called beach buggy

Dun-e-din (dŭn-ēd'n) 1. A city of southeast South Island, New Zealand. A major port, it was settled by Scottish Presbyterians in 1848. Population, 74,500. 2. A city of west-central Florida on the Gulf of Mexico west of Tampa. It is a popular winter resort. Population, 30,203.

Dun-ferm-line (dŭn-fŭrm'lĭn) A burgh of east-central Scotland northwest of Edinburgh. It was long a favorite residence of Scottish kings. Andrew Carnegie was born here (1835) and gave the town its library. Population, 53,800.

dung (dŭng) n. 1. a. The excrement of animals. b. Manure. 2. Something foul or abhorrent. — v. tr. dunged, dung-ing, dungs. To fertilize (land) with manure. [Middle English, from Old English.] —dung'y adj.

dun-ga-ree (dŭng'gə-rē') n. 1. A sturdy, often blue denim fabric.

2. dungarees. Trousers or overalls made of sturdy denim fabric. [Hindi dungrī.]

dung beetle (dŭng bĕt'l) n. Any of various beetles of the family Scarabaeidae that form balls of dung on which they feed and in which they lay their eggs.

Dun-ge-ness crab (dŭn'jə-nĕs' krăb, -nĭs) n. An edible crab (Cancer magister) common along the Pacific coast from Alaska to northern California. [After Dungeness, a town of northwest Washington.]

dun-geon (dŭn'jən) n. 1. A dark, often underground chamber or cell used to confine prisoners. 2. A donjon. [Middle English donjon, castle keep, dungeon, from Old French, keep, probably from Medieval Latin domniō, the lord's tower, from Latin dominus, master. See dem- in Appendix.]

WORD HISTORY: The word dungeon may have gone down in the world quite literally, if one etymology of the word is correct. Dungeon may go back to a Vulgar Latin word, domniō, meaning “the lord’s tower,” which came from Latin dominus, “master.” In Middle English, in which our word is first recorded in a work composed around the beginning of the 14th century, it meant “a fortress, castle,” and “the keep of a castle” as well as “a prison cell underneath the keep of the castle.” Dungeon can still mean “keep,” although the usual spelling for this sense is donjon, but the meaning most usually associated with it is certainly not elevated. It is also possible that dungeon goes back to a Germanic word related to our word dung. This assumed Germanic word would have meant “an underground house constructed of dung.” If this etymology is correct, the word dungeon has ended up where it began.

dung·hill (düng'hil') n. 1. A heap of animal excrement. 2. A foul, degraded condition or place.

du·nite (dōō'nīt', dūn'īt') n. A dense igneous rock that consists mainly of olivine and is a source of magnesium. [After Mount Dun in northern South Island, New Zealand.] —du·nit'ic (dōō-nīt'ik, də-) adj.

dunk (düngk) v. dunked, dunk·ing, dunks. — v. tr. 1. To plunge into liquid; immerse. See Synonyms at dip. 2. To dip (food) into a liquid before eating it. 3. Basketball. To slam (a ball) through the basket from above. — v. intr.

1. To submerge oneself briefly in water. 2. Basketball. To slam a ball through the basket from above. — n. 1. The act or an instance of dunking. 2. Basketball. A dunk shot. [Pennsylvania Dutch dunke, from Middle High German dunken, from Old High German dunkōn.] —dunk'er n.

Dunk·er (düng'kər) also Dun·kard (-kərd) n. A member of the German Baptist Brethren, a group of German-American Baptists opposed to military service and the taking of legal oaths. [Pennsylvania Dutch, from dunke, to dunk (from the practice of baptism by immersion). See DUNK.]

Dun·kirk¹ (dūn'kūrk') 1. Also Dun·kerque (dœn-kėrk'). A city of northern France on the North Sea. In World War II more than 330,000 Allied troops were evacuated from its beaches in the face of enemy fire (May-June 1940). Population, 73,120. 2. A city of western New York on Lake Erie southwest of Buffalo. It is in a grape-growing region. Population, 15,310.

Dun·kirk² (dūn'kūrk') n. 1. A desperate retreat. 2. A condition in which a desperate last effort is the only alternative to total defeat. [After Dunkirk¹, France.]

dunk shot (düngk shōt) n. Basketball. A shot made by jumping and slamming the ball down through the basket. Also called stuff shot

Dun Laoghai·re (dūn lār'ə) A borough of east-central Ireland on the Irish Sea southeast of Dublin. It is a yachting center. Population, 54,496.

Dun·lap (dūn'lăp), William. 1766-1839. American playwright, theatrical manager, painter, and historian best known for his dramatic works, such as André (1798) and The Italian Father (1799).

dun·lin (dūn'līn) n. A rust-brown and white sandpiper (Calidris alpina) native to northern regions of North America, Europe, and Asia. [DUN² + -LIN(G)¹.]

Dun·lop (dūn-lōp', dūn'lōp), John Boyd. 1840-1921. British inventor often credited with the invention (c. 1887) of the pneumatic rubber tire.

Dun-more (dün'môr', -môr') A borough of northeast Pennsylvania, an industrial suburb of Scranton. Population, 15,403.

Dun-more (dün-môr', -môr'), Fourth Earl of Title of John Murray. 1732-1809. British colonial governor of Virginia (1771-1776) who opposed the independence of the colonies and was forced to return to England.

dun-nage (dün'ij) n. 1. Loose packing material used to protect a ship's cargo from damage during transport. 2. Personal baggage. [Middle English dennage, from Middle Dutch denne, flooring of a ship.]

Dunne (dün), Finley Peter. 1867-1936. American humorist and journalist known for his books featuring Mr. Dooley, an Irish saloonkeeper who comments satirically on current events.

Du-nois (dōo-nwä', dü-), Comte Jean de. 1403?-1468. French military leader who was besieged at Orléans (1428-1429) until the arrival of Joan of Arc and her troops.

Dun-sa-ny (dün-sā'nē), 18th Baron Title of Edward John Moreton Drax Plunkett. 1878-1957. Irish writer and hunter known for his novels, which include The Blessing of Pan (1927) and Curse of the Wise Woman (1933).

Duns Sco-tus (dünz skō'təs), John. Known as "the Subtle Doctor." 1265?-1308. Scottish Franciscan monk and theologian who wrote On the First Principal and disputed Thomas Aquinas's harmony of faith and reason.

Dun-stan (dün'stən), Saint. 924-988. English prelate. As bishop of Winchester (957) and archbishop of Canterbury (959-978) he attempted to integrate the Danes and the English as a nation.

du-o (dōo'ō, dyōo'ō) n. pl. du-os. 1. Music. a. A duet. b. Two performers singing or playing together. 2. Two people in close association: a duo of negotiators. [Italian, from Latin, two. See dwo- in Appendix.]

duo- pref. Two: duopsony. [Latin, from duo, two. See dwo- in Appendix.]

du-o-dec-i-mal (dōo'ə-dēs'ə-məl, dyōo'-) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or based on the number 12: the duodecimal number system. 2. Of or relating to twelfths. — n. A twelfth. [From Latin duodecimus, twelfth, from duodecim, twelve : duo, two; see dwo- in Appendix + decem, ten; see dekṃ in Appendix.]

du-o-dec-i-mo (dōo'ə-dēs'ə-mō', dyōo'-) n. pl. du-o-dec-i-mos. Printing. 1. The size (5 by 74 inches) of book pages formed by folding single sheets from a printing press into 12 leaves each. Also called twelvemo 2. A book composed of pages of this size. [Latin (in) duodecimō, (in) a twelfth, ablative of duodecimus, twelfth. See DUODECIMAL.]

du-o-de-num (dōo'ə-dē'nəm, dyōo'-, dōo-öd'n-əm, dyōo'-) n. pl.

du-od-e-na (dōo'ə-dē'nə, dyōo'-, dōo-öd'n-ə, dyōo'-) or du-o-de-nums. The beginning portion of the small intestine, starting at the lower end of the stomach and extending to the jejunum. [Middle English, from Medieval Latin, short for intestinum duodenum digitōrum, intestine of twelve fingers (in length), from du·o·logue (dōō'ə-lōg', -lōg', dyōō'-) n. A dialogue or conversation between two persons: “a reasonably well-constructed duologue for two experienced performers” (Noel Coward).

Latin duodēnum, genitive pl. of duodēnī, twelve each, from duodecim, twelve. See DUODECIMAL.] —du'o-de'nal (dōō'ə-dē'nəl, dyōō'-, dōō-ōd'n-əl, dyōō-) adj.

duo·mo (dwō'mō) n. pl. duo·mos. A cathedral, especially one in Italy. [Italian. See DOME.]

du·op·o·ly (dōō-ōp'ə-lē, dyōō-) n. An economic or political condition in which power is concentrated in two persons or groups. [DUO- + (MONO)POLY.]

du·op·so·ny (dōō-ōp'sə-nē, dyōō-) n. pl. du·op·so·nies. A stock-market condition wherein two rival buyers exert a controlling influence on numerous sellers. [DUO- + Greek opsōnia, purchasing of provisions (from opsōnein, to buy food : opson, cooked food + ōnē, buying from ōneisthai, to buy); see wes-³ in Appendix.]

dup. abbr. Duplicate.

dupe (dōop, dyōop) n. 1. An easily deceived person. 2. A person who functions as the tool of another person or power. — v. tr. duped, dup-ing, dupes. To deceive (an unwary person). See Synonyms at deceive. [French, from Old French, probably alteration of huppe, hoopoe (from the bird's stupid appearance). See HOOPOE.] —dup'a-bil/i·ty n. —dup'a-ble adj. —dup'er n.

dup·er·y (dōō'pə-rē, dyōō'-) n. pl. dup·er·ies. The act of duping or the condition of having been duped.

du·ple (dōō'pəl, dyōō'-) adj. 1. Consisting of two; double. 2. Music. Consisting of two or a multiple of two beats to the measure. [Latin duplus. See dwo- in Appendix.]

Du·pleix (dōō-plēks', dü-), Marquis Joseph-François. 1697-1763. French colonial administrator who competed unsuccessfully with the British to extend French control over India.

Du·ples·sis·Mor·nay (dōō-plē-sē' mōr-nā', dü-) See Philippe de Mor-nay.

du·plex (dōō'plēks', dyōō'-) adj. 1. Twofold; double. 2. Relating to or being a single assembly of machinery having two identical units that are capable of operating simultaneously or independently. 3. Electronics. Of or relating to a communications mode, as in a telephone system, that provides simultaneous transmission and reception in both directions. — n. 1. A house divided into two living units or residences, usually having separate entrances. 2. A duplex apartment. [Latin. See dwo- in Appendix.] —du·plex'i·ty (-plēk'sī-tē) n.

duplex apartment (dōō'plēks' ə-pärt'mənt) n. An apartment having rooms on two adjoining floors connected by an inner staircase.

du·pli·cate (dōō'plī-kīt, dyōō'-) adj. Abbr. dup. 1. Identically copied from an original. 2. Existing or growing in two corresponding parts; double. 3. Games.

Denoting a manner of play in cards in which partnerships or teams play the same deals and compare scores at the end: duplicate bridge. — n. Abbr. dup. 1. An identical copy; a facsimile. 2. One that corresponds exactly to another, especially an original. 3. Games. A card game in which partnerships or teams play the same deals and compare scores at the end. — v. du·pli·cat·ed, du·pli·cat·ing, du·pli·cates (-kāt'). — v. tr. 1. To make an exact copy of. 2. To make twofold; double. 3. To make or perform again; repeat: a hard feat to duplicate. — v. intr. To become duplicate. [Middle English, from Latin duplicātus, past participle of uplicāre, to double, from duplex, uplic-, twofold. See dwo- in Appendix.] — du'pli·ca·ble, du'pli·cat'a·ble (-kā'tə-bəl) adj. — du'pli·cate·ly adv. — du'pli·ca'tive adj. — du'pli·ca-to'ry (-kī-tōr'ē, -tōr'ē) adj.

du·pli·ca·tion (dōō'plī-kā'shən, dyōō'-) n. 1. a. The act or procedure of duplicating. b. The condition of being duplicated. 2. A duplicate; a replica. 3. Genetics. a. The occurrence of a repeated section of genetic material in a chromosome. b. The formation of such a duplication.

du·pli·ca·tor (dōō'plī-kā'tər, dyōō'-) n. A machine, such as a mimeograph, that reproduces printed or written material.

du·plic·i·tous (dōō-plīs'ī-təs, dyōō-) adj. Given to or marked by deliberate deceptiveness in behavior or speech. — du·plic'i·tous·ly adv. — du·plic'i·tous·ness n.

du·plic·i·ty (dōō-plīs'ī-tē, dyōō-) n. pl. du·plic·i·ties. 1. a. Deliberate deceptiveness in behavior or speech. b. An instance of deliberate deceptiveness; double-dealing. 2. The quality or state of being twofold or double. [Middle English duplícite, from Old French, from Late Latin duplicitās, doubleness, from Latin duplex, uplic-, twofold. See dwo- in Appendix.]

Du Pont de Ne-mours (dōō pōnt' də nə-mōōr', dū pôn'), Pierre Samuel. 1739-1817. French-born economist and politician who took part in negotiations after the American Revolution (1783) and in the acquisition of the Louisiana Territory (1803). His son Éleuthère Irénée (1771-1834) established a gunpowder works in Delaware (1802) that developed into the chemical firm of E.I. Du Pont de Nemours and Company. His grandson Samuel Francis (1803-1865) was a Union admiral during the Civil War.

du Pré (dōō prā', dyōō), Jacqueline. 1945-1987. British cellist considered among the world's best until multiple sclerosis cut short her career.

Du-que de Ca-xi-as (dōō'kē də kə-shē'əs, dōō'kī dĩ kə-shē'ās) A city of southeast Brazil, a commercial and residential suburb of Rio de Janeiro on Guanabara Bay. Population, 306,243.

Du-quesne (dōō-kān', dyōō-, dū-kěn'), Marquis Abraham. 1610-1688. French naval commander who in 1676 defeated the combined Spanish and Dutch fleets off the coast of Sicily.

du·ra·ble (dōōr'ə-bəl, dyōōr'-) adj. 1. Capable of withstanding wear and tear or decay: a durable fabric. 2. Lasting; stable: a durable friendship. 3. Economics. Not depleted or consumed by use: durable goods. — n. Economics. A manufactured product, such as an automobile or a household appliance, that can be used over a relatively long period without being depleted or consumed. Often used in the plural. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin dūrābilis, from dūrāre, to last. See deuə- in Appendix.] —du'ra·bil'i·ty, du'ra·ble·ness n.

—du'ra·bly adv.

durable press (dōōr'ə-bəl prēs) n. See permanent press.

du·ral (dōōr'əl, dyōōr'-) adj. Of or relating to the dura mater.

du·ral·u·min (dōō-rāl'yə-mīn, dyōō-) n. An alloy of aluminum that contains copper, manganese, magnesium, iron, and silicon and is resistant to corrosion by acids and sea water. [Originally a trademark.]

du·ra ma·ter (dōōr'ə mā'tər, mā-, dyōōr'ə) n. The tough fibrous membrane covering the brain and the spinal cord and lining the inner surface of the skull. It is the outermost of the three meninges that surround the brain and spinal cord. [Middle English, from Medieval Latin dūra mater (cerebri), hard mother (of the brain), dura mater (translation of Arabic 'umm ad-dimāg aṣ-ṣāfiḡah, the dense mother of the brain) : Latin dūra, feminine of dūrus, hard; see DURAMEN + Latin mater, mother; see MATER.]

du·ra·men (dōō-rā'mən, dyōō-) n. Botany. See heartwood. [Latin dūrāmen, hard growth of a vine, from dūrāre, to harden, from dūrus, hard. See deru- in Appendix.]

du·rance (dōōr'əns, dyōōr'-) n. Confinement or restraint by force; imprisonment: "There should be a durance vile for justices who use an argument as weak as the one the majority used" (George F. Will). [Middle English duraunce, duration, from Old French durance, from durer, to last, from Latin dūrāre. See deuə- in Appendix.]

Du·rand (də-rānd'), Asher Brown. 1796-1886. American artist and a founder of the Hudson River School known for his paintings of the Hudson River and the Catskill Mountains.

Du·ran·go (dōō-rāng'gō) A city of north-central Mexico north-northwest of Guadalajara. Founded as a mining town c. 1560, it was an important political and religious center during the early history of northern Mexico. Population, 257,915.

Du·rant (də-rānt'), Thomas Clark. 1820-1885. American railroad financier who built the Union Pacific Railroad (1863-1869).

Du·rant (də-rānt'), William Crapo. 1861-1947. American industrialist who organized the Buick Motor Car Company (1905), the General Motors Company (1908), and the Chevrolet Motor Company (1915).

- Du·rant (də-rănt'), William James. Known as "Will." 1885-1981. American historian who wrote The Story of Civilization (1935-1975), an 11-volume history of the world on which his wife Ariel (1898-1981) collaborated.
- Du·ran·te (də-răn'tē), Jimmy. 1893-1980. American comedian remembered for his hoarse voice, ample nose, and time-worn hat. He appeared in a number of films and Broadway shows, including Red, Hot, and Blue (1936).
- du·ra·tion (doo-rā'shən, dyoo-) n. 1. Continuance or persistence in time. 2. A period of existence or persistence: sat quietly through the duration of the speech. [Middle English duracioun, from Old French duration, from Medieval Latin dūrātiō, dūrātiōn-, from Latin dūrātus, past participle of dūrāre, to last. See deuə- in Appendix.]
- Dur·ban (dûr'bən) A city of eastern South Africa on Durban Bay, an inlet of the Indian Ocean. First visited by Vasco da Gama in 1497, the site was settled after the arrival of the British in 1824. Durban is a major seaport and year-round resort. Population, 677,760.
- dur·bar (dûr'bär') n. 1. A state reception formerly given by Indian princes for a British sovereign or one given for an Indian prince by his subjects. 2. The court of an Indian prince. [Urdu darbār, audience hall, court, from Persian : dar, indoors (from Middle Persian, door, from Old Persian duvara-); see dhwer- in Appendix + bār, audience hall (from East Iranian dwāra-*, courtyard); see dhwer- in Appendix.]
- Dü·ren (doo'rən, dür'-) A city of west-central Germany southwest of Cologne. It was a center of Carolingian culture. Population, 84,631.
- Dü·rer (doo'rər, dyoo'r-, dü'rər), Albrecht. 1471-1528. German painter and engraver who incorporated the classicism of the Italian Renaissance into northern European art.
- du·ress (doo-rēs', dyoo-) n. 1. Constraint by threat; coercion: confessed under duress. 2. Law. a. Coercion illegally applied. b. Forcible confinement. [Middle English duresse, harshness, compulsion, from Old French durece, hardness, from Latin dūritia, from dūrus, hard. See deru- in Appendix.]
- Dur·ga·pur (doo'r'gə-poor', -gä-) A city of northeast India northwest of Calcutta. Its steel plant, completed in 1962, was built with British aid. Population, 311,798.
- Dur·ham¹ (dûr'əm) A city of north-central North Carolina east of Greensboro. Settled c. 1750, it is the seat of Duke University (founded 1838). Population, 136,611.
- Dur·ham² (dûr'əm) n. See shorthorn. [After Durham, a county of northern England.]
- du·ri·an (doo'r'ē-ən, -än', dyoo'r'-) n. 1. A tree (Durio zibethinus) of southeast Asia, bearing edible fruit. 2. The fruit of this plant, having a hard, prickly rind and soft pulp with an offensive odor but a pleasant taste. [Malay dūrīan, from dūrī, thorn.] dur-ing (dōor'ing, dyōor'-) prep. 1. Throughout the course or duration of: suffered food shortages during the war. 2. At some time in: was born during a blizzard. [Middle English, from present participle of duren, to last, from Old French durer, from Latin dūrāre. See deuə- in Appendix.]

Durk-heim (dûrk'hīm, dūr-kēm'), Émile. 1858-1917. French social scientist and a founder of sociology who is known for his study of social values and alienation. His important works include The Rules of Sociological Method (1895).

dur-mast (dûr'măst') n. A European oak (Quercus petraea) having tough, elastic wood. [Perhaps alteration of dun mast: DUN² + MAST².]

durn (dûrn) Chiefly Southern U.S. interj., adv., adj. & v. Variant of darn². See Regional note at darned.

du-roc also Du-roc (dōor'ök', dyōor'-) n. A large red hog of a breed developed during the 19th century in the United States. Also called Duroc-Jersey [After Duroc, a horse owned by the developer of the breed.]

Du-ro-cher (də-rō'chər, -shər), Leo Ernest. 1906-1991. American baseball player and manager remembered for his toughness and his dictum "Nice guys finish last."

Du-roc-Jer-sey (dōor'ök-jûr'zē, dyōor'-) n. See duroc.

dur-ra also dou-ra or dou-rah (dōor'ə) n. A cereal grain (Sorghum bicolor) of Asia and northern Africa, much cultivated in dry regions. Also called Egyptian corn [Arabic durah, grain.]

Dur-rell (dûr'əl), Lawrence George. 1912-1990. British writer of Irish descent whose best-known work is The Alexandria Quartet (1957-1960), a series of novels treating the same characters from different perspectives.

Dür-ren-matt (dōor'ən-măt', dyōor'-, dūr'-), Friedrich. Born 1921. Swiss writer known for his absurdist novels and plays, such as The Visit (1956).

Dur-rës (dōor'əs) A city of western Albania on the Adriatic Sea. Founded as a Greek colony c. 625 B.C., it is the country's chief seaport. Population, 72,400.

durst (dûrst) v. Archaic. A past tense and a past participle of dare.

du-rum (dōor'əm, dyōor'-, dûr'-, dūr'-) n. A hardy wheat (Triticum turgidum, formerly T. durum) used chiefly in making pasta. [From Latin dūrum, neuter of dūrus, hard. See deru- in Appendix.]

Du-ruy (dōor'ə-wē', dūr-wē'), (Jean) Victor. 1811-1894. French historian and politician who attempted to establish free compulsory primary education. His works include Histoire des Romains (1843-1844).

Dur-yea (dōor'yā, -ē-ā'), Charles Edgar. 1861-1938. American inventor and automobile manufacturer. With his brother James Frank Duryea (1869-1967) he built one of the first American automobiles (1893).

Du·se (dōō'zě), Eleonora. 1859?-1924. Italian actress who was highly acclaimed as a heroine in the plays of Gabriele D'Annunzio and Henrik Ibsen.

Du·shan·be (dōō-shām'bə, -shām'-, -shūn-byě') The capital of Tadjikistan, in the western part south of Tashkent. It is a major industrial and commercial center in a rich agricultural area. Population, 552,000.

dusk (düsk) n. The darker stage of twilight, especially in the evening. — adj. Tending to darkness; dusky. — v. intr. tr. dusked, dusk-ing, dusks. To become or make dark or dusky. [From Middle English, dark, alteration of Old English dox.]

dusk·y (düs'kē) adj. dusk·i·er, dusk·i·est. 1. Characterized by little or inadequate light; shadowy. 2. Rather dark in color: dusky skin. See Synonyms at dark. —dusk'i·ly adv. —dusk'i·ness n.

dusky grouse (düs'kē grou) n. See blue grouse.

Düs·sel·dorf (dōōs'əl-dôrf', düs'-) A city of west-central Germany on the Rhine River north-northwest of Cologne. Chartered in 1288, it has been a leading industrial center since the 1870's. The poet Heinrich Heine was born here in 1797. Population, 565,843.

dust (düst) n. 1. Fine, dry particles of matter. 2. A cloud of fine, dry particles. 3. Particles of matter regarded as the result of disintegration: fabric that had fallen to dust over the centuries. 4. a. Earth, especially when regarded as the substance of the grave: "ashes to ashes, dust to dust" (Book of Common Prayer). b. The surface of the ground. 5. A debased or despised condition. 6. Something of no worth. 7. Chiefly British. Rubbish readied for disposal. 8. Confusion; agitation; commotion: won't go back in until the dust settles. — v. dust-ed, dust-ing, dusts. — v. tr. 1. To remove dust from by wiping, brushing, or beating: dust the furniture. 2. To sprinkle with a powdery substance: dusted the cookies with sugar; dust crops with fertilizer. 3. To apply or strew in fine particles: dusted talcum powder on my feet. 4. Baseball. To deliver a pitch so close to (the batter) as to make the batter back away. — v. intr. 1. To clean by removing dust. 2. To cover itself with such particulate matter. Used of a bird. —phrasal verb. dust off. To restore to use: dusted off last year's winter coat. —idioms. in the dust. Far behind, as in a race or competition: a marketing strategy that left our competitors in the dust. make the dust fly. To go about a task with great energy and speed. [Middle English, from Old English dūst.]

dust·bin (düst'bīn') n. Chiefly British. A can or barrel for refuse.

dust bowl (düst bōl) n. A region reduced to aridity by drought and dust storms.

dust catcher (düst käch'ər) n. Informal. A little-used decorative object or piece of furniture.

dust cover (düst küv'ər) n. 1. A removable or hinged plastic cover used to protect a piece of equipment, such as a turntable or printer. 2. See dust jacket (n., sense 1).

dust devil (düst dëv'əl) n. A small whirlwind, usually of short duration, that swirls dust, debris, and sand to great heights.

dust-er (düs'tər) n. 1. One that dusts, especially: a. A cloth or brush used to remove dust. b. A device for sifting or scattering a powdered substance. 2. A smock worn to protect one's clothing from dust. 3. A woman's loose dress-length housecoat.

dust-ing (düs'tĩng) n. 1. A light sprinkling: sidewalks covered with a dusting of new snow. 2. Slang. A beating or defeat: gave the bully a good dusting.

dusting powder (düs'tĩng pou'dər) n. A fine powder, such as talcum powder, used on the skin.

dust jacket (düst jāk'ıt) n. Abbr. dj 1. A removable paper cover used to protect the binding of a book. Also called dust cover 2. A cardboard sleeve in which a phonograph record is packaged.

dust mop (düst möp) n. A mop, usually of soft or fluffy material, that is used dry to remove dust from floors. Also called dry mop dust-off or dust-off (düst'ôf', -ôf') n. Slang. Medevac.

dust-pan (düst'pän') n. A short-handled pan or scoop into which dust is swept.

dust ruffle (düst rŭf'əl) n. A gathered or pleated strip of cloth reaching from the bottom of a mattress or box spring to the floor.

dust storm (düst stôrm) n. A severe windstorm that sweeps clouds of dust across an extensive area, especially in an arid region.

dust-up (düst'ŭp') n. Slang. A row; a dispute.

dust-y (düs'tē) adj. dust-i-er, dust-i-est. 1. Covered or filled with dust.

2. Consisting of or resembling dust; powdery. 3. Tinged with gray.

4. Timeworn; stale: the dusty precepts of a bygone era. —dust'i-ly adv.

—dust'i-ness n.

dusty miller (düs'tē mĩl'ər) n. Any of various plants of the genera Artemisia, Centaurea, Chrysanthemum, Lychnis, and Senecio, having leaves and stems covered with dustlike down.

Dutch (dŭch) adj. Abbr. D., Du. 1. a. Of or relating to the Netherlands or its people or culture. b. Of or relating to the Dutch language. 2. Archaic.

a. German. b. Of or relating to any of the Germanic peoples or languages.

3. Of or relating to the Pennsylvania Dutch. — n. 1. a. The people of the Netherlands. b. Archaic. A Germanic people. c. The Pennsylvania Dutch.

2. a. The official West Germanic language of the Netherlands. b. Archaic. One or more of the West Germanic languages of Germany, Switzerland, and the Low Countries. c. See Pennsylvania Dutch (n., sense 2). 3. Slang. Anger or temper. —idioms. go Dutch. To pay one's own expenses on a date or outing. in Dutch. In disfavor or trouble. [Middle English Duch, German, Dutch, from Middle Dutch Duutsch. See teutā- in Appendix.]

Dutch cheese (dŭch chēz) n. See cottage cheese.

Dutch clover (dŭch klō'vər) n. See white clover.

Dutch courage (dŭch kŭr'ij) n. Informal. Courage acquired from drinking liquor.

Dutch door (dŭch dôr) n. A door divided in two horizontally so that either part can be left open or closed.

Dutch East Indies (dŭch ēst ĭn'dēz) See Indonesia.

Dutch elm disease (dŭch ělm dī-zēz') n. A disease of elm trees caused by the fungus Ceratocystis ulmi, characterized by brown streaks in the wood and resulting in eventual death of the trees.

Dutch Guiana (dŭch gē-ān'ə, -ā'nə, gī-) See Suriname.

Dutch hoe (dŭch hō) n. See scuffle².

Dutchman (dŭch'mən) n. 1. a. A man who is a native or inhabitant of the Netherlands. b. A man of Dutch ancestry. 2. a. Archaic. A member of any of the Germanic peoples of central or northern Europe. b. Regional. A person of German ancestry. 3. dutchman. Something used to conceal faulty construction.

Dutchman's breeches (dŭch'mənz brīch'iz) pl.n. (used with a sing. or pl. verb). A woodland plant (Dicentra cucullaria) of eastern North America, having finely divided leaves and yellowish-white flowers with two spurs.

Dutchman's pipe (dŭch'mənz pīp) n. See pipe vine.

Dutch metal (dŭch mēt'l) n. An alloy of 80 percent copper and 20 percent zinc used to make low-priced jewelry and in thin sheets as an inexpensive imitation of gold leaf.

Dutch oven (dŭch ŭv'ən) n. 1. A large, heavy pot or kettle, usually of cast iron and with a tight lid, used for slow cooking. 2. A metal utensil open on one side and equipped with shelves, placed before an open fire for baking or roasting food. 3. A wall oven in which food is baked by means of preheated brick walls.

Dutch treat (dŭch trēt) n. An outing, as for dinner or a movie, in which all persons pay their own expenses.

Dutch uncle (dŭch ŭng'kəl) n. A stern, candid critic or adviser.

Dutch West Indies (dŭch wĕst ĭn'dēz) See Netherlands Antilles.

Dutchwoman (dŭch'woōm'ən) n. 1. A woman who is a native or inhabitant of the Netherlands. 2. A woman of Dutch ancestry.

du-teous (dōō'tē-əs, dyōō'-) adj. Obedient or dutiful. [From DUTY.]

—du-teous-ly adv.

du-ti-a-ble (dōō'tē-ə-bəl, dyōō'-) adj. Subject to import tax.

du·ti·ful (dōō'tī-fəl, dyōō'-) adj. 1. Careful to fulfill obligations. 2. Expressing or filled with a sense of obligation. —du'ti-ful-ly adv. —du'ti-ful-ness n.

Du·tra (dōō'trə), Eurico Gaspar. 1885-1974. Brazilian military and political leader who directed a coup d'état against Getulio Vargas in 1945 and subsequently served as president (1946-1951).

du·ty (dōō'tē, dyōō'-) n. pl. du·ties. 1. An act or a course of action that is required of one by position, social custom, law, or religion: Do your duty to your country. 2. a. Moral obligation: acting out of duty. b. The compulsion felt to meet such obligation. See Synonyms at obligation. 3. A service, function, or task assigned to one, especially in the armed forces: hazardous duty. 4. Function or work; service: jury duty. See Synonyms at function. 5. Abbr. dy. A tax charged by a government, especially on imports. 6. Abbr. dy. a. The work performed by a machine under specified conditions. b. A measure of efficiency expressed as the amount of work done per unit of energy used. 7. The total volume of water required to irrigate a given area in order to cultivate a specific crop until harvest. —idiom. duty bound. Obligated: You are duty bound to help your little sister and brother. [Middle English duete, from Anglo-Norman, from due, variant of Old French deu, due. See DUE.]

du·ty-free (dōō'tē-frē', dyōō'-) adj. 1. Exempt from customs duties: duty-free merchandise. 2. Of, relating to, or being a region or establishment in which imported goods are exempt from customs duties: a duty-free port; a duty-free shop. —du'ty-free' adv.

du·um·vir (dōō-ŭm'vər, dyōō-) n. A member of a duumvirate. [Latin : duum, genitive pl. of duo, two; see DUO + vir, man; see wī-ro- in Appendix.]

du·um·vi·rate (dōō-ŭm'vər-īt, dyōō-) n. 1. Any of various two-man executive boards in the Roman Republic. 2. A regime or partnership of two persons.

Du·va·lier (dōō'vāl-yā', dü-), François. Known as "Papa Doc." 1907-1971. Haitian dictator. Elected president in 1957, he declared himself president for life in 1964 and ruled in an authoritarian manner until his death. His son Jean-Claude (born 1951), known as "Baby Doc," succeeded him in 1971 but fled the country in 1986 after widespread civil unrest.

Du·vall (dōō-väl'), Gabriel. 1752-1844. American jurist who served as an associate justice of the U.S. Supreme Court (1811-1835).

Du·ve (dōō'və, dü'-), Christian Marie René Joseph de. Born 1917. British-born Belgian physiologist. He shared a 1974 Nobel Prize for contributions to the understanding of living cells.

du·vet (dōō-vā', dyōō-) n. A quilt, usually with a washable cover, that may be used in place of a bedspread and top sheet. [French, down, from Old French, alteration of dumet, diminutive of dum, dun, from Old Norse dūnn.]

du·ve·tyn also du·ve·tyne (dōō'və-tēn', dyōō'-, dōō'və-tēn', dyōō'-) n. A soft, short-napped fabric with a twill weave, made of wool, cotton, rayon, or silk. [French duvetine, from duvet, down. See DUVET.]

du Vi-gneaud (dōō vēn'yō, dyōō), Vincent. 1901-1978. American biochemist. He won a 1955 Nobel Prize for his work on pituitary hormones.

D.V. abbr. 1. Latin. Deo volente (God willing). 2. Bible. Douay Version.

Dvi-na (dvē-nä') 1. Also Northern Dvina. A river, about 748 km (465 mi) long, of northwest Russia flowing north and northeast into Dvina Bay, an arm of the White Sea. 2. Also Western Dvina. A river rising in west-central Russia and flowing about 1,022 km (635 mi) generally westward through Belarus and Latvia to the Gulf of Riga.

D.V.M. abbr. Doctor of Veterinary Medicine.

Dvo-rak (dvôr'äk) adj. Of, relating to, or designating a configuration of typewriter or computer keyboard keys arranged to increase the speed and ease of typing, the home row of keys being for the characters A, O, E, U, I, D, H, T, N, and S. [After August Dvorak (1894-1975), American educator.]

Dvoř-ák (dvôr'zhäk, -zhäk), Anton or Antonín. 1841-1904. Czechoslovakian composer whose works, such as Slavic Dances (1878), often incorporate folk music. His final symphony, From the New World (1893), was composed while he was director of the National Conservatory in New York City (1892-1895).

DW abbr. 1. Dead weight. 2. Distilled water.

D/W abbr. Law. Dock warrant.

dwarf (dwôrf) n. pl. dwarfs or dwarves (dwôrvz). 1. a. An abnormally small person, often having limbs and features not properly proportioned or formed. b. An atypically small animal or plant. 2. A small creature resembling a human being, often ugly, appearing in legends and fairy tales. 3. A dwarf star. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: a dwarf tree; dwarf shrubbery. — v. dwarfed, dwarf-ing, dwarfs. — v. tr. 1. To check the natural growth or development of; stunt: "The oaks were dwarfed from lack of moisture" (John Steinbeck). 2. To cause to appear small by comparison: "Together these two big men dwarfed the tiny Broadway office" (Saul Bellow). — v. intr. To become stunted or grow smaller. [Middle English dwerf, from Old English dweorh.] — dwarf'ish adj. — dwarf'ish-ness n.

dwarf cornel (dwôrf kôr'nəl) n. A herbaceous plant (Cornus canadensis) of northern North America, having creeping rhizomes, scarlet fruit, and inconspicuous greenish flowers surrounded by four white, petallike bracts. Also called bunchberry dwarf huckleberry (dwôrf hŭk'əl-bĕr'ĕ) n. See dangleberry.

dwarf-ism (dwôrf'fĭz'əm) n. A pathological condition of arrested growth having various causes. Also called nanism dwarf shoot (dwôrf shōōt) n. A lateral branch that is much smaller than the main one, as in the cedar, larch, and ginkgo.

dwarf star (dwôrf stâr) n. A star, such as the sun, having relatively low mass, small size, and average or below average luminosity.

dwarves (dwôrvz) n. A plural of dwarf.

dweeb (dwēb) n. Slang. 1. A subservient person; a flunky. 2. A despised person. [Origin unknown.]

dwell (dwĕl) v. intr. dwelt (dwĕlt) or dwelled, dwell·ing, dwells. 1. To live as a resident; reside. 2. To exist in a given place or state: dwell in joy. 3. a. To fasten one's attention: kept dwelling on what went wrong. See Synonyms at brood.

b. To speak or write at length; expatiate: dwelt on the need to trim the budget.

— n. Computer Science. A programmed time delay of variable duration. [Middle English dwellen, from Old English dwellan, to mislead.] —dwell'er n.

dwell·ing (dwĕl'ing) n. A place to live in; an abode.

dwelt (dwĕlt) v. A past tense and a past participle of dwell.

DWI abbr. Driving while intoxicated.

Dwight (dwīt), Timothy. 1752-1817. American clergyman, author, and educator who was a leading supporter of Federalism and served as president of Yale University (1795-1817). His grandson Timothy (1828-1916) was also president of Yale (1886-1899).

dwin·dle (dwīn'dl) v. dwin·dled, dwin·dling, dwin·dles. — v. intr. To become gradually less until little remains. — v. tr. To cause to dwindle. See Synonyms at decrease. [Frequentative of Middle English dwīnen, to waste away, from Old English dwīnan, to shrink. See dheu-² in Appendix.]

dwt. abbr. Pennyweight.

Dy The symbol for the element dysprosium.

dy. abbr. 1. Delivery. 2. Duty.

dy·ad (dī'ăd', -əd) n. 1. Two individuals or units regarded as a pair: the mother-daughter dyad. 2. Biology. One pair of homologous chromosomes resulting from the division of a tetrad during meiosis. 3. Chemistry. A divalent atom or radical. 4. Mathematics. An operator represented as a pair of vectors juxtaposed without multiplication. — adj. Made up of two units. [From Greek duas, duad-, from duo, two. See dwo- in Appendix.]

dy·ad·ic (dī-ăd'ik) adj. 1. Twofold. 2. Of or relating to a dyad. — n. Mathematics. The direct product (B·C)AD of two dyads AB and CD.

Dy·ak (dī'ăk') n. Variant of Dayak.

dy·ar·chy (dī'ăr'kē) n. Variant of diarchy.

dyb·buk (dīb'ōok, dē-bōok') n. pl. dyb·buks or dyb·buk·im (dī-bōok'īm, dē'bōō-kēm'). In Jewish folklore, the wandering soul of a dead person that enters the body of a living person and controls his or her behavior. [Yiddish dibek, from Hebrew dibbūq, probably from dābaq, to cling.]

Dyce (dīs), Alexander. 1798-1869. Scottish-born critic who edited the works of James Shirley (1833) and Christopher Marlowe (1850) and is best known for his edition of Shakespeare (1857).

dye (dī) n. 1. A substance used to color materials. Also called dyestuff 2. A color imparted by dyeing. — v. dyed, dye-ing, dyes. — v. tr. To color (a material), especially by soaking in a coloring solution. — v. intr. To take on or impart color. — idiom. of the deepest dye. Of the most extreme sort. [Middle English deie, from Old English dēag, dēah.] — dy'er n.

dyed-in-the-wool (dīd'īn-thə-wōol') adj. 1. Thoroughgoing; out-and-out: a dyed-in-the-wool populist. 2. Dyed before being woven into cloth.

Dy-er (dī'ər), John. 1699-1757. British poet noted primarily for “Grongar Hill” (1726), one of the first romantic pastoral poems.

Dy-er (dī'ər), Mary. Died 1660. English-born American Quaker martyr who was twice banished from Boston because of her beliefs. She was hanged after returning to the city a second time.

dy-er's broom (dī'ərz brōom) n. See dyer's greenweed.

Dy-ers-burg (dī'ərz-bûrg') A city of northwest Tennessee north-northeast of Memphis. It is a manufacturing and processing center. Population 16,317.

dy-er's greenweed (dī'ərz grēn'wēd') n. A small Eurasian shrub (Genista tinctoria) having clusters of yellow flowers that yield a dye. Also called dyer's broom, woadwaxen, woodwaxen.

dyer's rocket (dī'ərz rōk'īt) n. A European plant (Reseda luteola) having long spikes of small, yellowish-green flowers and yielding a yellow dye. Also called *weld*² dy-er's-weed (dī'ərz-wēd') n. Any of various plants yielding coloring matter used as dye.

dye-stuff (dī'stuf') n. See dye (n., sense 1).

dye-wood (dī'wōod') n. A wood used as a dyestuff.

dy-ing (dī'ing) v. Present participle of die¹. — adj. 1. About to die: dying patients. 2. Drawing to an end; declining: in the dying hours of the legislative session. 3. Done or uttered just before death: a dying request.

dyke¹ (dik) n. & v. Variant of dike¹.

dyke² (dik) also dike n. Offensive Slang. Used as a disparaging term for a lesbian. [Origin unknown.]

Dy-lan (dīl'ən), Bob. Born 1941. American musician who drew on blues, country and western, and folk music to create distinctive protest music in the 1960's. His song “Blowin' in the Wind” became an anthem of the civil rights movement.

dyn abbr. Physics. Dyne.

dy-nam-ic (dī-nām'ik) adj. also dy-nam-i-cal (-i-kəl) 1. a. Of or relating to energy or to objects in motion. b. Of or relating to the study of dynamics.

2. Characterized by continuous change, activity, or progress: a dynamic market.

3. Marked by intensity and vigor; forceful. See Synonyms at active. 4. Of or relating to variation of intensity, as in musical sound. — n. 1. An interactive system or process, especially one involving competing or conflicting forces: “the story of a malign dynamic between white prejudice and black autonomy” (Edmund S. Morgan). 2. A force, especially political, social, or psychological: the main dynamic behind the revolution. [French dynamique, ultimately from Greek dunamikos, powerful, from dunamis, power, from dunasthai, to be able. See deu-² in Appendix.] —dy·nam’i-cal·ly adv.

dynamic headroom (dī-nām’ik hĕd’rōōm’) n. Electronics. The capacity of an amplifier to reproduce unusually strong signals without distortion.

dy·nam·ics (dī-nām’iks) n. 1. a. (used with a sing. verb). The branch of mechanics that is concerned with the effects of forces on the motion of a body or system of bodies, especially of forces that do not originate within the system itself. Also called kinetics b. (used with a pl. verb). The forces and motions that characterize a system: The dynamics of ocean waves are complex. 2. (used with a pl. verb). The social, intellectual, or moral forces that produce activity and change in a given sphere: The dynamics of international trade have influenced our business decisions on this matter. 3. (used with a pl. verb). Variation in force or intensity, especially in musical sound: “The conductor tended to overpower her with aggressive dynamics” (Thor Eckert, Jr.). 4. (used with a sing. verb). Psychodynamics.

dy·na·mism (dī’nə-mīz’əm) n. 1. Any of various theories or philosophical systems that explain the universe in terms of force or energy. 2. A process or mechanism responsible for the development or motion of a system.

3. Continuous change, activity, or progress; vigor. [French dynamisme, from Greek dunamis, power. See DYNAMIC.] —dy’na·mist n. —dy’na·mis’tic adj.

dy·na·mite (dī’nə-mīt’) n. 1. Any of a class of powerful explosives composed of nitroglycerin or ammonium nitrate dispersed in an absorbent medium with a combustible dope, such as wood pulp, and an antacid, such as calcium carbonate, used in blasting and mining. 2. Slang. a. Something exceptionally exciting or wonderful. b. Something exceptionally dangerous: These allegations are political dynamite. — v. tr. dy·na·mit·ed, dy·na·mit·ing, dy·na·mites. 1. To blow up, shatter, or otherwise destroy with or as if with dynamite. 2. To charge with dynamite. — adj. Slang. Outstanding; superb: a dynamite performance; a dynamite outfit. [Swedish dynamit, from Greek dunamis, power. See DYNAMIC.] —dy’na·mit’er n.

WORD HISTORY: The same man who gave us dynamite gave us the Nobel Peace Prize, an irony that was surely not lost on the pacifistic Alfred Nobel himself. It is perhaps less well known that Nobel also contributed the word dynamite. Coined in Swedish in the form dynamit, the word was taken from Greek dunamis, “power,” and the Swedish suffix -it, which corresponds to our suffix -ite used in various scientific fields. Greek dunamis also gave us words such as dynamic and dynamo and itself probably goes back to the verb dunasthai, “to be able,” from which comes dynasty.

dy·na·mo (dī'nə-mō') n. pl. dy·na·mos. 1. A generator, especially one for producing direct current. 2. An extremely energetic and forceful person: a vice president who was the real dynamo of the corporation. [Short for dynamoelectric machine.] dy·na·mo·e·lec·tric (dī'nə-mō'ī-lĕk'trĭk) also dy·na·mo·e·lec·tri·cal (-trĭ-kəl) adj. Of or relating to the conversion of mechanical energy to electrical energy or vice versa. [Greek dunamis, power; see DYNAMIC + ELECTRIC.]

dy·na·mom·e·ter (dī'nə-mōm'ī-tər) n. Any of several instruments used to measure mechanical power. [French dynamomètre: Greek dunamis, power; see DYNAMIC + -mètre, -meter.] —dy·na·mo·met'ric (-mō-mĕt'rĭk), dy·na·mo·met'ri·cal (-rĭ-kəl) adj. —dy·na·mom'e·try n.

dy·na·mo·tor (dī'nə-mō'tər) n. A rotating electric machine with two armatures, used to convert alternating current to direct current. [Greek dunamis, power; see DYNAMIC + MOTOR.]

dy·nast (dī'näst', -nəst) n. A ruler, especially a hereditary one. [Latin dynastēs, from Greek dunastēs, lord, from dunasthai, to be able. See deu² in Appendix.]

dy·nas·ty (dī'nə-stē) n. pl. dy·nas·ties. 1. A succession of rulers from the same family or line. 2. A family or group that maintains power for several generations: a political dynasty controlling the state. [Middle English dynastie, from Old French, from Late Latin dynastiā, lordship, from Greek dunasteia, from dunastēs, lord. See DYNAST.] —dy·nas'tic (dī-nās'tĭk) adj. —dy·nas'ti·cal·ly adv.

dy·na·tron (dī'nə-trŏn') n. Electronics. A tetrode with grid and plate potentials so arranged that plate current decreases when plate potential increases. [Greek dunamis, power; see DYNAMIC + -TRON.]

dyne (dĭn) n. Abbr. dyn A centimeter-gram-second unit of force, equal to the force required to impart an acceleration of one centimeter per second per second to a mass of one gram. [From Greek dunamis, power. See DYNAMIC.]

Dy·nel (dī-nĕl') A trademark used for a copolymer of vinyl chloride and acrylonitrile employed in making fire-resistant, insect-resistant, easily dyed textile fiber.

dy·node (dī'nōd') n. An electrode used in certain electron tubes to provide secondary emission. [Greek dunamis, power; see DYNAMIC + -ODE.]

dys- pref. 1. Abnormal: dysplasia. 2. a. Impaired: dysgraphia. b. Difficult: dysphonia. 3. Bad: dyslogistic. [Latin dys-, bad, from Greek dus-. See dus- in Appendix.]

dys-cal-cu-li-a (dīs'kāl-kyōō'lē-ə) n. Impairment of the ability to solve mathematical problems, usually resulting from brain dysfunction. [DYS- + CALCUL(ATE) + -IA¹.]

dys-cra-sia (dīs-krā'zhə, -zhē-ə) n. An abnormal bodily condition, especially of the blood. [Medieval Latin, bad mixture, disease, from Greek duskrasia : dus-, dys- + krasis, mixing; see kerə- in Appendix.]

dys-en-ter-y (dīs'ən-tēr'ē) n. An inflammatory disorder of the lower intestinal tract, usually caused by a bacterial, parasitic, or protozoan infection and resulting in pain, fever, and severe diarrhea, often accompanied by the passage of blood and mucus. [Middle English dissenterie, from Old French, from Latin dysenteria, from Greek dusenteria : dus-, dys- + enteron, intestine; see en in Appendix.]

—dys'en-ter'ic adj.

dys-func-tion also dis-func-tion (dīs-fūŋk'shən) n. Abnormal or impaired functioning, especially of a bodily system or organ. —dys-func'tion-al adj.

dys-gen-e-sis (dīs-jěn'ī-sīs) n. Defective or abnormal development of an organ, especially of the gonads.

dys-gen-ic (dīs-jěn'ik) adj. Relating to or causing the deterioration of hereditary qualities in offspring.

dys-gen-ics (dīs-jěn'iks) n. (used with a sing. verb). The biological study of the factors producing degeneration in offspring, especially of a particular race or species.

dys-graph-ia (dīs-grăf'ē-ə) n. Impairment of the ability to write, usually caused by brain dysfunction or disease. [New Latin : DYS- + Greek -graphia, -graphy.] —dys-graph'ic adj.

dys-ki-ne-sia (dīs'kə-nē'zhə, -kī-) n. An impairment in the ability to control movements, characterized by spasmodic or repetitive motions or lack of coordination.

dys-lex-i-a (dīs-lĕk'sē-ə) n. A learning disorder marked by impairment of the ability to recognize and comprehend written words. [New Latin : DYS- + Greek lexis, speech (from legein, to speak); see leg- in Appendix.] —dys-lex'tic (-lĕk'tik) n.

dys-lex-ic (dīs-lĕk'sik) n. A person who is affected by dyslexia. — adj. Of or relating to dyslexia.

dys-lo-gis-tic (dīs'lə-jīs'tik) adj. Conveying censure. [DYS- + (EU)LOGISTIC.] —dys'lo-gis'ti-cal-ly adv.

dys-men-or-rhe-a also dys-men-or-rhoe-a (dīs-mĕn'ə-rĕ'ə) n. Painful menstruation. [New Latin : DYS- + Greek mĕn, month; see mĕ-² in Appendix + -RRHEA.] —dys-men'or-rhe'al (-rĕ'al), dys-men'or-rhe'ic (-rĕ'ik) adj.

dys-pep-sia (dīs-pĕp'shə, -sē-ə) n. Disturbed digestion; indigestion. [Latin, from Greek duspepsia : dus-, dys- + -pepsia, digestion; see pek^w- in Appendix.]

dys-pep-tic (dīs-pĕp'tĭk) adj. 1. Relating to or having dyspepsia. 2. Of or displaying a morose disposition. — n. A person who is affected by dyspepsia.

—dys-pep'ti-cal-ly adv.

dys-pha-gia (dīs-fā'jə, -jĕ-ə) n. Difficulty in swallowing. —dys-phag'ic (-fāj'ĭk) adj.

dys-pha-sia (dīs-fā'zhə, -zhĕ-ə) n. Impairment of speech and verbal comprehension, especially when associated with brain injury. —dys-pha'sic (-zĭk) adj. & n.

dys-pho-ni-a (dīs-fō'nĕ-ə) n. Difficulty in speaking, usually evidenced by hoarseness. [New Latin : DYS- + Greek -phōnia, -phony.] —dys-phon'ic (-fōn'ĭk) adj.

dys-pho-ri-a (dīs-fōr'ĕ-ə, -fōr'-) n. An emotional state characterized by anxiety, depression, and restlessness. [New Latin, from Greek dusphoria, distress, from dusphoros, hard to bear : dus-, dys- + -phoros, -phorous.] —dys-phor'ic (-fōr'ĭk, -fōr'-) adj.

dys-pla-sia (dīs-plā'zhə, -zhĕ-ə) n. Abnormal development or growth of tissues, organs, or cells. —dys-plas'tic (-plās'tĭk) adj.

dysp-ne-a (dĭsp-nĕ'ə) n. Difficulty in breathing, often associated with lung or heart disease and resulting in shortness of breath. Also called air hunger [Latin dyspnoea, from Greek duspnoia : dus-, dys- + pnoia, breathing; see pneu- in Appendix.] —dysp-ne'ic (-nĕ'ĭk) adj.

dys-pro-si-um (dīs-prō'zĕ-əm, -zhĕ-əm) n. Symbol Dy A soft, silvery rare-earth element used in nuclear research. Atomic number 66; atomic weight 162.50; melting point 1,407°C; boiling point 2,600°C; specific gravity 8.536; valence 3. [New Latin, from Greek dusprositos, difficult to approach : dus-, dys- + prositos, approachable (from prosiēnai, to approach : pros-, toward + ienai, i-, to go); see ei- in Appendix.]

dys-rhyth-mi-a (dīs-rĭth'mĕ-ə) n. An abnormality in an otherwise normal rhythmic pattern, as of brain waves being recorded by an electroencephalograph. [New Latin : DYS- + Latin rythmus, rhythm; see RHYTHM.]

dys-tel-e-ol-o-gy (dīs-tĕl'ĕ-ōl'ə-jĕ, -tĕ'lĕ-) n. 1. The doctrine of purposelessness in nature. 2. Purposelessness in natural structures, as manifested by the existence of vestigial or nonfunctional organs or parts. —dys-tel'e-ol'o-g'ic-al (-ə-lŏj'ĭ-kəl) adj. —dys-tel'e-ol'o-gist n.

dys-to-pi-a (dīs-tō'pĕ-ə) n. 1. An imaginary place or state in which the condition of life is extremely bad, as from deprivation, oppression, or terror. 2. A work describing such a place or state: “dystopias such as Brave New World” (Times Literary Supplement). [DYS- + (U)TOPIA.]

dys-to-pi-an (dīs-tō'pĕ-ən) adj. 1. Of or relating to a dystopia. 2. Dire; grim: “AIDS is one of the dystopian harbingers of the global village” (Susan Sontag).

dys-tro-phi-a (dĭ-strō'fĕ-ə) n. Variant of dystrophy.

dys·troph·ic (dī-strōf'ik, -strō'fik) adj. 1. Medicine. Of, relating to, or afflicted with dystrophy. 2. Ecology. Having brownish acidic waters, a high concentration of humic matter, and a small plant population. Used of a lake or pond.
—dys'tro·phi·ca'tion (dīs'trə-fī-kā'shən) n.

dys·tro·phy (dīs'trə-fē) also dys·tro·phi·a (dī-strō'fē-ə) n. 1. A degenerative disorder caused by inadequate or defective nutrition. 2. Any of several disorders, especially muscular dystrophy, in which the muscles weaken and atrophy.

3. Ecology. The condition of being dystrophic.

dys·u·ri·a (dīs-yōr'ē-ə) n. Painful or difficult urination. [Middle English dissure, dissuria, from Old French dissure, from Medieval Latin dissuria, from Late Latin dysūria, from Greek dusouria : dus-, dys- + -ouria, -uria.] —dys·u'ric (-yōr'ik) adj.

dz. abbr. Dozen.

Dzer·shinsk (dər-zhīnsk', dzīr-) A city of west-central Russia on the Oka River west of Kazan. It is an industrial center. Population, 274,000.

Dzham·bul (jä-m-bōol') A city of south-central Kazakhstan near the Kirghiz border. Founded in the seventh century, it was ruled by Turks in the eighth and ninth centuries and passed to Russia in 1864. Population, 303,000.

Dzun·gar·i·a (dzōng-gâr'ē-ə, zōng-) A vast historical region of northwest China. It was a Mongol kingdom from the 11th to the 14th century and was conquered by the Chinese in the 1750's.

e¹ or E (ē) n. pl. e's or E's. 1. The fifth letter of the modern English alphabet. 2. Any of the speech sounds represented by the letter e. 3. The fifth in a series. 4. Music. a. The third tone in the scale of C major or the fifth tone in the relative minor scale. b. A key or scale in which E is the tonic. c. A written or printed note representing this tone. d. A string, key, or pipe tuned to the pitch of this tone. 5. E. A grade that indicates excellence in achievement or quality. 6. e. Mathematics. The base of the natural system of logarithms, having a numerical value of approximately 2.7183.

e² abbr. 1. Electron. 2. Or e. Baseball. Error.

E abbr. 1. Or E. also e. or e. East. 2. Or E. English.

e. or E. abbr. Engineer; engineering.

E. abbr. Earl.

each (ēch) adj. Abbr. ea. Being one of two or more considered individually; every: Each person cast a vote. My technique improved with each lesson. — pron. Every one of a group considered individually; each one. — adv. For or to each one; apiece: ten cents each. [Middle English ech, from Old English ǣlc. See lik- in Appendix.]

USAGE NOTE: The traditional rule holds that when the subject of a sentence begins with each, it is grammatically singular, and the verb and following pronouns must be singular as well: Each of the suites has (not have) its (not their) own private entrance (not entrances). When each follows a plural subject, however, the verb and subsequent pronouns remain in the plural: The suites each have their own private entrances (not has its own private entrance). An exception is made when each follows the verb with a first-person plural subject: one may say either We boys have each our own room or We boys have each his own room, though the latter form is somewhat stilted in modern use. • The expression each and every is likewise followed by a singular verb and singular pronoun in formal style: Each and every driver knows (not know) what his or her (not their) job is to be. See Usage Note at every. See Usage Note at he¹.

each other (ēch ūth'ər) pron. Each the other. Used to indicate that a relationship or an action is reciprocal among the members of the set referred to by the antecedent: The boys like each other.

USAGE NOTE: It is often maintained that each other should be used to denote a reciprocal relation between two entities, with one another reserved for more than two: thus The twins dislike each other but The triplets dislike one another. Sixty-four percent of the Usage Panel says that they follow this rule in their own writing. But it should be pointed out that many reputable writers from Johnson onward have ignored the rule and that the use of each other for more than two, or of one another for two, cannot be considered incorrect. In particular, there are contexts in which each other and one another are subtly different in meaning. When speaking of an ordered series of events or stages, one another is the preferred form. Thus the sentence The waiters followed one another into the room was preferred by 73 percent of the Usage Panel to the sentence The waiters followed each other into the room. • Each other should not be used as the subject of a clause in writing. Instead of We always know what each other is thinking, one should write Each of us knows what the other is thinking. • The possessive forms of each other and one another are written each other's and one another's: The boys wore each other's (not each others') coats. They had forgotten one another's (not one anothers') names.

Eads (ēdz), James Buchanan. 1820-1887. American engineer who produced ironclad steamships, bridged the Mississippi River at St. Louis (1874), and improved the navigability of the mouth of the Mississippi.

Eagan (ē'gən) A city of eastern Minnesota, a suburb of Minneapolis-St. Paul. Population, 20,700.

ea-ger¹ (ē'gər) adj. ea-ger-er, ea-ger-est. 1. Having or showing keen interest, intense desire, or impatient expectancy. See Usage Note at anxious. 2. Obsolete. Tart; sharp; cutting. [Middle English eger, sour, sharp, impetuous, from Anglo-Norman egre, from Latin ācer. See ak- in Appendix.] —ea'ger-ly adv.
—ea'ger-ness n.

SYNONYMS: eager, avid, keen, agog. These adjectives mean animated by or showing great interest or desire. Eager suggests intensity of interest and impatient desire: eager to travel abroad; eager to learn. Avid implies ardent desire and unbounded craving: has an avid ambition to succeed; an avid sports fan. Keen suggests acuteness or intensity of interest or emotional drive: takes keen pleasure in music. Agog implies a state of heightened anticipation: The prospect of Christmas left the children agog.

ea-ger² (ē'gər, ā'-) n. Variant of eagre.

eager beaver (ē'gər bē'vər) n. Informal. One that is exceptionally, often excessively industrious or zealous: "The eager beavers of industry seldom reach their potential, much less rise to the top" (Newsweek). —ea'ger-bea'ver (ē'gər-bē'vər) adj.

ea-gle (ē'gəl) n. 1. Any of various large diurnal birds of prey of the family Accipitridae, including members of the genera Aquila and Haliaeetus, characterized by a powerful hooked bill, keen vision, long broad wings, and strong, soaring flight. 2. A representation of an eagle used as an emblem or insignia. 3. A gold coin formerly used in the United States, stamped with an eagle on the reverse side and having a face value of ten dollars. 4. Sports. A golf score of two strokes under par on a hole. — v. ea-gled, ea-gling, ea-gles. Sports. — v. tr. To shoot (a hole in golf) in two strokes under par. — v. intr. To score an eagle in golf. [Middle English egle, from Anglo-Norman, from Old Provençal aigla, from Latin aquila.]

ea-gle-eyed (ē'gəl-īd') adj. 1. Having keen eyesight. 2. Showing close attention to detail; perceptive: an eagle-eyed accountant who monitored every expense.

eagle owl (ē'gəl ɔul) n. A large Eurasian owl (Bubo bubo) having brownish plumage and prominent ear tufts.

Ea-gle Pass (ē'gəl päs) A city of southwest Texas on the Rio Grande west-southwest of San Antonio. It was a way station on the route to California during the gold rush of 1848-1849. Population, 20,651.

eagle ray (ē'gəl rā) n. Any of numerous rays of the family Myliobatidae, found worldwide in tropical and subtropical shallow seas and noted for their massive jaws and large winglike pectoral fins, which they flap for propulsion.

Eagle Scout (ē'gəl skout) n. One who has achieved the highest rank in the Boy Scouts.

ea-glet (ē'glīt) n. A young eagle.

ea-gre also ea-ger (ē'gær, ā'gær) n. See bore³. [Origin unknown.]

Ea-kins (ā'kīnz), Thomas. 1844-1916. American painter known for highly realistic works, such as Max Schmitt in a Single Scull (1871).

eal-dor-man (ôl'dər-mən) n. The chief magistrate of a district in Anglo-Saxon England. [Old English. See ALDERMAN.]

Eames (ēmz), Charles. 1907-1978. American designer noted for an innovative series of chairs made of aluminum tubing and molded plywood.

Eames chair (ēmz châr) n. A functional chair, originally of molded plywood, with seat and back pieces shaped to the contours of the human body. [After Charles EAMES.]

ear¹ (îr) n. 1. Anatomy. a. The vertebrate organ of hearing, responsible for maintaining equilibrium as well as sensing sound and divided in mammals into the external ear, the middle ear, and the inner ear. b. The part of this organ that is externally visible. 2. An invertebrate organ analogous to the mammalian ear. 3. The sense of hearing: a sound that grates on the ear. 4. Sensitivity or receptiveness to sound, especially: a. Sharpness or refinement of hearing: a singer with a good ear for harmony. b. The ability to retain and reproduce a passage of music: plays the piano by ear. c. Responsiveness to the sounds or forms of spoken language: a writer with a good ear for dialogue; has an ear for foreign languages. 5. Sympathetic or favorable attention: “[The President] wavers between the two positions, depending on who last had his ear” (Joseph C. Harsch). 6. Something resembling the external ear in position or shape, especially: a. A flexible tuft of feathers located above the eyes of certain birds, such as owls, that functions in visual communication but not in hearing. Also called ear tuft b. A projecting handle, as on a vase or pitcher. 7. A small box in the upper corner of the page in a newspaper or periodical that contains a printed notice, such as promotional material or weather information. 8. ears. Informal. Headphones. —idioms. all ears. Informal. Acutely attentive: If you want to tell your story, we're all ears. give an ear (or lend an ear). To pay close attention; listen attentively. have an ear to the ground (or keep an ear to the ground). To be on the watch for new trends or information. in one ear and out the other. Without any influence or effect; unheeded: Since his mind was already made up, my arguments went in one ear and out the other. on its ear (or on someone's ear). In a state of amazement, excitement, or uproar: a controversial film that set the entertainment world on its ear. play it by ear. Informal. To act according to the circumstances; improvise: "He plays his negotiations by ear, going into them with no clear or fixed plan" (George F. Kennan). up to (one's) ears. Informal. Deeply involved or committed: I'm up to my ears in work. [Middle English ere, from Old English ēare. See ous- in Appendix.] —ear'less adj.

ear² (îr) n. The seed-bearing spike of a cereal plant, such as corn. — v. intr. eared, ear-ing, ears. To form or grow ears. [Middle English ere, from Old English ēar. See ak- in Appendix.]

ear-ache (îr'āk') n. Pain in the ear; otalgia.

ear-bob (îr'bōb') n. Chiefly Southern U.S. See earring.

ear canal (îr kə-nāl') n. The narrow, tubelike passage through which sound enters the ear. Also called external auditory canal ear candy (îr kănd'ed) n. Informal. A light, often short piece of music considered to be pleasing.

ear-drop (îr'drōp') n. 1. An earring, especially one with a pendant.

2. eardrops. Liquid medicine administered into the ear.

ear-drum (îr'drūm') n. Anatomy. The thin, semitransparent, oval-shaped membrane that separates the middle ear from the external ear. Also called tympanic membrane, tympanum.

eared (îrd) adj. 1. Having ears or earlike projections. 2. Having a specified kind or number of ears. Often used in combination: a lop-eared puppy.

eared seal (îrd sēl) n. Any of various seals of the family Otariidae, which includes the sea lions and fur seals, characterized by external ears, earlike front flippers, and hind flippers that can be turned forward for walking on land.

ear-flap (îr'flăp') n. A flap attached to a cap that may be turned down to cover the ears. Also called earlap ear-ful (îr'fōōl') n. 1. An abundant or excessive amount of something heard, such as talk or music. 2. Gossip, especially of an intimate or scandalous nature. 3. A scolding or reprimand.

Ear-hart (âr'hărt'), Amelia. 1897?-1937. American aviator who was the first woman to fly solo across the Atlantic Ocean (1932) and from Hawaii to California (1935). While attempting to fly around the world, she crashed in the Pacific Ocean (1937) and was never found.

ear-ing (îr'îng) n. Nautical. A short line attaching an upper corner of a sail to the yard. [Perhaps from EAR¹.]

earl (ûrl) n. Abbr. E. 1. A British nobleman next in rank above a viscount and below a marquis, corresponding to a count in continental Europe. 2. Used as a title for such a nobleman. [Middle English erl, nobleman of high rank, from Old English eorl.]

ear-lap (îr'lăp') n. See earflap.

earl-dom (ûrl'dəm) n. 1. The rank or title of an earl. 2. The territory of an earl.

ear-less seal (îr'lîs sēl) n. Any of various seals of the family Phocidae, which includes the hair seals, characterized by short fore flippers, reduced hind flippers specialized for swimming, and the absence of external ears. Also called true seal ear-lobe also ear lobe (îr'lōb') n. The soft, fleshy, pendulous lower part of the external ear.

ear-ly (ûr'lē) adj. ear-li-er, ear-li-est. 1. Of or occurring near the beginning of a given series, period of time, or course of events: in the early morning; scored two runs in the early innings. 2. a. Of or belonging to a previous or remote period of time: the early inhabitants of the British Isles. b. Of or belonging to an initial stage of development: an early form of life; an early computer. 3. Occurring, developing, or appearing before the expected or usual time: an early spring; an early retirement. 4. Maturing or developing relatively soon: an early variety of tomato. 5. Occurring in the near future: Observers predicted an early end to the negotiations. — adv. ear-lier, ear-liest. 1. Near the beginning of a given series, period of time, or course of events: departed early in the day; scored important victories early in the campaign. 2. At or during a remote or initial period: decided very early to go into medicine. 3. Before the expected or usual time: arrived at the meeting a few minutes early. 4. Soon in relation to others of its kind: a rose that was cultivated to bloom early. [Middle English erli, from Old English ærlīce: *æ*r, before; see ayer- in Appendix + -lice, adv. suff.; see -LY².] — ear/li-ness n.

Ear-ly (ûr'lē), Jubal Anderson. 1816-1894. American Confederate general whose forces threatened Washington, D.C. (1864) but were ultimately defeated by Union troops led by Philip H. Sheridan (1865).

early bird (ûr'lē bûrd) n. Informal. 1. A person who arises early in the morning. 2. One that arrives or takes place early or before others. [From the expression "The early bird catches the worm."] — ear/ly-bird' (ûr'lē-bûrd') adj.

early on (ûr'lē ōn) adv. At an early stage or point: "Early on, [he] found that being honest and being funny were almost the same thing" (Maureen Orth).

early warning radar (ûr'lē wôr'nîng rā'där) n. Radar based at the boundary of a defended area to detect incoming enemy missiles or aircraft in time to allow deployment of a countermeasure.

early warning system (ûr'lē wôr'nîng sîs'təm) n. 1. A network of sensing devices, such as satellites or radar, for detecting an enemy attack in time to take defensive or counteroffensive measures. 2. A system or procedure designed to warn of a potential or an impending problem.

ear-mark (îr'märk') n. 1. An identifying feature or characteristic: a novel with all the earmarks of success. 2. An identifying mark on the ear of a domestic animal. — v. tr. ear-marked, ear-mark-ing, ear-marks. 1. To reserve or set aside for a particular purpose. See Synonyms at allocate. 2. To place an identifying or distinctive mark on. 3. To mark the ear of (a domestic animal) for identification.

ear-muff (îr'müf') n. Either of a pair of ear coverings often attached to an adjustable headband and worn to protect the ears especially against the cold.

earn¹ (ûrn) v. tr. earned, earn-ing, earns. 1. To gain especially for the performance of service, labor, or work: earned money by mowing lawns. 2. To acquire or deserve as a result of effort or action: She earned a reputation as a hard worker. 3. To yield as return or profit: a savings account that earns interest on deposited funds. —idiom. earn (one's) spurs. To gain a position through hard work and the accumulation of experience, often in the face of difficulties: a diplomat who had earned his spurs as the prime minister's personal assistant. [Middle English ernen, from Old English earnian.] —earn'er n.

SYNONYMS: earn, deserve, merit, rate, win. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to gain as a result of one’s behavior or effort”: earns a large salary; deserves our congratulations; a suggestion that merits consideration; an event that didn’t even rate a mention in the news; a candidate who won wide support.

earn² (ûrn) v. intr. earned, earn-ing, earns. Obsolete. To yearn. [Middle English ernen, variant of yernen. See YEARN.] earned run (ûrnd rûn) n. Baseball. A run scored without the aid of an error, used in computing earned run averages.

earned run average (ûrnd rûn äv'ər-ĭj) n. Abbr. ERA Baseball. A measure of a pitcher’s performance obtained by dividing the total of earned runs allowed by the total of innings pitched and multiplying by nine.

ear-nest¹ (ûr'nĭst) adj. 1. Marked by or showing deep sincerity or seriousness: an earnest gesture of goodwill. 2. Of an important or weighty nature; grave. See Synonyms at serious. —idiom. in earnest. 1. With a purposeful or sincere intent: settled down to study in earnest for the examination. 2. Serious; determined: “Both sides are deeply in earnest, with passions that approximate those of civil war” (Conor Cruise O’Brien). [Middle English ernest, from Old English eornoste. See er¹ in Appendix.] —ear/nest·ly adv. —ear/nest·ness n.

ear·nest² (ûr’nist) n. 1. Money paid in advance as part payment to bind a contract or bargain. 2. A token of something to come; a promise or an assurance. [Middle English ernest, variant of ernes, alteration of Old French erres, pl. of erre, pledge, from Latin arra, alteration of arrabō, from Greek arrabōn, earnest-money, from Hebrew ‘ērābôn, from ‘ārab, to pledge.]

earn·ings (ûr’ningz) pl.n. 1. Salary or wages. 2. a. Business profits. b. Gains from investments.

Earp (ûrp), Wyatt. 1848-1929. American frontier law officer involved in the famous gunfight at the O.K. Corral in Tombstone, Arizona (1881).

ear·phone (îr’fōn’) n. A device that converts electric signals, as from a telephone, stereo, or radio receiver, to audible sound and fits over or in the ear. Also called earpiece ear·piece (îr’pēs’) n. 1. A part, as of a telephone receiver or hearing aid, that fits in or is held next to the ear. 2. See earphone. 3. Either of the two parts of an eyeglasses frame that extend over or around the ear.

ear·plug (îr’plūg’) n. 1. An object made of a soft, pliable material, such as cotton or rubber, and fitted into the ear canal to block the entry of water or sound. 2. An earphone, especially one that fits into the ear.

ear·ring (îr’rīng, îr’īng) n. An ornament worn on or pendent from the ear, especially the earlobe. Regional. Also called earbob ear rot (îr röt) n. Any of various fungus diseases of corn characterized by decay and molding of the ears.

ear sew·er (îr sō’ær) n. Northern California. See dragonfly. See Regional note at dragonfly.

ear shell (îr shĕl) n. 1. See abalone. 2. The shell of the abalone. [From its shape.]

ear·shot (îr’shöt’) n. The range within which sound can be heard by the unaided ear; hearing distance: listened until the parade was out of earshot.

ear·split·ting (îr’split’īng) adj. Loud and shrill enough to hurt the ears. See Synonyms at loud.

earth (ûrth) n. 1. a. The land surface of the world. b. The softer, friable part of land; soil, especially productive soil. 2. Often Earth. The third planet from the sun, having a sidereal period of revolution about the sun of 365.26 days at a mean distance of approximately 149 million kilometers (92.96 million miles), an axial rotation period of 23 hours 56.07 minutes, an average radius of 6,374 kilometers (3,959 miles), and a mass of approximately 5.974×10^{24} kilograms (13.17×10^{24} pounds). 3. The realm of mortal existence; the temporal world. 4. The human inhabitants of the world: The earth received the news with joy. 5. a. Worldly affairs and pursuits. b. Everyday life; reality: was brought back to earth from his daydreams of wealth and fame. 6. The substance of the human body; clay.

7. The lair of a burrowing animal. 8. Chiefly British. The ground of an electrical circuit. 9. Chemistry. Any of several metallic oxides, such as alumina or zirconia, that are difficult to reduce and were formerly regarded as elements. — v.

earthed, earth-ing, earths. — v. tr. 1. To cover or heap (plants) with soil for protection. 2. To chase (an animal) into an underground hiding place. — v. intr. To burrow or hide in the ground. Used of a hunted animal. — idiom. on earth. Among all the possibilities: Why on earth did you put on that outfit? [Middle English erthe, from Old English eorthe. See er² in Appendix.]

earth art (ûrth ärt) n. The art of altering the natural environment to create earthworks.

earth-born (ûrth'bôrn') adj. 1. a. Springing from or born on the earth. b. Human; mortal: earthborn existence. 2. Of or connected with earthly life: earthborn pleasures.

earth-bound also earth-bound (ûrth'bound') adj. 1. Fastened in or to the soil: earthbound roots. 2. a. Attached or confined to the earth or to earthly concerns: an earthbound existence. b. Unimaginative; ordinary. 3. Headed for the earth: an earthbound meteor.

earth-en (ûr'thən, -thən) adj. 1. Made of earth or clay: an earthen fortification; an earthen pot. 2. Earthly; worldly.

earth-en-ware (ûr'thən-wâr', -thən-) n. Pottery made from a porous clay that is fired at relatively low temperatures. Faience, delft, and majolica are examples of earthenware.

earth-light (ûrth'līt') n. See earthshine.

earth-ling (ûrth'līng) n. 1. One, especially a human being, that inhabits the planet Earth. 2. A person devoted to the world; a worldling.

earth-ly (ûrth'lē) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or characteristic of this earth. 2. a. Terrestrial; not heavenly or divine: earthly existence. b. Worldly: earthly delights; one's earthly possessions. 3. Conceivable; possible: no earthly meaning whatever. — earth/li-ness n.

earth-man (ûrth'măn') n. A human inhabitant of the planet Earth; an earthling.

earth mother (ûrth mûth'ər) n. 1. A goddess or female spirit representing the earth as the giver of life; a fertility goddess. 2. A woman combining maternal and sensual qualities.

earth-mov-er (ûrth'mōō'vər) n. A machine, such as a bulldozer or backhoe, that is used for digging or pushing earth. — earth/mov'ing adj.

earth-nut (ûrth'nût') n. 1. a. A Eurasian and northern African plant (Conopodium denudatum) having tuberous roots that are edible when roasted. b. The tuber of this plant. 2. Any of various other plants, such as the peanut, similar to the earthnut.

earthquake (ûrth/'kwāk') n. A sudden movement of the earth's crust caused by the release of stress accumulated along geologic faults or by volcanic activity.

Also called seism, temblor.

earth-rise (ûrth/'rīz') n. The rising of the earth above the horizon as seen from the moon.

earth science (ûrth sī'əns) n. Any of several essentially geologic sciences that are concerned with the origin, structure, and physical phenomena of the earth.

earth-shak-ing (ûrth/'shā'kīng) adj. Of great consequence or importance.

—earth'shak'ing-ly adv.

earth-shine (ûrth/'shīn') n. The sunlight reflected from the earth's surface that illuminates part of the moon not directly lighted by the sun. Also called earthlight earth smoke (ûrth smōk) n. Botany. See fumitory. [Translation of Medieval Latin fūmus terrae. See FUMITORY.]

earth-star (ûrth/'stār') n. A fungus of the genus Geastrum, related to and resembling the puffballs and having an outer covering that splits open in a star-like form.

earth station (ûrth stā'shən) n. An on-ground terminal linked to a spacecraft or satellite by an antenna and associated electronic equipment for the purpose of transmitting or receiving messages, tracking, or control.

earth tone (ûrth tōn) n. Any of various rich, warm tones of brown.

earth-ward (ûrth/'wərd) adv. & adj. To or toward the earth. —earth'wards adv.

earth-work (ûrth/'wûrk') n. 1. An earthen embankment, especially one used as a fortification. See Synonyms at bulwark. 2. Engineering. Excavation and embankment of earth. 3. A work of art made by altering an area of land or a natural geographic feature, especially on a large scale.

earth-worm (ûrth/'wûrm') n. Any of various terrestrial annelid worms of the class Oligochaeta, especially those of the family Lumbricidae, that burrow into and help aerate and enrich soil.

earth-y (ûr/'thē) adj. earth-i-er, earth-i-est. 1. Of, relating to, consisting of, or resembling earth: an earthy smell. 2. Relating to or characteristic of this world; worldly. 3. Crude or off-color; indecent: an earthy joke. 4. Hearty or uninhibited; natural: an earthy enjoyment of life. —earth'i-ly adv. —earth'i-ness n.

ear trumpet (îr trūm/'pīt) n. A horn-shaped device formerly used to direct sound into the ear of a hearing-impaired person.

ear tuft (îr tūft) n. See ear¹ (n., sense 6a).

ear-wax (îr/'wăks') n. The yellowish, waxlike secretion of certain glands lining the canal of the external ear. Also called cerumen ear-wig (îr/'wīg') n. Any of various elongate insects of the order Dermaptera, having a pair of pincerlike appendages protruding from the rear of the abdomen.

— v. tr. ear-wigged, ear-wig-ging, ear-wigs. To attempt to influence by persistent confidential argument or talk. [Middle English erwig, from Old English ĕarwicga: ĕare, ear; see EAR¹ + wicga, insect; see wegh- in Appendix.]

WORD HISTORY: In an Anglo-Norman text written around the beginning of the 15th century we are told that elephants guard their ears diligently against flies and earwigs. Elephants have good cause to protect themselves against these insects if, as folklore has it, earwigs go through the ear into the head. The earwig, however, prefers to dine on things such as flowers, fruit, and small insects rather than brain tissue. Folklore is responsible, though, for the insect's name, which was formed in Old English from ĕare, the Old English source of our word ear, and wicga, "insect," a word presumably related to our word wiggle.

ear-worm (îr'wûrm') n. See corn earworm.

ease (ēz) n. 1. The condition of being comfortable or relieved. 2. a. Freedom from pain, worry, or agitation: Her mind was at ease knowing that the children were safe. b. Freedom from constraint or embarrassment; naturalness. See Synonyms at rest¹. 3. a. Freedom from difficulty, hardship, or effort: rose through the ranks with apparent ease. b. Readiness or dexterity in performance; facility: She practiced until she could play the sonata with ease. 4. Freedom from financial difficulty; affluence: a life of luxury and ease. 5. A state of rest, relaxation, or leisure: He took his ease by the swimming pool. — v. eased, eas·ing, eas·es. — v. tr. 1. To free from pain, worry, or agitation: He eased his conscience by returning the stolen money. 2. a. To lessen the discomfort or pain of: She shifted position so as to ease her back. b. To alleviate; assuage: prescribed a drug to ease the pain. 3. To give respite from: eased the burden on her staff by hiring temporary help. 4. To slacken the strain, pressure, or tension of; loosen: ease off a cable. 5. To reduce the difficulty or trouble of: ease credit terms; eased the entrance requirements. 6. To move or maneuver slowly and carefully: eased the car into a narrow space; eased the director out of office. — v. intr. 1. To lessen, as in discomfort, pressure, or stress: pain that never eased. 2. To move or proceed with little effort: eased through life doing as little as possible. — idiom. at ease. 1. In a relaxed position, especially standing silently at rest with the right foot stationary: put the soldiers at ease while waiting for inspection. 2. Used as a command for troops to assume a relaxed position. [Middle English ese, from Old French aise, perhaps from Latin adiacēns, lying near. See ADJACENT.] ease·ful (ēz'fəl) adj. Affording or characterized by comfort and peace; restful. — ease'ful·ly adv. — ease'ful·ness n.

ea·sel (ē'zəl) n. An upright frame for displaying or supporting something, such as an artist's canvas. [Dutch ezel, ass, from Middle Dutch esel, from Latin asellus, diminutive of asinus.]

WORD HISTORY: “A painter’s ass” is not a phrase that immediately brings to mind an accessory to the artist’s profession. But easel comes to us from the Dutch word ezel, meaning “an ass, one of several hoofed mammals of the genus Equus.” The Dutch word was eventually extended to mean “an upright frame for displaying or supporting something, such as an artist’s canvas,” in the same way that the English word horse has come to mean “a piece of gymnastic equipment with an upholstered body used especially for vaulting.” Developments such as these illustrate the playfulness present in language when its speakers use similarities perceived between two objects in order to name one of them. This kind of naming can involve a dash of wit, as is probably the case with the Dutch word ezel. It is certainly the case with the name for a bank of uncovered outdoor seats for spectators. When sitting in the open air in a stadium, one is exposed to the sun just as linens are when they are bleached on a clothesline; thus, bleachers.

- ease·ment (ēz/mənt) n. 1. The act of easing or the condition of being eased. 2. Something that affords ease or comfort. 3. Law. A right, such as a right of way, afforded a person to make limited use of another’s real property.
- eas·i·ly (ē/zə-lē) adv. 1. In an easy manner; with ease. 2. Without question; certainly: easily the best play this season. 3. In all likelihood; well: a mistake that could easily have ended in disaster.
- east (ēst) n. Abbr. E, E., e, e. 1. a. The cardinal point on the mariner’s compass 90° clockwise from due north and directly opposite west. b. The direction of the earth’s axial rotation. 2. An area or a region lying in the east. 3. Often East. a. The eastern part of the earth, especially eastern Asia. b. The eastern part of a region or country. 4. Often East. a. The region of the United States east of the Allegheny Mountains and north of the Mason-Dixon Line. b. The former Communist bloc of countries in Asia and especially in Eastern Europe. — adj. Abbr. E, E., e, e. 1. To, toward, of, facing, or in the east. 2. Originating in or coming from the east: a cool east wind. — adv. Abbr. E, E., e, e. In, from, or toward the east. [Middle English est, from Old English ēast. See aus- in Appendix.]
- East An·gli·a (ēst äng’glē-ə) A region and Anglo-Saxon kingdom of eastern England. Settled by Angles in the late fifth century A.D., it was a powerful kingdom by the late sixth century but became a dependency of Mercia for long periods after 650. The Danes controlled the region from 886 to 917, after which it became an English earldom.
- East A·sia (ēst ā’zhə, ā’shə) A region of Asia coextensive with the Far East. — East A’sian adj. & n.
- East Ber·lin (ēst bûr-lĭn/) See Berlin. — East Ber·lin’er n.
- East Bes·kids (ēst bēs’kĭdz, bēs-kēdz/) See Beskids.
- east·bound (ēst’bound/) adj. Going toward the east.

East-bourne (ēst'bōrn', -bōrn') A borough of southeast England on the English Channel south-southeast of London. It is a popular resort. Population, 77,300.

East Bruns-wick (ēst brūnz'wīk) A community of central New Jersey south of New Brunswick. It is mainly residential. Population, 43,548.

east by north (ēst bī nōrth) n. Abbr. EbN The direction or point on the mariner's compass halfway between due east and east-northeast, or 78°45' east of due north. — adv. & adj. Abbr. EbN Toward or from east by north.

east by south (ēst bī south) n. Abbr. EbS The direction or point on the mariner's compass halfway between due east and east-southeast, or 101°15' east of due north. — adv. & adj. Abbr. EbS Toward or from east by south.

East Cape (ēst kāp) See Cape Dezhnev.

East-ches-ter (ēst'chēs'tər) A community of southeast New York, a residential suburb of New York City. Population, 18,537.

East Chi-ca-go (ēst shī-kā'gō, -kō'-) A city of northwest Indiana on Lake Michigan in the Calumet region south-southeast of Chicago, Illinois. It is an industrial center. Population, 33,892.

East Chi-na Sea (ēst chī'nā sē) An arm of the western Pacific Ocean bounded by China, South Korea, Taiwan, and the Ryukyu and Kyushu islands. It has rich fishing grounds.

East Cleve-land (ēst klēv'lənd) A city of northeast Ohio, a residential suburb of Cleveland. Population, 33,096.

East Coast (ēst kōst) A region of the eastern United States along the Atlantic coastline, especially the urban corridor from Boston to Washington, D.C.

East De-troit (ēst dī-troit') A city of southeast Michigan, a residential suburb of Detroit. Population, 35,283.

East End (ēst ěnd) A section of eastern London north of the Thames River. It was long a densely populated working-class and immigrant area centered around the docks and warehouses, although most of the Victorian-built slums described by Charles Dickens and Henry Mayhew were obliterated by bombing raids during World War II.

Eas-ter (ē'stər) n. 1. A Christian feast commemorating the Resurrection of Jesus. 2. The day on which this feast is observed, the first Sunday following the full moon that occurs on or next after March 21. 3. Eastertide. [Middle English ester, from Old English ēastre. See aus- in Appendix.]

Easter cactus (ē'stər kāk'təs) n. A branching cactus (Rhipsalidopsis gaertneri) having terminal clusters of large, scarlet flowers and arching, flattened branches. [So called because it blooms in the spring.]

Easter egg (ē'stər ěg) n. A dyed or decorated egg, traditionally associated with Easter.

Easter Island (ē'stər ī'lənd) Known locally as Ra-pa Nu-i (rā'pə nōō'ē). An island of Chile in the southern Pacific Ocean about 3,701 km (2,300 mi) west of the mainland. Discovered by Dutch explorers on Easter Day, 1722, the island is famous for its hieroglyphic tablets and colossal heads carved from volcanic rock. The ancient remains, of unknown origin, have inspired many legends and theories.

Easter lily (ē'stər lil'ē) n. Any of various lilies, especially Lilium longiflorum var. eximium, having large, white, trumpet-shaped flowers that bloom in the spring and are displayed during the Easter season. Also called Bermuda lily east·er·ly (ē'stər-lē) adj. 1. Situated toward the east. 2. Coming or being from the east: easterly winds. — n. pl. east·er·lies. A storm or wind coming from the east. —east'er·ly adv.

Easter Monday (ē'stər mūn'dē) n. The Monday following Easter, observed as a holiday in some countries and North Carolina.

east·ern (ē'stərn) adj. 1. Situated in, toward, or facing the east. 2. Coming from the east: eastern breezes. 3. Native to or growing in the east. 4. Often Eastern. Of, relating to, or characteristic of eastern regions or the East.

5. Eastern. a. Of or relating to the Eastern Church. b. Of or relating to the Eastern Orthodox Church. [Middle English estern, from Old English ēasterne. See aus- in Appendix.] —east'ern·ness' n.

eastern camass (ē'stərn kām'əs) n. A bulbous plant (Camassia scilloides) native to the eastern United States, having white, blue, or violet flowers and bright yellow anthers. Also called indigo squill, wild hyacinth.

Eastern Church (ē'stərn chûrch) n. 1. The church of the Byzantine Empire, including the patriarchates of Constantinople, Antioch, Alexandria, and Jerusalem. 2. The Eastern Orthodox Church. 3. Often Eastern church. A Uniat church.

Eastern Empire (ē'stərn ěm'pīr') The Byzantine Empire.

east·ern·er also East·ern·er (ē'stər-nər) n. A native or inhabitant of the east, especially the eastern United States.

Eastern Eu·rope (ē'stərn yōōr'əp) The countries of eastern Europe, especially those that were allied with the U.S.S.R. in the Warsaw Pact (1955-1991).

Eastern Ghats (ē'stərn gôts) See Ghats.

Eastern Hemisphere (ē'stərn hĕm'ĩ-sfīr') The half of the earth comprising Europe, Africa, Asia, and Australia.

Eastern High·lands (ē'stərn hī'ləndz) See Great Dividing Range.

east·ern·most (ē'stərn-mōst') adj. Farthest east.

Eastern Orthodox Church (ē'stərn ôr'thə-dôks' chûrch) n. The body of modern churches, including among others the Greek and Russian Orthodox, that is derived from the church of the Byzantine Empire, adheres to the Byzantine rite, and acknowledges the honorary primacy of the patriarch of Constantinople.

Eastern Shore (ē'stərn shôr) A region of Maryland and Virginia east of Chesapeake Bay.

Eastern Shoshone (ē'stərn shō-shō'nē) n. See Shoshone (n., sense 1c).

Eastern Sioux (ē'stərn sōō) n. See Santee¹.

Eastern Standard Time (ē'stərn stān'dərd tīm) n. Abbr. EST, E.S.T. Standard time in the fifth time zone west of Greenwich, England, reckoned at 75° west and used, for example, in the eastern part of North America. Also called Eastern Time

Eas-ter-tide (ē'stər-tīd') n. The Easter season, extending from Easter to Ascension Day, Whitsunday, or Trinity Sunday.

East Fri-sian Islands (ēst frīzh'ən ī'ləndz, frē'zhən) See Frisian Islands.

East Germanic (ēst jər-män'ik) n. The subdivision of the Germanic languages that includes Gothic.

East Ger-ma-ny (ēst jūr'mə-nē) A former country of northern Europe on the Baltic Sea. It was formed in 1949 from the zone of Germany occupied by Soviet troops after World War II. It was reunified with West Germany in October 1990.

—East Ger'man adj. & n.

East-hamp-ton (ēst-hämp'tən) A town of west-central Massachusetts north-northwest of Springfield. It was settled in 1664. Population, 15,537.

East Hart-ford (ēst härt'fərd) A town of north-central Connecticut on the Connecticut River opposite Hartford. It was settled c. 1640. Population, 50,452.

East Ha-ven (ēst hā'vən) A town of southern Connecticut on Long Island Sound east of New Haven. It is a residential community and summer resort. Population, 25,028.

East In-dies (ēst ĭn'dēz) Indonesia. The term is sometimes used to refer to all of Southeast Asia. Historically, it referred chiefly to India. —East In'di-an adj. & n.

east-ing (ē'stīŋ) n. 1. The difference in longitude between two positions as a result of movement to the east. 2. Progress toward the east.

East Kil-bridge (ēst kīl-brīd') A town of south-central Scotland southeast of Glasgow. It was established in 1946 as a new town to absorb the growing population of Glasgow. Population, 70,600.

East-lake (ēst'lāk') A city of northeast Ohio, a residential suburb of Cleveland on Lake Erie. Population, 22,104.

East Lan-sing (ēst lān'sīŋ) A city of south-central Michigan, a residential suburb of Lansing. It is the seat of Michigan State University (founded 1855). Population, 50,677.

East-leigh (ēst'lē) A municipal borough of southern England north-northeast of Southampton. Its industries include railroad shops. Population, 92,400.

East Liv·er·pool (ēst liv'ər-pōōl') A city of eastern Ohio on the West Virginia border south of Youngstown. It has been a ceramics center since the 1830's. Population, 16,687.

East Los An·ge·les (ēst lôs ən'jə-ləs, -lēz', ăng'gə-ləs) An unincorporated community of southern California, a residential suburb of Los Angeles. Population, 126,379.

East·main (ēst'mān') A river rising in central Quebec, Canada, and flowing about 821 km (510 mi) eastward to James Bay.

East·man (ēst'mən), George. 1854-1932. American inventor and industrialist who invented a dry-plate process of photographic film development, flexible film, a box camera, and a process for color photography.

East·man (ēst'mən), Max Forrester. 1883-1969. American writer and editor noted for his social and literary criticism. Founder and editor of The Masses (1913-1918) and The Liberator (1919-1922), he wrote Enjoyment of Poetry (1913) and many other books.

East Meadow (ēst mēd'ō) An unincorporated community of southeast New York on west-central Long Island southeast of Mineola. It is mainly residential. Population, 36,909.

East Mo·line (ēst mō-lēn') A city of northwest Illinois, a residential and industrial suburb of Moline on the Mississippi River. Population, 20,147.

east·north·east (ēst'nôth'ēst') n. Abbr. ENE The direction or point on the mariner's compass halfway between due east and northeast, or 67°30' east of due north. — adj. Abbr. ENE To, toward, of, facing, or in the east-northeast. — adv. Abbr. ENE In, from, or toward the east-northeast.

East North·port (ēst nôth'pôrt', -pôrt') An unincorporated community of southeast New York on north-central Long Island east of Huntington. It is mainly residential. Population, 20,411.

East·on (ē'stən) 1. A town of southeast Massachusetts southwest of Brockton. It was settled in 1694. Population, 16,623. 2. A city of eastern Pennsylvania north of Philadelphia. Founded in 1751, it was formerly a coal-receiving port. Population, 26,276.

East Or·ange (ēst ôr'inj, ôr'-) A city of northeast New Jersey, a residential suburb of Newark. Population, 73,552.

East Pak·i·stan (ēst pāk'i-stān', pā'kī-stān') A former region of southern Asia on the Bay of Bengal. Originally part of Bengal, it was held by Pakistan from 1947 to 1971, when it achieved independence as Bangladesh.

East Pal·o Al·to (ēst pāl'ō ăl'tō) A community of western California on San Francisco Bay southeast of San Mateo. It is mainly residential. Population, 18,191.

East Pe·or·i·a (ēst pē-ôr'ē-ə, -ôr'-) A city of north-central Illinois, a manufacturing suburb of Peoria on the Illinois River. Population, 21,378.

East Point (ēst point) A city of northwest Georgia, an industrial suburb of Atlanta. Population, 34,402.

East Prov·i·dence (ēst pröv'ī-dəns) A city of eastern Rhode Island, an industrial suburb of Providence. Population, 50,380.

East Prus·sia (ēst prūsh'ə) A historical region and former province of Prussia on the Baltic Sea. From 1919 to 1939 it was separated from Germany by the Polish Corridor. In 1945 the area was divided between Poland and the U.S.S.R.

East Ridge (ēst rĭj) A city of southeast Tennessee, a suburb of Chattanooga on the Georgia border. Population, 21,101.

East River (ēst rĭv'ər) A narrow tidal strait connecting Upper New York Bay with Long Island Sound and separating the boroughs of Manhattan and the Bronx from Brooklyn and Queens.

East Saint Lou·is (ēst sānt lōō'is) A city of southwest Illinois on the Mississippi River opposite St. Louis, Missouri. It is a railroad center with varied industries. Population, 40,944.

East Si·ber·i·an Sea (ēst sī-bĭr'ē-ən sē) An arm of the Arctic Ocean extending from Wrangel Island to the New Siberian Islands.

East Side (ēst sĭd) A section of New York City on Manhattan Island east of Fifth Avenue. The northern part, approximately between 57th Street and 96th Street, is also known as the Upper East Side and includes many fashionable shops and residences. The Lower East Side, south of 14th Street, was long a home to immigrants from eastern Europe.

east-south-east (ēst'south'ēst') n. Abbr. ESE The direction or point on the mariner's compass halfway between due east and southeast, or 112°30' east of due north. — adj. Abbr. ESE To, toward, of, facing, or in the east-southeast. — adv. Abbr. ESE In, from, or toward the east-southeast.

east·ward (ēst'wərd) adv. & adj. Toward, to, or in the east. — n. An eastward direction, point, or region. — east'ward·ly adv., adj. — east'wards adv.

eas·y (ē'zē) adj. eas·i·er, eas·i·est. 1. Capable of being accomplished or acquired with ease; posing no difficulty: an easy victory; an easy problem.

2. Requiring or exhibiting little effort or endeavor; undemanding: took the easy way out of her problems; wasn't satisfied with easy answers. 3. Free from worry, anxiety, trouble, or pain: My mind was easy, knowing that I had done my best.

4. a. Affording comfort or relief; soothing: soft light that was easy on the eyes. b. Prosperous; well-off: easy living; easy circumstances. 5. Causing little hardship or distress: an easy penalty; a habit that isn't easy to give up. 6. Socially at ease: an easy, good-natured manner. 7. a. Relaxed in attitude; easygoing: an easy disposition. b. Not strict or severe; lenient: an easy teacher; easy standards.

8. Readily exploited, imposed on, or tricked: an easy mark; an easy victim.

9. a. Not hurried or forced; moderate: an easy pace; an easy walk around the block. b. Light; gentle: an easy tap on the shoulder. 10. Not steep or abrupt; gradual: an easy climb. 11. Economics. a. Less in demand and therefore readily obtainable: Commodities are easier this quarter. b. Plentiful and therefore at low interest rates: easy money. 12. Promiscuous; loose. — adv. 1. Without haste or agitation: Relax and take it easy for a while. 2. With little effort; easily: success that came too easy. 3. In a restrained or moderate manner: Go easy on the butter. 4. Without much hardship or cost: got off easy with only a small fine. — idiom. easy as pie. Informal. Capable of being accomplished or done with no difficulty. [Middle English esi, from Old French aaisie, past participle of aaisier, to put at ease : a-, to (from Latin ad-, ad-) + aise, ease; see EASE.] — easy/i-ness n.

SYNONYMS: easy, simple, facile, effortless, smooth, light. These adjectives mean requiring little effort or posing little if any difficulty. Easy applies both to tasks that require little effort and to persons who are not demanding: “The diagnosis of disease is often easy, often difficult, and often impossible” (Peter M. Latham). Not wanting to be called an easy marker, the teacher graded the essays severely. Simple implies lack of complexity that facilitates understanding or performance: a simple game; a simple problem; “the faculty... of reducing his thought on any subject to the simplest and plainest terms possible” (Baron Charnwood). Facile stresses readiness and fluency (a facile speaker); often, though, the word has unfavorable connotations, as of lack of care, glibness or insincerity, or superficiality: The explanation is too facile for such a complex phenomenon. Effortless refers to performance in which the application of great strength or skill makes the execution seem easy: a skater performing an effortless double axel; wrote effortless prose. Smooth suggests freedom from hindrances or difficulties that impede progress: The path of the bill through the legislature was smooth and orderly. Light refers to tasks or impositions that involve no taxing burdens or responsibilities: light duties; light taxes.

easy chair (ē'zē châr) n. A large, comfortable, well-upholstered chair.

easy-go-ing also easy-go-ing (ē'zē-gō'ing) adj. 1. a. Living without undue worry or concern; calm. b. Lax or negligent; careless. c. Relaxed or informal in attitude or standards: an easygoing teacher who allowed extra time for assignments. 2. Not rigorous, demanding, or stressful: an easygoing life as a part-time consultant. 3. Leisurely; unhurried: an easygoing pace.

easy lis-ten-ing (ē'zē lis'ə-ning) n. Music. Light or popular compositions with broad appeal, usually having a prominent melody and a quiet or blended arrangement.

easy street (ē'zē strēt) n. Informal. A condition of financial security or independence.

eat (ēt) v. ate (āt), eat-en (ēt'n), eat-ing, eats. — v. tr. 1. a. To take into the body by the mouth for digestion or absorption. b. To include habitually or by preference in one's diet: a bird that eats insects, fruit, and seeds; stopped eating red meat on advice from her doctor. 2. To consume, ravage, or destroy by or as if by ingesting: "Covering news in the field eats money" (George F. Will). 3. To erode or corrode: waves that ate away the beach; an acid that eats the surface of a machine part. 4. To produce by or as if by eating: Moths ate holes in our sweaters. 5. Slang. To absorb the cost or expense of: "You can eat your loss and switch the remaining money to other investment portfolios" (Marlys Harris). 6. Informal. To bother or annoy: What's eating him? — v. intr. 1. a. To consume food. b. To have or take a meal. 2. To exercise a consuming or eroding effect: a drill that ate away at the rock; exorbitant expenses that were eating into profits. 3. To cause persistent annoyance or distress: "How long will it be before the frustration eats at you?" (Howard Kaplan). —phrasal verb. eat up. Slang. To receive or enjoy enthusiastically or avidly: She really eats up the constant publicity. —idioms. eat crow. To be forced to accept a humiliating defeat. eat (one's) heart out. 2. To feel bitter anguish or grief. 3. To be consumed by jealousy. eat (one's) words. To retract something that one has said. eat out of (someone's) hand. To be manipulated or dominated by another. eat (someone) alive. Slang. To overwhelm or defeat thoroughly: an inexperienced manager who was eaten alive in a competitive corporate environment. [Middle English eten, from Old English etan. See ed- in Appendix.] —eat'er n.

SYNONYMS: eat, consume, devour, ingest. The central meaning shared by these verbs is "to take food into the body by the mouth": ate a hearty dinner; greedily consumed the sandwich; hyenas devouring their prey; whales ingesting krill.

eat·a·ble (ē'tə-bəl) adj. Fit to be eaten; edible: an eatable meal. — n.

1. Something fit to be eaten. 2. eatables. Food.

eat·en (ēt'n) v. Past participle of eat.

eat·er·y (ē'tə-rē) n. pl. eat·er·ies. Informal. A restaurant.

eat·ing (ē'tɪŋ) adj. 1. Suitable for being eaten, especially without cooking: good eating apples. 2. Used in the ingestion of food, as at the table: eating utensils.

eating disorder (ē'tɪŋ dɪs-ôr'dər) n. A potentially life-threatening neurotic condition, such as anorexia nervosa or bulimia, usually seen in young women.

Ea·ton (ēt'n), Margaret O'Neale. Known as "Peggy." 1796?-1879. American socialite whose snubbing by Washington society for her rumored premarital relations with her future husband, U.S. Secretary of War John H. Eaton (1790-1856), led to his resignation (1831) and discord between President Andrew Jackson and his cabinet.

Ea·ton (ēt'n), Theophilus. 1590-1658. English colonial administrator in America who founded and governed (1638-1658) the New Haven colony.

eats (ēts) pl.n. Slang. Food, especially snacks.

Eau Claire (ō klâr') A city of west-central Wisconsin at the mouth of the Eau Clair River, about 113 km (70 mi) long. Founded in the 1840's, the city grew as the center of a lumbering region. Population, 56,856.

eau de co-logne (ō' də kə-lōn') n. pl. eaux de cologne (ō', ōz'). See cologne. [French eau-de-cologne. See COLOGNE.]

eau de vie (ō' də vĕ') n. pl. eaux de vie (ō', ōz'). Brandy. [French eau-de-vie: eau, water + de, of + vie, life.]

eaves (ēvz) pl.n. The projecting overhang at the lower edge of a roof. [Middle English eves, from Old English efes. See upo in Appendix.]

eaves-drop (ēvz'drōp') v. intr. eaves-dropped, eaves-dropping, eaves-drops. To listen secretly to the private conversation of others. [Probably back-formation from eavesdropper, one who eavesdrops, from Middle English evesdropper, from evesdrop, place where water falls from the eaves, from Old English yfes drype. See upo in Appendix.] —eaves/drop/per n.

eaves spout (ēvz spout) n. New England & Northern U.S. See gutter (n., sense 2). See Regional note at gutter.

eaves trough (ēvz trōf) n. Northern U.S. See gutter (n., sense 2). See Regional note at gutter.

E-ban (ē'bən), Abba. Born 1915. South African-born Israeli politician who served as Israel's first permanent delegate to the United Nations (1949-1959), ambassador to the United States (1950-1959), and foreign minister (1966-1974).

ebb (ĕb) n. 1. Ebb tide. 2. A period of decline or diminution: "Insistence upon rules of conduct marks the ebb of religious fervor" (Alfred North Whitehead). — v. intr. ebbed, ebb-ing, ebbs. 1. To fall back from the flood stage. 2. To fall away or back; decline or recede. See Synonyms at recede. [Middle English ebbe, from Old English ebba. See apo- in Appendix.]

ebb tide (ĕb tīd) n. The receding or outgoing tide; the period between high water and the succeeding low water.

EBCDIC (ĕb'sē-dīk) n. Computer Science. A standard code that uses 8 bits to represent each of up to 256 alphanumeric characters. [E(xtended) B(inary) C(oded) D(ecimal) I(nterchange) C(ode).]

E-bers-wal-de (ā'bərz-väl'də) A city of northeast Germany northeast of Berlin. It was chartered in 1257. Population, 53,473.

E-bert (ā'bərt), Friedrich. 1871-1925. German politician who as president of the German Republic (1919-1925) attempted to unite his country after its defeat in World War I and suppressed Hitler's attempt to establish a dictatorship in Bavaria (1923).

E-berth (ā'bərt), Karl Joseph. 1835-1926. German bacteriologist and pathologist who was among the first to identify the bacillus of typhoid fever (1880).

Eb·la (ěb'lə, ē'blə) An ancient city of southwest Asia near the site of present-day Aleppo, Syria. The cuneiform Ebla Tablets, discovered from 1974 to 1975, describe a thriving third-millennium B.C. civilization centered around the city.

Eb·la·ite (ěb'lə-īt', ē'blə-) n. The Semitic language of ancient Ebla.

Eb·lis (ěb'līs) n. Mythology. The principal evil spirit or devil of Islamic mythology.

EbN abbr. East by north.

Eb·o·la virus (ěb'ə-lə vī'rəs, ĭ-bō'lə) n. An RNA virus that causes acute, highly fatal hemorrhagic fever that spreads through contact with bodily fluids or secretions of infected persons. [After the Ebola River in northwest Zaire.]

eb·on (ěb'ən) adj. 1. Made of ebony. 2. Black in color. — n. Ebony. [Middle English eban, ebony wood, from Old French, from Latin ebenus, ebony tree, from Greek ebenos. See EBONY.]

eb·on·ite (ěb'ə-nīt') n. A relatively inelastic rubber, made by vulcanization with a large amount of sulfur and used as an electrical insulating material.

eb·on·ize (ěb'ə-nīz') v. tr. eb·on·ized, eb·on·iz·ing, eb·on·iz·es. To stain black like ebony.

eb·on·y (ěb'ə-nē) n. pl. eb·on·ies. 1. A tropical tree (Diospyros ebenum) of southern Asia, having hard, dark-colored heartwood. 2. The wood of this tree, used in cabinetwork and for piano keys. 3. The color black; ebony. — adj.

1. Made of or suggesting ebony. 2. Black in color. [Probably from Middle English hebenyf, ebony wood, from alteration of Late Latin ebeninus, of ebony, from Greek ebeninos, from ebenos, ebony tree, from Egyptian h-b-ny.]

e·brac·te·ate (ē-brāk'tē-āt') adj. Botany. Having no bracts. [New Latin ēbracteātus: Latin ē-, ex-, ex- + Latin bractea, gold leaf, bract.]

Eb·ro (ē'brō, ěb'rō, ě'vrō) A river rising in the Cantabrian Mountains of northern Spain and flowing about 925 km (575 mi) to the Mediterranean Sea southwest of Barcelona.

EbS abbr. East by south.

e·bul·lience (ĭ-bōōl'yəns, ĭ-bŭl'-) n. Zestful enthusiasm.

e·bul·li·en·cy (ĭ-bōōl'yən-sē, ĭ-bŭl'-) n. Ebullience.

e·bul·li·ent (ĭ-bōōl'yənt, ĭ-bŭl'-) adj. 1. Zestfully enthusiastic. 2. Boiling or seeming to boil; bubbling. [Latin ēbulliēns, ēbullient- present participle of ēbullire, to bubble up: ē-, ex-, up, out; see EX- + bullire, to bubble, boil.]

—e·bul·li·ent·ly adv.

eb·ul·li·tion (ěb'ə-līsh'ən) n. 1. The state or process of boiling. 2. A sudden, violent outpouring, as of emotion: “did not... give way to any ebullitions of private grief” (Thackeray). [Middle English ebullitiun, from Late Latin ēbullitiō, ēbullitiōn-, from Latin ēbullitus, past participle of ēbullire, to bubble up. See EBULLIENT.]

e·bur·na·tion (ē'bər-nā'shən, ěb'ər-) n. Degeneration of bone into a hard, ivorylike mass, as that which occurs at the articular surfaces of bones in osteoarthritis. [From Latin eburnus, ivory, from ebur. See IVORY.]

EBV abbr. Epstein-Barr virus.

Ec. abbr. Ecuador.

E·ca·te·pec de Mo·re·los (ā-kā'tə-pĕk' də mō-rĕl'əs, ě-kā'tä-pĕk' də mō-rĕl'ôs) A city of central Mexico near Mexico City. An industrial center, it occupies the site of an Aztec kingdom established in the 12th century. Population, 741,821.

Ec·ba·ta·na (ĕk-băt'n-ə) A city of ancient Media on the site of present-day Hamadan in western Iran. It was captured by Cyrus the Great in 549 B.C. and plundered by Alexander, Seleucus I, and Antiochus III.

ec·ce ho·mo (ĕk'sē hō'mō, ĕk'ĕ) n. A depiction of Jesus wearing the crown of thorns. [Late Latin ecce homō, behold the man : Latin ecce, behold + Latin homō, man.]

ec·cen·tric (ĭk-sĕn'trĭk, ĕk-) adj. 1. Departing from a recognized, conventional, or established norm or pattern. See Synonyms at strange. 2. Deviating from a circular form or path, as in an elliptical orbit. 3. a. Not situated at or in the geometric center. b. Having the axis located elsewhere than at the geometric center. — n. 1. One that deviates markedly from an established norm, especially a person of odd or unconventional behavior. 2. Physics. A disk or wheel having its axis of revolution displaced from its center so that it is capable of imparting reciprocating motion. [Middle English eccentrik, planetary orbit of which the earth is not at the center, from Medieval Latin eccentricus, not having the same center, from Greek ekkentros : ek-, out of; see ECTO- + kentron, center (from kentein, to prick); see kent- in Appendix.] — ec·cen'tri·cal·ly adv.

ec·cen·tric·i·ty (ĕk'sĕn-trĭs'ĭ-tē) n. pl. ec·cen·tric·i·ties. 1. a. The quality of being eccentric. b. Deviation from the normal, expected, or established. 2. An example or instance of eccentric behavior. 3. Physics. The distance between the center of an eccentric and its axis. 4. Mathematics. The ratio of the distance of any point on a conic section from a focus to its distance from the corresponding directrix. This ratio is constant for any particular conic section.

SYNONYMS: eccentricity, idiosyncrasy, quirk. These nouns refer to peculiarity of behavior. Eccentricity implies divergence from the usual or customary: “England is the paradise of individuality, eccentricity, heresy, anomalies, hobbies, and humors” (George Santayana). Idiosyncrasy more often refers to such divergency viewed as being peculiar to the temperament of an individualist and serving as an identifying trait: The use of lowercase letters for capital letters was one of the idiosyncrasies of the poet e.e. cummings. Quirk, a milder term, merely suggests an odd trait or mannerism: “Every man had his own quirks and twists” (Harriet Beecher ec·chy·mo·sis (ĕk'ĭ-mō'sĭs) n. The passage of blood from ruptured blood vessels into subcutaneous tissue, marked by a purple discoloration of the skin. [New Latin, from Greek ekkhumōsis, extravasation, from ekkhumousthai, to extravasate : ek-, out; see ECTO- + khumos, juice; see gheu- in Appendix.] —ec'chy·mot'ic (-mōt'ĭk) adj.

eccl. abbr. Ecclesiastic; ecclesiastical.

Ec·cles (ĕk'əlz), Sir John Carew. Born 1903. Australian physiologist. He shared a 1963 Nobel Prize for research on nerve cells.

Ec·cles (ĕk'əlz), Marriner Stoddard. 1890-1977. American economist and public official who served as governor of the Federal Reserve Board (1934-1936) and as chairman of the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System (1936-1948).

Eccles. abbr. 1. Bible. Ecclesiastes. 2. eccles.. Ecclesiastic; ecclesiastical.

ec·cle·si·a (ĭ-klē'zhē-ə, -zē-ə) *n. pl. ec·cle·si·ae (-zhē-ē', -zē-ē'). 1. The political assembly of citizens of an ancient Greek state. 2. A church or congregation. [Latin ecclēsia, from Greek ekklēsia, from ekkalein, to summon forth : ek-, out; see ECTO- + kalein, klē-, to call; see kelə² in Appendix.]*

Ec·cle·si·as·tes (ĭ-klē'zē-ās'tēz') n. (used with a sing. verb). Abbr. Eccles. Bible. A book of the Bible. See Table at Bible. [Late Latin Ecclesiastēs, from Greek Ekklesiastēs, preacher (translation of Hebrew Qoholeth), from ekklēsiastēs, a member of the ecclesia, from ekklēsia, ecclesia. See ECCLESIA.]

ec·cle·si·as·tic (ĭ-klē'zē-ās'tĭk) adj. Abbr. eccl., eccles. Ecclesiastical. — n. Abbr. eccl., eccles. A minister or priest; a cleric. [Late Latin ecclesiasticus, from Greek ekklēsiastikos, from ekklēsiastēs, a member of the ecclesia. See ECCLESIASTES.]

ec·cle·si·as·ti·cal (ĭ-klē'zē-ās'tĭ-kəl) adj. Abbr. eccl., eccles. 1. Of or relating to a church, especially as an organized institution. 2. Appropriate to a church or to use in a church: ecclesiastical architecture; ecclesiastical robes. —ec·cle'si·as'ti·cal·ly adv.

ec·cle·si·as·ti·cism (ĭ-klē'zē-ās'tĭ-tə-sĭz'əm) n. 1. Ecclesiastical principles, practices, and activities. 2. Excessive adherence to ecclesiastical principles and forms.

Ec·cle·si·as·ti·cus (ĭ-klē'zē-ās'tĭ-kəs) n. Bible. A book of the Bible. See Table at Bible.

ec·cle·si·ol·o·gy (ĭ-klē'zē-ōl'ə-jē) n. 1. The branch of theology that is concerned with the nature, constitution, and functions of a church. 2. The study of ecclesiastical architecture and ornamentation. [ECCLESIA(A) + -LOGY.]

—ec·cle'si·o·log'i·cal (-ə-lŏj'ĭ-kəl) adj.

ec·crine (ĕk'řın, -rın', -rĕn') adj. 1. Relating to an eccrine gland or its secretion, especially sweat. 2. Exocrine. [From Greek ekkrinein, to secrete : ek-, out; see ECTO- + krinein, to separate; see krei- in Appendix.]

eccrine gland (ĕk'řın glănd) n. Any of the numerous small sweat glands distributed over the body's surface that produce a clear aqueous secretion devoid of cytoplasmic constituents and important in regulating body temperature.

ECCS abbr. Physics. Emergency core cooling system.

ec·dys·i·ast (ĕk-dĭz'ĕ-ăst', -ăst) n. A striptease artist. [From ECDYSIS.]

ec·dy·sis (ĕk'dĭ-sĭs) n. pl. ec·dy·ses (-sĕz'). The shedding of an outer integument or layer of skin, as by insects, crustaceans, and snakes; molting. [Greek ekdusis, a stripping off, from ekduein, to take off : ek-, out, off; see ECTO- + duein, to put on.]

ec·dy·sone (ĕk'dă-sōn') n. A steroid hormone produced by insects and crustaceans that promotes growth and controls molting. [ECDYS(IS) + (HORM)ONE.]

e·ce·sis (ĭ-sĕ'sĭs) n. The successful establishment of a plant or animal species in a habitat. [From Greek oikēsis, inhabitation, from oikein, to dwell, from oikos, house. See weik-¹ in Appendix.]

ECG abbr. 1. Electrocardiogram. 2. Electrocardiograph.

ec·hard (ĕk'hărd') n. Ecology. Soil water not available for absorption by plants. [From Greek ekhein, to hold back; see segh- in Appendix + ardein, to irrigate.]

E·che·ga·ray y Ei·za·guir·re (ă'chă-gă-rĭ' ĕ ā'să-gĭr'ă, -gŵĭr'ă-, ĕ'chĕ-gă-rĭ' ĕ ā'thă-gĕ'rĕ), José. 1832-1916. Spanish mathematician, politician, and playwright whose works include The Great Galeoto (1881). He shared the 1904 Nobel Prize for literature.

ech·e·lon (ĕsh'ă-lŏn') n. 1. a. A formation of troops in which each unit is positioned successively to the left or right of the rear unit to form an oblique or steplike line. b. A flight formation or arrangement of craft in this manner. c. A similar formation of groups, units, or individuals. 2. A subdivision of a military or naval force: a command echelon. 3. A level of responsibility or authority in a hierarchy; a rank: a job in the lower echelon of the corporation. — v. tr. intr.

ech·e·loned, ech·e·lon·ing, ech·e·lons. To arrange or take place in an echelon. [French échelon, from Old French eschelon, rung of a ladder, from eschiele, ladder, from Late Latin scāla, from Latin scālae, steps. See skand- in Appendix.]

echelon grating (ĕsh'ă-lŏn' gră'tĭng) n. A diffraction grating made of parallel glass plates, each of which extends slightly beyond the next, used to examine extremely fine structures.

ech·e·ve·ri·a (ĕch'ă-vă-rĕ'ă) n. Any of numerous tropical American plants of the genus Echeveria, having thick, succulent leaves often clustered in a showy rosette. [New Latin Echeveria, genus name, after Atanasio Echeverría, 19th-century Mexican botanical illustrator.]

E·che·ver·rí·a Ál·va·rez (ā'chə-və-rē'ə əl'və-rēz', ě'chě-vě-rē'ä əl'vā-rēs'), Luis. Born 1922. Mexican politician who as president (1970-1976) grappled with unemployment, inflation, and politically motivated violence.

e·chid·na (ĭ-kĭd'nə) n. Any of several nocturnal, burrowing, egg-laying mammals of the genera Tachyglossus and Zaglossus of Australia, Tasmania, and New Guinea, having a spiny coat, slender snout, and an extensible sticky tongue used for catching insects. Also called spiny anteater [Latin, adder, viper, from Greek ekhidna, from ekhis.]

echin- pref. Variant of echino-.

ech·i·nate (ĕk'ə-nāt') adj. Bearing or covered with spines or bristles; prickly.

e·chi·ni (ĭ-kĭ'nĭ') n. Plural of echinus.

echino- or echin- pref. 1. Spiny; prickly: echinate. 2. Echinoderm: echinoid. [From Latin echĭnus, sea urchin. See ECHINUS.]

e·chi·no·coc·ci (ĭ-kĭ'nə-kök'sĭ', -kök'ĭ') n. Plural of echinococcus.

e·chi·no·coc·co·sis (ĭ-kĭ'nə-kə-kō'sĭs) n. pl. e·chi·no·coc·co·ses (-sēz).
Infestation with echinococci. [ECHINOCOCC(US) + -OSIS.]

e·chi·no·coc·cus (ĭ-kĭ'nə-kök'əs) n. pl. e·chi·no·coc·ci (-kök'sĭ', -kök'ĭ').

Any of several parasitic tapeworms of the genus Echinococcus, the larvae of which infect mammals and form large, spherical cysts in the liver or lungs, causing serious or fatal disease. [New Latin Echinococcus, genus name : ECHINO- + -COCCUS.]

e·chi·no·derm (ĭ-kĭ'nə-dŭrm') n. Any of numerous radially symmetrical marine invertebrates of the phylum Echinodermata, which includes the starfishes, sea urchins, and sea cucumbers, having an internal calcareous skeleton and often covered with spines. —e·chi'no·der'mal, e·chi'no·der'ma·tous (-dŭr'mə-təs) adj.

e·chi·noid (ĭ-kĭ'noid') n. An echinoderm of the class Echinoidea, which includes the sand dollars and sea urchins.

e·chi·nus (ĭ-kĭ'nəs) n. pl. e·chi·ni (-nĭ'). 1. A sea urchin of the genus Echinus. 2. Architecture. A convex molding just below the abacus of a Doric capital. [Latin echĭnus, sea urchin, from Greek ekhinós, sea urchin, hedgehog, from ekhis, adder, viper.]

ech·o (ĕk'ō) n. pl. ech·oes. 1. a. Repetition of a sound by reflection of sound waves from a surface. b. The sound produced in this manner. 2. A repetition or an imitation: a fashion that is an echo of an earlier style. 3. A remnant or vestige: found echoes of past civilizations while examining artifacts in the Middle East. 4. One who imitates another, as in opinions, speech, or dress. 5. A sympathetic response: Their demand for justice found an echo in communities across the nation. 6. A consequence or repercussion: Her resignation had echoes throughout the department. 7. Repetition of certain sounds or syllables in poetry, as in echo verse. 8. Music. Soft repetition of a note or phrase. 9. Electronics. A reflected wave received by a radio or radar. — v. ech·oed, ech·o·ing, ech·oes. — v.

tr. 1. To repeat (a sound) by the reflection of sound waves from a surface. 2. To repeat or imitate: followers echoing the cries of their leader; events that echoed a previous incident in history. — v. intr. 1. To be repeated by or as if by an echo: The shout echoed off the wall. The speaker's words echoed in her mind. 2. To resound with or as if with an echo; reverberate: rooms echoing with laughter. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin ēchō, from Greek ēkhō.]
—ech'ō-er n. —ech'ō-ey adj.

SYNONYMS: echo, reecho, reflect, resound, reverberate. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to send back the sound of”: a cry echoed by the canyon; a cathedral roof reechoing joyous hymns; caves that reflect the noise of footsteps; cliffs resounding the thunder of the ocean; blasting reverberated by quarry walls.

WORD HISTORY: One might think that our word echo is from the name of the nymph Echo, whom Greek mythology associates with echoes. According to one version of her story, she was torn to pieces by shepherds driven to this act by the god Pan, who was hopelessly in love with her. Pieces of Echo hidden in the ground still respond to Pan's frenzied cries, producing the phenomena known as echoes. A second version of her tale has it that Echo, as a penalty for distracting Hera from observing Zeus's infidelities, lost all power of speech, except the ability to reply. This defect lost her the love of Narcissus, which caused Echo to pine away until only her voice was left. The hapless nymph, however, cannot even claim credit for echoes because the Greek word ēkhō, the source of English echo, existed with our common noun sense before any mention of Echo is found. Our word echo is first recorded in Middle English in a work composed in 1340.

Ech·o (ĕk'ō) n. Greek Mythology. A nymph whose unrequited love for Narcissus caused her to pine away until nothing but her voice remained.

ech·o·car·di·o·gram (ĕk'ō-kär'dē-ə-gräm') n. A visual record produced by an echocardiograph.

ech·o·car·di·o·graph (ĕk'ō-kär'dē-ə-gräf') n. An instrument that in a painless and noninvasive manner employs the differential transmission and reflection of ultrasonic waves to visualize structural and functional abnormalities of the heart. —ech'ō·car'di·o·graph'ic adj. —ech'ō·car'di·og'ra·phy (-ög'rə-fē) n.

echo chamber (ĕk'ō chām'bər) n. A room or enclosure with acoustically reflective walls used in broadcasting and recording to produce echoes or similar sound effects.

echo check (ĕk'ō chĕk) n. Computer Science. An error control technique in which the receiving terminal or computer returns the transmitted data to verify correct reception.

ech·o·en·ceph·a·lo·gram (ĕk'ō-ĕn-sĕf'ə-lə-grām', -ə-lō-) n. A visual record produced by an echoencephalograph.

ech·o·en·ceph·a·lo·graph (ĕk'ō-ĕn-sĕf'ə-lə-grāf', -ə-lō-) n. An instrument that in a painless and noninvasive manner uses the differential transmission and reflection of ultrasonic waves to create a detailed visual image of the brain.

—ech'·o·en·ceph'a·lo·graph'ic adj. —ech'·o·en·ceph'a·log'ra·phy (-lŏg'rə-fĕ) n.

ech·o·gram (ĕk'ō-grām') n. See sonogram.

e·chog·ra·phy (ĕ-kŏg'rə-fĕ) n. See ultrasonography.

e·cho·ic (ĕ-kŏ'ik) adj. 1. Of or resembling an echo. 2. Imitative of natural sounds; onomatopoeic: an echoic word.

ech·o·la·li·a (ĕk'ō-lā'lĕ-ə) n. 1. Psychiatry. The immediate and involuntary repetition of words or phrases just spoken by others, often a symptom of autism or some types of schizophrenia. 2. An infant's repetition of the sounds made by others, a normal occurrence in childhood development. [ECHO + Greek lalia, talk (from lalos, talkative).] —ech'·o·la'lic (-lik) adj.

ech·o·lo·ca·tion (ĕk'ō-lŏ-kā'shən) n. 1. A sensory system in certain animals, such as bats and dolphins, in which usually high-pitched sounds are emitted and their echoes interpreted to determine the direction and distance of objects.

2. Electronics. A process for determining the location of objects by emitting sound waves and analyzing the waves reflected back to the sender by the object. Also called echo ranging —ech'·o·lo·cate' v.

echo sounder (ĕk'ō soun'dər) n. A device for measuring depth of water by sending pressure waves down from the surface and recording the time until the echo returns from the bottom.

echo verse (ĕk'ō vûrs) n. Verse in which the final words or syllables of a line or stanza are repeated as a response, often with an ironic effect.

ech·o·vi·rus (ĕk'ō-vī'rəs) n. pl. ech·o·vi·rus·es. Microbiology. Any of a number of retroviruses of the family Picornaviridae, inhabiting the gastrointestinal tract and associated with various diseases, such as viral meningitis, mild respiratory infections, and severe diarrhea in newborns. [e(nteric) c(ytopathogenic) h(uman) o(rphan) virus.]

Eck (ĕk), Johann. 1486-1543. German Roman Catholic theologian who opposed the reforms of Martin Luther and procured from Rome the papal bull that declared Luther a heretic (1520).

Eck·hart also Eck·art or Eck·ardt (ĕk'härt', -ärt'), Johannes. Known as "Meister Eckhart." 1260?-1327?. German theologian regarded as the founder of mysticism in Germany. His influential works concern the union of the individual soul with God.

ECL abbr. Computer Science. Emitter-coupled logic.

é·clair (ā-klâr', ā'klâr') n. An elongated pastry filled with custard or whipped cream and usually iced with chocolate. [French, from Old French esclair, lightning, from esclairier, to light up, from Vulgar Latin exclāriāre*, from Latin exclārāre : ex-, intensive pref.; see EX- + clārus, clear; see kelə-² in Appendix.]

é·clair·cisse·ment (ā-klâr-sēs-män') n. A clarification; an enlightenment. [French, from Old French esclarcir, esclarciss-, to clarify, from Vulgar Latin exclāricire*, variant of exclāriāre*. See ÉCLAIR.]

e·clamp·si·a (ĭ-klämp'sē-ə) n. Coma and convulsions during or immediately after pregnancy, characterized by edema, hypertension, and proteinuria. [New Latin, from Greek eklampsis, a shining forth, from eklampein, to shine forth : ek-, out; see ECTO- + lampein, to shine.] — e·clamp'tic (-tĭk) adj.

é·clat (ā-klä', ā'klä') n. 1. Great brilliance, as of performance or achievement. 2. Conspicuous success. 3. Great acclamation or applause. 4. Archaic. Notoriety; scandal. [French, brilliance, from Old French esclat, splinter, from esclater, to burst out, splinter, probably of Germanic origin.]

e·clec·tic (ĭ-klĕk'tĭk) adj. 1. Selecting or employing individual elements from a variety of sources, systems, or styles: an eclectic taste in music; an eclectic approach to managing the economy. 2. Made up of or combining elements from a variety of sources: “a popular bar patronized by an eclectic collection of artists, writers, secretaries and aging soldiers on reserve duty” (Curtis Wilkie). — n. One that follows an eclectic method. [Greek eklektikos, selective, from eklektos, selected, from eklegein, to select : ek-, out; see ECTO- + legein, to gather; see leg- in Appendix.] — e·clec'ti·cal·ly adv.

e·clec·ti·cism (ĭ-klĕk'tə-sĭz'əm) n. An eclectic system or method.

e·clipse (ĭ-klĭps') n. 1. a. The partial or complete obscuring, relative to a designated observer, of one celestial body by another. b. The period of time during which such an obscuration occurs. 2. A temporary or permanent dimming or cutting off of light. 3. a. A fall into obscurity or disuse; a decline: “A composer... often goes into eclipse after his death and never regains popularity” (Time). b. A disgraceful or humiliating end; a downfall: Revelations of wrongdoing helped bring about the eclipse of the governor's career. — v. tr. e·clipsed, e·clips·ing, e·clips·es. 1. a. To cause an eclipse of. b. To obscure; darken. 2. a. To obscure or diminish in importance, fame, or reputation. b. To surpass; outshine: an outstanding performance that eclipsed the previous record. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin eclĭpsis, from Greek ekleipsis, from ekleipein, to fail to appear : ek-, out; see ECTO- + leipein, to leave; see leik^w- in Appendix.]

eclipse plumage (ĭ-klĭps' plōō'mĭj) n. Dull or colorless plumage that certain birds, such as male ducks, acquire at the end of the breeding season.

e·clips·ing binary (ĭ-klĭp'sĭng bĭ'nə-rĕ) n. A binary star whose components pass in front of each other, thereby causing a regular eclipse of one of the stars. Also called eclipsing variable star e·clip·tic (ĭ-klĭp'tĭk) n. 1. The intersection plane of the earth's orbit with the celestial sphere, along which the sun appears to move as viewed from the earth. 2. A great circle inscribed on a terrestrial globe inclined at an approximate angle of 23°27' to the equator and representing the apparent motion of the sun in relation to the earth during a year. [Middle English ecliptik, from Medieval Latin (lĭnea) eclĭptica, ecliptic (line), from Latin eclĭpticus, of an eclipse, from Greek ekleiptikos, from ekleipein, to fail to appear. See ECLIPSE.]

ec·logue (ĕk'lôg', -lôg') n. A pastoral poem, usually in the form of a dialogue between shepherds. [Middle English eclog, from Latin ecloga, from Greek eklogē, selection, from eklegein, to select. See ECLECTIC.]

e·clo·sion (ĭ-klô'zhən) n. The emergence of an adult insect from a pupal case or an insect larva from an egg. [French éclosion, from éclore, to open, from Old French, from Vulgar Latin excludere*, to shut out : Latin ex-, ex- + Latin claudere, to shut.]

ECM abbr. European Common Market.

eco- pref. Ecology; ecological: ecosystem. [From ECOLOGY.]

ec·o·ca·tas·tro·phe (ĕk'ô-kă-tăs'trə-fē, ĕ'kô-) n. A large-scale disruption of the balance of nature, usually as a result of human intervention.

ec·o·cide (ĕk'ô-sĭd', ĕ'kô-) n. Heedless or deliberate destruction of the natural environment, as by pollutants or an act of war.

ec·o·freak (ĕk'ô-frĕk', ĕ'kô-) n. Slang. An environmentalist considered to be overly zealous.

ecol. abbr. 1. Ecology. 2. Ecological.

E. co·li (ĕ kô'lĭ) n. A bacillus (Escherichia coli) normally found in the human gastrointestinal tract and existing as numerous strains, some of which are responsible for diarrheal diseases. Other strains have been used experimentally in molecular biology. [New Latin Escherichia coli : after Theodor Escherich (1857-1911), German physician + Latin colĭ, genitive of colon; see COLON².]

e·col·o·gy (ĭ-kôl'ə-jē) n. pl. e·col·o·gies. Abbr. ecol. 1. a. The science of the relationships between organisms and their environments. Also called bionomics b. The relationship between organisms and their environment. 2. The branch of sociology that is concerned with studying the relationships between human groups and their physical and social environments. Also called human ecology 3. The study of the detrimental effects of modern civilization on the environment, with a view toward prevention or reversal through conservation. Also called human ecology [German Ökologie : Greek oikos, house; see weik⁻¹ in Appendix + German -logie, study (from Greek -logia, -logy).] —ec'o·log'i·cal (ĕk'ə-lôj'ĭ-kəl, ĕ'kə-), ec'o·log'ic (-ĭk) adj. —ec'o·log'i·cal·ly adv.

—e·col'o·gist n.

econ. abbr. Economics; economist; economy.

e·con·o·met·rics (ĭ-kŏn'ə-mĕt'riks) n. (used with a sing. verb). Application of mathematical and statistical techniques to economics in the study of problems, the analysis of data, and the development and testing of theories and models. [ECONO(MICS) + -METRICS.] —e·con'·o·met'ric, e·con'·o·met'ri·cal adj. —e·con'·o·met'ri·cal·ly adv. —e·con'·o·me·tri'cian (-mĭ-trĭsh'ən), e·con'·o·met'rist n.

ec·o·nom·ic (ĕk'ə-nŏm'ĭk, ē'kə-) adj. 1. a. Of or relating to the production, development, and management of material wealth, as of a country, household, or business enterprise. b. Of or relating to an economy: a period of sustained economic growth. 2. Of or relating to the science of economics: new economic theories regarding the effects of deficit spending. 3. Of or relating to the practical necessities of life; material: wrote the book primarily for economic reasons. 4. a. Financially rewarding; economical: It was no longer economic to keep the manufacturing facilities open. b. Efficient; economical: an economic use of home heating oil.

ec·o·nom·i·cal (ĕk'ə-nŏm'ĭ-kəl, ē'kə-) adj. 1. Prudent and thrifty in management; not wasteful or extravagant. See Synonyms at sparing. 2. Intended to save money, as by efficient operation or elimination of unnecessary features; economic: a modern, economical heating system; an economical approach to control of corporate growth. —ec'·o·nom'i·cal·ly adv.

economic rent (ĕk'ə-nŏm'ĭk rĕnt) n. See rent¹ (n., sense 3).

ec·o·nom·ics (ĕk'ə-nŏm'ĭks, ē'kə-) n. Abbr. econ. 1. (used with a sing. verb). The social science that deals with the production, distribution, and consumption of goods and services and with the theory and management of economies or economic systems. 2. (used with a sing. or pl. verb). Economic matters, especially relevant financial considerations: "Economics are slowly killing the family farm" (Christian Science Monitor).

e·con·o·mist (ĭ-kŏn'ə-mĭst) n. Abbr. econ. 1. A specialist in economics. 2. Archaic. An economical person.

e·con·o·mize (ĭ-kŏn'ə-mĭz') v. e·con·o·mized, e·con·o·miz·ing, e·con·o·miz·es. — v. intr. 1. To practice economy, as by avoiding waste or reducing expenditures. 2. To make economical use of something: "The best that can be said for this method is that it economizes on thought" (Christopher Hitchens). — v. tr. To use or manage with thrift: the need to economize scarce energy resources. —e·con'·o·miz'er n.

e·con·o·my (ĭ-kŏn'ə-mĕ) n. pl. e·con·o·mies. Abbr. econ. 1. a. Careful, thrifty management of resources, such as money, materials, or labor: learned to practice economy in making out the household budget. b. An example or result of such management; a saving. 2. a. The system or range of economic activity in a country, region, or community: Effects of inflation were felt at every level of the economy. b. A specific type of economic system: an industrial economy; a planned economy. 3. An orderly, functional arrangement of parts; an organized system: “the sense that there is a moral economy in the world, that good is rewarded and evil is punished” (George F. Will). 4. Efficient, sparing, or conservative use: wrote with an economy of language; a well-organized group that worked with an economy of effort. 5. Economy class. 6. Theology. The method of God’s government of and activity within the world. — adj. Economical or inexpensive to buy or use: an economy car; an economy motel. [Middle English yconomye, management of a household, from Latin oconomia, from Greek oikonomia, from oikonomos, one who manages a household : oikos, house; see weik-¹ in Appendix + nemein, to allot, manage; see nem- in Appendix.]

WORD HISTORY: Managing an economy has at least an etymological justification. The word economy can probably be traced back to the Greek word oikonomos, “one who manages a household,” derived from oikos, “house,” and nemein, “to manage.” From oikonomos was derived oikonomia, which had not only the sense “management of a household or family” but also senses such as “thrift,” “direction,” “administration,” “arrangement,” and “public revenue of a state.” The first recorded sense of our word economy, found in a work possibly composed in 1440, is “the management of economic affairs,” in this case, of a monastery. Economy is later recorded in other senses shared by oikonomia in Greek, including “thrift” and “administration.” What is probably our most frequently used current sense, “the economic system of a country or an area,” seems not to have developed until the 19th or 20th century.

economy class (ĭ-kŏn'ə-mē klās) n. The least expensive class of accommodations, especially on an airplane.

ec·o·phys·i·ol·o·gy (ĕk'ō-fĭz'ē-ŏl'ə-jē, ē'kō-) n. The study of the interrelationship between an organisms’s physical functioning and its environment.

é·cor·ché (ā'kôr-shā') n. An anatomical representation of the body or a part of the body with the skin removed so as to display the musculature. [French, from past participle of écorcher, to flay, from Latin excorticāre : ex-, off, away; see EX- + cortex, cortic-, bark, skin; see CORTEX.]

ec·o·spe·cies (ĕk'ō-spĕ'shēz, -sēz, ē'kō-) n. pl. ecospecies. A taxonomic species considered in terms of its ecological characteristics and usually including several interbreeding ecotypes.

ec·o·sphere (ĕk'ō-sfĭr', ē'kō-) n. The regions of the universe, especially on the earth, that are capable of supporting life; the biosphere.

ec·o·sys·tem (ĕk'ō-sĭs'təm, ē'kō-) n. An ecological community together with its environment, functioning as a unit.

ec·o·tone (ĕk'ə-tōn', ē'kə-) n. A transitional zone between two communities containing the characteristic species of each. [ECO- + Greek tonos, tension, tone; see TONE.]

ec·o·type (ĕk'ə-tīp', ē'kə-) n. The smallest taxonomic subdivision of an ecospecies, consisting of populations adapted to a particular set of environmental conditions. The populations are infertile with other ecotypes of the same ecospecies. —ec'·o·typ'ic (-tīp'ik) adj.

ec·ru (ĕk'rōō, ā'krōō) n. Color. A grayish to pale yellow or light grayish-yellowish brown. [French écru, raw, unbleached, from Old French escru : es-, intensive pref. (from Latin ex-); see EX- + cru, raw (from Latin crūdus); see kreuə- in Appendix.]

ec·sta·sy (ĕk'stə-sē) n. pl. ec·sta·sies. 1. Intense joy or delight. 2. A state of emotion so intense that one is carried beyond rational thought and self-control: an ecstasy of rage. 3. The trance, frenzy, or rapture associated with mystic or prophetic exaltation. [Middle English extasie, from Old French, from Late Latin extasis, terror, from Greek ekstasis, astonishment, distraction, from existanai, to displace, derange : ex-, out of; see EXO- + histanai, to place; see stā- in Appendix.]

SYNONYMS: ecstasy, rapture, transport, exaltation. These nouns all refer to a state of elated bliss. In its original sense ecstasy denoted a trancelike condition marked by loss of orientation toward rational experience and by concentration on a single emotion; now it usually means intense delight: “To burn always with this hard, gemlike flame, to maintain this ecstasy, is success in life” (Walter Pater). Rapture originally meant a being caught up in an emotional state, typically involuntary and uncontrollable. In current usage rapture, like ecstasy, simply means great joy: “Oliver would sit... listening to the sweet music, in a perfect rapture” (Charles Dickens). Transport is the state of being carried away by strong emotion: “Surprised by joy—impatient as the Wind/I turned to share the transport” (William Wordsworth). Exaltation is a feeling or condition of elevated, often excessively passionate emotion: “There are men in the world who derive as stern an exaltation from the proximity of disaster and ruin, as others from success” (Winston S. Churchill).

ec·stat·ic (ĕk-stăt'ik) adj. 1. Marked by or expressing ecstasy. 2. Being in a state of ecstasy; enraptured. [French extatique, from Greek ekstatikos, from ekstasis, distraction. See ECSTASY.] —ec·stat'ic·al·ly adv.

ECT abbr. Electroconvulsive therapy.

ecto- pref. Outer; external: ectoparasite. [Greek ekto-, from ektos, outside, from ek, ek-, out. See eghs in Appendix.]

ec·to·com·men·sal (ĕk'tə-kə-mĕn'səl) n. A commensal organism that lives on the outer body surface of another organism.

ec·to·derm (ĕk'tə-dûrm') n. 1. The outermost of the three primary germ layers of an embryo, from which the epidermis, nervous tissue, and, in vertebrates, sense organs develop. 2. The outer layer of a diploblastic animal, such as a jellyfish. —ec'to-der'mal, ec'to-der'mic adj.

ec·tog·e·nous (ĕk-tøj'ə-nəs) also ec·to·gen·ic (ĕk'tə-jĕn'ik) adj. Able to live and develop outside a host, as certain pathogenic microorganisms do.

ec·to·mere (ĕk'tə-mîr') n. Any of the blastomeres from which the ectoderm develops. —ec'to-mer'ic (-mîr'ik, -mĕr'-) adj.

ec·to·morph (ĕk'tə-môrf') n. An individual having a lean, slightly muscular body build in which tissues derived from the embryonic ectoderm predominate. [ECTO(DERM) + -MORPH.]

ec·to·mor·phic (ĕk'tə-môrf'fik) adj. Of or relating to an ectomorph. [ECTO(DERM) + -MORPHIC.] —ec'to-mor'phy n.

-ectomy suff. Surgical removal: tonsillectomy. [New Latin -ectomia : Greek ek-, out; see ECTO- + -tomia, -tomy.]

ec·to·par·a·site (ĕk'tə-păr'ə-sīt') n. A parasite, such as a flea, that lives on the exterior of another organism. —ec'to-par'a-sit'ic (-sīt'ik) adj.
—ec'to-par'a-sit'ism n.

ec·to·pi·a (ĕk-tō'pĕ-ə) n. An abnormal location or position of an organ or a body part, occurring congenitally or as the result of injury. [New Latin, from Greek ektopos, away from a place : ek-, away from, out of; see ECTO- + topos, place.] —ec-top'ic (-tōp'ik) adj.

ectopic pregnancy (ĕk-tōp'ik prĕg'nən-sĕ) n. Implantation and subsequent development of a fertilized ovum outside the uterus, as in a fallopian tube.

ec·to·plasm (ĕk'tə-plăz'əm) n. 1. Biology. The outer portion of the continuous phase of cytoplasm of a cell, sometimes distinguishable as a somewhat rigid, gelled layer beneath the cell membrane. 2. a. The visible substance believed to emanate from the body of a spiritualistic medium during communication with the dead. b. An immaterial or ethereal substance, especially the transparent corporeal presence of a spirit or ghost. 3. Informal. An image projected onto a movie screen. —ec'to-plas'mic adj.

ec·to·sarc (ĕk'tə-sărk') n. The ectoplasm of certain protozoans, such as the amoeba. [ECTO- + Greek sarx, sarc-, flesh.]

ec·to·therm (ĕk'tə-thûrm') n. An organism that regulates its body temperature largely by exchanging heat with its surroundings; a poikilotherm.

ec·to·ther·mic (ĕk'tə-thûr'mik) also ec·to·ther·mal (ĕk'tə-thûr'məl) or ec·to·ther·mous (-məs) adj. Of or relating to an organism that regulates its body temperature largely by exchanging heat with its surroundings; cold-blooded.

é·cu (ā-kyōō') n. pl. é·cus (ā-kyōō'). Any of various old French coins, especially a silver five-franc piece. [French, from Old French escu, from Latin scūtum, shield (from the shield stamped on the coin). See skei- in Appendix.]

Ec·ua·dor (ĕk'wə-dôr') Abbr. Ec., Ecua. A country of northwest South America on the Pacific Ocean. First occupied by the Spanish in 1534, the area achieved independence in 1830. Quito is the capital and Guayaquil the largest city. Population, 8,050,630. —Ec'ua·dor'i·an adj. & n.

ec·u·men·i·cal (ĕk'yə-mĕn'ī-kəl) also ec·u·men·ic (-mĕn'īk) adj. 1. Of worldwide scope or applicability; universal. 2. a. Of or relating to the worldwide Christian church. b. Concerned with establishing or promoting unity among churches or religions. [From Late Latin oecūmenicus, from Greek oikoumenikos, from (hē) oikoumenē (gē), (the) inhabited (world), feminine present passive participle of oikein, to inhabit, from oikos, house. See weik-¹ in Appendix.]

—ec'u·men'i·cal n. —ec'u·men'i·cal·ism n. —ec'u·men'i·cal·ly adv.

ecumenical patriarch (ĕk'yə-mĕn'ī-kəl pā'trē-ärk') n. The patriarch of Constantinople, the highest ecclesiastical official of the Eastern Orthodox Church.

ec·u·men·i·cism (ĕk'yə-mĕn'ī-sīz'əm) n. Ecumenism. —ec'u·men'i·cist n.

ec·u·me·nism (ĕk'yə-mə-nīz'əm, ĭ-kyōō'-) n. 1. A movement promoting unity among Christian churches or denominations. 2. A movement promoting worldwide unity among religions through greater cooperation and improved understanding. —ec'u·men'ist n.

ec·ze·ma (ĕk'sə-mə, ĕg'zə-, ĭg-zē'-) n. A noncontagious inflammation of the skin, characterized chiefly by redness, itching, and the outbreak of lesions that may discharge serous matter and become encrusted and scaly. [New Latin, from Greek ekzema, from ekzein, to break out, boil over : ek-, out; see ECTO- + zein, to boil; see yes- in Appendix.] —ec·zem'a·tous (ĕg-zĕm'ə-təs, -zē'mə-təs, ĭg-) adj.

ed. abbr. 1. Edition; editor. 2. Education.

E.D. abbr. Election district.

-ed¹ suff. Used to form the past tense of regular verbs: tasted. [Middle English -ede, from Old English -ade, -ede, -ode.]

-ed² suff. Used to form the past participle of regular verbs: absorbed. [Middle English, from Old English -ad, -ed, -od.]

-ed³ suff. Having; characterized by; resembling: blackhearted. [Middle English -ede, -de, from Old English -ed, -od.]

e·da·cious (ī-dā'shəs) adj. Characterized by voracity; devouring. [From Latin edāx, edāc-, from edere, to eat. See ed- in Appendix.] —e·dac'i·ty (ī-dās'ī-tē) n.

E·dam¹ (ē'dəm, ē'dām', ā-dām') A town of western Netherlands on the IJsselmeer. Chartered in 1357, it has a famous cheese market. Population, 24,019.

E·dam² (ē'dəm, ē'dām') n. A mild, yellow Dutch cheese, pressed into balls and usually covered with red wax. [After Edam¹.]

e·daph·ic (ī-dāf'ik) adj. 1. Of or relating to soil, especially as it affects living organisms. 2. Influenced by the soil rather than by the climate. [From Greek edaphos, ground, soil. See sed- in Appendix.]

edaphic climax (ī-dāf'ik klī'māks') n. A climax community determined by soil factors, such as alkalinity, salinity, or drainage, rather than by climatic or physiographic characteristics.

Ed·da (ēd'ə) n. 1. A collection of Old Norse poems, called the Elder or Poetic Edda, assembled in the early 13th century. 2. A manual of Icelandic poetry, called the Younger or Prose Edda, written by Snorri Sturluson. [Old Norse.]

—Ed'dic adj.

Ed·ding·ton (ēd'ing-tən), Sir Arthur Stanley. 1882-1944. British mathematician, astronomer, and physicist who was an early exponent of the theory of relativity and conducted research on the evolution, structure, and motion of stars.

ed·do (ēd'ō) n. pl. ed·does. See taro. [Of Niger-Congo origin; akin to Akan (Fante) edwo, yam.]

ed·dy (ēd'ē) n. pl. ed·dies. 1. A current, as of water or air, moving contrary to the direction of the main current, especially in a circular motion. 2. A drift or tendency that is counter to or separate from a main current, as of opinion, tradition, or history. — v. ed·died, ed·dy·ing, ed·dies. — v. intr. To move in or as if in an eddy. See Synonyms at turn. — v. tr. To cause to move in or as if in an eddy. [Middle English ydy, probably of Scandinavian origin; akin to Old Norse idha.]

Ed·dy (ēd'ē), Mary (Morse) Baker. 1821-1910. American religious leader who founded Christian Science (1879), the tenets of which she explained in Science and Health (1875). She also founded the Christian Science Monitor (1908), a daily newspaper.

Ed·dy·stone Rocks (ēd'ī-stən rōks) A rocky islet of southwest England in the English Channel south of Plymouth. It has been the site of a strategic lighthouse since the 1690's.

E·de 1. (ā'də) A city of central Netherlands northwest of Arnhem. It is an industrialized commune. Population, 71,952. 2. (ā'dā, ā-dā') A city of western Nigeria northeast of Ibadan. It was a center of Yoruba culture. Population, 216,400.

Ed·el·man (ēd'l-mən), Gerald Maurice. Born 1929. American biochemist. He shared a 1972 Nobel Prize for research on the chemical structure and nature of antibodies.

e·del·weiss (ā'dəl-vīs', -wīs') n. An alpine plant (Leontopodium alpinum), native to Europe and having leaves covered with whitish down and small flower heads surrounded by conspicuous whitish bracts. [German : edel, noble (from Middle High German edele, from Old High German edili) + weiss, white (from Middle High German wīz, from Old High German wīz, hwīz); see kweit- in Appendix.]

e·de·ma also oe·de·ma (i-dē'mə) n. pl. e·de·mas or e·de·ma·ta (-mə-tə).

1. Pathology. An excessive accumulation of serous fluid in tissue spaces or a body cavity. 2. Botany. Extended swelling in plant organs caused primarily by an excessive accumulation of water. [Middle English ydema, from Greek oidēma, a swelling, from oidein, to swell.] —e·dem'a·tous (i-dēm'ə-təs) adj.

E·den¹ (ēd'n) n. 1. Bible. The garden that was the first home of Adam and Eve. Also called Garden of Eden 2. A delightful place; a paradise. 3. A state of innocence, bliss, or ultimate happiness. [Middle English, from Late Latin, from Greek Ēdēn, from Hebrew 'Eden, from 'eden, delight.] —E·den'ic (ē-dēn'ik) adj.

E·den² (ēd'n) A city of northern North Carolina near the Virginia border north of Greensboro. It is a processing and shipping center in an agricultural area. Population, 15,238.

E·den (ēd'n), Sir (Robert) Anthony First Earl of Avon. 1897-1977. British politician who as foreign minister (1935-1938, 1940-1945, and 1951-1955) was instrumental in the founding of the United Nations (1945) and as prime minister (1955-1957) supported the 1956 Anglo-French invasion of Egypt.

Eden Prairie (ēd'n prār'ē) A city of eastern Minnesota, a residential suburb of Minneapolis. Population, 39,311.

e·den·tate (ē-dēn'tāt') Biology. adj. 1. Lacking teeth. 2. Of or belonging to the order Edentata, which includes mammals having few or no teeth, such as anteaters, armadillos, and sloths. — n. A member of the Edentata. [Latin ēdentātus, past participle of ēdentāre, to knock out the teeth : ē-, ex-, ex- + dēns, dent-, tooth; see dent- in Appendix.]

e·den·tu·lous (ē-dēn'chə-ləs) adj. Biology. Having no teeth; toothless. [From Latin ēdentulus : ē-, ex-, ex- + dēns, dent-, tooth; see dent- in Appendix.]

E·der (ā'dər) A river rising in central Germany and flowing about 177 km (110 mi) generally eastward to the Fulda River.

E·der·le (ā'dər-lē), Gertrude Caroline. Born 1906. American swimmer who in 1926 became the first woman to swim the English Channel, doing so in 14 hours and 31 minutes.

E·des·sa (i-dēs'ə) An ancient city of Mesopotamia on the site of present-day Urfa in southeast Turkey. A major Christian center after the third century A.D., it fell to the Arabs in 639 and was captured by Crusaders in 1097.

edge (ěj) n. 1. a. A thin, sharpened side, as of the blade of a cutting instrument. b. The degree of sharpness of a cutting blade. c. A penetrating, incisive quality: "His simplicity sets off the satire, and gives it a finer edge" (William Hazlitt).

2. Keeness, as of desire or enjoyment; zest: The brisk walk gave an edge to my appetite. 3. a. The line of intersection of two surfaces: the edge of a brick; the rounded edges of the table. b. A rim or brink: the edge of a cliff. 4. a. The area or part away from the middle; an extremity: lifted the edge of the carpet. b. A dividing line; a border: a house on the edge of town. See Synonyms at border. c. A point of transition: on the edge of war. 5. A margin of superiority; an advantage: a slight edge over the opposition. See Synonyms at advantage. — v. edged, edg-ing, edg-es. — v. tr. 1. a. To give an edge to (a blade); sharpen.

b. Sports. To tilt (a ski or both skis) in such a way that an edge or both edges bite into the snow. 2. a. To put a border or edge on: edged the quilt with fanciful embroidery. b. To act as or be an edge of: flowers that edged the garden path.

3. To advance or push slightly or gradually: The dog edged the ball toward the child with its nose. 4. To trim or shape the edge of: edge a lawn. — v. intr. To move gradually or hesitantly: The child edged toward the door. — phrasal verb.

edge out. To surpass or beat by a small margin: The downhill racer edged her opponent out on the middle stretch. — idioms. on edge. Highly tense or nervous; irritable. on the edge. 2. In a precarious position. 3. In a state of keen excitement, as from danger or risk: “the excitement of combat, of living on the edge” (Nelson DeMille). [Middle English egge, from Old English ecg. See ak- in Appendix.] — edge/less adj.

edge effect (ĕj ĭ-fĕkt') n. Ecology. The occurrence of greater species diversity and biological density in an ecotone than in any of the adjacent ecological communities.

edg-er (ĕj'ər) n. One that edges, such as a tool for trimming the edge of a lawn. Edg-er-ton (ĕj'ər-tən), Harold Eugene. 1903-1990. American electrical engineer and photographer noted for his application of strobe lights to high-speed photography.

edge tool (ĕj tōl) n. A tool, such as a chisel, that has a cutting edge.

edge-wise (ĕj'wīz') also edge-ways (-wāz') adv. 1. With the edge foremost. 2. On, by, with, or toward the edge.

Edge-wood (ĕj'wōd') A community of northeast Maryland on an inlet of Chesapeake Bay northeast of Baltimore. A U.S. Army arsenal is nearby. Population, 23,903.

Edge-worth (ĕj'wūrth'), Maria. 1767-1849. British writer noted for her realistic novels, such as Castle Rackrent (1800), which broke away from the prevalent Gothic style.

edg-ing (ĕj'ɪŋ) n. Something that forms or serves as an edge or a border.

edg-y (ĕj'ē) adj. edg-i-er, edg-i-est. 1. Nervous or irritable: The performers were edgy as they waited for the show to begin. 2. Having a sharp or biting edge: an edgy wit. — edg'i-ly adv. — edg'i-ness n.

edh also eth (ĕth) n. 1. A letter (ð) appearing in Old English, Old Saxon, Old Norse, and modern Icelandic to represent an interdental fricative. 2. The symbol in the International Phonetic Alphabet representing the interdental voiced fricative, as in the or with. [Icelandic edh.]

ed·i·ble (ĕd'ə-bəl) adj. Fit to be eaten: edible roots; an edible mushroom. — n. Something fit to be eaten; food: edibles such as vegetables and meat. [Late Latin edibilis, from Latin edere, to eat. See ed- in Appendix.] — ed'i·bil'i·ty, ed'i·ble·ness n.

edible canna (ĕd'ə-bəl kăn'ə) n. 1. A South American and West Indian plant (Canna edulis) having large red flowers and edible tubers. Also called achira, Queensland arrowroot. 2. The tubers of this plant.

e·dict (ĕ'dīkt') n. 1. A decree or proclamation issued by an authority and having the force of law. 2. A formal pronouncement or command. [Latin ēdictum, from neuter past participle of ēdicere, to declare : ē-, ex-, ex- + dīcere, to speak; see deik- in Appendix.]

ed·i·fi·ca·tion (ĕd'ə-fī-kā'shən) n. Intellectual, moral, or spiritual improvement; enlightenment.

ed·i·fice (ĕd'ə-fīs) n. 1. A building, especially one of imposing appearance or size. See Synonyms at building. 2. An elaborate conceptual structure: observations that provided the foundation for the edifice of evolutionary theory. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin aedificium, from aedificāre, to build : aedis, a building + -ficāre, -fy.] ed·i·fy (ĕd'ə-fī') v. tr. ed·i·fied, ed·i·fy·ing, ed·i·fies. To instruct especially so as to encourage intellectual, moral, or spiritual improvement. [Middle English edifiēn, from Old French edifier, from Late Latin aedificāre, to instruct spiritually, from Latin, to build. See EDIFICE.] — ed'i·fi'er n.

E·di·na (ī-dī'nə) A city of eastern Minnesota, a residential suburb of Minneapolis. Population, 46,070.

Ed·in·burg (ĕd'n-bûrg') A city of southern Texas near the Mexican border west-northwest of Brownsville. It is a processing center in an agricultural region. Population, 29,885.

Ed·in·burgh (ĕd'n-bûr'ə, -bûr'ə, -brə) The capital of Scotland, in the eastern part of the country on the Firth of Forth. Once known as "Auld Reekie" for the thick clouds of smoke that hung over its low-lying areas, the picturesque city is a brewing center, a popular tourist attraction, and the site of an annual international festival of the arts. Population, 446,361.

Ed·in·burgh (ĕd'n-bûr'ə, -bûr'ə, -brə), Duke of. See Prince. Philip.

E·dir·ne (ĕ-dîr'nĕ) Formerly A·dri·a·no·ple (ā'drĕ-ə-nō'pəl). A city of northwest Turkey northwest of Istanbul. It was founded c. A.D. 125 by the Roman emperor Hadrian on the site of an earlier Thracian town and was conquered at various times by Visigoths, Bulgarians, Crusaders, Turks, and Russians. Held by Greece after 1920, it was restored to Turkey in 1923. Population, 71,914.

Ed·i·son (ĕd'i-sən) A community of central New Jersey northeast of New Brunswick. It is mainly residential. Population, 88,680.

Ed·i·son (ĕd'ī-sən), Thomas Alva. 1847-1931. American inventor who patented more than a thousand inventions, among them the microphone (1877), the phonograph (1878), and an incandescent lamp (1879). In New York City he installed the world's first central electric power plant (1881-1882).

Ed·is·to (ĕd'ī-stō') A river, about 241 km (150 mi) long, of southern South Carolina flowing southeast to the Atlantic Ocean.

ed·it (ĕd'īt) v. tr. ed·it·ed, ed·it·ing, ed·its. 1. a. To prepare (written material) for publication or presentation, as by correcting, revising, or adapting. b. To prepare an edition of for publication: edit a collection of short stories. c. To modify or adapt so as to make suitable or acceptable: edited her remarks for presentation to a younger audience. 2. To supervise the publication of (a newspaper or magazine, for example). 3. To assemble the components of (a film or soundtrack, for example), as by cutting and splicing. 4. To eliminate; delete: edited the best scene out. — n. An act or instance of editing: made several last-minute edits for reasons of space. [Partly back-formation from EDITOR, and partly from French éditer, to publish (from Latin ēditus, past participle of ēdere); see EDITION.]

WORD HISTORY: The word edit is often cited as an example of back-formation. In other words, edit is not the source of editor, as dive is of diver, the expected derivational pattern; rather, the reverse is the case. Edit in the sense “to prepare for publication,” first recorded in 1793, comes from editor, first recorded in 1712 in the sense “one who edits.” There is more to the story, however. Edit also partly comes from the French word éditer, “to publish, edit,” first recorded in 1784. In the case of edit, two processes, borrowing and back-formation, have thus occurred either independently or together, perhaps one person taking edit from French originally, another from editor, and yet a third from both.

edit. abbr. Edition; editor.

E·dith Ca·vell (ĕ'dīth kăv'əl, kə-vĕl'), Mount. A peak, 3,365.1 m (11,033 ft) high, in the Rocky Mountains of southwest Alberta, Canada.

e·di·tion (ī-dīsh'ən) n. Abbr. ed., edit. 1. a. The entire number of copies of a publication issued at one time or from a single set of type. b. A single copy from this group. c. The form in which a publication is issued: a paperback edition of a novel; an annotated edition of Shakespeare. d. A version of an earlier publication having substantial changes or additions: a newly revised edition of a standard reference work. 2. All the copies of a specified issue of a newspaper: the morning edition; the Sunday edition. 3. A broadcast of a radio or television news program: Thursday's edition of the six o'clock news. 4. a. The entire number of like or identical items issued or produced as a set: a limited edition of early jazz recordings; a signed edition of a group of lithographs. b. Any of the various or successive forms in which something is offered or presented: this year's edition of fall fashions from Paris. 5. One that closely resembles an original; a version: The boy was a smaller edition of his father. [Middle English edicion, version, translation, from Latin ēditō, ēditiōn-, publication, production, from ēditus, past participle of ēdere, to publish, produce : ē-, ex-, ex- + dare, to give; see dō- in Appendix.]

ed·i·tor (ĕd'ī-tər) n. Abbr. ed., edit. 1. One who edits, especially as an occupation. 2. One who writes editorials. 3. A device for editing film, consisting basically of a splicer and viewer. 4. Computer Science. A program or set of instructions used to edit text or data files. [Late Latin ēditor, publisher, from Latin ēditus, past participle of ēdere, to publish. See EDITION.]

ed·i·to·ri·al (ĕd'ī-tōr'ē-əl, -tōr'-) n. 1. An article in a publication expressing the opinion of its editors or publishers. 2. A commentary on television or radio expressing the opinion of the station or network. — adj. 1. Of or relating to an editor or editing: an editorial position with a publishing company; an editorial policy prohibiting the use of unnamed sources. 2. Of or resembling an editorial, especially in expressing an opinion: an editorial comment. — ed'ī-to'ri-al-ly adv.

ed·i·to·ri·al·ist (ĕd'ī-tōr'ē-əl-ist, -tōr'-) n. One who writes or presents editorials.

ed·i·to·ri·al·ize (ĕd'ī-tōr'ē-əl-īz', -tōr'-) v. intr. ed·i·to·ri·al·ized, ed·i·to·ri·al·iz·ing, ed·i·to·ri·al·iz·es. 1. To express an opinion in or as if in an editorial. 2. To present an opinion in the guise of an objective report.

— ed'ī-to'ri-al-i-za'tion (-ə-lī-zā'shən) n. — ed'ī-to'ri-al-i'zer n.

editor in chief (ĕd'ī-tər ĭn chĕf) n. pl. editors in chief. The editor having final responsibility for the operations and policies of a publication.

ed·i·tor·ship (ĕd'ī-tər-shĭp') n. The position, functions, or guidance of an editor.

Ed.M. abbr. Latin. Educationis Magister (Master of Education).

Ed·mond (ĕd'mənd) A city of central Oklahoma north of Oklahoma City. It is a trade center in an oil-producing area. Population, 52,315.

Ed·monds (ĕd'məndz) A city of northwest Washington on Puget Sound north of Seattle. It was settled in 1866. Population, 27,679.

Ed·mon·ton (ĕd'mən-tən) The capital and largest city of Alberta, Canada, in the central part of the province north of Calgary. It was founded in 1795 as a fort and trading post of the Hudson's Bay Company. Population, 532,246.

Ed·mund I (ĕd'mənd), 921-946. King of the English (939-946) who drove the Danes from Northumbria and secured peace with Scotland.

Ed·mund II (ĕd'mənd), Known as "Edmund Ironside." 993?-1016. King of the English (1016) who partitioned the kingdom in a settlement with Canute and died only weeks later.

Ed·munds (ĕd'məndz), George Franklin. 1828-1919. American politician. As U.S. senator from Vermont (1866-1891) he was active in the prosecution of President Andrew Johnson.

E·do (ĕd'ō) See Tokyo.

E·dom (ē'dəm) An ancient country of Palestine between the Dead Sea and the Gulf of Aqaba. According to the Old Testament, the original inhabitants were descendants of Esau.

E·dom·ite (ē'də-mīt') n. A member of a Semitic people inhabiting Edom in ancient times. —E'dom·it'ish adj.

EDP abbr. Computer Science. Electronic data processing.

EDT or E.D.T. abbr. Eastern Daylight Time.

EDTA (ē'dē-tē-ā') n. A crystalline acid, C₁₀H₁₆N₂O₈, that acts as a strong chelating agent. The sodium salt of EDTA is used as an antidote for metal poisoning, an anticoagulant, and an ingredient in a variety of industrial reagents. [e(thyl-ene)d(iamine)t(etraacetic) a(cid).] educ. abbr. Education; educational.

ed·u·ca·ble (ĕj'ə-kə-bəl) adj. Capable of being educated or taught: educable youngsters. —ed'·u·ca·bil'·i·ty n.

ed·u·cate (ĕj'ə-kāt') v. ed·u·cat·ed, ed·u·cat·ing, ed·u·cates. — v. tr.

1. To develop the innate capacities of, especially by schooling or instruction. See Synonyms at teach. 2. To provide with knowledge or training in a particular area or for a particular purpose: decided to educate herself in foreign languages; entered a seminary to be educated for the priesthood. 3. a. To provide with information; inform: a campaign that educated the public about the dangers of smoking. b. To bring to an understanding or acceptance: hoped to educate the voters to the need for increased spending on public schools. 4. To stimulate or develop the mental or moral growth of. 5. To develop or refine (one's taste or appreciation, for example). — v. intr. To teach or instruct a person or group. [Middle English educaten, from Latin ēducāre, ēducātus. See deuk- in Appendix.]

ed·u·cat·ed (ĕj'ə-kā'tīd) adj. 1. Having an education, especially one above the average. 2. a. Showing evidence of schooling, training, or experience. b. Having or exhibiting cultivation; cultured: an educated manner. 3. Based on a certain amount of experience or factual knowledge: an educated guess.

ed·u·ca·tion (ĕj'ə-kā'shən) n. Abbr. ed., educ. 1. The act or process of educating or being educated. 2. The knowledge or skill obtained or developed by a learning process. 3. A program of instruction of a specified kind or level: driver education; a college education. 4. The field of study that is concerned with the pedagogy of teaching and learning. 5. An instructive or enlightening experience: Her work in the inner city was a real education.

ed·u·ca·tion·al (ĕj'ə-kā'shə-nəl) adj. Abbr. educ. 1. Of or relating to education. 2. Serving to educate; instructive: an educational film. —ed'·u·ca·tion·al·ly adv.

ed·u·ca·tion·al·ist (ĕj'ə-kā'shə-nə-līst) n. Variant of educationist.

educational psychology (ěj'ə-kā'shə-nəl sī-kōl'ə-jē) n. The branch of psychology that is concerned with the development of effective teaching techniques, the assessment of student aptitudes and progress, and the selection of students for specialized programs of study, such as those for the learning-disabled or the gifted.

educational television (ěj'ə-kā'shə-nəl tēl'ə-vīzh'ən) n. Abbr. ETV 1. See public television. 2. An often closed-circuit video system that provides instructional material.

ed·u·ca·tion·ist (ěj'ə-kā'shə-nīst) also ed·u·ca·tion·al·ist (-shə-nə-līst) n. A specialist in the theory of education.

ed·u·ca·tive (ěj'ə-kā'tív) adj. Educational.

ed·u·ca·tor (ěj'ə-kā'tər) n. 1. One trained in teaching; a teacher. 2. a. A specialist in the theory and practice of education. b. An administrator of a school or an educational institution.

e·duce (ī-dōos', ī-dyōos') v. tr. e·duced, e·duc·ing, e·duc·es. 1. To draw or bring out; elicit. See Synonyms at evoke. 2. To assume or work out from given facts; deduce. [Middle English educen, to direct the flow of, from Latin ēducere: ē-, ex-, ex- + dūcere, to lead; see deuk- in Appendix.] —e·duc'ible adj.

—e·duc'tion (ī-dūk'shən) n.

Ed·ward¹ (ěd'wərd), Known as “the Confessor.” 1003?-1066. King of the English (1042-1066) whose reign was marked by political conflict between Norman and English groups.

Ed·ward² (ěd'wərd), Prince of Wales. Known as “the Black Prince.” 1330-1376. English soldier during the Hundred Years' War. The eldest son of Edward III, he fought at Crécy (1346) and Poitiers (1356), where the English forces captured John II of France.

Ed·ward I (ěd'wərd), 1239-1307. King of England (1272-1307) who conquered Wales and warred with Scotland. His Model Parliament of 1295 is sometimes considered England's first full parliament.

Ed·ward II (ěd'wərd), 1284-1327. King of England (1307-1327) who was defeated at Bannockburn by the Scots (1314). Captured (1326) and deposed (1327) during the rebellion of Roger de Mortimer, he was imprisoned in Berkeley Castle and murdered.

Ed·ward III (ěd'wərd), 1312-1377. King of England (1327-1377) whose reign was marked by the beginning of the Hundred Years' War, epidemics of the Black Death, and the emergence of the Commons as a powerful arm of Parliament.

Ed·ward IV (ěd'wərd), 1442-1483. King of England (1461-1470 and 1471-1483) who was crowned after leading the Yorkists to victory in the Wars of the Roses. In 1470 he was dethroned in a rebellion but won back the crown in a battle at Tewkesbury (1471).

Ed-ward V (ĕd'wərd), 1470-1483. King of England (1483) who was crowned at the age of 13 on the death of his father, Edward IV, and was immediately confined in the Tower of London, where he and his younger brother were murdered, possibly by their uncle the Duke of Gloucester, later Richard III, or by Henry VII.

Ed-ward VI (ĕd'wərd), 1537-1553. King of England and Ireland (1547-1553). The son of Henry VIII and Jane Seymour, he died of tuberculosis.

Ed-ward VII (ĕd'wərd), 1841-1910. King of Great Britain and Ireland (1901-1910) who traveled much of Europe to improve Britain's international relations and was known for his elegant, sporting style.

Ed-ward VIII (ĕd'wərd), Later known as Duke of Windsor. 1894-1972. King of Great Britain and Ireland (1936) who precipitated a constitutional crisis by his determination to marry Wallis Warfield Simpson, an American divorcée. He abdicated, married (1937), and spent much of the rest of his life in France.

Edward, Lake. A lake in the Great Rift Valley of central Africa on the Zaire-Uganda border. It was discovered by Henry M. Stanley in 1889.

Ed-ward-i-an (ĕd-wôrd'dē-ən, -wärd'-) adj. Of, relating to, or characteristic of the reign of Edward VII of England.

Ed-wards (ĕd'wərdz), Jonathan. 1703-1758. American theologian and philosopher whose original sermons and writings stimulated the Great Awakening, a period of renewed American interest in religion.

Ed-win (ĕd'wĭn), 585?-633. King of Northumbria (617-633) who ruled as far north as Edinburgh and was converted to Christianity (627).

e.e. abbr. Errors excepted.

E.E. abbr. 1. Electrical engineer. 2. Electrical engineering.

-ee¹ suff. 1. a. One that receives or benefits from a specified action: addressee. b. One that possesses a specified thing: mortgagee. 2. One that performs a specified action: absentee. [Middle English, from Anglo-Norman -e, -ee, past participle suff., from Latin -ātus. See *-ATE*¹.]

USAGE NOTE: Reflecting its origins in the French passive participle ending -é (feminine -ée), the suffix -ee was first used in English to refer to indirect objects and then direct objects of transitive verbs, particularly in legal contexts (as in donee, lessee, or trustee) and military and political jargon (draftee, trainee, or nominee). Beginning around the mid-19th century, primarily in American English, it was often extended to denote the agent or subject of an intransitive verb; for example, standee, returnee, or attende. Although the pattern is very common and a number of these coinages, such as honoree, deportee, and escapee, have become widely accepted, in general they retain an informal character as jocular nonce words.

-ee² suffix. 1. a. One resembling: goatee. b. A particular, especially a diminutive kind of: bootee. 2. One connected with: bargee. [Variant of -y¹.]

EEC abbr. European Economic Community.

EEG abbr. 1. Electroencephalogram. 2. Electroencephalograph.

eel (ēl) n. pl. eel or eels. 1. Any of various long, snakelike, scaleless marine or freshwater fishes of the order Anguilliformes or Apodes, especially Anguilla rostrata of eastern North America or A. anguilla of Europe, that lack pelvic fins and characteristically migrate from fresh water to salt water to spawn. 2. Any of several similar fishes, such as the lamprey and electric eel. [Middle English ele, from Old English ǣl.]

eel-grass (ēl'grās') n. Any of several submersed aquatic plants of the genus Valisneria. Also called tape grass, wild celery.

eel-pout (ēl'pout') n. pl. eelpout or eel-pouts. 1. Any of various bottom-dwelling marine fishes of the family Zoarcidae, having an elongated body and a large head. 2. See burbot.

eel-worm (ēl'wûrm') n. Any of various often parasitic nematode worms, such as the vinegar eel.

e'en¹ (ēn) n. Evening.

e'en² (ēn) adv. Even.

EEO abbr. Equal employment opportunity.

-eer suffix. One associated with, concerned with, or engaged in: balladeer. [French -ier, from Old French, from Latin -ārius, -ary.]

e'er (âr) adv. Ever.

ee-rie or ee-ry (îr'ē) adj. ee-ri-er, ee-ri-est. 1. a. Inspiring inexplicable fear, dread, or uneasiness; strange and frightening. b. Suggestive of the supernatural; mysterious. See Synonyms at weird. 2. Scots. Frightened or intimidated by superstition. [Middle English eri, fearful, from Old English earg, cowardly.]

—ee'ri-ly adv. —ee'ri-ness n.

ef (ěf) n. The letter f.

E·fa·te (ā-fä'tē, ě-fä'tě) A volcanic island of central Vanuatu in the New Hebrides. Vila, the capital of Vanuatu, is on the island.

eff. abbr. Efficiency.

ef·face (ī-fās') v. tr. ef·faced, ef·fac·ing, ef·fac·es. 1. To rub or wipe out; erase. 2. To make indistinct as if by rubbing: "Five years' absence had done nothing to efface the people's memory of his firmness" (Alan Moorehead). See Synonyms at erase. 3. To conduct (oneself) inconspicuously: "When the two women went out together, Anna deliberately effaced herself and played to the dramatic Molly" (Doris Lessing). [Middle English effacen, from French effacer, from Old French esfacier: es-, out (from Latin ex-, ex-) + face, face (from Latin faciēs); see dhē- in Appendix.] —ef·face/a·ble adj. —ef·face/ment n. —ef·fac'er n.

ef·fect (ĭ-fĕkt') n. 1. Something brought about by a cause or an agent; a result. 2. The power to produce an outcome or achieve a result; influence: The drug had an immediate effect on the pain. The government's action had no effect on the trade imbalance. 3. A scientific law, hypothesis, or phenomenon: the photovoltaic effect. 4. Advantage; avail: used her words to great effect in influencing the jury. 5. The condition of being in full force or execution: a new regulation that goes into effect tomorrow. 6. a. Something that produces a specific impression or supports a general design or intention: The lighting effects emphasized the harsh atmosphere of the drama. b. A particular impression: large windows that gave an effect of spaciousness. c. Production of a desired impression: spent lavishly on dinner just for effect. 7. The basic or general meaning; import: He said he was greatly worried, or words to that effect. 8. effects. Movable belongings; goods. — v. tr. ef·fect·ed, ef·fect·ing, ef·fects. 1. To bring into existence. 2. To produce as a result. 3. To bring about. See Usage Note at affect¹. — idiom. in effect. In essence; to all purposes: testimony that in effect contradicted her earlier statement. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin effectus, past participle of efficere, to accomplish : ex-, ex- + facere, to make; see dhē- in Appendix.] — ef·fect'er n. — ef·fect'i·ble adj.

SYNONYMS: effect, consequence, result, outcome, upshot, sequel. These nouns denote something, such as an occurrence, a situation, or a condition, that is brought about by a cause. An effect is produced by the action of an agent or a cause and follows it in time: “Every cause produces more than one effect” (Herbert Spencer). A consequence also follows a cause and is traceable to it, but the relationship between them is less sharply definable: “Servitude is at once the consequence of his crime and the punishment of his guilt” (John P. Curran). A result is an effect, or the last in a series of effects, that is viewed as the end product of the operation of the cause: “Judging from the results I have seen... I cannot say... that I agree with you” (William H. Mallock). An outcome is a result but more strongly than result implies finality and may suggest the operation of a cause over a relatively long period: If you had refused, the outcome would probably not have been very different. An upshot is a decisive result, often of the nature of a climax: “The upshot of the matter... was that she showed both of them the door” (Robert Louis Stevenson). A sequel is a consequence that ensues after a lapse of time: “Our dreams are the sequel of our waking knowledge” (Ralph Waldo Emerson). See also Synonyms at perform ef·fec·tive (ĭ-fĕk'tĭv) adj. 1. a. Having an intended or expected effect. b. Producing a strong impression or response; striking: gave an effective performance as Othello. 2. Operative; in effect: The law is effective immediately. 3. Existing in fact; actual: a decline in the effective demand. 4. Prepared for use or action, especially in warfare. — n. A soldier or a piece of military equipment that is ready for combat: “The ‘company’ was no more than two platoons of effectives” (Tom Clancy). — ef·fec′tive·ness, ef′fec·tiv′i·ty n.

SYNONYMS: effective, effectual, efficacious, efficient. The central meaning shared by these adjectives is “producing or capable of producing a desired effect”: an effective reprimand; an effectual complaint; an efficacious remedy; the efficient cause of the revolution.

ANTONYM: ineffective

ef·fec·tive·ly (ī-fĕk′tĭv-lē) adv. 1. In an effective way. 2. For all practical purposes; in effect: Though a few rebels still held out, the fighting was effectively ended.

ef·fec·tor (ī-fĕk′tər) n. 1. A muscle, a gland, or an organ capable of responding to a stimulus, especially a nerve impulse. 2. A nerve ending that carries impulses to a muscle, a gland, or an organ and activates muscle contraction or glandular secretion. 3. Biochemistry. A small molecule that when bound to the allosteric site of an enzyme causes either a decrease or an increase in the activity of the enzyme. 4. Computer Science. A device used to produce a desired change in an object in response to input.

ef·fec·tu·al (ī-fĕk′chōō-əl) adj. Producing or sufficient to produce a desired effect; fully adequate. See Synonyms at effective. [Middle English effectuel, from Old French, from Late Latin effectuālis, from Latin effectus. See EFFECT.] — ef·fec′tu·al′i·ty (-ăl′ī-tē), ef·fec′tu·al·ness n. — ef·fec′tu·al·ly adv.

ef·fec·tu·ate (ī-fĕk′chōō-āt′) v. tr. ef·fec·tu·at·ed, ef·fec·tu·at·ing, ef·fec·tu·ates. To bring about; effect. [Medieval Latin effectuāre, effectuāt-, from Latin effectus, an effect. See EFFECT.] — ef·fec′tu·a′tion n.

ef·fem·i·na·cy (ī-fĕm′ə-nə-sē) n. The quality or condition of being effeminate.

ef·fem·i·nate (ī-fĕm′ə-nĭt) adj. 1. Having qualities or characteristics more often associated with women than men. See Synonyms at feminine. 2. Characterized by weakness and excessive refinement. [Middle English effeminate, from Latin effēminātus, past participle of effēmināre, to make feminine : ex-, ex- + fēmina, woman; see dhē(i)- in Appendix.] — ef·fem′i·nate n. — ef·fem′i·nate·ly adv. — ef·fem′i·nate·ness n.

ef·fen·di (ī-fĕn′dē) n. pl. ef·fen·dis. 1. Used as a title of respect for men in Turkey, equivalent to sir. 2. An educated or respected man in the Near East. [Turkish efendi, from Medieval Greek aphentēs, master, alteration of Greek authentēs. See AUTHENTIC.]

ef·fer·ent (ĕf′ər-ənt) adj. 1. Directed away from a central organ or section. 2. Carrying impulses from the central nervous system to an effector. — n. An effluent organ or body part, such as a blood vessel. [From Latin effluens, effluent- present participle of effluere, to carry off : ex-, ex- + fluere, to carry; see flu-¹ in Appendix.] —effluent-ly adv.

ef·fer·vesce (ĕf'ər-vĕs') v. intr. ef·fer·vesced, ef·fer·vesc·ing, ef·fer·vesc·es. 1. To emit small bubbles of gas, as a carbonated or fermenting liquid. 2. To escape from a liquid as bubbles; bubble up. 3. To show high spirits or excitement. [Latin effervescere : ex-, up, out; see EX- + fervescere, to start boiling, inchoative of fervēre, to boil; see bhreu- in Appendix.] —ef'fer-ves'cence, ef'fer-ves'cen·cy n. —ef'fer-ves'cent adj. —ef'fer-ves'cent-ly adv.

ef·fete (ī-fĕt') adj. 1. Depleted of vitality, force, or effectiveness; exhausted: the final, effete period of the baroque style. 2. Marked by self-indulgence, triviality, or decadence: an effete group of self-professed intellectuals. 3. Overrefined; effeminate. 4. No longer productive; infertile. [Latin effētus, worn out, exhausted : ex-, ex- + fētus, bearing young, pregnant; see dhē(i)- in Appendix.] —ef·fete'ly adv. —ef·fete'ness n.

WORD HISTORY: The fact that effete has come to mean “effeminate” marks a return to its etymological roots. Effete came into English from the Latin word effētus, made up of ex-, “out,” and the adjective fētus, “having recently given birth,” which is related to the noun fētus, “offspring,” a word we have borrowed as well. Latin effētus was used of plants that had borne fruit or of animals that had borne young, but effētus could also mean “worn out with bearing young, exhausted, feeble.” The English word effete, whose earliest appearance is recorded in 1621, was first used in senses similar or identical to senses of Latin effētus; however, in the last two centuries or so the senses “characterized by weakness or decadence” and “overrefined, effeminate,” have appeared. Both effeminate and effete go back to the same Indo-European root, dhē(i)-, meaning “to suck.” In effeminate we see the development from a form of the root meaning literally “she who suckles”; in effete, the development from a form of the root that refers to the baby who sucks milk from the mother.

ef·fi·ca·cious (ĕf'ī-kā'shəs) adj. Producing or capable of producing a desired effect. See Synonyms at effective. [From Latin efficāx, efficāc-, from efficere, to effect. See EFFECT.] —ef'fi-ca'cious-ly adv. —ef'fi-ca'cious-ness n.

ef·fi·ca·cy (ĕf'ī-kā-sĕ) n. Power or capacity to produce a desired effect; effectiveness. [Latin efficācia, from efficāx, efficāc-, efficacious. See EFFICACIOUS.]

ef·fi·cien·cy (ī-fīsh'ən-sĕ) n. pl. ef·fi·cien·cies. Abbr. eff. 1. a. The quality or property of being efficient. b. The degree to which this quality is exercised: The program was implemented with great efficiency and speed. 2. a. The ratio of the effective or useful output to the total input in any system. b. The ratio of the energy delivered by a machine to the energy supplied for its operation. 3. An efficiency apartment.

efficiency apartment (ĭ-fĭsh'ən-sē ə-pärt'mənt) n. A small, usually furnished apartment with a private bathroom and kitchenette.

efficiency expert (ĭ-fĭsh'ən-sē ěk'spûrt') n. A specialist who seeks to increase the productivity of a business or an industry by improving the efficiency of its operations.

ef-fi-cient (ĭ-fĭsh'ənt) adj. 1. Acting directly to produce an effect: an efficient cause. See Synonyms at effective. 2. a. Acting or producing effectively with a minimum of waste, expense, or unnecessary effort. b. Exhibiting a high ratio of output to input. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin efficiēns, efficient- present participle of efficere, to effect. See EFFECT.] —ef-fi-cient-ly adv.

ef-fi-gy (ěf'ə-jē) n. pl. ef-fi-gies. 1. A crude figure or dummy representing a hated person or group. 2. A likeness or image, especially of a person. —idiom.

in effigy. Symbolically, especially in the form of an effigy: The deposed dictator was burned in effigy by the crowd. [French effigie, from Latin effigiēs, likeness, from effingere, to portray : ex-, ex- + fingere, to shape; see dheigh- in Appendix.]

ef-flo-resce (ěf'lə-rēs') v. intr. ef-flo-resced, ef-flo-rescing, ef-flo-resces.

1. To blossom; bloom. 2. Chemistry. a. To become a powder by losing water of crystallization, as when a hydrated crystal is exposed to air. b. To become covered with a powdery deposit. [Latin efflōrēscere : ex-, ex- + flōrēscere, inchoative of flōrēre, to blossom (from flōs, flōr-, flower); see bhel³ in Appendix.]

ef-flo-res-cence (ěf'lə-rēs'əns) n. 1. Botany. A state or time of flowering; anthesis. 2. a. A gradual process of unfolding or developing. b. The highest point; the culmination. See Synonyms at bloom¹. 3. Chemistry. a. The deposit that results from the process of efflorescing. Also called *bloom*¹ b. The process of efflorescing. c. A growth of salt crystals on a surface caused by evaporation of salt-laden water. 4. Pathology. Redness, a rash, or an eruption on the skin.

—ef'flo-res'cent adj.

ef-flu-ence (ěf'lō-əns) n. 1. The act or an instance of flowing out.

2. Something that flows out or forth; an emanation: “tremendous emotional effluences that affected blocks of people at a time, causing them to walk faster” (Coleman Dowell).

ef-flu-ent (ěf'lō-ənt) adj. Flowing out or forth. — n. Something that flows out or forth, especially: a. A stream flowing out of a body of water. b. An outflow from a sewer or sewage system. c. A discharge of liquid waste, as from a factory or nuclear plant. [Middle English, from Latin effluēns, effluent- present participle of effluere, to flow out : ex-, ex- + fluere, to flow; see bhleu- in Appendix.]

ef·flu·vi·um (ĭ-flōō'vē-əm) n. pl. ef·flu·vi·a (-vē-ə) or ef·flu·vi·ums. 1. A usually invisible emanation or exhalation, as of vapor or gas. 2. a. A byproduct or residue; waste. b. The odorous fumes given off by waste or decaying matter. 3. An impalpable emanation; an aura. [Latin, from effluere, to flow out. See EFFLUENT.] —ef·flu/vi·al adj.

ef·flux (ĕf'lüks') n. 1. A flowing outward. 2. Something that flows out or forth; an effluence. 3. A passing or an expiration, as of time. [From Latin effluxus, past participle of effluere, to flow out. See EFFLUENT.] —ef·flux/ion (ĭ-flük'shən) n.

ef·fort (ĕf'ərt) n. 1. The use of physical or mental energy to do something; exertion. 2. A difficult exertion of the strength or will: It was an effort to get up. 3. A usually earnest attempt: Make an effort to arrive promptly. 4. Something done or produced through exertion; an achievement: a play that was his finest effort. 5. Physics. Force applied against inertia. [Middle English, from Old French esfort, from esforcier, to force, exert, from Medieval Latin exfortiāre: Latin ex-, ex- + Latin fortis, strong; see bhergh-² in Appendix.] —ef'fort·ful adj. —ef'fort·ful·ly adv.

SYNONYMS: effort, exertion, endeavor, application, pains, trouble. These nouns refer to the expenditure of physical or mental energy to accomplish something. Effort applies to an attempt, great or small, to do something; where it is not qualified, the term usually implies a substantial expenditure of time, strength, or faculties: “What is written without effort is in general read without pleasure” (Samuel Johnson). Exertion implies the exercise of vigorous effort: “England has saved herself by her exertions” (William Pitt the Younger). Endeavor suggests earnest striving to achieve a serious goal: “There must be positive endeavors to preserve peace” (Franklin D. Roosevelt). Application connotes diligence, persistence, and hard work: He succeeded in his studies by dint of steadfast application. Pains implies attentive or laborious effort: “Genius is an infinite capacity for taking pains” (Jane Ellice Hopkins). Trouble refers to effort that causes inconvenience or bother: Many people watch the news on television to save themselves the trouble of reading the newspaper.

ef·fort·less (ĕf'ərt-lis) adj. Calling for, requiring, or showing little or no effort. See Synonyms at easy. —ef'fort·less·ly adv. —ef'fort·less·ness n.

ef·front·er·y (ĭ-frŭn'tə-rē) n. pl. ef·front·er·ies. Brazen boldness; presumptuousness. See Synonyms at temerity. [French effronterie, from effronté, shameless, from Old French esfronte, possibly from Late Latin effrōns, effront-: ex-, ex- + frōns, front-, front, forehead.]

ef·ful·gence (ĭ-fōōl'jəns, ĭ-fŭl'-) n. A brilliant radiance.

ef·ful·gent (ĭ-fōōl'jənt, ĭ-fŭl'-) adj. Shining brilliantly; resplendent. See Synonyms at bright. [Latin effulgēns, effulgent- present participle of effulgēre, to shine out : ex-, ex- + fulgēre, to shine; see bhel-¹ in Appendix.]

ef·fuse (ĭ-fyōōs') adj. Botany. Spreading out loosely. — v. ef·fused, ef·fus·ing, ef·fus·es (ĭ-fyōōz'). — v. tr. 1. To pour out (a liquid). 2. To radiate; diffuse. — v. intr. 1. To spread or flow out. 2. To ooze forth; exude. [Latin effusus, past participle of effundere, to pour out : ex-, ex- + fundere, to pour; see gheu- in Appendix.]

ef·fu·sion (ĭ-fyōō'zhən) n. 1. a. The act or an instance of effusing. b. Liquid or other matter poured forth. 2. An unrestrained outpouring of feeling, as in speech or writing: "the devout effusions of sacred eloquence" (Edmund Burke). 3. Pathology. a. The seeping of serous, purulent, or bloody fluid into a body cavity or tissue. b. The effused fluid.

ef·fu·sive (ĭ-fyōō'siv) adj. 1. Unrestrained or excessive in emotional expression; gushy: an effusive manner. 2. Profuse; overflowing: effusive praise. —ef·fu'sive·ly adv. —ef·fu'sive·ness n.

Ef·ik (ĕf'ik) n. pl. Efik or Ef·iks. 1. A member of a people inhabiting southern Nigeria. 2. The Niger-Congo language of the Efik people, closely related to Ibibio. —Ef'ik adj.

EFM abbr. Electronic fetal monitor.

eft (ĕft) n. An immature newt, especially the reddish-orange terrestrial form of a North American species, Notophthalmus viridescens. [Middle English evete, from Old English efeta.]

EFTS abbr. Electronic funds transfer system.

eft·soons (ĕft-sōōnz') adv. Archaic. 1. Soon afterward; presently. 2. Once again. [From Middle English eftsone, from Old English eftsōna : eft, again; see apo- in Appendix + sōna, soon.]

e.g. abbr. Exempli gratia.

e·gad (ĭ-găd') or e·gads (ĭ-gădz') interj. Used as a mild exclamation. [Alteration of oh God.]

Eg·a·di Islands (ĕg'ə-dē ī'ləndz) also Ae·ga·de·an Isles (ē-gā'dē-ən) or Ae·ga·tes (-tēz) An island group of southwest Italy in the Mediterranean Sea west of Sicily. A Roman naval victory over the Carthaginians, achieved in a battle fought in the waters off the islands in 241 B.C., ended the First Punic War.

e·gal·i·tar·i·an (ĭ-gāl'ī-târ'ē-ən-) adj. Affirming, promoting, or characterized by belief in equal political, economic, social, and civil rights for all people. [From French égalitaire, from égalité, equality, from Latin aequālitās, from aequālis, equal. See EQUAL.] —e·gal'ī-tar'ī-an n. —e·gal'ī-tar'ī-an·ism n.

E·gas Mo·niz (ĕ-gäs' mō-nēsh'), Antonio de. 1874-1955. Portuguese neurologist. He shared a 1949 Nobel Prize for his advances in brain surgery.

Egbert (ĕg'bært), Died 839. West Saxon king (802-839) who became the first overlord of all the English peoples (829).

EGD abbr. Electrogasdynamics.

Eger (ā'gər) A city of northeast Hungary on the Eger River, about 311 km (193 mi) long. The city was occupied by the Turks from 1596 to 1687. Population, 64,702.

Egeria (ĭ-jĭr'ē-ə) n. A woman adviser or counselor. [After Egeria, Roman nymph or goddess and adviser to Numa Pompilius, a legendary Roman king.]

e-gest (ē-jĕst') v. tr. e-gest-ed, e-gest-ing, e-gests. To discharge or excrete from the body. [Latin ēgerere, ēgest-, to carry out : ē-, ex-, ex- + gerere, to carry.] —e-ges'tion n. —e-ges'tive adj.

e-ges-ta (ē-jĕs'tə) pl.n. Egested matter, especially excrement. [Latin, neuter pl. of ēgestus past participle of ēgerere, to carry out. See EGEST.] egg¹ (ĕg) n. 1. a. A female gamete; an ovum. Also called egg cell b. The round or oval female reproductive body of various animals, including birds, reptiles, amphibians, fishes, and insects, consisting usually of an embryo surrounded by nutrient material and a protective covering. c. The oval, thin-shelled reproductive body of a bird, especially that of a hen, used as food. 2. Something having the ovoid shape of an egg. 3. Slang. A fellow; a person: He's a good egg. — v. tr. egged, egg-ing, eggs. 1. To cover with beaten egg, as in cooking. 2. Slang. To throw eggs at. —idioms. put all (one's) eggs in one basket (or have all (one's) eggs in one basket). Informal. To risk everything on a single venture. egg on (one's) face. Informal. Embarrassment; humiliation: If you do that, you'll end up with egg on your face. [Middle English egge, bird's egg, from Old Norse egg. See awi- in Appendix.] —egg'less adj. —egg'y adj.

EGF abbr. Epidermal Growth Factor.

egg² (ĕg) v. tr. egged, egg-ing, eggs. To encourage or incite to action: The racing fans egged their favorites on. My friends just egged me to drive faster. [Middle English eggen, from Old Norse eggja. See ak- in Appendix.]

egg-and-dart (ĕg'ən-därt') n. A decorative molding consisting of a series of egg-shaped figures alternating with dart-shaped, anchor-shaped, or tongue-shaped figures.

egg-gar (ĕg'ər) n. Variant of egger.

egg-beat-er (ĕg'bĕ'tər) n. A hand-held kitchen utensil with rotating blades for beating, whipping, or mixing.

egg case (ĕg kās) n. 1. A protective capsule of certain animals, such as insects and mollusks, that contains eggs; an ootheca. 2. See egg sac.

egg cell (ĕg sĕl) n. See egg¹ (n., sense 1a).

egg cream (ĕg krēm) n. A drink made of milk, syrup, and soda water. [Probably from its foamy, egg-whitelike head.]

egg-cup (ĕg'kŭp') n. A cup for holding a usually soft-boiled egg.

egg-ger also egg-gar (ĕg'ər) n. Any of various moths of the family Lasiocampidae, whose larvae often construct tentlike webs among the branches of trees.

[From the shape of its cocoon.]

egg-fruit (ĕg'frōt') n. Botany. See canistel.

egg-head (ĕg'hĕd') n. Informal. An intellectual; a highbrow.

egg-head-ed (ĕg'hĕd'id) adj. Informal. Befitting or having the qualities of an intellectual. —egg-head-ed-ness n.

Eg-gle-ston (ĕg'əl-stən), Edward. 1837-1902. American writer known for his realistic but sentimental novels, such as The Hoosier Schoolmaster (1871).

egg-nog (ĕg'nŏg') n. A drink consisting of milk or cream, sugar, and eggs beaten together and often mixed with an alcoholic liquor such as rum or brandy.

[EGG¹ + nog, ale.]

egg-plant (ĕg'plānt') n. 1. a. An Indian plant (Solanum melongena var. esculenta) cultivated for its large edible, ovoid, glossy, usually purple-skinned fruit.

b. The fruit of this plant. Also called aubergine, melongene. 2. Color. A blackish purple.

egg roll (ĕg rōl) n. A usually deep-fried cylindrical casing of thin egg dough, filled with minced vegetables and often bits of seafood or meat. Also called spring roll egg sac (ĕg sāk) n. The silken pouch in which many spiders deposit their eggs. Also called egg case eggs Ben·e·dict (ĕgz' bĕn'ĭ-dĭkt') pl.n. (used with a sing. or pl. verb). A dish consisting of toasted halves of English muffin topped with broiled ham, poached eggs, and hollandaise sauce. [Probably from the name Benedict.]

egg-shell (ĕg'shĕl') n. 1. The thin, brittle, exterior covering of the egg of a bird or reptile. 2. Color. A pale yellow to yellowish white. —egg'shell' adj.

egg timer (ĕg tĭ'mər) n. A small hourglass running three to five minutes, used for timing the boiling of eggs.

egg tooth (ĕg tōōth) n. A hard, toothlike projection from the beak of embryonic birds, or from the upper jaw of embryonic reptiles, that is used to cut the egg membrane and shell upon hatching and that later falls off.

egg white (ĕg hwīt) n. The albumen of an egg, used especially in cooking.

e·gis (ē'jĭs) n. Variant of aegis.

eg-lan-tine (ĕg'lən-tĭn', -tĕn') n. See sweetbrier. [Middle English eglintin, from Old French eglantine, diminutive of aiglent, from Vulgar Latin aculentum*, from neuter of ·aculentus, spiny, from Latin aculeus, spine, from acus, needle. See ak- in Appendix.]

Eg-lev-sky (ĭ-glĕf'skĕ, ĕg'lĕf-), André. 1917-1977. Russian-born American ballet dancer considered the greatest classical male dancer of the 1940's and 1950's.

Eg·mont (ĕg'mōnt, ĕKH'mōnt), Comte Lamoral d'. 1522-1568. Flemish general and politician who refused to join William of Orange in a plan to overthrow Philip II of Spain but was beheaded nonetheless, precipitating a Flemish revolt against Spanish rule.

e·go (ĕ'gō, ĕg'ō) n. pl. e·gos. 1. The self, especially as distinct from the world and other selves. 2. In psychoanalysis, the division of the psyche that is conscious, most immediately controls thought and behavior, and is most in touch with external reality. 3. a. An exaggerated sense of self-importance; conceit. b. Appropriate pride in oneself; self-esteem. [New Latin, from Latin, I. See eg in Appendix.]

e·go·cen·tric (ĕ'gō-sĕn'trĭk, ĕg'ō-) adj. 1. Holding the view that the ego is the center, object, and norm of all experience. 2. a. Confined in attitude or interest to one's own needs or affairs. b. Caring only about oneself; selfish. 3. Philosophy. a. Viewed or perceived from one's own mind as a center. b. Taking one's own self as the starting point in a philosophical system. —e'go·cen'tric n. —e'go·cen'tric·al·ly adv. —e'go·cen'tric'i·ty (-trĭs'ĭ-tĕ) n. —e'go·cen'trism n.

ego ideal (ĕ'gō ĭ-dĕ'əl) n. In psychoanalysis, the part of one's ego that contains an idealized self based on those people, especially parents and peers, one admires and wishes to emulate.

e·go·ism (ĕ'gō-ĭz'əm, ĕg'ō-) n. 1. a. The ethical doctrine that morality has its foundations in self-interest. b. The ethical belief that self-interest is the just and proper motive for all human conduct. 2. Excessive preoccupation with one's own well-being and interests, usually accompanied by an inflated sense of self-importance. 3. Egotism; conceit. See Synonyms at conceit.

e·go·ist (ĕ'gō-ĭst, ĕg'ō-) n. 1. One devoted to one's own interests and advancement; an egocentric person. 2. An egotist. 3. An adherent of egoism. —e'go·is'tic, e'go·is'ti·cal adj. —e'go·is'ti·cal·ly adv.

e·go·ma·ni·a (ĕ'gō-mā'nĕ-ə, -mān'yə, ĕg'ō-) n. Obsessive preoccupation with the self. —e'go·ma'ni·ac' (-nĕ-āk') n. —e'go·ma·ni'a·cal (-mə-nĭ'ə-kəl) adj. —e'go·ma·ni'a·cal·ly adv.

e·go·tism (ĕ'gə-tĭz'əm, ĕg'ə-) n. 1. The tendency to speak or write of oneself excessively and boastfully. 2. An inflated sense of one's own importance; conceit. See Synonyms at conceit. [EGO + -tism as in NEPOTISM.]

e·go·tist (ĕ'gə-tĭst, ĕg'ə-) n. 1. A conceited, boastful person. 2. A selfish, self-centered person. —e'go·tis'tic, e'go·tis'ti·cal adj. —e'go·tis'ti·cal·ly adv.

ego trip (ĕ'gō trĭp) n. Slang. An act, an experience, or a course of behavior that gratifies the ego.

e·go·trip (ĕ'gō-trĭp', ĕg'ō-) v. intr. ego--tripped, ego--trip·ping, ego·trips. Slang. To act in an egotistic manner. —e'go·trip'per n.

e-gre-gious (ĭ-grĕ'jəs, -jĕ-əs) adj. Conspicuously bad or offensive. See Synonyms at flagrant. [From Latin ēgregius, outstanding : ē-, ex-, ex- + grex, greg-, herd; see ger- in Appendix.] —e-gre'gious-ly adv. —e-gre'gious-ness n.

e-gress (ĕ'grĕs') n. 1. The act of coming or going out; emergence. 2. The right of going out: refugees who were denied egress. 3. A path or opening for going out; an exit. 4. Astronomy. The emergence of a celestial body from eclipse or occultation. — v. intr. e-gressed, e-gress-ing, e-gress-es. To go out; emerge. [Latin ēgressus, from past participle of ēgredī, to go out : ē-, ex-, ex- + gradī, to go; see ghredh- in Appendix.]

e-gres-sion (ĭ-grĕsh'ən) n. The act or process of emerging; egress.

e-gret (ĕ'grĭt, ĕg'rĭt) n. Any of several usually white herons of the genera Bubulcus, Casmerodius, Egretta, and related genera, characteristically having long, showy, drooping plumes during the breeding season. [Middle English, from Old French aigrette, from Old Provençal aigreta, from aigron, heron, of Germanic origin.]

E-gypt (ĕ'jĭpt) Formerly (1958-1961) United Ar-ab Republic (är'əb). A country of northeast Africa on the Mediterranean Sea. In ancient times it was a flourishing kingdom and one of the earliest known civilizations, producing magnificent structures and delicate works of art. After the seventh century B.C. the kingdom declined, falling to various conquerors ranging from the Assyrians, Greeks, and Romans to the Turks, French, and British. It became an independent state in 1922. Cairo is the capital and the largest city. Population, 48,503,000.

E-gyp-tian (ĭ-jĭp'shən) n. 1. A native or inhabitant of Egypt. 2. The now extinct Afro-Asiatic language of the ancient Egyptians. — adj. 1. Of or relating to Egypt or its people or culture. 2. Of or relating to the language of the ancient Egyptians.

Egyptian clover (ĭ-jĭp'shən klō'vər) n. See berseem.

Egyptian corn (ĭ-jĭp'shən kōrn) n. See durra.

Egyptian cotton (ĭ-jĭp'shən kōt'n) n. A long-staple, fine cotton grown chiefly in northern Africa.

Egyptian millet (ĭ-jĭp'shən mĭl'ĭt) n. See Johnson grass.

Egyptian mongoose (ĭ-jĭp'shən mōng'gōōs') n. See ichneumon (n., sense 1).

Egyptian paper rush (ĭ-jĭp'shən pā'pər rŭsh) n. See papyrus (n., sense 1).

E-gyp-tol-o-gy (ĕ'jĭp-tōl'ə-jĕ) n. The study of the culture and artifacts of the ancient Egyptian civilization. —E-gyp'to-log'i-cal (ĭ-jĭp'tə-lōj'ĭ-kəl) adj.

—E'gyp-tol'o-gist n.

eh (ā, ĕ) interj. Used in asking a question or in seeking repetition or confirmation of a statement.

EHF abbr. Extremely high frequency.

EHP abbr. 1. Effective horsepower. 2. Electric horsepower.

Eh-ren-burg (ĕr'ən-bōōrg', ĕr'yĭn-bōōrk'), Ilya Grigorievich. 1891-1967.

Russian writer whose novels include The Storm (1948) and The Thaw (1954), which is set amid the repressive regime of Joseph Stalin.

Ehr-lich (âr'lĭKH), Paul. 1854-1915. German bacteriologist. He shared a 1908 Nobel Prize for discoveries and advances in immunology.

EHV abbr. Extra-high voltage.

Eich-mann (ĭk'mən, ĭKH'-, ĭKH-män'), Adolf. 1906-1962. German Nazi official who as head of the Gestapo's Jewish section (1939-1945) was chiefly responsible for the murder of millions of Jews during World War II. After the war he fled to South America, was captured by the Israeli secret service (1960), and was tried and executed in Israel.

ei-der (ĭ'dər) n. Any of several large sea ducks, especially of the genus Somateria of northern regions, having soft, commercially valuable down and predominantly black and white plumage in the male. [Ultimately from Old Norse ædhar, genitive of ædhr.]

ei-der-down also eider down (ĭ'dər-doun') n. 1. The down of the eider duck, used as stuffing for quilts and pillows. 2. A quilt stuffed with the down of the eider duck. 3. A warm, napped fabric.

eider duck (ĭ'dər dŭk) n. The eider.

ei-det-ic (ĭ-dĕt'ĭk) adj. Of, relating to, or marked by extraordinarily detailed and vivid recall of visual images. [German eidetisch, from Greek eidōs, form. See weid- in Appendix.] —ei-det'i-cal-ly adv.

ei-do-lon (ĭ-dō'lən) n. pl. ei-do-lons or ei-do-la (-lə). 1. A phantom; an apparition. 2. An image of an ideal. [Greek eidōlon, from eidōs, form. See weid- in Appendix.]

Ei-fel (ĭ'fəl) A hilly region of western Germany west of the Rhine River. The barren area has limestone moors and crater lakes.

Eif-fel (ĭ'fəl, ĭ-fĕl'), Alexandre Gustave. 1832-1923. French engineer who designed the Eiffel Tower for the Paris Exhibition of 1889. The tower is located on the southern bank of the Seine River and is 300 m (984 ft) high.

Ei-gen (ĭ'gən), Manfred. Born 1927. German chemist. He shared a 1967 Nobel Prize for research on high-speed chemical reactions.

eight (āt) n. 1. The cardinal number equal to 7 + 1. 2. The eighth in a set or sequence. 3. Something having eight parts, units, or members, especially:
a. Sports. An eight-oared racing shell. b. An eight-cylinder engine or motor vehicle. [Middle English eighte, from Old English eahta. See oktō(u) in Appendix.] —eight adj. & pron.

eight ball (āt bōl) n. Games. A black pool ball that bears the number eight and that may put a player at a disadvantage. —idiom. behind the eight ball. Slang. In an unfavorable or uncomfortable position.

- eight·een (ā-tēn′) n. 1. The cardinal number equal to 17 + 1. 2. The 18th in a set or sequence. [Middle English eightetene, from Old English eahtatēne. See oktō(u) in Appendix.] —eight·een′ adj. & pron.
- eight·een·mo (ā-tēn′mō) n. pl. eight·een·mos. Printing. See octodecimo. [From 18mo, abbr. of OCTODECIMO.]
- eight·eenth (ā-tēnth′) n. 1. The ordinal number matching the number 18 in a series. 2. One of 18 equal parts. —eight·eenth′ adv. & adj.
- eight·een·wheel·er (ā′tēn-hwē′lār, -wē′-) or 18·wheel·er n. Informal. A combination of a tractor and a semitrailer; a tractor-trailer rig.
- eighth (āthh, āth) n. 1. The ordinal number matching the number eight in a series. 2. One of eight equal parts. [Middle English eighthe, from Old English eahtotha, from eahta, eight. See oktō(u) in Appendix.] —eighth adv. & adj.
- eighth note (āthh nōt) n. Music. A note having one-eighth the time value of a whole note.
- eight·i·eth (ā′tē-īth) n. 1. The ordinal number matching the number 80 in a series. 2. One of 80 equal parts. —eight′i·eth adv. & adj.
- eight·pen·ny nail (āt′pēn′ē nāl) n. A nail 22 inches (6.4 centimeters) long. [From the former price per hundred.]
- eight·vo (āt′vō′) n. pl. eight·vos. Printing. See octavo. [From 8vo, abbr. of OCTAVO.]
- eight·y (ā′tē) n. pl. eight·ies. 1. The cardinal number equal to 8×10 . 2. eighties. a. Often Eighties. The decade from 80 to 89 in a century. b. A decade or the numbers from 80 to 89: They were still active in their eighties. Before noon, the temperature shot into the eighties. [Middle English eighti, from Old English eahtatig. See oktō(u) in Appendix.] —eight′y adj. & pron.
- eight·y·six or 86 (ā′tē-sīks′) v. tr. eight·y·sixed or 86·ed, eight·y·six·ing or 86·ing, eight·y·six·es or 86·es. Slang. 1. To refuse to serve (an unwelcome customer) at a bar or restaurant. 2. a. To throw out; eject. b. To throw away; discard. [Perhaps after Chumley's bar and restaurant at 86 Bedford Street in Greenwich Village, New York City.]
- Eijk·man (īk′mān′, āk′-), Christiaan. 1858-1930. Dutch hygienist and pathologist. He shared a 1929 Nobel Prize for his discovery of the nutrient, later called vitamin B₁ or thiamine, that relieves beriberi.
- ein suff. A chemical compound related to a specified compound with a similar name ending in -in or -ine: phthalein. [Alteration of -IN.]
- Eind·ho·ven (īnt′hō′vən) A city of southern Netherlands southeast of Rotterdam. Chartered in 1232, it was a major Allied objective in World War II. Population, 192,854.
- ein·korn (īn′kōrn′) n. A one-seeded wheat (Triticum monococcum) grown in arid regions. It was used as fodder during the Stone Age. [German : ein, one

(from Old High German); see oi-no- in Appendix + Korn, grain (from Old High German); see gr̥a-no- in Appendix.]

Ein·stein (īn'stīn'), Albert. 1879-1955. German-born American theoretical physicist whose special and general theories of relativity revolutionized modern thought on the nature of space and time and formed a theoretical base for the exploitation of atomic energy. He won a 1921 Nobel Prize for his explanation of the photoelectric effect.

ein·stein·i·um (īn-stī'nē-əm) n. Symbol Es A synthetic transuranic element first produced by neutron irradiation of uranium in a thermonuclear explosion and now usually produced in the laboratory by irradiating plutonium and other elements. Its longest-lived isotope is Es 254 with a half-life of 276 days. Atomic number 99; melting point 860°C. [After Albert EINSTEIN.]

Eint·ho·ven (īnt'hō'vən), Willem. 1860-1927. Dutch physiologist. He won a 1924 Nobel Prize for his contributions to electrocardiography.

Eir·e (âr'ə, ī'rə, âr'ē, ī'rē) See Ireland².

Ei·sen·ach (ī'zən-äk', -äKH') A city of central Germany west of Erfurt. Johann Sebastian Bach was born in Eisenach in 1685, and Martin Luther studied here from 1498 to 1501. Population, 50,895.

Ei·sen·how·er (ī'zən-hou'ər), Dwight David. Known as "Ike." 1890-1969. American general and the 34th President of the United States (1953-1961). As supreme commander of the Allied Expeditionary Force (1943-1945) he launched the invasion of Normandy (June 6, 1944) and oversaw the final defeat of Germany (1945). His presidency was marked by an end to the Korean War (1953), domestic racial problems, cold war with the Soviet Union, and a break in diplomatic relations with Cuba (1961).

Ei·sen·how·er (ī'zən-hou'ər), Mamie Geneva Doud. 1896-1979. First Lady of the United States (1953-1961) as the wife of President Dwight D. Eisenhower. She worked tirelessly to fulfill the growing number of commitments demanded of a First Lady.

Ei·sen·staedt (ī'zən-stät'), Alfred. 1898-1995. German-born American photographer who pioneered photojournalism with his unposed documentary photographs of daily life and historic events.

Ei·sen·stein (ī'zən-stīn', ā'zyīn-shtān'), Sergei Mikhailovich. 1898-1948. Soviet filmmaker considered among the most influential directors in the history of motion pictures. His films include Potemkin (1925) and Alexander Nevsky (1938), his first film with sound.

eis·tedd·fod (ā-stēth'vöd, ī-stēth'-) n. pl. eis·tedd·fods or eis·tedd·fod·au (ā'stēth-vöd'ī, ī'stēth-). An annual competitive festival of Welsh poets and musicians. [Welsh : eistedd, sitting; see sed- in Appendix + bod, to be; see bheuə- in Appendix.]

ei·ther (ē'thər, ī'thər) pron. The one or the other: Which movie do you want to see? Either will be fine. — conj. Used before the first of two or more coordinates or clauses linked by or: Either we go now or we remain here forever. — adj.

1. Any one of two; one or the other: Wear either coat. 2. One and the other; each: rings on either hand. — adv. Likewise; also. Used as an intensive following negative statements: If you don't order a dessert, I won't either. [Middle English, from Old English æther, æghwæther. See k^wo- in Appendix.]

USAGE NOTE: The traditional rule holds that either should be used only to refer to one of two items and that any is required when more than two items are involved: Any (not either) of the three opposition candidates still in the race would make a better president than the incumbent. But reputable writers have often violated this rule, and in any case it applies only to the use of either as a pronoun or an adjective. When either is used as a conjunction no paraphrase with any is available, and so either is unexceptionable even when it applies to more than two clauses: Either the union will make a counteroffer or the original bid will be refused by the board or the deal will go ahead as scheduled. • In either... or constructions, the two conjunctions should be followed by parallel elements. The following is regarded as incorrect: You may either have the ring or the bracelet (properly, You may have either the ring or the bracelet). The following is also incorrect: She can take either the examination offered to all applicants or ask for a personal interview (properly, She can either take...). • When used as a pronoun, either is singular and takes a singular verb: The two left-wing parties disagree with each other more than either does (not do) with the right. When followed by of and a plural noun, either is often used with a plural verb: Either of the parties have enough support to form a government. But this usage is widely regarded as incorrect; in an earlier survey it was rejected by 92 percent of the Usage Panel. • When all the elements in an either... or construction (or a neither... nor construction) used as the subject of a sentence are singular, the verb is singular: Either Eve or Herb has been invited. Analogously, when all the elements in the either... or construction are plural, the verb is plural too: Either the Clarks or the Kays have been invited. When the construction mixes singular and plural elements, however, there is some confusion as to which form the verb should take. It has sometimes been suggested that the verb should agree with whichever noun phrase is closest to it; thus one would write Either Eve or the Kays have been invited, but Either the Kays or Eve has been invited. This pattern is accepted by 54 percent of the Usage Panel. Others have maintained that the construction is fundamentally inconsistent whichever number is assigned to the verb and that such sentences should be rewritten accordingly. As Wilson Follett put it: “This [construction] is defensible, but a workmanlike writer may put his pride in not writing sentences that need defending.” See Usage Note at every. See Usage ei·ther·or (ē'thər-ôr', ī'thər-) n. A strictly limited choice or division between only two options. — adj. Of or characterized by a choice or division limited strictly between two options: found ourselves in an either-or situation.

Note at neither. See Usage Note at or¹.

e·jac·u·late (ĭ-jăk'yə-lāt') v. e·jac·u·lat·ed, e·jac·u·lat·ing, e·jac·u·lates. — v. tr. 1. To eject or discharge abruptly, especially to discharge (semen) in orgasm. 2. To utter suddenly and passionately; exclaim. — v. intr. To eject semen. — n. (ĭ-jăk'yə-līt) Semen ejaculated in orgasm. [Latin ēiaculārī, ēiaculāt- : ē-, ex-, ex- + iaculārī, to throw (from iaculum, dart); see yē- in Appendix.] — e·jac·u·la'tor n.

e·jac·u·la·tion (ĭ-jăk'yə-lā'shən) n. 1. a. The act of ejaculating. b. An abrupt discharge of fluid, especially of seminal fluid. 2. A sudden, short exclamation, especially a brief, pious utterance or prayer.

e·jac·u·la·to·ry (ĭ-jăk'yə-lə-tôr'ē, -tôr'ē) adj. 1. Of or relating to physiological ejaculation. 2. Relating to or constituting a sudden, brief utterance; exclamatory.

e·ject (ĭ-jĕkt') v. e·ject·ed, e·ject·ing, e·jects. — v. tr. 1. To throw out forcefully; expel. 2. a. To compel to leave: The patron of the bar was ejected for creating a disturbance. b. To evict: tenants who were ejected for violations of their lease. — v. intr. To make an emergency exit from an aircraft by deployment of an ejection seat or capsule. [Middle English ejecten, from Latin ēicere, ēiect- : ē-, ex-, ex- + iacere, to throw; see yē- in Appendix.] — e·ject'a·ble adj. — e·jec'tive adj.

SYNONYMS: eject, expel, evict, dismiss, oust. These verbs mean to put out by force. To eject is to throw or cast out from within: The fire ejected yellow flames into the night sky. The heckler was ejected from the auditorium for creating a disturbance. Expel means to drive out or away; it implies permanent removal: expelled the invaders from the country; expel a student from a university. Evict most commonly refers to the expulsion of persons from property, as for failing to live up to the terms of a lease, by legal process: evicted the tenants to convert the building into condominiums. Dismiss refers to putting someone or something out of one's mind (trying to dismiss his fears) or, in law, to refusing to give something, such as an appeal or a complaint, further consideration (dismissed the case for lack of evidence). Oust is applied chiefly to the removing of persons from a position, such as a political office, by means lawful or otherwise: There were no grounds for ousting the prime minister.

e·jec·ta (ĭ-jĕk'tə) pl.n. Ejected matter, as that from an erupting volcano. [New Latin eiecta, neuter pl. of Latin ēiectus, past participle of ēicere, to throw out. See EJECT.]

e·jec·tion (ĭ-jĕk'shən) n. 1. The act of ejecting or the condition of being ejected. 2. Ejected matter.

ejection capsule (ĭ-jĕk'shən kăp'səl) n. A cockpit, usually fitted with survival gear, designed to eject the occupant clear of an aircraft during an in-flight emergency.

ejection seat (ĭ-jĕk'shən sĕt) n. A seat fitted with an explosive charge and designed to eject the occupant clear of an aircraft during an in-flight emergency.

e·ject·ment (ĭ-jĕkt'mənt) n. 1. The act or an instance of ejecting; dispossession. 2. Law. An action to regain possession of real estate held by another.

e·jec·tor (ĭ-jĕk'tər) n. 1. One that ejects, especially a device in a gun that ejects the empty shell after each firing. 2. A device using a jet of water, air, or steam to withdraw a fluid or gas from a space.

eke¹ (ĕk) v. tr. eked, ek·ing, ekes. 1. To supplement with great effort: eked out an income by working two jobs. 2. To get with great effort or strain: eke a bare existence from farming in an arid area. 3. To make (a supply) last by practicing strict economy. [Middle English eken, to increase, from Old English ēcan. See aug- in Appendix.]

eke² (ĕk) adv. Archaic. Also. [Middle English, from Old English ĕc.]

EKG abbr. 1. Electrocardiogram. 2. Electrocardiograph.

e·kis·tics (ĭ-kĭs'tĭks) n. (used with a sing. verb). The science of human settlements, including city or community planning and design. [Ultimately from Greek oikistikos, of settlements, from oikistēs, colonizer, founder, from oikizein, to settle, from oikos, house. See ECONOMY.] —e·kis'tic, e·kis'ti·cal adj.

—ek'is·ti'cian (ĕk'ĭ-stĭsh'ən) n.

ek·pwe·le (ĕk-pwā'lē, -lā) n. A former unit of currency in Equatorial Guinea.

el¹ also ell (ĕl) n. The letter l.

el² (ĕl) n. Informal. An elevated railway.

el. abbr. Elevation.

e·lab·o·rate (ĭ-lăb'ər-ĭt) adj. 1. Planned or executed with painstaking attention to numerous parts or details. 2. Intricate and rich in detail. — v.

e·lab·o·rat·ed, e·lab·o·rat·ing, e·lab·o·rates (ĭ-lăb'ər-răt'). — v. tr. 1. To work out with care and detail; develop thoroughly. 2. To produce by effort; create. — v. intr. 1. To become elaborate. 2. To express at greater length or in greater detail: asked me to elaborate on my proposal. [Latin ēlabōrātus, past participle of ēlabōrāre, to work out : ē-, ex-, intensive pref.; see EX- + labōrāre, to work (from labōr, work).] —e·lab'o·rate·ly adv. —e·lab'o·rate·ness n.

—e·lab'o·ra'tion n. —e·lab'o·ra'tor n.

SYNONYMS: elaborate, complicated, intricate. The central meaning shared by these adjectives is “marked by complexity of detail”: an elaborate lace pattern; the eye, a complicated organ; an intricate problem.

El·a·gab·a·lus (ĕl'ə-găb'ə-ləs) See Heliogabalus.

E·laine (ĭ-lān') n. 1. In Arthurian legend, a woman who died of unrequited love of Lancelot. 2. In Arthurian legend, the mother of Galahad by Lancelot.

El Al·a·mein (ĕl əl'ə-mān', ə'lə-) also Al Al·a·mayn (əl əl'ə-mān', ə'lə-) A town of northern Egypt on the Mediterranean Sea. In a decisive battle of World War II the British forces under Bernard Montgomery defeated Erwin Rommel's German troops here in November 1942.

E·lam (ē'ləm) also Su·si·a·na (sōō'zē-ä'nə, -än'ə) An ancient country of southwest Asia in present-day southwest Iran. It was established east of the Tigris River before 3000 B.C. and was known for its warlike people, traditionally thought to be descended from Noah's son Shem.

E·la·mite (ē'lə-mīt') n. 1. A native or inhabitant of Elam. 2. The language of the ancient Elamites, of no known linguistic affiliation.

é·lan (ā-län', ā-län') n. 1. Enthusiastic vigor and liveliness. 2. Distinctive style or flair. [French, from Old French eslan, rush, from eslancer, to hurl : es-, out (from Latin ex-); see EX- + lancer, to throw (from Late Latin lanceāre, to throw a lance, from Latin lancea, lance).]

e·land (ē'lænd) n. pl. eland also e·lands. Either of two large African antelopes (Taurotragus oryx or T. derbianus) having a light brown or grayish coat and spirally twisted horns. [Afrikaans, from Dutch, elk, from obsolete German Elend, of Baltic origin; akin to Lithuanian élnias, deer.]

élan vi·tal (ā-län' vē-täl') n. The vital force hypothesized by Henri Bergson as a source of efficient causation and evolution in nature. Also called life force [French : élan, ardor + vital, vital.]

e·a·pid (ĕl'ə-pĭd) n. Any of several venomous snakes of the family Elapidae, which includes the cobras, mambas, and coral snakes. — adj. Of or belonging to the family Elapidae. [From New Latin Elapidae, family name, from Medieval Greek elaps, elap-, fish, variant of Greek ellops.]

e·lapse (ĭ-lăps') v. intr. e·lapsed, e·laps·ing, e·laps·es. To slip by; pass: Weeks elapsed before we could start renovating. — n. Passage; lapse: met again after an elapse of many years. [Latin ēlābī, ēlāps- : ē, ex-, ex- + lābī, to slip.]

e·lapsed time (ĭ-lăpst' tīm) n. Abbr. ET The measured duration of an event.

E·la·ra (ē'lər-ə) n. The seventh largest moon of Jupiter and the 13th in distance from the planet. [Greek, mother by Zeus of the giant Tityus.]

e·las·mo·branch (ĭ-lăz'mə-brăngk') n. Any of numerous fishes of the class Chondrichthyes, characterized by a cartilaginous skeleton and placoid scales and including the sharks, rays, and skates. — adj. Of or belonging to the class Chondrichthyes. [From New Latin Elasmobranchii, former subclass name :

Greek elasmos, metal beaten out (from elaunein, elas-, to beat) + Late Latin branchia, gill (from Latin branchiae, gills, from Greek brankhia).

e·las·tase (ĭ-lās'tās, -tāz) n. An enzyme found especially in pancreatic juice that catalyzes the hydrolysis of elastin.

e·las·tic (ĭ-lās'tĭk) adj. 1. a. Easily resuming original shape after being stretched or expanded; flexible. See Synonyms at flexible. b. Springy; rebounding.

2. Physics. Returning to or capable of returning to an initial form or state after deformation. 3. Quick to recover, as from disappointment: an elastic spirit.

4. Capable of adapting to change or a variety of circumstances. — n. 1. a. A flexible, stretchable fabric made with interwoven strands of rubber or an imitative synthetic fiber. b. An object made of this fabric. 2. A rubber band. [New Latin elasticus, from Late Greek elastos, beaten, ductile, variant of Greek elatos, from elaunein, to beat out.] — e·las'ti·cal·ly adv.

elastic collision (ĭ-lās'tĭk kə-lĭzh'ən) n. Physics. A collision of particles in which the total kinetic energy of the particles is conserved.

elastic fiber (ĭ-lās'tĭk fĭ'bər) n. A thick, yellow connective-tissue fiber composed principally of elastin and characterized by great elasticity.

e·las·tic·i·ty (ĭ-lā-stĭs'ĭ-tē, ē'lā-) n. 1. The condition or property of being elastic; flexibility. 2. Physics. a. The property of returning to an initial form or state following deformation. b. The degree to which this property is exhibited.

e·las·ti·cized (ĭ-lās'tĭ-sīzd') adj. Made with strands or inserts of elastic: slacks with an elasticized waistband.

elastic tissue (ĭ-lās'tĭk tĭsh'ōō) n. A type of connective tissue consisting mainly of elastic fibers and found in the walls of arteries, in the dermis of the skin, and in certain ligaments and tendons.

e·las·tin (ĭ-lās'tĭn) n. A protein similar to collagen that is the principal structural component of elastic fibers. [ELAST(IC) + -IN.]

e·las·to·mer (ĭ-lās'tə-mər) n. Any of various polymers having the elastic properties of natural rubber. [ELAST(IC) + -MER(E).] — e·las'to·mer'ic (-mēr'ĭk) adj.

e·late (ĭ-lāt') v. tr. e·lat·ed, e·lat·ing, e·lates. To make proud or joyful: Her success elated the family. — adj. Elated. [From Latin ēlātus, past participle of efferre, to bring out, exalt : ē-, ex-, ex- + lātus, brought; see telə- in Appendix.] — e·la'tion n.

e·lat·ed (ĭ-lā'tĭd) adj. Exultantly proud and joyful. — e·lat'ed·ly adv. — e·lat'ed·ness n.

el·a·ter (ĕl'ə-tər) n. 1. An elaterid beetle. 2. Botany. A tiny elongated structure that forces the dispersal of spores by the absorption of moisture. It is either a band attached to the spore, as in horsetails, or a filament occurring among the spores, as in liverworts. [Greek elatēr, driver, from elaunein, to drive.]

e·lat·er·id (ĭ-lāt'ər-ĭd) n. Any of numerous beetles of the family Elateridae, which includes the click beetles. — adj. Of or belonging to the family Elat-eridae. [From New Latin Elatēridae, family name, from Greek elatēr, driver. See ELATER.]

el·lat·er·ite (ĭ-lăt'ə-rīt') n. A brown-to-black, soft, elastic hydrocarbon resin.

[ELATER, elasticity (obsolete) + -ITE¹.]

El·a·vil (ĕl'ə-vĭl) A trademark used for a preparation of amitriptyline, an antidepressant drug.

E layer (ē' lā'ər) n. A region of the ionosphere, occurring from about 90 to 150 kilometers (55 to 95 miles) above Earth and influencing long-distance communications by strongly reflecting radio waves in the range from one to three megahertz. Also called E region, Heaviside layer, Kennelly-Heaviside layer.

El·ba (ĕl'bə) An island of Italy in the Tyrrhenian Sea between Corsica and the mainland. Napoleon Bonaparte spent his first period of exile here (May 1814-February 1815).

El·be (ĕl'bə, ĕlb) A river of Czech Republic and Germany flowing about 1,167 km (725 mi) to the North Sea. It has been a major waterway since Roman times.

El·bert (ĕl'bərt), Mount. A peak, 4,402.1 m (14,433 ft) high, in the Sawatch Range of central Colorado. It is the highest elevation in the range and also the highest of the U.S. Rocky Mountains.

El·blą (ĕl'blŏng', -blŏngk') A city of northern Poland east-southeast of Gdańsk. It was founded by the Teutonic Knights in 1237 and passed through various hands before becoming part of Poland after World War II. Population, 117,000.

el·bow (ĕl'bō') n. 1. a. The joint or bend of the arm between the forearm and the upper arm. b. The bony outer projection of this joint. 2. A joint, as of a bird or quadruped, corresponding to the human elbow. 3. Something having a bend or an angle similar to an elbow, especially: a. A length of pipe with a sharp bend in it. b. A sharp bend in a river or road. — v. el·bowed, el·bow·ing, el·bows. — v. tr. 1. a. To push or jostle (another or others) with the elbow. b. To shove (another or others) aside with the elbow. 2. To open up (a means of passage, for example) by or as if by use of the elbow: She elbowed her way through the crowd. — v. intr. 1. To make one's way by pushing with the elbow. 2. To turn at an angle; bend: The lane elbows to the left. — idioms. at (one's) elbow. Close at hand; nearby. out at the elbows. 2. Poorly dressed. 3. Lacking money. [Middle English elbowe, from Old English elnboga. See el- in Appendix.]

el·bow·bend·er (ĕl'bō-bĕn'dər) n. Slang. One who habitually indulges in the drinking of alcoholic beverages. — el·bow·bend·ing (-bĕn'dĭng) adj. & n.

elbow grease (ĕl'bō' grĕs) n. Informal. Strenuous physical labor and effort.

el·bow·room (ĕl'bō-rōom', -rōom') n. 1. Room to move around or work freely. 2. Ample scope: elbowroom to experiment. See Synonyms at room.

El-brus (ĕl-brōōs'), Mount. A peak, 5,645.6 m (18,510 ft) high, in the Caucasus Mountains of northwest Georgia. It is the highest elevation in the range.

El-burz Mountains (ĕl-bōōrz' moun'tanz) A range of northern Iran rising to 5,774.9 m (18,934 ft) at Mount Damavand, the highest point in the country.

El Ca-jon (ĕl kə-hōn') A city of southern California, an industrial and residential suburb of San Diego. Population, 88,693.

El Cap-i-tan (ĕl kăp'ĭ-tăn') A peak, 2,308.5 m (7,569 ft) high, in the Sierra Nevada of central California. Its dramatic exposed monolith rises some 1,098 m (3,600 ft) above the floor of the Yosemite Valley.

El Cen-tro (ĕl sĕn'trō) A city of southern California in the Imperial Valley near the Mexican border. It is a shipping point for fruits and vegetables. Population, 31,384.

El Cer-ri-to (ĕl sə-rĕ'tō) A city of western California on San Francisco Bay north of Oakland. It is mainly residential. Population, 22,731.

El-che (ĕl'chĕ) A city of southeast Spain southwest of Alicante. An ancient Roman colony, it was held by the Moors from the 8th to the 13th century. Population, 144,600.

El-da (ĕl'də, -dä) A city of southeast Spain west-northwest of Alicante. It is a manufacturing center in an agricultural area. Population, 55,322.

eld-er¹ (ĕl'dər) adj. 1. Greater than another in age or seniority. 2. Superior to another or others, as in rank. — n. 1. An older person. 2. An older, influential member of a family, tribe, or community. 3. One of the governing officers of a church, often having pastoral or teaching functions. 4. Mormon Church. A member of the higher order of priesthood. [Middle English eldre, from Old English eldra. See al-² in Appendix.] — el'der-ship' n.

USAGE NOTE: Elder and eldest generally apply to persons, unlike older and oldest, which also apply to things. Elder and eldest are used principally with reference to seniority: elder sister; elder statesman; John the Elder.

el-der² (ĕl'dər) n. Any of various shrubs or small trees of the genus Sambucus, having clusters of small white flowers and red or purplish-black berrylike fruit. [Middle English eldre, from Old English ellærn.]

el-der-ber-ry (ĕl'dər-bĕr'ē) n. 1. The small, edible, purplish-black fruit of the common American elder (Sambucus canadensis), sometimes used to make wine or preserves. 2. A shrub or tree that bears elderberries.

eld-er-care (ĕl'dər-kâr') n. Social and medical programs and facilities intended for the care and maintenance of the aged. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: eldercare issues; eldercare resources.

eld-er-ly (ĕl'dər-lē) adj. 1. Being past middle age and approaching old age; rather old. 2. Of, relating to, or characteristic of older persons or life in later years. — n. 1. pl. elder·er·lies. An elderly person. 2. pl. elderly. (used with a pl. verb). Older people considered as a group. Often used with the: special recreational programs for the elderly. —el'der·li·ness n.

SYNONYMS: elderly, old, aged, venerable, superannuated. These adjectives are compared as they mean far along in years or life. One who is elderly is between middle age and old age: Elderly residents of the city could still recall the construction of the first skyscraper. Old implies advanced years: “an old man’s eagle mind” (William Butler Yeats). “There are so few who can grow old with a good grace” (Richard Steele). Aged emphasizes old age and usually suggests infirmity: The Western world has yet to respect the aged members of its society as the Japanese do. One who is venerable commands respect by virtue of dignity and age: “a venerable-looking man, with white hair and beard and a face of great sagacity” (Samuel Butler). Superannuated applies to one who has reached the age of retirement and has been pensioned (a superannuated civil servant); the term can also refer to one too old for use, work, or service: “He left the house... for the support of twelve superannuated wool carders” (Anthony Trollope).

elder statesman (ĕl'dər stāts'mən) n. A prominent, highly experienced older person, especially a retired official acting as an unofficial adviser.

eld·est (ĕl'dĭst) adj. Greatest in age or seniority. See Usage Note at elder¹. [Middle English, from Old English eldesta. See al-² in Appendix.]

eldest hand (ĕl'dĭst händ) n. Games. The player first to receive cards dealt.

El Di·en·te Peak (ĕl dē-ĕn'tē) A mountain, 4,318.5 m (14,159 ft) high, in the Rocky Mountains of southwest Colorado.

El Do·ra·do¹ (ĕl də-rä'dō) 1. A vaguely defined historical region and city of the New World, often thought to be in northern South America. Fabled for its great wealth of gold and precious jewels, it was eagerly sought after by 16th- and 17th-century explorers, including Sir Walter Raleigh. 2. A city of southern Arkansas near the Louisiana border south-southwest of Little Rock. Oil was discovered nearby in 1921. Population, 23,146.

El Do·ra·do² (ĕl də-rä'dō) n. A place of fabulous wealth or inordinately great opportunity. [After El Dorado¹.]

el·dritch (ĕl'drĭch) adj. Strange or unearthly; eerie. [Perhaps Middle English elriche*: Old English el-, strange, other; see al-¹ in Appendix + Old English rīce, realm; see reg- in Appendix.]

E·le·a (ē'lē-ə) also Ve·li·a (vē'lē-ə) An ancient Greek colony of southern Italy near the Gulf of Salerno. Reputedly founded by Xenophanes, it was the center of the Eleatic school of philosophy.

El·ea·nor of Aq·ui·taine (ĕl'ə-nər ŭv äk'wĭ-tān', -nôr'; äk'wĭ-tān'), 1122?-1204. Queen of France (1137-1152) and England (1152-1204). Her marriage to Louis VII of France was annulled in 1152, and shortly afterward she married Henry II of England.

Eleanor of Cas-tile (ĕl'ə-nər ūv kə-stēl'), 1246?-1290. Queen of England (1274-1290) as the wife of Edward I, whom she accompanied on a crusade (1270-1273).

Eleanor of Pro-vence (ĕl'ə-nər ūv prō-vāns'), 1223?-1291. Queen of England (1236-1272) as the wife of Henry III. On the accession of her son Edward I (1272), she entered a nunnery and there lived out her life.

El-e-at-ic (ĕl'ē-ăt'ik) adj. Philosophy. Of or characteristic of the school of philosophy founded by Xenophanes and Parmenides and holding the belief that immutable being is the only knowable reality and that change is the subject of mere opinion. [Latin Eleāticus, from Greek Eleatikos, from Elea.] — El'e-a'tic n. — El'e-at'i-cism (-ĭ-sĭz'əm) n.

elec. abbr. 1. Electric; electrical. 2. Electrician. 3. Electricity.

el-e-cam-pane (ĕl'ĭ-kām-pān') n. A tall, coarse plant (Inula helenium) native to central Asia, having rayed yellow flower heads. The roots are used medicinally. [Middle English elecampa : Old English elene (from Medieval Latin enula, from Latin inula, from Greek helenion); see wel-² in Appendix + Medieval Latin campāna, of the field (from Latin campānea, feminine of campāneus, from campus, field).]

e-lect (ĭ-lĕkt') v. e-lect-ed, e-lect-ing, e-lects. — v. tr. 1. To select by vote for an office or for membership. 2. To pick out; select: elect an art course. See Synonyms at choose. 3. To decide, especially by preference: elected to take the summer off. 4. Theology. To select by divine will for salvation. — v. intr. To make a choice or selection. — adj. 1. Chosen deliberately; singled out. 2. a. Elected but not yet installed. Often used in combination: the governor-elect. b. Chosen for marriage. Often used in combination: the bride-elect. 3. Theology. Selected by divine will for salvation. — n. 1. One that is chosen or selected. 2. Theology. One selected by divine will for salvation. 3. (used with a pl. verb). An exclusive group of people. Used with the: one of the elect who have power inside the government. [Middle English electen, from Latin ēligere, ēlēct-, to select : ē-, ex-, ex- + legere, to choose; see leg- in Appendix.]

e-lect-a-ble (ĭ-lĕk'tə-bəl) adj. Fit or able to be elected, especially to public office: an electable candidate. — e-lect'a-bil/i-ty n.

e-lec-tion (ĭ-lĕk'shən) n. 1. a. The act or power of electing. b. The fact of being elected. 2. The right or ability to make a choice. See Synonyms at choice. 3. Theology. Predestined salvation, especially as conceived by Calvinists.

E-lec-tion Day (ĭ-lĕk'shən dā) n. A day set by law for the election of public officials.

e·lec·tion·eer (ĩ-lĕk'shə-nîr') v. intr. e·lec·tion·eered, e·lec·tion·eering, e·lec·tion·eers. To work actively for a candidate or political party. —e·lec'tion·eer'er n.

e·lec·tive (ĩ-lĕk'tiv) adj. 1. Of or relating to a selection by vote. 2. Filled or obtained by election: elective office. 3. Having the power or authority to elect; electoral. 4. Permitting or involving a choice; optional: elective surgery. — n. An optional academic course or subject. —e·lec'tive·ly adv. —e·lec'tive·ness n.

e·lec·tor (ĩ-lĕk'tər) n. 1. A qualified voter in an election. 2. A member of the Electoral College of the United States. 3. One of the German princes of the Holy Roman Empire entitled to elect the emperor.

e·lec·tor·al (ĩ-lĕk'tər-əl) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or composed of electors. 2. Of or relating to election. —e·lec'tor·al·ly adv.

E·lec·tor·al College (ĩ-lĕk'tər-əl kŏl'ij) n. A body of electors chosen to elect the President and Vice President of the United States.

e·lec·tor·ate (ĩ-lĕk'tər-ĭt) n. 1. A body of qualified voters. 2. The dignity or territory of an elector of the Holy Roman Empire.

electr- pref. Variant of electro-.

E·lec·tra (ĩ-lĕk'trə) n. Greek Mythology. A daughter of Clytemnestra and Agamemnon who with her brother Orestes avenged the murder of Agamemnon by killing their mother and her lover, Aegisthus.

Electra complex (ĩ-lĕk'trə kəm-plĕks') n. In psychoanalysis, a daughter's unconscious libidinal desire for her father.

e·lec·tret (ĩ-lĕk'trit) n. A solid dielectric that exhibits persistent dielectric polarization. [ELECTR(ICITY) + (MAGN)ET.]

e·lec·tric (ĩ-lĕk'trik) adj. 1. Also e·lec·tri·cal (-trĩ-kəl). Abbr. elec. Of, relating to, or operated by electricity: electric current; an electrical appliance.

2. a. Emotionally exciting; thrilling: gave an electric reading of the play.

b. Exceptionally tense; highly charged with emotion: an atmosphere electric with suspicion. — n. An electrically powered machine or vehicle: The lawn mower is an electric. [New Latin ēlectricus, deriving from amber, as by rubbing, from Latin ēlectrum, amber, from Greek ēlektron.] —e·lec'tri·cal·ly adv.

electrical engineering (ĩbreve/-lĕk'tri-kəl ěn'jə-nîr'ing) n. Abbr. E.E. The branch of engineering that deals with the technology of electricity, especially the design and application of circuitry and equipment for power generation and distribution, machine control, and communications. —electrical engineer n.

electrical storm (ĩbreve/-lĕk'tri-kəl stŏrm) n. A thunderstorm.

electric arc (ĩ-lĕk'trik ărk) n. Electricity. An arc.

electric chair (ĩ-lĕk'trik çhâr) n. 1. A chair used in the electrocution of a prisoner sentenced to death by law. 2. Execution by means of electrocution. 3. The sentence of death by electrocution.

electric eel (ĭ-lĕk'trĭk ēl) n. A long, eellike freshwater fish (Electrophorus electricus) of northern South America, having organs capable of producing a powerful electric discharge.

electric eye (ĭ-lĕk'trĭk ī) n. See photoelectric cell.

electric field (ĭ-lĕk'trĭk fĕld) n. A region of space characterized by the existence of a force generated by electric charge.

electric guitar (ĭ-lĕk'trĭk gĭ-tār') n. Music. A guitar that transmits tones to an amplifier by means of an electronic pickup placed under the strings.

e·lec·tri·cian (ĭ-lĕk-trĭsh'ən, ē'lĕk-) n. Abbr. elec. One whose occupation is the installation, maintenance, repair, or operation of electric equipment and circuitry.

electric intensity (ĭ-lĕk'trĭk ĭn-tĕn'sĭ-tē) n. The ratio of the electrostatic force exerted on a body to the charge on the body.

e·lec·tric·i·ty (ĭ-lĕk-trĭs'ĭ-tē, ē'lĕk-) n. Abbr. elec. 1. a. The physical phenomena arising from the behavior of electrons and protons that is caused by the attraction of particles with opposite charges and the repulsion of particles with the same charge. b. The physical science of such phenomena. 2. Electric current used or regarded as a source of power. 3. Intense, contagious emotional excitement. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: electricity bills; electricity costs.

electric light (ĭ-lĕk'trĭk līt) n. 1. A light that uses electricity to produce illumination. Also called electric lamp 2. Illumination produced electrically.

electric moment (ĭ-lĕk'trĭk mō'mənt) n. The dipole moment of an electric dipole.

electric motor (ĭ-lĕk'trĭk mō'tər) n. A motor powered by electricity.

E·lec·tric Peak (ĭ-lĕk'trĭk pĕk) A mountain, 3,402.3 m (11,155 ft) high, in the Gallatin Range of southern Montana near the Wyoming border. It is the highest elevation in the range.

electric ray (ĭ-lĕk'trĭk rā) n. Any of various tropical or subtropical marine fishes of the family Torpedinidae, having a rounded body and a pair of organs capable of producing an electric discharge, which is used to stun or kill prey. Also called crampfish, numbfish, torpedo.

electric razor (ĭ-lĕk'trĭk rā'zər) n. A shaver powered by electricity.

e·lec·tri·fy (ĭ-lĕk'trə-fī') v. tr. e·lec·tri·fied, e·lec·tri·fy·ing, e·lec·tri·fies.

1. To produce electric charge on or in (a conductor). 2. a. To wire or equip (a building, for example) for the use of electric power. b. To provide with electric power. c. Music. To amplify (music) by electronic means. 3. To thrill, startle greatly, or shock: a powerful performance that electrified the audience. [ELECTRI(C) + -FY.] — e·lec'tri-fi'a·ble adj. — e·lec'tri-fi-ca'tion (-fĭ-kā'shən) n.

— e·lec'tri-fi'er n. — e·lec'tri-fy'ing·ly adv.

electro- or electr- pref. 1. a. Electricity: electromagnet b. Electric; electrically: electrocute. 2. Electrolysis: electrodeposit. 3. Electron: electronegative. [New Latin ēlectro-, from Latin ēlectrum, amber, from Greek ēlektron.]

e·lec·tro·a·cous·tics (ī-lĕk'trō-ə-kōō'stīks) n. (used with a sing. verb). The science that deals with the interaction or interconversion of electric and acoustic phenomena. —e·lec'tro·a·cous'tic adj. —e·lec'tro·a·cous'tic·al·ly adv.

e·lec·tro·a·nal·y·sis (ī-lĕk'trō-ə-nāl'ī-sīs) n. pl. e·lec·tro·a·nal·y·ses (-sēz'). Chemical analysis using electrolytic techniques. —e·lec'tro·an'a·lyt'ic (-än'ə-līt'ik), e·lec'tro·an'a·lyt'i·cal adj.

e·lec·tro·car·di·o·gram (ī-lĕk'trō-kär'dē-ə-grām') n. Abbr. ECG, EKG The curve traced by an electrocardiograph. Also called cardiogram e·lec·tro·car·di·o·graph (ī-lĕk'trō-kär'dē-ə-gräf') n. Abbr. ECG, EKG An instrument used in the detection and diagnosis of heart abnormalities that measures electrical potentials on the body surface and generates a record of the electrical currents associated with heart muscle activity. Also called cardiograph —e·lec'tro·car'di·o·graph'ic (-gräf'ik) adj.

—e·lec'tro·car'di·o·graph'i·cal·ly adv. —e·lec'tro·car'di·og'ra·phy (-kär'dē-ōg'rə-fē) n.

e·lec·tro·chem·i·cal cell (ī-lĕk'trō-kĕm'ī-kəl sĕl) n. See cell (n., sense 5a).

e·lec·tro·chem·is·try (ī-lĕk'trō-kĕm'ī-strē) n. The science of the interaction or interconversion of electric and chemical phenomena.

—e·lec'tro·chem'i·cal·ly adv. —e·lec'tro·chem'ist n.

e·lec·tro·co·ag·u·la·tion (ī-lĕk'trō-kō-äg'yə-lā'shən) n. Medicine. Therapeutic use of a high-frequency electric current to bring about the coagulation and destruction of tissue.

e·lec·tro·con·vul·sive therapy (ī-lĕk'trō-kən-vūl'siv thĕr'ə-pē) n. Abbr. ECT Administration of electric current to the brain through electrodes placed on the head in order to induce unconsciousness and brief convulsions, used in the treatment of certain mental disorders, especially acute depression. Also called electroshock, electroshock therapy.

e·lec·tro·cute (ī-lĕk'trə-kyōōt') v. tr. e·lec·tro·cut·ed, e·lec·tro·cut·ing, e·lec·tro·cutes. 1. To kill with electricity: a worker who was electrocuted by a high-tension wire. 2. To execute (a condemned prisoner) by means of electricity. [ELECTRO- + (EXE)CUTE.] —e·lec'tro·cu'tion (-kyōō'shən) n.

e·lec·trode (ī-lĕk'trōd') n. 1. A solid electric conductor through which an electric current enters or leaves an electrolytic cell or other medium. 2. A collector or emitter of electric charge or of electric-charge carriers, as in a semiconducting device.

e·lec·tro·de·pos·it (ī-lĕk'trō-dī-pōz'īt) v. tr. e·lec·tro·de·pos·it·ed, e·lec·tro·de·pos·it·ing, e·lec·tro·de·pos·its. To deposit (a dissolved or suspended substance) on an electrode by electrolysis. — n. The substance so deposited. — e·lec·tro·dep·o·si·tion (-dĕp'ə-zĭsh'ən, -dĕ'pə-) n.

e·lec·tro·der·mal (ĭ-lĕk'trō-dŭr'məl) adj. Of or relating to the electrical properties of the skin.

e·lec·tro·di·al·y·sis (ĭ-lĕk'trō-dĭ-ăl'ĭ-sĭs) n. pl. e·lec·tro·di·al·y·ses (-sĕz'). Dialysis at a rate increased by the application of an electric potential across the dialysis membrane, used especially to remove electrolytes from a colloidal suspension.

e·lec·tro·dy·nam·ics (ĭ-lĕk'trō-dĭ-năm'ĭks) n. (used with a sing. verb). The physics of the relationship between electric current and magnetic or mechanical phenomena. — e·lec·tro·dy·nam·ic adj.

e·lec·tro·dy·na·mom·e·ter (ĭ-lĕk'trō-dĭ'nə-mŏm'ĭ-tər) n. An instrument that measures electric current by indicating the level of magnetic attraction or repulsion between a fixed and a movable coil, one of which carries the current to be measured.

e·lec·tro·en·ceph·a·lo·gram (ĭ-lĕk'trō-ĕn-sĕf'ə-lə-grām') n. Abbr. EEG A graphic record of the electrical activity of the brain as recorded by an electroencephalograph. Also called encephalogram

e·lec·tro·en·ceph·a·lo·graph (ĭ-lĕk'trō-ĕn-sĕf'ə-lə-gräf') n. Abbr. EEG An instrument that measures electrical potentials on the scalp and generates a record of the electrical activity of the brain. Also called encephalograph

— e·lec·tro·en·ceph·a·lo·graph·ic adj. — e·lec·tro·en·ceph·a·log·ra·phy (-lŏg'rə-fĕ) n.

e·lec·tro·form (ĭ-lĕk'trə-fŏrm') v. tr. e·lec·tro·formed, e·lec·tro·form·ing, e·lec·tro·forms. To produce or reproduce (an object) by electrodeposition on a mold.

e·lec·tro·gas·dy·nam·ics (ĭ-lĕk'trə-gäs'dĭ-năm'ĭks) n. (used with a sing. verb). Abbr. EGD Generation of electrical energy based on the conversion of the kinetic energy contained in a high-pressure, ionized, moving combustion gas.

— e·lec·tro·gas·dy·nam·ic adj.

e·lec·tro·gen·e·sis (ĭ-lĕk'trə-jĕn'ĭ-sĭs) n. Production of electrical impulses in living organisms or tissues. — e·lec·tro·gen·ic adj.

e·lec·tro·graph (ĭ-lĕk'trə-gräf') n. 1. An electrically produced graph or tracing. 2. Equipment used to produce such a graph or tracing in facsimile transmission.

e·lec·tro·hy·drau·lic (ĭ-lĕk'trō-hĭ-drŏ'lĭk) adj. Of, relating to, or involving a combination of electric and hydraulic mechanisms.

— e·lec·tro·hy·drau·li·cal·ly adv.

e·lec·tro·kin·et·ics (ĭ-lĕk'trō-kĭ-nĕt'ĭks) n. (used with a sing. verb). The electrodynamics of heating effects and current distribution in electric networks.

e·lec·trol·o·gist (ĭ-lĕk-trŏl'ə-jĭst, ē'lĕk-) n. One who removes body hair by means of an electric current.

e·lec·tro·lu·mi·nes·cence (ĭ-lĕk'trŏ-lŏŏ'mə-nĕs'əns) n. 1. Direct conversion of electric energy to light by a solid phosphor subjected to an alternating electric field. 2. Emission of light caused by electric discharge in a gas.

—e·lec'tro·lu'mi·nes'cent adj.

e·lec·trol·y·sis (ĭ-lĕk-trŏl'ĭ-sĭs, ē'lĕk-) n. 1. Chemical change, especially decomposition, produced in an electrolyte by an electric current. 2. Destruction of living tissue, especially of hair roots, by means of an electric current applied with a needle-shaped electrode.

e·lec·tro·lyte (ĭ-lĕk'trə-līt') n. 1. A chemical compound that ionizes when dissolved or molten to produce an electrically conductive medium. 2. Physiology. Any of various ions, such as sodium, potassium, or chloride, required by cells to regulate the electric charge and flow of water molecules across the cell membrane.

e·lec·tro·lyt·ic (ĭ-lĕk'trə-līt'ĭk) adj. 1. a. Of or relating to electrolysis.

b. Produced by electrolysis. 2. Of or relating to electrolytes.

—e·lec'tro·lyt'i·cal·ly adv.

electrolytic cell (ĭ-lĕk'trə-līt'ĭk sĕl) n. 1. A cell containing an electrolyte through which an externally generated electric current is passed by a system of electrodes in order to produce an electrochemical reaction. 2. A cell containing an electrolyte in which an electrochemical reaction produces an electromotive force.

e·lec·tro·lyze (ĭ-lĕk'trə-līz') v. tr. e·lec·tro·lyzed, e·lec·tro·lyz·ing, e·lec·tro·lyz·es. To cause to decompose by electrolysis.

e·lec·tro·mag·net (ĭ-lĕk'trŏ-măg'nĭt) n. A magnet consisting essentially of a coil of insulated wire wrapped around a soft iron core that is magnetized only when current flows through the wire.

e·lec·tro·mag·net·ic (ĭ-lĕk'trŏ-măg-nĕt'ĭk) adj. Abbr. EM Of or exhibiting electromagnetism. —e·lec'tro·mag·net'i·cal·ly adv.

electromagnetic field (ĭ-lĕk'trŏ-măg-nĕt'ĭk fĕld) n. The field of force associated with electric charge in motion, having both electric and magnetic components and containing a definite amount of electromagnetic energy.

electromagnetic pulse (ĭ-lĕk'trŏ-măg-nĕt'ĭk pŭls) n. Abbr. EMP The pulse of intense electromagnetic radiation generated by a nuclear explosion high above Earth.

electromagnetic spectrum (ĭ-lĕk'trŏ-măg-nĕt'ĭk spĕk'trəm) n. The entire range of radiation extending in frequency from approximately 10^{23} hertz to 0 hertz or, in corresponding wavelengths, from 10^{-13} centimeter to infinity and including, in order of decreasing frequency, cosmic-ray photons, gamma rays, x-rays, ultraviolet radiation, visible light, infrared radiation, microwaves, and radio waves.

electromagnetic unit (ĭ-lĕk'trō-măg-nĕt'ĭk yōō'nĭt) n. Abbr. emu Any of various systems of units for electricity and magnetism based on a system of equations in which the permeability of free space is taken as unity and by means of which the abampere is defined as the fundamental unit of current.

electromagnetic wave (ĭ-lĕk'trō-măg-nĕt'ĭk wāv) n. A wave of energy having a frequency within the electromagnetic spectrum and propagated as a periodic disturbance of the electromagnetic field when an electric charge oscillates or accelerates.

e·lec·tro·mag·net·ism (ĭ-lĕk'trō-măg'nĭ-tĭz'əm) n. 1. Magnetism produced by electric charge in motion. 2. The physics of electricity and magnetism.

e·lec·tro·mech·an·i·cal (ĭ-lĕk'trō-mə-kăn'ĭ-kəl) adj. Relating to a mechanical device or system that is actuated or controlled by electricity.

e·lec·tro·met·al·lur·gy (ĭ-lĕk'trō-mĕt'l-ŭr'jĕ) n. The use of electric and electrolytic processes to purify metals or reduce metallic compounds to metals.

—e·lec'tro·met'al·lur'gi·cal adj.

e·lec·trom·e·ter (ĭ-lĕk'trōm'ĭ-tĕr, ĕ'lĕk-) n. An instrument for measuring voltage.

e·lec·tro·mo·tive (ĭ-lĕk'trō-mō'tĭv) adj. Of, relating to, or producing electric current.

electromotive force (ĭ-lĕk'trō-mō'tĭv fōrs) n. Abbr. emf, EMF The energy per unit charge that is converted reversibly from chemical, mechanical, or other forms of energy into electrical energy in a battery or dynamo.

e·lec·tro·my·o·gram (ĕ-lĕk'trō-mĭ'ō-grăm') n. Abbr. EMG A graphic record of the electrical activity of a muscle as recorded by an electromyograph.

e·lec·tro·my·o·graph (ĭ-lĕk-trō-mĭ'ə-grăf') n. An instrument used in the diagnosis of neuromuscular disorders that produces an audio or visual record of the electrical activity of a skeletal muscle by means of an electrode inserted into the muscle or placed on the skin.

—e·lec'tro·my'o·graph'ic adj.

—e·lec'tro·my'o·graph'i·cal·ly adv. —e·lec'tro·my·og'ra·phy (-mĭ-ŏg'ră-fĕ) n.

e·lec·tron (ĭ-lĕk'trōn') n. Abbr. e A stable subatomic particle in the lepton family having a rest mass of 9.1066×10^{-28} gram and a unit negative electric charge of approximately 1.602×10^{-19} coulomb. [ELECTR(IC) + -ON¹.]

e·lec·tro·neg·a·tive (ĭ-lĕk'trō-nĕg'ə-tĭv) adj. 1. Having a negative electric charge. 2. Tending to attract electrons to form a chemical bond. 3. Capable of acting as a negative electrode.

electron gun (ĭ-lĕk'trōn' gŭn) n. The electrode, especially in a cathode-ray tube, that produces a beam of accelerated electrons.

electron hole (ĭ-lĕk'trōn' hōl) n. Physics. See hole (n., sense 9).

e·lec·tron·ic (ĭ-lĕk-trōn'ĭk, ĕ'lĕk-) adj. 1. Of or relating to electrons. 2. Of, relating to, based on, operated by, or otherwise involving the controlled conduc-tion of electrons or other charge carriers, especially in a vacuum, gas, or semiconducting material. 3. Of or relating to electronics. —e·lec·tron/i·cal·ly adv.

electronic fetal monitor (ĭ-lĕk-trŏn'ĭk fĕt'ĭ mŏn'ĭ-tər) n. Abbr. EFM An electronic device used during labor to monitor fetal heartbeat and maternal uterine contractions.

electronic flash (ĭ-lĕk-trŏn'ĭk flăsh) n. A portable flash lamp for photography that uses a capacitor as a power source.

electronic mail (ĭ-lĕk-trŏn'ĭk māl) n. Computer Science. Messages sent and received electronically via telecommunication links, as between microcomputers or terminals. Also called E-mail electronic music (ĭ-lĕk-trŏn'ĭk myŏō'zĭk) n. Music. Music produced or altered by electronic means, as by a tape recorder or synthesizer.

e·lec·tron·ics (ĭ-lĕk'trŏn'ĭks, ē'lĕk-) n. 1. (used with a sing. verb). The science and technology of electronic phenomena. 2. (used with a pl. verb). Electronic devices and systems: The electronics aboard the new aircraft are very sophisticated.

electronic stylus (ĭ-lĕk-trŏn'ĭk stī'ləs) n. Computer Science. See light pen.

electron lens (ĭ-lĕk'trŏn' lĕnz) n. Any of various devices that use an electric or a magnetic field to focus a beam of electrons.

electron micrograph (ĭ-lĕk'trŏn' mī'krə-grăf') n. A micrograph made by an electron microscope.

electron microscope (ĭ-lĕk'trŏn' mī'krə-skŏp') n. Abbr. EM Any of a class of microscopes that use electrons rather than visible light to produce magnified images, especially of objects having dimensions smaller than the wavelengths of visible light, with linear magnification approaching or exceeding a million (10^6).

electron microscopy (ĭ-lĕk'trŏn' mī-krŏs'kə-pĕ) n. Microscopy involving use of an electron microscope. —electron microscopist n.

electron multiplier (ĭ-lĕk'trŏn' mŭl'tə-plī'ər) n. A vacuum tube in which a single electron produces a large number of secondary electrons by collision with an anode, the process generally being repeated through a number of stages to achieve great amplification of current.

electron neutrino (ĭ-lĕk'trŏn' nŏō-trĕ'nŏ) n. A stable elementary particle in the lepton family having a mass very close to zero and no charge.

electron optics (ĭ-lĕk'trŏn' ŏp'tĭks) n. (used with a sing. verb). The science of the control of electron motion by electron lenses in systems or under conditions analogous to those involving or affecting visible light.

electron pair (ĭ-lĕk'trŏn' pâr) n. 1. Two electrons functioning or regarded as functioning in concert, especially two electrons that form a nonpolar covalent bond between atoms. 2. The combination of an electron and a positron as produced by a high-energy photon.

electron transport (ĭ-lĕk'trŏn' trăns-pŏrt') n. Biochemistry. The successive passage of electrons from one cytochrome or flavoprotein to another by a series of oxidation-reduction reactions during the aerobic production of ATP, with the electrons originating from an oxidizable substrate and ultimately being passed to molecular oxygen. The oxidation-reduction reactions generate the energy required for the production of ATP.

electron tube (ĭ-lĕk'trŏn' tōōb) n. A sealed enclosure, either highly evacuated or containing a controlled quantity of gas, in which electrons can be made sufficiently mobile to act as the principal carriers of current between at least one pair of electrodes.

electron volt (ĭ-lĕk'trŏn' vōlt) n. Abbr. eV A unit of energy equal to the energy acquired by an electron falling through a potential difference of one volt, approximately 1.602×10^{-19} joule. See Table at measurement.

e·lec·tro·phile (ĭ-lĕk'trə-fīl') n. A chemical compound or group that is attracted to electrons and tends to accept electrons.

e·lec·tro·pho·rese (ĭ-lĕk'trō-fə-rĕs') v. tr. e·lec·tro·pho·resed, e·lec·tro·pho·res-ing, e·lec·tro·pho·res-es. To subject to electrophoresis. [Back-formation from ELECTROPHORESIS.]

e·lec·tro·pho·re·sis (ĭ-lĕk'trō-fə-rĕ'sis) n. 1. The migration of charged colloidal particles or molecules through a solution under the influence of an applied electric field usually provided by immersed electrodes. Also called cataphoresis 2. A method of separating substances, especially proteins, and analyzing molecular structure based on the rate of movement of each component in a colloidal suspension while under the influence of an electric field. —e·lec'tro·pho·ret'ic (-rĕt'ĭk) adj.

e·lec·tro·pho·ret·o·gram (ĭ-lĕk'trō-fə-rĕt'ə-grām') n. A record of the results of an electrophoresis, such as a filter paper on which the components of a mixture are deposited as they migrate under the influence of an electric field. [ELECTROPHORET(IC) + -GRAM.]

e·lec·troph·o·rus (ĭ-lĕk'trŏf'ər-əs, ĕ'lĕk-) n. pl. e·lec·troph·o·ri (-ə-rī', -ərĕ'). An apparatus for generating static electricity, consisting of a hard rubber disk that is given a negative charge by friction and a metal plate that is given a net positive charge by induction when in contact with the disk. [New Latin : ELECTRO- + Greek -phoros, -phorous.]

e·lec·tro·phys·i·ol·o·gy (ĭ-lĕk'trō-fīz'ĕ-ŏl'ə-jĕ) n. 1. The branch of physiology that studies the relationship between electric phenomena and bodily processes. 2. The electric activity associated with a bodily part or function. —e·lec'tro·phys'i·o·log'ic (-ə-lŏj'ĭk), e·lec'tro·phys'i·o·log'i·cal (-ĭ-kəl) adj. —e·lec'tro·phys'i·o·log'i·cal·ly adv. —e·lec'tro·phys'i·ol'o·gist n.

e·lec·tro·plate (ĭ-lĕk'trə-plāt') v. tr. e·lec·tro·plat-ed, e·lec·tro·plat-ing, e·lec·tro·plates. To coat or cover with a thin layer of metal by electrodeposition.

e·lec·tro·pos·i·tive (ī-lĕk'trō-pōz'ī-tīv) adj. 1. Having a positive electric charge. 2. Capable of acting as a positive electrode. 3. Tending to release electrons to form a chemical bond.

e·lec·tro·re·cep·tor (ī-lĕk'trō-rī-sĕp'tər) n. Any of a series of sensory organs in certain fish, such as sharks, skates, and electric eels, that detect electric fields and are located on the head and along the lateral line. —e·lec'tro·re·cep'tion n.

e·lec·tro·scope (ī-lĕk'trō-skōp') n. An instrument used to detect the presence, sign, and in some configurations the magnitude of an electric charge by the mutual attraction or repulsion of metal foils or pith balls. —e·lec'tro·scop'ic (-skōp'ik) adj.

e·lec·tro·shock (ī-lĕk'trō-shōk') n. See electroconvulsive therapy. — v. tr. e·lec·tro·shocked, e·lec·tro·shock·ing, e·lec·tro·shocks. To administer electroconvulsive therapy to.

electroshock therapy (ī-lĕk'trō-shōk' thĕr'ə-pĕ) n. See electroconvulsive therapy.

e·lec·tro·stat·ic (ī-lĕk'trō-stăt'ik) adj. 1. a. Of or relating to electric charges at rest. b. Produced or caused by such charges. 2. Of or relating to electrostatics. —e·lec'tro·stat'i·cal·ly adv.

electrostatic generator (ī-lĕk'trō-stăt'ik jĕn'ə-rā'tər) n. Any of various devices, including the electrophorus, the Wimshurst machine, and especially the Van de Graaff generator, that generate high voltages by accumulating large quantities of electric charge.

electrostatic precipitation (ī-lĕk'trō-stăt'ik prī-sĭp'ī-tā'shən) n. The removal of very fine particles suspended in a gas by electrostatic charging and subsequent precipitation onto a collector in a strong electric field.

electrostatic printing (ī-lĕk'trō-stăt'ik prĭn'tĭng) n. A process for printing or copying in which electrostatic forces are used to form the image in powder or ink directly on the surface to be printed. —electrostatic printer n.

e·lec·tro·stat·ics (ī-lĕk'trō-stăt'iks) n. (used with a sing. verb). The physics of electrostatic phenomena.

electrostatic unit (ī-lĕk'trō-stăt'ik yōō'nĭt) n. Abbr. esu Any unit of electricity or magnetism in the centimeter-gram-second system based on the forces of interaction between electric charges.

e·lec·tro·sur·ger·y (ī-lĕk'trō-sūr'jə-rĕ) n. The surgical use of high-frequency electric current for cutting or destroying tissue, as in cauterization. —e·lec'tro·sur'gi·cal (-jĭ-kəl) adj. —e·lec'tro·sur'gi·cal·ly adv.

e·lec·tro·ther·a·peu·tics (ī-lĕk'trō-thĕr'ə-pyōō'tĭks) n. (used with a sing. verb). See electrotherapy.

e·lec·tro·ther·a·py (ī-lĕk'trō-thĕr'ə-pĕ) n. pl. e·lec·tro·ther·a·pies. Medical therapy using electric currents. Also called electrotherapeutics

e·lec·tro·ther·mal (ĭ-lĕk'trō-thŭr'məl) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or involving both electricity and heat. 2. Of or relating to the production of heat by electricity. —e·lec'tro·ther'mal·ly adv.

e·lec·tro·o·nus (ĭ-lĕk'trōt'n-əs, ē'lĕk-) n. Alteration in excitability and conductivity of a nerve or muscle during the passage of an electric current through it. —e·lec'tro·ton'ic (-trə-tŏn'ĭk) adj.

e·lec·tro·type (ĭ-lĕk'trə-tĭp') n. 1. A metal plate used in letterpress printing, made by electroplating a lead or plastic mold of the page to be printed. 2. The process of making an electrotype. —e·lec'tro·type' v. —e·lec'tro·typ'er n. —e·lec'tro·typ'ic (-trō-tĭp'ĭk) adj.

e·lec·tro·va·lence (ĭ-lĕk'trō-vā'ləns) n. 1. Valence characterized by the transfer of electrons from atoms of one element to atoms of another during the formation of an ionic bond between the atoms. 2. The number of electric charges lost or gained by an atom in such a transfer. —e·lec'tro·va'lent adj.

e·lec·tro·va·len·cy (ĭ-lĕk'trō-vā'lən-sē) n. Electrovalence.

electrovalent bond (ĭbreve/-lĕk'trō-vā'lənt bönd) n. See ionic bond.

e·lec·trum (ĭ-lĕk'trəm) n. An alloy of silver and gold. [Middle English, from Latin, amber, from Greek ēlektron.]

e·lec·tu·ar·y (ĭ-lĕk'chōō-ēr'ē) n. pl. e·lec·tu·ar·ies. A drug mixed with sugar and water or honey into a pasty mass suitable for oral administration. [Middle English electuarie, from Late Latin ēlectuārium, probably alteration of Greek ekleikton, from ekleikhein, to lick up : ek-, out; see eghs in Appendix + leikhein, to lick; see leigh- in Appendix.]

el·ee·mos·y·nar·y (ĕl'ə-mŏs'ə-nĕr'ē, ĕl'ē-ə-) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or dependent on charity. 2. Contributed as an act of charity; gratuitous. See Synonyms at benevolent. [Medieval Latin eleēmosynārius, from Late Latin eleēmosyna, alms. See ALMS.]

el·e·gance (ĕl'ĭ-gəns) n. 1. a. Refinement, grace, and beauty in movement, appearance, or manners. b. Tasteful opulence in form, decoration, or presentation. 2. a. Restraint and grace of style. b. Scientific exactness and precision. 3. Something elegant.

SYNONYMS: elegance, grace, polish, urbanity. The central meaning shared by these nouns is “refined and tasteful beauty of manner, form, or style”: a woman of unstudied elegance; walks with unconscious grace; comported herself with dignity and polish; tact and urbanity, the marks of a true diplomat.

ANTONYM: inelegance

el·e·gan·cy (ĕl'ĭ-gən-sē) n. pl. el·e·gan·cies. Elegance or an instance of it.

el·e·gant (ĕl'ĭ-gənt) adj. Characterized by or exhibiting refined, tasteful beauty of manner, form, or style. See Synonyms at delicate. [Middle English, from el·e-gi-ac (ĕl'ə-jī'ək, ĭ-lē'jē-āk') adj. 1. Of, relating to, or involving elegy or mourning or expressing sorrow for that which is irrecoverably past: an elegiac lament for youthful ideals. 2. Of or composed in elegiac couplets. [Late Latin elegiacus, from Greek elegeiakos, from elegeia, elegy. See ELEGY.] —el'·e-gi'ac n. —el'e-gi'a-cal adj. —el'e-gi'a-cal·ly adv.

Old French, from Latin ēlegāns, ēlegant- present participle of •ēlegāre, variant of ēligere, to select. See ELECT.] —el'e-gant·ly adv.

elegiac couplet (ĕl'ə-jī'ək kŭp'līt) n. A unit of verse in Greek and Roman prosody consisting of a line of dactylic hexameter followed by a line of dactylic pentameter.

elegiac stanza (ĕl'ə-jī'ək stān'zə) n. A four-line stanza in iambic pentameter rhyming on alternate lines. Also called heroic quatrain el·e-gist (ĕl'ə-jĭst) n. The creator of an elegy.

e·le-git (ĭ-lē'jĭt) n. Law. A writ of execution against a debtor by which the debtor's property or goods are delivered to the plaintiff until the debtor can settle the debt. [Medieval Latin ēlēgit, from Latin, one has chosen (the first word of a phrase frequently used in the writ), third person sing. perfect tense of ēligere, to choose. See ELECT.]

el·e-gize (ĕl'ə-jĭz') v. el·e-gized, el·e-giz-ing, el·e-giz-es. — v. intr. To compose an elegy. — v. tr. To compose an elegy upon or for.

el·e-gy (ĕl'ə-jē) n. pl. el·e-gies. 1. A poem composed in elegiac couplets.

2. a. A poem or song composed especially as a lament for a deceased person.

b. Something resembling such a poem or song. 3. Music. A composition that is melancholy or pensive in tone. [French élegie, from Latin elegĭa, from Greek elegeia, from pl. of elegeion, elegiac distich, from elegos, song, mournful song.]

elem. abbr. Elementary.

el·e-ment (ĕl'ə-mənt) n. 1. A fundamental, essential, or irreducible constituent of a composite entity. 2. elements. The basic assumptions or principles of a subject. 3. Mathematics. a. A member of a set. b. A point, line, or plane. c. A part of a geometric configuration, such as an angle in a triangle. d. The generatrix of a geometric figure. e. Any of the terms in the rectangular array of terms that constitute a matrix or determinant. 4. Chemistry & Physics. A substance composed of atoms having an identical number of protons in each nucleus. Elements cannot be reduced to simpler substances by normal chemical means. 5. One of four substances, earth, air, fire, or water, formerly regarded as a fundamental constituent of the universe. 6. Electricity. The resistance wire in an electrical appliance such as a heater or an oven. 7. elements. The forces that constitute the weather, especially severe or inclement weather: outside paint that had been damaged by the elements. 8. An environment naturally suited to or associated with an individual: He is in his element when traveling. The business world is her element. 9. A distinct group within a larger community: the dissident element on campus. 10. elements. The bread and wine of the Eucharist. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin elementum.]

SYNONYMS: element, component, constituent, factor, ingredient. The central meaning shared by these nouns is “one of the individual parts of which a composite entity is made up”: the grammatical elements of a sentence; jealousy, a component of his character; melody and harmony, two of the constituents of a musical composition; ambition as a key factor in her success; humor, an effective ingredient of a speech.

element 104 (ĕl'ə-mənt;) n. An artificially produced radioactive element with atomic number 104 whose isotopes have mass numbers of 257, 259, 260, and 261 with half lives respectively of 0.5, 3, 0.1, and 70 seconds.

element 105 (ĕl'ə-mənt;) n. An artificially produced radioactive element with atomic number 105 whose isotopes have mass numbers of 260, 261, and 262, with half lives respectively of 1.6, 2, and 40 seconds.

el·e·men·tal (ĕl'ə-mĕn'tl) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or being an element.

2. a. Fundamental or essential; basic. b. Of or relating to fundamentals; elementary. c. Constituting an integral part; inborn. 3. Of such character as to resemble a force of nature in power or effect: elemental violence. —el'e-men'tal n. —el'e-men'tal·ly adv.

el·e·men·ta·ry (ĕl'ə-mĕn'tə-rĕ, -trĕ) adj. Abbr. elem. 1. Of, relating to, or constituting the basic, essential, or fundamental part: an elementary need for love and nurturing. 2. Of, relating to, or involving the fundamental or simplest aspects of a subject: an elementary problem in statistics. 3. Of or relating to an elementary school or elementary education: the elementary grades; elementary teachers. —el'e-men'ta·ri·ly (-tĕr'ə-lĕ) adv. —el'e-men'ta·ri·ness n.

elementary particle (ĕl'ə-mĕn'tə-rĕ pâr'tĭ-kəl) n. Any of the subatomic particles that compose matter and energy, especially one hypothesized or regarded as an irreducible constituent of matter. Also called fundamental particle elementary school (ĕl'ə-mĕn'tə-rĕ skōol) n. 1. A school usually for the first six or eight grades. 2. The first six to eight years of a child's formal education. Also called grade school, grammar school, primary school.

el·e·mi (ĕl'ə-mĕ) n. pl. el·e·mis. Any of various oily resins derived from certain tropical trees, especially Canarium luzonicum of the Philippines, and used in making varnishes and inks. [From New Latin elimi, probably from Arabic elemī, variant of al-lamīy, the elemi.]

el·e·phant (ĕl'ə-fənt) n. 1. Either of two very large herbivorous mammals, Elephas maximus of south-central Asia or Loxodonta africana of Africa, having thick, almost hairless skin, a long, flexible, prehensile trunk, upper incisors forming long, curved tusks of ivory, and, in the African species, large, fan-shaped ears.

2. Any of various extinct or living animals related to either of these two animals. [Middle English elefaunt, from Old French olifant, from Vulgar Latin olifantus*, from Latin elephantus, from Greek elephas, elephant-.]

elephant folio (ĕl'ə-fənt fō'lē-ō') n. Printing. A book or publication of the largest size, often about 60 centimeters (2 feet) in height.

el·e·phan·ti·a·sis (ĕl'ə-fən-tī'ə-sīs) n. Chronic, often extreme enlargement and hardening of cutaneous and subcutaneous tissue, especially of the legs and external genitals, resulting from lymphatic obstruction and usually caused by infestation of the lymph glands and vessels with a filarial worm. [Latin, from Greek : elephas, elephant-, elephant + -iasis, -iasis.]

el·e·phan·tine (ĕl'ə-fän'tēn', -tīn', ĕl'ə-fən-) adj. 1. Of or relating to an elephant. 2. a. Enormous in size or strength. b. Ponderously clumsy.

El·e·phan·ti·ne (ĕl'ə-fän-tī'nē) An island of southeast Egypt in the Nile River below the First Cataract. In ancient times it was a military post guarding the southern frontier of Egypt. The Elephantine papyruses, dating from the fifth century B.C., were discovered here in 1903.

elephant seal (ĕl'ə-fənt sēl) n. Either of two large seals, Mirounga angustirostris mainly of Pacific coastal waters of California or M. leonina of coastal waters of the Southern Hemisphere, the males of which have an inflatable, trunklike proboscis. Also called sea elephant el·e·phant's foot (ĕl'ə-fənts fōōt) n. pl. elephant's foot. 1. An African species of yam (Dioscorea elephantipes) having unusual clusters of tubers that grow above the ground. 2. Any of several plants of the genus Elephantopus in the composite family, having small purplish flowers grouped in discoid flower heads.

Eleusinian mysteries (ĕl'yōō-sīn'ē-ən mīs'tə-rēz) pl.n. The ancient religious rites celebrated at Eleusis in honor of Demeter. [From Latin Eleusīnius, of Eleusis, from Greek Eleusīnios, from Eleusis Eleusin-, Eleusis.]

E·leu·sis (ī-lōō'sīs) An ancient city of eastern Greece near Athens, site of the Eleusinian mysteries. —El'eu·sin'i·an (ĕl'yōō-sīn'ē-ən) adj. & n.

elev. abbr. Elevation.

el·e·vate (ĕl'ə-vāt') v. tr. ele·vat·ed, ele·vat·ing, ele·vates. 1. To move (something) to a higher place or position from a lower one; lift. 2. To increase the amplitude, intensity, or volume of. 3. To promote to a higher rank. 4. To raise to a higher moral, cultural, or intellectual level. 5. To lift the spirits of; elate. See Synonyms at lift. [Middle English elevaten, from Latin ēlevāre, ēlevāt- : ē-, ex-, up; see EX- + levāre, to raise; see leg^wh- in Appendix.]

el·e·vat·ed (ĕl'ə-vā'tīd) adj. 1. a. Raised especially above the ground: an elevated platform. See Synonyms at high. b. Increased in amount or degree: an elevated temperature. 2. a. Morally or intellectually superior. b. Formal; lofty: an elevated prose style. 3. Elated in feeling or mood; high-spirited. — n. An elevated railway.

elevated railway (ĕl'ə-vā'tīd rāl'wā') n. A railway that operates on a raised structure in order to permit passage of vehicles or pedestrians beneath it.

el·e·va·tion (ĕl'ə-vā'shən) n. Abbr. el., elev. 1. a. The act or an instance of elevating. b. The condition of being elevated. 2. An elevated place or position. 3. The height to which something is elevated above a point of reference such as the ground. 4. Loftiness of thought or feeling. 5. A scale drawing of the side, front, or rear of a structure. 6. The height of a thing above a reference level; altitude. 7. a. The ability to achieve height in a jump, as in ballet. b. The degree of height reached when such a jump is executed.

SYNONYMS: elevation, altitude, height. The central meaning shared by these nouns is “the distance of something above a point of reference such as the horizon”: a city at an elevation of 3,000 feet above sea level; a blimp flying at an altitude of one mile; a boy who grew to a height of six feet.

el·e·va·tor (ĕl'ə-vā'tər) n. 1. a. A platform or an enclosure raised and lowered in a vertical shaft to transport people or freight. b. The enclosure or platform with its operating equipment, motor, cables, and accessories. 2. A movable control surface, usually attached to the horizontal stabilizer of an aircraft, that is used to produce motion up or down. 3. A mechanism, often with buckets or scoops attached to a conveyor, used for hoisting materials. 4. A granary equipped with devices for hoisting and discharging grain.

e·lev·en (ĭ-lĕv'ən) n. 1. The cardinal number equal to 10 + 1. 2. The 11th in a set or sequence. 3. Something with 11 parts or members, especially a football team. [Middle English elleven, from Old English endleofan. See oi-no- in Appendix.] —e·lev'en adj. & pron.

e·lev·ens·es (ĭ-lĕv'ən-zəs) pl.n. Chiefly British. Tea or coffee taken at mid-morning and often accompanied by a snack.

e·lev·enth (ĭ-lĕv'ənth) n. 1. The ordinal number matching the number 11 in a series. 2. One of 11 equal parts. —e·lev'enth adv. & adj.

eleventh hour (ĭ-lĕv'ənth our) n. The latest possible time: turned in the report at the eleventh hour.

el·e·von (ĕl'ə-vŏn') n. A control surface on an airplane that combines the functions of an elevator and an aileron. [ELEV(ATOR) + (AILER)ON.]

elf (ĕlf) n. pl. elves (ĕlvz). 1. A small, often mischievous creature considered to have magical powers. 2. a. A lively, mischievous child. b. A usually sprightly or mischievous or sometimes spiteful person. [Middle English, from Old English ælf. See albho- in Appendix.]

ELF abbr. Extremely low frequency.

El Fer·rol (ĕl fə-rŏl', fĕ-) also El Ferrol del Cau·dil·lo (dĕl' kou-dĕ'ŏ, -thĕ'ŏ) A city of northwest Spain on the Atlantic Ocean. An important naval station since the 18th century, it was occupied by the British and then the French in the early 1800's. Population, 90,410.

elf·in (əl'fɪn) adj. 1. a. Relating to or suggestive of an elf. b. Made, done, or produced by an elf. 2. Small and sprightly; mischievous. 3. Having a magical quality or charm; fairylike: moved across the dimly lit stage with elfin grace. [Probably from Middle English elvene, pl. of elve, elf, from Old English -elfen, as in wuduelfen, dryad. See albho- in Appendix.]

elf·ish (əl'fɪʃ) also elv·ish (əl'vɪʃ) adj. 1. Of or relating to elves. 2. Prankish; mischievous. —elf'ish·ly adv. —elf'ish·ness n.

elf·lock (əl'f'lɒk') n. A lock of hair tangled as if by elves. Often used in the plural.

El·gar (əl'gär', -gär), Sir Edward. 1857-1934. British composer whose orchestral works include Enigma Variations (1896) and five Pomp and Circumstance marches (1901-1930).

El·gin (əl'jɪn) A city of northeast Illinois on the Fox River west-northwest of Chicago. It is a trade and industrial center. Population, 77,010.

El·gon (əl'gɒn'), Mount. An extinct volcano, 4,324.3 m (14,178 ft) high, on the Kenya-Uganda border.

El Grec·o (əl grək'ō) See El Greco.

el·hi (əl'hɪ') adj. Informal. Of, relating to, involving, or designed for use in grades 1 to 12. [EL(EMENTARY) + HI(GH SCHOOL).]

E·li (ē'lī) In the Old Testament, a judge of Israel who was the teacher of Samuel.

e·lic·it (i-līs'it) v. tr. e·lic·it·ed, e·lic·it·ing, e·lic·its. 1. a. To bring or draw out (something latent); educe. b. To arrive at (a truth, for example) by logic. 2. To call forth (a reaction, for example). See Synonyms at evoke. [Latin ēlicere, ēlicit-: ē-, ex-, ex- + lacere, to entice.] —e·lic'i·ta'tion n. —e·lic'i·tor n.

e·lide (i-līd') v. tr. e·lid·ed, e·lid·ing, e·lides. 1. a. To omit or slur over (a syllable, for example) in pronunciation. b. To strike out (something written). 2. a. To eliminate or leave out of consideration. b. To cut short; abridge. [Latin ēlīdere, to strike out : ē-, ex-, ex- + laedere, to strike.]

el·i·gi·ble (əl'i-jə-bəl) adj. 1. Qualified or entitled to be chosen: eligible to run for office; eligible for retirement. 2. Desirable and worthy of choice, especially for marriage: an eligible bachelor. 3. Football. Allowed under the rules to catch a forward pass: an eligible receiver. [Middle English, from Old French, from Late Latin ēligibilis, from Latin ēligere, to select. See ELECT.] —el'i·gi·bil'i·ty n. —el'i·gi·ble n. —el'i·gi·bly adv.

E·li·jah (i-lī'jə), Ninth century B.C. Hebrew prophet. The greatest prophet of the Old Testament, he sought to abolish idolatry and restore justice. According to Scripture, he did not die but was carried skyward in a chariot of fire.

e·lim·i·nate (i-līm'ə-nāt') v. tr. e·lim·i·nat·ed, e·lim·i·nat·ing, e·lim·i·nates. 1. To get rid of; remove: an effort to eliminate capital punishment; eliminated his enemies. 2. a. To leave out or omit from consideration; reject.

b. To remove from consideration by defeating, as in a contest. 3. Mathematics.

To remove (an unknown quantity) by combining equations. 4. Physiology. To excrete (bodily wastes). [Latin ēlimināre, ēlimināt-, to banish : ē-, ex-, ex- + līmen, līmin-, threshold.] —e-lim'i-na'tion n. —e-lim'i-na'tive, e-lim'i-na-to'ry (-nə-tôr'ē, -tôr'ē) adj. —e-lim'i-na'tor n.

SYNONYMS: eliminate, eradicate, liquidate, purge. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to wipe out someone or something undesirable, especially by using drastic methods such as banishment or execution”: eliminated all political opposition; eradicate guerrilla activity; liquidating traitors; purged all the imprisoned dissidents.

El·i·on (ĕl'ē-ən, -ŏn'), Gertrude Belle. Born 1918. American drug researcher. She shared a 1988 Nobel Prize for developing drugs to treat leukemia and gout.

El·i·ot (ĕl'ē-ət), Charles William. 1834-1926. American educator and editor who was president of Harvard University (1869-1909) and edited the Harvard Classics (1909-1910), a 50-volume selection of world literature.

El·i·ot (ĕl'ē-ət), George. Pen name of Mary Ann Evans. 1819-1880. British writer whose novels, all in the 19th-century realist tradition, include Adam Bede (1859), Silas Marner (1861), and her masterpiece, Middlemarch (1871-1872).

El·i·ot (ĕl'ē-ət), John. 1604-1690. English missionary in America who converted many Native Americans to Christianity and contributed to The Bay Psalm Book (1640), the first book printed in New England.

El·i·ot (ĕl'ē-ət), Sir John. 1592-1632. English politician who led Parliamentary opposition to Charles I.

El·i·ot (ĕl'ē-ət), T(homas) S(tearns). 1888-1965. American-born British critic and writer whose poems “The Love Song of J. Alfred Prufrock” (1915) and The Waste Land (1922) established him as a major literary figure. He also wrote dramas, such as Murder in the Cathedral (1935), and works of criticism. He won the 1948 Nobel Prize for literature.

E·lis (ē'līs) A region and city of ancient Greece in the western Peloponnesus. The plain of Olympia, in the southern part of the area, was the site of the original Olympic games.

ELISA (ī-lī'zə, -sə) n. A sensitive immunoassay that uses an enzyme linked to an antibody or antigen as a marker for the detection of a specific protein, especially an antigen or antibody. It is often used as a diagnostic test to determine exposure to a particular infectious agent, such as the AIDS virus, by identifying antibodies present in a blood sample. [e(nzyme)-l(inked) i(mmuno)ad(s)orbent) a(ssay).]

E·lis·a·beth·ville (ī-līz'ə-bəth-vīl') See Lubumbashi.

E·li·sha (ĭ-lī'shə), Ninth century B.C. In the Old Testament, a Hebrew prophet who was chosen by Elijah to be his successor.

e·li·sion (ĭ-līzh'ən) n. 1. a. Linguistics. Omission of a final or initial sound in pronunciation. b. Omission of an unstressed vowel or syllable, as in scanning a verse. 2. The act or an instance of omitting something. [Latin ēlīsīō, ēlīsīōn-, from ēlīsus, past participle of ēlīdere, to strike out. See ELIDE.]

e·lite or é·lite (ĭ-lēt', ā-lēt') n. pl. elite or e·lites. 1. a. A group or class of persons or a member of such a group or class, enjoying superior intellectual, social, or economic status: "In addition to notions of social equality there was much emphasis on the role of elites and of heroes within them" (Times Literary Supplement). b. The best or most skilled members of a group: the football team's elite. 2. A size of type on a typewriter, equal to 12 characters per linear inch. [French élite, from Old French eslite, from feminine past participle of eslire, to choose, from Latin ēligere. See ELECT.] —e·lite' adj.

e·lit·ism or é·lit·ism (ĭ-lē'tīz'əm, ā-lē'-) n. 1. The belief that certain persons or members of certain classes or groups deserve favored treatment by virtue of their perceived superiority, as in intellect, social status, or financial resources. 2. a. The sense of entitlement enjoyed by such a group or class. b. Control, rule, or domination by such a group or class. —e·lit'ist adj. & n.

e·lix·ir (ĭ-līk'sər) n. 1. A sweetened aromatic solution of alcohol and water, serving as a vehicle for medicine. 2. a. See philosophers' stone. b. A substance believed to maintain life indefinitely. Also called elixir of life c. A substance or medicine believed to have the power to cure all ills. 3. An underlying principle. [Middle English, a substance of transmutative properties, from Old French elissir, from Medieval Latin elixir, from Arabic al-'iksīr: al, the + iksīr, elixir (probably from Greek xērion, desiccative powder, from xēros, dry).]

E·liz·a·beth¹ (ĭ-līz'ə-bəth) In the New Testament, the mother of John the Baptist and a kinswoman of Mary.

E·liz·a·beth² (ĭ-līz'ə-bəth), 1843-1916. Queen of Romania (1881-1916) and poet who wrote under the pseudonym Carmen Sylva.

E·liz·a·beth³ (ĭ-līz'ə-bəth), Born 1900. Queen of Great Britain and Northern Ireland (1936-1952) as the wife of George VI.

E·liz·a·beth⁴ (ĭ-līz'ə-bəth) A city of northeast New Jersey south of Newark. Settled as Elizabethtown in 1664, it was the capital of New Jersey until 1686 and is today a residential suburb of New York City. Population, 110,002.

E·liz·a·beth I (ĭ-līz'ə-bəth), 1533-1603. Queen of England and Ireland (1558-1603) who succeeded the Catholic Mary I and reestablished Protestantism in England. Her reign was marked by several plots to overthrow her, the execution of Mary Queen of Scots (1587), the defeat of the Spanish Armada (1588), and domestic prosperity and literary achievement.

E·liz·a·beth II (ĭ-lĭz'ə-bəth), Born 1926. Queen of Great Britain and Northern Ireland (since 1952) who ascended to the throne on the death of her father, George VI.

E·liz·a·be·than (ĭ-lĭz'ə-bē'thən, -bēth'ən) adj. Abbr. Eliz. Of, relating to, or characteristic of Elizabeth I of England or her reign. —E·liz'·a·be'than n.

Elizabethan sonnet (ĭ-lĭz'ə-bē'thən sŏn'ĭt) n. See Shakespearean sonnet.

E·liz·a·beth Pe·trov·na (ĭ-lĭz'ə-bəth pə-trôv'nə), 1709-1762. Empress of Russia (1741-1762) whose reign saw a return to the political spirit of her father, Peter I, and was marked by cultural development and Russian involvement in the War of the Austrian Succession (1740-1748) and the Seven Years' War (1756-1763).

E·liz·a·beth·town (ĭ-lĭz'ə-bəth-toun') A city of central Kentucky south of Louisville. It has many antebellum houses. Population, 18,167.

elk (ĕlk) n. pl. elk or elks. 1. See wapiti. 2. The moose. 3. A light, pliant leather of horsehide or calfskin, tanned and finished to resemble elk hide. [Middle English, probably alteration of Old English eolh.]

Elk Grove Village (ĕlk grŏv vĭl'ĭj) A village of northeast Illinois, an industrial suburb of Chicago. Population, 33,429.

Elk·hart (ĕl'kärt', ĕlk'härt') A city of northern Indiana east of South Bend. It was settled in 1824. Population, 43,627.

elk·hound (ĕlk'hound') n. The Norwegian elkhound.

Elk Mountains (ĕlk moun'tənz) A range of the Rocky Mountains in west-central Colorado rising to 4,350.8 m (14,265 ft) at Castle Peak.

Elk River (ĕlk rĭv'ər) 1. A river rising in the Cumberland Mountains of south-central Tennessee and meandering about 322 km (200 mi) generally west-southwest into northern Alabama. 2. A river, about 277 km (172 mi) long, of central West Virginia.

ell¹ (ĕl) n. 1. A wing of a building at right angles to the main structure. 2. A right-angled bend in a pipe or conduit; an elbow. [From its resemblance to the shape of the capital letter L, or short for ELBOW.]

ell² (ĕl) n. An English linear measure equal to 45 inches (114 centimeters). [Middle English, from Old English eln, the length from the elbow to the middle finger's tip, ell. See el- in Appendix.]

ell³ (ĕl) n. Variant of el¹.

el·lag·ic acid (ĭ-lăj'ĭk əs'ĭd) n. A yellow crystalline compound, C₁₄H₆O₈, that is obtained from tannins and used as a hemostatic. [French ellagique, from ellag, backward spelling of galle, plant gall, from Latin galla.]

El·len (ĕl'ən), Mount. A peak, 3,514.2 m (11,522 ft) high, of southern Utah.

Ellesmere Island (ĕlz'mîr' î'lənd) An island of northern Northwest Territories, Canada, in the Arctic Ocean separated from Greenland by a narrow passage. It was first sighted by the English explorer William Baffin in 1616.

Ellesmere Port (ĕlz'mîr' pôrt) A municipal borough of northwest England on the Mersey River south-southeast of Liverpool. It has oil refineries and various light industries. Population, 82,500.

El-let (ĕl'it, -ĕt'), Charles. 1810-1862. American engineer who built over the Schuylkill River the first wire suspension bridge in America (1841-1842).

Ellice Islands (ĕl'is î'ləndz) See Tuvalu.

Ellicott City (ĕl'ĭ-kət sīt'ē) An unincorporated community of north-central Maryland west of Baltimore. It is a trade and manufacturing center. Population, 41,396.

Elington (ĕl'ing-tən), Edward Kennedy. Known as "Duke." 1899-1974. American jazz composer, pianist, and bandleader whose compositions include "Mood Indigo" (1930), "Sophisticated Lady" (1933), and concert pieces such as Black, Brown, and Beige (1943).

Ellicott Lake (ĕl'ē-ət lāk) A community of south-central Ontario, Canada, west-southwest of Sudbury. Population, 16,723.

ellipse (ĭ-lĭps') n. 1. A plane curve, especially: a. A conic section whose plane is not parallel to the axis, base, or generatrix of the intersected cone. b. The locus of points for which the sum of the distances from each point to two fixed points is equal. 2. Ellipsis. [French, from Latin ellipsis, from Greek elleipsis, from elleipein, to fall short (from the relationship between the line joining the vertices of a conic and the line through the focus and parallel to the directrix of a conic). See ELLIPSIS.]

ellipsis (ĭ-lĭp'sis) n. pl. ellipses (-sēz). 1. a. The omission of a word or phrase necessary for a complete syntactical construction but not necessary for understanding. b. An example of such omission. 2. A mark or series of marks (... or •••, for example) used in writing or printing to indicate an omission, especially of letters or words. [Latin ellipsis, from Greek elleipsis, from elleipein, to fall short : en-, in; see EN-² + leipein, to leave; see leik^w- in Appendix.]

ellipsoid (ĭ-lĭp'soid') n. A geometric surface, all of whose plane sections are either ellipses or circles. —ellipsoid', ellipsoid'al (-soid'l) adj.

elliptic (ĭ-lĭp'tik) or elliptical (-tĭ-kəl) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or having the shape of an ellipse. 2. Containing or characterized by ellipsis. 3. a. Of or relating to extreme economy of oral or written expression. b. Marked by deliberate obscurity of style or expression. [New Latin ellipticus, from Greek elleiptikos, defective, from elleipsis, a falling short, ellipsis, from elleipein, to fall short. See ELLIPSIS.] —elliptically adv.

ellipticity (ĭ-lĭp'-tĭs'ĭ-tē) n. 1. Deviation from perfect circular or spherical form toward elliptic or ellipsoidal form. 2. The degree of this deviation.

El-lis (ĕl'is), Alexander John. 1814-1890. British philologist and mathematician noted for his scientific study of phonetics.

El-lis (ĕl'is), (Henry) Havelock. 1859-1939. British psychologist and writer known for his pioneering works on sexuality, such as Studies in the Psychology of Sex (seven volumes, 1897-1928).

Ellis Island (ĕl'is i'lənd) An island of Upper New York Bay southwest of Manhattan. It was the chief immigration station of the United States from 1892 to 1943.

El-li-son (ĕl'i-sən), Ralph Waldo. 1914-1994. American writer whose novel Invisible Man (1952) is a naturalistic depiction of a young Black man's struggle against American society.

Ells-worth (ĕlz'wŭrth'), Lincoln. 1880-1951. American explorer who took part in several polar expeditions, including a 1935 flight across the Antarctic, during which he claimed large tracts for the United States.

Ells-worth (ĕlz'wŭrth'), Oliver. 1745-1807. American jurist and politician. A U.S. senator from Connecticut (1789-1796), he worked on the legislation that created the federal court system (1789) and later served as the chief justice of the U.S. Supreme Court (1796-1800).

Ellsworth Land (ĕlz'wŭrth' lənd) A high plateau of western Antarctica south of the Antarctic Peninsula. It includes the Ellsworth Mountains, rising to 5,142.3 m (16,860 ft) at Vinson Massif.

elm (ĕlm) n. 1. Any of various deciduous trees of the genus Ulmus, characteristically having arching or curving branches and serrate leaves with asymmetrical bases. Elms are widely planted as shade trees. 2. The wood of one of these trees. [Middle English, from Old English.]

El-man (ĕl'mən), Mischa. 1891-1967. Russian-born American violinist regarded as one of the foremost violinists of his time.

El Man-su-ra (ĕl mən-sŏr'ə) A city of northern Egypt on a branch of the Nile River. It is a commercial and industrial center. Population, 328,700.

elm bark beetle (ĕlm bärk bĕt'l) n. Either of two bark beetles (Scolytus multistriatus or Hylurgopinus rufipes) that transmit the fungus causing Dutch elm disease.

Elm-hurst (ĕlm'hŭrst') A city of northeast Illinois, a residential and industrial suburb of Chicago. Population, 42,029.

El-mi-ra (ĕl-mī'rə) A city of southern New York near the Pennsylvania border west of Binghamton. Mark Twain is buried here. Population, 33,724.

El Mis-ti (ĕl mĕ'stĕ) A dormant volcano, 5,825.8 m (19,101 ft) high, in the Cordillera Occidental of southern Peru. It has a perfect snowcapped cone and has long figured in Peruvian legends and poetry.

El·mont (ĕl'mŏnt) An unincorporated community of southeast New York on western Long Island southwest of Mineola. It is mainly residential. Population, 28,612.

El Mon·te (ĕl mŏn'tē) A city of southern California east of Los Angeles. It is an industrial center in an area noted for its walnut groves. Population, 106,209.

Elm·wood Park (ĕlm'wŏod' pārk) 1. A village of northeast Illinois, a residential suburb of Chicago. Population, 23,206. 2. A borough of northeast New Jersey southeast of Paterson. It was originally called East Paterson. Population, 17,623.

El Ni·ño (ĕl nēn'yō) n. Oceanography. A warming of the ocean surface off the western coast of South America that occurs every 4 to 12 years when upwelling of cold, nutrient-rich water does not occur. It causes plankton and fish to die and affects weather over much of the Pacific Ocean. [American Spanish, from Spanish, the Christ child (from the association between the onset of the warming and Christmastide) : el, the (from Latin ille); see al¹ in Appendix + niño, child (from Old Spanish ninno, from Vulgar Latin ninnus*).]

El O·beid (ĕl ō-bād') See Al Ubayyid.

el·o·cu·tion (ĕl'ə-kyōō'shən) n. 1. The art of public speaking in which gesture, vocal production, and delivery are emphasized. 2. A style or manner of speaking, especially in public. [Middle English elocucion, from Latin ēlocūtiō, ēlocūtiōn-, from ēlocūtus, past participle of ēloquī, to speak out : ē-, ex-, ex- + loquī, to speak; see tolk^{w-} in Appendix.] —el'o·cu'tion·ar'y (-shə-nĕr'ē) adj. —el'o·cu'tion·ist n.

e·lo·de·a (ĭ-lō'dē-ə) n. Any of various small, submersed herbs of the genus Elo-dea, having grasslike leaves. [New Latin Elodea, genus name, from Greek helōdēs, marshy, from helos, marsh.]

e·loign (ĭ-loin') v. tr. e·loigned, e·loign·ing, e·loigns. Archaic. 1. To remove or carry away to a distance, especially so as to conceal. 2. To take (oneself) to a distance. [Middle English elongen, from Old French esloigner : es-, from (from Latin ex-); see EX- + loing, far (from Latin longē, distant, from longus, long); see del¹ in Appendix.]

e·lon·gate (ĭ-lông'gāt', ĭ-lông'-) v. tr. intr. e·lon·gat·ed, e·lon·gat·ing, e·lon·gates. To make or grow longer. — adj. or elongated 1. Made longer; extended. 2. Having more length than width; slender. [Late Latin ēlongāre, ēlongāt- : Latin ē-, ex-, ex- + Latin longē, distant; see ELOIGN.]

e·lon·ga·tion (ĭ-lông'-gā'shən, ĭ-lông'-, ē'lông-, ē'lông-) n. 1. The act of elongating or the condition of being elongated. 2. Something that elongates; an extension. 3. The angular distance between two celestial bodies as seen from Earth.

e·lope (ĭ-lōp') v. intr. e·loped, e·lop·ing, e·lopes. 1. To run away with a lover, especially with the intention of getting married. 2. To run away; abscond.

[Perhaps Anglo-Norman aloper, to run away from one's husband with a lover, from Middle Dutch ontlopen, to run away : ont-, away from, along; see ant- in Appendix + lopen, to run.] —e·lope'ment n. —e·lop'er n.

el·o·quence (ĕl'ə-kwəns) n. 1. a. Persuasive, powerful discourse. b. The skill or power of using such discourse. 2. The quality of persuasive, powerful expression.

el·o·quent (ĕl'ə-kwənt) adj. 1. Characterized by persuasive, powerful discourse: an eloquent speaker; an eloquent sermon. 2. Vividly or movingly expressive: a look eloquent with compassion. See Synonyms at expressive. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin ēloquēns, ēloquent- present participle of ēloquī, to speak out. See ELOCUTION.] —el'·o·quent·ly adv. —el'·o·quent·ness n.

El Pas·o (ĕl pās'ō) A city of extreme western Texas on the Rio Grande opposite Ciudad Juárez, Mexico. The surrounding area was first settled by Spanish missionaries, soldiers, and traders in the 17th century. Population, 515,342.

El Re·no (ĕl rē'nō) A city of central Oklahoma west of Oklahoma City. It is a processing center and railroad junction. Population, 15,414.

El Sal·va·dor (ĕl sāl'və-dôr', sāl'və-thôr') A country of Central America bordering on the Pacific Ocean. Discovered in 1523, the region became independent from Spain in 1821. San Salvador is the capital and the largest city. Population, 4,949,000. —El Sal'va·dor'i·an (sāl'və-dôr'ē-ən, -dôr'-) adj. & n.

else (ĕls) adj. 1. Other; different: Ask somebody else. 2. Additional; more: Would you like anything else? — adv. 1. In a different or an additional time, place, or manner: I have always done it this way and I do not know how else it could be done. Where else would you like to go besides San Francisco? 2. If not; otherwise: Be careful, or else you will make a mistake. —idiom. or else. Regardless of any extenuating circumstances: Be there on time or else! [Middle English elles, from Old English. See al-¹ in Appendix.]

USAGE NOTE: Else is often used redundantly in combination with prepositions such as but, except, and besides: No one else but Sam saw the accident (omit else).

• When a pronoun is followed by else, the possessive form is generally written thus: someone else's (not someone's else). Both who else's and whose else are in use, but not whose else's: Who else's book could it have been? Whose else could it have been? See Usage Note at who. See Usage Note at whose.

else·where (ĕls'hwâr', -wâr') adv. In or to a different or another place: has property at the shore and elsewhere.

El·si·nore (ĕl'sə-nôr', -nôr') See Helsingør.

ELSS abbr. Aerospace. Extravehicular life support system.

El To-ro (ĕl tōr'ō) A community of southern California southeast of Santa Ana. It is mainly residential. Population, 62,685.

el·u·ant (ĕl'yōō-ənt) n. A substance used as a solvent in the process of elution. [From Latin ēluēns, ēluent- present participle of ēluere, to wash out. See ELUTE.]

el·u·ate (ĕl'yōō-īt, -āt') n. The solution of solvent and dissolved matter resulting from elution. [Latin ēluere, to wash out; see ELUTE + -ATE¹.]

e·lu·ci·date (ĭ-lōō'sī-dāt') v. e·lu·ci·dat·ed, e·lu·ci·dat·ing, e·lu·ci·dates.

— v. tr. To make clear or plain, especially by explanation; clarify. — v. intr. To give an explanation that serves to clarify. See Synonyms at explain. [Late Latin ēlucidāre, ēlucidāt- : ē-, ex-, intensive pref.; see EX- + Latin lucidus, bright (from lūcere, to shine); see leuk- in Appendix.] —e·lu'ci-da'tion n. —e·lu'ci-da'tive adj. —e·lu'ci-da'tor n.

e·lude (ĭ-lōōd') v. tr. e·lud·ed, e·lud·ing, e·ludes. 1. To evade or escape from, as by daring, cleverness, or skill: The suspect continues to elude the police.

2. To escape the understanding or grasp of: a name that has always eluded me; a metaphor that eluded them. See Synonyms at escape. [Latin ēlūdere : ē-, ex-, ex- + lūdere, to play (from lūdus, play); see leid- in Appendix.]

E·lul (ĕl'ool, ĕ-lōōl') n. The 12th month of the year in the Jewish calendar. See Table at calendar. [Hebrew 'Elūl, from Akkadian ulūlu, elūlu, the month Ululu (August/September).]

e·lu·sive (ĭ-lōō'sīv, -zīv) adj. 1. Tending to elude capture, perception, comprehension, or memory: “an invisible cabal of conspirators, each more elusive than the archterrorist [himself]” (David Kline). 2. Difficult to define or describe: “Failures are more finely etched in our minds than triumphs, and success is an elusive, if not mythic, goal in our demanding society” (Hugh Drummond). [From Latin ēlūsus, past participle of ēlūdere, to elude. See ELUDE.] —e·lu'sive·ly adv. —e·lu'sive·ness n.

e·lute (ĭ-lōōt') v. tr. e·lut·ed, e·lut·ing, e·lutes. To extract (one material) from another, usually by means of a solvent. [From Latin ēluere, ēlūt-, to wash out : ē-, ex-, ex- + lavere, to wash; see leu(ə)- in Appendix.] —e·lu'tion n.

e·lu·tri·ate (ĭ-lōō'trē-āt') v. tr. e·lu·tri·at·ed, e·lu·tri·at·ing, e·lu·tri·ates.

1. To purify, separate, or remove (ore, for example) by washing, decanting, and settling. 2. To wash away the lighter or finer particles of (soil, for example).

[Latin elutriāre, elutriāt- (from elutrium*, vat, bath, from Greek elutrion*, diminutive of elutron, cover, sheath, tank); see ELYTRON, or ēlūtriāre (from ēlūtor*, one who washes, from ēluere, to wash out); see ELUTE.] —e·lu'tri-a'tion n.

e·lu·vi·ate (ĭ-lōō'vē-āt') v. intr. e·lu·vi·at·ed, e·lu·vi·at·ing, e·lu·vi·ates. To undergo eluviation.

e·lu·vi·a·tion (ĭ-lōō'vē-ā'shən) n. The lateral or downward movement of dissolved or suspended material within soil when rainfall exceeds evaporation.

[ELUVI(UM) + -ATION.]

e·lu·vi·um (ĭ-lōō'vĕ-əm) n. Residual deposits of soil, dust, and rock particles produced by the action of the wind. [New Latin ēluvium, from Latin ēluere, to wash out. See ELUTE.] —e·lu'vi·al (-əl) adj.

el·ver (ĕl'vər) n. See glass eel. [Alteration of eelfare, a brood of young eels, the passage of young eels up a river : EEL + FARE, journey (obsolete).]

elves (ĕlvz) n. Plural of elf.

elv·ish (ĕl'vĭsh) adj. Variant of elfish.

E·ly (ĕ'lĕ), Isle of. A region of east-central England with extensive drained fens. The name Isle comes from the high ground amid the fens; Ely probably refers to the eels formerly found in the fens. The city of Ely (population, 10,268) is noted for its cathedral, dating from the 11th century and one of the largest in England.

El·yot (ĕl'yət, ĕl'ĕ-ət), Sir Thomas. 1490?-1546. English scholar and diplomat who wrote The Boke Named the Governour (1531), the first English treatise on education, and helped popularize the classics with his translations and Latin-English dictionary (1538).

E·ly·ri·a (ĭ-lĭr'ĕ-ə) A city of northern Ohio west-southwest of Cleveland. Settled in 1817, it is an industrial center. Population, 56,746.

E·ly·sian (ĭ-lĭzh'ən) adj. 1. Greek Mythology. Of or relating to Elysium.

2. Blissful; delightful.

Elysian Fields (ĭ-lĭzh'ən fĕldz) pl.n. Greek Mythology. The abode of the blessed after death.

E·ly·si·um (ĭ-lĭz'ĕ-əm, ĭ-lĭzh'-) n. 1. Greek Mythology. The Elysian Fields. 2. A place or condition of ideal happiness. [Latin Ēlysium, from Greek Ēlusion (pedion), Elysian (fields).]

El·y·tis (ĕl'ĕ-tĕs') , Odysseus. 1911-1996. Greek poet. He won the 1979 Nobel Prize for literature.

el·y·tron (ĕl'ĭ-trōn') n. pl. el·y·tra (-trə). Either of the leathery or chitinous forewings of a beetle or a related insect, serving to encase the thin, membranous hind wings used in flight. Also called wing case [New Latin, from Greek elutron, sheath. See wel-² in Appendix.] —el'y·troid' (-troid') adj.

em (ĕm) n. 1. The letter m. 2. Abbr. m, M Printing. a. The width of a square or nearly square piece of type, used as a unit of measure for matter set in that size of type. b. Such a measure for 12-point type; a pica.

EM abbr. 1. Electromagnetic. 2. Electron microscope. 3. Enlisted man.

E.M. abbr. Engineer of Mines.

em-¹ pref. Variant of en-¹.

em-² pref. Variant of en-².

'em (əm) pron. Informal. Them. [From Middle English hem, from Old English him, heom, dative and accusative pl. of hĕ, he. See HE¹.]

e·ma·ci·ate (ĭ-mā'shĕ-āt') v. tr. intr. e·ma·ci·at·ed, e·ma·ci·at·ing, e·ma·ci·ates. To make or become extremely thin, especially as a result of starvation. [Latin ēmaciāre, ēmaciāt- : ē-, ex-, intensive pref.; see EX- + maciāre, to make thin (from macer, thin); see māk- in Appendix.] —e·ma'ci·a'tion n.

E-mail (ē'māl') n. Computer Science. See electronic mail.

em·a·lan·ge·ni (ëm'ə-läng-gĕn'ē) n. Plural of lilangeni.

em·a·nate (ëm'ə-nāt') v. intr. tr. em·a·nat·ed, em·a·nat·ing, em·a·nates.

To come or send forth, as from a source: light that emanated from a lamp; a stove that emanated a steady heat. See Synonyms at stem¹. [Latin ēmānāre, ēmānāt-, to flow out : ē-, ex-, ex- + mānāre, to flow.] —em'a·na'tive adj.

em·a·na·tion (ëm'ə-nā'shən) n. 1. The act or an instance of emanating.

2. a. Something that issues from a source; an emission. b. Chemistry. Any of several radioactive gases that are isotopes of radon and are products of radioactive decay. —em'a·na'tion·al adj.

e·man·ci·pate (ī-măn'sə-pāt') v. tr. e·man·ci·pat·ed, e·man·ci·pat·ing, e·man·ci·pates. 1. To free from bondage, oppression, or restraint; liberate.

2. Law. To release (a child) from the control of parents or a guardian. [Latin ēmancipāre, ēmancipāt- : ē-, ex-, ex- + mancipium, ownership (from manceps, purchaser); see man-² in Appendix.] —e·man'ci·pa'tive, e·man'ci·pa·to'ry (-pə-tōr'ē, -tōr'ē) adj. —e·man'ci·pa'tor n.

e·man·ci·pa·tion (ī-măn'sə-pā'shən) n. 1. The act or an instance of emancipating. 2. The condition of being emancipated.

e·mar·gi·nate (ī-mär'jə-nīt, -nāt') adj. Having a shallow notch at the tip, as in some petals and leaves. [Latin ēmarginātus, past participle of ēmargināre, to take the edge away : ē-, ex-, ex- + margō, margin-, margin; see merg- in Appendix.]

—e·mar'gi·na'tion (-nā'shən) n.

e·mas·cu·late (ī-mäs'kyə-lāt') v. tr. e·mas·cu·lat·ed, e·mas·cu·lat·ing, e·mas·cu·lates. 1. To castrate. 2. To deprive of strength or vigor; weaken. — adj. (-līt) Deprived of virility, strength, or vigor. [Latin ēmasculāre, ēmasculāt- : ē-, ex-, ex- + masculus, male, diminutive of mās, male, man.]

—e·mas'cu·la'tion n. —e·mas'cu·la'tive, e·mas'cu·la·to'ry (-lə-tōr'ē, -tōr'ē) adj.

—e·mas'cu·la'tor n.

em·balm (ëm-bām') v. tr. em·balmed, em·balm·ing, em·balms. 1. To treat (a corpse) with preservatives in order to prevent decay. 2. To protect from change or oblivion; preserve or fix: “A precedent embalms a principle” (Benjamin Disraeli). 3. To impart fragrance to; perfume: Spicy aromas embalmed the air.

[Middle English embaumen, from Old French embasmer : en-, in; see EN-¹ + basme, balm; see BALM.] —em·balm'er n. —em·balm'ment n.

em·bank (ëm-bāngk') v. tr. em·banked, em·bank·ing, em·banks. To confine, support, or protect with an embankment.

em·bank·ment (ëm-bāngk'mənt) n. 1. The act of embanking. 2. A mound of earth or stone built to hold back water or to support a roadway.

em·bar·go (ĕm-bär'gō) n. pl. em·bar·goes. 1. A government order prohibiting the movement of merchant ships into or out of its ports. 2. A prohibition by a government on certain or all trade with a foreign nation: an embargo on the sale of computers to unfriendly nations. 3. A prohibition; a ban: an embargo on criticism. — v. tr. em·bar·goed, em·bar·go·ing, em·bar·goes. To impose an embargo on. [Spanish, from embargar, to impede, from Vulgar Latin imbarricāre*, to barricade : Latin in-, in; see EN⁻¹ + Vulgar Latin barricāre*, to barricade (from barrīca*, barrel, barrier, from barra*, bar, barrier).]

WORD HISTORY: Could an embargo on alcoholic beverages be related to a bar other than in the obvious way? The words embargo and bar are related, albeit distantly. Embargo comes to us from Spanish, where it was derived from the verb embargar, “to arrest, impede.” This verb came from the Vulgar Latin word ·imbarricāre, made up of the Latin prefix in-, “in, into,” and the assumed Vulgar Latin form ·barricāre, derived from Vulgar Latin ·barrīca, “barrier.” ·Barrīca, in turn, was derived from Vulgar Latin ·barra, “bar, barrier,” the ultimate source of our word bar. Imbarricāre meant essentially “to impede with a barrier.” Our word baris first recorded in English with the sense “barrier,” eventually developing the sense “a counter for serving drinks.”

em·bark (ĕm-bärk') v. em·barked, em·bark·ing, em·barks. — v. tr. 1. To cause to board a vessel or aircraft: stopped to embark passengers. 2. To enlist (a person or persons) or invest (capital) in an enterprise. — v. intr. 1. To go aboard a vessel or aircraft, as at the start of a journey. 2. To set out on a venture; commence: embark on a world tour. [French embarquer : en-, in; see EN⁻¹ + barque, ship; see BARK³.] — em'bar·ka'tion, em·bark'ment n.

Em·barras River also Em·barrass River (ăm'brô rĭv'ər) A river rising in eastern Illinois and flowing about 298 km (185 mi) generally south and southeast to the Wabash River in southwest Indiana.

em·bar·rass (ĕm-bär'əs) v. tr. em·bar·rassed, em·bar·rass·ing, em·bar·rass·es. 1. To cause to feel self-conscious or ill at ease; disconcert: Meeting adults embarrassed the shy child. 2. To involve in or hamper with financial difficulties. 3. To hinder with obstacles or difficulties; impede. 4. To complicate. [French embarrasser, to encumber, hamper, from Spanish embarazar, from Italian imbarazzare, from imbarazzo, obstacle, obstruction, from imbarrare, to block, bar : in-, in (from Latin); see EN⁻¹ + Vulgar Latin barra*, bar.] — em·bar'rassed·ly adv. — em·bar'rass·ing·ly adv.

SYNONYMS: embarrass, abash, chagrin, discomfit, disconcert, faze, rattle. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to cause someone to feel self-conscious and uneasy”: was embarrassed by her child's tantrum; felt abashed at the extrava- gant praise; will be chagrined if his confident prediction fails; was discomfited by the sudden personal question; is disconcerted by sarcastic remarks; refuses to be fazed by your objections; isn't easily rattled before an audience.

em·bar·rass·ment (ĕm-băr'əs-mənt) n. 1. The act or an instance of embarrassing. 2. The state of being embarrassed. 3. A source or cause of being embarrassed. 4. An overabundance: an embarrassment of choices at a buffet dinner; an embarrassment of riches.

Em·barrass River (ăm'brô riv'ər) See Embarras River.

em·bas·sage (ĕm'bə-sij) n. Archaic. An embassy. [Middle English ambassage, office or function of an ambassador, possibly variant of ambassade, from Old French ambassade, ambaxade, from Old Spanish ambaxada, or Old Provençal ambaissada both from Medieval Latin ambactiāta, from ambactia, from Latin ambactus, servant. See ag- in Appendix.]

em·bas·sy (ĕm'bə-sē) n. pl. em·bas·sies. 1. A building containing the offices of an ambassador and staff. 2. The position, function, or assignment of an ambassador. 3. A mission to a foreign government headed by an ambassador. 4. A staff of diplomatic representatives headed by an ambassador. [Variant of ambassy, office or function of an ambassador, from obsolete French ambassée, from Medieval Latin ambactiāta. See EMBASSAGE.]

em·bat·tle (ĕm-băt'l) v. tr. em·bat·tled, em·bat·tling, em·bat·tles. 1. To prepare for battle; array. 2. To furnish with battlements for defense. [Middle English embataillen, from Old French embataillier: en-, in-; see EN⁻¹ + batailler, to battle (from bataille, battle); see BATTLE.]

em·bat·tled (ĕm-băt'ld) adj. 1. Prepared or fortified for battle or engaged in battle: embattled troops; an embattled city. 2. Beset with attackers, criticism, or controversy: an embattled legislative minority; an embattled governor.

em·bat·tle·ment (ĕm-băt'l-mənt, ĭm-) n. See battlement.

em·bay (ĕm-bā') v. tr. em·bayed, em·bay·ing, em·bays. To put, shelter, or detain in a bay.

em·bay·ment (ĕm-bā'mənt) n. 1. A bay or baylike shape. 2. The formation of a bay.

em·bed (ĕm-bĕd') also im·bed (ĭm-) v. em·bed·ded, em·bed·ding, em·beds. — v. tr. 1. To fix firmly in a surrounding mass: embed a post in concrete; fossils embedded in shale. 2. To enclose snugly or firmly. 3. To cause to be an integral part of a surrounding whole. 4. Biology. To enclose (a specimen) in a supporting material before sectioning for microscopic examination. — v. intr. To become embedded: The harpoon struck but did not embed. — em·bed'ment n.

em·bel·lish (ĕm-bĕl'ish) v. tr. em·bel·lished, em·bel·lish·ing, em·bel·lish·es. 1. To make beautiful, as by ornamentation; decorate. 2. To add ornamental or fictitious details to: a fanciful account that embellishes the true story. [Middle English embelishen, from Old French embellir, embelliss- : en-, causative pref.; see EN-¹ + bel, beautiful (from Latin bellus); see deu-² in Appendix.] —em·bel/lish·er n.

em·bel·lish·ment (ĕm-bĕl'ish-mənt) n. 1. The act of embellishing or the state of being embellished. 2. Something that embellishes; a decoration.

3. Music. A note that embellishes a melody.

em·ber (ĕm'bĕr) n. 1. A small, glowing piece of coal or wood, as in a dying fire. 2. embers. The smoldering coal or ash of a dying fire. [Middle English embre, from Old English æmerge.]

Em·ber Day (ĕm'bĕr dā) n. A day reserved for prayer and fasting by some Christian churches, observed on the Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday after the first Sunday of Lent, after Whitsunday, after September 14, and after December 13. [Middle English ymer daye, from Old English ymbrendæg : ymbryne, recurrence, course of time (yambe, around; see ambhi in Appendix + ryne, a running); see rei- in Appendix + dæg, day; see DAY.]

em·bez·zle (ĕm-bĕz'zəl) v. tr. em·bez·zled, em·bez·zling, em·bez·zles. To take (money, for example) for one's own use in violation of a trust. [Middle English embesilen, from Anglo-Norman enbesiler : Old French en-, intensive pref.; see EN-¹ + Old French besillier, to ravage.] —em·bez'zle·ment n.

—em·bez'zler n.

em·bit·ter (ĕm-bīt'tĕr) v. tr. em·bit·tered, em·bit·ter·ing, em·bit·ters.

1. To make bitter in flavor. 2. To arouse bitter feelings in: was embittered by years of unrewarded labor. —em·bit'ter·ment n.

em·blaze¹ (ĕm-blāz') v. tr. em·blazed, em·blaz·ing, em·blaz·es. 1. To set on fire. 2. To cause to glow; light up.

em·blaze² (ĕm-blāz') v. tr. em·blazed, em·blaz·ing, em·blaz·es. Archaic.

1. To emblazon. 2. To decorate lavishly.

em·bla·zon (ĕm-blā'zən) v. tr. em·bla·zoned, em·bla·zon·ing, em·bla·zons. 1. a. To adorn (a surface) richly with prominent markings:

emblazon a doorway with a coat of arms. b. To inscribe (a prominent marking) on a surface: emblazon a cross on a banner. 2. To make resplendent with brilliant colors. 3. To make illustrious; celebrate: emblazoning a heroine's deeds in song.

—em·bla'zon·er n. —em·bla'zon·ment n.

em·bla·zon·ry (ĕm-blāz'ən-rĕ) n. pl. em·bla·zon·ries. 1. The act or art of emblazoning. 2. Colorful or prominent decoration, especially heraldic decoration.

em·blem (ĕm'blĕm) n. 1. An object or a representation that functions as a symbol. See Synonyms at symbol. 2. A distinctive badge, design, or device: trucks marked with the company emblem; the emblem of the air force. 3. An allegorical picture usually inscribed with a verse or motto presenting a moral lesson.

[Middle English, pictorial fable, from Latin emblēma, raised ornament, from Greek, embossed design, from emballein, to insert, set in : en-, in; see EN⁻² + ballein, to throw; see g^welə- in Appendix.]

em·blem·at·ic (ĕm'blə-măt'ĭk) or em·blem·at·i·cal (-ĭ-kəl) adj. Of, relating to, or serving as an emblem; symbolic. [French emblématique, from Medieval Latin emblēmaticus, of an emblem, from Latin emblēma, emblēmat-, emblem. See EMBLEM.] —em'blem·at'i·cal·ly adv.

em·blem·a·tize (ĕm-blĕm'ə-tīz') also em·blem·ize (ĕm'blə-mīz') v. tr.

em·blem·a·tized also em·blem·ized, em·blem·a·tiz·ing also em·blem·iz·ing, em·blem·a·tiz·es also em·blem·iz·es. To represent with or as if with an emblem; symbolize.

em·ble·ments (ĕm'blə-mənts) pl.n. Law. The crops or products of the land legally belonging to a tenant. [From Middle English emblaiment, from Old French emblaement, from emblaer, to sow with grain, from Medieval Latin imblādāre : Latin in-, in; see EN⁻¹ + Medieval Latin blādum, blādium, grain (of Germanic origin); see bhel⁻³ in Appendix.]

em·blem·ize (ĕm'blə-mīz') v. Variant of emblematize.

em·bod·i·ment (ĕm-bōd'ē-mənt, ĭm-) n. 1. The act of embodying or the state of being embodied. 2. One that embodies: "The flag is the embodiment, not of sentiment, but of history" (Woodrow Wilson).

em·bod·y (ĕm-bōd'ē) v. tr. em·bod·ied, em·bod·y·ing, em·bod·ies. 1. To give a bodily form to; incarnate. 2. To represent in bodily or material form: "As John Adams embodied the old style, Andrew Jackson embodied the new" (Richard Hofstadter). 3. To make part of a system or whole; incorporate: laws that embody a people's values.

em·bold·en (ĕm-bōl'dən) v. tr. em·bold·ened, em·bold·en·ing, em·bold·ens. To foster boldness or courage in; encourage. See Synonyms at encourage.

em·bo·lec·to·my (ĕm'bə-lĕk'tə-mē) n. pl. em·bo·lec·to·mies. Surgical removal of an embolus. [EMBOL(US) + -ECTOMY.]

em·bo·li (ĕm'bə-lī') n. Plural of embolus.

em·bol·ic (ĕm-bōl'ĭk) adj. 1. Pathology. Of, relating to, or caused by an embolus or an embolism. 2. Embryology. Of or relating to emboly.

em·bo·lism (ĕm'bə-līz'əm) n. 1. Obstruction or occlusion of a blood vessel by an embolus. 2. An embolus. [Middle English embolisme, insertion of one or more days in a calendar, from Late Latin embolismus, from Greek embolismos, from emballein, to insert. See EMBLEM.] —em'bo·lis'mic adj.

em·bo·lus (ĕm'bə-ləs) n. pl. em·bo·li (-lī'). A mass, such as an air bubble, a detached blood clot, or a foreign body, that travels through the bloodstream and lodges so as to obstruct or occlude a blood vessel. [Latin, piston of a pump, from Greek embolos, stopper, plug, from emballein, to insert. See EMBLEM.]

em·bo·ly (ĕm'bə-lē) n. pl. em·bo·lies. Embryology. The formation of a gastrula from a blastula by invagination. [Greek embolē, insertion, from emballein, to insert. See EMBLEM.]

em·bon·point (än'bôn-pwăN') n. The condition of being plump; stoutness. [French, from en bon point, in good condition : en, in (from Latin in, in-); see EN-¹ + bon, good (from Old French); see BOON² + point, situation, condition; see POINT.]

em·bos·om (ĕm-bōōz'əm, -bōō'zəm) v. tr. em·bos·omed, em·bos·om·ing, em·bos·oms. 1. To enclose protectively; envelop. 2. Archaic. To clasp to or hold in the bosom.

em·boss (ĕm-bōs', -bōs') v. tr. em·bossed, em·boss·ing, em·boss·es.

1. To mold or carve in relief: emboss a design on a coin. 2. To decorate with or as if with a raised design: emboss leather. 3. To adorn; decorate. 4. To cover with many protuberances; stud: "The whole buoy was embossed with barnacles" (Herman Melville). [Middle English embosen, from Old French embocer : en-, in; see EN-¹ + boce, knob.] —em·boss'er n.

em·boss·ment (ĕm-bōs'mənt, -bōs'-) n. 1. The act or process of embossing or the condition of being embossed. 2. Embossed ornamentation. 3. The distance between the nondeformed part of a document surface and a specified point on a printed character in optical character recognition.

em·bou·chure (äm'bōō-shōōr') n. 1. The mouth of a river. 2. Music. a. The mouthpiece of a wind instrument. b. The manner in which the lips and tongue are applied to such a mouthpiece. [French, from emboucher, to put or go into the mouth, from Old French : en-, in; see EN-¹ + bouche, mouth (from Latin bucca, cheek).]

em·bour·geise·ment (ĕm-bōōr'zhwäz-mənt, -mänt') n. Conversion to bourgeois values, loyalties, or tastes: "The Soviet party, despite a new appearance of embourgeoisement, remained tightly faithful to Soviet discipline" (New York Times). [French, from bourgeois, bourgeois. See BOURGEOIS.]

em·bowed (ĕm-bōd') adj. 1. Bent or curved like a bow. 2. Architecture.

a. Having an arch or arches. b. Protruding in an outward curve so as to form a recess within.

em·bow·el (ĕm-bou'əl) v. tr. em·bow·eled or em·bow·elled, em·bow·el·ing or em·bow·el·ling, em·bow·els or em·bow·els. 1. To disembowel. 2. Obsolete. To enclose. [Obsolete French emboueler : en-, intensive pref.; see EN-¹ + Old French boeler (from boel, bouele, entrails); see BOWEL. Sense 2 EN-¹ + BOWEL.]

em·bow·er (ĕm-bou'ər) v. tr. em·bow·ered, em·bow·er·ing, em·bow·ers. To enclose in or as if in a bower.

em·brace (ĕm-brās') v. em·braced, em·brac·ing, em·brac·es. — v. tr.

1. To clasp or hold close with the arms, usually as an expression of affection.

2. a. To surround; enclose: We allowed the warm water to embrace us. b. To twine around: a trellis that was embraced by vines. 3. To include as part of something broader. See Synonyms at include. 4. To take up willingly or eagerly: embrace a social cause. 5. To avail oneself of: “I only regret, in my chilled age, certain occasions and possibilities I didn’t embrace” (Henry James). — v. intr. To join in an embrace. — n. 1. An act of holding close with the arms, usually as an expression of affection; a hug. 2. An enclosure or encirclement: caught in the jungle’s embrace. 3. Eager acceptance: your embrace of Catholicism. [Middle English embracen, from Old French embracer : en-, in; see EN⁻¹ + brace, the two arms; see BRACE.] — em·brace’able adj. — em·brace’ment n.

em·brace·or or em·brac·er (ĕm-brā’sər) n. Law. One guilty of attempting to influence a court illegally. [Middle English imbrasour, from Anglo-Norman embraceor, probably from embracer, to embrace, incite, influence a court by illegal means, from Old French. See EMBRACE.]

em·brac·er¹ (ĕm-brā’sər) n. One that embraces: an embracer of novel ideas.

em·brac·er² (ĕm-brā’sər) n. Law. Variant of embraceor.

em·brac·er·y (ĕm-brā’sə-rē) n. pl. em·brac·er·ies. Law. An attempt to corrupt a jury, as with bribery. [Middle English embracerie, from embracen, to influence a jury by illegal means, to embrace. See EMBRACE.]

em·branch·ment (ĕm-brānch’mənt) n. 1. A branching out, as of a mountain range or river. 2. A branch or ramification.

em·bran·gle (ĕm-brāng’gəl) v. tr. em·bran·gled, em·bran·gling, em·bran·gles. To entangle; embroil. [EN⁻¹ + dialectal brangle, to shake, waver, confuse (variant of branle, brandle, from French branler, from Old French brandeler, perhaps from brand, sword); see BRANDISH.] — em·bran’gle·ment n.

em·bra·sure (ĕm-brā’zhər) n. 1. An opening in a thick wall for a door or window, especially one with sides angled so that the opening is larger on the inside of the wall than on the outside. 2. A flared opening for a gun in a wall or parapet. [French, from embraser, to widen an opening.] — em·bra’sured adj.

em·brit·tle (ĕm-brit’l) v. tr. intr. em·brit·tled, em·brit·tling, em·brit·tles. To make or become brittle. — em·brit’tle·ment n.

em·bro·cate (ĕm’brə-kāt’) v. tr. em·bro·cat·ed, em·bro·cat·ing, em·bro·cates. To moisten and rub (a part of the body) with a liniment or lotion. [Medieval Latin embrocāre, embrocāt-, from Late Latin embrocha, lotion, from Greek embrokhē, from embrekhein, to foment : en-, in; see EN⁻² + brekhein, to wet.]

em·bro·ca·tion (ĕm’brə-kā’shən) n. 1. The act or process of moistening and rubbing a part of the body with a liniment or lotion. 2. A liniment or lotion.

em·broi·der (ĕm-broi’dər) v. em·broi·dered, em·broi·der·ing, em·broi·ders. — v. tr. 1. To ornament with needlework: embroider a pillow cover. 2. To make by means of needlework: embroider a design on a bedspread.

3. To add embellishments or fanciful details to: embroider the truth. — v. intr.

1. To make needlework. 2. To add embellishments or fanciful details. [Middle English embrouderen, partly from embrouden (from brouden, broiden, braided, embroidered, from Old English brogden, past participle of bregdan, to weave); see BRAID, and partly from Old French embroder (en-, intensive pref.; see en⁻¹ + broder, brosder, to embroider of Germanic origin).] — em·broi·der·er n.

em·broi·der·y (ĕm·broi'də-rĕ) n. pl. em·broi·der·ies. 1. The act or art of embroidering. 2. Ornamentation of fabric with needlework. 3. A piece of embroidered fabric. 4. Embellishment with fanciful details.

em·broil (ĕm·broil') v. tr. em·broiled, em·broil·ing, em·broils. 1. To involve in argument, contention, or hostile actions: “Avoid... any step that may embroil us with Great Britain” (Alexander Hamilton). 2. To throw into confusion or disorder; entangle. [French embrouiller: en-, intensive pref.; see en⁻¹ + brouiller, to confuse (from Old French); see BROIL².] — em·broil·ment n.

em·brown (ĕm·broun') v. tr. em·browned, em·brown·ing, em·browns. 1. To make brown or dusky. 2. To darken.

em·brue (ĕm·brōo') v. Variant of imbrue.

em·bry·ec·to·my (ĕm'brĕ-ĕk'tə-mĕ) n. pl. em·bry·ec·to·mies. Surgical removal of an embryo, especially one implanted outside of the uterus.

em·bry·o (ĕm'brĕ-ō') n. pl. em·bry·os. 1. a. An organism in its early stages of development, especially before it has reached a distinctively recognizable form. b. An organism at any time before full development, birth, or hatching.

2. a. The fertilized egg of a vertebrate animal following cleavage. b. In human beings, the prefetal product of conception from implantation through the eighth week of development. 3. Botany. The minute, rudimentary plant contained within a seed or an archegonium. 4. A rudimentary or beginning stage: “To its founding fathers, the European [Economic] Community was the embryo of the United States of Europe” (Economist). [Medieval Latin embryō, from Greek embryon: en-, in; see en⁻² + bruein, to be full to bursting.]

em·bry·o·gen·e·sis (ĕm'brĕ-ō-jĕn'ĭ-sĭs) also em·bry·og·e·ny (-ōj'ə-nĕ) n. The development and growth of an embryo. — em'br̄y·o·gen'ic (-jĕn'ĭk), em'br̄y·o·ge·net'ic (-ō-jə-nĕt'ĭk) adj.

em·bry·oid (ĕm'brĕ-oid') n. A minute plant or animal form that resembles an embryo. — adj. Resembling an embryo.

em·bry·ol·o·gy (ĕm'brĕ-ōl'ə-jĕ) n. 1. The branch of biology that deals with the formation, early growth, and development of living organisms. 2. The embryonic structure or development of a particular organism.

— em'br̄y·o·log'ic (-ə-lōj'ĭk), em'br̄y·o·log'i·cal adj.

— em'br̄y·o·log'i·cal·ly adv. — em'br̄y·ol'og·ist n.

em·bry·on·ic (ĕm'brĕ-ōn'ĭk) also em·bry·on·al (ĕm'brĕ-ə-nəl) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or being an embryo. 2. Also em·bry·ot·ic (-ōt'ĭk). Rudimentary; incipient: an embryonic nation, not yet self-governing. —em'bry-on'ic-al-ly adv.

embryonic disk (ĕm'brē-ōn'ik dĭsk) n. 1. A platelike mass of cells in the blastocyst from which a mammalian embryo develops. Also called embryonic shield 2. See germinal disk.

embryonic membrane (ĕm'brē-ōn'ik mĕm'brān') n. Any of the membranous structures closely associated with or surrounding a developing vertebrate embryo, including the amnion, chorion, allantois, and yolk sac.

embryonic shield (ĕm'brē-ōn'ik shĕld) n. See embryonic disk (n., sense 1).

em·bry·op·a·thy (ĕm'brē-ōp'ə-thē) n. pl. em·bry·op·a·thies. A developmental disorder in an embryo.

embryo sac (ĕm'brē-ō' sāk) n. The female gametophyte of a seed plant, within which the embryo develops.

em·bry·ot·ic (ĕm'brē-ōt'ik) adj. Variant of embryonic (adj., sense 2).

em·cee (ĕm'sē') n. A master of ceremonies. — v. em·ceed, em·cee·ing, em·cees. — v. tr. To serve as master of ceremonies of: emcee a variety show. — v. intr. To act as master of ceremonies. [Pronunciation of M.C., abbr. of master of ceremonies.]

Em·den (ĕm'dən) A city of northwest Germany at the mouth of the Ems River west-northwest of Bremen. Founded in the ninth century, it was an important naval base during World War II. Population, 50,164.

-eme suff. A distinctive unit of linguistic structure: semanteme. [French -ème, from phonème, phoneme. See PHONEME.]

e·mend (ĭ-mĕnd') v. tr. e·mend·ed, e·mend·ing, e·mends. To improve by critical editing: emend a faulty text. [Middle English emenden, from Latin ĕmendāre: ĕ-, ex-, ex- + mendum, defect, fault.] — e·mend'er n.

e·men·date (ē'mĕn-dāt', ĭ-mĕn'-) v. tr. e·men·dat·ed, e·men·dat·ing, e·men·dates. To make textual corrections in. [Latin ĕmendāre, ĕmendāt-, to emend. See EMEND.] — e'men·da'tor (-dā'tər) n. — e·men'da·to'ry (ĭ-mĕn'də-tōr'ē, -tōr'ē) adj.

e·men·da·tion (ĭ-mĕn'dā'shən, ē'mĕn-) n. 1. The act of emending. 2. An alteration intended to improve: textual emendations made by the editor.

emer. abbr. Emerita; emeritus.

em·er·ald (ĕm'ər-əld, ĕm'rəld) n. 1. A brilliant green to grass-green transparent variety of beryl, used as a gemstone. 2. Color. A strong yellowish green. — adj. Color. Of a strong yellowish green. [Middle English emeraude, from Old French, from Medieval Latin esmeralda, esmeraldus, from Latin smaragdus, from Greek smaragdos.]

e·merge (ĭ-mûrj') v. intr. e·merged, e·merg·ing, e·merg·es. 1. To rise from or as if from immersion: Sea mammals must emerge periodically to breathe.

2. To come forth from obscurity: new leaders who may emerge. 3. To become evident: The truth emerged at the inquest. 4. To come into existence. See Synonyms at appear. [Latin ēmergere: ē-, ex-, ex- + mergere, to immerse.]

e·mer·gence (ĭ-mûr'jəns) n. 1. The act or process of emerging. 2. Botany. A superficial outgrowth of plant tissue, such as the prickle of a rose.

e·mer·gen·cy (ĭ-mûr'jən-sē) n. pl. e·mer·gen·cies. 1. A serious situation or occurrence that happens unexpectedly and demands immediate action. 2. A condition of urgent need for action or assistance: a state of emergency; a voice full of emergency. — adj. For use during emergencies: emergency food rations.

emergency brake (ĭ-mûr'jən-sē brāk) n. A separate brake system in a vehicle for use in case of failure of the regular brakes and commonly used as a parking brake. Also called hand brake emergency medical technician (ĭ-mûr'jən-sē mēd'ĭ-kəl tēk-nĭsh'ən) n. Abbr. E·M·T A person trained and certified to appraise and initiate the administration of emergency care for victims of trauma or acute illness before or during transportation of the victims to a health care facility via ambulance or aircraft.

emergency medicine (ĭ-mûr'jən-sē mēd'ĭ-sĭn) n. The branch of medicine that deals with evaluation and initial treatment of medical conditions caused by trauma or sudden illness.

emergency room (ĭ-mûr'jən-sē rōōm) n. Abbr. ER The section of a health care facility intended to provide rapid treatment for victims of sudden illness or trauma.

e·mer·gent (ĭ-mûr'jənt) adj. 1. a. Coming into view, existence, or notice: emergent spring shoots; an emergent political leader. b. Emerging: emergent nations. 2. Rising above a surrounding medium, especially a fluid. 3. Demanding prompt action; urgent. 4. Occurring as a consequence; resultant. — n. One that is coming into view or existence: "The giant redwoods... outstrip the emergents of the rain forest, which rarely reach two hundred feet" (Catherine Caulfield).

emergent evolution (ĭ-mûr'jənt ɛv'ə-lōō'shən) n. A theory holding that completely new types of organisms and characteristics appear at certain stages of the evolutionary process, usually as a result of an unpredictable rearrangement of the preexisting elements.

e·merg·ing (ĭ-mûr'jĭng) adj. Newly formed or just coming into prominence; emergent: emerging markets; the emerging states of Africa.

e·mer·i·ta (ĭ-mēr'ĭ-tə) adj. Abbr. emer. Retired but retaining an honorary title corresponding to that held immediately before retirement. Used of a woman: a professor emerita. — n. pl. e·mer·i·tae (-tē') or e·mer·i·tas. A woman who is retired but retains an honorary title corresponding to that held immediately before retirement. [Latin ēmerita, feminine of ēmeritus. See EMERITUS.]

e·mer·i·tus (ĭ-mĕr'ĭ-təs) adj. Abbr. emer. Retired but retaining an honorary title corresponding to that held immediately before retirement: a professor emeritus. — n. pl. e·mer·i·ti (-tī'). One who is retired but retains an honorary title corresponding to that held immediately before retirement. [Latin ēmeritus, past participle of ēmerēri, to earn by service : ē-, ex-, from; see EX- + merēri, to deserve, earn; see (s)mer-² in Appendix.]

e·mersed (ĭ-mŭrst') adj. Botany. Rising above the surface of water: emersed aquatic plants. [From Latin ēmersus. See EMERSION.]

e·mer·sion (ĭ-mŭr'zhən, -shən) n. The act of emerging; emergence. [From Latin ēmersus, past participle of ēmergere, to emerge. See EMERGE.]

Em·er·son (ĕm'ər-sən), Ralph Waldo. 1803-1882. American writer, philosopher, and central figure of American transcendentalism. His poems, orations, and especially his essays, such as Nature (1836), are regarded as landmarks in the development of American thought and literary expression. —Em'er-so/ni-an (-sō'nĕ-ən) adj.

em·er·y (ĕm'ə-rĕ, ĕm'rĕ) n. A fine-grained impure corundum used for grinding and polishing. [Middle English, from Old French emeri, emeril, from Late Latin smericulum, from Greek smiris.]

emery board (ĕm'ə-rĕ bōrd) n. A nail file consisting of a strip of cardboard coated with powdered emery.

em·e·sis (ĕm'ĭ-sĭs) n. pl. em·e·ses (-sĕz'). The act of vomiting. [Greek, from emein, to vomit. See wemə- in Appendix.]

e·met·ic (ĭ-mĕt'ĭk) adj. Causing vomiting. — n. An agent that causes vomiting. [Latin emetica, feminine of emeticus, provoking vomiting, from Greek emetikos, from emetos, vomiting, from emein, to vomit. See wemə- in Appendix.] —e·met'i·cal·ly adv.

em·e·tine (ĕm'ĭ-tĕn') n. A bitter-tasting crystalline alkaloid, C₂₉H₄₀N₂O₄, derived from ipecac root and used in the treatment of amebiasis and as an emetic. [French émétine, from émétique, emetic, from Latin emeticus. See EMETIC.] emf or EMF abbr. Electromotive force.

EMG abbr. Electromyogram.

-emia or -hemia also -aemia or -haemia suff. Blood: leukemia. [New Latin, from Greek -aimia, from haima, blood. See HEMO-.]

em·i·grant (ĕm'ĭ-grənt) n. One that emigrates. — adj. Of or relating to emigrants or the act of emigrating.

em·i·grate (ĕm'ĭ-grāt') v. intr. em·i·grat·ed, em·i·grat·ing, em·i·grates. To leave one country or region to settle in another. See Usage Note at migrate. [Latin ēmigrāre, ēmigrāt- : ē-, ex-, ex- + migrāre, to move; see mei-¹ in Appendix.] —em'i·gra'tion (ĕm'ĭ-grā'shən) n.

é·mi·gré (ěm'í-grā') n. One who has left a native country, especially for political reasons. [French, from past participle of émigrer, to emigrate, from Latin ēmigrāre. See EMIGRATE.]

E·mi·lia·Ro·ma·gna (ě-měl'ya-rō-mä'nyä) A region of northern Italy bordering on the Adriatic Sea. Named for the Aemilian Way, a Roman road laid out in 187 B.C. that connected Piacenza with Rimini, the area was conquered by the Lombards in the fifth century A.D. and became part of the kingdom of Italy in 1861.

em·i·nence (ěm'ə-nəns) n. 1. A position of great distinction or superiority: rose to eminence as a surgeon. 2. A rise of ground; a hill. 3. a. A person of high station or great achievements. b. Also Eminence. Roman Catholic Church. Used with His or Your as a title and form of address for a cardinal.

ém·i·nence grise (ā-mē-nāns grēz') n. pl. ém·i·nence grises (ā-mē-nāns grēz'). A powerful adviser or decision-maker who operates secretly or unofficially. Also called gray eminence [French, the power behind the throne : éminence, power + gris, gray, shadowy.]

em·i·nen·cy (ěm'ə-nən-sē) n. pl. em·i·nen·cies. Eminence.

em·i·nent (ěm'ə-nənt) adj. 1. Towering or standing out above others; prominent: an eminent peak. 2. Of high rank, station, or quality; noteworthy: eminent members of the community. 3. Outstanding, as in character or performance; distinguished: an eminent historian. See Synonyms at noted. [Middle English, from Latin ēminēns, ēminent- present participle of ēminēre, to stand out : ē-, ex-, ex- + -minēre, to jut out; see men-² in Appendix.] —em·i·nent·ly adv.

eminent domain (ěm'ə-nənt dō-mān') n. Law. The right of a government to appropriate private property for public use, usually with compensation to the owner.

e·mir (ī-mîr', ā-mîr') also a·mir (ə-mîr', ā-mîr') n. A prince, chieftain, or governor, especially in the Middle East. [French émir, from Arabic 'amîr, commander, from 'amara, to command.]

e·mir·ate (ī-mîr'īt, -āt') n. 1. The office of an emir. 2. The nation or territory ruled by an emir.

em·is·sar·y (ěm'ī-sēr'ē) n. pl. em·is·sar·ies. An agent sent on a mission to represent or advance the interests of another. [Latin ēmīssārius, from ēmīssus, past participle of ēmītere, to send out. See EMIT.]

e·mis·sion (ī-mīsh'ən) n. 1. The act or an instance of emitting. 2. Something emitted. 3. A substance discharged into the air, especially by an internal combustion engine. [Latin ēmīssiō, ēmīssiōn-, a sending out, from ēmīssus, past participle of ēmītere, to send out. See EMIT.]

emission nebula (ī-mīsh'ən nēb'ya-lə) n. A nebula that absorbs ultraviolet radiation from stars and reemits it as visible light.

emission spectrum (ĭ-mĭsh'ən spĕk'trəm) n. The spectrum of bright lines, bands, or continuous radiation characteristic of and determined by a specific emitting substance subjected to a specific kind of excitation.

e·mis·sive (ĭ-mĭs'ĭv) adj. Having the power or tendency to emit matter or energy; emitting.

em·is·siv·i·ty (ĕm'ĭ-sĭv'ĭ-tĕ) n. The ratio of the radiation emitted by a surface to the radiation emitted by a blackbody at the same temperature.

e·mit (ĭ-mĭt') v. tr. e·mit·ted, e·mit·ting, e·mits. 1. To give or send out matter or energy: isotopes that emit radioactive particles; a stove emitting heat.

2. a. To give out as sound; utter: "She emitted her small strange laugh" (Edith Wharton). b. To voice; express: emit an opinion. 3. To issue with authority, especially to put (currency) into circulation. [Latin ēmittere, to send out : ē-, ex-, ex- + mittere, to send.] —e·mit'ter n.

em·men·a·gogue (ĭ-mĕn'ə-gōg', -gōg') n. A drug or an agent that induces or hastens menstrual flow. [Greek emmēna, the menses (from neuter pl. of emmēnos, monthly : en-, in; see en⁻² + mēn, month); see mē⁻² in Appendix + -AGOGUE.]

em·mer (ĕm'ər) n. A Eurasian wheat (Triticum dicoccum) first cultivated by the Babylonians and now widely grown as a cereal grain and as livestock feed. Also called starch wheat, two-grained spelt. [German, from Old High German amaro.]

em·met (ĕm'ĭt) n. Archaic. An ant. [Middle English emete, from Old English āmete.]

Em·met (ĕm'ĭt), Robert. 1778-1803. Irish patriot who fought for the rights of Irish Catholics and was executed for his part in a bungled uprising against the British.

em·me·tro·pi·a (ĕm'ĭ-trō'pĕ-ə) n. The condition of the normal eye when parallel rays are focused exactly on the retina and vision is perfect. [Greek emmetros, well-proportioned, fitting (en, in; see en⁻² + metron, measure); see METER² + -OPIA.] —em'me-trop'ic (-trōp'ĭk, -trō'pĭk) adj.

Em·my (ĕm'ē) n. pl. Em·mys. A statuette awarded annually by the Academy of Television Arts and Sciences for outstanding achievement in television. [Possibly alteration (influenced by the name Emmy, diminutive of Emma), of immy, alteration of image orthicon.]

em·o·din (ĕm'ə-dĭn') n. An orange crystalline compound, C₁₄H₄O₂(OH)₃CH₃, obtained from rhubarb and other plants and used as a laxative. [New Latin ēmōdi, a species of rhubarb (from Greek Ēmōdos, the Himalayas) + -IN.]

e·mol·lient (ĭ-mōl'yənt) adj. 1. Softening and soothing, especially to the skin. 2. Making less harsh or abrasive; mollifying: the emollient approach of a diplomatic mediator. — n. 1. An agent that softens or soothes the skin. 2. An agent that assuages or mollifies. [Latin ēmolliēns, ēmollient- present participle of ēmolīre, to soften : ē-, ex-, intensive pref.; see EX- + mollīre, to soften (from mol-, soft); see mel¹ in Appendix.]

e·mol·u·ment (ĭ-mōl'yə-mənt) n. Payment for an office or employment; compensation. [Middle English, from Latin ēmolumentum, gain, originally a miller's fee for grinding grain, from ēmolere, to grind out : ē-, ex-, ex- + molere, to grind; see melə- in Appendix.]

e·mote (ĭ-mōt') v. intr. e·mot·ed, e·mot·ing, e·motes. To express emotion, especially in an excessive or theatrical manner: "The more she emotes, the less he listens, and the less he listens, the more strident and emotive she becomes" (Maggie Scarf). [Back-formation from EMOTION.] —e·mot'er n.

e·mo·tion (ĭ-mō'shən) n. 1. An intense mental state that arises subjectively rather than through conscious effort and is often accompanied by physiological changes; a strong feeling: the emotions of joy, sorrow, reverence, hate, and love. 2. A state of mental agitation or disturbance: spoke unsteadily in a voice that betrayed his emotion. See Synonyms at feeling. 3. The part of the consciousness that involves feeling; sensibility: "The very essence of literature is the war between emotion and intellect" (Isaac Bashevis Singer). [French émotion, from Old French esmoivre, to excite, from Vulgar Latin exmovēre* : Latin ex-, ex- + Latin movēre, to move; see meuə- in Appendix.]

e·mo·tion·al (ĭ-mō'shə-nəl) adj. 1. Of or relating to emotion: an emotional illness; emotional crises. 2. Readily affected with or stirred by emotion: an emotional person who often weeps. 3. Arousing or intended to arouse the emotions: an emotional appeal. 4. Marked by or exhibiting emotion: an emotional farewell. —e·mo'tion·al'i·ty (-shə-nəl'ĭ-tē) n. —e·mo'tion·al·ly adv.

e·mo·tion·al·ism (ĭ-mō'shə-nə-lĭz'əm) n. 1. An inclination to rely on or place too much value on emotion. 2. Undue display of emotion.

e·mo·tion·al·ist (ĭ-mō'shə-nə-lĭst) n. 1. One whose conduct, thought, or rhetoric is governed by emotion rather than reason, often as a matter of policy. 2. An excessively emotional person. —e·mo'tion·al·is'tic adj.

e·mo·tion·al·ize (ĭ-mō'shə-nə-lĭz') v. tr. e·mo·tion·al·ized, e·mo·tion·al·iz·ing, e·mo·tion·al·iz·es. To impart an emotional quality to.

e·mo·tion·less (ĭ-mō'shən-lĭs) adj. Devoid of emotion; impassive. —e·mo'tion·less·ness n.

e·mo·tive (ĭ-mō'tĭv) adj. 1. Of or relating to emotion: the emotive aspect of symbols. 2. Characterized by, expressing, or exciting emotion: an emotive trial lawyer; the emotive issue of nuclear disarmament. —e·mo'tive·ly adv.

—e·mo'tive·ness, e'mo·tiv'i·ty (ē'mō-tĭv'ĭ-tē) n.

EMP abbr. Electromagnetic pulse.

emp. abbr. Emperor; empire; empress.

em·pale (ĕm-pāl') v. Variant of impale.

em·pa·na·da (ĕm'pə-nă'də, -pă-nă'thă) n. A Spanish or Latin-American turnover with a flaky crust and a spicy or sweet filling. [Spanish, from past participle of empanar, to coat with breadcrumbs : en-, in (from Latin in-); see EN⁻¹ + pan, bread; see PANADA.]

em·pan·el (ĕm-păn'əl) v. Law. Variant of impanel.

em·pa·thet·ic (ĕm'pə-thĕt'ĭk) adj. Empathic. —em'pa·thet'i·cal·ly adv.

em·path·ic (ĕm-păth'ĭk) adj. Of, relating to, or characterized by empathy.

em·pa·thize (ĕm'pə-thĭz') v. intr. em·pa·thized, em·pa·thiz·ing, em·pa·thiz·es. To feel or experience empathy: empathized with the striking miners. —em'pa·thiz'er n.

em·pa·thy (ĕm'pə-thĕ) n. 1. Identification with and understanding of another's situation, feelings, and motives. See Synonyms at pity. 2. The attribution of one's own feelings to an object. [EN⁻² + -PATHY (translation of German Einfühlung).]

Em·ped·o·cles (ĕm-pĕd'ə-klĕz'), Fifth century B.C. Greek philosopher who believed that all matter is composed of elemental particles of fire, water, earth, and air and that all change is caused by motion.

em·pen·nage (ĕm'pə-nĭj) n. The tail of an airplane. [French, feathers on an arrow, empennage, from empenner, to feather an arrow : en-, in; see EN⁻¹ + penne, feather (from Latin penna); see pet- in Appendix.]

em·per·or (ĕm'pər-ər) n. 1. Abbr. emp. The male ruler of an empire. 2. a. The emperor butterfly. b. The emperor moth. [Middle English emperour, from Old French empereor, from Latin imperātor, from imperāre, to command : in-, in; see EN⁻¹ + parāre, to prepare; see perə⁻¹ in Appendix.]

—em'per-or·ship' n.

emperor butterfly (ĕm'pər-ər bŭt'ər-flĭ') n. Any of several brightly colored butterflies of the family Nymphalidae, such as Asterocampa clyton, having orange-tawny wings with dark markings.

emperor moth (ĕm'pər-ər mōth) n. Any of several moths of the family Saturniidae, especially Saturnia pavonia of Eurasia, having distinctively patterned wings.

emperor penguin (ĕm'pər-ər pĕng'gwĭn) n. A large penguin (Aptenodytes forsteri) of Antarctic regions, having yellow-orange patches on the neck.

em·per·y (ĕm'pə-rĕ) n. pl. em·per·ies. Absolute dominion or jurisdiction; sovereignty. [Middle English emperie, from Old French, from Latin imperium. See EMPIRE.]

em·pha·sis (ĕm'fə-sĭs) n. pl. em·pha·ses (-sĕz'). 1. Special forcefulness of expression that gives importance to something singled out; stress: a lecture on housekeeping with emphasis on neatness; paused for emphasis, then announced the winner's name. 2. Special attention or effort directed toward something: a small-town newspaper's emphasis on local affairs. 3. Prominence given to a syllable, word, or words, as by raising the voice or printing in italic type. [Latin, from Greek, from emphainein, to exhibit, display : en-, in; see EN⁻² + phainein, to show; see bhā¹ in Appendix.]

SYNONYMS: emphasis, accent, stress. The central meaning shared by these nouns is “special weight placed on something considered important”: laid a strong emphasis on the study of foreign languages; opposition to nuclear power plants, with the accent on total elimination; lay heavy stress on law and order.

em·pha·size (ĕm'fə-sīz') v. tr. em·pha·sized, em·pha·sizing, em·pha·sized·es. To give emphasis to; stress. [From EMPHASIS.]

em·phat·ic (ĕm-făt'ĭk) adj. 1. Expressed or performed with emphasis:

responded with an emphatic “no.” 2. Forceful and definite in expression or action.

3. Standing out in a striking and clearly defined way. [Medieval Latin emphaticus, from Greek emphatikos, from emphainein, to exhibit, display. See EMPHASIS.]

—em·phat'ic·al·ly adv.

em·phy·se·ma (ĕm'fī-sē'mə, -zē'-) n. 1. A pathological condition of the lungs marked by an abnormal increase in the size of the air spaces, resulting in labored breathing and an increased susceptibility to infection. It can be caused by irreversible expansion of the alveoli or by the destruction of alveolar walls. 2. An abnormal distention of body tissues caused by retention of air. [Greek emphusēma, inflation, from emphusan, to blow in : en-, in; see EN⁻² + phūsān, to blow (from phusa, bellows, bladder).] —em'phy·sem'a·tous (-sĕm'ə-təs, - sē'mə-, -zĕm'ə-, -zē'mə-) adj. —em'phy·se'mic adj. & n.

em·pire (ĕm'pīr') n. 1. Abbr. emp. a. A political unit having an extensive territory or comprising a number of territories or nations and ruled by a single supreme authority. b. The territory included in such a unit. 2. An extensive enterprise under a unified authority: a publishing empire. 3. Imperial or imperialistic sovereignty, domination, or control: “There is a growing sense that the course of empire is shifting toward the... Asians” (James Traub). [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin imperium, from imperāre, to command. See

EMPEROR.]

Em·pire (ŏm-pîr', ĕm'pīr') adj. Of, relating to, or characteristic of a neoclassic style, as in clothing or the decorative arts, prevalent in France during the first part of the 19th century. [After the First Empire of France (1804-1815).]

em·pir·ic (ĕm-pîr'ĭk) n. 1. One who is guided by practical experience rather than precepts or theory. 2. An unqualified or dishonest practitioner; a charlatan.

[Latin empiricus, from Greek empeirikos, experienced, from empeiros, skilled :

en-, in; see EN⁻² + peiran, to try (from peira, try, attempt); see per⁻³ in Appendix.]

em·pir·i·cal (ĕm-pîr'ĭ-kəl) adj. 1. a. Relying on or derived from observation or experiment: empirical results that supported the hypothesis. b. Verifiable or prov-able by means of observation or experiment: empirical laws. 2. Guided by practical experience and not theory, especially in medicine. —em·pir'i·cal·ly adv.

empirical formula (ĕm-pîr'î-kəl fôr'myā-lə) n. A chemical formula that indicates the relative proportions of the elements in a molecule rather than the actual number of atoms of the elements.

em·pir·i·cism (ĕm-pîr'î-sîz'əm) n. 1. The view that experience, especially of the senses, is the only source of knowledge. 2. a. Employment of empirical methods, as in science. b. An empirical conclusion. 3. The practice of medicine that disregards scientific theory and relies solely on practical experience.

—em·pir'i·cist n.

em·place (ĕm-plās') v. tr. em·placed, em·plac·ing, em·plac·es. To put into place or position: emplace a fortification on the hilltop.

em·place·ment (ĕm-plās'mənt) n. 1. A prepared position, such as a mounting or silo, for a military weapon. 2. The act of putting into a certain position; placement. 3. Position; location. [French, from obsolete emplacer, to place in position : en-, in; see EN-¹ + Old French place, open space; see PLACE.]

em·plane (ĕm-plān') v. Variant of enplane.

em·ploy (ĕm-ploi') v. tr. em·ployed, em·ploy·ing, em·ploys. 1. a. To engage the services of; put to work: agreed to employ the job applicant. b. To provide with gainful work: factories that employ thousands. 2. To put to use or service. See Synonyms at use. 3. To devote (time, for example) to an activity or purpose: employed much time and energy to the hobby. — n. 1. The state of being employed: in the employ of the city. 2. Archaic. Occupation. [Middle English emploien, from Old French emploier, from Latin implicāre, to involve : in-, in; see EN-¹ + plicāre, to fold; see plek- in Appendix.] —em·ploy'a·bil'i·ty n. —em·ploy'a·ble adj. —em·ploy'er n.

em·ploy·ee also em·ploy·e (ĕm-ploi'ē, ĭm-, ĕm'ploi-ē') n. A person who works for another in return for financial or other compensation. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: employee benefits; employee unions; employee relations.

em·ploy·ment (ĕm-ploi'mənt) n. 1. a. The act of employing. b. The state of being employed. 2. The work in which one is engaged; occupation. 3. An activity to which one devotes time. 4. The percentage or number of people gainfully employed: "a vicious spiral of rising prices under full employment" (William Henry Beveridge). — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: employment opportunities; employment counselors.

employment agency (ĕm-ploi'mənt ā'jən-sē) n. An agency that finds jobs for people seeking them and finds people to fill particular jobs.

em·poi·son (ĕm-poi'zən) v. tr. em·poi·soned, em·poi·son·ing, em·poi·sons. 1. To fill with venom; embitter. 2. Archaic. To poison.

em·po·ri·a (ĕm-pôr'ē-ə, -pôr'-) n. A plural of emporium.

Em-po-ri-a (ĕm-pôr'ē-ə, -pôr'-) A city of east-central Kansas southwest of Topeka. Founded in 1856, it was the home of the noted newspaper editor William Allen White from 1895 to 1944. Population, 25,512.

em-po-ri-um (ĕm-pôr'ē-əm, -pôr'-) n. pl. em-po-ri-ums or em-po-ri-a (-pôr'ē-ə, -pôr'-). 1. A place where various goods are bought and sold; a marketplace. 2. A large retail store or place of business: a furniture emporium. [Latin, from Greek emporion, from emporos, traveler, merchant : en-, in; see EN⁻² + poros, journey; see per⁻² in Appendix.]

em-pow-er (ĕm-pou'ər) v. tr. em-pow-ered, em-pow-er-ing, em-pow-ers. To invest with power, especially legal power or official authority. See Synonyms at authorize. — em-pow'er-ment n.

em-press (ĕm'prĭs) n. Abbr. emp. 1. The woman ruler of an empire. 2. The wife or widow of an emperor. [Middle English emperesse, from Old French, feminine of empereor, emperor. See EMPEROR.]

em-presse-ment (än'prĕs-män') n. Effusive cordiality. [French, from s'empresseur, to be eager : en-, in; see EN⁻¹ + presser, to press (from Old French); see *PRESS*¹.]

em-prise (ĕm-prĭz') n. 1. A chivalrous or adventurous undertaking. 2. Chivalrous daring or prowess. [Middle English, from Old French, from feminine past participle of emprendre, to undertake, from Vulgar Latin impredere* : Latin in-, in; see EN⁻¹ + Latin prendere, to take, grasp; see ghend- in Appendix.]

emp-ty (ĕmp'tē) adj. emp-ti-er, emp-ti-est. 1. a. Holding or containing nothing. b. Mathematics. Having no elements or members; null: an empty set. 2. Having no occupants or inhabitants; vacant: an empty chair; empty desert. 3. Lacking force or power: an empty threat. 4. Lacking purpose or substance; meaningless: an empty life. 5. Not put to use; idle: empty hours. 6. Needing nourishment; hungry: "More fierce and more inexorable far/Than empty tigers or the roaring sea" (Shakespeare). 7. Devoid; destitute: empty of pity. — v.

emp-tied, emp-ty-ing, emp-ties. — v. tr. 1. To remove the contents of: emptied the dishwasher. 2. To transfer or pour off completely: empty the ashes into a pail. 3. To unburden; relieve: empty oneself of doubt. — v. intr. 1. To become empty: The theater emptied after the performance. 2. To discharge its contents: The river empties into a bay. — n. pl. emp-ties. Informal. An empty container. [Middle English, from Old English æmtig, vacant, unoccupied, from æmetta, leisure. See med- in Appendix.] — emp'ti-ly adv. — emp'ti-ness n.

SYNONYMS: empty, vacant, blank, void, vacuous, bare, barren. These adjectives describe what contains nothing and inferentially lacks what it could or should have. Empty applies to what is without contents or substance: an empty box; an empty room; empty promises. Vacant refers to what is without an occupant or incumbent: The auditorium is full of vacant seats. The chairmanship is vacant. Fig- ratively the word refers to the absence of intelligent meaning or thought: a vacant stare; a vacant mind. Blank stresses the absence of something, especially on a surface, that would convey meaning or content: blank pages; a blank expression. Void applies to what is free from or completely destitute of discernible content: space void of matter; gibberish void of all meaning. Vacuous describes what is as devoid of substance as a vacuum is: a vacuous smile; led a vacuous life. Something that is bare lacks surface covering (trees standing bare in November; a bare head) or detail (just the bare facts); the word also denotes the condition of being stripped of contents or furnishings: The closet is bare. Barren stresses lack of productivity in both literal and figurative applications: barren land; writing barren of insight. See also Synonyms at vain

WORD HISTORY: In Old English Ic eom āmtig could mean “I am empty,” “I am unoccupied,” or “I am unmarried.” The sense “unoccupied, at leisure,” which did not survive Old English, points to the derivation of āmtig from the Old English word āmetta, “leisure, rest.” The word āmetta may in turn go back to the Germanic root mōt-, meaning “ability, leisure.” In any case, Old English āmtig also meant “vacant,” a sense that was destined to take over the meaning of the word. Empty, the Modern English descendant of Old English āmtig, has come to have the sense “idle,” so that one can speak of empty leisure.

emp·ty·hand·ed (ĕmp'tē-hăn'dĭd) adj. 1. Bearing nothing. 2. Having received or gained nothing.

emp·ty·head·ed (ĕmp'tē-hĕd'ĭd) adj. Lacking sense or discretion; scatter-brained.

empty nester (ĕmp'tē nĕs'tər) n. Informal. A parent whose children have matured and left home.

Emp·ty Quar·ter (ĕmp'tē kwôr'tər) See Rub al Khali.

em·pur·ple (ĕm-pûr'pəl) v. tr. intr. em·pur·pled, em·pur·pling, em·pur·ples. To make or become purple.

em·py·e·ma (ĕm'pĭ-ĕ'mə) n. pl. em·py·e·ma·ta (-mə-tə). The presence of pus in a body cavity, especially the pleural cavity. [Medieval Latin empyēma, from Greek empuēma, from empuein, to suppurate. See pŭ- in Appendix.]

—em'py·e'mic adj.

em·py·re·al (ĕm'pĭ-rĕ'əl, ĕm-pĭr'ĕ-əl) adj. 1. Empyrean. 2. Of the sky; celestial. 3. Elevated; sublime. [Middle English emperiall, from Medieval Latin empyreus, from Greek empurios, fiery : en-, in; see EN-² + pur, fire; see pŭr- in Appendix.]

em·py·re·an (ĕm'pĭ-rĕ'ən, ĕm-pĭr'ĕ-ən) n. 1. a. The highest reaches of heaven, believed by the ancients to be a realm of pure fire or light. b. The abode of God and the angels; paradise. 2. The sky. — adj. Of or relating to the empy-rean of ancient belief. [From Medieval Latin empyreum, from empyreus, empyreal. See EMPYREAL.]

Ems (ĕmz, ĕms) A river of northwest Germany flowing about 335 km (208 mi) to the North Sea at the Netherlands border.

EMS abbr. Electrical muscle stimulation.

EMT abbr. Emergency medical technician.

e·mu¹ (ĕ'myōō) n. A large, flightless Australian bird (Dromiceius novaehollandiae) related to and resembling the ostrich and the cassowary. [Portuguese ema, rhea.]

emu² abbr. Electromagnetic unit.

em·u·late (ĕm'yə-lāt') v. tr. em·u·lat·ed, em·u·lat·ing, em·u·lates. 1. To strive to equal or excel, especially through imitation: an older pupil whose accomplishments and style I emulated. 2. To compete with successfully; approach or attain equality with. See Synonyms at rival. 3. Computer Science. To imitate the function of (another system), as by modifications to hardware or software that allow the imitating system to accept the same data, execute the same programs, and achieve the same results as the imitated system. — adj. (-līt) Obsolete. Ambitious; emulous. [Latin aemulārī, aemulāt-, from aemulus, emulous.]

—em'u·la'tive adj. —em'u·la'tive·ly adv. —em'u·la'tor n.

em·u·la·tion (ĕm'yə-lā'shən) n. 1. Effort or ambition to equal or surpass another. 2. Imitation of another. 3. Computer Science. The process or technique of emulating. 4. Obsolete. Jealous rivalry.

em·u·lous (ĕm'yə-ləs) adj. 1. Eager or ambitious to equal or surpass another. 2. Characterized or prompted by a spirit of rivalry. 3. Obsolete. Covetous of power or honor; envious. [From Latin aemulus.] —em'u·lous·ly adv.

—em'u·lous·ness n.

e·mul·si·ble (ĭ-mŭl'sə-bəl) adj. That can be emulsified: an emulsible oil.

e·mul·si·fy (ĭ-mŭl'sə-fī') v. tr. e·mul·si·fied, e·mul·si·fy·ing, e·mul·si·fies. To make into an emulsion. [EMULSI(ON) + -FY.] —e·mul'si·fi·ca'tion (-fī-kā'shən) n. —e·mul'si·fi·er n.

e·mul·sion (ĭ-mŭl'shən) n. 1. A suspension of small globules of one liquid in a second liquid with which the first will not mix: an emulsion of oil in vinegar. 2. A photosensitive coating, usually of silver halide grains in a thin gelatin layer, on photographic film, paper, or glass. [New Latin ĕmulsiō, ĕmulsiōn-, from Latin ĕmulsus, past participle of ĕmulgĕre, to milk out : ĕ-, ex-, ex- + mulgĕre, to milk; see melg- in Appendix.] —e·mul'sive adj.

e·munc·to·ry (ĭ-mŭngk'tə-rĕ) adj. Serving to carry waste out of the body; excretory. — n. pl. e·munc·to·ries. An organ or duct that removes or carries waste from the body. [Middle English emunctorie, from Medieval Latin ĕmunctōrius, from Latin ĕmunctus, past participle of ĕmungere, to blow one's nose : ĕ-, ex-, intensive pref.; see EX- + mungere, to blow one's nose.]

en (ĕn) n. 1. The letter n. 2. Abbr. n, N Printing. A space equal to half the width of an em.

en⁻¹ or em- or in- pref. 1. a. To put into or onto: encapsulate. b. To go into or onto: enplane. 2. To cover or provide with: enrobe. 3. To cause to be: endear. 4. Thoroughly. Used often as an intensive: entangle. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin in-, in. See en in Appendix.]

en⁻² or em- pref. In; into; within: enzootic. [Middle English, from Latin, from Greek. See en in Appendix.]

-en¹ suff. 1. a. To cause to be: cheapen. b. To become: *redde*n. 2. a. To cause to have: hearten. b. To come to have: lengthen. [Middle English -enen, -nen, from Old English -nian.]

-en² suff. Made of; resembling: earthen. [Middle English, from Old English.]

en-a-ble (ĕ-nā'bəl) v. tr. en-a-bled, en-a-bleing, en-a-bles. 1. a. To supply with the means, knowledge, or opportunity; make able: a hole in the fence that enabled us to watch; techniques that enable surgeons to open and repair the heart. b. To make feasible or possible: funds that will enable construction of new schools. 2. To give legal power, capacity, or sanction to: a law enabling the new federal agency. 3. To make operational; activate: enabled the computer's modem; enable a nuclear warhead. — en-a'bler n.

en-act (ĕn-ăkt') v. tr. en-acted, en-acting, en-acts. 1. To make into law: Congress enacted a tax reform bill. 2. To act (something) out, as on a stage: enacted the part of the parent. — en-act'a-ble adj. — en-ac'tor n.

en-act-ment (ĕn-ăkt'mənt) n. 1. a. The act of enacting. b. The state of being enacted. 2. Something that has been enacted: "Dance itself is the enactment of an energy which must seem... untrammled, effortless, masterful" (Susan Sontag).

e-nam-el (ĭ-năm'əl) n. 1. A vitreous, usually opaque, protective or decorative coating baked on metal, glass, or ceramic ware. 2. An object having such a coating, as in a piece of cloisonné. 3. A coating that dries to a hard, glossy finish: nail enamel. 4. A paint that dries to a hard, glossy finish. 5. Anatomy. The hard, calcareous substance covering the exposed portion of a tooth. — v. tr.

e-nam-eled or e-nam-elled, e-nam-el-ing or e-nam-el-ling, e-nam-els or e-nam-els. 1. To coat, inlay, or decorate with enamel. 2. To give a glossy or brilliant surface to. 3. To adorn with a brightly colored surface. [From Middle English enamelen, to put on enamel, from Anglo-Norman enamailler: en-, on (from Old French); see EN⁻¹ + amail, enamel (from Old French esmail, of Germanic origin); see mel⁻¹ in Appendix.] — e-nam'el-er, e-nam'el-ist n.

e-nam-el-ware (ĭ-năm'əl-wâr') n. Ware coated with enamel.

en-a-mine (ĕn'ə-mēn', ĭ-năm'ēn) n. An amine that contains the double bond linkage $-C=C-N-R$. [en-, chemically unsaturated (from -ENE) + -AMINE.]

en-am-or (ĭ-năm'ər) v. tr. en-am-ored, en-am-or-ing, en-am-ors. To inspire with love; captivate: was enamored of the beautiful dancer; were enamored with the charming island. [Middle English enamouren, from Old French enamourer : en-, causative pref.; see EN-¹ + amour, love; see AMOUR.]

en·am·our (ĭ-năm'ər) v. Chiefly British. Variant of enamor.

en·an·ti·o·mer (ĭ-năn'tē-ə-mər) n. See enantiomorph. [Greek enantios, opposite; see ant- in Appendix + -MER(E).] — en·an'ti·o·mer'ic (-mēr'ik) adj.

en·an·ti·o·morph (ĕ-năn'tē-ə-môrf') n. Either of a pair of crystals, molecules, or compounds that are mirror images of each other but are not identical.

Also called enantiomer [Greek enantios, opposite; see ant- in Appendix + -MORPH.] — en·an'ti·o·mor'phic, en·an'ti·o·mor'phous adj.

— en·an'ti·o·mor'phism n.

en·ar·thro·sis (ĕn'är-thrō'sis) n. pl. en·ar·thro·ses (-sēz). Anatomy. See ball-and-socket joint (n., sense 1). [Greek enarthrosis, from enarthros, jointed : en-, in; see EN-² + arthron, joint; see ar- in Appendix.]

e·nate (ĭ-nāt', ē'nāt') adj. 1. Growing outward. 2. Also e·nat·ic (ĭ-năt'ik).

Related on the mother's side. — n. A relative on one's mother's side. [Latin ĕnātus, past participle of ĕnāscī, to issue forth : ĕ-, ex-, ex- + nāscī, to be born; see genə- in Appendix.]

e·na·tion (ē-nā'shən) n. Botany. An outgrowth on the surface of an organ.

en bloc (än blök', ĕn blök') adv. As a unit; all together: "I have been drawing our attention to the public and private qualities of the several arts lest they be treated en bloc" (William H. Gass). [French : en, in + bloc, lump, bloc.]

en bro·chette (än' brô-shĕt') adv. On a skewer: lamb en brochette. [French : en, on + brochette, stick, skewer.]

enc. abbr. 1. Enclosed. 2. Enclosure.

en·cage (ĕn-kāj') v. tr. en·caged, en·cag·ing, en·cag·es. To confine in or as if in a cage.

en·camp (ĕn-kämp') v. en·camped, en·camp·ing, en·camps. — v. intr.

To set up camp or live in a camp. — v. tr. To provide quarters for in a camp: encamp migrant workers near the fields.

en·camp·ment (ĕn-kämp'mənt) n. 1. a. The act of encamping. b. The state of being encamped. 2. A camp; a campsite.

en·cap·su·lant (ĕn-kăp'sə-lənt) n. A material used for encapsulating.

en·cap·su·late (ĕn-kăp'sə-lăt') also in·cap·su·late (ĭn-) v.

en·cap·su·lat·ed, en·cap·su·lat·ing, en·cap·su·lates. — v. tr. 1. To encase in or as if in a capsule. 2. To express in a brief summary; epitomize: headlines that encapsulate the news. — v. intr. To become encapsulated.

— en·cap'su·la'tion n. — en·cap'su·la'tor n.

en·cap·su·lat·ed (ĕn-kăp'sə-lătəd) adj. Enclosed by a protective coating or membrane: an encapsulated bacterium.

en·cap·sule (ĕn-kăp'səl, -sōol) v. tr. en·cap·suled, en·cap·sul·ing, en·cap·sules. To encapsulate.

en·case (ĕn-kās') also in·case (ĭn-) v. tr. en·cased, en·cas·ing, en·cas·es. To enclose in or as if in a case. —en·case'ment n.

en·caus·tic (ĕn-kô'stik) n. 1. A paint consisting of pigment mixed with beeswax and fixed with heat after its application. 2. The art of painting with this substance. 3. A painting produced with the use of this substance. [Latin encausticus, from Greek enkaustikos, from enkaiein, to paint in encaustic : en-, in; see EN⁻² + kaiein, to burn.]

-ence suff. 1. State or condition: dependence. 2. Action: emergence. [Middle English, from Latin -entia (from -ĕns, -ent), and from Old French -ance, -ance.]

en·ceinte¹ (ĕn-sānt', äñ-sānt') adj. Carrying an unborn child; pregnant.

[French, from Old French, possibly from Medieval Latin incincta, without a girdle (in-, not; see in⁻¹ + Latin cincta, feminine past participle of cingere, to gird); see kenk- in Appendix, by folk etymology from Latin inciĕns, pregnant. See keuə- in Appendix.]

en·ceinte² (ĕn-sānt', äñ-sānt', äñ-sānt') n. 1. An encircling fortification around a fort, castle, or town. 2. A structure or an area protected by an encircling fortification. [French, from Late Latin incincta, from feminine past participle of incingere, to surround closely : Latin in-, in; see IN⁻² + Latin cingere, to gird; see kenk- in Appendix.]

En·cel·a·dus (ĕn-sĕl'ə-dəs) n. 1. Greek Mythology. A giant who was defeated in battle and buried under Mount Etna by Athena. 2. The satellite of Saturn that is seventh in distance from the planet. [Latin, from Greek Enkelados.]

encephal- pref. Variant of encephalo-.

en·ceph·a·la (ĕn-sĕf'ə-lə) n. Plural of encephalon.

en·ce·phal·ic (ĕn'sə-fäl'ik) adj. 1. Of or relating to the brain. 2. Located within the cranial cavity.

en·ceph·a·li·tis (ĕn-sĕf'ə-lī'tis) n. Inflammation of the brain.

—en·ceph'a·lit'ic (-līt'ik) adj.

encephalitis le·thar·gi·ca (ĕn-sĕf'ə-lī'tis lə-thär'jī-kə) n. A viral epidemic encephalitis marked by apathy, paralysis of the extrinsic eye muscle, and extreme muscular weakness. It occurred in various parts of the world between 1915 and 1926. Also called sleeping sickness, sleepy sickness. [New Latin encephalitis lethargica : ENCEPHALITIS + Latin lĕthargicus, sleepy.]

encephalo- or encephal- pref. Brain: encephalitis. [New Latin, from Greek (muelos) enkephalos, (marrow) in the head : en-, in; see EN⁻² + kephalē, head; see ghebh-el- in Appendix.]

en·ceph·a·lo·gram (ĕn-sĕf'ə-lə-grām', -ə-lō-) n. 1. An x-ray picture of the brain taken by encephalography. Also called encephalograph 2. See electroencephalogram.

en·ceph·a·lo·graph (ĕn-sĕf'ə-lə-gräf', -ə-lō-) n. 1. See encephalogram (n., sense 1). 2. See electroencephalograph.

en·ceph·a·log·ra·phy (ĕn-sĕf'ə-lŏg'rə-fĕ) n. pl. en·ceph·a·log·ra·phies.

Radiographic examination of the brain in which some of the cerebrospinal fluid is replaced with air or another gas that acts as a contrasting medium.

—en·ceph'a·lo·graph'ic (-ə-lə-grăf'ik, -ə-lō-) adj.

—en·ceph'a·lo·graph'i·cal·ly adv.

en·ceph·a·lo·ma (ĕn-sĕf'ə-lŏ'mə) n. pl. en·ceph·a·lo·mas or en·ceph·a·lo·ma·ta (-mə-tə). A tumor of the brain.

en·ceph·a·lo·my·e·li·tis (ĕn-sĕf'ə-lŏ-mī'ə-lī'tis) n. Inflammation of the brain and spinal cord.

en·ceph·a·lon (ĕn-sĕf'ə-lŏn') n. pl. en·ceph·a·la (-lə). The brain of a vertebrate. [Greek enkephalon, neuter of enkephalos, in the head. See ENCEPHALO-.]

—en·ceph'a·lous adj.

en·ceph·a·lop·a·thy (ĕn-sĕf'ə-lŏp'ə-thĕ) n. pl. en·ceph·a·lop·a·thies. Any of various diseases of the brain. —en·ceph'a·lo·path'ic (-lə-păth'ik) adj.

en·chain (ĕn-chān') v. tr. en·chained, en·chain·ing, en·chains. To bind with or as if with chains. —en·chain'ment n.

en·chant (ĕn-chănt') v. tr. en·chant·ed, en·chant·ing, en·chants. 1. To cast a spell over; bewitch. 2. To attract and delight; entrance. See Synonyms at charm. [Middle English enchanten, from Old French enchanter, from Latin incantāre, to utter an incantation, cast a spell : in-, against; see EN-¹ + cantāre, to sing, frequentative of canere; see kan- in Appendix.]

en·chant·er (ĕn-chăn'tər) n. 1. One that delights or fascinates. 2. A sorcerer or magician.

en·chant·ing (ĕn-chăn'ting) adj. Having the power to enchant; charming: enchanting music. —en·chant'ing·ly adv.

en·chant·ment (ĕn-chăn'tmənt) n. 1. a. The act of enchanting. b. The state of being enchanted. 2. Something that enchants.

en·chant·ress (ĕn-chăn'tris) n. 1. A woman of great charm or fascination. 2. A woman who practices magic; a sorceress.

en·chase (ĕn-chās') v. tr. en·chased, en·chas·ing, en·chas·es. 1. To set (a gem, for example). 2. To set with or as if with gems: enchase a brooch. 3. To decorate or ornament by inlaying or engraving. [Middle English, to engrave, from Old French enchasser, to set gems : en-, in; see EN-¹ + chasse, case (from Latin capsa, box).]

en·chi·la·da (ĕn'chə-lă'də) n. A tortilla rolled and stuffed usually with a mixture containing meat or cheese and served with a sauce spiced with chili. [American Spanish : en-, in (from Latin in-); see EN-¹ + chile, chili pepper; see CHILL.]

en·chi·rid·i·on (ĕn'kī-rid'ĕ-ən) n. pl. en·chi·rid·i·ons or en·chi·rid·i·a (-ĕ-ə). A handbook; a manual. [Late Latin enchiridion, from Greek enkheiridion : en-, in; see EN-² + kheir, hand; see ghesor- in Appendix + -idion, diminutive suff.]

-enchyma suff. Cellular tissue: chlrenchyma. [From PARENCHYMA.]

en·ci·na (ĕn-sē'nə) n. See live oak. [Spanish, holm oak, from Late Latin īlicīna, from Latin īlex, īlic-.]

en·ci·pher (ĕn-sī'fər) v. tr. en·ci·phered, en·ci·pher·ing, en·ci·phers. To put (a message, for example) into cipher. —en·ci'pher·er n.

—en·ci'pher·ment n.

en·cir·cle (ĕn-sûr'kəl) v. tr. en·cir·cled, en·cir·cling, en·cir·cles. 1. To form a circle around; surround. See Synonyms at surround. 2. To move or go around completely; make a circuit of. —en·cir'cle·ment n.

encl. abbr. 1. Enclosed. 2. Enclosure.

en·clasp (ĕn-klăsp') also in·clasp (ĭn-) v. tr. en·clasped, en·clasp·ing, en·clasps. To hold in a clasp; embrace.

en·clave (ĕn'klāv', ōn'-) n. 1. A country or part of a country lying wholly within the boundaries of another. 2. A distinctly bounded area enclosed within a larger unit: ethnic enclaves in a large city. [French, from Old French enclaver, to enclose, from Vulgar Latin inclāvāre*: Latin in-, in; see EN-¹ + Latin clāvis, key.]

en·clit·ic (ĕn-klīt'ĭk) Linguistics. n. A word or particle that has no independent accent and forms an accentual and sometimes also graphemic unit with the preceding word. In Give 'em the works, the pronoun 'em is an enclitic. — adj. Forming an accentual unit with the preceding word, and thus having no independent accent. [Late Latin encliticus, from Greek enklitikos, from enklīnein, to lean on: en-, on, in; see EN-² + klinein, to lean; see klei- in Appendix.]

en·close (ĕn-klōz') also in·close (ĭn-) v. tr. en·closed, en·clos·ing, en·clos·es. 1. To surround on all sides; close in. 2. To fence in so as to prevent common use: enclosed the pasture. 3. To contain, especially so as to envelop or shelter: “Every one of those darkly clustered houses encloses its own secret” (Charles Dickens). 4. To insert into the same envelope or package: enclose a check with the order. [Middle English enclosen, from Old French enclos, past participle of encloure, from Latin inclūdere, to enclose. See INCLUDE.]

SYNONYMS: enclose, cage, coop, fence, hem, pen, wall. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to surround and confine within a limited area”: cattle enclosed in feedlots; was caged in the office all afternoon; was cooped up in a studio apartment; a garden fenced in by shrubbery; a battalion hemmed in by enemy troops; ships penned up in the harbor during a blockade; prisoners who were walled in.

en·clo·sure (ĕn-klō'zhər) n. 1. a. The act of enclosing. b. The state of being enclosed. 2. Abbr. enc., encl. Something enclosed: a business letter with a supplemental enclosure. 3. Something that encloses.

en·code (ĕn-kōd') v. tr. en·cod·ed, en·cod·ing, en·codes. 1. To put (a message, for example) into code. 2. Computer Science. To convert (a character, routine, or program) into machine language. —en·cod'er n.

en·co·mi·a (ĕn-kō'mē-ə) n. A plural of encomium.

en·co·mi·ast (ĕn-kō'mē-ăst', -əst) n. A person who delivers or writes an encomium; a eulogist. [Greek enkōmiastēs, from enkōmiazein, to praise, from enkōmion, encomium. See ENCOMIUM.] —en·co'mi-as'tic (-ăs'tĭk), en·co'mi-as'ti·cal (-tĭ-kəl) adj.

en·co·mi·um (ĕn-kō'mē-əm) n. pl. en·co·mi·ums or en·co·mi·a (-mē-ə).

1. Warm, glowing praise. 2. A formal expression of praise; a tribute. [Latin encōmĭum, from Greek enkōmion (epos), (speech) praising a victor, from enkōmios, of the victory procession : en-, in; see EN-² + kōmos, celebration.]

en·com·pass (ĕn-kŭm'pəs) v. tr. en·com·passed, en·com·pass·ing, en·com·pass·es. 1. To form a circle or ring around; surround. See Synonyms at surround. 2. To enclose; envelop. 3. To constitute or include: a survey that encompassed a wide range of participants. 4. To accomplish; achieve.

—en·com'pass·ment n.

en·core (ĕn'kōr', -kōr') n. 1. A demand by an audience for an additional performance, usually expressed by applause. 2. An additional performance in response to the demand of an audience. — v. tr. en·cored, en·cor·ing, en·cores. To demand an encore of. — interj. Used to demand an additional performance. [French, still, yet, again, probably from Vulgar Latin hinc ad hōram*, from that to this hour : Latin hinc, from here (from hic, this) + Latin ad, to; see AD- + Latin hōram, accusative of hōra, hour; see HOUR.]

en·coun·ter (ĕn-koun'tər) n. 1. A meeting, especially one that is unplanned, unexpected, or brief: a chance encounter in the park. 2. a. A hostile or adversarial confrontation; a contest: a tense naval encounter. b. An often violent meeting; a clash. — v. en·coun·tered, en·coun·ter·ing, en·coun·ters. — v. tr. 1. To meet, especially unexpectedly; come upon: encountered an old friend on the street.

2. To confront in battle or contention. 3. To come up against: encounter numerous obstacles. — v. intr. To meet, especially unexpectedly. [Middle English encountre, from Old French, from encontrer, to meet, from Late Latin incontrāre : Latin in-, in; see EN-¹ + Latin contrā, against; see kom in Appendix.]

encounter group (ĕn-koun'tər grōp) n. A typically unstructured psychotherapy group in which the participants seek to increase their sensitivity, responsiveness, and emotional expressiveness, as by freely verbalizing and responding to intimate emotions.

en·cour·age (ĕn-kŭr'ĭj, -kŭr'-) v. tr. en·cour·aged, en·cour·ag·ing, en·cour·ag·es. 1. To inspire with hope, courage, or confidence; hearten. 2. To give support to; foster: policies designed to encourage private investment. 3. To stimulate; spur: burning the field to encourage new plant growth. [Middle English encouragen, from Old French encoragier : en-, causative pref.; see EN-¹ + corage, courage; see COURAGE.] —en·cour'ag·er n.

SYNONYMS: encourage, animate, cheer, embolden, hearten, inspirit. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to impart courage, inspiration, and resolution to”: encouraged the student to enter the competition; played patriotic music to animate the troops; a visitor cheering the patient with his presence; was emboldened to sing for the guests; praise that heartened us; a half-time pep talk that inspirited the weary team.

ANTONYM: discourage en·cour·age·ment (ĕn-kûr'ij-mənt, -kûr'-) n. 1. The act of encouraging.

2. The state of being encouraged. 3. One that encourages.

en·cour·ag·ing (ĕn-kûr'ə-jĭng, -kûr'-) adj. Giving courage, confidence, or hope: an encouraging advance in medical research. —en·cour'ag·ing·ly adv.

en·croach (ĕn-krōch') v. intr. en·croached, en·croach·ing, en·croach·es.

1. To take another's possessions or rights gradually or stealthily: encroach on a neighbor's land. 2. To advance beyond proper or former limits: desert encroaching upon grassland. [Middle English encrochen, to seize illegally, from Old French encrochier, to seize : en-, in-; see EN⁻¹ + croc, hook (of Germanic origin).]

—en·croach'er n. —en·croach'ment n.

en·crust (ĕn-krüst') also in·crust (ĭn-) v. tr. en·crust·ed, en·crust·ing, en·crusts. To cover or surmount with or as if with a crust: a scepter that is encrusted with diamonds; legalities that were encrusted with tradition. [Possibly from French incruster, from Latin incrustāre : in-, on-; see EN⁻¹ + crusta, crust; see kreis- in Appendix.]

en·crust·a·tion (ĕn'krūs-tā'shən) n. Variant of incrustation.

en·crypt (ĕn-krĭpt) v. tr. en·crypt·ed, en·crypt·ing, en·crypts. 1. To put into code or cipher. 2. Computer Science. To scramble access codes to (computerized information) so as to prevent unauthorized access. [EN⁻¹ + (DE)CRYPT.]

—en·cryp'tion n.

en·cum·ber (ĕn-kŭm'bər) v. tr. en·cum·bered, en·cum·ber·ing, en·cum·bers. 1. To put a heavy load on; burden: a hiker who was encumbered with a heavy pack; a life that has always been encumbered with responsibilities.

2. To hinder or impede the action or performance of: restrictions that encumber police work. 3. To burden with legal or financial obligations: an estate that is encumbered with debts. [Middle English encombren, from Old French encombrer, to block up : en-, in-; see EN⁻¹ + combre, hindrance (from Gaulish comboros*).]

en·cum·brance (ĕn-kŭm'brəns) n. 1. One that encumbers; a burden or impediment. 2. Law. A lien or claim on property.

en·cum·branc·er (ĕn-kŭm'brən-sər) n. Law. One that holds an encumbrance.

ency. abbr. Encyclopedia.

-ency suff. Condition or quality: complacency. [Middle English, variant of -ence, -ence.]

encyc. abbr. Encyclopedia.

encycl. abbr. Encyclopedia.

en-cyc-li-cal (ĕn-sĭk'li-kəl) adj. Intended for general or wide circulation. — n. Roman Catholic Church. A papal letter addressed to the bishops of the Church or to the hierarchy of a particular country. [From Late Latin encyclicus, circular, from Greek enkuklios : en-, in; see EN-² + kuklos, circle; see k^wel-¹ in Appendix.]

en-cy-clo-pe-di-a (ĕn-sĭ'klə-pē'dē-ə) n. Abbr. encyc., encycl., ency. A comprehensive reference work containing articles on a wide range of subjects or on numerous aspects of a particular field, usually arranged alphabetically. [Medieval Latin encyclopaedia, general education course, from alteration of Greek enkuklios paideia, general education : enkuklios, circular, general; see ENCYCLICAL + paideia, education (from pais, paid-, child); see pau- in Appendix.]

WORD HISTORY: The word encyclopedia, which to us usually means a large set of books, descends from a phrase that involved coming to grips with the contents of such books. The Greek phrase is enkuklios paideia, made up of enkuklios, “cyclical, periodic, ordinary,” and paideia, “education,” and meaning “general education, literally the arts and sciences that a person should study to be liberally educated.” Copyists of Latin manuscripts took this phrase to be the Greek word enkuklopaedia, with the same meaning, and this spurious Greek word became the New Latin word encyclopaedia, coming into English with the sense “general course of instruction,” first recorded in 1531. In New Latin the word was chosen as the title of a reference work covering all knowledge. The first such use in English is recorded in 1644.

en-cy-clo-pe-dic (ĕn-sĭ'klə-pē'dĭk) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or characteristic of an encyclopedia. 2. Embracing many subjects; comprehensive: “an ignorance almost as encyclopedic as his erudition” (William James). —en-cy'-clo-pe/di-cal-ly adv.

en-cy-clo-pe-dism (ĕn-sĭ'klə-pē'dĭz'əm) n. Encyclopedic learning.

en-cy-clo-pe-dist (ĕn-sĭ'klə-pē'dĭst) n. 1. A person who writes for or compiles an encyclopedia. 2. Encyclopedist. One of the writers of the French Encyclopédie (1751-1772), including its editors, Diderot and d'Alembert.

en-cyst (ĕn-sĭst') v. en-cyst-ed, en-cyst-ing, en-cysts. — v. tr. To enclose in or as if in a cyst. — v. intr. To take the form of or become enclosed in a cyst. —en-cyst'ment, en'cys-ta'tion n.

end (ĕnd) n. 1. Either extremity of something that has length: the end of the pier. 2. The outside or extreme edge or physical limit; a boundary: the end of town. 3. The point in time when an action, an event, or a phenomenon ceases or is completed; the conclusion: the end of the day. 4. A result; an outcome.

5. Something toward which one strives; a goal. See Synonyms at intention.

6. The termination of life or existence; death: “A man awaits his end/Dreading and hoping all” (William Butler Yeats). 7. The ultimate extent; the very limit: the end of one’s patience. 8. Slang. The very best; the ultimate: This pizza’s the end.

9. A remainder; a remnant. 10. a. A share of a responsibility or obligation: your end of the bargain. b. A particular area of responsibility: in charge of the business end of the campaign. 11. Football. a. Either of the players in the outermost position on the line of scrimmage. b. The position played by such a player. — v.

end-ed, end-ing, ends. — v. tr. 1. To bring to a conclusion. 2. To form the last or concluding part of: the song that ended the performance. 3. To destroy: ended our hopes. — v. intr. 1. To come to a finish; cease. See Synonyms at complete. 2. To die. — idioms. in the end. Eventually; ultimately: All will turn out well in the end. no end. A great deal: She had no end of stories to tell. [Middle English ende, from Old English. See ant- in Appendix.]

end- pref. Variant of endo-.

en-da-moe-ba or en-da-me-ba (ĕn’dā-mē’bā) n. Variant of entamoeba.

en-dan-ger (ĕn-dān’jĕr) v. tr. en-dan-gered, en-dan-ger-ing, en-dan-gers. To expose to harm or danger; imperil. — en-dan’ger-ment n.

SYNONYMS: endanger, hazard, imperil, jeopardize, risk. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to subject to danger, loss, or destruction”: driving that endangers passengers’ lives; hazarded his well-being by constant smoking; a forest imperiled by acid rain; strikes that jeopardized the future of the business; risking her financial security by buying speculative stocks.

en-dan-gered (ĕn-dān’jĕrd) adj. Faced with the danger of extinction: an endangered species; an endangered culture.

end-arch (ĕn’dārk’) adj. Botany. Of or relating to a xylem whose early development is toward the center. [END(O)- + Greek arkhē, beginning (from arkhein, to begin, rule).]

end-ar-te-rec-to-my (ĕn’dār-tĕ-rĕk’tō-mĕ) n. pl. end-ar-te-rec-to-mies.

Surgical excision of the inner lining of an artery that is clogged with atherosclerotic buildup. [New Latin endartĕrium, inner lining of an artery (ENDO- + artĕrium from Latin artĕria); see ARTERY + -ECTOMY.]

end-ar-te-ri-tis (ĕn’dār-tĕ-rĭ’tĭs) n. Inflammation of the inner lining of an artery. [New Latin endartĕrium, inner lining of an artery; see ENDARTERECTOMY + -ITIS.]

end-brain (ĕnd’brān’) n. See telencephalon.

en-dear (ĕn-dĭr’) v. tr. en-deared, en-dear-ing, en-dears. To make beloved or very sympathetic: a couple whose kindness endeared them to friends.

en·dear·ing (ĕn-dĭr'ing) adj. Inspiring affection or warm sympathy: the endearing charm of a little child. — en·dear'ing·ly adv.

en·dear·ment (ĕn-dĭr'mənt) n. 1. The act of endearing. 2. An expression of affection, such as a caress.

en·deav·or (ĕn-dĕv'ər) n. 1. A conscientious or concerted effort toward an end; an earnest attempt. 2. Purposeful or industrious activity; enterprise. See Synonyms at effort. — v. en·deav·ored, en·deav·or·ing, en·deav·ors. — v. tr. To attempt (fulfillment of a responsibility or an obligation, for example) by employment or expenditure of effort: endeavored to improve the quality of life in the inner city. — v. intr. To work with a set or specified goal or purpose. [Middle English endeavour, from endeveren, to make an effort, from (putten) in dever, (to put oneself) in duty, make it one's duty : in, in; see IN¹ + dever, duty (from Old French deveir, devoir, duty); see DEVOIR.] — en·deav'or·er n.

en·deav·our (ĕn-dĕv'ər) n. & v. Chiefly British. Variant of endeavor.

En·de·cott also En·di·cott (ĕn'dĭ-kət, -köt') John. 1588?-1665. English-born American colonial administrator who was a founder of the Massachusetts Bay Colony and served frequently as its governor between 1628 and 1664.

en·dem·ic (ĕn-dĕm'ik) adj. 1. Prevalent in or peculiar to a particular locality, region, or people: diseases endemic to the tropics. See Synonyms at native. 2. Ecology. Native to or confined to a certain region. — n. Ecology. An endemic plant or animal. [From Greek endēmos : en-, in; see EN⁻² + dēmos, people; see dā- in Appendix.] — en·dem'i·cal·ly adv. — en·dem'ism n.

En·der·by Land (ĕn'dər-bĕ länd) A region of Antarctica between Queen Maud Land and Wilkes Land. First explored in 1831 and 1832, it is claimed by Australia.

end·er·gon·ic (ĕn'dər-gŏn'ik) adj. Requiring energy: an endergonic chemical reaction. [END(O)- + Greek ergon, work; see werg- in Appendix + -IC.]

en·der·mic (ĕn-dūr'mĭk) adj. Acting medicinally by absorption through the skin. — en·der'mi·cal·ly adv.

En·ders (ĕn'dərz), John Franklin. 1897-1985. American bacteriologist. He shared a 1954 Nobel Prize for work on the cultivation of the polio virus.

end·game also end game (ĕnd'gām') n. Games. 1. The final stage of a chess game after most of the pieces have been removed from the board. 2. The final stage of an extended process or course of events: the diplomatic endgame that led to the treaty.

En·di·cott (ĕn'dĭ-kət, -köt'), John. See John Endecott.

end·ing (ĕn'ding) n. 1. A conclusion or termination. 2. A concluding part; a finale: a happy ending. 3. Grammar. The final morpheme added to a word base to make an inflectional form, such as -ed in walked.

en·dive (ĕn'dĭv', ŏn'dĕv') n. 1. An Indian plant (Cichorium endivia) cultivated for its crown of crisp, succulent leaves used in salads. Also called frisée 2. A variety of the common chicory Cichorium intybus cultivated to produce a narrow, pointed cluster of whitish leaves used in salads. Also called witloof [Middle English, from Old French, from Medieval Latin endivia, from Medieval Greek entubia, pl. diminutive of Greek entubon, perhaps from Egyptian tybi, January (because the plant grows in this month).]

end leaf (ĕnd lĕf) n. See endpaper.

end-less (ĕnd'lis) adj. 1. Being or seeming to be without an end or a limit; boundless: an endless universe; an endless conversation. 2. Formed with the ends joined; continuous: an endless chain. —end/less-ly adv. —end/less-ness n.

end line (ĕnd lĭn) n. Sports. A line perpendicular to the sidelines that marks an end boundary of a playing field or court.

end-long (ĕnd'lŏng', -lŏng') adv. Archaic. Lengthwise.

end man (ĕnd măn) n. 1. The person at the end of a line or row. 2. The man in a minstrel show who sits at one end of the company and engages in banter with the interlocutor.

end matter (ĕnd măt'ər) n. See back matter.

end-most (ĕnd'mŏst') adj. Being at or closest to the end; last.

end-note (ĕnd'nŏt') n. A note placed at the end of an article, a chapter, or a book that comments on or cites a reference for a designated part of the text.

endo- or end- pref. Inside; within: endometrium. [Greek, from endo, within. See en in Appendix.]

en-do-bi-ot-ic (ĕn'də-bī-ŏt'ĭk) adj. Living as a parasite or symbiont within the tissues of a host.

en-do-car-di-tis (ĕn'dŏ-kăr-dĭ'tĭs) n. Inflammation of the endocardium.

[ENDOCARD(IUM) + -ITIS.] —en'do-car-dit'ic (-dĭt'ĭk) adj.

en-do-car-di-um (ĕn'dŏ-kăr'dĕ-əm) n. pl. en-do-car-di-a (-dĕ-ə). The thin serous membrane, composed of endothelial tissue, that lines the interior of the heart. [New Latin : ENDO- + Greek kardia, heart; see kerd- in Appendix.]

—en'do-car'di-al adj.

en-do-carp (ĕn'də-kărp') n. The hard inner layer of the pericarp of many fruits, such as the pit or stone of a cherry, a peach, or an olive. —en'do-car'pal adj.

en-do-cra-ni-um (ĕn'dŏ-kră'nĕ-əm) n. pl. en-do-cra-ni-a (-nĕ-ə). 1. The outermost layer of the dura mater. 2. The inner surface of the skull.

en-do-crine (ĕn'də-krĭn, -krĕn', -krĭn') adj. 1. Secreting internally. 2. Of or relating to endocrine glands or the hormones secreted by them. — n. 1. The secretion of an endocrine gland; a hormone. 2. An endocrine gland. [French : Greek endo-, endo- + Greek krinein, to separate; see krei- in Appendix.]

endocrine gland (ĕn'də-krĭn glănd) n. Any of various glands, such as the thyroid, adrenal, or pituitary, having hormonal secretions that pass directly into the bloodstream. Also called ductless gland

- en·do·cri·nol·o·gy (ĕn'də-krə-nŏl'ə-jē) n. The study of the glands and hormones of the body and their related disorders. —en'do·cri'no·log'ic (-krīn'ə-lŏj'ik), en'do·crin'o·log'i·cal adj. —en'do·cri·nol'o·gist n.
- en·do·cy·to·sis (ĕn'dō-sī-tō'sīs) n. A process of cellular ingestion by which the plasma membrane folds inward to bring substances into the cell. —en'do·cyt'ic (-sīt'ik), en'do·cy·tot'ic (-sī-tŏt'ik) adj. —en'do·cy·tose' (-tōs') v.
- en·do·derm (ĕn'də-dûrm') also en·to·derm (ĕn'tə-) n. The innermost of the three primary germ layers of an animal embryo, developing into the gastrointestinal tract, the lungs, and associated structures. Also called hypoblast —en'do·der'mal adj.
- en·do·der·mis (ĕn'də-dûr'mīs) n. Botany. The innermost layer of the cortex that forms a sheath around the vascular tissue of roots and some stems. [ENDO- + (EPI)DERMIS.]
- en·do·don·tia (ĕn'dō-dŏn'shə, -shē-ə) n. Endodontics.
- en·do·don·tics (ĕn'dō-dŏn'tiks) n. (used with a sing. verb). The branch of dentistry that deals with diseases of the tooth root, dental pulp, and surrounding tissue. [ENDO- + (ORTHO)DONTICS.] —en'do·don'tic adj. —en'do·don'tist n.
- en·do·en·zyme (ĕn'dō-ĕn'zīm') n. An enzyme that acts on or is retained within the cell producing it.
- en·do·er·gic (ĕn'dō-ûr'jĭk) adj. Chemistry. Endothermic. [ENDO- + Greek ergon, work; see werg- in Appendix + -IC.]
- en·dog·a·my (ĕn-dŏg'ə-mē) n. 1. Anthropology. Marriage within a particular group in accordance with custom or law. 2. Botany. Fertilization resulting from pollination among flowers of the same plant. 3. Biology. Reproduction by the fusion of gametes of similar ancestry. —en·dog'a·mous adj.
- en·dog·e·nous (ĕn-dŏj'ə-nəs) adj. 1. Produced or growing from within. 2. Biology. Originating or produced within an organism, a tissue, or a cell: endogenous secretions. —en·dog'e·nous·ly adv. —en·dog'e·ny n.
- en·do·lymph (ĕn'də-lĭmf') n. The fluid in the membranous labyrinth of the inner ear. —en'do·lym·phat'ic (-lĭm-făt'ik) adj.
- en·do·me·tri·a (ĕn'dō-mē'trē-ə) n. Plural of endometrium.
- en·do·me·tri·o·sis (ĕn'dō-mē'trē-ŏ'sīs) n. A condition, usually resulting in pain and dysmenorrhea, that is characterized by the abnormal occurrence of functional endometrial tissue outside the uterus.
- en·do·me·tri·um (ĕn'dō-mē'trē-əm) n. pl. en·do·me·tri·a (-trē-ə). The glandular mucous membrane that lines the uterus. [New Latin : ENDO- + Greek mētra, uterus; see METRO-.] —en'do·me'tri·al adj.
- en·do·mi·to·sis (ĕn'dō-mī-tō'sīs) n. A process by which chromosomes replicate without the division of the cell nucleus. —en'do·mi·tot'ic (-tŏt'ik) adj.

en·do·morph (ĕn'də-môrf') n. 1. A mineral enclosed within another mineral, such as rutile or tourmaline in quartz. 2. Physiology. An individual characterized by relative prominence of the abdomen and other soft body parts developed from the embryonic endodermal layer. [ENDO(DERM) + -MORPH.]

en·do·mor·phic (ĕn'də-môrf'ĭk) adj. a. Of or relating to an endomorph. b. Created through endomorphism. [ENDO(DERM) + -MORPHIC.]

—en'do·mor'phy n.

en·do·morph·ism (ĕn'də-môrf'ĭz'əm) n. 1. Geology. A change within an intrusive igneous rock caused by the assimilation of portions of the surrounding rock. 2. A homomorphism that maps a mathematical set into itself.

en·do·nu·cle·ase (ĕn'dō-nōō'klē-ās', -āz', -nyōō'-) n. Any of a group of enzymes that catalyze the hydrolysis of bonds between nucleic acids in the interior of a DNA or an RNA sequence.

en·do·par·a·site (ĕn'dō-pār'ə-sīt') n. A parasite, such as a tapeworm, that lives within another organism. —en'do·par·a·sit'ic (-sīt'ĭk) adj.

—en'do·par'ə·sit·ism (-sĭ-tĭz'əm) n.

en·do·pep·ti·dase (ĕn'dō-pĕp'tĭ-dās', -dāz') n. Any of a large group of enzymes that catalyze the hydrolysis of peptide bonds in the interior of a polypeptide chain or protein molecule.

en·do·phyte (ĕn'də-fīt') n. A plant, such as a fungus, growing within another plant. —en'do·phyt'ic (-dō-fīt'ĭk) adj.

en·do·plasm (ĕn'də-plāz'əm) n. A central, less viscous portion of the cytoplasm that is distinguishable in certain cells, especially motile cells.

—en'do·plas'mic adj.

endoplasmic reticulum (ĕn'də-plāz'mĭk rĭ-tĭk'yə-ləm) n. A membrane network within the cytoplasm of cells involved in the synthesis, modification, and transport of cellular materials.

end organ (ĕnd ôr'gən) n. The encapsulated termination of a sensory nerve.

en·dor·phin (ĕn-dôr'fĭn) n. Any of a group of peptide hormones that bind to opiate receptors and are found mainly in the brain. Endorphins reduce the sensation of pain and affect emotions. [ENDO(GENOUS) + (MO)RPHIN(E).]

en·dorse (ĕn-dôrs') also in·dorse (ĭn-) v. tr. en·dorsed, en·dors·ing, en·dors·es. 1. To write one's signature on the back of (a check, for example) as evidence of the legal transfer of its ownership, especially in return for the cash or credit indicated on its face. 2. To place (one's signature), as on a contract, to indicate approval of its contents or terms. 3. To acknowledge (receipt of payment) by signing a bill, draft, or other instrument. 4. To give approval of or support to, especially by public statement; sanction: endorse a political candidate. See Synonyms at approve. [Middle English endosen, from Anglo-Norman endosser, from Medieval Latin indorsāre: Latin in-, upon, in; see EN-¹ + Latin dorsum, back.] —en·dors'a·ble adj. —en·dors'er, en·dor'sor n.

en·dor·see (ĕn'dôr-sē') n. One to whom ownership of a negotiable document is transferred by endorsement.

en·dorse·ment (ĕn-dôrs'mənt) n. 1. The act of endorsing: The athlete was highly paid to do endorsements of products. 2. Something, such as a signature or voucher, that endorses or validates. 3. Approbation; sanction; support: The candidates competed for the union's endorsement. 4. An amendment to a contract, such as an insurance policy, by which the original terms are changed.

endorsement in blank (ĕn-dôrs'mənt ĭn blāngk) n. pl. endorsements in blank. See blank endorsement.

en·do·scope (ĕn'də-skōp') n. An instrument for examining visually the interior of a bodily canal or a hollow organ such as the colon, bladder, or stomach.

—en'do·scop'ic (-skōp'ĭk) adj. —en'do·scop'ic·al·ly adv. —en·dos'co·py (ĕn-dōs'kə-pē) n.

en·do·skel·e·ton (ĕn'dō-skĕl'ĭ-tŏn) n. An internal supporting skeleton, derived from the mesoderm, that is characteristic of vertebrates and certain invertebrates. —en'do·skel'e·tal (-ĭ-tl) adj.

en·dos·mo·sis (ĕn'dōz-mō'sĭs, -dōs-) n. The inward flow of a fluid through a permeable membrane toward a fluid of greater concentration. —en'- dos·mot'ic (-mōt'ĭk) adj. —en'dos·mot'i·cal·ly adv.

en·do·sperm (ĕn'də-spûrm') n. The nutritive tissue within seeds of flowering plants, surrounding and absorbed by the embryo.

en·do·spore (ĕn'də-spôr', -spōr') n. 1. A small asexual spore, as that formed by some bacteria. 2. The inner layer of the wall of a spore.

en·do·spo·ri·um (ĕn'də-spôr'ĕ-əm, -spōr'-) n. pl. en·do·spo·ri·a (-spôr'ĕ-ə, -spōr'-). 1. An endospore. 2. See intine.

en·dos·te·um (ĕn-dōs'tē-əm) n. pl. en·dos·te·a (-tē-ə). The thin layer of cells lining the medullary cavity of a bone. [New Latin : END(O)- + Greek osteon, bone; see ost- in Appendix.] —en·dos'te·al adj.

en·do·sul·fan (ĕn'də-sŭl'fən) n. A highly toxic crystalline insecticide, C₉H₆Cl₆O₃S, used in the control of crop insects and mites. [END(RIN) + -O- + SULF(O)- + -AN².]

en·do·the·ci·um (ĕn'dō-thĕ'sĕ-əm, -shĕ-əm) n. pl. en·do·the·ci·a (-sĕ-ə, -shĕ-ə). Botany. The inner tissue of an anther or a moss capsule. [New Latin : ENDO- + Greek thĕkion, diminutive of thĕkĕ, chest, receptacle; see dhĕ- in Appendix.]

en·do·the·li·a (ĕn'dō-thĕ'lĕ-ə) n. Plural of endothelium.

en·do·the·li·o·ma (ĕn'dō-thĕ'lĕ-ō'mə) n. pl. en·do·the·li·o·ma·ta (-mə-tə) or en·do·the·li·o·mas. Any of various neoplasms derived from endothelium.

en·do·the·li·um (ĕn'dō-thĕ'lĕ-əm) n. pl. en·do·the·li·a (-lĕ-ə). A thin layer of flat epithelial cells that lines serous cavities, lymph vessels, and blood vessels.

[New Latin : ENDO- + Greek thēlē, nipple; see dhē(i)- in Appendix.]

—en·do·the·li·al, en·do·the·li·oid' adj.

en·do·therm (ĕn'də-thûrm') n. An organism that generates heat to maintain its body temperature, typically above the temperature of its surroundings; a homeotherm.

en·do·ther·mic (ĕn'dō-thûr'mĭk) also en·do·ther·mal (-məl) adj.

1. Chemistry. Characterized by or causing the absorption of heat; endoergic.

2. Biology. Of or relating to an organism that generates heat to maintain its body temperature, typically above the temperature of its surroundings; warm-blooded.

—en·do·ther'my n.

en·do·tox·in (ĕn'dō-tōk'sən) n. A toxin produced by certain bacteria and released upon destruction of the bacterial cell. —en·do·tox'ic adj.

en·do·tra·che·al (ĕn'də-trā'kē-əl) adj. Within or passing through the trachea: an endotracheal tube.

en·dow (ĕn-dou') v. tr. en·dowed, en·dow·ing, en·dows. 1. To provide with property, income, or a source of income. 2. a. To equip or supply with a talent or quality: Nature endowed her with a beautiful singing voice. b. To imagine as having a usually favorable trait or quality: endowed the family pet with human intelligence. 3. Obsolete. To provide with a dowry. [Middle English endowen, from Anglo-Norman endouer : Old French en-, intensive pref.; see EN-¹ + Old French douer, to provide with a dowry (from Latin dōtāre, from dōs, dōt-, dowry); see dō- in Appendix.]

en·dow·ment (ĕn-dou'mənt) n. 1. The act of endowing. 2. Funds or property donated to an institution, an individual, or a group as a source of income.

3. A natural gift, ability, or quality.

end·pa·per also end paper (ĕnd'pā'pər) n. Either of two folded sheets of heavy paper having one half pasted to the inside front or back cover of a book and the other half pasted to the base of the first or last page. Also called end leaf end·pin (ĕnd'pĭn') n. Music. The thin, usually adjustable leg of a cello or double bass.

end plate (ĕnd plāt) n. Physiology. The area of synaptic contact between a motor nerve and a muscle fiber.

end·play (ĕnd'plā') Games. n. A play in bridge that forces an opponent to lead and results in the opponents' losing one or more tricks that they would have won had they not been leading. — v. tr. end·played, end·play·ing, end·plays. To force (a bridge opponent) to lead disadvantageously.

end·point or end point also end·point (ĕnd'point') n. 1. Either of two points marking the end of a line segment. 2. Chemistry. The point in a titration at which no more titrant should be added. It is determined, for example, by a color change in an indicator or by the appearance of a precipitate. 3. A tip or point of termination.

end product (ĕnd prŏd'əkt) n. The result of a completed series of processes or changes.

end-ran (ĕnd'rän') v. Past tense and past participle of end-run.

en-drin (ĕn'drĭn) n. A highly toxic chlorinated hydrocarbon, C₁₂H₈OCl₆, used as an insecticide. [EN(DO)- + (DIEL)DRIN.]

end run (ĕnd rŭn) n. 1. Football. A play in which the ball carrier attempts to run around one end of the defensive line. 2. Informal. A maneuver in which impediments are bypassed, often by deceit or trickery: made an end run around the departmental finance officer in order to increase the budget.

end-run (ĕnd'rŭn') v. tr. end--ran (-rän'), end--run-ning, end--runs. Informal. To bypass (an impediment) often by deceit or trickery: "The plan to end-run the regular Senate committee ran into instant resistance from some of their new Republican chairmen" (Peter Goldman).

end-stopped (ĕnd'stŏpt') adj. Ending in a syntactic and rhythmic pause. Used of a line of verse or a couplet.

Ends·ville also ends·ville (ĕndz'vĭl') n. Slang. 1. The greatest, best, or most exciting condition, state, or thing. 2. An undesirable, usually isolated location, as the end of a road.

end table (ĕnd tā'bəl) n. A small table, usually placed at either end of a couch or beside a chair.

en·due (ĕn-dŏŏ', -dyŏŏ') also in·due (ĭn-) v. tr. en·dued, en·du·ing, en·dues. 1. To provide with a quality or trait; endow: "Endue her plenteously with heavenly gifts" (Book of Common Prayer). 2. To put on (a piece of clothing). [Middle English enduen, from Old French enduire, to lead in, induct (influenced by Middle English endowen, to endow); see ENDOW, from Latin indŭcere; see INDUCE. Sense 2, Middle English induen, to clothe from Latin induere, to put on. See eu¹ in Appendix.]

en·dur·a·ble (ĕn-dŏŏr'ə-bəl, -dyŏŏr'-) adj. Possible to be endured; tolerable or bearable: endurable pain. — en·dur'a·bly adv.

en·dur·ance (ĕn-dŏŏr'əns, -dyŏŏr'-) n. 1. The act, quality, or power of withstanding hardship or stress: A marathon tests a runner's endurance. 2. The state or fact of persevering: Through hard work and endurance, we will complete this project. 3. Continuing existence; duration. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: endurance events; endurance swimmers.

en·dure (ĕn-dŏŏr', -dyŏŏr') v. en·dured, en·dur·ing, en·dures. — v. tr. 1. To carry on through, despite hardships; undergo: endure an Arctic winter. 2. To bear with tolerance: "We seek the truth, and will endure the consequences" (Charles Seymour). See Synonyms at bear¹. — v. intr. 1. To continue in existence; last: buildings that have endured for centuries. 2. To suffer patiently without yielding. [Middle English enduren, from Old French endurer, from Latin indūrāre, to make hard : in-, against, into; see EN⁻¹ + dūrus, hard; see deru- in Appendix.]

en·dur·ing (ĕn-dōor'ing, -dyōor'-) adj. 1. Lasting; continuing; durable: a novel of enduring interest. 2. Long-suffering; patient. —en·dur'ing·ly adv.
—en·dur'ing·ness n.

en·dur·o (ĕn-dōor'ō, -dyōor'ō) n. pl. en·dur·os. Sports. A race, as of motorcycles or runners, that tests endurance. [Shortening and alteration of ENDURANCE.]

end use also end-use (ĕnd'yōōs') n. The ultimate application for which a product has been designed. —end'·use' adj.

end user also end-us·er (ĕnd'yōō'zər) n. The ultimate consumer of a product, especially the one for whom the product has been designed.

end·wise (ĕnd'wīz') also end·ways (-wāz') adv. 1. On end; upright. 2. With the end foremost. 3. Lengthwise. 4. End to end.

En·dym·i·on (ĕn-dīm'ē-ən) n. Greek Mythology. A handsome young man who was loved by a moon goddess and whose youth was preserved by eternal sleep.

end zone (ĕnd zōn) n. Football. The area at either end of the playing field between the goal line and the end line.

ENE abbr. East-northeast.

-ene suff. An unsaturated organic compound, especially one containing a double bond between carbon atoms: ethylene. [From Greek -ēnē, feminine adj. suff.] en·e·ma (ĕn'ə-mə) n. pl. en·e·mas. 1. The injection of liquid into the rectum through the anus for cleansing, for stimulating evacuation of the bowels, or for other therapeutic or diagnostic purposes. 2. The fluid so injected. [Late Latin, from Greek, from eniēnai, to send in, inject : en-, in; see EN⁻² + hiēnai, to send; see yē- in Appendix.]

en·e·my (ĕn'ə-mē) n. pl. en·e·mies. 1. One who feels hatred toward, intends injury to, or opposes the interests of another; a foe. 2. a. A hostile power or force, such as a nation. b. A member or unit of such a force. 3. A group of foes or hostile forces. See Usage Note at collective noun. 4. Something destructive or injurious in its effects: "Art hath an enemy called Ignorance" (Ben Jonson). — adj. Of, relating to, or being a hostile power or force. [Middle English enemi, from Old French, from Latin inimicus : in-, not; see IN⁻¹ + amicus, friend.]

SYNONYMS: enemy, foe, opponent. The central meaning shared by these nouns is "one who is hostile to or opposes the purposes or interests of another": was betrayed by his enemies; a foe of fascism; a political opponent.

en·er·get·ic (ĕn'ər-jēt'ik) adj. 1. Possessing, exerting, or displaying energy. See Synonyms at active. 2. Of or relating to energy. [Greek energētikos, from energein, to be active, from energōs, active. See ENERGY.] —en'er·get'i·cal·ly adv.

en·er·get·ics (ĕn'ər-jĕt'iks) n. (used with a sing. verb). 1. The study of the flow and transformation of energy. 2. The flow and transformation of energy within a particular system.

en·er·gize (ĕn'ər-jĭz') v. en·er·gized, en·er·giz·ing, en·er·giz·es. — v. tr. 1. To give energy to; activate or invigorate: “His childhood—father in... prison, factory work as a boy—both haunted and energized him, and he wrote on a grand scale and worked his way free” (Frank Conroy). 2. To supply with an electric current; connect to a source of electricity. — v. intr. To release or put out energy. —en'er-giz'er n.

en·er·gy (ĕn'ər-jĕ) n. pl. en·er·gies. 1. The capacity for work or vigorous activity; vigor; power. See Synonyms at strength. 2. a. Exertion of vigor or power: a project requiring a great deal of time and energy. b. Vitality and intensity of expression: a speech delivered with energy and emotion. 3. a. Usable heat or power: Each year Americans consume a high percentage of the world's energy. b. A source of usable power, such as petroleum or coal. 4. Physics. The capacity of a physical system to do work. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: energy conservation; energy efficiency; an energy czar. [French énergie, from Late Latin energĭa, from Greek energeia, from energos, active : en-, in, at; see EN-² + ergon, work; see werg- in Appendix.]

energy audit (ĕn'ər-jĕ ô'dĭt) n. An evaluation of energy consumption, as in a home or business, to determine ways in which energy can be conserved.

energy density (ĕn'ər-jĕ dĕn'sĭ-tĕ) n. The energy per unit volume of a region of space.

energy efficiency ratio (ĕn'ər-jĕ ĭ-fĭsh'ən-sĕ rā'shō) n. A measure of the relative efficiency of a heating or cooling appliance, such as an air conditioner, that is equal to the unit's output in BTU's per hour divided by its consumption of energy, measured in watts.

energy level (ĕn'ər-jĕ lĕv'əl) n. 1. The energy characteristic of a stationary state of a physical system, especially a quantum mechanical system. 2. The stationary state of a quantum mechanical system.

en·er·vate (ĕn'ər-vāt') v. tr. en·er·vat·ed, en·er·vat·ing, en·er·vates.

1. To weaken or destroy the strength or vitality of: “the luxury which enervates and destroys nations” (Henry David Thoreau). See Synonyms at deplete.

2. Medicine. To remove a nerve or part of a nerve. — adj. (ĭ-nûr'vĭt) Deprived of strength; debilitated. [Latin ĕnervāre, ĕnervāt- : ĕ-, ex-, ex- + nervus, sinew; see (s)neəu- in Appendix.] —en'er-va'tion n. —en'er-va'tive adj.

—en'er-va'tor n.

E·nes·co (ə-nĕs'kō, ĕ-nĕs'-), Georges. 1881-1955. Romanian-born violinist and composer whose works include the opera Oedipus (1936) and three symphonies.

en·face (ĕn-fās') v. tr. en·faced, en·fac·ing, en·fac·es. To write on the face of (a check, for example). —en·face·ment n.

en·fant ter·ri·ble (än-fän' tĕ-rĕ'blə) n. also en·fants ter·ri·bles (än-fän' tĕ-rĕ'blə) One whose startlingly unconventional behavior, work, or ideas are a source of embarrassment or dismay to others: The radical painter was the enfant terrible of the art establishment. [French : enfant, child + terrible, frightful.]

en·fee·ble (ĕn-fĕ'bəl) v. tr. en·fee·bled, en·fee·bling, en·fee·bles. To deprive of strength; make feeble. —en·fee·ble·ment n. —en·fee·bler n.

en·feoff (ĕn-fĕf', -fĕf') v. tr. en·feoffed, en·feoff·ing, en·feoffs. To invest with a feudal estate or fee. [Middle English enfeffen, from Anglo-Norman enfeoffer : Old French en-, causative pref.; see EN⁻¹ + Old French fief, fief; see FEE.] —en·feoff·ment n.

en·fet·ter (ĕn-fĕt'ər, ĭn-) v. tr. en·fet·tered, en·fet·ter·ing, en·fet·ters. To bind in fetters; enchain.

En·field (ĕn'fĕld') A town of northern Connecticut near the Massachusetts border. It was settled c. 1680 as part of Massachusetts and annexed by Connecticut in 1749. Population, 45,532.

Enfield rifle (ĕn'fĕld' rī'fəl) n. Any of several rifles of varying calibers formerly used by British and American troops, especially the .30 or .303 caliber, bolt-action, breechloading model. [After Enfield, a borough of London in southeast England.]

en·fi·lade (ĕn'fə-lād', -lād') n. 1. Gunfire directed along the length of a target, such as a column of troops. 2. A target vulnerable to sweeping gunfire. — v. tr. en·fi·lad·ed, en·fi·lad·ing, en·fi·lades. To rake with gunfire. [French, series, string, row, from enfiler, to string together, run through, from Old French : en-, in, on; see EN⁻¹ + fil, thread (from Latin fĭlum); see g^whī- in Appendix.]

en·fleu·rage (ɔn'flə-rāzh', -rāj') n. A process in making perfume in which odorless fats or oils absorb the fragrance of fresh flowers. [French, from enfleurier, to saturate with the perfume of flowers : en-, causative pref.; see EN⁻¹ + fleur, flower (from Old French flour, from Latin flōs, flōr-); see bhel⁻³ in Appendix.]

en·flur·ane (ĕn-flōr'ān') n. A nonflammable liquid, C₃H₂ClF₅O, used as an anesthetic. [EN⁻¹ + (TRI-) + FLU(O)R(O)- + (ETH)ANE.]

en·fold (ĕn-fōld') v. tr. en·fold·ed, en·fold·ing, en·folds. 1. To cover with or as if with folds; envelop. 2. To hold within limits; enclose. 3. To embrace. —en·fold·er n.

en·force (ĕn-fōrs', -fōrs') v. tr. en·forced, en·forc·ing, en·forc·es. 1. To compel observance of or obedience to: enforce a regulation. 2. To impose (a kind of behavior, for example); compel: enforce military discipline. 3. To give force to; reinforce: “enforces its plea with a description of the pains of hell” (Albert C. Baugh). [Middle English enforcen, from Old French enforcier, to exert force, compel, and from enforcir, to strengthen en-, causative pref.; see EN⁻¹ + force, strength; see FORCE.] —en-force/a·bil'i·ty n. —en-force/a·ble adj.

—en-force/ment n. —en-forc'er n.

SYNONYMS: enforce, implement, invoke. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to cause to be applied or carried out”: enforced the rules; implementing the terms of the agreement; invoke emergency powers.

en·fran·chise (ĕn-frän'chīz') v. tr. en·fran·chised, en·fran·chis·ing, en·fran·chis·es. 1. To bestow a franchise on. 2. To endow with the rights of citizenship, especially the right to vote. 3. To free, as from bondage. [Middle English enfranchisen, from Old French enfranchir, enfranchiss-, to set free : en-, intensive pref.; see EN⁻¹ + franchir (from franc, free); see FRANK¹.]

—en·fran'chise'ment n.

eng. abbr. 1. Engine. 2. Engineer. 3. Engineering.

Eng. abbr. 1. England. 2. English.

En·ga·dine (ĕng'gə-dēn') A valley of the Inn River in eastern Switzerland, divided into the Upper Engadine in the southwest and the Lower Engadine in the northeast, it is a noted resort area.

en·gage (ĕn-gāj') v. en·gaged, en·gag·ing, en·gag·es. — v. tr. 1. To obtain or contract for the services of; employ: engage a carpenter. 2. To arrange for the use of; reserve: engage a room See Synonyms at book. 3. To pledge or promise, especially to marry. 4. To attract and hold the attention of; engross: a hobby that engaged her for hours at a time. 5. To win over or attract: His smile engages everyone he meets. 6. To draw into; involve: engage a shy person in conversation. 7. To require the use of; occupy: Studying engages most of a serious student's time. 8. To enter or bring into conflict with: We have engaged the enemy. 9. To interlock or cause to interlock; mesh: engage the automobile's clutch. 10. To give or take as security. — v. intr. 1. To involve oneself or become occupied; participate: engage in conversation. 2. To assume an obligation; agree. See Synonyms at promise. 3. To enter into conflict or battle: The armies engaged at dawn. 4. To become meshed or interlocked: The gears engaged. [Middle English engagen, to pledge something as security for repayment of debt, from Old French engagier : en-, in; see EN⁻¹ + gage, pledge of Germanic origin.] —en·gag'er n.

en·ga·gé (ĕn'gä-zhā') adj. Actively committed, as to a political cause. [French, past participle of engager, to engage, from Old French engagier, to pledge. See ENGAGE.]

en·gaged (ĕn-gāj'd') adj. 1. Employed, occupied, or busy. 2. Committed, as to a cause. 3. Pledged to marry; betrothed: an engaged couple. 4. Involved in conflict or battle. 5. Being in gear; meshed. 6. Partly imbedded in, built into, or attached to another part, as columns on a wall.

en·gage·ment (ĕn-gāj'mənt) n. 1. The act of engaging or the state of being engaged. 2. Betrothal. 3. Something that serves to engage; a pledge. 4. A promise or agreement to be at a particular place at a particular time. 5. a. Employment, especially for a specified time. b. A specific, often limited, period of employment. 6. A hostile encounter; a battle. 7. The condition of being in gear.

SYNONYMS: engagement, appointment, assignation, date, rendezvous, tryst. The central meaning shared by these nouns is “a commitment to appear at a certain time and place”: a business engagement; a dental appointment; a secret assignation; a date to play tennis; a rendezvous of allied troops at the border; a lovers' tryst.

en·gag·ing (ĕn-gā'jɪŋ) adj. Charming; attractive: an engaging smile.
—en·gag'ing·ly adv.

en garde (än gärd') interj. Used to warn a fencer to assume the position preparatory to a match. [French : en, on + garde, guard.]

en·gar·land (ĕn-gär'lænd) v. tr. en·gar·land·ed, en·gar·land·ing, en·gar·lands. To encircle or deck with or as if with a garland.

En·gels (ĕng'əlz, -əls), Friedrich. 1820-1895. German socialist theorist and writer who met Karl Marx in Paris in 1844 and collaborated with him on The Communist Manifesto (1848).

en·gen·der (ĕn-jĕn'dər) v. en·gen·dered, en·gen·der·ing, en·gen·ders.
— v. tr. 1. To bring into existence; give rise to: “Every cloud engenders not a storm” (Shakespeare). 2. To procreate; propagate. — v. intr. To come into existence; originate. [Middle English engendren, from Old French engendrer, from Latin ingenerāre : in-, in; see EN-¹ + generāre, to produce; see GENERATE.]
—en·gen'der·er n.

en·gine (ĕn'jɪn) n. Abbr. eng. 1. a. A machine that converts energy into mechanical force or motion. b. Such a machine distinguished from an electric, spring-driven, or hydraulic motor by its use of a fuel. 2. a. A mechanical appliance, instrument, or tool: engines of war. b. An agent, an instrument, or a means of accomplishment. 3. A locomotive. 4. A fire engine. — v. tr. en·gined, en·gin·ing, en·gines. To equip with an engine or engines. [Middle English engin, skill, machine, from Old French, innate ability, from Latin ingenium. See genə- in Appendix.]

engine block (ĕn'jɪn blɒk) n. The cast metal block containing the cylinders of an internal-combustion engine.

en·gi·neer (ĕn'jə-nîr') n. Abbr. e., E., eng., engr. 1. One who is trained or professionally engaged in a branch of engineering. 2. One who operates an engine. 3. One who skillfully or shrewdly manages an enterprise. — v. tr. en·gi·neered, en·gi·neer·ing, en·gi·neers. 1. To plan, construct, or manage as an engineer. 2. To alter or produce by methods of genetic engineering: “Researchers... compared insulin manufactured by bacteria genetically engineered with recombinant DNA techniques to the commercial insulin obtained from swine or cattle” (Fusion). 3. To plan, manage, and put through by skillful acts or contrivance; maneuver. [Middle English enginour, from Old French engigneor, from Medieval Latin ingeniātor, contriver, from ingeniāre, to contrive, from Latin ingenium, ability. See ENGINE.]

en-gi-neer-ing (ĕn'jə-nîr'ing) n. Abbr. e., E., eng. 1. a. The application of scientific and mathematical principles to practical ends such as the design, manufacture, and operation of efficient and economical structures, machines, processes, and systems. b. The profession of or the work performed by an engineer. 2. Skillful maneuvering or direction: geopolitical engineering; social engineering.
en-gird (ĕn-gûrd') v. tr. en-girt (-gûrt'), en-gird-ing, en-girds. Archaic. To encircle.

en-gir-dle (ĕn-gûr'dl) v. tr. en-gir-dled, en-gir-dling, en-gir-dles. To encircle or surround with or as if with a girdle.

en-girt (ĕn-gûrt') v. Past tense and past participle of engird.

en-gla-cial (ĕn-glā'shəl) adj. Located or occurring within a glacier.

Eng-land (ing'glənd) Abbr. Eng. A division of the United Kingdom, the southern part of the island of Great Britain. Originally settled by Celtic peoples, it was subsequently conquered by Romans, Angles, Saxons, Jutes, Danes, and Normans. Acts of union joined England with Wales in 1536, with Scotland in 1707 to create the political entity of Great Britain, and with Ireland in 1801 to form the United Kingdom. London is the capital and the largest city of both England and the United Kingdom. Population, 46,220,955.

En-gle-wood (ĕng'gəl-wōod') 1. A city of north-central Colorado, a residential and industrial suburb of Denver on the South Platte River. Population, 29,387. 2. A city of northeast New Jersey east of Paterson. Settled by the Dutch in the 17th century, it is a residential suburb of New York City. Population, 24,850.

Eng-lish (ing'glīsh) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or characteristic of England or its people or culture. 2. Of or relating to the English language. — n. Abbr. E, E., Eng. 1. The people of England. 2. a. The West Germanic language of England, the United States, and other countries that are or have been under English influence or control. b. The English language of a particular time, region, person, or group of persons: American English. 3. A translation into or an equivalent in the English language. 4. A course or individual class in the study of English language, literature, or composition. 5. Often english. Sports & Games. The spin given to a ball by striking it on one side or releasing it with a sharp twist. — v. tr. Eng-lished, Eng-lish-ing, Eng-lish-es. 1. To translate into English. 2. To adapt into English; Anglicize. [Middle English, from Old English Englisc, from Engle, the Angles.] — Eng'lish-ness n.

English bulldog (ɪŋɡˈɡlɪʃ bʊlˈdɒɡ) n. A shorthaired, stocky dog; a bulldog.

English Channel (ɪŋɡˈɡlɪʃ ʃænˈəl) An arm of the Atlantic Ocean between western France and southern England. It opens into the North Sea and is traversed by a train-ferry service. A rail-automobile tunnel is scheduled to open in the 1990's.

English daisy (ɪŋɡˈɡlɪʃ dāˈzē) n. See daisy (n., sense 2).

English foxhound (ɪŋɡˈɡlɪʃ fɒksˈhʌnd) n. Any of a breed of medium-sized hunting dog originating in England and having straight legs and a smooth, black and white or tan and white coat.

English horn (ɪŋɡˈɡlɪʃ hɔːn) n. Music. A double-reed woodwind instrument similar to but larger than the oboe and pitched lower by a fifth.

English-man (ɪŋɡˈɡlɪʃ-mən) n. 1. A man who is a native or inhabitant of England. 2. A man of English descent.

English muffin (ɪŋɡˈɡlɪʃ mʌfˈɪn) n. A flat round muffin made from yeast dough that has been baked on a griddle and is usually split and toasted before being eaten.

English plantain (ɪŋɡˈɡlɪʃ plʌnˈtæn) n. See ribgrass.

English saddle (ɪŋɡˈɡlɪʃ sɒdˈl) n. A lightweight, hornless saddle with a steel cantle and pommel, a padded leather seat, and full side flaps usually set forward.

English setter (ɪŋɡˈɡlɪʃ sɛtˈər) n. Any of a breed of medium-sized dog developed in England and having a long, silky white coat usually with black or brownish markings.

English sheepdog (ɪŋɡˈɡlɪʃ shēpˈdɒɡ) n. An Old English sheepdog.

English sonnet (ɪŋɡˈɡlɪʃ sɒnˈɪt) n. See Shakespearean sonnet.

English sparrow (ɪŋɡˈɡlɪʃ spɔːrˈo) n. See house sparrow.

English springer spaniel (ɪŋɡˈɡlɪʃ sprɪŋɡˈər spænˈjəl) n. Any of a breed of medium-sized hunting dog originating in England and having a silky, liver and white or black and white coat.

English toy spaniel (ɪŋɡˈɡlɪʃ toi spænˈjəl) n. Any of a breed of spaniel having a round head, a short turned-up nose, a thick wavy coat, and a mane around its neck.

English walnut (ɪŋɡˈɡlɪʃ wɔːlˈnʌt) n. 1. A Eurasian tree (Juglans regia) cultivated in southern Europe and California for its valuable wood and its large, edible nuts. 2. The nut of this tree.

English-woman (ɪŋɡˈɡlɪʃ-wʊmˈən) n. 1. A woman who is a native or inhabitant of England. 2. A woman of English descent.

en-glut (ɛn-ɡlʊt) v. tr. en-glut-ted, en-glut-ting, en-gluts. To gulp down; swallow greedily. [Anglo-Norman englutir, from Late Latin inglutire: Latin in-, intensive pref.; see IN⁻² + Latin glutire, to swallow.]

en·gorge (ĕn-gôrij') v. en-gorged, en-gorg-ing, en-gorg-es. — v. tr.

1. To devour greedily. 2. To gorge; glut. 3. To fill to excess, as with blood or other fluid. — v. intr. To feed ravenously. [French engorger, from Old French engorgier : en-, in; see EN⁻¹ + gorge, throat; see GORGE.] —en-gorge/ment n.

en·gr. abbr. 1. Engineer. 2. a. Engraved. b. Engraver. c. Engraving.

en·graft (ĕn-grăft') v. tr. en-graft-ed, en-graft-ing, en-grafts. 1. To graft (a scion) onto or into another plant. 2. To plant firmly; establish. —en-graft/ment n.

en·grailed (ĕn-grăld') adj. 1. Indented along the edge with small curves.

2. Having an edge or a margin formed by a series of raised dots: engrailed silver coins. [Middle English engreled, from Old French engresle, past participle of engresler, to engrail : en-, causative pref.; see EN⁻¹ + gresle, slender, tapered (from Latin gracilis).]

en·grain (ĕn-grān') v. tr. en-grained, en-grain-ing, en-grains. To ingrain. [Middle English engreinen, to dye with cochineal or kermes, from Old French engrainier : en-, causative pref.; see EN⁻¹ + graine, grain; see GRAIN.]

en·gram (ĕn'grăm') n. A physical alteration thought to occur in living neural tissue in response to stimuli, posited as an explanation for memory.

en·grave (ĕn-grāv') v. tr. en-graved, en-grav-ing, en-graves. 1. To carve, cut, or etch into a material: engraved the champion's name on the trophy. 2. To carve, cut, or etch a design or letters into: engraved the silver watch with my monogram. 3. a. To carve, cut, or etch into a block or surface used for printing. b. To print from a block or plate made by such a process. 4. To impress deeply as if by carving or etching: The experience was engraved into his memory. —en-grav'er n.

en·grav-ing (ĕn-grāv'vĭng) n. Abbr. engr. 1. The art or technique of one that engraves. 2. A design or text engraved on a surface. 3. An engraved surface for printing. 4. A print made from an engraved plate or block.

en·gross (ĕn-grōs') v. tr. en-grossed, en-gross-ing, en-gross-es. 1. To occupy exclusively; absorb: A great novel engrosses the reader. See Synonyms at monopolize. 2. To acquire most or all of (a commodity); monopolize (a market). 3. a. To write or transcribe in a large, clear hand. b. To write or print the final draft of (an official document). [Middle English engrossen, to collect in large quantity, monopolize, from Old French engrossier, from en gros, in large quantity : en, in (from Latin in); see IN⁻² + gros, large; see GROSS. Sense 3, from Middle English engrossen, to make a finished copy of a legal document from Anglo-Norman engrosser, from Medieval Latin ingrossāre : Latin in-, in; see EN⁻¹ + grossa, a copy in a large hand (from Late Latin grossus, thick).] —en-gross'er n.

en·gross-ing (ĕn-grō'sĭng) adj. Occupying one's complete attention; wholly absorbing: listened to an engrossing symphony. —en-gross'ing-ly adv.

en·gross·ment (ĕn-grōs'mənt) n. The act of engrossing or the state of being engrossed.

en·gulf (ĕn-gŭlf') v. tr. en·gulfed, en·gulf·ing, en·gulfs. To swallow up or overwhelm by or as if by overflowing and enclosing: The spring tide engulfed the beach houses. —en·gulf·ment n.

en·hance (ĕn-hāns') v. tr. en·hanced, en·hanc·ing, en·hanc·es. To make greater, as in value, beauty, or reputation; augment: "She had a sweetness to her face, a warmth that was enhanced by luminous dark eyes" (Gioia Diliberto). [Middle English enhauncen, from Anglo-Norman enhauncer, variant of Old French enhaucier, from Vulgar Latin inaltiāre*, from Late Latin inaltāre: Latin in-, causative pref.; see EN⁻¹ + altus, high; see al⁻² in Appendix.] —en·hance·ment n. —en·hanc'er n. —en·hanc'ive adj.

en·har·mon·ic (ĕn'här-mōn'ik) adj. Music. Of, relating to, or involving tones that are identical in pitch but are written differently according to the key in which they occur. [Late Latin enharmonicus, from Greek enarmonios: en-, in; see EN⁻² + harmonia, harmony; see HARMONY.] —en'har·mon'i·cal·ly adv.

E·nid (ĕ'nid) A city of north-central Oklahoma north-northwest of Oklahoma City. It is a trade and processing center. Population, 45,309.

e·nig·ma (ĭ-nĭg'mə) n. 1. One that is puzzling, ambiguous, or inexplicable.

2. A perplexing speech or text; a riddle. [Latin aenigma, from Greek ainigma, from ainissesthai, ainig-, to speak in riddles, from ainos, fable.]

en·ig·mat·ic (ĕn'ig-măt'ik) or en·ig·mat·i·cal (-ĭ-kəl) adj. Of or resembling an enigma; puzzling: a professor's enigmatic grading system. See Synonyms at ambiguous. [Greek ainigmatikos, from ainigma, ainigmat-, riddle. See ENIGMA.] —en'ig·mat'i·cal·ly adv.

en·isle (ĕn-ĭl') v. tr. en·isled, en·isl·ing, en·isles. 1. To make into an island.

2. To set apart from others; isolate.

En·i·we·tok (ĕn'ə-wĕ'tōk', ə-nĕ'wĭ-) An atoll in the Ralik Chain of the Marshall Islands in the west-central Pacific Ocean. It was the site of U.S. atomic tests from 1948 to 1954.

en·jamb·ment or en·jambe·ment (ĕn-jăm'mənt, -jămb') n. The continuation of a syntactic unit from one line or couplet of a poem to the next with no pause. [French enjambement, from Old French enjamber, to straddle: en-, causative pref.; see EN⁻¹ + jambe, leg; see JAMB.]

en·join (ĕn-join') v. tr. en·joined, en·join·ing, en·joins. 1. To direct or impose with authority and emphasis. See Synonyms at command. 2. To prohibit or forbid. See Synonyms at forbid. [Middle English enjoinen, from Old French enjoindre, from Latin iniungere: in-, causative pref.; see EN⁻¹ + iungere, to join; see yeug- in Appendix.] —en·join'er n. —en·join'ment n.

en·joy (ĕn-joi') v. en·joyed, en·joy·ing, en·joys. — v. tr. 1. To receive pleasure or satisfaction from. See Synonyms at like¹. 2. To have the use or benefit of: enjoys good health. — v. intr. To have a pleasurable or satisfactory time. [Middle English enjoien, from Old French enjoir : en-, intensive pref.; see EN⁻¹ + joir, to rejoice (from Latin gaudēre); see gāu- in Appendix.] — en-joy/a-ble adj. — en-joy/a-bly adv. — en-joy'er n.

en-joy-ment (ĕn-joi'mənt) n. 1. The act or state of enjoying. See Synonyms at pleasure. 2. Use or possession of something beneficial or pleasurable.

3. Something that gives pleasure: Classical music was her chief enjoyment.

en-keph-a-lin (ĕn-kĕf'ə-lĭn) n. Either of two closely related pentapeptides having opiate qualities and occurring in the brain, spinal cord, and other parts of the body. [Greek enkephalos, in the head (en-, in; see en in Appendix + kephalē, head); see ghebh-el- in Appendix + -IN.] en-kin-dle (ĕn-kĭn'dl) v. en-kin-dled, en-kin-dling, en-kin-dles. — v. tr. 1. To set afire; light. 2. To incite; arouse. 3. To make luminous and glowing. — v. intr. To catch fire. — en-kin'dler n.

enl. abbr. 1. Enlarged. 2. Enlisted.

en-lace (ĕn-lās') also in-lace (ĭn-) v. tr. en-laced, en-lac-ing, en-lac-es. 1. To wrap or wind about with or as if with a lace or laces; encircle. 2. To interlace; entwine. — en-lace'ment n.

en-large (ĕn-lārj') v. en-larged, en-larg-ing, en-larg-es. — v. tr. 1. To make larger; add to. 2. To give greater scope to; expand. See Synonyms at increase. — v. intr. 1. To become larger; grow. 2. To speak or write at greater length or in greater detail; elaborate: enlarged upon the plan. [Middle English enlargen, from Old French enlargier : en-, causative pref.; see EN⁻¹ + large, large; see LARGE.] — en-larg'er n.

en-large-ment (ĕn-lārj'mənt) n. 1. An act of enlarging or the state of being enlarged. 2. Something that enlarges; an addition. 3. Something that has been enlarged, especially a photographic reproduction or a copy larger than the original print or negative.

en-light-en (ĕn-līt'n) v. tr. en-light-ened, en-light-en-ing, en-light-ens. 1. To give spiritual or intellectual insight to: "Enlighten the people generally, and tyranny and oppression of body and mind will vanish like evil spirits at the dawn of day" (Thomas Jefferson). 2. To give information to; inform or instruct. — en-light'en-er n.

en-light-en-ment (ĕn-līt'n-mənt) n. 1. a. The act or a means of enlightening. b. The state of being enlightened. 2. Enlightenment. A philosophical movement of the 18th century that emphasized the use of reason to scrutinize previously accepted doctrines and traditions and that brought about many humanitarian reforms. Used with the. 3. Buddhism. A blessed state in which the individual transcends desire and suffering and attains Nirvana.

en-list (ĕn-lĭst') v. en-list-ed, en-list-ing, en-lists. — v. tr. 1. To engage (persons or a person) for service in the armed forces. 2. To engage the support or cooperation of. — v. intr. 1. To enter the armed forces. 2. To participate actively in a cause or an enterprise. — en-list'ment n.

en-list-ed man (ĕn-lĭs'tĭd mǎn) n. Abbr. EM A male member of the armed forces who ranks below a commissioned officer or warrant officer.

en-listed person (ĕn-lĭs'tĭd pŭr'sən) n. A member of the armed forces who ranks below a commissioned officer or warrant officer.

en-listed woman (ĕn-lĭs'tĭd wŏm'ən) n. Abbr. EW A woman member of the armed forces who ranks below a commissioned officer or warrant officer.

en-list-ee (ĕn-lĭs'tē') n. A person who enlists or is enlisted for service in the armed forces.

en-liv-en (ĕn-lĭ'vən) v. tr. en-liv-ened, en-liv-en-ing, en-liv-ens. To make lively or spirited; animate. — en-liv'en-er n. — en-liv'en-ment n.

en masse (ŏn mǎs') adv. In one group or body; all together: The peace activists marched en masse to the capitol. [French : en, in + masse, mass.]

en-mesh (ĕn-mĕsh') also im-mesh (ĭm-) v. tr. en-meshed, en-mesh-ing, en-mesh-es. To entangle, involve, or catch in or as if in a mesh. See Synonyms at catch. — en-mesh'ment n.

en-mi-ty (ĕn'mĭ-tē) n. pl. en-mi-ties. Deep-seated, often mutual hatred. [Middle English enemite, from Old French enemistie, from Vulgar Latin inimicitās*, from Latin inimicus, enemy. See ENEMY.]

SYNONYMS: enmity, hostility, antagonism, animosity, rancor, antipathy, animus. These nouns refer to the feeling or expression of deep-seated ill will. Enmity is hatred such as might be felt for an enemy: The wartime enmity of the two nations subsided into mutual distrust when peace finally came. Hostility implies the clear expression of enmity, as in the form of belligerent attitudes or violent acts: "If we could read the secret history of our enemies, we should find in each man's life sorrow and suffering enough to disarm all hostility" (Henry Wadsworth Longfellow). Antagonism is hostility that quickly results in active resistance, opposition, or contentiousness: antagonism between the liberal and conservative elements of the party. Animosity is angry ill will that often triggers the taking of rancorous or punitive action: tried to overcome his animosity toward governmental control. Rancor suggests the harboring of hatred and resentment typically traceable to past grievances that have led to a desire for revenge: parting without rancor. Antipathy is deep-seated aversion or repugnance: a deep antipathy to social pretension. Animus is ill will of a distinctively personal nature, often based on one's prejudices or temperament: an inexplicable animus against intellectuals.

en-ne-ad (ĕn'ē-ăd') n. A group or set of nine. [Greek enneas, ennead-, from ennea, nine. See newn in Appendix.]

en·no·ble (ĕn-nō'bəl) v. tr. en·no·bled, en·no·bling, en·no·bles. 1. To make noble: “that chastity of honor... which ennobled whatever it touched, and under which vice itself lost half its evil” (Edmund Burke). 2. To confer nobility upon: ennoble a prime minister for distinguished service. [Middle English ennoblen*, from Old French ennoblir : en-, causative pref.; see EN⁻¹ + noble, noble; see NOBLE.] —en·no·ble·ment n. —en·no·bler n.

en·nui (ŏn-wē', ŏn'wē) n. Listlessness and dissatisfaction resulting from lack of interest; boredom: “The servants relieved their ennui with gambling and gossip about their masters” (John Barth). See Synonyms at boredom. [French, from Old French ennui, from ennuier, to annoy, bore, from Vulgar Latin inodiāre*, from Latin in odiō (esse), (to be) odious : in, in; see IN⁻² + odiō, ablative of odium, hate; see od- in Appendix.]

WORD HISTORY: Were they alive today, users of Classical Latin might be surprised to find that centuries later a phrase of theirs would still survive, although in the form of a single word. The phrase mihi in odiō est (literally translated as “to me in a condition of dislike or hatred is”), meaning “I hate or dislike,” gave rise to the Vulgar Latin verb ·inodiāre, “to make odious,” the source of Modern French ennuyer, “to annoy, bore.” In the Old French period a noun meaning “worry, boredom,” came from the verb ennuier. This noun in its Modern French form ennui was borrowed into English in the sense “boredom,” the English word being first recorded in 1732. People may have needed a word for boredom in the polite, cultivated world of the 18th century, but at an earlier period, around 1275, we had already borrowed the French verb ennuier, the source of our word annoy. One of the earliest instances of annoy in English is, in fact, used in the sense “to bore an audience.”

e·no·ki (ē-nōk'ē) n. Enokidake.

e·no·ki·da·ke (ĭ-nō'kē-dā'kē) n. A widely cultivated mushroom (Flammulina velutipes) native to North America and eastern Asia, having a pinlike appearance that superficially resembles the bean sprout. Also called golden needles [Japanese : enoki, Chinese nettle tree + take, bamboo, mushroom.]

e·nol (ē'nōl', ē'nōl') n. An organic compound containing a hydroxyl group bonded to a carbon atom, which in turn is doubly bonded to another carbon atom. [From -EN(E) + -OL¹.] —e·nol'ic (ē-nōl'ik) adj.

e·no·lase (ē'nə-lās', -lāz') n. An enzyme present in muscle tissue that acts in carbohydrate metabolism.

e·nol·o·gy also oe·nol·o·gy (ē-nōl'ə-jē) n. The study of wine and the making of wine; viticulture. [Greek oinos, wine + -LOGY.] —e'no·log'i·cal (ē'nə-lōj'ikəl) adj. —e·nol'ogist n.

e·nor·mi·ty (ĭ-nôr'mĭ-tē) n. pl. e·nor·mi·ties. 1. The quality of passing all moral bounds; excessive wickedness or outrageousness. 2. A monstrous offense or evil; an outrage. 3. Usage Problem. Great size; immensity: “Beyond that, [Russia’s] sheer enormity offered a defense against invaders that no European nation enjoyed” (W. Bruce Lincoln). [French énormité, from Old French, from Latin ēnormitās, from ēnormis, unusual, enormous. See ENORMOUS.]

USAGE NOTE: Enormity is frequently used to refer simply to the property of being enormous, but many would prefer that enormousness (or a synonym such as immensity) be used for this general sense and that enormity be reserved for a property that evokes a negative moral judgment: Not until the war ended and journalists were able to enter Cambodia did the world really become aware of the enormity of Pol Pot’s oppression. Fifty-nine percent of the Usage Panel rejects the use of enormity in the more general sense in the sentence At that point the engineers sat down to design an entirely new viaduct, apparently undaunted by the enormity of their task. This distinction between enormity and enormousness has not always existed historically, but nowadays many observe it. Writers who ignore it in phrases such as the enormity of the President’s election victory or the enormity of her inheritance may find their words an unintended source of amusement.

e·nor·mous (ĭ-nôr'məs) adj. 1. Very great in size, extent, number, or degree. 2. Archaic. Very wicked; heinous. [From Latin ēnormis, unusual, huge : ē-, ex-, ex- + norma, norm; see gnō- in Appendix. Sense 2, from Middle English enormious from Latin ēnormis, monstrous.] —e·nor'mous·ly adv. —e·nor'mous·ness n.

SYNONYMS: enormous, immense, huge, gigantic, colossal, mammoth, tremendous, stupendous, gargantuan, vast. These adjectives describe what is extraordinarily large. Enormous suggests a marked excess beyond the norm in size, amount, or degree: an enormous boulder; enormous expenses. Immense refers to boundless or immeasurable size or extent: an immense crowd of people; immense pleasure. Huge especially implies greatness of size or capacity: a huge wave; a huge success. Gigantic refers to size likened to that of a giant: a gigantic redwood tree; a gigantic disappointment. Colossal suggests a hugeness that elicits awe or taxes belief: colossal crumbling ruins of an ancient temple; has a colossal nerve. Mammoth is applied to something of clumsy or unwieldy hugeness: a mammoth ship; a mammoth multinational corporation. Tremendous suggests awe-inspiring or fearsome size: a tremendous monument 100 feet high; ate a tremendous meal. Stupendous implies size that astounds or defies description: an undertaking of stupendous difficulty. “The whole thing was a stupendous, incomprehensible farce” (W. Somerset Maugham). Gargantuan especially stresses greatness of capacity, as for food or pleasure: a gar- gantuan appetite. Vast refers to greatness of extent, size, area, or scope: “All the land was shrouded in one vast forest” (Theodore Roosevelt). “Of creatures, how few vast as the whale” (Herman Melville).

e·nough (ĭ-nŭf′) adj. Sufficient to meet a need or satisfy a desire; adequate: enough work to keep us all busy. See Synonyms at sufficient. — pron. An adequate number or quantity: “The Gods above should give,/They have enough and we do poorly live” (Henry David Thoreau). — adv. 1. To a satisfactory amount or degree; sufficiently: Is the fish cooked enough? 2. Very; fully; quite: We were glad enough to leave. 3. Tolerably; rather: She sang well enough, but the show was a failure. — interj. Used to express impatience or exasperation: You’ve been practicing the violin all afternoon. Enough! [Middle English enogh, from Old English genōg. See nek-² in Appendix.]

e·nounce (ĭ-nouns′) v. tr. e·nounced, e·nounc·ing, e·nounc·es. 1. To declare formally; state. 2. To pronounce clearly; enunciate. [From French énoncer, from Latin ēnūntiāre, to speak out. See ENUNCIATE.] — e·nounce·ment n.

e·now (ĭ-nou′) adj. & adv. Archaic. Enough. [Middle English, variant of enogh. See ENOUGH.]

en pas·sant (än′ pä-sän′) adv. 1. In passing; by the way; incidentally. 2. Games. Used in reference to a move in chess in which a pawn that has just completed an initial advance to its fourth rank is captured by an opponent pawn as if it had only moved to its third rank. [French : en, in + passant, passing.]

en·phy·tot·ic (ĕn′fī-tōt′ik) adj. Of or relating to a plant disease that causes a relatively constant amount of damage each year. [EN-² + -PHYT(E) + -OTIC.] — en·phy·tot′ic n.

en·plane (ĕn-plān′) also em·plane (ĕm-) v. intr. en·planed, en·plan·ing, en·planes. To board an airplane.

en prise (än′ prēz′, än) adj. Games. Exposed to possible capture. Used of a chess piece. [French : en, in + prise, grip, grasp.]

en·quire (ĕn-kwīr′) v. Variant of inquire.

en·quir·y (ĕn-kwīr′ē, ĕn′kwə-rē) n. pl. en·quir·ies. Variant of inquiry.

en·rage (ĕn-rāj′) v. tr. en·raged, en·rag·ing, en·rag·es. To put into a rage; infuriate. [Middle English enragen*, from Old French enrager : en-, causative pref.; see EN-¹ + rage, rage; see RAGE.] — en·rage·ment n.

en rap·port (än′ rə-pôr′, -pôr′, rä-) adj. Being in agreement; harmonious. [French : en, in + rapport, agreement.]

en·rapt (ĕn-räpt′) adj. Filled with or transported by delight; enraptured.

en·rap·ture (ĕn-räp′chər) v. tr. en·rap·tured, en·rap·tur·ing, en·rap·tures. To fill with rapture or delight. — en·rap·ture·ment n.

SYNONYMS: enrapture, entrance, ravish, thrill, transport. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to have a powerful, agreeable, and often overwhelming emotional effect on someone”: enraptured by the music; a view of the Alps that entranced us; a painting that ravished the eye; thrilled by their success; transported with joy.

en-rich (ĕn-rĭchʹ) v. tr. en-riched, en-rich-ing, en-rich-es. 1. To make rich or richer. 2. To make fuller, more meaningful, or more rewarding: An appreciation of art will enrich your life. 3. To add fertilizer to. 4. To add nutrients to: The dairy enriched its milk with vitamin D. 5. To add to the beauty or character of; adorn: “Glittering tears enriched her eyes” (Arnold Bennett). 6. Physics. To increase the amount of one or more radioactive isotopes in (a material, especially a nuclear fuel). [Middle English enrichen, from Old French enrichier : en-, causative pref.; see EN-¹ + riche, rich; see RICH.] —en-rich'er n.

en-rich-ment (ĕn-rĭchʹmĕnt) n. 1. The act of enriching or the state of being enriched. 2. Something that enriches.

en-robe (ĕn-rōbʹ) v. tr. en-robed, en-rob-ing, en-robes. To dress in or as if in a robe.

en-roll also en-rol (ĕn-rōlʹ) v. en-rolled, en-roll-ing, en-rolls also en-rols. — v. tr. 1. To enter or register in a roll, list, or record: enrolled the child in kindergarten; enroll the minutes of the meeting. 2. To roll or wrap up. 3. To write or print a final copy of; engross. — v. intr. To place one’s name on a roll or register; sign up: We enrolled in the army. [Middle English enrollen, from Old French enroller : en-, in; see EN-¹ + rolle, roll (from Latin rotula, little wheel); see ROLL.] —en-roll-ee' n.

en-roll-ment also en-rol-ment (ĕn-rōlʹmĕnt) n. 1. a. The act or process of enrolling. b. The state of being enrolled. 2. The number enrolled: The class has an enrollment of 27 students. 3. A record or an entry.

en-root (ĕn-rōotʹ, -rōotʹ) v. tr. en-root-ed, en-root-ing, en-roots. To establish firmly by or as if by roots; implant.

en route (ŏn rōotʹ, ĕn) adv. & adj. On or along the way: We are en route to the museum. The restaurant was en route. [French : en, on + route, route.]

ENS or Ens. abbr. Ensign.

en-san-guine (ĕn-săngʹgwĭn) v. tr. en-san-guined, en-san-guin-ing, en-san-guines. To cover or stain with or as if with blood.

En-sche-da (ĕnʹskĕ-dĕ, -skĕdĕ-) A city of eastern Netherlands near the German border. It is a textile center. Population, 144,938.

en-sconce (ĕn-skōnsʹ) v. tr. en-sconced, en-sconc-ing, en-sconc-es. 1. To settle (oneself) securely or comfortably: She ensconced herself in an armchair. 2. To place or conceal in a secure place. [EN-¹ + SCONCE¹.]

en-sem-ble (ŏn-sŏmʹbĕl) n. 1. A unit or group of complementary parts that contribute to a single effect, especially: a. A coordinated outfit or costume. b. A group of supporting musicians, singers, dancers, or actors who perform together.

2. Music. a. A work for two or more vocalists or instrumentalists. b. The vocalists or instrumentalists who perform such a work. [French, from Old French, together, from Late Latin insimul, at the same time : in-, intensive pref.; see IN⁻² + simul, at the same time; see sem⁻¹ in Appendix.]

En-se-na-da (ĕn'sə-nä'də) A city of northwest Mexico on the Pacific Ocean. It is a popular resort. Population, 120,483.

en-shrine (ĕn-shrĭn') also in-shrine (ĭn-) v. tr. en-shrined, en-shrin-ing, en-shrines. 1. To enclose in or as if in a shrine. 2. To cherish as sacred.
—en-shrine/ment n.

en-shroud (ĕn-shroud') v. tr. en-shroud-ed, en-shroud-ing, en-shrouds. To cover with or as if with a shroud: Clouds enshrouded the summit.

en-si-form (ĕn'sə-fôrm') adj. Shaped like a sword, as the leaf of an iris. [Latin ēnsis, sword + -FORM.]

en-sign (ĕn'sən, -sĭn') n. 1. A national flag displayed on ships and aircraft, often with the special insignia of a branch or unit of the armed forces. 2. A standard or banner, as of a military unit. 3. Archaic. A standard-bearer. 4. (ĕn'sən) Abbr. ENS, Ens. a. A commissioned rank in the U.S. Navy or Coast Guard that is below lieutenant junior grade. b. One who holds this rank. 5. a. A badge of office or power; an emblem: "I want the seals of power and place,/The ensigns of command,/Charged by the people's unbought grace,/To rule my native land" (John Quincy Adams). b. A sign; a token. [Middle English ensigne, from Old French enseigne, from Latin īnsignia, insignia. See INSIGNIA.]

en-si-lage (ĕn'sə-lĭj) n. 1. The process of storing and fermenting green fodder in a silo. 2. Fodder preserved in a silo; silage. — v. tr. en-si-laged, en-si-lag-ing, en-si-lag-es. To ensile. [French, from ensiler, to ensile. See ENSILE.]

en-sile (ĕn-sĭl') v. tr. en-siled, en-sil-ing, en-siles. To store (fodder) in a silo for preservation. [French ensiler, from Spanish ensilar : en-, in (from Latin in-); see EN⁻¹ + silo, silo (); see SILO.]

en-slave (ĕn-slāv') v. tr. en-slaved, en-slav-ing, en-slaves. To make into or as if into a slave. —en-slave/ment n. —en-slav'er n.

en-snare (ĕn-snâr') also in-snare (ĭn-) v. tr. en-snared, en-snar-ing, en-snares. To take or catch in or as if in a snare. See Synonyms at catch.
—en-snare/ment n. —en-snar'er n.

en-snarl (ĕn-snârl') v. tr. en-snarled, en-snarl-ing, en-snarls. To entangle in or as if in a snarl: "The Senate has contrived to ensnarl several major proposals in two legislative tangles" (New York Times).

En-sor (ĕn'sôr), James. 1860-1949. Belgian painter whose works, such as Entry of Christ into Brussels (1888), influenced surrealism and often feature nightmarish, masked faces.

en-soul (ĕn-sōl') also in-soul (ĭn-) v. tr. en-souled, en-soul-ing, en-souls.

1. To endow with a soul. 2. To place, receive, or cherish in the soul.

en-sphere (ĕn-sfĭr') also in-sphere (ĭn-) v. tr. en-sphered, en-spher-ing, en-spheres. To enclose in or as if in a sphere.

en-sta-tite (ĕn'stā-tīt') n. A glassy, usually yellowish gray variety of orthorhombic pyroxene having a magnesium silicate base, mainly MgSiO₃, usually found embedded in igneous rocks and meteorites. [Greek enstatēs, adversary (because of its refractory quality) en-, in, at, near; see EN⁻² + -statēs, one that stands; see stā- in Appendix + *-ITE*¹.]

en-sue (ĕn-sōo') v. intr. en-sued, en-su-ing, en-sues. 1. To follow as a consequence or result. See Synonyms at follow. 2. To take place subsequently. [Middle English ensuen, from Old French ensuivre, ensu-, from Vulgar Latin insequere*, from Latin insequi, to follow closely : in-, intensive pref.; see EN⁻¹ + sequi, to follow; see sek^w-1 in Appendix.]

en suite (än swēt') adv. & adj. In or as part of a series or set: a room and its furniture that were decorated en suite; en suite decorations. [French : en, in + suite, a following, sequence.]

en-sure (ĕn-shōor') v. tr. en-sured, en-sur-ing, en-sures. To make sure or certain; insure: Our precautions ensured our safety. See Usage Note at assure. [Middle English ensuren, from Anglo-Norman enseurer : Old French en-, causative pref.; see EN⁻¹ + Old French seur, secure, variant of sur; see SURE.]

ENT abbr. Medicine. Ear, nose, and throat.

ent- pref. Variant of ento-.

-ent suff. 1. a. Performing, promoting, or causing a specified action: absorbent. b. Being in a specified state or condition: bivalent. 2. One that performs, promotes, or causes a specified action: referent. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin -ēns, -ent-, present participle suff.] en-tab-la-ture (ĕn-tăb'lə-chōor') n. The upper section of a classical building, resting on the columns and constituting the architrave, frieze, and cornice. [Obsolete French, from Italian intavolatura, from intavolare, to put on a table : in-, in, on (from Latin); see EN⁻¹ + tavola, table (from Latin tabula, board).]

en-ta-ble-ment (ĕn-tă'bəl-mənt) n. A platform above the base and the dado of a pedestal. [French, from Old French : en-, in, on; see EN⁻¹ + table, table; see TABLE + -ment, -ment.]

en-tail (ĕn-tāl', ĭn-) v. tr. en-tailed, en-tail-ing, en-tails. 1. To have, impose, or require as a necessary accompaniment or consequence: an investment that entailed high risk. 2. To limit the inheritance of (property) to a specified succession of heirs. 3. To bestow or impose on a person or a specified succession of heirs. — n. 1. a. The act of entailing, especially property. b. The state of being entailed. 2. An entailed estate. 3. A predetermined order of succession, as to an estate or to an office. 4. Something transmitted as if by unalterable inheritance.

[Middle English entailen, to limit inheritance to specific heirs : en-, intensive pref.; see EN⁻¹ + taille, tail; see TAIL².] —en·tail·ment n.

en·ta·moe·ba or en·ta·me·ba (ĕn'tə-mē'bə) also en·da·moe·ba or en·da·me·ba (ĕn'də-) *n. pl. en·ta·moe·bas or en·ta·moe·bae (-bē). Any of several parasitic amoebas of the genus Entamoeba, especially E. histolytica, causing dysentery and ulceration of the colon and liver. [New Latin Entamoeba, genus name : ENT(O)- + AMOEBĀ.]*

en·tan·gle (ĕn-tăng'gəl) v. tr. en·tan·gled, en·tan·gling, en·tan·gles.

1. To twist together or entwine into a confusing mass; snarl. 2. To complicate; confuse. 3. To involve in or as if in a tangle. See Synonyms at catch.

—en·tan·gle·ment n. —en·tan·gler n.

En·teb·be (ĕn-tĕb'ə, -tĕb'ē) A town of southern Uganda on Lake Victoria. At its airport in 1976 Israeli commando forces rescued most of the hostages held aboard an Air France plane by Palestinian hijackers. Population, 21,289.

en·tel·e·chy (ĕn-tĕl'ī-kē) n. pl. en·tel·e·chies. 1. In the philosophy of Aristotle, the condition of a thing whose essence is fully realized; actuality. 2. In some philosophical systems, a vital force that directs an organism toward self-fulfillment. [Late Latin entelechia, from Greek entelekheia : entelēs, complete (en-, in; see EN⁻² + telos, completion); see k^wel⁻¹ in Appendix + ekhein, to have; see segh- in Appendix.]

en·tente (ĕn-tōnt') n. 1. An agreement between two or more governments or powers for cooperative action or policy: “the economic entente between the Soviet Union and western Europe” (Robert W. Tucker). 2. The parties to such an agreement. [French, from Old French, intent, from feminine past participle of entendre, to understand, intend. See INTEND.]

en·ter (ĕn'tər) v. en·tered, en·ter·ing, en·ters. — v. tr. 1. To come or go into: The train entered the tunnel. 2. To penetrate; pierce: The bullet entered the victim's skull. 3. To introduce; insert: She entered the probe into the patient's artery. 4. a. To become a participant, member, or part of; join: too old to enter the army; entered the discussion at a crucial moment. b. To gain admission to (a school, for example). 5. To cause to become a participant, member, or part of; enroll: entered the children in private school; entered dahlias in a flower show. 6. To embark on; begin: With Sputnik, the Soviet Union entered the space age. 7. To make a beginning in; take up: entered medicine. 8. To write or put in: We entered our names in the guest book; enters the data into the computer. 9. To place formally on record; submit: enter a plea of innocence; enter a complaint. 10. To go to or occupy in order to claim possession of (land). 11. To report (a ship or cargo) to customs. — v. intr. 1. To come or go in; make an entry: As the President entered, the band played “Hail to the Chief.” 2. To effect penetration. 3. To become a member or participant. —phrasal verbs. enter into. 1. To participate in; take an active role or interest in: enter into politics; enter into negotiations.

2. To become party to (a contract): The nations entered into a new agreement.
3. To become a component of; form a part of: Financial matters entered into the discussion. 4. To consider; investigate: The report entered into the effect of high interest rates on the market. enter on (or enter upon). 5. To set out on; begin: We enter on a new era in our history. They entered upon the most dangerous part of the journey. 6. To begin considering; take up: After discussing the budget deficit, they entered on the problem of raising taxes. 7. To take possession of: She entered upon the estate of her uncle. [Middle English entren, from Old French entrer, from Latin intrāre, from intrā, inside. See en in Appendix.] —en'ter-a-ble adj.

enter- pref. Variant of entero-.

en-ter-ic (ĕn-tĕr'ĭk) also en-ter-al (ĕn'tĕr-əl) adj. Of, relating to, or being within the intestine.

enteric fever (ĕn-tĕr'ĭk fĕ'vĕr) n. See typhoid fever.

en-ter-i-tis (ĕn'tĕ-rĭ'tĭs) n. Inflammation of the intestinal tract, especially of the small intestine.

entero- or enter- pref. Intestine: enteritis. [New Latin, from Greek enteron, intestine. See en in Appendix.]

en-ter-o-bac-ter-i-um (ĕn'tĕ-rō-băk-tĭr'ĕ-əm) n. pl. en-ter-o-bac-ter-i-a (-ĕ-ə). Any of various gram-negative rod-shaped bacteria of the family Enterobacteriaceae that includes some pathogens of plants and animals, such as the colon bacillus and salmonella.

en-ter-o-bi-a-sis (ĕn'tĕ-rō-bĭ'ə-sĭs) n. Infestation of the intestine with pinworms. [New Latin Enterobius, pinworm genus (ENTERO- + Greek bios, life); see BIO- + -IASIS.]

en-ter-o-coc-cus (ĕn'tĕ-rō-kŏk'əs) n. pl. en-ter-o-coc-ci (-kŏk'sĭ', -kŏk'ĭ'). A usually nonpathogenic streptococcus that inhabits the intestine.
—en'ter-o-coc'cal adj.

en-ter-o-coele (ĕn'tĕ-rō-sĕl') n. Embryology. The coelom formed from a pocketlike outgrowth of the wall of the archenteron, especially in echinoderms and chordates.

en-ter-o-co-li-tis (ĕn'tĕ-rō-kŏ-lĭ'tĭs, -kə-) n. Inflammation of both the small intestine and the colon.

en-ter-o-gas-trone (ĕn'tĕ-rō-găs'trŏn') n. A hormone released by the upper intestinal mucosa that inhibits gastric motility and secretion. [ENTERO- + GASTR(O)- + (HORM)ONE.]

en-ter-o-hep-a-ti-tis (ĕn'tĕ-rō-hĕp'ə-tĭ'tĭs) n. See blackhead (n., sense 2).

en-ter-o-ki-nase (ĕn'tĕ-rō-kĭ'năs', -năs', -kĭn'ăs', -ăz') n. An enzyme secreted by the upper intestinal mucosa that converts the inactive trypsinogen to the digestive enzyme trypsin.

en-ter-on (ĕn'tĕ-rŏn') n. The alimentary canal; the intestines. [Greek. See en in Appendix.]

en-ter-o-path-o-gen-ic (ĕn'tə-rō-pāth'ə-jĕn'ik) adj. Capable of causing disease in the intestinal tract. —en'ter-o-path'o-gen n.

en-ter-op-a-thy (ĕn'tə-rōp'ə-thē) n. pl. en-ter-op-a-thies. A disease of the intestinal tract.

en-ter-os-to-my (ĕn'tə-rōs'tə-mē) n. pl. en-ter-os-to-mies. A surgical procedure by which an opening is formed in the intestine through the abdominal wall. —en'ter-os'to-mal adj.

en-ter-ot-o-my (ĕn'tə-rōt'ə-mē) n. pl. en-ter-ot-o-mies. Surgical incision into the intestine.

en-ter-o-tox-in (ĕn'tə-rō-tōk'sĭn) n. A toxin produced by bacteria that is specific for intestinal cells and causes the vomiting and diarrhea associated with food poisoning.

en-ter-o-vi-rus (ĕn'tə-rō-vī'rəs) n. pl. en-ter-o-vi-rus-es. Any of a subgroup of picornaviruses, including polioviruses, coxsackieviruses, and echoviruses, that infect the gastrointestinal tract and often spread to other areas of the body, especially the nervous system. —en'ter-o-vi'ral adj.

en-ter-prise (ĕn'tər-prīz') n. 1. An undertaking, especially one of some scope, complication, and risk. 2. A business organization. 3. Industrious, systematic activity, especially when directed toward profit: Private enterprise is basic to capitalism. 4. Willingness to undertake new ventures; initiative: “Through want of enterprise and faith men are where they are, buying and selling, and spending their lives like serfs” (Henry David Thoreau). [Middle English, from Old French entreprise, from past participle of entreprendre, to undertake : entre-, between (from Latin inter-); see INTER- + prendre, to take (from Latin prendere); see ghend- in Appendix.] —en'ter-pris'er n.

En-ter-prise (ĕn'tər-prīz') A city of southeast Alabama south-southeast of Montgomery. It is a processing and manufacturing center. Population, 20,123.

enterprise zone (ĕn'tər-prīz' zōn) n. An impoverished area in which businesses are exempt from certain taxes and are given other economic advantages as an inducement to locate there and employ residents.

en-ter-pris-ing (ĕn'tər-prī'zĭng) adj. Showing initiative and willingness to undertake new projects: The enterprising children opened a lemonade stand. —en'ter-pris'ing-ly adv.

en-ter-tain (ĕn'tər-tān') v. en-ter-tained, en-ter-tain-ing, en-ter-tains.

— v. tr. 1. To hold the attention of with something amusing or diverting. See Synonyms at amuse. 2. To extend hospitality toward: entertain friends at dinner. 3. a. To consider; contemplate: entertain an idea. b. To hold in mind; harbor: entertained few illusions. 4. Archaic. To continue with; maintain.

5. Obsolete. To take into one's service; hire. 6. To give admittance to; receive. —

v. intr. 1. To show hospitality to guests. 2. To provide entertainment. [Middle English entertinen, to maintain, from Old French entretenir, from Medieval Latin intertenēre : Latin inter, among; see INTER- + Latin tenēre, to hold; see ten- in Appendix.] —en'ter·tain'er n.

en·ter·tain·ing (ĕn'tər-tā'nĭŋ) adj. Agreeably diverting; amusing: The children staged an entertaining puppet show. —en'ter·tain'ing·ly adv.

en·ter·tain·ment (ĕn'tər-tān'mənt) n. 1. The act of entertaining. 2. The art or field of entertaining. 3. Something that amuses, pleases, or diverts, especially a performance or show. 4. The pleasure afforded by being entertained; amusement: The comedian performed for our entertainment. 5. Archaic. Maintenance; support. 6. Obsolete. Employment.

en·thal·py (ĕn'thāl'pē, ĕn-thāl'-) n. pl. en·thal·pies. Symbol H A thermodynamic function of a system, equivalent to the sum of the internal energy of the system plus the product of its volume multiplied by the pressure exerted on it by its surroundings. [Greek enthalpein, to heat in (en-, in; see en-² + thalpein, to heat) + *-Y*².]

en·thrall (ĕn-thrōl') also in·thrall (ĭn-) v. tr. en·thrall·ed, en·thrall·ing, en·thralls. 1. To hold spellbound; captivate: The magic show enthralled the audience. 2. To enslave. [Middle English, to put in bondage : en-, causative pref.; see EN⁻¹ + thrall, slave; see THRALL.] —en·thrall'ing·ly adv. —en·thrall'ment n.

en·throne (ĕn-thrōn') also in·throne (ĭn-) v. tr. en·thron·ed, en·thron·ing, en·thrones. 1. a. To seat on a throne. b. To invest with sovereign power or with the authority of high office. 2. To raise to a lofty position; exalt.

—en·throne'ment n.

en·thuse (ĕn-thōōz') v. en·thused, en·thus·ing, en·thus·es. Usage Problem. — v. tr. To cause to become enthusiastic. — v. intr. To show or express enthusiasm: "Princess Anne... enthused over Sarah Ferguson—'a very, very nice girl'" (Georgina Howell). [Back-formation from ENTHUSIASM.]

USAGE NOTE: The verb enthuse is not well accepted; its use in the sentence The majority leader enthused over his party's gains was rejected by 76 percent of the Usage Panel in an earlier survey. This lack of acceptance of enthuse is often attributed to its status as a back-formation: such words often meet with disapproval on their first appearance and only gradually become accepted over time. But other back-formations such as diagnose (a back-formation from diagnosis that was first recorded in 1861) and donate (first cited in 1785 as a back-formation from donation) are considered unimpeachable English words. This situation suggests that in truth the continued lack of acceptance of enthuse, first recorded in 1827, may have less to do with doubts about its lineage than with shortcomings in its character. Unlike enthusiasm, which denotes an internal emotional state, enthuse denotes either the external expression of emotion, as in She enthused over attending the Oscar ceremonies, or the inducement of enthusiasm by an external source, as in He was so enthused about the miracle diet pills that he agreed to do a testimonial for their television ad. It is possible that a distaste for this emphasis on external emotional display and manipulation is for some people the source of an unease that manifests itself in a distaste for the word itself. See Usage Note at intuit.

en·thu·si·asm (ĕn-thōō'zē-ăz'əm) n. 1. Great excitement for or interest in a subject or cause. 2. A source or cause of great excitement or interest. 3. Archaic. a. Ecstasy arising from supposed possession by a god. b. Religious fanaticism. [Late Latin enthūsiasmus, from Greek enthousiasmos, from enthousiazein, to be inspired by a god, from entheos, possessed : en-, in; see EN-² + theos, god; see dhēs- in Appendix.]

WORD HISTORY: When the English philosopher Henry More stated in a work published in 1660 that “If ever Christianity be exterminated, it will be by Enthusiasme,” he clearly used the word differently from the way we do now. He was also using a meaning that differed from the first sense, “possession by a god,” recorded in English (1603). Enthusiasm and this sense of the word go back to the Greek word enthousiasmos, which ultimately comes from the adjective entheos, “having the god within,” formed from en-, “in, within,” and theos, “god.” Henry More in 1660 was referring to belief, either mistaken or unsupported by evidence, in one’s own inspiration by the Christian God. Enthusiasm, as now most frequently used, has become secularized and at times weakened, so that one can speak of an enthusiasm for fast cars.

en·thu·si·ast (ĕn-thōō'zē-ăst') n. 1. One who is filled with enthusiasm; one who is ardently absorbed in an interest or pursuit: a baseball enthusiast. 2. A zealot; a fanatic. See Synonyms at fanatic. [Greek enthousiastēs, possessed person, from enthousiazein, to be inspired. See ENTHUSIASM.]

en·thu·si·as·tic (ĕn-thōō'zē-ăst'ĭk) adj. Having or demonstrating enthusiasm. —en·thu'si·as'ti·cal·ly adv.

en·thy·meme (ĕn'thā-mēm') n. Logic. A syllogism in which one of the premises or the conclusion is not stated explicitly. [Latin enthymēma, from Greek enthumēma, a rhetorical argument, from enthumeisthai, to consider : en-, in; see EN-² + thumos, mind.]

en·tice (ĕn-tīs') v. tr. en·ticed, en·tic·ing, en·tic·es. To attract by arousing hope or desire; lure: The promise of higher pay enticed me into the new job. See Synonyms at lure. [Middle English enticen, from Old French enticier, to instigate, possibly from Vulgar Latin intītiāre*, to set afire : Latin in-, in; see EN-¹ + Latin tītiō, firebrand.] —en·tice'ment n. —en·tic'er n. —en·tic'ing·ly adv.

en·tire (ĕn-tīr') adj. 1. Having no part excluded or left out; whole: I read the entire book. See Synonyms at whole. 2. With no reservations or limitations; complete: gave us his entire attention. 3. All in one piece; intact. 4. Of one piece; continuous. 5. Not castrated. 6. Botany. Not having an indented margin: an entire leaf. 7. Unmixed or unalloyed; pure or homogenous. — n. 1. The whole; the entirety. 2. An uncastrated horse; a stallion. [Middle English, from Old French entier, from Latin integrum, neuter of integer. See tag- in Appendix.] —en·tire/ness n.

en·tire·ly (ĕn·tīr'lē) adv. 1. Wholly; completely: entirely satisfied with the meal. 2. Solely or exclusively: He was entirely to blame.

en·tire·ty (ĕn·tī'rī-tē, -tīr'tē) n. pl. en·tire·ties. 1. The state of being entire or complete; wholeness: To appreciate the sonata, one must hear it in its entirety. 2. The entire amount or extent; the whole: “We rarely remember the entirety of the plot” (Anthony Burgess).

en·ti·tle (ĕn·tīt'l) v. tr. en·ti·tled, en·ti·tling, en·ti·tles. 1. To give a name or title to. 2. To furnish with a right or claim to something: The coupon entitles the bearer to a 25 percent savings. Every citizen is entitled to equal protection under the law. [Middle English entitlen, from Old French entiteler, from Medieval Latin intitulāre: Latin in-, provide with; see EN⁻¹ + Latin titulus, title.] —en·ti·tle·ment n.

entitlement program (ĕn·tī'tl-mənt prō'grām') n. A government program that guarantees and provides benefits to a particular group: “cut back on the cost-of-living increases in such entitlement programs as Social Security, civil-service retirement pay, and veterans' pensions” (Elizabeth Drew).

en·ti·ty (ĕn'tī-tē) n. pl. en·ti·ties. 1. Something that exists as a particular and discrete unit: Persons and corporations are equivalent entities under the law. 2. The fact of existence; being. 3. The existence of something considered apart from its properties. [Medieval Latin entitās, from Latin ēns, ent- present participle of esse, to be. See es- in Appendix.]

ento- or ent- pref. Inside; within: entozoan. [New Latin, from Greek entos, within. See en in Appendix.]

en·to·blast (ĕn'tə-blāst') n. Any of the blastomeres of an embryo from which the endoderm develops.

en·to·derm (ĕn'tə-dûrm') n. Variant of endoderm.

en·toil (ĕn-toil') v. tr. en·toiled, en·toil·ing, en·toils. Archaic. To ensnare; entrap.

entom. abbr. Entomology.

en·tomb (ĕn-tōm') v. tr. en·tomb·ed, en·tomb·ing, en·tomb·s. 1. To place in or as if in a tomb or grave. 2. To serve as a tomb for. —en·tomb/ment n.

entomo- pref. Insect: entomology. [French, from Greek entomon, insect, from neuter of entomos, cut in two (from its segmented body), from entemnein, to cut up: en-, in; see EN⁻² + temnein, to cut; see tem- in Appendix.]

en·to·mol·o·gy (ĕn'tə-mōl'ə-jē) n. Abbr. entom., entomol. The scientific study of insects. —en'to·mo·log'ic (-mə-lōj'ik), en'to·mo·log'i·cal (-i-kəl) adj. —en'to·mo·log'i·cal·ly adv. —en'to·mol'o·gist n.

en·to·moph·a·gous (ĕn'tə-mōf'ə-gəs) adj. Feeding on insects; insectivorous.

en·to·moph·i·lous (ĕn'tə-mōf'ə-ləs) adj. Botany. Pollinated by insects. —en'to·moph'i·ly n.

en·to·mos·tra·can (ĕn'tə-mōs'trə-kən) n. Any of various small crustaceans formerly constituting the subclass Entomostraca. [From New Latin Entomost-raca, former subclass name : ENTOM(O)- + Greek ostraka, pl. of ostrakon, shell; see OSTRACOD.]

en·tou·rage (ōn'tōō-rāzh') n. 1. A group of attendants or associates; a retinue. 2. One's environment or surroundings. [French, from entourer, to surround, from Old French entour, surroundings : en-, in; see EN-¹ + tour, circuit; see TOUR.]

en·to·zo·an (ĕn'tə-zō'ən) n. pl. en·to·zo·a (-zō'ə). Any of various animals, such as tapeworms, that live within other animals, usually as parasites. —en'to·zo'ic adj.

en·tr'acte (ōn'trākt', äN-trākt') n. 1. a. The interval between two acts of a theatrical performance. b. Another performance, as of music or dance, provided between two acts of a theatrical performance. 2. An interval likened to the one occurring between two acts of a drama. [French : entre, between (from Latin inter); see INTER- + acte, act (from Old French); see ACT.]

en·trails (ĕn'trālz', -trəlz) pl.n. 1. The internal organs, especially the intestines; viscera. 2. Internal parts: "sidewalk repair shops, where the entrails of bicycles and cars and motorcycles are spread, mechanics poring over them" (Alan Cowell). [From Middle English entraille, from Old French, from Medieval Latin intrālia, alteration of Latin interānea, from neuter pl. of interāneus, internal, from inter, within. See en in Appendix.]

en·train¹ (ĕn-trān') v. tr. en·trained, en·train·ing, en·trains. 1. To pull or draw along after itself. 2. Chemistry. To carry (suspended particles, for example) along in a current. [French entrainer, from Old French : en-, in; see EN-¹ + trainer, to drag; see TRAIN.] —en·train'er n. —en·train'ment n.

en·train² (ĕn-trān') v. en·trained, en·train·ing, en·trains. — v. intr. To go aboard a train. — v. tr. To put aboard a train.

en·trance¹ (ĕn'trəns) n. 1. The act or an instance of entering. 2. A means or point by which to enter. 3. Permission or power to enter; admission: gained entrance to medical school. 4. The point, as in a musical score, at which a performer is to begin. 5. The first entry of an actor into a scene. [Middle English entraunce, right to enter, from Old French, from entrer, to enter. See ENTER.]

en·trance² (ĕn-trāns′) v. tr. en·tranced, en·tranc·ing, en·tranc·es. 1. To put into a trance. 2. To fill with delight, wonder, or enchantment: a child who was entranced by a fairy tale. See Synonyms at charm. See Synonyms at enrap·ture. —en·trance′ment n. —en·tranc′ing·ly adv.

en·trance·way (ĕn′trāns-wā′) n. An entryway.

en·trant (ĕn′trānt) n. One that enters, especially one that enters a competition. [French, from present participle of entrer, to enter, from Old French. See ENTER.]

en·trap (ĕn-trāp′) v. tr. en·trapped, en·trap·ping, en·traps. 1. To catch in or as if in a trap. 2. a. To lure into danger, difficulty, or a compromising situation. See Synonyms at catch. b. To lure into performing a previously or otherwise un contemplated illegal act. [French entraper, from Old French : en-, in; see EN-¹ + trape, trap (of Germanic origin).] —en·trap′ment n.

en·treat (ĕn-trēt′) also in·treat (ĭn-) v. en·treat·ed, en·treat·ing, en·treats. — v. tr. 1. To make an earnest request of. 2. To ask for earnestly; petition for. 3. Archaic. To deal with; treat. — v. intr. To make an earnest request or petition; plead. See Synonyms at beg. [Middle English entreten, from Anglo-Norman entreter : en-, causative pref.; see EN-¹ + treter, to treat; see TREAT.] —en·treat′ing·ly adv. —en·treat′ment n.

en·treat·y (ĕn-trē′tē) n. pl. en·treat·ies. An earnest request or petition; a plea.

en·tre·chat (ĕn′trə-shā′) n. A jump in ballet during which the dancer crosses the legs a number of times, alternately back and forth. [French, earlier entrechas, alteration (influenced by entre, between, and chasse, chase from Old French chacier, to chase); see CHASE¹, of Italian (capriola) intrecciata, intricate (caper), feminine past participle of intrecciare, to intertwine : in-, in (from Latin); see IN-² + treccia, tress; see TRESS.]

en·tre·côte (än′trə-kōt′) n. A cut of steak taken from between the ribs. [French : entre, between (from Latin inter); see INTER- + côte, rib (from Latin costa); see COSTA.]

en·trée or en·tree (ĕn′trā, ĕn-trā′) n. 1. a. The main dish of a meal. b. A dish served in formal dining immediately before the main course or between two principal courses. 2. a. The act of entering. b. The power, permission, or liberty to enter; admittance. [French, from Old French. See ENTRY.]

en·tre·mets (ĕn′trə-mā′, -mĕ′) n. pl. en·tre·mets (-māz′, -mĕ′). A side dish, such as a relish or dessert, served in addition to the principal course. [Middle English entremetes, from Old French entremes, entremets : entre, between (from Latin inter); see INTER- + mes, mets, dish; see MESS.]

en·trench (ĕn-trĕnch′) also in·trench (ĭn-) v. en·trenched, en·trench·ing, en·trench·es. — v. tr. 1. To provide with a trench, especially for the purpose of fortifying or defending. 2. To fix firmly or securely: arguments that only entrench you more firmly in error. — v. intr. 1. To dig or occupy a trench. 2. To encroach, infringe, or trespass. —en·trench′ment n.

en-tre-pôt (ɔ̃n'trə-pō') n. 1. A place where goods are stored or deposited and from which they are distributed. 2. A trading or market center. [French, from entreposer, to store : entre, in, among (from Latin inter-); see INTER- + poser, to place (from Old French); see POSE¹.]

en-tre-pre-neur (ɔ̃n'trə-prə-nûr', -nōōr') n. A person who organizes, operates, and assumes the risk for a business venture. [French, from Old French, from entreprendre, to undertake. See ENTERPRISE.] —en'tre-pre-neur/i-al adj. —en'tre-pre-neur/i-al-ism, en'tre-pre-neur/ism n. —en'tre-pre-neur/-ship' n.

en-tre-sol (ɛ̃n'tər-sōl', ɛ̃n'trə-, ɔ̃n-trə-sōl') n. The floor just above the ground floor of a building; a mezzanine. [French : entre-, between (from Latin inter-); see INTER- + sol, floor (from Latin solum).]

en-tropy (ɛ̃n'trə-pē) n. pl. en-tropies. 1. Symbol S For a closed thermodynamic system, a quantitative measure of the amount of thermal energy not available to do work. 2. A measure of the disorder or randomness in a closed system. 3. A measure of the number of bits necessary to transmit a message as a function of the probability that the message will consist of a specific set of symbols. 4. A hypothetical tendency for all matter and energy in the universe to evolve toward a state of inert uniformity. 5. Inevitable and steady deterioration of a system or society. [German Entropie : Greek en-, in; see EN-² + Greek tropē, transformation; see trep- in Appendix.] —en-tro'pic (ɛ̃n-trō'pik, -trōp'ik) adj. —en-tro'pi-cal-ly adv.

en-trust (ɛ̃n-trüst') also in-trust (ɪn-) v. tr. en-trust-ed, en-trust-ing, en-trusts. 1. To give over (something) to another for care, protection, or performance: "He still has the aura of the priest to whom you would entrust your darkest secrets" (James Carroll). 2. To give as a trust to (someone): entrusted his aides with the task. See Synonyms at commit.

en-try (ɛ̃n'trē) n. pl. en-tries. 1. a. The act or an instance of entering. b. The privilege or right of entering. 2. A means or place by which to enter. 3. a. The inclusion or insertion of an item, as in a record: made an entry in the ledger. b. An item entered in this way: a diary full of interesting entries. 4. a. An entry word, as in a dictionary; a headword. b. A headword along with its related text. 5. One entered in a competition: The magazine received 400 entries for its poetry contest. [Middle English entre, from Old French entree, from feminine past participle of entrer, to enter. See ENTER.]

en-try-lev-el (ɛ̃n'trē-lěv'əl) adj. Appropriate for or accessible to one who is inexperienced in a field or new to a market: an entry-level job in advertising; an entry-level computer.

en-try-way (ɛ̃n'trē-wā') n. A passage or opening by which to enter.

entry word (ɛ̃n'trē wûrd) n. See headword (n., sense 1).

en·twine (ĕn-twīn') also in·twine (ĭn-) v. en·twined, en·twin·ing, en·twines. — v. tr. To twine around or together: The ivy entwined the column. — v. intr. To twine or twist together. — en·twine'ment n.

en·twist (ĕn-twĭst') also in·twist (ĭn-) v. tr. en·twist·ed, en·twist·ing, en·twists. To twist together; entwine.

e·nu·cle·ate (ĭ-nōō'klē-āt', ĭ-nyōō'-) v. tr. e·nu·cle·at·ed, e·nu·cle·at·ing, e·nu·cle·ates. 1. Medicine. To remove (a tumor or an eye, for example) whole from an enveloping cover or sac. 2. Biology. To remove the nucleus of. 3. Archaic. To explain; elucidate. — adj. (-ĭt, -āt') Biology. Lacking a nucleus. [Latin ēnucleāre, ēnucleāt-, to take out the kernel : ē-, ex-, ex- + nucleus, kernel; see NUCLEUS.] — e·nu'cle-a'tion n. — e·nu'cle-a'tor n.

E·nu·gu (ā-nōō'gōō) A city of southeast Nigeria east of the Niger River. It developed as a coal-mining center in the early 1900's. Population, 222,600.

e·nu·mer·a·ble (ĭ-nōō'mər-ə-bəl, ĭ-nyōō'-) adj. Denumerable.

e·nu·mer·ate (ĭ-nōō'mə-rāt', ĭ-nyōō'-) v. tr. e·nu·mer·at·ed, e·nu·mer·at·ing, e·nu·mer·ates. 1. To count off or name one by one; list: A spokesperson enumerated the strikers' demands. 2. To determine the number of; count. [Latin ēnumerāre, ēnumerāt-, to count out : ē-, ex-, ex- + numerus, number; see nem- in Appendix.] — e·nu'mer-a'tion n. — e·nu'mer-a'tive (-mər-rā'tĭv, -mər-ə) adj. — e·nu'mer-a'tor n.

e·nun·ci·ate (ĭ-nŭn'sē-āt') v. e·nun·ci·at·ed, e·nun·ci·at·ing, e·nun·ci·ates. — v. tr. 1. To pronounce; articulate. 2. To state or set forth precisely or systematically: enunciate a doctrine. 3. To announce; proclaim. — v. intr. To make articulate sounds. [Latin ēnūntiāre, ēnūntiāt- : ē-, ex-, ex- + nūntiāre, to announce (from nūntius, messenger); see neu- in Appendix.] — e·nun'ci-a·ble (-ə-bəl) adj. — e·nun'ci-a'tion n. — e·nun'ci-a'tive (-sē-ā'tĭv, -sē-ə-tĭv) adj. — e·nun'ci-a'tive·ly adv. — e·nun'ci-a'tor n.

en·ure (ĭn-yōōr') v. Variant of inure.

en·u·re·sis (ĕn'yə-rē'sĭs) n. The uncontrolled or involuntary discharge of urine. [New Latin, from Greek enourein, to urinate in : en-, in; see EN-² + ourein, to urinate.] — en'u-ret'ic (-rĕt'ĭk) adj.

en·vel·op (ĕn-vĕl'əp) v. tr. en·vel·oped, en·vel·op·ing, en·vel·ops. 1. To enclose or encase completely with or as if with a covering: "Accompanying the darkness, a stillness envelops the city" (Curtis Wilkie). 2. To attack (an enemy's flank). [Middle English envolupen, to be involved in, from Old French envoluper, envoloper : en-, in; see EN-¹ + voloper, to wrap up.] — en·vel'op·er n. — en·vel'op·ment n.

en·ve·lope (ĕn'və-lōp', ōn'-) n. 1. A flat, folded paper container, especially for a letter. 2. Something that envelops; a wrapping. 3. Biology. An enclosing structure or cover, such as a membrane or the outer coat of a virus. 4. The bag containing the gas in a balloon or an airship. 5. The set of limitations within which a technological system, especially an aircraft, can perform safely and effectively.

6. The coma of a comet. 7. Mathematics. A curve or surface that is tangent to every one of a family of curves or surfaces. —idiom. push the envelope. To increase the operating capabilities of a technological system. [French enveloppe, from envelopper, to envelop, from Old French envoloper. See ENVELOP.]

en·ven·om (ĕn·vĕn'əm) v. tr. en·ven·omed, en·ven·om·ing, en·ven·oms.

1. To make poisonous or noxious. 2. To embitter. [Middle English envenimen, to poison, from Old French envenimer : en-, cover with; see EN-¹ + venim, venom; see VENOM.]

En·ver Pa·sha (ĕn'vĕr pä'shä), 1881-1922. Turkish soldier and politician who led the Young Turks in the revolution of 1908, served as minister of war during World War I, and after Turkey's surrender fled to Russia, where he was killed in an insurrection.

en·vi·a·ble (ĕn'vĕ-ə-bəl) adj. So desirable as to arouse envy: “the enviable English quality of being able to be mute without unrest” (Henry James).

—en'vi·a·bly adv.

en·vi·ous (ĕn'vĕ-əs) adj. 1. Feeling, expressing, or characterized by envy: “At times he regarded the wounded soldiers in an envious way... He wished that he, too, had a wound, a red badge of courage” (Stephen Crane). See Synonyms at jealous.

2. Archaic. Eager to emulate; emulous. —en'vi·ous·ly adv. —en'vi·ous·ness n.

en·vi·ron (ĕn·vī'rən, -vī'ərən) v. tr. en·vi·roned, en·vi·ron·ing, en·vi·rons.

To encircle; surround. See Synonyms at surround. [Middle English envirounen, from Old French environner, from environ, round about : en-, in; see EN-¹ + viron, circle (from virer, to turn); see VEER¹.]

en·vi·ron·ment (ĕn·vī'rən-mĕnt, -vī'ərən-) n. 1. The circumstances or conditions that surround one; surroundings. 2. The totality of circumstances surrounding an organism or a group of organisms, especially: a. The combination of external physical conditions that affect and influence the growth, development, and survival of organisms: “We shall never understand the natural environment until we see it as a living organism” (Paul Brooks). b. The complex of social and cultural conditions affecting the nature of an individual or a community.

3. An artistic or theatrical work that surrounds or involves the audience.

en·vi·ron·men·tal (ĕn·vī'rən-mĕn'tl, -vī'ərən) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or associated with the environment. 2. Relating to or being concerned with the ecological impact of altering the environment. 3. Medicine. Of or relating to potentially harmful factors originating in the environment: environmental illness.

—en·vi'ron·men'tal·ly adv.

en·vi·ron·men·tal·ism (ĕn·vī'rən-mĕn'tl-ĭz'əm, -vī'ərən-) n. 1. Advocacy for or work toward protecting the natural environment from destruction or pollution. 2. The theory that environment rather than heredity is the primary influence on intellectual growth and cultural development.

—en·vi·ron·men·tal·ist n.

en·vi·rons (ĕn-vī'rənz, -vī'ərnz) pl.n. 1. A surrounding area, especially of a city. 2. Surroundings; environment. [French, from Old French, pl. of environ, circuit, from environ, round about. See ENVIRON.]

en·vis·age (ĕn-vīz'ij) v. tr. en·vis·aged, en·vis·ag·ing, en·vis·ag·es. 1. To conceive an image or a picture of, especially as a future possibility: envisaged a world at peace. 2. To consider or regard in a certain way. [French envisager : Old French en-, in; see EN-¹ + Old French visage, face; see VISAGE.]

en·vi·sion (ĕn-vīzh'ən) v. tr. en·vi·sioned, en·vi·sion·ing, en·vi·sions. To picture in the mind; imagine.

en·voi (ĕn'voi', ōn'-) n. Variant of envoy².

en·voy¹ (ĕn'voi', ōn'-) n. 1. A representative of a government who is sent on a special diplomatic mission. 2. A minister plenipotentiary assigned to a foreign embassy, ranking next below the ambassador. 3. A messenger; an agent. [French envoyé, messenger, from past participle of envoyer, to send, from Old French envoier, from Late Latin inviāre, to be on the way : Latin in-, in, on; see EN-¹ + Latin via, way; see wegh- in Appendix.]

en·voy² also en·voi (ĕn'voi', ōn'-) n. 1. A short closing stanza in certain verse forms, such as the ballade or sestina, dedicating the poem to a patron or summarizing its main ideas. 2. The concluding portion of a prose work or a play. [Middle English envoie, from Old French, a sending away, conclusion, from envoier, to send. See ENVOY¹.]

en·vy (ĕn'vē) n. pl. en·vies. 1. a. A feeling of discontent and resentment aroused by and in conjunction with desire for the possessions or qualities of another. b. The object of such feeling: Their new pool made them the envy of their neighbors. 2. Obsolete. Malevolence. — v. tr. en·vied, en·vy·ing, en·vies. 1. To feel envy toward. 2. To regard with envy. [Middle English envie, from Old French, from Latin invidia, from invidus, envious, from invidēre, to look at with envy : in-, in, on; see EN-¹ + vidēre, to see; see weid- in Appendix. V., from Middle English envien from Old French envier, from Latin invidēre.]

—en·vi·er n. —en·vy·ing·ly adv.

SYNONYMS: envy, begrudge, covet. These verbs mean to feel resentful or painful desire for another's advantages or possessions. Envy is wider in range than the others since it combines discontent, resentment, and desire: "When I peruse the conquered fame of heroes and the victories of mighty generals, I do not envy the generals" (Walt Whitman). Begrudge stresses ill will and reluctance to acknowledge another's right or claim: Why begrudge him his success? Covet stresses desire, especially a secret or culpable longing, for something to which one has no right: "as thorough an Englishman as ever coveted his neighbor's goods" (Charles Kingsley).

en·wind (ĕn-wĭnd') also in·wind (ĭn-) v. tr. en·wound (-wound'), en·wind·ing, en·winds. To wind around or about.

en·womb (ĕn-wōom') v. tr. en·wombed, en·womb·ing, en·wombs. To enclose in or as if in a womb.

en·wound (ĕn-wound') v. Past tense and past participle of enwind.

en·wrap (ĕn-răp') also in·wrap (ĭn-) v. tr. en·wrapped, en·wrap·ping, en·wraps. 1. a. To wrap up; enclose. b. To envelop. 2. To absorb completely; engross: I was enwrapped by the fascinating tale.

en·wreath (ĕn-rĕth') also in·wreath (ĭn-) v. tr. en·wreathed, en·wreath·ing, en·wreathes. To surround with or as if with a wreath.

en·zo·ot·ic (ĕn'zō-ōt'ĭk) adj. Affecting or peculiar to animals of a specific geographic area. Used of a disease. — n. An enzootic disease. [EN⁻² + ZO(O)- + -OTIC.]

en·zyme (ĕn'zĭm) n. Any of numerous proteins or conjugated proteins produced by living organisms and functioning as biochemical catalysts. [German Enzym, from Medieval Greek enzumos, leavened : Greek en-, in; see EN⁻² + Greek zumē, leaven, yeast.] — en'zy·mat'ic (-zə-măt'ĭk), en·zy'mic (-zĭ'mĭk, -zĭm'ĭk) adj. — en'zy·mat'i·cal·ly, en·zy'mi·cal·ly adv.

en·zy·mol·o·gy (ĕn'zə-mōl'ə-jĕ) n. The branch of science that deals with the biochemical nature and activity of enzymes. — en'zy·mol'o·gist n.

EO abbr. Executive order.

e.o. abbr. Latin. Ex officio (by virtue of office).

eo- pref. Most primitive; earliest: eohippus. [From Greek ēōs, dawn. See aus- in Appendix.]

E·o·cene (ĕ'ə-sĕn') adj. Of, relating to, or designating the geologic time, rock series, sedimentary deposits, and fossils of the second oldest of the five major epochs of the Tertiary Period, extending from the end of the Paleocene to the beginning of the Oligocene, and characterized by the rise of mammals. — n. 1. The Eocene Epoch. 2. The deposits of the Eocene Epoch.

e·o·hip·pus (ĕ'ō-hĭp'əs) n. A small, herbivorous, extinct mammal of the genus Hyracotherium (or Eohippus) from the Eocene Epoch of the western United States, having four-toed front feet and three-toed hind feet and related ancestrally to the horse. [New Latin : EO- + Greek hippos, horse; see ekwo- in Appendix.]

e·o·li·an also ae·o·li·an (ĕ-ō'lĕ-ən, ĕ-ōl'yən) adj. Relating to, caused by, or carried by the wind. [From AEOLUS.]

e·o·lith (ĕ'ə-lĭth') n. A crude stone artifact, such as a flint.

E·o·lith·ic (ĕ'ə-lĭth'ĭk) adj. Of or relating to the postulated earliest period of human culture preceding the Lower Paleolithic.

E·o·lus (ē-ō'ləs), Mount. A peak, 4,295.3 m (14,083 ft) high, in the San Juan Mountains of southwest Colorado.

e.o.m. abbr. End of month.

e·on also ae·on (ē'ōn', ē'ən) n. 1. An indefinitely long period of time; an age. 2. The longest division of geologic time, containing two or more eras. [Late Latin aeōn, from Greek aiōn. See aiw- in Appendix.]

e·o·ni·an also ae·o·ni·an (ē-ō'nī-ən) adj. Of, relating to, or constituting an eon.

E·os (ē'ōs') n. Greek Mythology. The goddess of the dawn. [Greek Ēōs, from ēōs, dawn. See aus- in Appendix.]

e·o·sin (ē'ə-sən) n. 1. A red crystalline powder, C₂₀H₈O₅Br₄, used in textile dyeing and ink manufacturing and in coloring gasoline. 2. The red sodium or potassium salt of this powder, used in biology to stain cells. [Greek ēōs, dawn (from its color); see aus- in Appendix + -IN.]

e·o·sin·o·phil (ē'ə-sīn'ə-fīl') also e·o·sin·o·phile (-fīl') n. 1. A type of white blood cell found in vertebrate blood, containing cytoplasmic granules that are easily stained by eosin or other acid dyes. 2. A microorganism, cell, or histological element easily stained by eosin or other acid dyes. —e'·o·sin'·o·phil', e'·o·sin'·o·phil'ic, e'·o·si·noph'i·lous (ē'ō-sī-nōf'ə-ləs) adj.

e·o·sin·o·phil·i·a (ē'ə-sīn'ə-fīl'ē-ə) n. An increase in the number of eosinophils in the blood.

-eous suff. Having the nature of; resembling: gaseous. [Middle English, from Old French -eux, -eus (from Latin -ōsus), and from Latin -eus.]

Ep abbr. Bible. Ephesians.

EP abbr. 1. European plan. 2. Extended play.

ep- pref. Variant of epi-.

EPA abbr. Environmental Protection Agency.

e·pact (ē'pākt') n. The period of time necessary to bring the solar calendar into harmony with the lunar calendar. [French épacte, from Late Latin epacta, from Greek epaktē (hēmera), intercalary (day), feminine of epaktos, brought in, inserted, from epagein, to bring in, introduce : ep-, epi-, epi- + agein, to lead; see ag- in Appendix.]

E·pam·i·non·das (ī-pām'ə-nōn'dəs), 418?-362 B.C. Theban general and politician who defeated Spartan forces at Leuctra (371), thereby ending Sparta's military dominance of the Greek states.

ep·ar·chy (ēp'är'kē) n. pl. ep·ar·chies. A diocese of an Eastern Orthodox Church. [Greek eparkhia, provincial government, from eparkhein, to rule over : ep-, epi-, epi- + arkhein, to rule.]

ep·au·let also ep·au·lette (ēp'ə-lēt', ēp'ə-lēt') n. A shoulder ornament, especially a fringed strap worn on military uniforms. [French épaulette, diminutive of

épaule, shoulder, from Old French espaule, from Late Latin spatula, shoulder blade. See ESPALIER.]

é·pée also e·pee (ā-pā', ěp'ā) n. 1. A fencing sword with a bowl-shaped guard and a long, narrow, fluted blade that has no cutting edge and tapers to a blunted point. 2. The art or sport of fencing with this sword. [French, from Old French espee, from Latin spatha, broad double-edged sword. See SPATULA.] —é·pée'ist n.

ep·ei·rog·e·ny (ĕp'ī-rōj'ə-nē) n. pl. ep·ei·rog·e·nies. Uplift or depression of the earth's crust, affecting large areas of land or ocean bottom. [Greek ēpeiros, continent + -GENY.] —e·pei'ro·gen'ic (ī-pī'rō-jĕn'ĭk) adj.

—e·pei'ro·gen'i·cal·ly adv.

e·pen·the·sis (ī-pĕn'thĭ-sĭs) n. pl. e·pen·the·ses (-sēz'). Linguistics. The insertion of a sound in the middle of a word, as in Middle English thunder from Old English thunor. [Late Latin, from Greek, from epentithenai, to insert : ep-, epi-, epi- + en-, in; see EN⁻² + tithenai, to place; see dhē- in Appendix.]

—ep'en·thet'ic (ĕp'ĭn-thĕt'ĭk) adj.

e·pergne (ī-pŭrn', ā-pārn') n. A large table centerpiece consisting of a frame with extended arms or branches supporting holders, as for flowers, fruit, or sweetmeats. [Perhaps alteration of French épargne, a saving, from épargner, to save, from Old French espargnier, of Germanic origin.]

É·per·nay (ā-pĕr-nā') A city of north-central France on the Marne River east-northeast of Paris. It is a production and distributing center for the champagne wines of the district. Population, 27,668.

ep·ex·e·ge·sis (ĕp-ĕk'sə-jĕ'sĭs) n. Additional explanation or explanatory material. [Greek epexēgēsis, from epexēgeisthai, to explain in detail : ep-, epi-, epi- + exēgeisthai, to explain; see EXEGESIS.] —ep·ex'e·get'ic (-jĕt'ĭk), ep·ex'e·get'i·cal adj. —ep·ex'e·get'i·cal·ly adv.

Eph. abbr. Bible. Ephesians.

e·phah also e·pha (ē'fə, ěf'ā) n. An ancient Hebrew unit of dry measure, equal to 10 homer or about one bushel (35 liters). [Hebrew 'ēpā, probably from Egyptian 'pt.]

e·phebe (ĕf'ĕb', ĭ-fĕb') also e·phe·bus (ī-fĕ'bəs) n. pl. e·phebes also e·phe·bi (ī-fĕ'bĭ). A youth between 18 and 20 years of age in ancient Greece.

[Latin ephēbus, from Greek ephēbos : ep-, epi-, epi- + hēbē, early manhood.]

—e·phe'bic adj.

e·phed·rine (ī-fĕd'rĭn, ěf'ĭ-drĕn') n. A white, odorless, powdered or crystalline alkaloid, C₁₀H₁₅NO, isolated from shrubs of the genus Ephedra or made synthetically. It is used in the treatment of allergies and asthma. [Latin ephedra, horsetail (from Greek ephedros, sitting upon : ep-, epi-, epi- + hedra, seat); see sed- in Appendix + -INE².]

e·phem·er·a (ī-fĕm'ər-ə) n. A plural of ephemeron.

e·phem·er·al (ĭ-fĕm'ər-əl) adj. 1. Lasting for a markedly brief time: “There remain some truths too ephemeral to be captured in the cold pages of a court transcript or... opinion” (Irving R. Kaufman). 2. Living or lasting only for a day, as certain plants or insects do. See Synonyms at transient. — n. A markedly short-lived thing. [From Greek ephēmeros: ep-, epi-, epi- + hēmera, day.]

—e·phem'·er·al'·i·ty, e·phem'·er·al·ness n. —e·phem'·er·al·ly adv.

e·phem·er·id (ĭ-fĕm'ər-ĭd) n. An insect of the order Ephemeroptera; a mayfly. [From New Latin Ephemeridae, former order name, from Greek ephēmeron, mayfly. See EPHEMERON.]

e·phem·er·is (ĭ-fĕm'ər-ĭs) n. pl. eph·e·mer·i·des (ĕf'ə-mĕr'ə-dĕz'). A table giving the coordinates of a celestial body at a number of specific times during a given period. [Late Latin ephēmeris, from Greek, diary, from ephēmeros, daily. See EPHEMERAL.]

ephemeris time (ĭ-fĕm'ər-ĭs tīm) n. A highly accurate astronomical system for the measurement of time based on the period of Earth's orbit, but in practice relying on lunar observations and an accurate lunar ephemeris.

e·phem·er·on (ĭ-fĕm'ə-rŏn') n. pl. e·phem·er·a (-ər-ə) or e·phem·er·ons.

1. A short-lived thing. 2. ephemera. Printed matter of passing interest. [Greek ephēmeron, mayfly, from neuter of ephēmeros, daily, short-lived. See EPHEMERAL.]

E·phe·sian (ĭ-fĕ'zhən) n. 1. A native or inhabitant of ancient Ephesus.

2. Ephesians. (used with a sing. verb). Abbr. Eph., Ep. A book of the Bible. See Table at Bible. — adj. Of or relating to ancient Ephesus or its people, language, or culture. [From Latin Ephesii, inhabitants of Ephesus, from Greek Ephesioi, from Ephesos, Ephesus.]

Eph·e·sus (ĕf'i-səs) An ancient city of Greek Asia Minor in present-day western Turkey. Its temple, dedicated to Artemis, or in Roman times Diana, was one of the Seven Wonders of the World. Saint Paul visited the city on his missionary journeys.

eph·od (ĕf'əd', ĕ'föd') n. A vestment worn by ancient Hebrew priests. [Middle English, from Late Latin, from Hebrew 'ēpôd.]

eph·or (ĕf'ôr', -ər) n. pl. eph·ors or eph·o·ri (-ə-rī'). One of a body of five elected magistrates exercising a supervisory power over the kings of Sparta.

[Latin ephorus, from Greek ephoros, from ephoran, to oversee: ep-, epi-, epi- + horan, to see; see wer-³ in Appendix.]

epi- or ep- pref. 1. On; upon: epiphyte. 2. Over; above: epicenter. 3. Around: epicarp. 4. Close to; near: epicalyx. 5. Besides: epiphenomenon. 6. After: epilogue. [Greek, from epi, upon. See epi in Appendix.]

epi·blast (ĕp'ə-blăst') n. Embryology. The outer layer of a blastula that gives rise to the ectoderm after gastrulation. —ep'i·blast'ic adj.

e·pib·o·ly (ĭ-pĭb'ə-lĕ) n. Embryology. The growth of a rapidly dividing group of cells around a more slowly dividing group of cells, as in the formation of a gastrula. [Greek epibolē, a throwing or laying on, from epiballein, to throw on : epi-, epi- + ballein, to throw; see g^welə- in Appendix.] —ep'i-bol'ic (ĕp'ə-bŏl'ĭk) adj.

ep'ic (ĕp'ĭk) n. 1. An extended narrative poem in elevated or dignified language, celebrating the feats of a legendary or traditional hero. 2. A literary or dramatic composition that resembles an extended, narrative poem celebrating heroic feats. 3. A series of events considered appropriate to an epic: the epic of the Old West. — adj. 1. Of, constituting, having to do with, or suggestive of a literary epic: an epic poem. 2. Surpassing the usual or ordinary, particularly in scope or size: “A vast musical panorama... it requires an epic musical understanding to do it justice” (Tim Page). 3. Heroic and impressive in quality: “Here in the courtroom... there was more of that epic atmosphere, the extra amperage of a special moment” (Scott Turow). [From Latin epicus, from Greek epikos, from epos, song. See wek^w- in Appendix.]

ep·i·ca·lyx (ĕp'ĭ-kā'lĭks, -kāl'ĭks) n. pl. ep·i·ca·lyx·es or ep·i·ca·ly·ces (-kā'lĭ-sēz', -kāl'ĭ-). A series of bracts subtending and resembling a calyx, as in the carnation and hibiscus.

ep·i·can·thic fold (ĕp'ĭ-kān'thĭk fŏld) n. A fold of skin of the upper eyelid that partially covers the inner corner of the eye. Also called epicanthus ep·i·can·thus (ĕp'ĭ-kān'thəs) n. pl. ep·i·can·thi (-thĭ, -thĕ). See epicanthic fold. [New Latin : EPI- + CANTHUS.]

ep·i·car·di·um (ĕp'ĭ-kār'dē-əm) n. pl. ep·i·car·di·a (-dē-ə). The inner layer of the pericardium that is in actual contact with the surface of the heart. [New Latin : EPI- + Greek kardia, heart; see kerd- in Appendix.] —ep'i-car'di-al adj.

ep·i·carp (ĕp'ĭ-kärp') n. Botany. See exocarp.

ep·i·cene (ĕp'ĭ-sĕn') adj. 1. Belonging to or having the characteristics of both the male and the female: an epicene statue. 2. Effeminate; unmanly. 3. Sexless; neuter. 4. Linguistics. Having only one form of the noun for both the male and the female. — n. 1. One that is epicene. 2. Linguistics. An epicene word. [Middle English, having only one form of the noun for either gender, from Latin epicoenus, from Greek epikoinos, in common : epi-, epi- + koinos, common; see kom in Appendix.] —ep'i-cen'ism n.

ep·i·cen·ter (ĕp'ĭ-sĕn'tər) n. 1. The point of the earth's surface directly above the focus of an earthquake. 2. A focal point: stood at the epicenter of the international crisis. —ep'i-cen'tral adj.

ep·i·chlo·ro·hy·drin (ĕp'ĭ-klŏr'ə-hĭ'drĭn, -klŏr'-) n. A colorless liquid, C₃H₅OCl, used as a solvent in making resins.

ep·i·con·dyle (ĕp'ĭ-kŏn'dĭl, -dl) n. A rounded projection at the end of a bone, located on or above a condyle and usually serving as a place of attachment for ligaments and tendons.

ep·i·cot·yl (ĕp'ī-kōt'1) n. The stem of a seedling or an embryo located between the cotyledons and the first true leaves. [EPI- + COTYL(EDON).]

ep·i·crit·ic (ĕp'ī-krīt'īk) adj. Of or relating to sensory nerve fibers that enable the perception of slight differences in the intensity of stimuli, especially touch or temperature. [Greek epikritikos, decisive, from epikritēs, decider, from epikrinein, to decide : epi-, epi- + krinein, to judge; see krei- in Appendix.]

epic simile (ĕp'īk sīm'ə-lē) n. An extended simile elaborated in great detail.

Also called Homeric simile

Ep·ic·te·tus (ĕp'īk-tē'təs), A.D. 55?-135?. Greek Stoic philosopher who believed that one should act in life as one would at a banquet, by taking a polite portion of all that is offered.

ep·i·cure (ĕp'ī-kyōōr') n. 1. A person with refined taste especially in food and wine. 2. A person devoted to sensuous pleasure and luxurious living. See Usage Note at gourmet. [Middle English, an Epicurean, from Medieval Latin epicūrus, from Latin Epicūrus, Epicurus, from Greek Epikouros.]

ep·i·cu·re·an (ĕp'ī-kyōō-rē'ən, -kyōōr'ē-) adj. 1. Devoted to the pursuit of pleasure; fond of good food, comfort, and ease. 2. Suited to the tastes of an epicure: an epicurean repast. See Synonyms at sensuous. 3. Epicurean. Of or relating to Epicurus or Epicureanism. — n. 1. A devotee to sensuous and luxurious living; an epicure. 2. Epicurean. A follower of Epicurus. [Middle English Epicurien, from Epicure. See EPICURE.]

Ep·i·cu·re·an·ism (ĕp'ī-kyōō-rē'ə-nīz'əm, -kyōōr'ē-) n. A philosophy advanced by Epicurus that considered happiness, or the avoidance of pain and emotional disturbance, to be the highest good.

ep·i·cur·ism (ĕp'ī-kyōō-rīz'əm, ĕp'ī-kyōōr'īz-əm) n. The beliefs, tastes, or lifestyle of an epicure.

Ep·i·cu·rus (ĕp'ī-kyōōr'əs), 341?-270 B.C. Greek philosopher who founded his influential school of Epicureanism in Athens c. 306.

ep·i·cu·ti·cle (ĕp'ī-kyōō'tī-kəl) n. The outermost layer of cuticle of an arthropod exoskeleton, composed mostly of wax.

ep·i·cy·cle (ĕp'ī-sī'kəl) n. 1. In Ptolemaic cosmology, a small circle, the center of which moves on the circumference of a larger circle at whose center is Earth and the circumference of which describes the orbit of one of the planets around Earth. 2. Mathematics. A circle whose circumference rolls along the circumference of a fixed circle, thereby generating an epicycloid or a hypocycloid. [Middle English epicicle, from Late Latin epicyclus, from Greek epikuklos : epi-, epi- + kuklos, circle; see k^wel-1 in Appendix.] — ep'·i·cy·clīc (-sī'klīk, -sīk'lik) adj.

epicyclic train (ĕp'ī-sīk'lik trān) n. A system of gears in which at least one rotating gear revolves about another.

ep·i·cy·cloid (ěp'ĩ-sĩ'kloid') n. The curve described by a point on the circumference of a circle as the circle rolls on the outside of the circumference of a second, fixed circle. —ep'i·cy·cloid'al (-kloid'l) adj.

Ep·i·dau·rus (ěp'ĩ-dõr'əs) An ancient city of Greece on the northeast coast of the Peloponnesus. Its temple of Asclepius, the Greek god of medicine, was renowned for its magnificent sculpture.

ep·i·dem·ic (ěp'ĩ-děm'ĩk) also ep·i·dem·i·cal (-ĩ-kəl) adj. 1. Spreading rapidly and extensively by infection and affecting many individuals in an area or a population at the same time: an epidemic outbreak of influenza. 2. Widely prevalent: epidemic discontent. — n. 1. An outbreak of a contagious disease that spreads rapidly and widely. 2. A rapid spread, growth, or development: an unemployment epidemic. [French épidémique, from épidémie, an epidemic, from Old French espydymie, from Medieval Latin epidēmia, from Greek, prevalence of an epidemic disease, from epidēmos, prevalent : epi-, epi- + dēmos, people; see dā- in Appendix.] —ep'i·dem'i·cal·ly adv.

ep·i·de·mi·ol·o·gy (ěp'ĩ-dě'mē-õl'ə-jē, -děm'ē-) n. The branch of medicine that deals with the study of the causes, distribution, and control of disease in populations. [Medieval Latin epidēmia, an epidemic; see EPIDEMIC + -LOGY.]

—ep'i·de'mi·o·log'ic (-ə-lõj'ĩk), ep'i·de'mi·o·log'i·cal (-ĩ-kəl) adj.

—ep'i·de'mi·o·log'i·cal·ly adv. —ep'i·de'mi·ol·o·gist n.

ep·i·der·mis (ěp'ĩ-dũr'mĩs) n. 1. The outer, protective, nonvascular layer of the skin of vertebrates, covering the dermis. 2. An integument or outer layer of various invertebrates. 3. The outermost layer of cells covering the leaves and young parts of a plant. [Late Latin, from Greek : epi-, epi- + derma, skin; see der- in Appendix.] —ep'i·der'mal (-məl), ep'i·der'mic adj.

ep·i·der·moid (ěp'ĩ-dũr'moid') adj. Composed of or resembling epidermal tissue: epidermoid carcinoma.

ep·i·di·a·scope (ěp'ĩ-dĩ'ə-skõp') n. A machine for projecting the images of opaque objects or transparencies on a screen. [EPI- + DIA- + -SCOPE.]

ep·i·did·y·mis (ěp'ĩ-dĩd'ə-mĩs) n. pl. ep·i·did·y·mi·des (-mĩ-děz'). Anatomy.

A long, narrow convoluted tube, part of the spermatic duct system, that lies on the posterior aspect of each testicle, connecting it to the vas deferens. [Greek epididumis : epi-, epi- + didumoi, twins, testicles, pl. of didumos, double; see dwo- in Appendix.] —ep'i·did'y·mal adj.

ep·i·dote (ěp'ĩ-dõt') n. A lustrous yellow, green, or black mineral $\text{Ca}_2(\text{Al, Fe})_3(\text{SiO}_4)_3\text{OH}$, commonly found in metamorphic rock. [French épidote, from Greek epididonai, to give in addition, increase (from the shape of its crystalline structure) : epi-, epi- + didonai, to give; see dō- in Appendix.] —ep'i·dot'ic (-dõt'ĩk) adj.

ep·i·du·ral (ěp'ĩ-dyõr'əl, -dyõr'-) adj. Located on or over the dura mater.

— n. An injection into the epidural space of the spine.

epidural anesthesia (ĕp'î-dōōr'əl ăn'îs-thĕ'zhə) n. Anesthesia produced by the injection of a local anesthetic into the epidural space of the lumbar or sacral region of the spine, inducing regional anesthesia from the abdomen or pelvis downward and used especially to control pain during childbirth.

ep·i·gas·tri·um (ĕp'î-găs'trĕ-əm) n. pl. ep·i·gas·tri·a (-trĕ-ə). The upper middle region of the abdomen. [New Latin, from Greek epigastriōn : epi-, epi- + gastriōn, diminutive of gastēr, belly, stomach.] —ep'î-gas'tric (-trĭk) adj.

ep·i·ge·al (ĕp'ə-jĕ'al) also ep·i·ge·an (-ən) or ep·i·ge·ous (-əs) adj.

1. Biology. Living or occurring on or near the surface of the ground. 2. Botany. Of or relating to the emergence of cotyledons above the surface of the ground after germination. [From Greek epigeios, on the earth : epi-, epi- + gĕ, earth.]

ep·i·gene (ĕp'ə-jĕn') adj. Formed, originating, or occurring on or just below the surface of the earth. [French épigène, from Greek epigenēs, growing after : epi-, epi- + -genēs, -born; see genə- in Appendix.]

ep·i·gen·e·sis (ĕp'ə-jĕn'î-sis) n. 1. Biology. The theory that an individual is developed by successive differentiation of an unstructured egg rather than by a simple enlarging of a preformed entity. 2. Geology. Change in the mineral content of a rock because of outside influences. —ep'î-ge-net'ic (-jə-nĕt'ĭk) adj.

e·pig·e·nous (ĭ-pĭj'ə-nəs) adj. Botany. Developing or growing on an upper surface, as fungi on leaves.

ep·i·ge·ous (ĕp'ə-jĕ'əs) adj. Biology & Botany. Variant of epigeal.

ep·i·glot·tis (ĕp'î-glōt'ĭs) n. pl. ep·i·glot·tis·es or ep·i·glot·ti·des (-glōt'ĭ-dĕz'). The thin elastic cartilaginous structure located at the root of the tongue that folds over the glottis to prevent food and liquid from entering the trachea during the act of swallowing. [Greek epiglōttis : epi-, epi- + glōttis, glottis; see GLOTTIS.] —ep'î-glōt'tal (-glōt'l), ep'î-glōt'tic (-glōt'ĭk) adj.

ep·i·gone (ĕp'î-gōn') n. A second-rate imitator or follower, especially of an artist or a philosopher. [French épigone, sing. of épigones, from Greek Epigonoī, sons of the seven heroes against Thebes, from pl. of epigonos, born after : epi-, epi- + gonos, child, seed; see genə- in Appendix.] —ep'î-gon'ic (-gōn'ĭk) adj. —e·pig'on·ism (ĭ-pĭg'ə-nĭz'əm) n.

ep·i·gram (ĕp'î-grăm') n. 1. A short, witty poem expressing a single thought or observation. 2. A concise, clever, often paradoxical statement. See Synonyms at saying. 3. Epigrammatic discourse or expression. [Middle English, from Old French epigramme, from Latin epigramma, from Greek, from epigraphēin, to mark the surface, inscribe : epi-, epi- + graphein, to write; see gerbh- in Appendix.]

ep·i·gram·mat·ic (ĕp'î-grə-măt'ĭk) also ep·i·gram·mat·i·cal (-ĭ-kəl) adj.

1. Of or having the nature of an epigram. 2. Containing or given to the use of epigrams. [From epigrammatical, from Latin epigrammaticus, from Greek epi-* grammatikos, from epigramma, epigrammat-, epigram. See EPIGRAM.]

—ep'i-gram-mat'i-cal-ly adv.

ep-i-gram-ma-tism (ĕp'ĭ-grām'ə-tĭz'əm) n. Literary style marked by the use of epigrams. —ep'i-gram/ma-tist n.

ep-i-gram-ma-tize (ĕp'ĭ-grām'ə-tĭz') v. ep-i-gram-ma-tized, ep-i-gram-ma-tiz-ing, ep-i-gram-ma-tiz-es. — v. tr. To express in an epigram. — v. intr. To create an epigram.

ep-i-graph (ĕp'ĭ-grāf') n. 1. An inscription, as on a statue or building. 2. A motto or quotation, as at the beginning of a literary composition, setting forth a theme. [Greek epigraphē, from epigraphēin, to write on. See EPIGRAM.]

—ep'i-graph/ic, ep'i-graph/i-cal adj. —ep'i-graph/i-cal-ly adv.

e-pig-ra-phy (ĭ-pĭg'rə-fē) n. 1. Inscriptions considered as a group. 2. a. The study of inscriptions. b. Decipherment, especially of ancient inscriptions.

—e-pig/ra-pher, e-pig/ra-phist n.

e-pig-y-nous (ĭ-pĭj'ə-nəs) adj. Having floral parts attached to or near the summit of the ovary, as in the flower of the apple, cucumber, or daffodil.

—e-pig'y-ny (-nē) n.

ep-i-lep-sy (ĕp'ə-lĕp'sē) n. pl. ep-i-lep-sies. Any of various neurological disorders characterized by sudden, recurring attacks of motor, sensory, or psychic malfunction with or without loss of consciousness or convulsive seizures. [French épilepsie, from Latin epilēpsia, from Greek epilēpsis, from epilambanein, to lay hold of : epi-, epi- + lambanein, lēp-, to seize.]

ep-i-lep-tic (ĕp'ə-lĕp'tĭk) adj. 1. Affected with epilepsy. 2. Of, relating to, or associated with epilepsy. — n. One who has epilepsy. [French épileptique, from Late Latin epilēpticus, from Greek epilēptikos, from epilēpsis, epilepsy. See EPILEPSY.]

ep-i-lep-to-gen-ic (ĕp'ə-lĕp'tə-jĕn'ĭk) adj. Having the capacity to induce epilepsy.

ep-i-lep-toid (ĕp'ə-lĕp'toid') adj. Resembling epilepsy or any of its symptoms. [EPILEPT(IC) + -OID.]

ep-i-logue also ep-i-log (ĕp'ə-lŏg', -lŏg') n. 1. a. A short poem or speech spoken directly to the audience following the conclusion of a play. b. The performer who delivers such a short poem or speech. 2. A short addition or concluding section at the end of a literary work, often dealing with the future of its characters. In this sense, also called afterword [Middle English epilogue, from Old French epilogue, from Latin epilogus, from Greek epilogos, conclusion of a speech : epi-, epi- + logos, word, speech; see leg- in Appendix.]

Ep-i-me-the-us (ĕp'ə-mē'thē-əs, -thyōs) n. The satellite of Saturn that is fifth in distance from the planet. [Latin Epimētheus, son of Iapetus and Pandora and brother of Prometheus, from Greek.]

ep·i·mys·i·um (ĕp'ə-mīz'ē-əm, -mīzh'ē-) n. pl. ep·i·mys·i·a (-mīz'ē-ə, -mīzh'-). The external sheath of connective tissue surrounding a muscle. [New Latin : EPI- + Greek mūs, muscle; see mūs- in Appendix.]

ep·i·nas·ty (ĕp'ə-nās'tē) n. pl. ep·i·nas·ties. A downward bending of leaves or other plant parts, resulting from excessive growth of the upper side.

—ep'i·nas'tic (-tīk) adj.

Ē·pi·nay·sur·Seine (ā-pē-nā'sūr-sĕn', -sūr-) A city of north-central France, an industrial suburb of Paris. Population, 50,314.

ep·i·neph·rine also ep·i·neph·rin (ĕp'ə-nĕf'rīn) n. 1. A hormone secreted by the adrenal medulla that is released into the bloodstream in response to physical or mental stress, as from fear or injury. It initiates many bodily responses, including the stimulation of heart action and an increase in blood pressure, metabolic rate, and blood glucose concentration. Also called adrenaline 2. A white to brownish crystalline compound, C₉H₁₃NO₃, isolated from the adrenal glands of certain mammals or synthesized and used in medicine as a heart stimulant, vasoconstrictor, and bronchial relaxant. [EPI- + NEPHR(O)- + -INE².]

ep·i·neu·ri·um (ĕp'ə-nōōr'ē-əm, -nyōōr'-) n. pl. ep·i·neu·ri·a (-nōōr'ē-ə, -nyōōr'-). The thick sheath of connective tissue surrounding a nerve trunk. [New Latin : EPI- + Greek neuron, nerve, tendon; see NEURON.] —ep'i·neu'ri·al adj.

ep·i·pe·lag·ic (ĕp'ə-pĕ-lāj'īk) adj. Of or relating to the part of the oceanic zone into which enough sunlight enters for photosynthesis to take place.

e·pi·pet·al·ous (ĕp'ə-pĕt'l-əs) adj. Botany. Borne on or attached to the petals or corolla, as the stamens of the petunia.

e·piph·a·ny (ī-pīf'ə-nē) n. pl. e·piph·a·nies. 1. Epiphany. a. A Christian feast celebrating the manifestation of the divine nature of Jesus to the Gentiles as represented by the Magi. b. January 6, on which this feast is traditionally observed. 2. A revelatory manifestation of a divine being. 3. a. A sudden manifestation of the essence or meaning of something. b. A comprehension or perception of reality by means of a sudden intuitive realization: “I experienced an epiphany, a spiritual flash that would change the way I viewed myself” (Frank Maier). [Middle English epiphanie, from Old French, from Late Latin epiphania, from Greek epiphaneia, manifestation, from epiphainesthai, to appear : epi-, forth; see EPI- + phainein, phan-, to show; see bhā-¹ in Appendix.]

ep·i·phe·nom·e·nal·ism (ĕp'ə-fī-nōm'ə-nə-līz'əm) n. Philosophy. The doctrine holding that mental activities are simply epiphenomena of the neural processes of the brain.

ep·i·phe·nom·e·non (ĕp'ə-fī-nōm'ə-nōn') n. pl. ep·i·phe·nom·e·na (-nə). 1. A secondary phenomenon that results from and accompanies another: “Exploitation of one social class or ethnic group by another [is] an epiphenomenon of real differences in power between social groups” (Harper’s). 2. Pathology. An additional condition or symptom in the course of a disease, not necessarily connected with the disease. —ep'i-phe-nom'e-nal adj.

—ep'i-phe-nom'e-nal-ly adv.

e·piph·y·sis (ĭ-pĭf'ĭ-sĭs) n. pl. e·piph·y·ses (-sēz'). 1. The end of a long bone that is originally separated from the main bone by a layer of cartilage but that later becomes united to the main bone through ossification. 2. See pineal gland. [Greek epiphysis, an excrescence : epi-, epi- + physis, growth; see bheuə- in Appendix.] —ep'i-phys'i-al (ĕp'ə-fĭz'ē-əl), ep'i-phys'e-al adj.

ep·i·phyte (ĕp'ə-fĭt') n. A plant, such as a tropical orchid or a staghorn fern, that grows on another plant upon which it depends for mechanical support but not for nutrients. Also called aerophyte, air plant. —ep'i-phyt'ic (-fĭt'ĭk), ep'i-phyt'i-cal adj. —ep'i-phyt'i-cal-ly adv.

ep·i·phy·tot·ic (ĕp'ə-fĭ-tōt'ĭk) adj. Of, relating to, or characterized by a sudden or abnormally destructive outbreak of a plant disease, usually over an extended geographic area. —ep'i-phy·tot'ic n.

E·pi·rus (ĭ-pĭ'rəs) An ancient country on the Ionian Sea in present-day northwest Greece and southern Albania. It flourished in the 3rd century B.C. and was later a Roman province. An independent state after A.D. 1204, Epirus was conquered by the Turks in the 15th century.

Epis. abbr. 1. Episcopal; Episcopalian. 2. Bible. Epistle.

Episc. abbr. Episcopal; Episcopalian.

e·pis·co·pa·cy (ĭ-pĭs'kə-pə-sē) n. pl. e·pis·co·pa·cies. 1. See episcopate (n., sense 3). 2. A system of church government in which bishops are the chief clerics. [From EPISCOPATE.]

e·pis·co·pal (ĭ-pĭs'kə-pəl) adj. Abbr. Epis., Episc. 1. Of or relating to a bishop. 2. Of, relating to, or involving church government by bishops. 3. Episcopal. Of or relating to the Episcopal Church. [Middle English, from Late Latin episcopālis, from episcopus, bishop, from Greek episkopos, overseer : epi-, epi- + skopos, watcher; see spek- in Appendix.] —e·pis'co·pal-ly adv.

Episcopal Church (ĭ-pĭs'kə-pəl chŭrch) n. The church in the United States that is in communion with the see of Canterbury.

E·pis·co·pa·lian (ĭ-pĭs'kə-pāl'lē-ən, -pāl'yən) adj. Abbr. Epis., Episc. 1. Of, relating to, or belonging to the Episcopal Church. 2. episcopalian. Of or advocating church government by bishops. —E·pis'co·pa'lian n.

e·pis·co·pate (ĭ-pĭs'kə-pĭt, -pāt') n. 1. The position, term, or office of a bishop. 2. The area of jurisdiction of a bishop; a diocese. 3. Bishops considered as a group. In this sense, also called episcopacy [Late Latin episcopātus, from episcopus, bishop. See EPISCOPAL.]

ep·i·si·ot·o·my (ĭ-pē'zē-ōt'ə-mē) n. pl. ep·i·si·ot·o·mies. Surgical incision of the perineum during childbirth to facilitate delivery. [Greek epision, pubic region + -TOMY.]

ep-i·sode (ĕp'ī-sōd') n. 1. a. An incident or event that is part of a progression or a larger sequence: “South Africa may remain one of history’s most tragic episodes” (Bayard Rustin). b. One of a series of related events in the course of a continuous account. See Synonyms at occurrence. 2. A portion of a narrative that relates an event or a series of connected events and forms a coherent story in itself; an incident: an episode in a picaresque novel. 3. A separate part of a serialized work, such as a novel or play. 4. A section of a classic Greek tragedy that occurs between two choric songs. 5. Music. A passage between statements of a main subject or theme, as in a rondo or fugue. [French épisode, from Greek episodesion, parenthetical narrative, from neuter of episodesios, coming in besides : epi-, epi- + eisodios, entering (eis, into; see en in Appendix + hodos, way, journey).]

ep-i·sod·ic (ĕp'ī-sōd'ik) also ep-i·sod·i·cal (-ī-kəl) adj. 1. Relating to or resembling an episode. 2. Composed of a series of episodes: an episodic novel. 3. Limited to the duration of an episode; temporary. —ep'ī-sod'i·cal·ly adv.

ep-i·some (ĕp'ī-sōm') n. A genetic particle of certain cells, especially bacterial cells, that can exist either autonomously in the cytoplasm or as part of a chromosome. —ep'ī-so'mal adj. —ep-i-so'mal·ly adv.

Epist. abbr. Bible. Epistle.

e·pis·ta·sis (ī-pīs'tə-sīs) n. pl. e·pis·ta·ses (-sēz'). 1. Genetics. An interaction between nonallelic genes, especially an interaction in which one gene suppresses the expression of another. 2. Medicine. A film that forms over the surface of a urine specimen. 3. Medicine. The suppression of a bodily discharge or secretion. [Greek, stoppage, from epistanai, to stop, check : ep-, epi-, epi- + histanai, to place; see stā- in Appendix.] —ep'ī-stat'ic (ĕp'ī-stăt'ik) adj.

ep-i·stax·is (ĕp'ī-stăk'sīs) n. pl. ep-i·stax·es (-stăk'sēz'). A nosebleed. [Greek, from epistazein, to bleed from the nose : epi-, epi- + stazein, stag-, to drip.]

ep-i·ste·mic (ĕp'ī-stē'mik) adj. Of, relating to, or involving knowledge; cognitive. [From Greek epistēmē, knowledge. See EPISTEMOLOGY.] —ep'ī-ste'mi·cal·ly adv.

e·pis·te·mol·o·gy (ī-pīs'tə-mōl'ə-jē) n. The branch of philosophy that studies the nature of knowledge, its presuppositions and foundations, and its extent and validity. [Greek epistēmē, knowledge (from epistasthai, to understand : epi-, epi- + histanai, stē-, to place, determine); see stā- in Appendix + -LOGY.] —e·pis'te·mo·log'i·cal (-mə-lōj'ī-kəl) adj. —e·pis'te·mo·log'i·cal·ly adv. —e·pis'te·mol'o·gist n.

e·pis·tle (ī-pīs'əl) n. 1. A letter, especially a formal one. See Synonyms at letter. 2. A literary composition in the form of a letter. 3. Epistle. Abbr. Epis., Epist. Bible. a. One of the letters included as a book in the New Testament. b. An excerpt from one of these letters, read as part of a religious service. [Middle English epistel, from Old French epistle, from Latin epistola, from Greek epis- tolē, from epistellein, to send a message to : epi-, epi- + stellein, to send; see stel- in Appendix.]

e·pis·tler (ĭ-pĭs'lər) n. One who writes an epistle.

epistle side also Epistle Side (ĭ-pĭs'əl sĭd) n. 1. In the traditional orientation of some Christian churches, the south side of a chancel or sanctuary when the altar or Eucharistic table faces east. 2. In some Christian churches, the side of a chancel or sanctuary on the congregation's right.

e·pis·to·lar·y (ĭ-pĭs'tə-lər'ē) adj. 1. Of or associated with letters or the writing of letters. 2. Being in the form of a letter: epistolary exchanges. 3. Carried on by or composed of letters: an epistolary friendship. [From Latin epistolāris, from epistola, epistle. See EPISTLE.]

epi·style (ĕp'ĭ-stĭl') n. See architrave (n., sense 1). [Latin epistylum, from Greek epistulion : epi-, epi- + stulion, diminutive of stulos, pillar; see stā- in Appendix.]

epi·taph (ĕp'ĭ-tăf') n. 1. An inscription on a tombstone in memory of the one buried there. 2. A brief literary piece commemorating a deceased person. [Middle English, from Old French epitaphe, from Latin epitaphium, from Greek epitaphion, from neuter of epitaphios, funerary : epi-, epi- + taphos, tomb.]

—ep'i-taph'ic adj.

e·pit·a·sis (ĭ-pĭt'ə-sĭs) n. pl. e·pit·a·ses (-sēz'). The middle part of a play that develops the action leading to the catastrophe. [Greek, stretching, intensity, from epiteinein, to stretch, intensify : epi-, epi- + teinein, to stretch; see ten- in Appendix.]

epi·tax·y (ĕp'ĭ-tăk'sē) n. pl. epi·tax·ies. The growth of the crystals of one mineral on the crystal face of another mineral, such that the crystalline substrates of both minerals have the same structural orientation.

epi·tha·la·mi·um (ĕp'ə-thə-lā'mē-əm) or epi·tha·la·mi·on (-ən) n. pl.

epi·tha·la·mi·ums or epi·tha·la·mi·a (-mē-ə). A lyric ode in honor of a bride and bridegroom. [Latin, from Greek epithalamion, from neuter of epithalamios, of a wedding : epi-, epi- + thalamos, bridal chamber; see THALAMUS.]

epi·the·li·a (ĕp'ə-thē'lē-ə) n. A plural of epithelium.

epi·the·li·al·ize (ĕp'ə-thē'lē-ə-līz') or epi·the·lize (-thē'līz) v.

epi·the·li·al·ized or epi·the·lized, epi·the·li·al·iz·ing or epi·the·liz·ing, epi·the·li·al·iz·es or epi·the·liz·es. — v. tr. To cover (a wound, for example) with epithelial tissue. — v. intr. To become covered with epithelial tissue.

—ep'i-the'li-al-i-za'tion (-ə-lī-zā'shən) n.

epi·the·li·oid (ĕp'ə-thē'lē-oid') adj. Resembling epithelium.

epi·the·li·o·ma (ĕp'ə-thē'lē-ō'mə) n. pl. epi·the·li·o·ma·ta (-mə-tə) or epi·the·li·o·mas. A benign or malignant tumor derived from epithelium.

—ep'i-the'li-om'a-tous (-ōm'ə-təs) adj.

ep·i·the·li·um (ĕp'ə-thē'lē-əm) n. pl. ep·i·the·li·ums or ep·i·the·li·a (-lē-ə). Membranous tissue composed of one or more layers of cells separated by very little intercellular substance and forming the covering of most internal and external surfaces of the body and its organs. [New Latin : EPI- + Greek thēlē, nipple; see dhē(i)- in Appendix.] —ep'·i·the'·li·al adj.

ep·i·the·lize (ĕp'ə-thē'līz) v. Variant of epithelialize. —ep'·i·the'·li·za'tion (-lī-zā'shən) n.

ep·i·thet (ĕp'ə-thĕt') n. 1. a. A term used to characterize a person or thing, such as rosy-fingered in rosy-fingered dawn or the Great in Catherine the Great. b. A term used as a descriptive substitute for the name or title of a person, such as The Great Emancipator for Abraham Lincoln. 2. An abusive or contemptuous word or phrase. 3. Biology. A word in the scientific name of an animal or a plant following the name of the genus and denoting a species, variety, or other division of the genus, as sativa in Lactuca sativa. [Latin epitheton, from Greek, neuter of epithetos, added, attributed, from epitithenai, to add to : epi-, epi- + tithenai, to place; see dhē- in Appendix.] —ep'·i·thet'·ic, ep'·i·thet'·i·cal adj.

USAGE NOTE: Strictly speaking, an epithet need not be derogatory, but the term is commonly used as a simple synonym for “term of abuse” or “slur,” as in the sentence There is no place for racial epithets in a police officer’s vocabulary. This usage is accepted by 80 percent of the Usage Panel.

e·pit·o·me (ī-pīt'ə-mē) n. 1. A representative or an example of a class or type: “He is seen... as the epitome of the hawkish, right-of-center intellectual” (Paul Kennedy). 2. A brief summary, as of a book or an article; an abstract. [Latin epitomē, a summary, from Greek, an abridgment, from epitemnein, to cut short : epi-, epi- + temnein, to cut; see tem- in Appendix.]

e·pit·o·mize (ī-pīt'ə-mīz') v. tr. e·pit·o·mized, e·pit·o·miz·ing, e·pit·o·miz·es. 1. To make an epitome of; sum up. 2. To be a typical example of: behavior that epitomizes selfishness.

ep·i·zo·ic (ĕp'ī-zō'īk) adj. Living or growing on the external surface of an animal. —ep'·i·zo'ism n.

ep·i·zo·on (ĕp'ī-zō'ŏn, -ən) n. pl. ep·i·zo·a (-zō'ə). An epizooic organism.

ep·i·zo·ot·ic (ĕp'ī-zō-ŏt'īk) adj. Affecting a large number of animals at the same time within a particular region or geographic area. Used of a disease. — n. An epizootic disease. [EPI- + ZO(O)- + -OTIC.] —ep'·i·zo·ot'·i·cal·ly adv.

ep·och (ĕp'ək, ē'pŏk') n. 1. a. A particular period of history, especially one considered remarkable or noteworthy. b. A notable event that marks the beginning of such a period. See Synonyms at period. 2. A unit of geologic time that is a division of a period. 3. Astronomy. An instant in time that is arbitrarily selected as a point of reference. [Medieval Latin epocha, measure of time, from Greek epokhē, a point in time. See segh- in Appendix.]

ep·och·al (ĕp'ə-kəl, -ök'əl) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or characteristic of an epoch.

2. a. Highly significant or important; momentous: epochal decisions made by Roosevelt and Churchill. b. Without parallel: epochal stupidity.

ep·och·mak·ing (ĕp'ək-mā'kīng, ĕ'pök-) adj. So significant and momentous as to characterize the beginning of a period: the President's epoch-making trip to China; epoch-making new technologies; an epoch-making architectural work.

ep·ode (ĕp'ōd') n. 1. A lyric poem characterized by couplets formed by a long line followed by a shorter one. 2. The third division of the triad of a Pindaric ode, having a different or contrasting form from that of the strophe and antistrophe. 3. The part of a choral ode in classical Greek drama following the strophe and antistrophe and sung while the chorus is standing still. [Latin epōdos, a type of lyric poem, from Greek epōidos, sung after, from epaidein, to sing after : epi-, epi- + aidein, to sing; see wed-² in Appendix.]

ep·o·nym (ĕp'ə-nīm') n. 1. A person whose name is or is thought to be the source of the name of something, such as a city, country, or era. For example, Romulus is the eponym of Rome. 2. Medicine. A name of a drug, structure, or disease based on or derived from the name of a person. [French éponyme, from Greek epōnumos, named after : epi-, epi- + onoma, onuma, name; see nō-men- in Appendix.] — ep'·o·nym'ic adj.

e·pon·y·mous (ĭ-pŏn'ə-məs) adj. Of, relating to, or constituting an eponym. [From Greek epōnumos. See EPONYM.]

e·pon·y·my (ĭ-pŏn'ə-mē) n. Derivation of a name of a city, a country, an era, an institution, or other place or thing from that of a person.

ep·o·pee (ĕp'ə-pē') n. 1. Epic poetry, especially as a literary genre. 2. An epic poem. [French épopée, from Greek epopoia : epos, song, word; see wek^{w-} in Appendix + poiein, to make; see k^wei-² in Appendix.]

ep·os (ĕp'ŏs') n. 1. A number of poems, not formally united, that treat an epic theme. 2. An epic. [Latin, from Greek. See wek^{w-} in Appendix.]

ep·ox·ide (ĕ-pŏk'sīd, ĭ-pŏk'-) n. 1. A ring-shaped chemical structure consisting of an oxygen atom bonded to two other atoms, usually of carbon, that are already bonded to each other. 2. A compound containing such a structure. Also called epoxy ep·ox·y (ĭ-pŏk'sē) n. pl. ep·ox·ies. 1. Any of various usually thermosetting resins capable of forming tight cross-linked polymer structures characterized by toughness, strong adhesion, and low shrinkage, used especially in surface coatings and adhesives. 2. See epoxide. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: epoxy glues; epoxy resins. — v. tr. ep·ox·ied, ep·ox·y·ing, ep·ox·ies. To fasten together with epoxy. [EP(I)- + OXY(GEN).]

Ep·ping Forest (ĕp'ŭng fōr'ĭst) A former royal hunting preserve of southeast England northeast of London. It is now a public park.

EPROM (ĕ'prōm') n. Computer Science. A programmable read-only memory that can be erased by exposure to ultraviolet light and then reprogrammed. [e(rasable-)p(rogrammable) r(ead-)o(nly) m(emory).] ep·si·lon (ĕp'sə-lōn', -lən) n. The fifth letter of the Greek alphabet. [Greek epsilon, simple e, from neuter of psilos, simple.]

Ep·som and Ew·ell (ĕp'səm ənd yōō'əl) A municipal borough of southeast England near London. The Derby is run annually at Epsom Downs racetrack. Epsom salts were originally produced at the mineral springs nearby. Population, 69,000.

Epsom salts (ĕp'səm sōlts) pl.n. (used with a sing. verb). Hydrated magnesium sulfate, $MgSO_4 \cdot 7H_2O$, used as a cathartic and as an agent to reduce inflammation. [After Epsom, former name of Epsom and Ewell, England.]

Ep·stein (ĕp'stīn'), Sir Jacob. 1880-1959. American-born British sculptor who is noted for his busts and his massive, controversial works, such as the marble Venus (1917).

Ep·stein-Barr virus (ĕp'stīn-bār' vī'rəs) n. Abbr. EBV A herpesvirus that is the causative agent of infectious mononucleosis. It is also associated with various types of human cancers. [After Michael A. Epstein, and Y.M. Barr, 20th-century British virologists.]

eq. abbr. 1. Equal. 2. Equation. 3. Equivalent.

E.Q. abbr. Educational quotient.

eq·ua·ble (ĕk'wə-bəl, ĕ'kwə-) adj. 1. a. Unvarying; steady. b. Free from extremes. 2. Not easily disturbed; serene: an equable temper. See Synonyms at steady. [Latin aequābilis, from aequāre, to make even, from aequus, even, level.] —eq'ua·bil'i·ty, eq'ua·ble·ness n. —eq'ua·bly adv.

e·qual (ĕ'kwəl) adj. Abbr. eq. 1. Having the same quantity, measure, or value as another. 2. Mathematics. Being the same or identical to in value. 3. a. Having the same privileges, status, or rights: equal before the law. b. Being the same for all members of a group: gave every player an equal chance to win. 4. a. Having the requisite qualities, such as strength or ability, for a task or situation: "Elizabeth found herself quite equal to the scene" (Jane Austen). b. Adequate in extent, amount, or degree. 5. Impartial; just; equitable. 6. Tranquil; equable. 7. Showing or having no variance in proportion, structure, or appearance. — n.

Abbr. eq. One that is equal to another: Are men and women equals in physical strength? — v. tr. e·qualed or e·qualled, e·qual·ing or e·qual·ling, e·quals or e·quals. 1. To be equal to, especially in value. 2. To do, make, or produce something equal to: equaled the world record in the mile run. [Middle English, from Latin aequālis, from aequus, even, level.] —e'qual·ly adv.

USAGE NOTE: It has been argued that equal is an absolute term—two quantities either are or are not equal—and hence cannot be qualified as to degree. Therefore one cannot logically speak of a more equal allocation of resources among the departments. However, this usage was accepted by 71 percent of the Usage Panel in an earlier survey. What is more, objection to the usage betrays a widespread but questionable assumption that it is in mathematics and logic that we find the model of accuracy most appropriate to the everyday use of language, a supposition that also underlies traditional grammatical discussions of words such as unique, parallel, and center. According to this account, the “precise” or “literal” meaning of equal is realized in the use of the equal sign in an arithmetic expression such as $5 + 2 = 7$; and the ordinary-language uses of the term, though they may be permissible, represent “loose” or “imprecise” extensions of that sense. But in fact the mathematical concept of equality is a poor model for using the word equal to describe relations between things in the world. As applied to such things, statements of equality are always relative to an implicit standard of tolerance. When someone says The two boards are of equal length, we assume that the equality is reckoned to some order of approximation determined by the context; if we did not, we would be required always to use nearly equal when speaking of the dimensions of physical objects. What is more, we often want to predicate equality of things that do not admit of quantitative measurement, as when we say The college draft was introduced in an effort to make the teams in the National Football League as equal as possible, or The candidates for the job should all be given equal consideration. In all such cases, equality is naturally a gradient notion and so is amenable to modification in degree. This much is evident from the existence of the word unequal. The prefix un- attaches only to gradient adjectives: we say unmanly but not unmale; and the word uneven can be applied to a surface (whose evenness may be a matter of degree) but not to a number (whose evenness is an either-or affair). • The adverb equally is generally regarded as redundant when used in combination with as, and the following examples employing equally as were termed unacceptable by 63 percent of the Usage Panel in an earlier survey: Experience is equally as valuable as theory. Equally as important is the desire to learn. In the first example, delete equally; in the second, delete as. The solution to this usage problem usually involves using as alone when a comparison is explicit and equally alone when it is not. See Usage Note at as¹. See Usage Note at center. See Usage Note at parallel. See Usage Note at perfect. See Usage Note at unique.

e·qual·i·tar·i·an (ĭ-kwŏl'ĭ-târ'ē-ən) adj. Egalitarian.

—e·qual'ĭ-tar'ĭ-an·ism n.

e·qual·i·ty (ĭ-kwŏl'ĭ-tē) n. pl. e·qual·i·ties. 1. The state or quality of being equal. 2. Mathematics. A statement, usually an equation, that one thing equals another. [Middle English equalite, from Old French, from Latin aequālitās, from aequālis, equal. See EQUAL.]

e·qual·ize (ē'kwə-līz') v. e·qual·ized, e·qual·iz·ing, e·qual·iz·es. — v. tr.

1. To make equal: equalized the responsibilities of the staff members. 2. To make uniform. — v. intr. To constitute or induce equality, equilibrium, or balance.

—e·qual·i·za'tion (ē'kwə-lī-zā'shən) n.

e·qual·iz·er (ē'kwə-lī'zər) n. 1. One that equalizes, as: a. A device for equalizing pressure or strain. b. A tone control system designed to compensate for frequency distortion in audio systems. 2. Slang. A deadly weapon, such as a firearm or switchblade.

equal opportunity (ē'kwəl ɒp'ər-tōō'nī-tē) n. Absence of discrimination, as in the workplace, based on race, color, age, gender, national origin, religion, or mental or physical disability: “The issue of equal opportunity... posed particular problems” (Arthur M. Schlesinger, Jr.).

equal sign (ē'kwəl sīn) n. The symbol (=) used to indicate logical or mathematical equality.

equal temperament (ē'kwəl tēm'prə-mənt) n. Music. Modification of the intervals of just intonation in the tuning of instruments of fixed intonation to permit the modulation of harmony.

e·qua·nim·i·ty (ē'kwə-nīm'ī-tē, ěk'wə-) n. The quality of being calm and even-tempered; composure. [Latin aequanimitās, from aequanimus, even-tempered, impartial : aequus, even + animus, mind; see an- in Appendix.]

SYNONYMS: equanimity, composure, sang-froid, serenity. These nouns denote the state of a person who is calm and not easily agitated emotionally. Equanimity implies mental balance and evenness of temperament, often as a characteristic state: “And the third [personal ideal] has been to cultivate such a measure of equanimity as would enable me to bear success with humility, the affection of my friends without pride” (William Osler). Composure is calmness that suggests the exercise of self-control: She maintained her composure, though with difficulty, throughout the trial. Sang-froid is coolness, especially in trying circumstances: “Let what will be said or done, preserve your sang-froid immovably” (Thomas Jefferson). Serenity is tranquil composure that suggests imperviousness to agitation or turmoil: “He was always a cool man; nothing could disturb his serenity” (Mark Twain).

e·quate (ī-kwāt') v. e·quat·ed, e·quat·ing, e·quates. — v. tr. 1. To make equal or equivalent. 2. To reduce to a standard or an average; equalize. 3. To consider, treat, or depict as equal or equivalent: equates inexperience with youth. — v. intr. To be or seem to be equal; correspond. [Middle English equaten, from Latin aequāre, aequāt-, to make equal, from aequus, even.]

e·qua·tion (ī-kwā'zhən, -shən) n. Abbr. eq. 1. The act or process of equating or of being equated. 2. The state of being equal. 3. Mathematics. A statement asserting the equality of two expressions, usually written as a linear array of symbols that are separated into left and right sides and joined by an equal sign.

4. Chemistry. A representation of a chemical reaction, usually written as a linear array in which the symbols and quantities of the reactants are separated from those of the products by an equal sign, an arrow, or a set of opposing arrows.

5. A complex of variable elements or factors: “The world was full of equations... there must be an answer for everything, if only you knew how to set forth the questions” (Anne Tyler). —e·qua'tion·al adj. —e·qua'tion·al·ly adv.

e·qua·tor (ī-kwā'tər) n. 1. a. The imaginary great circle around the earth's surface, equidistant from the poles and perpendicular to the earth's axis of rotation. It divides the earth into the Northern Hemisphere and the Southern Hemisphere.

b. A similar great circle drawn on the surface of a celestial body at right angles to the axis of rotation. 2. The celestial equator. 3. A circle that divides a sphere or other surface into congruent parts. [Middle English, from Medieval Latin aequātor (diē et noctis), equalizer (of day and night), from aequāre, to equalize. See EQUATE.]

e·qua·to·ri·al (ē'kwə-tôr'ē-əl, -tôr'-, ěk'wə-) adj. 1. a. Of, relating to, or resembling the earth's equator. b. Relating to conditions that exist at the earth's equator: equatorial heat. 2. Having or constituting a support with two perpendicular axes, one of which is parallel to the earth's rotational axis. — n. An equatorial telescope. —e'qua·to·ri·al·ly adv.

equatorial current (ē'kwə-tôr'ē-əl kûr'ənt) n. One of the surface currents drifting westward through the oceans at the equator.

E·qua·to·ri·al Guin·ea (ē'kwə-tôr'ē-əl gĭn'ē, -tôr'-, ěk'wə-) A country of west-central Africa including islands in the Gulf of Guinea. It gained independence from Spain in 1968. Malabo is the capital and the largest city. Population, 300,000.

equatorial plate (ē'kwə-tôr'ē-əl plāt) n. The plane located midway between the poles of a dividing cell during the metaphase stage of mitosis or meiosis. It is formed from the migration of the chromosomes to the center of the spindle.

equatorial telescope (ē'kwə-tôr'ē-əl tĕl'ī-skōp') n. An astronomical telescope that keeps a star in view by revolving about an axis that is parallel to the earth's axis of rotation.

eq·uer·ry (ěk'wə-rē) n. pl. eq·uer·ries. 1. A personal attendant to the British royal household. 2. An officer charged with supervision of the horses belonging to a royal or noble household. [French écurie, stable, from Old French escurie, from escuier, squire. See SQUIRE.]

e·ques·tri·an (ī-kwĕs'trē-ən) adj. 1. Of or relating to horseback riding or horseback riders. 2. Depicted or represented on horseback: an equestrian statue of a famous monarch. — n. One who rides a horse or performs on horseback.

[From Latin equester, equestr-, from equus, horseman, from equus, horse. See ekwo- in Appendix.] — e-ques'tri-an-ism n. — e-ques'tri-an-ship n.

e-ques·tri·enne (i-kwēs'trē-ĕn') n. A woman who rides a horse or performs on horseback. [EQUESTR(IAN) + -ienne (from French, feminine of -ien, -ian.)] equi- pref. Equal; equally: equiangular. [Middle English, from Latin aequi-, from aequus, equal.]

e·qui·an·gu·lar (ē'kwē-āng'gyə-lər, ĕk'wē-) adj. Having all angles equal.

e·qui·dis·tant (ē'kwī-dīs'tənt, ĕk'wī-) adj. Equally distant. — e'qui-dis-tance (-təns) n. — e'qui-dis'tant·ly adv.

e·qui·lat·er·al (ē'kwə-lăt'ər-əl, ĕk'wə-) adj. Having all sides or faces equal. — n. 1. A side exactly equal to others. 2. A geometric figure having all sides equal. — e'qui-lat'er-al·ly adv.

e·qui·lat·er·al·ism (ē'kwə-lăt'ər-ə-līz'əm, ĕk'wə-) n. A political theory holding that since the United States and the Soviet Union are equal in strength, Europe should distance itself equally, and as far as possible, from both.

— e'qui-lat'er-al·ist adj. & n.

e·quil·i·brate (i-kwīl'ə-brāt') v. e·quil·i·brat·ed, e·quil·i·brat·ing, e·quil·i·brates. — v. intr. To be in or bring about equilibrium. — v. tr. To maintain in or bring into equilibrium. — e·quil'i·bra'tion n.

e·quil·i·bra·tor (i-kwīl'ə-brā'tər) n. A device that brings about and helps maintain equilibrium. — e·quil'i·bra-to'ry (-brə-tôr'ē, -tōr'ē) adj.

e·quil·i·brist (i-kwīl'ə-brīst) n. A person who performs feats of balance, such as tightrope walking. [French équilibriste, from équilibre, equilibrium, from Latin aequilibrium. See EQUILIBRIUM.] — e·quil'i·bris'tic adj.

e·qui·lib·ri·um (ē'kwə-līb'rē-əm, ĕk'wə-) n. pl. e·qui·lib·ri·ums or e·qui·lib·ri·a (-rē-ə). 1. A condition in which all acting influences are canceled by others, resulting in a stable, balanced, or unchanging system. See Synonyms at balance. 2. Mental or emotional balance; poise. 3. Physics. The state of a body or physical system at rest or in unaccelerated motion in which the resultant of all forces acting on it is zero and the sum of all torques about any axis is zero.

4. Chemistry. The state of a chemical reaction in which its forward and reverse reactions occur at equal rates so that the concentration of the reactants and products does not change with time. [Latin aequilibrium : aequi-, equi- + libra, balance.]

e·qui·mo·lar (ē'kwə-mō'lər, ĕk'wə-) adj. Chemistry. Having an equal number of moles.

e·quine (ē'kwīn', ĕk'wīn') adj. 1. Of, relating to, or characteristic of a horse.

2. Of or belonging to the family Equidae, which includes the horses, asses, and zebras. [Latin equinus, from equus, horse. See ekwo- in Appendix.] — e'quine' n.

e·qui·noc·tial (ē'kwə-nōk'shəl, ěk'wə-) adj. 1. Relating to an equinox.

2. Relating to the celestial equator. — n. 1. A violent storm of wind and rain occurring at or near the time of the equinox. 2. See celestial equator. [Middle English equinoxial, from Old French, from Latin aequinoctialis, from aequinoctium, equinox. See EQUINOX.]

equinoctial circle (ē'kwə-nōk'shəl sŭr'kəl) n. See celestial equator.

e·qui·nox (ē'kwə-nōks', ěk'wə-) n. 1. Either of two points on the celestial sphere at which the ecliptic intersects the celestial equator. 2. Either of the two times during a year when the sun crosses the celestial equator and when the length of day and night are approximately equal; the vernal equinox or the autumnal equinox. [Middle English, from Old French equinox, from Medieval Latin aequinoxium, from Latin aequinoctium : aequi-, equi- + nox, noct-, night; see nek^w-t in Appendix.]

e·quip (ī-kwĭp') v. tr. e·quipped, e·quip·ping, e·quips. 1. a. To supply with necessities such as tools or provisions. b. To furnish with the qualities necessary for performance: an education that will equip you to handle such problems. See Synonyms at furnish. 2. To dress up. [French équiper, from Old French esquiper, of Germanic origin; akin to Old Norse skipa (from skip, ship).]

equip. abbr. Equipment.

eq·ui·page (ěk'wə-pĭj) n. 1. Equipment or furnishings. 2. a. A horse-drawn carriage with attendants. b. The carriage itself. 3. Archaic. A retinue, as of a noble or royal personage. 4. Archaic. a. A set of small household articles, such as a dinner or tea service. b. A collection of small articles for personal use. [French équipage, from équiper, to equip. See EQUIP.]

e·quip·ment (ī-kwĭp'mənt) n. Abbr. equip. 1. The act of equipping or the state of being equipped. 2. Something with which a person, an organization, or a thing is equipped. 3. The rolling stock especially of a transportation system. 4. The qualities or traits that make up the mental and emotional resources of an individual.

SYNONYMS: equipment, apparatus, gear, materiel, outfit, paraphernalia, rig, tackle. The central meaning shared by these nouns is “the materials needed for a purpose such as a task or a journey”: hiking equipment; laboratory apparatus; skiing gear; naval materiel; an explorer’s outfit; sports paraphernalia; a climber’s rig; fishing tackle.

e·qui·poise (ē'kwə-poiz', ěk'wə-) n. 1. Equality in distribution, as of weight, relationship, or emotional forces; equilibrium. 2. A counterpoise; a counterbalance.

e·qui·pol·lent (ē'kwə-pŏl'ənt, ěk'wə-) adj. 1. Equal in force, power, effectiveness, or significance. 2. Logic. Validly derived from each other; deducible.

3. Equivalent. — n. An equivalent. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin aequipollēns, aequipollent- : aequi-, equi- + pollēns, present participle of pollēre, to be powerful.] — e'qui-pol'lence n. — e'qui-pol'lent-ly adv.

e·qui·pon·der·ance (ē'kwə-pŏn'dər-əns, ěk'wə-) n. Equality of weight; equipoise. [From equiponderant, from Medieval Latin aequiponderāns, aequiponderant- present participle of aequiponderāre, to weigh the same. See EQUIPONDERATE.] — e'qui·pon'der·ant adj.

e·qui·pon·der·ate (ē'kwə-pŏn'də-rāt', ěk'wə-) v. tr. e·qui·pon·der·at·ed, e·qui·pon·der·at·ing, e·qui·pon·der·ates. 1. To counterbalance. 2. To give equal balance or weight to. [Medieval Latin aequiponderāre, aequiponderāt- : Latin aequi-, equi- + Latin ponderāre, to weigh; see (s)pen- in Appendix.]

e·qui·po·ten·tial (ē'kwə-pə-tĕn'shəl, ěk'wə-) adj. 1. Having equal potential. 2. Physics. Having the same electric potential at every point.

e·qui·prob·a·ble (ē'kwə-prŏb'ə-bəl, ěk'wə-) adj. Having equal mathematical or logical probability.

eq·ui·se·tum (ěk'wə-sē'təm) n. pl. eq·ui·se·tums or eq·ui·se·ta (-tə). See horsetail. [Latin equisaetum, horsetail : equus, horse; see ekwo- in Appendix + saeta, bristle, stiff hair.]

eq·ui·ta·ble (ěk'wī-tə-bəl) adj. Marked by or having equity; just and impartial. See Synonyms at fair¹. [French équitable, from Old French, from equite, equity. See EQUITY.] — eq'ui·ta·ble·ness n. — eq'ui·ta·bly adv.

eq·ui·tant (ěk'wī-tənt) adj. Overlapping at the base to form a flat, fanlike arrangement in two ranks, as the leaves of some irises. [Latin equitāns, equitant- present participle of equitāre, to ride horseback, from equus, equit-, horseman, from equus, horse. See ekwo- in Appendix.]

eq·ui·ta·tion (ěk'wī-tā'shən) n. The art and practice of riding a horse. [Latin equitātiō, equitātiōn-, from equitāre, to ride horseback. See EQUITANT.]

eq·ui·ty (ěk'wī-tē) n. pl. eq·ui·ties. 1. The state, quality, or ideal of being just, impartial, and fair. 2. Something that is just, impartial, and fair. 3. Law.

a. Justice applied in circumstances covered by law yet influenced by principles of ethics and fairness. b. A system of jurisprudence supplementing and serving to modify the rigor of common law. c. An equitable right or claim. d. Equity of redemption. 4. The residual value of a business or property beyond any mortgage thereon and liability therein. 5. a. The market value of securities less any debt incurred. b. Common stock and preferred stock. 6. Funds provided to a business by the sale of stock. [Middle English equite, from Old French, from Latin aequitās, from aequus, even, fair.]

equity of redemption (ěk'wī-tē ūv rī-dĕmp'shən) n. Law. The right of one who has mortgaged property to redeem that property upon payment of the sum due within a reasonable amount of time after the due date.

equity stock (ěk'wī-tē stŏk) n. Common stock and preferred stock.

equiv. abbr. Equivalence; equivalency; equivalent.

e·quiv·a·lence (ĭ-kwĭv'ə-ləns) n. Abbr. equiv. 1. The state or condition of being equivalent; equality. 2. Mathematics. An equivalence relation.

equivalence relation (ĭ-kwĭv'ə-ləns rĭ-lā'shən) n. Mathematics. A reflexive, symmetrical, and transitive relationship between elements of a set that establishes any two elements in the set as equivalent or nonequivalent.

e·quiv·a·len·cy (ĭ-kwĭv'ə-lən-sē) n. pl. e·quiv·a·len·cies. Abbr. equiv. Equivalence.

e·quiv·a·lent (ĭ-kwĭv'ə-lənt) adj. Abbr. equiv., eq. 1. a. Equal, as in value, force, or meaning. b. Having similar or identical effects. 2. Being essentially equal, all things considered: a wish that was equivalent to a command.

3. Mathematics. a. Capable of being put into a one-to-one relationship. Used of two sets. b. Having virtually identical or corresponding parts. 4. Chemistry. Having the same ability to combine. — n. Abbr. equiv., eq. 1. Something that is essentially equal to another: "Prejudicing vital foreign policy considerations in order to rescue individuals finds its domestic equivalent in the inflated awards paid to... accident and malpractice victims" (Moorhead Kennedy). 2. Chemistry. Equivalent weight. [Middle English, from Late Latin aequivalēns, aequivalent- present participle of aequivalēre, to have equal force : aequi-, equi- + valēre, to be strong; see wal- in Appendix.] — e·quiv'·a·lent·ly adv.

equivalent weight (ĭ-kwĭv'ə-lənt wāt) n. Chemistry. The weight of a substance that will combine with or replace one mole of hydrogen or one-half mole of oxygen. The equivalent weight is equal to the atomic weight divided by the valence.

e·quiv·o·cal (ĭ-kwĭv'ə-kəl) adj. 1. Open to two or more interpretations and often intended to mislead; ambiguous. See Synonyms at ambiguous. 2. Of uncertain significance. 3. Of a doubtful or uncertain nature. [From Late Latin aequivocus : Latin aequi-, equi- + Latin vōx, vōc-, voice; see wek^w- in Appendix.] — e·quiv'·o·cal'·i·ty (-kāl'ĭ-tē), e·quiv'·o·cal·ness n. — e·quiv'·o·cal·ly adv.

e·quiv·o·cate (ĭ-kwĭv'ə-kāt') *v. intr. e·quiv·o·cat·ed, e·quiv·o·cat·ing, e·quiv·o·cates. 1. To use equivocal language intentionally. 2. To avoid making an explicit statement. See Synonyms at lie². [Middle English equivocaten, from Medieval Latin aequivocāre, aequivocāt-, from Late Latin aequivocus, equivocal. See EQUIVOCAL.] — e·quiv'·o·ca'tor *n.

e·quiv·o·ca·tion (ĭ-kwĭv'ə-kā'shən) n. 1. The use of equivocal language. 2. An equivocal statement or expression.

eq·ui·voque also eq·ui·voke (ĕk'wə-vōk', ē'kwə-) n. 1. An equivocal word, phrase, or expression. 2. A pun. 3. A double meaning. [French équivoque, from Late Latin aequivocus, ambiguous. See EQUIVOCAL.]

Er The symbol for the element erbium.

ER abbr. Emergency room.

-er¹ suff. 1. a. One that performs a specified action: swimmer. b. One that undergoes or is capable of undergoing a specified action: broiler. c. One that has: ten-pounder. d. One associated or involved with: banker. 2. a. Native or resident of: New Yorker. b. One that is: foreigner. [Middle English, partly from Old English -ere (from Germanic -ārjaz*), partly from Anglo-French -er (from Old French -ier, from Latin -ārius, -ary), and partly from Old French -ere, -eor; see -OR¹.]

-er² suff. Used to form the comparative degree of adjectives and adverbs: darker; faster. [Middle English, from Old English -re, -ra.]

e·ra (ir'ə, ər'ə) n. 1. A period of time as reckoned from a specific date serving as the basis of its chronological system. 2. a. A period of time characterized by particular circumstances, events, or personages: the Colonial era of U.S. history; the Kennedy era. b. A point that marks the beginning of such a period of time. See Synonyms at period. 3. The longest division of geologic time, made up of one or more periods. [Late Latin aera, from Latin, counters, pl. of aes, aer-, bronze coin. See eyes- in Appendix.]

ERA abbr. 1. Baseball. Earned run average. 2. Equal Rights Amendment.

e·rad·i·cate (ī-rād'i-kāt') v. tr. e·rad·i·cat·ed, e·rad·i·cat·ing, e·rad·i·cates.

1. To tear up by the roots. 2. To get rid of as if by tearing up by the roots: Their goal was to eradicate poverty. See Synonyms at abolish. See Synonyms at eliminate. [Middle English eradicaten, from Latin ērādīcāre, ērādīcāt- : ē-, ex-, ex- + rādīx, rādīc-, root; see wrad- in Appendix.] —e·rad'i·ca·ble (-kə-bəl) adj.

—e·rad'i·ca'tion n. —e·rad'i·ca'tive adj. —e·rad'i·ca'tor n.

e·rase (ī-rās') v. tr. e·rased, e·ras·ing, e·ras·es. 1. a. To remove (something written, for example) by rubbing, wiping, or scraping. b. To remove (recorded material) from a magnetic tape or other storage medium: erased a file from the diskette. c. To remove recorded material from (a magnetic tape or disk, for example): erased the videocassette. 2. To remove all traces of. 3. To remove or destroy as if by wiping out: had to erase all thoughts of failure from his mind. [Latin ērādere, ērās-, to scratch out : ē-, ex-, ex- + rādere, to scrape; see rēd- in Appendix.] —e·ras'a·bil'i·ty n. —e·ras'a·ble adj.

SYNONYMS: erase, expunge, efface, delete, cancel. These verbs mean to remove or invalidate something, especially something recorded as by having been written down. To erase is to wipe or rub out, literally or figuratively: erased the equation from the blackboard. Unconsciousness erased the details of the accident from her memory. Expunge implies thoroughgoing removal that leaves no trace: expunged their names from the list. Efface also refers to the removal of every trace: effacing graffiti from subway cars; tried to efface prejudice from his mind. Delete is used principally in the sense of removing matter from a manuscript: The expletives were deleted from the transcript. Cancel refers to invalidating by or as if by drawing lines through something written or by indicating that the force or effect of something has been terminated: a postage stamp that had been canceled; cancel vows; cancel a debt.

e·ras·er (ĭ-rā'səɹ) n. An implement, such as a piece of rubber or a pad of felt, used for erasing.

E·ras·mus (ĭ-rāz'məs), Desiderius. 1466?-1536. Dutch Renaissance scholar and Roman Catholic theologian who sought to revive classical texts from antiquity, restore simple Christian faith based on Scripture, and eradicate the improprieties of the medieval Church. His works include The Manual of the Christian Knight (1503) and The Praise of Folly (1509).

E·ras·tus (ĭ-rās'təs), Thomas. 1524-1583. Swiss Protestant theologian and philosopher who opposed Calvinism and the use of excommunication as a punishment.

e·ra·sure (ĭ-rā'shəɹ) n. 1. The act or an instance of erasing. 2. The state of being erased: "The powerful images of his work... punishment, mutilation, erasure" (Joyce Carol Oates).

Er·a·to (ĕr'ə-tō') n. Greek Mythology. The Muse of lyric poetry and mime.

E·ra·tos·the·nes (ĕr'ə-tōs'thə-nēz'), Third century B.C. Greek mathematician, astronomer, and geographer who devised a map of the world and estimated the circumference of the earth and the distance to the moon and the sun.

Er·bil (ĭr'bĭl, ĕr'-) See Irbil.

er·bi·um (ûr'bĕ-əm) n. Symbol Er A soft, malleable, silvery rare-earth element, used in metallurgy and nuclear research and to color glass and porcelain. Atomic number 68; atomic weight 167.26; melting point 1,497°C; boiling point 2,900°C; specific gravity 9.051; valence 3. [After Ytterby, a town in Sweden.]

ere (âr) prep. Previous to; before. — conj. Rather than; before. [Middle English er, from Old English ǣr. See ayer- in Appendix.]

Er·e·bus (ĕr'ə-bəs) n. Greek Mythology. The dark region of the underworld through which the dead must pass before they reach Hades.

Erebus, Mount. A volcanic peak, 3,796.6 m (12,448 ft) high, on Ross Island in Antarctica.

e·rect (ĭ-rĕkt') adj. 1. Being in a vertical, upright position: an erect lily stalk; an erect posture. a. Vertical. 2. Being in a stiff, rigid physiological condition.

3. Archaic. Wide-awake; alert. — v. tr. e·rect·ed, e·rect·ing, e·rects. 1. To construct by assembling: erect a skyscraper. 2. To raise to a rigid or upright condition. 3. To fix in an upright position. 4. To set up; establish: erect a dynasty. 5. Mathematics. To construct (a perpendicular, for example) from or on a given base. [Middle English, from Latin ĕrĕctus, past participle of ĕrigere, to set up : ĕ-, ex-, ex- + regere, to guide; see reg- in Appendix.] — e·rect'a·ble adj.

—e·rect'ly adv. —e·rect'ness n.

e-rec-tile (ĭ-rĕk'təl, -tĭl') adj. 1. Capable of being raised to an upright position.

2. Anatomy. Of or relating to tissue that is capable of filling with blood and becoming rigid. —e-rec-til'i-ty (-tĭl'ĭ-tē) n.

e-rec-tion (ĭ-rĕk'shən) n. 1. The act of erecting. 2. Something erected; a construction. 3. Physiology. a. The firm and enlarged condition of a body organ or part when the erectile tissue surrounding it becomes filled with blood, especially such a condition of the penis or clitoris. b. The process of filling with blood.

e-rec-tor (ĭ-rĕk'tər) n. 1. One that erects: an erector of skyscrapers. 2. Anatomy. A muscle that causes or maintains the erection of a body part.

E region (ē' rĕ'jən) n. See E layer.

ere-long (âr-lông', -lông') adv. Before long; soon.

er-e-mite (âr'ə-mīt') n. A recluse or hermit, especially a religious recluse.

[Middle English, from Late Latin erēmīta. See HERMIT.] —er'e-mit'ic (-mīt'ĭk), er'e-mit'i-cal adj.

er-e-mur-us (ĕr'ə-myōōr'əs) n. Any of several Asiatic plants of the genus Eremurus in the lily family, having a tall cluster of colorful bell-shaped flowers.

[New Latin Eremurus, genus name : Greek erēmos, solitary + Greek oura, tail; see ors- in Appendix.]

ere-now (âr-nou') adv. Before now; heretofore.

e-rep-sin (ĭ-rĕp'sən) n. An enzyme complex found in intestinal and pancreatic juices that functions in the breakdown of polypeptides into amino acids. [Latin ēripere, to snatch away (ē-, ex-, ex- + rapere, to seize); see rep- in Appendix + (P)EPSIN.]

er-e-thism (ĕr'ə-thĭz'əm) n. Abnormal irritability or sensitivity of an organ or a body part to stimulation. [French éréthisme, from Greek erethisma, a provocation, from erethizein, to irritate.] —er'e-this'mic (-mĭk) adj.

E-re-tri-a (ĕ-rĕ'trĕ-ə) An ancient city of Greece on the southern coast of Euboea. Founded as an Ionian colony, it was destroyed by the Persians in 490 B.C.

E-re-van (yĕ'rĭ-vän') See Yerevan.

ere-while (âr-hwĭl', -wĭl') also ere-whiles (-hwĭlz', -wĭlz') adv. Archaic. Some time ago; heretofore.

Er-furt (ĕr'fərt, -fōōrt') A city of central Germany southwest of Leipzig. Site of an episcopal see founded by Saint Boniface in the eighth century, it was later a free imperial city and a member of the Hanseatic League. Population, 214,231.

erg (ûrg) n. The centimeter-gram-second unit of energy or work equal to the work done by a force of one dyne acting over a distance of one centimeter. [From Greek ergon, work. See werg- in Appendix.]

er-go (ûr'gō, âr'-) conj. Consequently; therefore. — adv. Consequently; hence. [Latin ergō. See reg- in Appendix.]

er-go-cal-cif-er-ol (ûr'gō-kāl-sĭf'ə-rōl', -rōl', -rōl') n. See vitamin D₂. [ERGO(T) + CALCIFEROL.]

er-go-graph (ûr'gə-grăf') n. A device for measuring the work capacity of a muscle or group of muscles during contraction. [Greek ergon, work; see werg- in Appendix + -GRAPH.] —er'go-graph'ic adj.

er-gom-e-ter (ûr-gŏm'ĭ-tər) n. An instrument for measuring the amount of work done by a muscle or group of muscles. [Greek ergon, work; see werg- in Appendix + -METER.] —er'go-met'ric (ûr'gə-mĕt'řĭk) adj.

er-go-nom-ics (ûr'gə-nŏm'ĭks) n. 1. (used with a sing. verb). 2. The applied science of equipment design, as for the workplace, intended to maximize productivity by reducing operator fatigue and discomfort. Also called biotechnology, human engineering, human factors engineering. 3. (used with a pl. verb). Design factors, as for the workplace, intended to maximize productivity by minimizing operator fatigue and discomfort: The ergonomics of the new office were felt to be optimal. [Greek ergon, work; see werg- in Appendix + (ECO)NOMICS.]

—er'go-nom'ic, er'go-no-met'ric (-nə-mĕt'řĭk) adj. —er'go-nom'i-cal-ly adv. —er-gon'o-mist (ûr-gŏn'ə-mĭst) n.

er-gos-ter-ol (ûr-gŏs'tə-rŏl', -rŏl', -rŏl') n. A crystalline sterol, C₂₈H₄₃OH, synthesized by yeast from sugars or derived from ergot and converted to vitamin D₂ when exposed to ultraviolet radiation. [ERGO(T) + STEROL.]

er-got (ûr'gət, -gŏt') n. 1. A fungus (Claviceps purpurea) that infects various cereal plants and forms compact black masses of branching filaments that replace many of the grains of the host plant. 2. The disease caused by such a fungus. 3. The dried sclerotia of ergot, usually obtained from rye seed and used as a source of several medicinally important alkaloids and as the basic source of lysergic acid. [French, from Old French argot, cock's spur (from its shape).]

—er-got'ic adj.

er-got-a-mine (ûr-gŏt'ə-mĕn', -mĭn) n. A crystalline alkaloid, C₃₃H₃₅N₅O₅, derived from ergot that induces vasoconstriction and is used especially in treating migraine.

er-got-ism (ûr'gə-tĭz'əm) n. Poisoning caused by consuming ergot-infected grain or grain products, or from excessive use of drugs containing ergot.

Er-gun He (ĕr'gŏn' hĕ', ĕr'gŭn hĕ') See Argun River.

Er-hard (ĕr'hărt'), Ludwig. 1897-1977. German politician who served as chancellor of West Germany (1963-1966).

Er-ic-son also Er-ics-son (ĕr'ĭk-sən), Leif. fl. c. 1000. Norwegian navigator who, according to Norse sagas, was blown off course during a voyage from Norway to Greenland and thereby discovered and named Vinland.

Er-ics-son (ĕr'ĭk-sən), John. 1803-1889. American engineer and inventor who built the first ironclad warship, the Monitor (1862), which engaged the Confederate Merrimack in a famous naval battle of the Civil War (March 9, 1862).

Er-ics-son (ĕr'ĭk-sən), Leif. See Leif Ericson.

Eric the Red (ĕr'ík thē rĕd), Tenth century. Norwegian navigator who explored and named Greenland and founded its first settlement (c. 985).

E·rid·a·nus (ĭ-rĭd'n-əs) n. A constellation in the Southern Hemisphere near Fornax and Cetus. [Greek Eridanos, mythical river associated with the myth of Phaeton.]

E·rie¹ (ĭr'ē) n. pl. Erie or E·ries. 1. a. A Native American people formerly inhabiting the southern shore of Lake Erie in northern Ohio, northwest Pennsylvania, and western New York. The Erie ceased to exist as a people after being defeated by the Iroquois in the mid-17th century. b. A member of this people. 2. The Iroquoian language of the Erie.

E·rie² (ĭr'ē) A city of northwest Pennsylvania on Lake Erie southwest of Buffalo, New York. A port of entry, it was laid out in 1795 on the site of Fort Presque Isle, built by the French in 1753. Population, 108,718.

Erie, Lake. One of the Great Lakes, bounded by southern Ontario, western New York, northwest Pennsylvania, northern Ohio, and southeast Michigan. A vital part of the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Seaway system, it is linked with the Hudson River by the New York State Barge Canal.

Erie Canal (ĭr'ē kə-nāl') An artificial waterway extending about 579 km (360 mi) across central New York from Albany to Buffalo. Constructed from 1817 to 1825 and enlarged numerous times after 1835, it is now part of the New York State Barge Canal.

E·rig·e·na (ĭ-rĭj'ə-nə), John Scotus. 810?-877?. Irish-born theologian and philosopher who sought to reconcile Neo-Platonism and Christian belief in his principal work, On the Division of Nature (862-866).

E·rik·son (ĕr'ík-sən), Erik Homburger. 1902-1994. German-born American psychoanalyst who proposed that people acquire mature psychosexual traits by overcoming a series of personal crises. His works include Childhood and Society (1950).

E·rin (ĕr'ĭn) A poetic name for Ireland.

E·rin·y·es (ĭ-rĭn'ē-ēz') pl.n. Greek Mythology. The Furies.

E·ris (ĭr'ĭs, ĕr'-) n. Greek Mythology. The goddess of discord.

e·ris·tic (ĭ-rĭs'tĭk) also e·ris·ti·cal (-tĭ-kəl) adj. Given to or characterized by disputatious, often specious argument. — n. 1. One given to or expert in dispute or argument. 2. The art or practice of disputation and polemics. [Greek eristikos, from erizein, to wrangle, quarrel, from eris, erid-, strife.]

E·ri·tre·a (ĕr'ĭ-trĕ'ə) A country north of Ethiopia bordering on the Red Sea. It was proclaimed an Italian colony in 1890 and later became the focal point of Italy's conquest of Ethiopia (1935-1936). Eritrea became part of Ethiopia in 1952, and gained independence in 1993. — E·ri·tre'an adj. & n.

E·ri·van (yĕ'rĭ-vän') See Yerevan.

Er-lang-en (ĕr'läng'ən) A city of south-central Germany north-northeast of Nuremberg. Chartered in 1398, it passed to Bavaria in 1810. Population, 100,523.

Er-lang-er (ûr'läng'ər), Joseph. 1874-1965. American physiologist. He shared a 1944 Nobel Prize for work on nerve fibers.

Er-len·mey·er flask (ûr'lən-mī'ər fläsk, âr'-) n. A conical laboratory flask with a narrow neck and flat, broad bottom. [After Richard August Carl Emil Erlenmeyer (1825-1909), German chemist.]

er-mine (ûr'mĭn) n. 1. A weasel (Mustela erminea) of northern regions, having a black-tipped tail and dark brown fur that in winter changes to white. 2. The commercially valuable white fur of this animal. [Middle English ermin, from Old French ermine, possibly of Germanic origin, or from Medieval Latin (mūs) Armenius, Armenian (mouse).]

Er-na-ku-lum (ĕr-nä'kə-ləm) A city of southwest India on the Malabar Coast west of Madurai. It has a Jewish sector that may date to the second or third century A.D. Population, 213,811.

erne also ern (ûrn) n. Any of several sea eagles, especially Haliaeetus albicilla, of Europe. [Middle English ern, eagle, from Old English earn. See or- in Appendix.]

Ernst (ĕrnst), Max. 1891-1976. German-born artist and a founder of Dada and surrealism. Noted for his use of frottage and collage, he explored the subconscious through his stylistically varied works, such as the painting Old Man, Woman, and Flower (1923).

e·rode (ĭ-rōd') v. e·rod·ed, e·rod·ing, e·rodes. — v. tr. 1. To wear (something) away by or as if by abrasion: Waves eroded the shore. 2. To eat into; corrode. 3. To make or form by wearing away: The river eroded a deep valley. 4. To cause to diminish, deteriorate, or disappear as if by eating into or wearing away: "Long enduring peace often erodes popular resolution" (C.L. Sulzberger). — v. intr. To become worn or eaten away: The cliffs have eroded over the centuries. Public confidence in the administration eroded. [Latin ērōdere, to gnaw off, eat away : ē-, ex-, ex- + rōdere, to gnaw; see rēd- in Appendix.] — e·rod'·i·bil'·i·ty n. — e·rod'·i·ble adj.

e·rog·e·nous (ĭ-rōj'ə-nəs) adj. 1. Responsive or sensitive to sexual stimulation: erogenous zones. 2. Arousing sexual desire. [Greek erōs, sexual love + -GENOUS.]

Er-os (ĕr'ōs', îr'-) n. 1. Greek Mythology. The god of love, son of Aphrodite. 2. Psychiatry. a. The sum of all instincts for self-preservation. b. Sexual drive; libido. 3. Often eros. Creative, often sexual yearning, love, or desire: "The new playful eros means that impulses and modes from other spheres enter the relations between men and women" (Herbert Gold). [Latin Erōs, from Greek, from erōs, sexual love.]

e·rose (ĭ-rōs') adj. Irregularly notched, toothed, or indented: erose leaves.

[From Latin ērōsus, past participle of ērōdere, to gnaw off. See ERODE.]

—e·rose'ly adv.

e·ro·sion (ĭ-rō'zhən) n. 1. The process of eroding or the condition of being eroded: erosion of the beach; progressive erosion of confidence in our legal system; erosion of the value of the dollar abroad. 2. The group of natural processes, including weathering, dissolution, abrasion, corrosion, and transportation, by which material is worn away from the earth's surface. [Latin ērōsiō, ērōsiōn-, an eating away, from ērōsus, eaten away. See EROSE.] —e·ro'sion·al adj. —e·ro'sion·al·ly adv.

e·ro·sive (ĭ-rō'siv) adj. Causing erosion: the erosive effect of ocean waves on the shoreline. —e·ro'sive·ness, e·ro'siv'i·ty n.

e·rot·ic (ĭ-rōt'ik) adj. 1. Of or concerning sexual love and desire; amatory.

2. Tending to arouse sexual desire. 3. Dominated by sexual love or desire.

[Greek erōtikos, from erōs, erōt-, sexual love.] —e·rot'ic n. —e·rot'i·cal·ly adv.

e·rot·i·ca (ĭ-rōt'ī-kə) pl.n. (used with a sing. or pl. verb). Literature or art intended to arouse sexual desire. [Greek erōtika, from neuter pl. of erōtikos, erotic. See EROTIC.]

e·rot·i·cism (ĭ-rōt'ī-sīz'əm) n. 1. An erotic quality or theme. 2. Sexual excitement. 3. Abnormally persistent sexual excitement. —e·rot'i·cist n.

e·rot·i·cize (ĭ-rōt'ī-sīz') v. tr. e·rot·i·cized, e·rot·i·ciz·ing, e·rot·i·ciz·es. To make erotic. —e·rot'i·ci·za'tion (-sī-zā'shən) n.

er·o·tism (ēr'ə-tīz'əm) n. Eroticism.

er·o·tize (ēr'ə-tīz') v. tr. er·o·tized, er·o·tiz·ing, er·o·tiz·es. To imbue with erotic feeling or import.

e·ro·to·ma·ni·a (ĭ-rō'tə-mā'nē-ə, ĭ-rōt'ə-) n. Excessive sexual desire. [Greek erōtomania: erōs, erōt-, sexual love + -mania, -mania.]

err (ûr, ěr) v. intr. erred, err·ing, errs. 1. To make an error or a mistake. 2. To violate accepted moral standards; sin. 3. Archaic. To stray. [Middle English erren, from Old French errer, from Latin errāre, to wander. See ers- in Appendix.]

USAGE NOTE: The pronunciation (ûr) for the word err is traditional, but the pronunciation (ěr) has gained ground in recent years, perhaps owing to influence from errant and error, and must now be regarded as an acceptable variant. The Usage Panel was split on the matter: 56 percent preferred (ûr), 34 percent preferred (ěr), and 10 percent accepted both pronunciations.

er·ran·cy (ēr'an-sē) n. pl. er·ran·cies. The state of erring or an instance of it.

er·rand (ēr'ənd) n. 1. a. A short trip taken to perform a specified task, usually for another. b. The purpose or object of such a trip: Your errand was to mail the letter. 2. Archaic. a. A mission; an embassy. b. An oral message that has been entrusted to one. [Middle English erand, from Old English ǣrend.]

er·rant (ĕr'ənt) adj. 1. Roving, especially in search of adventure: knights errant.

2. Straying from the proper course or standards: errant youngsters.

3. a. Wandering outside the established limits: errant lambs. b. Aimless or irregular in motion: an errant afternoon breeze. [Middle English erraunt, from Anglo-Norman, partly from Old French errer, to travel about (from Vulgar Latin iterāre*, from Latin iter, journey); see ei- in Appendix, and partly from Old French errer, to err; see ERR.] —er'rant n. —er'rant·ly adv.

er·rant·ry (ĕr'ən-trē) n. The condition of traveling or roving about, especially in search of adventure.

er·ra·ta (ĭ-rā'tə, ĭ-rā'-) n. Plural of erratum.

er·rat·ic (ĭ-răt'ĭk) adj. 1. Having no fixed or regular course; wandering.

2. Lacking consistency, regularity, or uniformity. 3. Deviating from the customary course in conduct or opinion; eccentric: erratic behavior. [Middle English erratik, from Old French erratique, from Latin errāticus, from errāre, to wander. See ers- in Appendix.] —er-rat'i·cal·ly adv. —er-rat'i·cism (-ĭ-sĭz'əm) n.

er·ra·tum (ĭ-rā'təm, ĭ-rā'-) n. pl. er-ra-ta (-tə). An error in printing or writing, especially such an error noted in a list of corrections and bound into a book.

[Latin errātum, from neuter past participle of errāre, to stray. See ers- in Appendix.]

er·rhine (ĕr'in') adj. Promoting or inducing nasal discharge. — n. A medication that promotes or induces such discharge. [New Latin errhinum, an errhine medicine, from Greek errinon : en-, in; see EN-² + rhis, rhin-, nose.]

Er Rif (ĕr rĭf') A hilly region along the coast of northern Morocco. The Berber peoples of the area remained fiercely independent until they were subdued by French and Spanish forces (1925-1926).

er·ro·ne·ous (ĭ-rō'nē-əs) adj. Containing or derived from error; mistaken: erroneous conclusions. [Middle English, from Latin errōneus, from errō, errōn-, a vagabond, from errāre, to err, wander. See ers- in Appendix.] —er-ro'ne·ous·ly adv. —er-ro'ne·ous·ness n.

er·ror (ĕr'ər) n. 1. An act, an assertion, or a belief that unintentionally deviates from what is correct, right, or true. 2. The condition of having incorrect or false knowledge. 3. The act or an instance of deviating from an accepted code of behavior. 4. A mistake. 5. Mathematics. The difference between a computed or measured value and a true or theoretically correct value. 6. Abbr. e, e. Baseball. A defensive fielding or throwing misplay by a player when a play normally should have resulted in an out or prevented an advance by a base runner. [Middle English errour, from Old French, from Latin error, from errāre, to err. See ers- in Appendix.] —er'ror·less adj.

SYNONYMS: error, mistake, oversight. These nouns refer to what is not in accord with truth, accuracy, or propriety. Error indicates departure from the correct path; it often implies deviation from what is morally or ethically right or proper: “Irrationally held truths may be more harmful than reasoned errors” (Thomas H. Huxley). “There is no error so monstrous that it fails to find defenders among the ablest men” (Lord Acton). Mistake often implies misunderstanding or misinterpretation and is usually weaker than error in imputing blame or censure: “Nothing is easy in war. Mistakes are always paid for in casualties” (Dwight D. Eisenhower). Oversight refers to an inadvertent omission or error that results from inattention: Through a regrettable oversight I failed to send you an invitation. See also Synonyms at offense er·satz (ĕr'zäts', ěr-zäts') adj. Being an imitation or a substitute, usually an inferior one; artificial: ersatz coffee made mostly of chicory. See Synonyms at artificial. [German, replacement, from ersetzen, to replace, from Old High German irsezzan : ir-, out; see ud- in Appendix + sezzan, to set; see sed- in Appendix.]

—er'satz' n.

Erse (ûrs) n. 1. See Irish Gaelic. 2. See Scottish Gaelic. [Middle English Ersch, Erisch, Irish, from Old English Irass, the Irish. See IRISH.] —Erse adj.

Er·skine (ûr'skîn'), John. 1509-1591. Scottish religious reformer whose moderate views eased the tension between Protestants and the Catholic royalty in Scotland.

erst (ûrst) adv. Archaic. Erstwhile. [Middle English erest, from Old English ærest. See ayer- in Appendix.]

erst·while (ûrst'hwîl', -wîl') adv. In the past; at a former time; formerly. — adj. Former: our erstwhile companions.

e·ruc·ic acid (ĭ-rōō'sĭk äs'ĭd) n. A fatty acid, $\text{CH}_3(\text{CH}_2)_7\text{CH}:\text{CH}(\text{CH}_2)_{11}\text{CO}_2\text{H}$, making up 40 to 50 percent of the total fatty acid in rapeseed, wallflower seed, and mustard seed. [From New Latin Ērūca, rocket, cabbage, from Latin ērūca.]

e·ruct (ĭ-rŭkt') v. tr. intr. e·ruct·ed, e·ruct·ing, e·ructs. To belch. [Latin ēructāre : ē-, ex-, ex- + ructāre, to belch; see reug- in Appendix.]

e·ruc·ta·tion (ĭ-rŭk-tā'shən, ē'rŭk-) n. The act or an instance of belching.
—e·ruc'ta·tive (ĭ-rŭk'tə-tĭv) adj.

er·u·dite (ĕr'yə-dīt', ĕr'ə-) adj. Characterized by erudition; learned. See Synonyms at learned. [Middle English erudit, from Latin ēruditus, past participle of ērudire, to instruct : ē-, ex-, ex- + rudis, rough, untaught; see RUDE.]

—er'u·dite'ly adv. —er'u·dite'ness n.

WORD HISTORY: One might like to be erudite but hesitate to be rude. This preference is supported by the etymological relationship between erudite and rude. Erudite comes from the Latin adjective ērudītus, “well-instructed, learned,” from the past participle of the verb ērudīre, “to educate, train.” The verb is in turn formed from the prefix ex-, “out, out of,” and the adjective rudis, “untaught, untrained,” the source of our word rude. The English word erudite is first recorded in a work possibly written before 1425 with the senses “instructed, learned.” Erudite meaning “learned” is supposed to have become rare except in sarcastic use, at least during the latter part of the 19th century, but the word now seems to have been restored to favor.

er·u·di·tion (ĕr'yə-dīsh'ən, ĕr'ə-) n. Deep, extensive learning. See Synonyms at knowledge.

e·rum·pent (ĭ-rŭm'pənt) adj. Bursting through or as if through a surface or covering. [Latin ērumpēns, ērumpent- present participle of ērumpere, to burst out. See ERUPT.]

e·rupt (ĭ-rŭpt') v. e·rupt·ed, e·rupt·ing, e·rupts. — v. intr. 1. To emerge violently from restraint or limits; explode: My neighbor erupted in anger over the noise. 2. To become violently active: The volcano erupted after years of dormancy. 3. To force out or release something, such as steam, with violence or suddenness. 4. a. To break through the gums in developing. Used of teeth. b. To appear on the skin. Used of a rash or blemish. — v. tr. To force out violently. [Latin ērumpere, ērūpt- : ē-, ex-, ex- + rumpere, to break; see reup- in Appendix.] — e·rup'tive adj. — e·rup'tive·ly adv.

e·rup·tion (ĭ-rŭp'shən) n. 1. a. The act or process of erupting. b. An instance of erupting. 2. A sudden, often violent outburst. 3. a. An appearance of a rash or blemish on the skin. b. Such a rash or blemish. 4. The emergence of a tooth through the gums.

Er·vin (ûr'vĭn), Samuel James, Jr. Born 1896. American politician who as U.S. senator from North Carolina (1954-1974) led the committee that investigated the Watergate Scandal during the Nixon administration.

Er·vine (ûr'vĭn), Saint John Greer. 1883-1971. British writer best known for his dramas, such as The First Mrs. Fraser (1928), and for his drama criticism.

Er·ving (ûr'vĭng), Julius Winfield. Known as “Dr. J.” Born 1950. American basketball player. A forward for the Philadelphia 76ers (1976-1987), he was known for his electrifying dunk shot and consistent all-around play.

-ery or -ry suff. 1. A place for: bakery. 2. A collection or class: finery. 3. A state or condition: slavery. 4. Act; practice: bribery. 5. Characteristics or qualities of: snobbery. [Middle English -erie, from Old French : -er, agent suff. (partly from -ier; see -er¹, and partly from -ere, -eor); see -OR¹ + -ie, noun suff.; see -Y².]

Er·y·man·thos or Er·y·man·thus (ĕr'ə-mănthəs, -thŏs, ĕ-rĕ'măn-thŏs') A mountain range of southern Greece in the northwest Peloponnesus. The tallest peak is Mount Erymanthos, about 2,225 m (7,295 ft) high. In Greek legend, the range was the haunt of the ferocious Erymanthian boar, which was ultimately slain by Hercules. —Er'y-man'thi-an adj.

e-ryn-go (ĭ-rĭng'gō) n. pl. e-ryn-goes. Any of several plants of the genus Eryngium having spiny leaves and dense clusters of small bluish flowers. [Alteration of Latin ĕryngion, sea holly, from Greek ĕrūngion, diminutive of ĕrūngos.]

er-y-sip-e-las (ĕr'ĭ-sĭp'ə-ləs, ĭr'-) n. An acute disease of the skin and subcutaneous tissue caused by a species of hemolytic streptococcus and marked by localized inflammation and fever. Also called Saint Anthony's fire [Middle English erisipila, from Latin erysipelas, from Greek erūsipelas : erūsi-, red; see reudh- in Appendix + -pelas, skin; see pel-³ in Appendix.] —er'y-si-pel'a-tous (-sĭ-pĕl'ə-təs) adj.

er-y-sip-e-loid (ĕr'ĭ-sĭp'ə-loid', ĭr'ə-) n. An infectious disease of the skin that is contracted by handling fish or meat infected with the bacterium Erysipelothrix rhusiopathiae and characterized by red lesions on the hands. [ERYSIPEL(AS) + -OID.]

er-y-the-ma (ĕr'ə-thĕ'mə) n. Redness of the skin caused by dilatation and congestion of the capillaries, often a sign of inflammation or infection. [Greek eruthēma, from eruthainein, to redden, be red, from eruthros, red. See reudh- in Appendix.] —er'y-them'a-tous (-thĕm'ə-təs, -thĕ'mə-), er'y-the-mat'ic (-măt'ĭk), er'y-the'mic adj.

er-y-thor-bic acid (ĕr'ə-thōr'bĭk äs'ĭd) n. An optical isomer of ascorbic acid used as an antioxidant. [ERYTH(RO)- + (ASC)ORBIC ACID.]

erythr- pref. Variant of erythro-.

er-y-thrism (ĕr'ə-thrĭz'əm) n. Unusual red pigmentation, as of hair or plumage. —er'y-thris'mal (-thrĭz'məl) adj.

er-y-thrite (ĕr'ə-thrĭt') n. Geology. A reddish secondary cobalt mineral, $\text{CO}_3(\text{AsO}_4)_2 \cdot 8\text{H}_2\text{O}$, found in veins bearing cobalt and arsenic and used in coloring glass.

erythro- or erythr- pref. 1. Red: erythrocyte. 2. Erythrocyte: erythropoiesis. [From Greek eruthros, red. See reudh- in Appendix.]

e-ryth-ro-blast (ĭ-rĭth'rə-bläst') n. Any of the nucleated cells normally found only in bone marrow that develop into erythrocytes. —e-ryth'ro-blas'tic adj.

e-ryth-ro-blas-to-sis (ĭ-rĭth'rō-blă-stō'sĭs) n. pl. e-ryth-ro-blas-to-ses (-sĕz). The abnormal presence of erythroblasts in the blood.

erythroblastosis fe-tal-is (ĭ-rĭth'rō-blă-stō'sĭs fĭ-tăl'ĭs) n. A severe hemolytic disease of a fetus or newborn infant caused by the production of maternal antibodies against the fetal red blood cells, usually involving Rh incompatibility between the mother and fetus. [New Latin, fetal erythroblastosis.]

e-ryth-ro-cyte (ĭ-rĭth'rə-sīt') n. See red blood cell. —e-ryth'ro-cyt'ic (-sīt'ĭk) adj.

e·ryth·ro·cy·tom·e·ter (ĭ-rĭth' rə-sī-tōm' ĭ-tər) n. A device for counting the number of red blood cells in a blood sample.

e·ryth·ro·my·cin (ĭ-rĭth' rə-mī'sĭn) n. An antibiotic obtained from a strain of the actinomycete Streptomyces erythreus, effective against many gram-positive bacteria and some gram-negative bacteria.

e·ryth·ro·poi·e·sis (ĭ-rĭth' rō-poi-ē'sĭs) n. The formation or production of red blood cells. — e·ryth'ro·poi·et'ic (-ēt'ĭk) adj.

e·ryth·ro·poi·e·tin (ĭ-rĭth' rō-poi-ē'tĭn) n. A glycoprotein hormone that stimulates the production of red blood cells by bone marrow. Produced mainly by the kidneys, the hormone is released in response to decreased levels of oxygen in body tissue. [ERYTHROPOIET(IC) + -IN.]

Erz·ge·bir·ge (ēr'ts'gə-bîr'gə) A mountain range extending about 153 km (95 mi) along the border of Germany and Czech Republic. It rises to 1,244.4 m (4,080 ft).

Er·zu·rum (ēr'zə-rōōm') A city of eastern Turkey east of Ankara. It was known in the fifth century A.D. as an important Byzantine frontier post. Population, 190,241.

Es The symbol for the element einsteinium.

-es¹ suff. Variant of -s¹.

-es² suff. Variant of -s².

Es·a·ki (ĭ-sä'kē), Leo. Born 1925. Japanese-born physicist. He shared a 1973 Nobel Prize for theoretical advances in the field of solid-state electronics.

E·sar·had·don (ē'sār-hăd'n), Died 669 B.C. King of Assyria (680-669) who conquered Egypt (671).

E·sau (ē'sô) In the Old Testament, the eldest son of Isaac and Rebecca who sold his birthright to his twin brother, Jacob, for a mess of pottage.

Es·bjerg (ēs'bē-ĕrg', -byēr') A city of southwest Denmark on the North Sea. It is a commercial and industrial center with major fisheries. Population, 80,534.

es·ca·drille (ēs'kə-drĭl', -drē') n. A unit of a European air command, as in France during World War I, typically containing six aircraft. [French, from Spanish escuadrilla, diminutive of escuadra, squadron, from escuadrar, to square off, from Vulgar Latin exquadrāre*. See SQUARE.]

es·ca·lade (ēs'kə-lăd', -lăd') n. The act of scaling a fortified wall or rampart. [French, from Italian scalata, ultimately from Late Latin scāla, from Latin scālae, steps. See skand- in Appendix.] — es'ca·lade' v. — es'ca·lad'er n.

es·ca·late (ēs'kə-lăt') v. es·ca·lat·ed, es·ca·lat·ing, es·ca·lates. — v. tr. To increase, enlarge, or intensify: escalated the hostilities in the Persian Gulf. — v. intr. To increase in intensity or extent: “a deepening long-term impasse that is certain to escalate” (Stewart L. Udall). [Back-formation from ESCALATOR.]

— es'ca·la'tion n. — es'ca·la·to'ry (-lə-tôr'ē, -tôr'ē) adj.

es-ca-la-tor (ēs'kə-lā'tər) n. 1. A moving stairway consisting of steps attached to a continuously circulating belt. 2. An escalator clause. [Originally a trademark.]

escalator clause (ēs'kə-lā'tər klôz) n. A provision in a contract stipulating an increase or a decrease, as in wages, benefits, or prices, under certain conditions, such as changes in the cost of living.

es-cal·lop (ĭ-sköl'əp, ĭ-skäl'-) n. & v. Variant of scallop. [Middle English escalop, from Old French escalope. See SCALLOP.]

Es-cam-bi-a (ə-skām'bē-ə) A river rising in southeast Alabama as the Conecuh River and flowing about 372 km (231 mi) southwest to join Escambia Creek, about 121 km (75 mi) long, and then southward into northwest Florida, where it empties into Escambia Bay, an arm of the Gulf of Mexico near Pensacola.

es-ca-pade (ēs'kə-pād') n. An adventurous, unconventional act or undertaking. [French, a trick, an escape, from Old French, from Old Spanish escapada (from escapar, to escape), or from Old Italian scappata (from scappare, to escape) both from Vulgar Latin excappāre*, to escape. See ESCAPE.]

es-cape (ĭ-skāp') v. es-caped, es-cap-ing, es-apes. — v. intr. 1. To break loose from confinement; get free. 2. To issue from confinement or an enclosure; leak or seep out: Gas was escaping. 3. To avoid capture, danger, or harm: Ten prisoners had escaped. 4. Botany. To grow beyond a cultivated area. — v. tr.

1. To succeed in avoiding. 2. To break loose from; get free of. 3. To elude the memory or comprehension of: Her name escapes me. The book's significance escaped him. 4. To issue involuntarily from: A sigh escaped my lips. — n.

1. The act or an instance of escaping. 2. A means of escaping. 3. A means of obtaining temporary freedom from worry, care, or unpleasantness: Television is my escape from worry. 4. A gradual effusion from an enclosure; a leakage.

5. Botany. A plant that has become established away from the area of cultivation.

6. Computer Science. A key used especially to interrupt a command, exit a program, or change levels within a program. [Middle English escapen, from Old North French escaper, from Vulgar Latin excappāre*, to get out of one's cape, get away : Latin ex-, ex- + Medieval Latin cappa, cloak.] — es-cap'a-ble adj.

— es-cap'er n.

SYNONYMS: escape, avoid, shun, eschew, evade, elude. These verbs mean to get or stay away from persons or things. Escape can mean to get free, as from confinement, or to remain untouched or unaffected by something unwanted: "Let no guilty man escape, if it can be avoided" (Ulysses S. Grant). "It is curious... what shifts we make to escape thinking" (James Russell Lowell). Avoid always involves an effort to keep away from what is considered to be a source of danger or difficulty: avoiding strenuous exercise; avoided committing herself. Shun refers to deliberately keeping clear of what is unwelcome or undesirable: "Family friends... she shunned like the plague” (John Galsworthy). Eschew involves staying clear of something because to do otherwise would be unwise or morally wrong: “Eschew evil, and do good” (Book of Common Prayer). Evade implies adroit maneuvering and sometimes implies dishonesty or irresponsibility: evading capture; tried to evade jury duty. To elude is to get away from artfully: elude a blow; eluded his pursuers.

USAGE NOTE: Traditionally, escape is used with from when it means “break loose” and with a direct object when it means “avoid.” Thus we might say The forger escaped from prison by hiding in a laundry truck, but The forger escaped prison when he turned in his accomplices in order to get a suspended sentence. In recent years, however, escape has been used with a direct object in the sense “break free of”: The craft will acquire sufficient velocity to escape the sun’s gravitational attraction. This usage is well established and should be regarded as standard.

escape clause (ĭ-skāp’ klōz) n. A clause in a contract that specifies the conditions under which the promisor is relieved of liability for failure to meet the terms of the contract.

es·cap·ee (ĭ-skā’pē’, ěs’kā-) n. One that has escaped, especially an escaped prisoner. See Usage Note at -ee¹.

es·cape·ment (ĭ-skāp’mənt) n. 1. A mechanism consisting in general of an escape wheel and an anchor, used especially in timepieces to control movement of the wheel and to provide periodic energy impulses to a pendulum or balance.

2. A mechanism, as in a typewriter, that controls the lateral movement of the carriage. 3. a. An escape. b. A means or way of escape.

escape velocity (ĭ-skāp’ və-lōs’ī-tē) n. The minimum velocity that a body must attain to overcome the gravitational attraction of another body, such as the earth.

escape wheel (ĭ-skāp’ hwēl) n. The rotating notched wheel periodically engaged and disengaged by the anchor in an escapement.

es·cap·ism (ĭ-skā’piz’əm) n. The tendency to escape from daily reality or routine by indulging in daydreaming, fantasy, or entertainment.

es·cap·ist (ĭ-skā’pist) adj. Indulging in or characterized by escapism.

—es·cap·ist n.

es·cap·ol·o·gy (ěs’kā-pōl’ə-jē) n. The art, skill, or practice of escaping.

—es’cap·ol·o·gist n.

es·car·got (ěs’kār-gō’) n. pl. es·car·gots (-gō’). An edible snail, especially one prepared as an appetizer or entrée. [French, from Old French, from Old Provençal escaragol.]

es·ca·role (ěs’kə-rōl’) n. A variety of endive (Cichorium endivia) having leaves with irregular, frilled edges and often used in salads. [French, from Old French scariole, from Late Latin ĕscāriola, chicory, from Latin ĕscārius, of food, from ĕsca, food, from edere, to eat. See ed- in Appendix.]

es·carp (ĭ-skärpʹ) n. 1. A steep slope or cliff; an escarpment. 2. The inner wall of a ditch or trench dug around a fortification. — v. tr. es·carped, es·carp·ing, es·carps. 1. To cause to form a steep slope. 2. To furnish with an escarp. [French escarpe, from Italian scarpa. See SCARP.]

es·carp·ment (ĭ-skärpʹmənt) n. 1. A steep slope or long cliff that results from erosion or faulting and separates two relatively level areas of differing elevations. 2. A steep slope in front of a fortification.

-escence suff. State; process. Used to form nouns from adjectives in -escent or verbs in -esce: fluorescence. [French, from Old French, from Latin -ēscētia, from -ēscēns, -ēscēt-, -escent.]

-escent suff. 1. Beginning to be; becoming: juvenescent. 2. Characterized by; resembling: opalescent. [French, from Old French, from Latin -ēscēns, -ēscēt- present participle suff. of inchoative verbs in -ēscere.]

esch·a·lot (ĕshʹə-lötʹ) n. See shallot. [Obsolete French eschallotte. See SHALLOT.]

es·char (ĕsʹkärʹ) n. A dry scab or slough formed on the skin as a result of a burn or by the action of a corrosive or caustic substance. [Middle English escare, from Old French. See SCAR¹.]

es·cha·rot·ic (ĕsʹkə-rötʹĭk) adj. Producing an eschar. — n. A caustic or corrosive substance or drug.

es·cha·tol·o·gy (ĕsʹkə-tölʹə-jē) n. 1. The branch of theology that is concerned with the end of the world or of humankind. 2. A belief or a doctrine concerning the ultimate or final things, such as death, the destiny of humanity, the Second Coming, or the Last Judgment. [Greek eskhatos, last; see eghs in Appendix + -LOGY.] — es·chatʹo·logʹi·cal (ĭ-skätʹl-ŏjʹĭ-kəl, ĕsʹkə-tə-lŏjʹ-) adj.

— es·chatʹo·logʹi·cal·ly adv. — esʹcha·tolʹo·gist n.

es·cheat (ĭs-chĕtʹ) n. 1. Reversion of land held under feudal tenure to the manor in the absence of legal heirs or claimants. 2. Law. a. Reversion of property to the state in the absence of legal heirs or claimants. b. Property that has reverted to the state when no legal heirs or claimants exist. — v. intr. tr.

es·cheat·ed, es·cheat·ing, es·cheats. Law. To revert or cause to revert by escheat. [Middle English eschete, from Old French (from escheoir, to fall out), and from Anglo-Latin escheta both from Vulgar Latin excadēre*, to fall out : Latin ex-, ex- + Latin cadere, to fall; see kad- in Appendix.] — es·cheatʹa·ble adj.

es·cheat·age (ĭs-chĕʹtj) n. Law. The right of the state to acquire property by escheat.

Esch·er (ĕshʹər, ĕsʹKĕər), M(auritis) C(ornelius). 1898-1972. Dutch artist whose lithographs and woodcuts depict imaginary metamorphoses, geometric distortions, and architectural impossibilities.

es·chew (ĕs-chōō') v. tr. es·chewed, es·chew·ing, es·chews. To avoid; shun. See Synonyms at escape. [Middle English escheuen, from Old French eschivir, of Germanic origin; akin to shy.] —es·chew'al (-əl) n.

Esch·wei·ler (ĕsh'vī'lər) A city of west-central Germany northeast of Aachen. It is an industrial center in a coal-mining area. Population, 52,869.

Es·cof·fier (ĕs-kō-fyā'), Auguste. 1846-1935. French chef of grand hotels, such as the Savoy and Carlton in London. He wrote several cookery books, including Le Guide Culinaire (1903).

es·co·lar (ĕs'kə-lār') n. pl. escolar or es·co·lars. Any of several slender fishes of the family Gempylidae, especially Lepidocybium flavobrunneum, of warm marine waters. [Spanish, student (from the spectaclelike rings around its eyes), from Late Latin scholāris, of a school. See SCHOLAR.]

Es·con·di·do (ĕs'kən-dē'dō) A city of southern California north of San Diego. It is in an area that specializes in grapes and citrus fruit. Population, 108,635.

Es·co·ri·al (ĕ-skōr'ē-əl, ĕ-skōr'-, ĕs'kō-rē-āl') A monastery and palace of central Spain near Madrid. Built from 1563 to 1584, it was commissioned by Philip II to commemorate a victory over the French.

es·cort (ĕs'kōrt') n. 1. a. One or more persons accompanying another to guide, protect, or show honor. b. A man who is the companion of a woman, especially on a social occasion. 2. a. One or more vehicles accompanying another vehicle to guide, protect, or honor its passengers. b. One or more warships or planes used to defend or protect other craft from enemy attack. 3. The state of being accompanied by a person or protective guard. — v. tr. es·cort·ed, es·cort·ing, es·corts (ĭ-skōrt', ĕ-skōrt', ĕs'kōrt'). To accompany as an escort. See Synonyms at accompany. [French escorte, from Italian scorta, from scorgere, to guide, from Vulgar Latin excorrigere*: Latin ex-, ex- + Latin corrigere, to set right; see CORRECT.]

es·cri·toire (ĕs'krī-twär') n. 1. A writing table; a desk. 2. A desk with a top section for books. [Obsolete French, from Old French escriptoire, study, from Medieval Latin scriptōrium. See SCRIPTORIUM.]

es·crow (ĕs'krō', ĕ-skrō') n. Money, property, a deed, or a bond put into the custody of a third party for delivery to a grantee only after the fulfillment of the conditions specified. — v. tr. es·crowed, es·crow·ing, es·crows. To place in escrow. —idiom. in escrow. In trust as an escrow. [Anglo-Norman escrowe, variant of Old French escroe, scroll. See SCROLL.]

es·cu·do (ĭ-skōō'dō) n. pl. es·cu·dos. A basic unit of currency in Cape Verde and Portugal. See Table at currency. [Portuguese, and Spanish, shield, escudo from Latin scūtum, shield. See skei- in Appendix.]

es·cu·lent (ĕs'kyə-lənt) adj. Suitable for eating; edible. [Latin ĕsculentus, from ĕsca, food, from edere, to eat. See ed- in Appendix.] —es'cu·lent n.

es·cutch·eon (ĭ-sküch'əŋ) n. 1. Heraldry. A shield or shield-shaped emblem bearing a coat of arms. 2. An ornamental or protective plate, as for a keyhole. 3. Nautical. The plate on the stern of a ship inscribed with the ship's name. —idiom. a blot on (one's) escutcheon. Dishonor to one's reputation. [Middle English escochon, from Anglo-Norman escuchon, from Vulgar Latin scūtiō*, scūtiōn-, from Latin scūtum, shield. See skei- in Appendix.] —es·cutch'·eoned adj.

Es·dra·e·lon (ēs'drā-ē'lŏn, -drə-, ěz'-), Plain of. A fertile plain of northern Israel extending from the coastal lowlands near Mount Carmel to the Jordan River valley.

Es·dras (ěz'drəs) n. Bible. Either of two books of the Septuagint corresponding to the Hebrew books of Ezra and Nehemiah.

ESE abbr. East-southeast.

-ese suff. 1. Of, relating to, characteristic of, or originating in a specified place: Vietnamese. 2. Native or inhabitant of: Taiwanese. 3. a. Language or dialect of: Chinese. b. Literary style or diction of: journalese. [Middle English, from Italian -ese, from Latin -ēnsis, originating in.]

E·se·nin (yĭ-sā'nyĭn, -syĕ'-), Sergei Aleksandrov. See Sergei Aleksandrov Yesenin.

es·er·ine (ēs'ə-rĕn') n. See physostigmine. [New Latin : Efik esere, Calabar bean + *-INE*².]

Es·fa·han (ēs'fə-hän') See Isfahan.

E·sher (ē'shər) An urban district of southeast England southwest of London. It is mainly residential. Population, 63,970.

Esh·kol (ĕsh'kŏl, ĕsh-kŏl'), Levi. 1895-1969. Russian-born Israeli politician who served as minister of finance (1952-1963) and prime minister (1963-1969).

Esk. abbr. Eskimo.

es·ker (ĕs'kər) n. A long, narrow ridge of coarse gravel deposited by a stream flowing in or under a decaying glacial ice sheet. Also called *os*³ [Irish Gaelic eiscir, from Old Irish escir.]

Es·kils·tu·na (ĕs'kĭl-styŏŋ'nə, -nä) A city of southeast Sweden west of Stockholm. It was chartered in 1659. Population, 88,664.

Es·ki·mo (ĕs'kə-mŏ') n. pl. Eskimo or Es·ki·mos. Abbr. Esk. 1. a. A group of peoples inhabiting the Arctic coastal regions of North America and parts of Greenland and northeast Siberia. The Eskimo are generally considered a Native American people in Alaska and Canada. b. A member of any of these peoples. See Usage Note at Native American. 2. Any of the languages of the Eskimo peoples. [French Esquimaux, possibly from Spanish esquimao, esquimal, from Montagnais ayashkimew, Micmac.] —Es'ki·mo'an adj.

Eskimo dog (ĕs'kə-mŏ' dŏg) n. A large dog of a breed used in Arctic regions for pulling sleds and having a thick coat and a plumed tail.

Es-ki-še-hir (ĕs'kĭ-shə-hĭr') A city of west-central Turkey west of Ankara. An industrial center, it has hot mineral springs and Phrygian ruins nearby. Population, 309,341.

ESL abbr. English as a second language.

ESOP (ĕ'sŏp) n. A plan under which the employees of a company or corporation acquire its capital stock. [E(mployee) S(tock) O(wnership) P(lan).] e·soph·a·gus also oe·soph·a·gus (ĭ-sŏf'ə-gəs) *n. pl. e·soph·a·gi (-jĭ', -gĭ'). The muscular, membranous tube for the passage of food from the pharynx to the stomach; the gullet. [Middle English isophagus, from Medieval Latin, from Greek oisophagos.] — e·soph'a·ge'al (-jĕ'əl) *adj.

es·o·ter·ic (ĕs'ə-tĕr'ĭk) adj. 1. a. Intended for or understood by only a particular group: an esoteric cult. See Synonyms at mysterious. b. Of or relating to that which is known by a restricted number of people. 2. a. Confined to a small group: esoteric interests. b. Not publicly disclosed; confidential. [Greek esōterikos, from esōterō, comparative of esō, within. See en in Appendix.]

— es'o·ter'i·cal·ly adv.

es·o·ter·i·ca (ĕs'ə-tĕr'ĭ-kə) pl.n. (used with a sing. or pl. verb). Esoteric matters or items. [Greek, from neuter pl. of esōterikos, esoteric. See ESOTERIC.]

es·o·ter·i·cism (ĕs'ə-tĕr'ĭ-sĭz'əm) n. 1. Esoteric teachings or practices. 2. The quality or condition of being esoteric.

ESP (ĕ'ĕs-pĕ') n. Communication or perception by means other than the physical senses. [e(xtra)s(ensory) p(erception).] esp. abbr. Especially.

es·pa·drille (ĕs'pə-drĭl') n. A shoe usually having a fabric upper part and a sole made of a flexible material, such as rope or rubber. [French, from Provençal espartilho, diminutive of espart, esparto, from Latin spartum. See ESPARTO.]

es·pal·ier (ĭ-spāl'yər, -yā') n. 1. A tree or shrub that is trained to grow in a flat plane against a wall, often in a symmetrical pattern. 2. A trellis or other framework on which an espalier is grown. — v. tr. es·pal·iered, es·pal·ier·ing, es·pal·iers. 1. To train as or on an espalier. 2. To provide with an espalier. [French, from Italian spalliera, shoulder support, from spalla, shoulder, from Late Latin spatula, shoulder blade, from Latin. See SPATULA.]

Es·par·te·ro (ĕs'pər-tĕr'ō, -pär-tĕ'rō), Baldomero. 1793?-1879. Spanish general and politician who defeated the Carlists (1836-1839) and served as regent (1841-1843) during the minority of Isabella II.

es·par·to (ĭ-spär'tō) n. pl. es·par·tos. A tough, wiry grass (Stipa tenacissima) of northern Africa, yielding a fiber used in making paper and as cordage. [Spanish, from Latin spartum, from Greek sparton, rope.]

es·pe·cial (ĭ-spĕsh'əl) adj. 1. Of special importance or significance; exceptional: an occasion of especial joy. 2. Relating to or directed toward a particular person, group, or purpose: called his father with especial birthday wishes; gave especial attention to the decorations. 3. Peculiar to the individual; characteristic: She has an especial fondness for mushrooms. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin speciālis, of a kind, from speciēs, species. See spek- in Appendix.]

es-pe-cial-ly (ĕ-spĕsh'ə-lē, ĭ-spĕsh'-) adv. Abbr. esp. To an extent or degree deserving of special emphasis; particularly.

es-per-ance (ĕs'pər-əns) n. Obsolete. Hope. [Middle English esperaunce, from Old French, from Vulgar Latin spĕrantia*, from Latin spĕrāns, spĕrant- present participle of spĕrāre, to hope. See spĕ- in Appendix.]

Es-pe-ran-to (ĕs'pə-rān'tō, -rān'-) n. An artificial international language with a vocabulary based on word roots common to many European languages and a regularized system of inflection. [After Dr. Esperanto, "one who hopes," pseudonym of Ludwik Lejzer Zamenhof (1859-1917), Polish philologist.]

—Es'pe-ran'tist adj. & n.

es-pi-al (ĭ-spī'əl) n. 1. The act of watching or observing; observation. 2. A taking notice of something; a discovery. 3. The fact of being seen or noticed. [Middle English espiaille, from Old French, from espier, to watch. See ESPY.] es-pi-o-nage (ĕs'pē-ə-nāzh', -nīj) n. The act or practice of spying or of using spies to obtain secret information, as about another government or a business competitor. [French espionnage, from espionner, to spy, from Old French espion, spy, from Old Italian spione, of Germanic origin. See spek- in Appendix.]

Es-pí-ri-tu San-to (ĕ-spīr'ī-tōō sän'tō) An island of the New Hebrides in the southern Pacific Ocean. In World War II it was the site of U.S. military bases after March 1942.

es-pla-nade (ĕs'plə-nād', -nād') n. A flat, open stretch of pavement or grass, especially one designed as a promenade along a shore. [French, from Italian spianata, from spianare, to level, from Latin explānāre, to make plain. See EXPLAIN.]

Es-poo (ĕs'pō, -pō) A town of southern Finland, a suburb of Helsinki. Population, 152,929.

es-pous-al (ĭ-spou'zəl, -səl) n. 1. a. A betrothal. b. A wedding ceremony.

2. Adoption of an idea or a cause. [Middle English espousaille, from sing. of Old French espousailles, betrothal, from Latin spōnsālia, from neuter pl. of spōnsālis, of a betrothal, from spōnsus, spouse. See SPOUSE.] es-pouse (ĭ-spouz') v. tr. es-poused, es-pous-ing, es-pous-es. 1. a. To take in marriage; marry. b. To give (a woman) in marriage. 2. To give one's loyalty or support to (a cause, for example); adopt. [Middle English espousen, from Old French espouser, from Latin spōnsāre, from spondĕre, spōns-, to betroth. See SPEND- in Appendix.] —es-pous'er n.

es-pres-so (ĭ-sprĕs'ō, ĕ-sprĕs'ō) also ex-pres-so (ĭk-sprĕs'ō, ĕk-) n. pl.

es-pres-sos. A strong coffee brewed by forcing steam under pressure through darkly roasted, powdered coffee beans. [Italian (caffè) espresso, espresso (coffee), past participle of esprimere, to press out, from Latin exprimere: ex-, ex- + pre- mere, to press; see PRESS¹.]

es·prit (ě-sprē') n. 1. Liveliness of mind or spirit; sprightliness. 2. Esprit de corps. See Synonyms at morale. [French, from Latin spīritus, spirit. See SPIRIT.]

esprit de corps (ě-sprē' də kôr') n. A common spirit of comradeship, enthusiasm, and devotion to a cause among the members of a group. See Synonyms at morale. [French: esprit, spirit + de, of + corps, group, body.]

es·py (ĭ-spī') v. tr. es·pied, es·py·ing, es·pies. To catch sight of (something distant, partially hidden, or obscure); glimpse. See Synonyms at see¹. [Middle English espīen, from Old French espier, to watch, of Germanic origin. See spek- in Appendix.]

Es·py (ěs'pē), James Pollard. 1785-1860. American pioneer meteorologist who organized a system of communication between weather stations across the country that facilitated forecasting and developed into the U.S. Weather Bureau.

Esq. abbr. Esquire (title).

-esque suff. In the manner of; resembling: Lincolnesque. [French, from Italian -esco, from Vulgar Latin -iscus*, of Germanic origin.]

Es·qui·line (ěs'kwə-līn', -līn) One of the seven hills of ancient Rome. Nero's Golden House and Trajan's Thermae, or hot baths, were in the area.

—Es·qui·line' adj.

Es·qui·malt (ĭ-skwī'môlt) A community of southwest British Columbia, Canada, on Vancouver Island and the Strait of Juan de Fuca just west of Victoria. It is a port and naval base. Population, 15,870.

Es·qui·mau (ěs'kə-mō') n. pl. Esquimau or Es·qui·maux (-mōz'). An Eskimo. [French, sing. of Esquimaux, Eskimo. See ESKIMO.]

es·quire (ěs'kwīr', ĭ-skwīr') n. 1. A male belonging to the gentry in England and ranking directly below a knight. 2. Esquire. Abbr. Esq. Used as an honorific usually in its abbreviated form, especially after the name of an attorney or a consular officer: Jane Doe, Esq.; John Doe, Esq. 3. In medieval times, a candidate for knighthood who served a knight as an attendant and a shield bearer. 4. Archaic. An English country gentleman; a squire. [Middle English esquier, from Old French escuier, from Late Latin scūtārius, shield bearer, from Latin scūtum, shield. See skei- in Appendix.]

ESR abbr. Electron spin resonance.

ess (ěs) n. The letter s.

-ess suff. Female: lioness. [Middle English -esse, from Old French, from Late Latin -issa, from Greek.]

USAGE NOTE: Critics have argued that sexist connotations are implicit in the use of the feminine suffix -ess, as found in words such as ambadress, sculptress, waitress, stewardess, hostess, actress, and many others, in that the suffix implies that the denoted roles differ as performed by women and men. In some cases, as with the word temptress, there may be some legitimacy to such an implication of difference; and for this reason the acceptability of the suffix may depend on the individual word. In the case of most occupational terms, the suffix is widely felt to be inappropriate. Thus 65 percent of the Usage Panel rejects sculptress in the sentence Georgia O’Keeffe is not as well-known as a sculptress as she is as a painter; similarly 75 percent rejects ambadress in the sentence When the ambadress arrives, please show her directly to my office. With certain occupations, however, differentiation based on gender may be legitimate: acting, for example, is an occupation in which the parts one can play may in fact depend on one’s sex. Thus 92 percent accepts actress in There are not very many good parts available for older actresses, though it should be noted that many women prefer to be called actors. In the case of most social roles, gender is felt to make a legitimate difference, and the suffix is accepted. Thus 87 percent of the Panel accepts hostess in the sentence Mary Ann is such a charming hostess that her parties always go off smoothly; similarly, 67 percent accepts seductress in the sentence Mata Hari used her ability as a seductress to spy for the Germans. When the same word may be used in different senses, one social and the other not, the acceptability of the suffix varies accordingly. Thus 93 percent accepts heiress in the sentence His only hope now is to marry an heiress, while only 34 percent accepts heiress in its metaphorical use to mean “successor,” as in His daughter and political heiress has returned to her country in triumph. See Usage Note at man.

es·say (ĕs’ā’, ĕ-sā’) n. 1. (ĕs’ā’) a. A short literary composition on a single subject, usually presenting the personal view of the author. b. Something resembling such a composition: a photojournalistic essay. 2. A testing or trial of the value or nature of a thing: an essay of the students’ capabilities. 3. An initial attempt or endeavor, especially a tentative attempt. — v. tr. es·sayed, es·say·ing, es·says (ĕ-sā’, ĕs’ā’). 1. To make an attempt at; try. 2. To subject to a test. [Middle English essayen, to try, from Old French essaier, from Vulgar Latin exagiāre*, to weigh out, from Late Latin exagium, a weighing : Latin ex-, ex- + Latin agere, to drive; see ag- in Appendix.] — es·say’er n.

es·say·ist (ĕs’ā’ĭst) n. A writer of essays.

es·say·is·tic (ĕs’ā-ĭs’tĭk) adj. 1. Of or relating to an essay or a writer of essays. 2. Resembling an essay in nature or quality.

essay question (ĕs’ā’ kwĕs’chən) n. A test question that calls for a written answer of a specified length, especially a short essay.

Es·sen (ĕs’ən) A city of west-central Germany near the confluence of the Ruhr and Rhine rivers north of Cologne. Founded in the ninth century, it is a major iron and steel center that was largely rebuilt after heavy bombing during World War II. Population, 625,705.

es-sence (ĕs'əns) n. 1. The intrinsic or indispensable properties that serve to characterize or identify something. 2. The most important ingredient; the crucial element. 3. The inherent, unchanging nature of a thing or class of things. 4. a. An extract that has the fundamental properties of a substance in concentrated form. b. Such an extract in a solution of alcohol. c. A perfume or scent. 5. One that has or shows an abundance of a quality as if highly concentrated: a neighbor who is the essence of hospitality. 6. Something that exists, especially a spiritual or incorporeal entity. —idioms. in essence. By nature; essentially: He is in essence a reclusive sort. of the essence. Of the greatest importance; crucial: Time is of the essence. [Middle English essencia, and French essence both from Latin essentia, from essēns*, ·essent- present participle of esse, to be (translation of Greek ousia, from present participle of einai, to be). See es- in Appendix.]

Es-sene (ĕs'ĕn', ĭ-sĕn') n. A member of an ascetic Jewish sect that existed in ancient Palestine from the second century B.C. to the second century A.D.

—Es-se/ni-an (ĕ-sĕ'nĕ-ən), Es-sen'ic (ĕ-sĕn'ik) adj. —Es-se'nism n.

es-sen-tial (ĭ-sĕn'shəl) adj. 1. Constituting or being part of the essence of something; inherent. 2. Basic or indispensable; necessary: essential ingredients. See Synonyms at indispensable. 3. Medicine. Of, relating to, or being a dysfunctional condition or a disease whose cause is unknown: essential hypertension. 4. Biochemistry. Being a substance that is required for normal functioning but cannot be synthesized by the body and therefore must be included in the diet. — n. 1. Something fundamental. 2. Something necessary or indispensable. —es-sen'ti-al/i-ty (-shĕ-ăl'ĭ-tĕ), es-sen'tial-ness n. —es-sen'tial-ly adv.

essential oil (ĭ-sĕn'shəl oil) n. A volatile oil, usually having the characteristic odor or flavor of the plant from which it is obtained, used to make perfumes and flavorings.

Es-se-qui-bo (ĕs'ĭ-kwĕ'bō) A river rising on the Brazilian border of southern Guyana and flowing about 965 km (600 mi) generally northward to the Atlantic Ocean.

Es-sex (ĕs'ĭks) 1. A historical region and Anglo-Saxon kingdom of southeast England. Probably settled by Saxons in the early sixth century, the kingdom was long dominated by Mercia and later by Wessex before and after its inclusion in the Danelaw territories from 886 to 917. There are important Roman and Saxon remains in the area. 2. A community of northeast Maryland, a manufacturing suburb of Baltimore. Population, 40,872.

Es-sex (ĕs'ĭks), Second Earl of. See Robert Devereux.

Ess-ling-en (ĕs'lĭng-ən) A city of southwest Germany on the Neckar River southeast of Stuttgart. Founded in the 8th century, it was a free imperial city from the 13th century until 1802. Population, 86,996.

es-so·nite (ēs'ə-nīt') also hes-so·nite (hēs'-'-) n. A brown or yellowish-brown variety of garnet. Also called cinnamon stone [French, from Greek hēssōn, inferior (from its being softer than true hyacinth), comparative of ēka, hēka, slightly.]

EST or E.S.T. abbr. Eastern Standard Time.

est. abbr. 1. Established. 2. Law. Estate. 3. Estimate.

Est. abbr. Bible. Esther.

-est¹ suff. Used to form the superlative degree of adjectives and adverbs: greatest; earliest. [Middle English, from Old English -est, -ast, -ost.]

-est² or -st suff. Used to form the archaic second person singular of English verbs: comest. [Middle English, from Old English -est, -ast.]

es·tab·lish (ī-stāb'lish) v. tr. es·tab·lished, es·tab·lish·ing, es·tab·lish·es.

1. a. To set up; found. See Synonyms at found¹. b. To bring about; generate: establish goodwill in the neighborhood. 2. a. To place or settle in a secure position or condition; install: They established me in my own business. b. To make firm or secure. 3. To cause to be recognized and accepted: a discovery that established his reputation. 4. To introduce and put (a law, for example) into force. 5. To prove the validity or truth of: The defense attorneys established the innocence of the accused. 6. To make a state institution of (a church). [Middle English establishen, from Old French establiŕ, establiss-, from Latin stabilīre, from stabilis, firm. See stā- in Appendix.] —es·tab'lish·er n.

es·tab·lished church (ī-stāb'lish-t chûrch) n. A church that a government officially recognizes as a national institution and to which it accords support.

es·tab·lish·ment (ī-stāb'lish-mənt) n. 1. a. The act of establishing. b. The condition or fact of being established. 2. Something established, as: a. An arranged order or system, especially a legal code. b. A permanent civil, political, or military organization. c. An established church. d. A place of residence or business with its possessions and staff. e. A public or private institution, such as a hospital or school. 3. Often Establishment. An established social order, as: a. A group of people holding most of the power and influence in a government or society. Often used with the. b. A controlling group in a given field of activity. Often used with the.

es·tab·lish·men·tar·i·an (ī-stāb'lish-mən-târ'ē-ən) adj. Of, relating to, or supporting the political or social establishment. —es·tab'lish·men·tar'i·an n. —es·tab'lish·men·tar'i·an·ism n.

Es·taing (ēs-tān'), Comte Charles Hector d'. 1729-1794. French naval commander who was sent to aid American forces in the Revolutionary War (1778). A royalist, he was tried and guillotined during the French Revolution.

es·ta·mi·net (ĕ-stā'mē-nā') n. A small café. [French, probably from Walloon staminé, cowshed, from stamō, hitching post.]

es·tan·cia (ĕ-stān'syā) n. A large estate or cattle ranch in Spanish America.

[Spanish, room, enclosure, country estate, from Vulgar Latin stantia*, something standing, from Latin stāns, stant- present participle of stāre, to stand. See stā- in Appendix.]

es·tate (ĭ-stāt') n. 1. A landed property, usually of considerable size. 2. The whole of one's possessions, especially all the property and debts left by one at death. 3. Abbr. est. Law. The nature and extent of an owner's rights with respect to land or other property. 4. Chiefly British. A housing development. 5. The situation or circumstances of one's life: A child's estate gives way to the adult's estate. 6. Social position or rank, especially of high order. 7. A major social class, such as the nobility, the commons, or the clergy, formerly possessing distinct political rights. 8. Archaic. Display of wealth or power; pomp. [Middle English estat, condition, from Old French. See STATE.]

Es·tates-Gen·er·al (ĭ-stāts'jĕn'ər-əl) pl.n. See States-General. [Translation of French états généraux.]

estate tax (ĭ-stāt' tāk) n. A tax imposed on the right to transfer property by inheritance and assessed on the net value of a decedent's estate before distribution to the heirs. Also called death tax

Es·te (ĕs'tā) Italian noble family that prospered from the late 10th to the early 19th century and exerted great influence on Renaissance literature through its support of poets and dramatists such as Boiardo and Tasso.

Es·te·ban E·che·ver·rí·a (ĕ-stĕ'bän ĕ'chĕ-və-rĕ'ə, -vĕ-rĕ'ä, -vän) A city of eastern Argentina, a suburb of Buenos Aires. Population, 183,908.

es·teem (ĭ-stēm') v. tr. es·teemed, es·teem·ing, es·teems. 1. To regard with respect; prize. See Synonyms at appreciate. 2. To regard as; consider: esteemed it an honor to help them. — n. 1. Favorable regard. See Synonyms at regard. 2. Archaic. Judgment; opinion. [Middle English estemen, to appraise, from Old French estimer, from Latin aestimāre.]

es·ter (ĕs'tər) n. Any of a class of organic compounds corresponding to the inorganic salts and formed from an organic acid and an alcohol. [German, short for Essigäther: Essig, vinegar (from Middle High German ezzich, from Old High German ezzih, from Latin acētum); see ak- in Appendix + Äther, ether (from Latin aethēr); see ETHER.]

es·ter·ase (ĕs'tə-rās', -rāz') n. Any of various enzymes that catalyze the hydrolysis of an ester.

Es·ter·ha·zy (ĕs'tər-hä'zē), (Marie Charles) Ferdinand Walsin. 1847-1923. French army officer who confessed (1899) to forging the evidence against Alfred Dreyfus, who had been wrongly convicted of espionage (1894).

es·ter·i·fi·ca·tion (ĕ-stĕr'ə-fĭ-kā'shən) n. A chemical reaction resulting in the formation of at least one ester product.

es·ter·i·fy (ĕ-stĕr'ə-fĭ') v. intr. tr. es·ter·i·fied, es·ter·i·fy·ing, es·ter·i·fies. To change or cause to change to an ester.

Es-ther (ěs'tər) n. Bible. 1. In the Old Testament, the Jewish queen of Persia who saved her people from massacre. 2. Abbr. Est., Esth. A book of the Bible. See Table at Bible. [Hebrew Estēr, from Persian sitareh, star. See ster-³ in Appendix.]

es-the-sia (ěs-thē'zhə) n. Variant of aesthesia.

es-the-si-om-e-ter (ěs-thē'zē-ōm'ī-tər) n. An instrument used to measure tactile sensitivity. [ESTHESI(A) + -METER.]

es-thete (ěs'thēt) n. Variant of aesthete.

es-thet-ic (ěs-thět'ík) adj. & n. Variant of aesthetic.

es-the-ti-cian (ěs'thī-tīsh'ən) n. Variant of aesthetician.

es-thet-i-cism (ěs-thět'ī-sīz'əm) n. Variant of aestheticism.

es-thet-i-cize (ěs-thět'ə-sīz') v. Variant of aestheticize.

es-thet-ics (ěs-thět'íks) n. Variant of aesthetics.

Es-tienne (ěs-tyěn') or É-tienne (ě-tyěn') French family of printers, including Henri (1460?-1520), who established the family business in Paris (c. 1505); his son Robert (1503-1559), who published Latin (1523) and Greek (1550) New Testaments and a Latin dictionary (1532); and his grandson Henri (1528-1598), who published ancient Greek works and his own Greek dictionary (1572).

es-ti-ma-ble (ěs'tə-mə-bəl) adj. 1. Possible to estimate: estimable assets; an estimable distance. 2. Deserving of esteem; admirable: an estimable young professor. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin aestimābilis, from aestimāre, to value.] —es'ti-ma-ble-ness n. —es'ti-ma-bly adv.

es-ti-mate (ěs'tə-māt') v. tr. es-ti-mat-ed, es-ti-mat-ing, es-ti-mates. 1. To calculate approximately (the amount, extent, magnitude, position, or value of something). 2. To form an opinion about; evaluate: "While an author is yet living we estimate his powers by his worst performance" (Samuel Johnson). — n. (-mīt) Abbr. est. 1. The act of evaluating or appraising. 2. A tentative evaluation or rough calculation, as of worth, quantity, or size. 3. A statement of the approximate cost of work to be done, such as a building project or car repairs. 4. A judgment based on one's impressions; an opinion. [Latin aestimāre, aestimāt-.] —es'ti-ma'tive adj. —es'ti-ma'tor n.

SYNONYMS: estimate, appraise, assess, assay, evaluate, rate. These verbs mean to form a judgment of worth or significance. Estimate usually implies a subjective and somewhat inexact judgment: difficult to estimate the possible results in advance; could only estimate the size of the crowd. Appraise stresses expert judgment: appraised the furniture and works of art before distributing them to the heirs. Assess implies authoritative judgment in setting a monetary value on something as a basis for taxation: assessing an apartment on the amount for which it is likely to be rented. Assay refers to careful examination, especially to chemical analysis of an ore to determine its quality, fineness, or purity: cut a minute piece off the ingot to assay it. In extended senses appraise, assess, and assay can refer to any critical analysis or appraisal: appraised his character and found him wanting; assessing the impact of higher taxes on lower-income households; has no method for assaying merit. Evaluate implies considered judgment in ascertaining value: evaluating a student's thesis for content and organization; used projective tests to evaluate her aptitudes. Rate involves determining the rank or grade of someone or something in relation to others: Will history rate Picasso above Renoir?

es·ti·ma·tion (ēs'tə-mā'shən) n. 1. a. The act or an instance of estimating. b. The amount, extent, position, size, or value reached in an estimate. 2. An opinion or a judgment. 3. Favorable regard; esteem.

es·ti·val also aes·ti·val (ēs'tə-vəl) adj. Of, relating to, or appearing in summer. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin aestīvālis, from aestīvus, from aestās, summer.]

es·ti·vate also aes·ti·vate (ēs'tə-vāt') v. intr. es·ti·vat·ed, es·ti·vat·ing, es·ti·vates. 1. To spend the summer, as at a special place. 2. Zoology. To pass the summer in a dormant or torpid state. [Latin aestīvāre, aestīvāt-, from aestīvus, estival. See ESTIVAL.]

es·ti·va·tion also aes·ti·va·tion (ēs'tə-vā'shən) n. 1. The act of spending or passing the summer. 2. Zoology. A state of dormancy or torpor during the summer. 3. Botany. The arrangement of flower parts in the bud.

Es·to·ni·a (ě-stō'nē-ə) A country of northwest Europe, the northernmost of the Baltic States. Settled before the 1st century A.D., it was divided many times and held by the Danes, German Livonian Knights, Swedes, and Russians. Estonia was incorporated into the U.S.S.R. as a constituent republic in 1940 and gained its independence in 1991. Tallinn is the capital. Population, 1,530,000.

Es·to·ni·an (ě-stō'nē-ən) adj. Of or relating to Estonia or its people, language, or culture. — n. 1. A native or inhabitant of Estonia. 2. The Finno-Ugric language of Estonia.

es·top (ě-stöp') v. tr. es·topped, es·top·ping, es·tops. 1. Law. To impede or prohibit by estoppel. 2. Archaic. To stop up. [Middle English estoppen, from Anglo-Norman estopper, from Vulgar Latin stuppāre*, to stop up. See STOP.]

—es·top·page (ě-stöp'ij) n.

es·top·pel (ě-stöp'əl) n. Law. A bar preventing one from making an allegation or a denial that contradicts what one has previously stated as the truth. [Obsolete French estouppail, from Old French estouper, to stop up, from Vulgar Latin stuppāre*. See STOP.]

Es·tour·nelles de Con·stant (ě-stōr-něl' də kōn-stān'), Baron Constant de Rebecque d'. Originally Paul Henri Benjamin Balluat. 1852-1924. French diplomat and pacifist who worked for international peace through the Hague Court of Arbitration. He shared the 1909 Nobel Peace Prize.

es·tra·di·ol (ĕs'trā-dī'ōl', -ōl', -ōl') n. An estrogenic hormone, C₁₈H₂₄O₂, produced by the ovaries and used in treating estrogen deficiency. [ESTR(US) + DI-¹ + OL¹.]

es·tra·gon (ĕs'trā-gŏn') n. Tarragon. [French, probably alteration of targon, from Medieval Latin tragonia, tarchon. See TARRAGON.]

es·tral (ĕs'trəl) adj. Estrous.

estral cycle (ĕs'trəl sī'kəl) n. The estrous cycle.

es·trange (ĭ-strānj') v. tr. es·tranged, es·trang·ing, es·trang·es. 1. To make hostile, unsympathetic, or indifferent; alienate. 2. To remove from an accustomed place or set of associations. [Middle English estraungen, from Old French estrangier, from Latin extrāneāre, to treat as a stranger, disown, from extrāneus, foreign. See STRANGE.] —es·trange·ment n. —es·trang·er n.

SYNONYMS: estrangle, alienate, disaffect. These verbs refer to disruption of a bond of love, friendship, or loyalty. Estrangle and alienate are often used with reference to two persons, such as a husband and wife, whose harmonious relationship has been replaced by hostility or indifference: Political disagreements led to quarrels that finally estranged the two friends. His persistent antagonism caused his wife to be alienated from him. Disaffect usually implies discontent, ill will, and disloyalty within the membership of a group: Colonists were disaffected by the autocratic actions of the royal governor.

es·tray (ĭ-strā') Archaic. n. A stray. — v. intr. es·trayed, es·tray·ing, es·trays. To stray. [Middle English astrai, from Anglo-Norman estray, from estraier, to stray, from Old French. See STRAY.]

Es·tre·ma·du·ra (ĕs'trā-mā-dōōr'ə, ĕs'trā-mā-thōō'rä) 1. A historical region and former province of western Portugal surrounding Lisbon. 2. A historical region of west-central Spain bordering on Portugal. Reconquered from the Moors in the 12th and 13th centuries, it was frequently a battlefield in the Spanish territorial wars with Portugal and in the Peninsular War fought between France and Great Britain (1808-1814). —Es'tre·ma·du·ran adj. & n.

es·tri·ol (ĕs'trī-ōl', -ōl', -ōl', ĕ-strī'-) n. An estrogenic hormone, C₁₈H₂₄O₃, found in the urine during pregnancy. Also called theelol [ES(TRUS) + TRI- + -OL¹.]

es·tro·gen also oes·tro·gen (ĕs'trā-jən) n. Any of several steroid hormones produced chiefly by the ovaries and responsible for promoting estrus and the development and maintenance of female secondary sex characteristics. [ESTR(US) + -GEN.] —es'tro·gen'ic (-jĕn'ĭk) adj. —es'tro·gen'i·cal·ly adv.

es·trone (ĕs'trŏn') n. An estrogenic hormone, C₁₈H₂₂O₂, used primarily in the treatment of estrogen deficiency. Also called theelin [ESTR(US) + -ONE.]

es·trous (ĕs'trəs) adj. Of, relating to, or being in estrus.

estrous cycle (ēs'trəs sī'kəl) n. The recurrent set of physiological and behavioral changes that take place from one period of estrus to another.

es·trus also oes·trus (ēs'trəs) n. The periodic state of sexual excitement in the female of most mammals, excluding human beings, that immediately precedes ovulation and during which the female is most receptive to mating; heat. [New Latin, from Latin oestrus, frenzy, gadfly, from Greek oistros. See eis- in Appendix.]

es·tu·a·rine (ēs'chōō-ə-rīn', -rēn') adj. Of, relating to, or found in an estuary.

es·tu·ar·y (ēs'chōō-ēr'ē) *n. pl. es·tu·ar·ies. 1. The part of the wide lower course of a river where its current is met by the tides. 2. An arm of the sea that extends inland to meet the mouth of a river. [Latin aestuārium, from aestus, tide, surge, heat.] —es·tu·ar·i·al (-âr'ē-əl) *adj.

esu abbr. Electrostatic unit.

e·su·ri·ent (ī-sōōr'ē-ənt, ī-zōōr'-) adj. Hungry; greedy. [Latin ēsuriēns, ēsuri-ent- present participle of ēsurire desiderative of edere, to eat. See ed- in Appendix.] —e·su·ri·ence (-əns), e·su·ri·en·cy (-ən-sē) n. —e·su·ri·ent·ly adv.

ESV abbr. Earth satellite vehicle.

ET abbr. 1. Or E.T. Eastern Time. 2. Elapsed time.

-et suff. 1. Small: falconet. 2. Something worn on: labret. [Middle English, from Old French, from Vulgar Latin *-ittum.]

e·ta (ā'tə, ē'tə) n. The seventh letter of the Greek alphabet. [Greek ēta, of Phoenician origin; akin to Hebrew hēt, heth.]

ETA or e.t.a. abbr. Estimated time of arrival.

é·ta·gère also e·ta·gere (ā'tä-zhâr') n. A piece of furniture with open shelves for small ornaments. [French, from Old French estagiere, scaffold, from estage, floor. See STAGE.]

et al. abbr. Latin. Et alii (and others).

et·a·mine (ět'ə-mēn') n. A soft, lightweight, loosely woven cotton or worsted fabric. [French, from Old French estamine, from Latin stāminea, from feminine of stāmineus, made of threads, from stāmen, thread. See stā- in Appendix.]

eta particle (ā'tə pär'tī-kəl) n. A neutral elementary particle that has a mass 1,074 times that of an electron.

et cet·er·a (ět sět'ər-ə, sět'rə) Abbr. etc. And other unspecified things of the same class; and so forth. — n. also et·cet·er·a 1. A number of unspecified persons or things. 2. etceteras. Additional odds and ends; extras. [Latin : et, and + cētera, the rest, neuter pl. of cēterus; see ko- in Appendix.]

etch (ěch) v. etched, etch·ing, etch·es. — v. tr. 1. a. To cut into the surface of (glass, for example) by the action of acid. b. To make or create by this method: etch a design on glass. 2. To impress, delineate, or imprint clearly: a landscape that is forever etched in my memory; trees that were etched against the winter sky. — v. intr. To engage in etching. [Dutch etsen, from German ätzen, from Middle etch-ing (ĕch'ing) n. 1. The art of preparing etched plates, especially metal plates, from which designs and pictures are printed. 2. A design etched on a plate. 3. An impression made from an etched plate.

High German etzen, from Old High German ezzen, to eat. See ed- in Appendix.]

—etch'er n.

ETD or e.t.d. abbr. Estimated time of departure.

e-ter-nal (ĭ-tŭr'nəl) adj. 1. Being without beginning or end; existing outside of time. See Synonyms at infinite. 2. Continuing without interruption; perpetual. 3. Forever true or changeless: eternal truths. 4. Seemingly endless; interminable. See Synonyms at ageless. See Synonyms at continual. 5. Of or relating to spiritual communion with God, especially in the afterlife. — n. 1. Something timeless, uninterrupted, or endless. 2. Eternal. God. Used with the. [Middle English, from Old French, from Late Latin aeternālis, from Latin aeternus. See aiw- in Appendix.] —e-ter-nal'i-ty (ĕ'tər-nāl'ĭ-tē), e-ter'nal-ness n.

—e-ter'nal-ly adv.

e-ter-nal-ize (ĭ-tŭr'nə-līz') v. tr. e-ter-nal-ized, e-ter-nal-iz-ing, e-ter-nal-iz-es. To eternize.

e-terne (ĭ-tŭrn') adj. Archaic. Eternal. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin aeternus. See ETERNAL.]

e-ter-ni-ty (ĭ-tŭr'nĭ-tē) n. pl. e-ter-ni-ties. 1. Time without beginning or end; infinite time. 2. The state or quality of being eternal. 3. a. The timeless state following death. b. The afterlife; immortality. 4. A very long or seemingly endless time: waited in the dentist's office for an eternity. [Middle English eternite, from Old French, from Latin aeternitās, from aeternus, eternal. See ETERNAL.]

e-ter-nize (ĭ-tŭr'nīz') v. tr. e-ter-nized, e-ter-niz-ing, e-ter-niz-es. 1. a. To make eternal. b. To protract for an indefinite period. 2. To make perpetually famous; immortalize. [French éterniser, from Old French eterne, eternal. See ETERNE.] —e-ter'ni-za'tion (-nĭ-zā'shən) n.

e-te-sian (ĭ-tē'zhən) adj. Occurring annually. Used of the prevailing northerly summer winds of the Mediterranean. [From Latin etēsius, from Greek etēsios, from etos, year. See wet-² in Appendix.] —e-te'sian n.

eth (ĕth) n. Variant of edh.

Eth. abbr. Ethiopia.

-eth¹ or -th suff. Used to form the archaic third person singular present indicative of verbs: leadeth. [Middle English, from Old English -eth, -ath.]

-eth² suff. Variant of -th³.

eth-a-cryn-ic acid (ĕth'ə-krĭn'ĭk əs'ĭd) n. A diuretic compound, $C_{13}H_{12}Cl_2O_4$, used in the treatment of severe edema. [ETH(YL) + AC(ETIC) + (BUTY)R(IC) + -Y(L) + (PHE)N(OL) + -IC.]

- eth-am-bu·tol (ĕ-thăm'byə-tôl', -tō', -tôl') n. An antibacterial drug, $C_{10}H_{24}N_2O_2$, used in combination with other drugs in the treatment of pulmonary tuberculosis. [ETH(YLENE) + AM(INE) + BUT(AN)OL.]
- eth-a·mine (ĕth'ə-mĕn', ĕth-ăm'ĕn') n. See ethylamine.
- eth-ane (ĕth'ān') n. A colorless, odorless gaseous alkane, C_2H_6 , that occurs as a constituent of natural gas and is used as a fuel and a refrigerant. [ETH(YL) + -ANE.]
- eth-a·nol (ĕth'ə-nôl', -nôl', -nôl') n. See alcohol (n., sense 1). [ETHAN(E) + -OL¹.]
- eth-a·nol·a·mine (ĕth'ə-nôl'ə-mĕn', -nô'lə-) n. A colorless liquid, $NH_2(CH_2)_2ON$, used in the purification of petroleum, as a solvent in dry cleaning, and as an ingredient in paints and pharmaceuticals.
- Eth-el·bert (ĕth'əl-bûrt'), 552?-616. Anglo-Saxon king who ruled all of Britain south of the Humber, was converted to Christianity by Saint Augustine (597), and codified English law (604).
- Eth-el·red II also Aeth-el·red II (ĕth'əl-rĕd'), Called "Ethelred the Unready." 968?-1016. King of the English (978-1016) whose reign was a series of ultimately unsuccessful struggles against Danish invasion.
- eth-ene (ĕth'ĕn') n. See ethylene. [ETH(YL) + -ENE.]
- e·ther (ĕ'thĕr) n. 1. Any of a class of organic compounds in which two hydrocarbon groups are linked by an oxygen atom. 2. A volatile, highly flammable liquid, $C_2H_5OC_2H_5$, derived from the distillation of ethyl alcohol with sulfuric acid and widely used as a reagent, a solvent, and an anesthetic. Also called diethyl ether, ethyl ether. 3. The regions of space beyond the earth's atmosphere; the heavens. 4. The element believed in ancient and medieval civilizations to fill all space above the sphere of the moon and to compose the stars and planets. 5. Physics. An all-pervading, infinitely elastic, massless medium formerly postulated as the medium of propagation of electromagnetic waves. [Middle English, upper air, from Latin aethĕr, from Greek aithĕr.] —e·ther'ic (ĭ-thĕr'ĭk, ĭ-thĭr'-) adj.
- e·the·re·al (ĭ-thĭr'ĕ-əl) adj. 1. Characterized by lightness and insubstantiality; intangible. 2. Highly refined; delicate. See Synonyms at airy. 3. a. Of the celestial spheres; heavenly. b. Not of this world; spiritual. 4. Chemistry. Of or relating to ether. [From Latin aetherius, from Greek aithĕrios, from aithĕr, upper air.] —e·the're·al'i·ty (-ăl'ĭ-tĕ), e·the're·al·ness n. —e·the're·al·ly adv.
- e·the·re·al·ize (ĭ-thĭr'ĕ-əl-ĭz') v. tr. intr. e·the·re·al·ized, e·the·re·al·iz·ing, e·the·re·al·iz·es. To make or become ethereal. —e·the're·al·i·za'tion (-ə-lĭ-ză'shən) n.
- Eth-er·ege (ĕth'ĕr-ĭj, ĕth'rĭj), Sir George. 1635?-1692?. English playwright of the Restoration whose comedic works, such as She Would if She Could (1668), gave rise to the comedy of manners as a dramatic form.

e·ther·i·fy (ĭ-thĕr'ə-fī') v. tr. e·ther·i·fied, e·ther·i·fy·ing, e·ther·i·fies. To convert (an alcohol) into an ether. — e·ther'·i·fi·ca'tion (-fĭ-kā'shən) n.

e·ther·ize (ĕ'thĕ-rĭz') v. tr. e·ther·ized, e·ther·iz·ing, e·ther·iz·es. 1. To subject to the fumes of ether; anesthetize. 2. To etherify. — e'ther·i·za'tion (ĕ'thĕr-ĭ-zā'shən) n. — e'ther·iz'er n.

eth·ic (ĕth'ĭk) n. 1. a. A set of principles of right conduct. b. A theory or a system of moral values: "An ethic of service is at war with a craving for gain" (Gregg Easterbrook). 2. ethics. (used with a sing. verb). The study of the general nature of morals and of the specific moral choices to be made by a person; moral philosophy. 3. ethics. (used with a sing. or pl. verb). The rules or standards governing the conduct of a person or the members of a profession: medical ethics. [Middle English ethik, from Old French ethique (from Late Latin ēthica, from Greek ēthika, ethics), and from Latin ēthicē (from Greek ēthikē) both from Greek ēthikos, ethical, from ēthos, character. See s(w)e- in Appendix.]

eth·i·cal (ĕth'ĭ-kəl) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or dealing with ethics. 2. Being in accordance with the accepted principles of right and wrong that govern the conduct of a profession. See Synonyms at moral. 3. Of or relating to a drug dispensed solely on the prescription of a physician. — n. An ethical drug. — eth'·i·cal·ly adv. — eth'·i·cal·ness, eth'·i·cal'·i·ty (-kəl'ĭ-tĕ) n.

eth·i·cist (ĕth'ĭ-sĭst) also e·thi·cian (ĕ-thĭsh'ən) n. A specialist in ethics.

eth·i·on (ĕth'ĕ-ōn') n. A highly toxic, liquid organophosphate pesticide, $C_9H_{22}O_4P_2S_3$. [ETH(YL) + (TH)ION-.]

E·thi·o·pi·a (ĕ'thĕ-ō'pĕ-ə) Formerly Ab·ys·sin·i·a (ăb'ĭ-sĭn'ĕ-ə). Abbr. Eth. A country of northeast Africa. An ancient kingdom converted to Christianity in the 4th century A.D., the area was in turmoil after the rise of Islam in the 7th century and later (17th-18th century) was beset by ruinous civil wars. It became independent in 1896 but was held by Italy from 1935 to 1941. Addis Ababa is the capital and the largest city. Population, 32,775,000.

E·thi·o·pi·an (ĕ'thĕ-ō'pĕ-ən) adj. 1. Of or relating to Ethiopia or its peoples or cultures. 2. Of or relating to the zoogeographic region that includes Africa and most of Arabia. — n. A native or inhabitant of Ethiopia.

E·thi·op·ic (ĕ'thĕ-ōp'ĭk, -ō'pĭk) n. The Afro-Asiatic language of ancient Ethiopia that is still used as a liturgical language in the Christian Church in Ethiopia. — adj. 1. Of or relating to Ethiopic. 2. Ethiopian.

eth·moid (ĕth'moid') also eth·moid·al (ĕth-moid'l) adj. Of, relating to, or being a light spongy bone located between the orbits, forming part of the walls and septum of the superior nasal cavity, and containing numerous perforations for the passage of the fibers of the olfactory nerves. — n. The ethmoid bone. [French ethmoïde, from Greek ēthmoeidēs, sievelike : ēthmos, strainer (from ēthein, to sift) + -eidēs, -oidēs, -oid.]

eth·narch (ĕth'närk') n. The ruler of a province or a people. [Greek ethnarkhēs: ethnos, nation; see ETHNIC + -arkhēs, -arch.] —eth'nar'chy n.

eth·nic (ĕth'nĭk) adj. 1. a. Of or relating to sizable groups of people sharing a common and distinctive racial, national, religious, linguistic, or cultural heritage. b. Being a member of a particular ethnic group. c. Of, relating to, or distinctive of members of such a group: ethnic restaurants; ethnic art. 2. Relating to a people not Christian or Jewish; heathen. — n. A member of a particular ethnic group, especially one who maintains the language or customs of the group. [Middle English, heathen, from Late Latin ethnicus, from Greek ethnikos, from ethnos, people, nation. See s(w)e- in Appendix.]

WORD HISTORY: When in a Middle English text written before 1400 it is said that a part of a temple fell down and “mad a gret distruccione of ethnykis,” one wonders why ethnics were singled out for death. The word ethnic in this context, however, means “gentile,” coming as it does from the Greek adjective ethnikos, meaning “national, foreign, gentile.” The adjective is derived from the noun ethnos, “people, nation, foreign people,” that in the plural phrase ta ethnē meant “foreign nations.” In translating the Hebrew Bible into Greek, this phrase was used for Hebrew gōyīm, “gentiles”; hence the sense of the noun in the Middle English quotation. The noun ethnic in this sense or the related sense “heathen” is not recorded after 1728, although the related adjective sense is still used. But probably under the influence of other words going back to Greek ethnos, such as ethnography and ethnology, the adjective ethnic broadened in meaning in the 19th century. After this broadening the noun sense “a member of a particular ethnic group,” first recorded in 1945, came into existence.

eth·ni·cal (ĕth'nĭ-kəl) adj. 1. Ethnic. 2. Of or relating to ethnology. —eth'ni-cal-ly adv.

eth·nic·i·ty (ĕth-nĭs'ĭ-tē) n. Ethnic character, background, or affiliation.

ethno- pref. Race; people: ethnology. [Greek, from ethnos, people. See s(w)e- in Appendix.]

eth·no·bot·a·ny (ĕth'nō-bōt'n-ē) n. 1. The plant lore and agricultural customs of a people. 2. The study of such lore and customs.

—eth'no-bo-tan'i-cal (-bə-tān'ĭ-kəl) adj. —eth'no-bo-tan'i-cal-ly adv.

—eth'no-bot'a-nist n.

eth·no·cen·trism (ĕth'nō-sĕn'trĭz'əm) n. 1. Belief in the superiority of one's own ethnic group. 2. Overriding concern with race. —eth'no-cen'tric (-trĭk) adj. —eth'no-cen'tri-cal-ly adv. —eth'no-cen'tric'i-ty (-sĕn-trĭs'ĭ-tē) n.

eth·nog·ra·phy (ĕth-nōg'rə-fē) n. 1. The branch of anthropology that deals with the scientific description of specific human cultures. 2. Ethnology.

—eth·nog'ra·pher n. —eth'no·graph'ic (ĕth'nə-grăf'ik), eth'no·graph'i·cal adj. —eth'no·graph'i·cal·ly adv.

eth·no·his·to·ry (ĕth'nō-hīs'tə-rē) n. The scientific study of the development of human cultures, as through systematic analysis of archaeological findings.

—eth'no·his·to'ri·an (-hī-stōr'ē-ən, -stōr'-, stōr'-) n. —eth'no·his·to'ric (-hī-stōr'ik, -stōr'-), eth'no·his·to'ri·cal adj.

eth·nol·o·gy (ĕth-nōl'ə-jē) n. Abbr. ethnol. 1. The science that analyzes and compares human cultures, as in social structure, language, religion, and technology; cultural anthropology. 2. The branch of anthropology that deals with the origin, distribution, and characteristics of the races of humankind.

—eth'no·log'ic (ĕth'nə-lōj'ik), eth'no·log'i·cal adj. —eth'no·log'i·cal·ly adv. —eth·nol'o·gist n.

eth·no·meth·od·ol·o·gy (ĕth'nō-mĕth'ə-dōl'ə-jē) n. The branch of sociology that deals with the codes and conventions that underlie everyday social interactions and activities. —eth'no·meth'od·ol'o·gist n.

eth·no·mu·si·col·o·gy (ĕth'nō-myōō'zī-kōl'ə-jē) n. 1. The study of music that is distinct from the European classical tradition. 2. The comparative study of music of different cultures. —eth'no·mu'si·co·log'i·cal (-kə-lōj'ī-kəl) adj.

—eth'no·mu'si·col'o·gist n.

e·tho·gram (ē'thə-grām') n. A pictorial catalog of the behavioral patterns of an organism or a species. [ETHO(LOGY) + -GRAM.]

e·thol·o·gy (ī-thōl'ə-jē, ē-thōl'-) n. 1. The scientific study of animal behavior, especially as it occurs in a natural environment. 2. The study of human ethos and its formation. [French éthologie, from Latin ēthologia, art of depicting character, from Greek : ēthos, character; see ETHOS + -logia, -logy.] —eth'o·log'i·cal (ĕth'ə-lōj'ī-kəl) adj. —e·thol'o·gist n.

e·thos (ē'thōs') n. The disposition, character, or fundamental values peculiar to a specific person, people, culture, or movement: “They cultivated a subversive alternative ethos” (Anthony Burgess). [Greek ēthos, character. See s(w)e- in Appendix.]

eth·ox·yl (ī-thōk'səl) also eth·ox·y (ī-thōk'sē) n. The univalent radical C₂H₅O. [ETH(YL) + OX(O)- + -YL.]

eth·yl (ĕth'əl) n. A univalent organic radical, C₂H₅. [ETH(ER) + -YL.]

—eth·yl'ic (ĕ-thīl'ik) adj.

ethyl acetate (ĕth'əl əs'ī-tāt') n. A colorless, volatile, flammable liquid, CH₃COOC₂H₅, used in perfumes, flavorings, lacquers, pharmaceuticals, and rayon and as a general solvent.

ethyl alcohol (ĕth'əl əl'kə-hōl') n. See alcohol (n., sense 1).

eth·yl·a·mine (ĕth'ə-lə-mēn', -lām'ən) n. A colorless, volatile liquid, C₂H₅NH₂, used in petroleum refining and detergents and in organic synthesis. Also called ethamine eth·yl·ate (ĕth'ə-lāt') v. tr. eth·yl·at·ed, eth·yl·at·ing, eth·yl·ates. To introduce the ethyl group into (a compound). —eth'yl·a'tion n.

ethyl chloride (ĕth'əl klôr'id') n. A chemical compound, C₂H₅Cl, a gas at ordinary temperatures and a colorless, volatile, flammable liquid when compressed, used as a solvent, as a refrigerant, and in the manufacture of tetraethyl lead.

eth·yl·ene (ĕth'ə-lĕn') n. A colorless, flammable gas, C₂H₄, derived from natural gas and petroleum and used as a source of many organic compounds, in welding and cutting metals, to color citrus fruits, and as an anesthetic. Also called ethene —eth'yl·e'nic (-ə-lĕ'nĭk, -lĕn'ĭk) adj.

ethylene glycol (ĕth'ə-lĕn' glĭ'kôl') n. A colorless, syrupy alcohol, HOCH₂CH₂OH, used as an antifreeze in cooling and heating systems.

ethyl ether (ĕth'əl ē'thĕr) n. See ether (n., sense 2).

ethyl mercaptan (ĕth'əl mĕr-kăp'tăn') n. A colorless, organic liquid, C₂H₅SH, that has a strong odor and is added to odorless fuel and fuel systems as a warning agent.

-etic suff. Used to form adjectives usually from nouns ending in -esis, as in aphaeretic from aphaeresis. [Latin -eticus, from Greek -ētikos, from -etos, verbal adj. ending.]

É·tienne (ĕ-tyĕn') See Estienne.

e·ti·o·late (ē'tĕ-ə-lāt') v. e·ti·o·lat·ed, e·ti·o·lat·ing, e·ti·o·lates. — v. tr.

1. Botany. To cause (a plant) to develop without chlorophyll by preventing exposure to sunlight. 2. a. To cause to appear pale and sickly: a face that was etiolated from years in prison. b. To make weak by stunting the growth or development of.

— v. intr. Botany. To become blanched or whitened, as when grown without sunlight. [French étioler, from Norman French étiuler, to grow into haulm, from éteule, stalk, from Old French esteule, from Vulgar Latin stupula*, from Latin stipula.] —e'ti·o·la'tion n.

e·ti·ol·o·gy also ae·ti·ol·o·gy (ē'tĕ-ōl'ə-jĕ) n. pl. e·ti·ol·o·gies. 1. a. The study of causes or origins. b. The branch of medicine that deals with the causes or origins of disease. 2. a. Assignment of a cause, an origin, or a reason for something. b. The cause or origin of a disease or disorder as determined by medical diagnosis. [Late Latin aetiologia, from Greek aitiologia: aitia, cause + -logia, -logy.] —e'ti·o·log'ic (-ə-lŏj'ĭk), e'ti·o·log'i·cal adj. —e'ti·o·log'i·cal·ly adv. —e'ti·ol'og·ist n.

et·i·quette (ĕt'ĭ-kĕt', -kĭt) n. The practices and forms prescribed by social convention or by authority. [French, from Old French estiquet, label. See TICKET.]

SYNONYMS: etiquette, propriety, protocol, decorum. These nouns refer to codes governing correct behavior. Etiquette and the plural form proprieties denote the forms of conduct prescribed in polite society: “Man is... a slave... to etiquette” (Frederick W. Robertson). Even when she was angry, she observed the proprieties. Protocol refers to the official etiquette observed in affairs of state: The visiting prime minister, dispensing with protocol, exchanged informal reminiscences with her neighbor at the table. The word now often denotes simply a code of correct conduct: Graduation exercises had to be consistent with academic protocol. Decorum and the singular form propriety denote conformity with established standards of manners or behavior: “One hour of life, crowded to the full with glorious action... is worth whole years of those mean observances of paltry decorum” (Sir Walter Scott). “He was afraid that, from some obscure motive of propriety... she would bring Janet with her” (Arnold Bennett).

Et-na also Aet-na (ět'nə), Mount. An active volcano, 3,325.1 m (10,902 ft) high, of eastern Sicily. Its first known eruption occurred in 475 B.C.

ETO abbr. European theater of operations.

E-ton (ět'n) An urban district of southeast-central England on the Thames River opposite Windsor. Its college, the largest and most famous of England's public schools, was founded by Henry VI in 1440. Population, 3,523.

Eton collar (ět'n kö'l'ər) n. A broad white collar worn over the lapels of a jacket. [After Eton College, England.]

Eton jacket (ět'n jäk'it) n. A waist-length black jacket that has wide lapels and is cut square at the hips. [After Eton College, England.]

é-touf-fée (ā'tōō-fā') n. pl. é-touf-fées (-fā'). A spicy Cajun stew of vegetables and seafood, especially crayfish. [Louisiana French, from French (à l'étouffée, stewed, alteration (influenced by étouffer, to smother, from Old French estouffer); see STIFLE¹, of étuvée, past participle of étuver, to stew, from Old French estuver. See STEW¹.]

E-tru-ri-a (i-trōōr'ē-ə) An ancient country of west-central Italy in present-day Tuscany and parts of Umbria. It was the center of the Etruscan civilization, which spread throughout much of Italy before being supplanted by Rome in the third century B.C. — E-tru'ri-an adj. & n.

E-trus-can (i-trūs'kən) adj. Of or relating to ancient Etruria or its people, language, or culture. — n. 1. A native or inhabitant of ancient Etruria. 2. The extinct language of the Etruscans, of unknown linguistic affiliation.

et seq. abbr. Latin. Et sequens (and the following one or ones).

-ette suff. 1. Small; diminutive: kitchenette. 2. Female: usherette. 3. An imitation or inferior kind of cloth: leatherette. [Middle English, from Old French, feminine of -et, -et.]

USAGE NOTE: The adaptation of the French diminutive suffix -ette to mean “female,” as in usherette or drum majorette, was attacked on etymological grounds long before people realized that it might also involve socially questionable presuppositions. Historically, -ette is the feminine form of a French diminutive suffix that occurs in borrowings such as banquet, tablet, and clarinet (and in its feminine form, in words such as cigarette and chemisette). In the past hundred years, -ette has become fairly productive as an English diminutive in words denoting inanimates, as in novelette, kitchenette, luncheonette, and laundrette, but its use to form nouns denoting women is a separate development, most likely derived from the French use of -ette to form feminine versions of masculine personal names, as in Paulette, Georgette, Jeanette, and Antoinette. In this sense, the suffix was first applied to an English common noun in suffragette, which served as the model for a number of words that referred to women who occupied positions once reserved for men, as in farmerette, sailorette, and chaufferette. Among these only usherette and drum majorette have survived, but the pattern is still widely used to coin the names of women's social groups and auxiliaries, as well as in formations such as bachelorette, which enjoyed a vogue not long ago as an attempt to create a feminine counterpart for bachelor. In each case, the use of what is essentially a diminutive or pet name suffix to refer to women betrays a patronizing attitude. See Usage Note at brunette.

e·tude (ā'tōōd', -tyōōd') n. Music. 1. A piece composed for the development of a specific point of technique. 2. A composition featuring a point of technique but performed because of its artistic merit. [French étude, from Old French estudie, study. See STUDY.]

é·tui (ā-twē') n. pl. é·tuīs (ā-twēz'). A small, usually ornamental case for holding articles such as needles. [French, from Old French estui, prison, from estuiet, to guard, from Vulgar Latin estudiāre*, to treat carefully, from Latin studium, study. See STUDY.]

et ux. abbr. Latin. Et uxor (and wife).

ETV abbr. Educational television.

etym. abbr. Etymological; etymology.

et·y·ma (ēt'ə-mə) n. A plural of etymon.

et·y·mo·log·i·cal (ēt'ə-mə-lōj'ī-kəl) also et·y·mo·log·ic (-lōj'īk) adj. Abbr. etym., etymol. Of or relating to etymology or based on the principles of etymology. — et'·y·mo·log'i·cal·ly adv.

et·y·mol·o·gist (ēt'ə-mōl'ə-jīst) n. A specialist in etymology.

et·y·mol·o·gize (ēt'ə-mōl'ə-jīz') v. et·y·mol·o·gized, et·y·mol·o·giz·ing, et·y·mol·o·giz·es. — v. tr. To trace and state the etymology of. — v. intr. To give or suggest the etymology of a word.

et·y·mol·o·gy (ēt'ə-mōl'ə-jē) n. pl. et·y·mol·o·gies. Abbr. etym., etymol. 1. The origin and historical development of a linguistic form as shown by determining its basic elements, earliest known use, and changes in form and meaning, tracing its transmission from one language to another, identifying its cognates in other languages, and reconstructing its ancestral form where possible. 2. The branch of linguistics that deals with etymologies. [Middle English etimologie, from Old French ethimologie, from Medieval Latin ethimologia, from Latin etymologia, from Greek etumologia : etumon, true sense of a word; see ETYMON + -logia, -logy.]

et·y·mon (ět'ə-mŏn') n. pl. et·y·mons or et·y·ma (-mə). 1. An earlier form of a word in the same language or in an ancestor language. For example, Indo-European ·duwo and Old English twā are etymons of Modern English two. 2. A word or morpheme from which compounds and derivatives are formed. 3. A foreign word from which a particular loanword is derived. For example, Latin duo, “two,” is an etymon of English duodecimal. [Latin, from Greek etumon, true sense of a word, from etumos, true.]

Et·zel (ět'səl) n. The second husband of Kriemhild in the Nibelungenlied.

Eu The symbol for the element europium.

eu- pref. 1. Good; well; true: euplastic. 2. A derivative of a specified substance: eucaine. [Middle English, from Latin, from Greek. See (e)su- in Appendix.]

Eu·boe·a (yōō-bē'ə) also Ev·voia (ěv'yä) An island of central Greece in the Aegean Sea east of the mainland. It was settled by Ionian and Thracian colonists and was later controlled by Athens, Rome, Byzantium, Venice, and Turkey before becoming part of Greece in 1830.

eu·caine (yōō'kān') n. A crystalline substance, C₁₅H₂₁NO₂, used as a local anesthetic, substituting for cocaine, in veterinary medicine.

eu·ca·lyp·tol (yōō'kə-līp'tŏl', -tŏl', -tŏl') also eu·ca·lyp·tole (-tŏl') n. A colorless oily liquid, C₁₀H₁₈O, derived from eucalyptus and used in pharmaceuticals, flavoring, and perfumery. Also called cineole eu·ca·lyp·tus (yōō'kə-līp'təs) n. pl. eu·ca·lyp·tus·es or eu·ca·lyp·ti (-tī'). Any of numerous tall trees of the genus Eucalyptus, native to Australia and having aromatic leaves that yield an oil used medicinally and wood valued as timber. [New Latin Eucalyptus, genus name : Greek eu-, eu- + Greek kaluptos, covered (from kaluptein, to cover); see kel-¹ in Appendix.]

eu·car·y·ote (yōō-kār'ē-ŏt', -ē-ət) n. Variant of eukaryote.

Eu·cha·rist (yōō'kər-ĭst) n. 1. a. A sacrament and the central act of worship in many Christian churches, which was instituted at the Last Supper and in which bread and wine are consecrated and consumed in remembrance of Jesus's death; Communion. b. The consecrated elements of this rite; Communion.

2. Christian Science. Spiritual communion with God. [Middle English eukarist, from Old French eucariste, from Late Latin eucharistia, from Greek eukharistia, from eukharistos, grateful, thankful : eu-, eu- + kharizesthai, to show favor (from kharis, grace); see gher-² in Appendix.] —Eu'cha·ris'tic, Eu'cha·ris'ti·cal adj.

eu·chre (yōō'kər) n. Games. 1. A card game played usually with the highest 32 cards, in which each player is dealt 5 cards and the player making the trump is required to take at least 3 tricks to win. 2. The act of euchring an opponent. — v. tr. eu·chred, eu·chring, eu·chres. 1. Games. To prevent (an opponent) from taking 3 tricks in euchre. 2. To deceive by sly or underhand means; cheat: euchred us out of our life savings. [Origin unknown.]

eu·chro·ma·tin (yōō·krō'mə-tĭn') n. Chromosomal material that is genetically active and stains lightly with basic dyes. — eu·chro·mat'ic (yōō'krō-măt'ĭk) adj.

Euck·en (oi'kən), Rudolf Christoph. 1846-1926. German philosopher who viewed philosophy as a means of transforming life and as an active rather than a purely intellectual pursuit. He won the 1908 Nobel Prize for literature.

Eu·clid¹ (yōō'klĭd), Third century B.C. Greek mathematician who applied the deductive principles of logic to geometry, thereby deriving statements from clearly defined axioms.

Eu·clid² (yōō'klĭd) A city of northeast Ohio, a manufacturing suburb of Cleveland on Lake Erie. Population, 54,875.

Eu·clid·e·an also Eu·clid·i·an (yōō·klĭd'ē-ən) adj. Of or relating to Euclid's geometric principles.

eu·de·mon also eu·dae·mon (yōō-dē'mən) n. A good or benevolent spirit.

eu·de·mon·ism also eu·dae·mon·ism (yōō-dē'mə-nĭz'əm) n. A system of ethics that evaluates actions in terms of their capacity to produce happiness.

—eu·de'mo·nist n. —eu·de'mon·is'tic, eu·de'mon·is'ti·cal adj.

Eu·gene (yōō-jĕn') A city of western Oregon on the Willamette River south of Salem. It is the seat of the University of Oregon (founded 1872). Population, 105,624.

Eu·gene (yōō-jĕn', yōō'jĕn', æ-zhĕn'), Prince of Savoy. 1663-1736. Austrian general in service to the Holy Roman Empire during the War of the Spanish Succession (1701-1714).

eu·gen·ic (yōō-jĕn'ĭk) adj. 1. Of or relating to eugenics. 2. Relating or adapted to the production of good or improved offspring. —eu·gen'i·cal·ly adv.

eu·gen·i·cist (yōō-jĕn'ĭ-sĭst) also eu·gen·ist (yōō'jĕ-nĭst) n. An advocate of or a specialist in eugenics.

eu·gen·ics (yōō-jĕn'ĭks) n. (used with a sing. verb.) The study of hereditary improvement of the human race by controlled selective breeding.

Eu·gé·nie (yōō-jĕ'nĕ, æ-zhā-nĕ'), 1826-1920. Empress of France (1853-1871) as the wife of Napoleon III. She acted as regent during the emperor's absences and is believed to have had an influence on events that led to the Franco-Prussian War of 1870, which ended in defeat for France.

eu·gen·ist (yōō'jĕ-nĭst) n. Variant of eugenicist.

eu·ge·nol (yōō'jĕ-nōl', -nōl', -nōl') n. A colorless aromatic liquid C₁₀H₁₂O₂, made from clove oil and used as a dental analgesic and in perfumery. [New Latin Eugenia, genus of the clove plant (after EUGENE, Prince of Savoy) + -OL(E).]

eu·gle·na (yōō-glē'nə) n. Any of various minute single-celled freshwater organisms of the genus Euglena, characterized by the presence of chlorophyll, a reddish eyespot, and a single anterior flagellum. [New Latin : Greek eu-, eu- + Greek glēnē, eyeball.]

eu·glob·u·lin (yōō-glōb'yə-līn) n. A simple protein that is soluble in dilute salt solutions and insoluble in distilled water.

eu·he·mer·ism (yōō-hē'mə-rīz'əm, -hēm'ə-) n. A theory attributing the origin of the gods to the deification of historical heroes. [After Euhemerus, fourth-century B.C. Greek philosopher.] —eu·he'mer·ist n. —eu·he'mer·is'tic adj. —eu·he'mer·is'ti·cal·ly adv.

eu·he·mer·ize (yōō-hē'mə-rīz', -hēm'ə-) v. tr. eu·he·mer·ized, eu·he·mer·iz·ing, eu·he·mer·iz·es. To explain or interpret euhemeristically.

eu·kar·y·ote also eu·car·y·ote (yōō-kār'ē-ōt, -ē-ət) n. A single-celled or multicellular organism whose cells contain a distinct membrane-bound nucleus. [EU- + Greek karuōtos, having nuts (from karuon, nut); see kar- in Appendix.] —eu·kar'y·ot'ic (-ət'ik) adj.

eu·la·chon (yōō'lə-kōn') n. pl. eulachon or eu·la·chons. See candlefish. [Chinook Jargon vlâkân.]

Eu·ler (oi'lər), Leonhard. 1707-1783. Swiss mathematician particularly noted for his full development of integral calculus and for his theories of complex numbers, logarithmic and trigonometric functions, and lunar motion.

Eu·ler (oi'lər), Ulf Svante von. 1905-1983. Swedish physiologist. He shared a 1970 Nobel Prize for studies of nerve impulse transmission.

Eu·ler·Chel·pin (oi'lər-kəl'pīn), Hans Karl August Simon von. 1873-1964. German-born Swedish chemist. He shared a 1929 Nobel Prize for research on the fermentation of sugars.

Eu·less (yōō'līs) A city of northeast Texas, a suburb of Fort Worth. Population, 38,149.

eu·lo·gize (yōō'lə-jīz') v. tr. eu·lo·gized, eu·lo·giz·ing, eu·lo·giz·es. To praise highly in speech or writing. —eu'lo·gist (-jīst), eu'lo·giz'er n.

eu·lo·gy (yōō'lə-jē) n. pl. eu·lo·gies. 1. A laudatory speech or written tribute, especially one praising someone who has died. 2. High praise or commendation. [Middle English euloge, from Medieval Latin eulogium, from Greek eulogia, praise : eu-, eu- + -logia, -logy.] —eu'lo·gis'tic (-jīs'tik) adj. —eu'lo·gis'ti·cal·ly adv.

Eu·men·i·des (yōō-mēn'ī-dēz') pl.n. Greek Mythology. The Furies.

eu·nuch (yōō'nək) n. 1. A castrated man employed as a harem attendant or as a functionary in certain Asian courts. 2. A man or boy whose testes are nonfunctioning or have been removed. [Middle English eunuk, from Latin eunūchus, from Greek eunoukhos : eunē, bed + -okhos, keeping (from ekhein, to keep); see segh- in Appendix.] —eu'nuch·ism n.

WORD HISTORY: The word eunuch does not derive, as one might think, from the operation that produced a eunuch but rather from one of his functions. Eunuch goes back to the Greek word eunoukhos, “a castrated person employed to take charge of the women of a harem and act as chamberlain.” The Greek word is derived from eunē, “bed,” and ekhein, “to keep.” A eunuch, of course, was ideally suited to guard the bedchamber of women.

eu·on·y·mus (yōō-ōn'ə-məs) n. Any of various trees, shrubs, or vines of the genus Euonymus, cultivated for their decorative foliage or fruits. [Latin euōnymus, a kind of tree growing in Lesbos, from Greek euōnumos, of good name : eu-, eu- + onuma, name; see nō-men- in Appendix.]

eu·pat·rid (yōō-păt'rid, yōō'pə-trīd) n. pl. eu·pat·ri·dae (-rī-dē') or eu·pat·rids. A member of the hereditary aristocracy of ancient Athens. [Greek eupatridēs : eu-, eu- + patēr, patr-, father; see pāter- in Appendix + -idēs, patronymic suff.] —eu·pat'rid adj.

eu·pep·si·a (yōō-pěp'sē-ə, -shə) n. Good digestion. [Greek, from eupeptos, eupeptic. See EUPEPTIC.]

eu·pep·tic (yōō-pěp'tik) adj. 1. a. Relating to or having good digestion.

b. Conducive to digestion. 2. Cheerful; happy. [From Greek eupeptos : eu-, eu- + peptein, to digest; see pek^w- in Appendix.] —eu·pep'ti·cal·ly adv.

eu·phe·mism (yōō'fə-mīz'əm) n. The act or an example of substituting a mild, indirect, or vague term for one considered harsh, blunt, or offensive: “Euphemisms such as ‘slumber room’... abound in the funeral business” (Jessica Mitford). [Greek euphēmismos, from euphēmizein, to use auspicious words, from euphēmia, use of auspicious words : eu-, eu- + phēmē, speech; see bhā² in Appendix.] —eu'phe·mist n. —eu'phe·mis'tic (-mīs'tik) adj.

—eu'phe·mis'ti·cal·ly adv.

eu·phe·mize (yōō'fə-mīz') v. eu·phe·mized, eu·phe·miz·ing, eu·phe·miz·es. — v. tr. To speak of or refer to by means of a euphemism. — v. intr. To use euphemisms. —eu'phe·miz'er n.

eu·phen·ics (yōō-fěn'iks) n. (used with a sing. verb). The study or practice of phenotypic improvement of human beings after birth. [Blend of EU(GEN)ICS, and PHEN(OTYPE).] —eu·phen'ic adj.

eu·pho·ni·ous (yōō-fō'nē-əs) adj. Pleasing or agreeable to the ear.

—eu·pho'ni·ous·ly adv. —eu·pho'ni·ous·ness n.

eu·pho·ni·um (yōō-fō'nē-əm) n. Music. A brass wind instrument similar to the tuba but having a somewhat higher pitch and a mellower sound. [From Greek euphōnos, sweet-voiced. See EUPHONY.]

eu·pho·nize (yōō'fə-nīz') v. tr. eu·pho·nized, eu·pho·niz·ing, eu·pho·niz·es. To make pleasing in sound.

eu·pho·ny (yōō'fə-nē) n. pl. eu·pho·nies. Agreeable sound, especially in the phonetic quality of words. [French euphonie, from Late Latin euphōnia, from Greek, from euphōnos, sweet-voiced : eu-, eu- + phōnē, sound; see bhā-² in Appendix.] —eu·phon'ic (yōō-fōn'ik) adj. —eu·phon'i-cal-ly adv.

eu·phor·bi·a (yōō-fôr'bē-ə) n. A plant of the genus Euphorbia, which includes the spurges. [Middle English euforbia, from Latin euphorbea, after Euphorbus, first-century A.D. Greek physician.]

eu·pho·ri·a (yōō-fôr'ē-ə, -fôr'-) n. A feeling of great happiness or well-being. [New Latin, from Greek, from euphoros, healthy : eu-, eu- + pherein, to bear; see bher-¹ in Appendix.] —eu·phor'ic (-fôr'ik, -fôr'-) adj. —eu·phor'i-cal-ly adv.

eu·phor·i·ant (yōō-fôr'ē-ənt, -fôr'-) n. A drug that tends to produce euphoria. —eu·phor'i·ant adj.

eu·phot·ic (yōō-fōt'ik) adj. Of, relating to, or being the uppermost layer of a body of water that receives sufficient light for photosynthesis and the growth of green plants.

Eu·phra·tes (yōō-frā'tēz) A river of southwest Asia flowing about 2,735 km (1,700 mi) from central Turkey through Syria and into Iraq, where it joins the Tigris River to form the Shatt al Arab. Its waters were a major source of irrigation for the flourishing civilizations of ancient Mesopotamia.

Eu·phros·y·ne (yōō-frōs'ə-nē) n. Greek Mythology. One of the three Graces.

eu·phu·ism (yōō'fyōō-iz'əm) n. 1. An affectedly elegant literary style of the late 16th and early 17th centuries, characterized by elaborate alliteration, antitheses, and similes. 2. Affected elegance of language. [After Euphues, a character in Euphues, the Anatomy of Wit and Euphues and his England by John Lyly, from Greek euphuēs, shapely : eu-, eu- + phuein, to grow, bring forth; see bheuə- in Appendix.] —eu'phu·ist n. —eu'phu·is'tic, eu'phu·is'ti-cal adj. —eu'phu·is'ti-cal-ly adv.

eu·plas·tic (yōō-plās'tik) adj. Readily transformed into tissue, as in the healing of a wound.

eu·ploid (yōō'ploid') adj. Having a chromosome number that is an exact multiple of the haploid number for the species. — n. An organism having a euploid chromosome number. —eu'ploi'dy n.

eup·ne·a (yōōp-nē'ə) n. Normal, unlabored breathing. [New Latin, from Greek eupnoia, from eupnoos, breathing well : eu-, eu- + pnein, to breathe; see pneu- in Appendix.] —eup·ne'ic adj. —eup·ne'i-cal-ly adv.

Eur. abbr. Europe; European.

Eur·a·sia (yōō-rā'zhə) The land mass comprising the continents of Europe and Asia.

Eur·a·sian (yōō-rā'zhən) adj. 1. Of or relating to Eurasia. 2. Of mixed European and Asian descent. — n. A person of mixed European and Asian descent.

EURATOM abbr. European Atomic Energy Community.

eu-re-ka (yōō-rē'kə) interj. Used to express triumph upon finding or discovering something. [Greek heurēka, I have found (it) (supposedly exclaimed by Archimedes upon discovering how to measure the volume of an irregular solid and thereby determine the purity of a gold object), first person perfect of heuriskein, to find.]

Eu-re-ka (yōō-rē'kə) A city of northwest California on Humboldt Bay, an arm of the Pacific Ocean. Lumbering, fishing, and tourism are important to its economy. Population, 27,025.

eu-rhyth·mics (yōō-rīth'mīks) n. (used with a sing. verb). Variant of eurythmics.

eu-rhyth·my (yōō-rīth'mē) n. Variant of eurythmy.

Eu-rip·i-des (yōō-rīp'ī-dēz'), 480?-406 B.C. Greek dramatist who ranks with Sophocles and Aeschylus as the greatest classical tragedians. He wrote more than 90 tragedies, although only 18, including Medea, Hippolytus, and The Trojan Women, survive in complete form. —Eu-rip'ī-de'an adj.

eu-ri·pus (yōō-rī'pəs) n. pl. eu-ri·pi (-pī'). A sea channel characterized by turbulent and unpredictable currents. [Latin, from Greek euripos: eu-, eu- + rhipē, rush (from riptein, to throw).]

Euro- pref. Europe; European: Eurocommunism.

Eu-ro-A-mer·i-can (yōōr'ō-ə-mēr'ī-kən) n. A U.S. citizen or resident of European descent. — adj. 1. Of or relating to a Euro-American. 2. Of or relating to Europe and America.

Eu-ro-bond (yōōr'ō-bōnd') n. A bond of a U.S. corporation issued in Europe.

Eu-ro-cen·tric (yōōr'ō-sēn'trīk) also Eu-ro-po-cen·tric (yōō-rō'pə-) adj. Centered or focused on Europe and the Europeans: "The... current revivals of classical architecture cannot be dissociated from attempts in other fields to assert the pre-eminence of Eurocentric Western culture" (Hugh Honour). —Eu-ro-cen'trism n.

Eu-ro-com·mu·nism (yōōr'ō-kōm'yə-nīz'əm) n. The communism of certain western European Communist parties that support democratic political procedures and claim to be independent from the Soviet government.

—Eu'ro-com/mu·nist adj. & n.

Eu-ro-crat (yōōr'ə-krät') n. An administrative official at the headquarters of the Common Market. —Eu'ro-crat'ic adj.

Eu-ro-cur-ren-cy (yōōr'ō-kūr'ən-sē, -kūr'-) n. pl. Eu-ro-cur-ren-cies. Funds deposited in a bank when those funds are denominated in a currency differing from the bank's own domestic currency.

Eu-ro-dol-lar (yōōr'ō-dōl'ər) n. A U.S. dollar on deposit with a bank abroad, especially in Europe.

Eu-ro-mar·ket (yōōr'ō-mär'kīt) n. 1. The money market in Eurocurrency or Eurobonds. 2. The Common Market.

Eu-ro-pa (yōō-rō'pə) n. 1. Greek Mythology. A Phoenician princess abducted to Crete by Zeus, who had assumed the form of a white bull, and by him the mother of Minos, Rhadamanthus, and Sarpedon. 2. One of the four brightest satellites of Jupiter and the seventh in distance from the planet. It was originally sighted by Galileo. [Latin Eurōpa, from Greek Eurōpē.]

Eu-ro-pe (yōōr'əp) Abbr. Eur. The sixth-largest continent, extending west from the Dardanelles, Black Sea, and Ural Mountains. It is technically a vast peninsula of the Eurasian land mass.

Eu-ro-pe-an (yōōr'ə-pē'an) n. Abbr. Eur. 1. A native or inhabitant of Europe. 2. A person of European descent. — adj. Abbr. Eur. Of or relating to Europe or its peoples, languages, or cultures.

European corn borer (yōōr'ə-pē'an kōrn bōr'ər) n. See corn borer (n., sense 1).

European Economic Community (yōōr'ə-pē'an ěk'ə-nōm'ik kə-myōō'nī-tē) Abbr. EEC See Common Market.

Eu-ro-pe-an-ize (yōōr'ə-pē'an-īz') v. tr. Eu-ro-pe-an-ized, Eu-ro-pe-an-iz-ing, Eu-ro-pe-an-iz-es. To make European. — Eu-ro-pe-an-i-za'tion (-ə-nī-zā'shən) n.

European plan (yōōr'ə-pē'an plān) n. Abbr. EP A hotel plan in which the rates include only the charges for a room and not for meals.

European U.S.S.R. (yōōr'ə-pē'an;) A historical region of the U.S.S.R. west of the Ural Mountains and the Caspian Sea.

eu-ro-pi-um (yōō-rō'pē-əm) n. Symbol Eu A silvery-white, soft, rare-earth element occurring in monazite and bastnaesite and used to dope lasers and to absorb neutrons in research. Atomic number 63; atomic weight 151.96; melting point 826°C; boiling point 1,439°C; specific gravity 5.259; valence 2, 3. [After Europe.]

Eu-ro-po-cen-tric (yōō-rō'pə-sĕn'trĭk) adj. Variant of Eurocentric.

Eu-rus (yōōr'əs) n. Greek Mythology. The god of the east or southeast wind.

eury- pref. Wide; broad: eurythermal. [From Greek eurus, wide.]

Eu-ry-a-le (yōō-rĭ'ə-lē) n. Greek Mythology. A Gorgon; sister of Medusa and Stheno.

eu-ry-bath-ic (yōōr'ə-bāth'ĭk) adj. Capable of living in a wide range of water depths. Used of an aquatic organism. — eu-ry-bath' n.

Eu-ryd-i-ce (yōō-rĭd'ĭ-sē) n. Greek Mythology. The wife of Orpheus, whom he failed to rescue from Hades when he looked back at her and so violated the command of Pluto on their journey back to the upper world of the living.

eu-ry-ha-line (yōōr'ə-hā'lĭn', -hāl'-ĭn') adj. Capable of tolerating a wide range of salt water concentrations. Used of an aquatic organism.

eu-ryph-a-gous (yōō-rĭf'ə-gəs) adj. Ecology. Feeding on a wide variety of foods.

eu·ryp·ter·id (yōō-rĭp'tər-ĭd) n. Any of various large, segmented aquatic arthropods of the order Eurypterida that existed from the Ordovician Period to the Permian Period. [From New Latin Eurypterida, order name, from pl. of Eurypterus, genus name : EURY- + Greek pteron, wing; see -PTER.]

eu·ry·ther·mal (yōōr'ə-thŭr'məl) also eu·ry·ther·mic (-mĭk) or eu·ry·ther·mous (-məs) adj. Adaptable to a wide range of temperatures. Used of an organism. —eu·ry·therm' n.

eu·ryth·mics also eu·rhyth·mics (yōō-rĭth'mĭks) n. (used with a sing. verb). The art of interpreting musical compositions by rhythmical, free-style bodily movement. —eu·ryth'mic adj.

eu·ryth·my also eu·rhyth·my (yōō-rĭth'mē) n. 1. Harmony of proportion in architecture. 2. A system of rhythmical body movements performed to a recitation of verse or prose. [Latin eurythmia, from Greek euruthmia, from euruthmos, rhythmic, well-proportioned : eu-, eu- + rhuthmos, proportion; see RHYTHM.]

eu·ry·top·ic (yōōr'ĭ-tōp'ĭk) adj. Able to adapt to a wide range of environmental conditions; widely distributed. Used of a plant or an animal. [Greek eurus, wide + Greek topos, place + -IC.] —eu·ry·to·pic'ĭ·ty (-tō-pĭs'ĭ-tē) n.

Eu·se·bi·us of Cae·sa·re·a (yōō-sē'bē-əs ūf sē'zə-rē'ə, sēs'ə-, sēz'ə-), A.D. 260?-340?. Palestinian theologian whose Ecclesiastical History, written in Greek, is a record of the chief events in the Christian Church until the year 324.

eu·sta·chian tube or Eu·sta·chian tube (yōō-stā'shən tōōb, -shē-ən, -kē-ən) n. Anatomy. A slender tube that connects the tympanic cavity with the nasal part of the pharynx and serves to equalize air pressure on either side of the eardrum. [After Bartolommeo EUSTACHIO.]

Eu·sta·chi·o (yōō-stā'kē-ō, ě'ōō-stā'kyō), Bartolommeo. 1520-1574. Italian anatomist. A founder of modern anatomy, he is noted for his descriptions of the human ear and heart.

eu·sta·sy (yōō'stə-sē) n. pl. eu·sta·sies. A worldwide change in sea level. [From eustatic, of eustasy : EU- + STAT(O)- + -IC.] —eu·stat'ic (-stāt'ĭk) adj.

eu·stele (yōō'stēl, yōō-stē'lē) n. Botany. The central cylinder in which the primary vascular tissue is arranged around a pith, as in most seed plants.

Eu·stis (yōō'stĭs), Dorothy Leib Harrison Wood. 1886-1946. American philanthropist who bred and trained German shepherds as guide dogs for the sightless and founded (1929) The Seeing Eye, an organization that has furthered her work.

eu·tec·tic (yōō-tĕk'tĭk) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or formed at the lowest possible temperature of solidification for any mixture of specified constituents. Used especially of an alloy whose melting point is lower than that of any other alloy composed of the same constituents in different proportions. 2. Exhibiting the constitution or properties of such a solid. — n. 1. A eutectic mixture, solution, or alloy. 2. The eutectic temperature. [From Greek eutēktos, easily melted : eu-, eu- + tēktos, melted (from tēkein, to melt).]

Eu·ter·pe (yōō-tūr'pē) n. Greek Mythology. The Muse of lyric poetry and music.

eu·tha·na·sia (yōō'thə-nā'zhə, -zhē-ə) n. The act or practice of ending the life of an individual suffering from a terminal illness or an incurable condition, as by lethal injection or the suspension of extraordinary medical treatment. [Greek, a good death : eu-, eu- + thanatos, death.]

eu·than·ize (yōō'thə-nīz') also eu·than·a·tize (yōō-thăn'ə-tīz') v. tr.

eu·than·ized also eu·than·a·tized, eu·than·iz·ing also eu·than·a·tiz·ing, eu·than·iz·es also euthan·a·tiz·es. To subject to euthanasia.

eu·then·ics (yōō-thēn'iks) n. (used with a sing. verb). The study of the improvement of human functioning and well-being by improvement of living conditions. [From Greek euthenein, to flourish.] —eu·then'ist n.

eu·ther·i·an (yōō-thîr'ē-ən) adj. Of or belonging to the infraclass Eutheria, a division of mammals to which all the placental mammals belong. [From New Latin Eutheria, infraclass name : Greek eu-, eu- + thēria, pl. of thērion, wild animal; see TREACLE.] —eu·ther'i·an n.

eu·troph·ic (yōō-trōf'ik, -trō'fik) adj. Ecology. Having waters rich in mineral and organic nutrients that promote a proliferation of plant life, especially algae, which reduces the dissolved oxygen content and often causes the extinction of other organisms. Used of a lake or pond. [From Greek eutrophos, well-nourished : eu-, eu- + trephein, to nourish.] —eu·troph'i·ca'tion n. —eu'tro·phy (yōō'trə-fē) n.

eux·e·nite (yōōk'sə-nīt') n. A lustrous, blackish-brown rare-earth mineral consisting primarily of cerium, erbium, titanium, uranium, and yttrium. [Greek euxenos, kind to strangers (from its unusual composition) (eu-, eu- + xenos, stranger); see ghos-ti- in Appendix + -ITE¹.] eV abbr. Electron volt.

EVA abbr. Extravehicular activity.

e·vac·u·ant (ī-vāk'yōō-ənt) adj. Causing evacuation, especially of the bowels; purgative. — n. A purgative.

e·vac·u·ate (ī-vāk'yōō-āt') v. e·vac·u·at·ed, e·vac·u·at·ing, e·vac·u·ates.

— v. tr. 1. a. To empty or remove the contents of. b. To create a vacuum in.

2. To excrete or discharge (waste matter), especially from the bowels. 3. a. To relinquish military possession or occupation of (a town, for example). b. To withdraw or send away (troops or inhabitants) from a threatened area. 4. To withdraw or depart from; vacate. — v. intr. 1. To withdraw from or vacate a place or area, especially as a protective measure. 2. To excrete waste matter from the body. [Middle English evacuaten, from Latin ēvacuāre, ēvacuāt-, to empty out

: ē-, ex-, ex- + vacuus, empty (from vacāre, to be empty); see eu² in Appendix.]

—e·vac'u·a'tive adj. —e·vac'u·a'tor n.

e·vac·u·a·tion (ĭ-văk'yōō-ă'shən) n. 1. The act of evacuating or the condition of being evacuated. 2. Physiology. a. Discharge of waste materials from the excretory passages of the body, especially from the bowels. b. The material so discharged.

e·vac·u·ee (ĭ-văk'yōō-ē') n. A person evacuated from a dangerous area.

e·vade (ĭ-văd') v. e·vad·ed, e·vad·ing, e·vades. — v. tr. 1. To escape or avoid by cleverness or deceit: evade arrest. 2. a. To avoid fulfilling, answering, or performing: evade responsibility. See Synonyms at escape. b. To fail to make payment of (taxes). 3. To avoid giving a direct answer to. 4. To baffle or elude: The accident evades explanation. — v. intr. 1. To practice evasion. 2. To use cleverness or deceit in avoiding or escaping. [French *éva*der, from Latin ēvādere : ē-, ex-, ex- + vādere, to go.] — e·vad'a·ble, e·vad'i·ble adj. — e·vad'er n.

e·vag·i·nate (ĭ-văj'ə-năt') v. tr. e·vag·i·nat·ed, e·vag·i·nat·ing, e·vag·i·nates. To cause (a body part) to turn inside out by eversion of an inner surface. [Latin ēvāgīnāre, ēvāgīnāt-, to unsheath : ē-, ex-, ex- + vāgīna, sheath.] — e·vag'i·na'tion n.

e·val·u·ate (ĭ-văl'yōō-ăt') v. tr. e·val·u·at·ed, e·val·u·at·ing, e·val·u·ates. 1. To ascertain or fix the value or worth of. 2. To examine and judge carefully; appraise. See Synonyms at estimate. 3. Mathematics. To calculate the numerical value of; express numerically. [Back-formation from evaluation, from French évaluation, from Old French, from evaluer, to evaluate : e-, out (from Latin ē-, ex-); see EX- + value, value; see VALUE.] — e·val'u·a'tion n. — e·val'u·a·tive adj. — e·val'u·a·tor n.

evan. abbr. Evangelical; evangelist.

ev·a·nesce (ĕv'ə-nĕs') v. intr. ev·a·nesced, ev·a·nesc·ing, ev·a·nesc·es. To dissipate or disappear like vapor. See Synonyms at disappear. [Latin ēvānĕscere, to vanish : ē-, ex-, ex- + vānĕscere, to disappear (from vānus, empty); see eu-² in Appendix.] — ev'a·nes'cence n.

ev·a·nes·cent (ĕv'ə-nĕs'ənt) adj. Vanishing or likely to vanish like vapor. See Synonyms at transient. — ev'a·nes'cent·ly adv.

evang. abbr. Evangelical; evangelist.

e·van·gel (ĭ-văn'jəl) n. 1. The Christian gospel. 2. An evangelist. [Middle English evaungel, from Late Latin ēvangelium, from Greek euangelion, good news, from euangelos, bringing good news : eu-, eu- + angelos, messenger.]

e·van·gel·i·cal (ĕ'văn-jĕl'ĭ-kəl, ĕv'ən-) also e·van·gel·ic (-jĕl'ĭk) adj. Abbr. evan., evang. 1. Of, relating to, or in accordance with the Christian gospel, especially one of the four gospel books of the New Testament. 2. Evangelical. Of, relating to, or being a Protestant church that founds its teaching on the gospel. 3. Evangelical. Of, relating to, or being a Christian church believing in the sole authority and inerrancy of the Bible, in salvation only through regeneration, and in a spiritually transformed personal life. 4. Evangelical. a. Of or relating to the Lutheran churches in Germany and Switzerland. b. Of or relating to all Protestant churches in Germany. 5. Of or relating to the group in the Church of England that stresses personal conversion and salvation by faith.

6. Characterized by ardent or crusading enthusiasm; zealous: an evangelical liberal. — n. Evangelical. A member of an evangelical church or party.

—e'van-gel'i-cal-ly adv.

e·van-gel-i-cal-ism (ē'văn-jĕl'ī-kə-līz'əm, ěv'ən-) n. 1. Often Evangelicalism. Evangelical beliefs or doctrines. 2. Adherence to a church or party professing evangelical beliefs or doctrines.

e·van-gel-ism (ī-văn'jə-līz'əm) n. 1. Zealous preaching and dissemination of the gospel, as through missionary work. 2. Militant zeal for a cause. —e·van-gel-is'tic (-jə-līs'tĭk) adj. —e·van-gel-is'ti-cal-ly adv.

e·van-gel-ist (ī-văn'jə-līst) n. Abbr. evan., evang. 1. Often Evangelist.

Any one of the authors of the four New Testament gospel books: Matthew, Mark, Luke, or John. 2. One who practices evangelism, especially a Protestant preacher or missionary.

e·van-gel-ize (ī-văn'jə-līz') v. e·van-gel-ized, e·van-gel-iz-ing, e·van-gel-iz-es. — v. tr. 1. To preach the gospel to. 2. To convert to Christianity. — v. intr. To preach the gospel. —e·van-gel-i-za'tion (-jə-lī-zā'shən) n.

—e·van-gel-iz'er n.

Ev-ans (ěv'ənz), Sir Arthur John. 1851-1941. British archaeologist who unearthed in Crete remnants of a Bronze Age civilization that he named Minoan, after the legendary King Minos.

Ev-ans (ěv'ənz), Dame Edith. 1888-1976. British actress noted for her roles in the works of Shakespeare, Wilde, and Shaw.

Ev-ans (ěv'ənz), Herbert McLean. 1882-1971. American anatomist who isolated four pituitary hormones and discovered vitamin E (1922).

Ev-ans (ěv'ənz), Mary Ann. See George Eliot.

Evans, Mount. A peak, 4,350.5 m (14,264 ft) high, of north-central Colorado in the Front Range of the Rocky Mountains.

Ev-ans (ěv'ənz), Oliver. 1755-1819. American inventor who designed and built what is considered to be the first high-pressure steam engine (c. 1787).

Ev-ans (ěv'ənz), Walker. 1903-1975. American photographer noted for his studies of architecture and for his images of the rural South during the 1930's.

Ev-ans-ton (ěv'ən-stən) A city of northeast Illinois on Lake Michigan north of Chicago. Mainly residential, it is the seat of Northwestern University (chartered 1851). Population, 73,233.

Ev-ans-ville (ěv'ənz-vīl') A city of extreme southwest Indiana on the Ohio River and the Kentucky border. It is the shipping and commercial center for a coal, oil, and farm region. Population, 126,272.

evap. abbr. Evaporate.

e·vap·o·ra·ble (ĭ-văp'ər-ə-bəl) adj. That can evaporate or undergo evaporation: evaporable liquids. — e·vap'·o·ra·bil'·i·ty n.

e·vap·o·rate (ĭ-văp'ə-rāt') v. e·vap·o·rat·ed, e·vap·o·rat·ing, e·vap·o·rates. Abbr. evap. — v. tr. 1. a. To convert or change into a vapor. b. To draw off in the form of vapor. 2. To draw moisture from, as by heating, leaving only the dry solid portion. 3. To deposit (a metal) on a substrate by vacuum sublimation. — v. intr. 1. a. To change into vapor. b. To pass off in or as vapor. 2. To produce vapor. 3. To disappear; vanish: Our fears at last evaporated. See Synonyms at disappear. [Middle English evaporaten, from Latin ēvapōrāre, ēvapōrāt-: ē-, ex-, ex- + vapor, steam.] — e·vap'·o·ra'tion n.

— e·vap'·o·ra'tive adj. — e·vap'·o·ra'tive·ly adv. — e·vap'·o·ra-tiv'·i·ty (-ərə-tĭv'ĭ-tē) n. — e·vap'·o·ra'tor n.

e·vap·o·rat·ed milk (ĭ-văp'ə-rā'tĭd mĭlk) n. Concentrated, unsweetened milk made by evaporating some of the water from whole milk.

e·vap·o·rite (ĭ-văp'ə-rīt') n. A sedimentary deposit that results from the evaporation of seawater. [EVAPOR(ATION) + -ITE¹.] — e·vap'·o·rit'ic (-rĭt'ĭk) adj.

Ev·arts (ĕv'ərts), William Maxwell. 1818-1901. American lawyer and politician who was the chief defense attorney during the impeachment of President Andrew Johnson and served as U.S. secretary of state (1877-1881) and senator from New York (1885-1891).

e·va·sion (ĭ-vā'zhən) n. 1. The act or an instance of evading. 2. A means of evading; a subterfuge. [Middle English evasioun, from Old French evasion, from Late Latin ēvāsīō, ēvāsīōn-, from Latin ēvāsus, past participle of ēvādere, to evade. See EVADE.]

e·va·sive (ĭ-vā'sĭv) adj. 1. Inclined or intended to evade: took evasive action. 2. Intentionally vague or ambiguous; equivocal: an evasive statement. — e·va'·sive·ly adv. — e·va'sive·ness n.

eve (ĕv) n. 1. The evening or day preceding a special day, such as a holiday. 2. The period immediately preceding a certain event: the eve of war. 3. Evening. [Middle English eve, variant of even. See EVEN².]

Eve (ĕv) In the Old Testament, the first woman and the wife of Adam.

e·vec·tion (ĭ-vĕk'shən) n. Solar perturbation of the lunar orbit. [Latin ēvectiō, ēvectiōn-, a going up, from ēvectus, past participle of ēvehere, to raise up: ē-, ex-, up from; see EX- + vehere, to carry; see wegh- in Appendix.] — e·vec'tion·al adj.

Eve·lyn (ĕv'lĭn, ĕv'-), John. 1620-1706. English writer whose Diary, published in 1818, is a valuable historical record of his times.

e·ven¹ (ĕ'vən) adj. 1. a. Having a horizontal surface; flat: an even floor. b. Having no irregularities, roughness, or indentations; smooth. See Synonyms at level. c. Being in the same plane or line; parallel: The picture is even with the window. 2. a. Having no variations or fluctuations; uniform: the even rhythm of his breathing. See Synonyms at steady. b. Of uniform distribution: an even application of varnish. c. Placid; calm: an even temperament. 3. a. Equal or identical in degree, extent, or amount: Use even amounts of butter and sugar. b. Equally matched or balanced: an even fight. c. Just; fair: an even bargain. d. Having nothing due on either side; square: If we each take half, then we'll be even. e. Having exacted full revenge. 4. Having equal probability; as likely as not: an even chance of winning. 5. Sports. a. Having an equal score: The teams are even at halftime. b. Being equal for each opponent. Used of a score. 6. Mathematics. a. Exactly divisible by 2. b. Characterized or indicated by a number exactly divisible by 2. 7. a. Having an even number in a series. b. Having an even number of members. 8. Having an exact amount, extent, or number; precise: an even pound; an even foot. — adv. 1. a. To a greater degree or extent. Used as an intensive with comparative adjectives and adverbs: Looked sick and felt even worse. b. Indeed; moreover. Used as an intensive: He was depressed, even suicidal. Even a child knows better. c. Used as an intensive to indicate something that is unexpected: declined even to consider the idea. 2. At the same time as; already; just: Even as we watched, the building collapsed. 3. To a degree that extends; fully: loyal even unto death. 4. Exactly; precisely: It was even as he said: the jewel was gone. — v. tr. intr. e-vened, e-ven-ing, e-vens. To make or become even. — idiom. on an even keel. In a stable or unimpaired state: “There was good reason to keep relations with Washington on an even keel” (Helen Kitchen). [Middle English, from Old English efen.] — e'ven·er n.

—e'ven·ly adv. —e'ven·ness n.

e-ven² (ē/vən) n. Archaic. Evening. [Middle English, from Old English ǣfen.]

e-ven·fall (ē/vən-fôl') n. The beginning of evening; twilight.

e-ven·hand·ed (ē/vən-hăn'did) adj. Showing no partiality; fair.

—e'ven·hand'ed·ly adv. —e'ven·hand'ed·ness n.

eve·ning (ēv'nĭng) n. Abbr. evg. 1. The period of decreasing daylight between afternoon and night. 2. The period between sunset or the evening meal and bedtime: a quiet evening at home. 3. A later period or time: in the evening of one's life. 4. Chiefly Southern U.S. Middle to late afternoon. [Middle English, from Old English ǣfnung, from ǣfnian, to become evening, from ǣfen, evening.]

evening dress (ēv'nĭng drēs) n. 1. Clothing worn for evening social events. Also called evening clothes 2. See evening gown.

evening gown (ēv'nĭng goun) n. A woman's formal dress. Also called evening dress

Eve·ning Prayer (ēv'nĭng prâr) n. A daily evening service in the Anglican Church. Also called evensong evening primrose (ēv'nĭng prĭm'rōz') n. Any of various North American plants of the genus Oenothera, characteristically having four-petaled yellow flowers that open in the evening. Also called sundrops evening star (ēv'ning stār) n. A planet, especially Venus or Mercury, that crosses the local meridian before midnight and is prominent in the west shortly after sunset.

evening stock (ēv'ning stōk) n. A Eurasian plant (Matthiola longipetala) having fragrant purple flowers that bloom at night.

evening trumpet flower (ēv'ning trūm'pīt flou'ər) n. See Carolina jasmine.

evening-wear (ēv'ning-wâr') n. Evening attire and accessories for women.

E-ven-ki (ĭ-wěng'kē, ĭ-věng'-) also E-wen-ki (ĭ-wěng'kē) n. pl. Evenki or E-ven-kis also Ewenki or E-wen-kis. 1. A member of a people inhabiting a large area of eastern Siberia in the Soviet Union and northern Nei Monggol (Inner Mongolia) in China. 2. The Tungusic language of the Evenki. Also called Tungus [Russian, Evenki people, from Evenki śwənkī.]

e-ven-pin-nate (ē'vən-pīn'āt) adj. Botany. Of or relating to a compound leaf not terminating in a leaflet.

e-ven-song (ē'vən-sōng', -sōng') n. 1. See Evening Prayer. 2. Roman Catholic Church. A service that includes the office of Vespers. 3. A song sung in the evening. 4. Archaic. Evening.

e-ven-ste-ven (ē'vən-stē'vən) adj. Informal. 1. Having nothing due or owed on either side: an even-steven transaction. 2. Having an equal score, as in a game or contest. [EVEN¹ + the personal name Steven, used as rhyming slang.]

e-vent (ĭ-věnt') n. 1. a. Something that takes place; an occurrence. b. A significant occurrence or happening. See Synonyms at occurrence. c. A social gathering or activity. 2. The final result; the outcome. 3. Sports. A contest or an item in a sports program. 4. Physics. A phenomenon or occurrence located at a single point in space-time, regarded as the fundamental observational entity in relativity theory. —idioms. at all events. In any case. in any event. In any case. in the event. If it should happen; in case. [Latin eventus, from past participle of evenīre, to happen : ē-, ex-, ex- + venīre, to come; see g^wā- in Appendix.]

—e-vent/less adj.

e-ven-tem-pered (ē'vən-tēm'pərd) adj. Easygoing; calm.

e-vent-ful (ĭ-věnt'fəl) adj. 1. Full of events: an eventful week. 2. Important; momentous: an eventful decision. —e-vent/ful-ly adv. —e-vent/ful-ness n.

e-ven-tide (ē'vən-tīd') n. Evening. [Middle English, from Old English ǣfentīd : ǣfen, evening + tīd, time; see dā- in Appendix.]

event planner (ĭ-věnt'plān'ər) n. A usually professional planner of parties or social events, as for corporate or government officials.

e-ven-tu-al (ĭ-vě'n'chōō-əl) adj. 1. Occurring at an unspecified time in the future; ultimate: his eventual failure. See Synonyms at last¹. 2. Archaic. Dependent on circumstance; contingent. [French éventuel, from Latin eventus, outcome. See EVENT.]

e·ven·tu·al·i·ty (ĭ-vĕn'chōō-ăl'ĭ-tē) n. pl. e·ven·tu·al·i·ties. Something that may occur; a possibility.

e·ven·tu·al·ly (ĭ-vĕn'chōō-əl-ē) adv. At an unspecified future time: eventually rose to the position of vice president.

e·ven·tu·ate (ĭ-vĕn'chōō-āt') v. intr. e·ven·tu·at·ed, e·ven·tu·at·ing, e·ven·tu·ates. To result ultimately: The epidemic eventuated in the deaths of thousands.

ev·er (ĕv'ər) adv. 1. At all times; always: ever hoping to strike it rich. 2. a. At any time: Have you ever been to Europe? b. In any way; at all: How did they ever manage? See Usage Note at rarely. 3. To a great extent or degree. Used for emphasis often with so: He was ever so sorry. Was she ever mad! — idioms. ever and again (or ever and anon). Now and then; occasionally. for ever and a day. Always; forever. [Middle English, from Old English æfre. See aiw- in Appendix.]

ev·er·bear·ing (ĕv'ər-bâr'ĭng) adj. Producing continuously, as a tree or shrub.

ev·er·bloom·ing (ĕv'ər-blōō'mĭng) adj. Blooming throughout the growing season.

Ev·er·est (ĕv'ər-ĭst, ĕv'rĭst), Mount. A mountain, 8,853.5 m (29,028 ft) high, of the central Himalaya Mountains on the border of Tibet and Nepal. The highest elevation in the world, it was first scaled in 1953 by members of an expedition including Sir Edmund Hillary and Tenzing Norgay.

Ev·er·ett (ĕv'ər-ĭt, ĕv'rĭt) 1. A city of eastern Massachusetts, an industrial suburb of Boston. Population, 35,701. 2. A city of northwest Washington on Puget Sound north of Seattle. It is a port and has lumbering, paper, and aircraft industries. Population, 69,961.

Ev·er·ett (ĕv'ər-ĭt, ĕv'rĭt), Edward. 1794-1865. American clergyman, orator, educator, and diplomat whose many offices included U.S. representative from Massachusetts (1825-1835), minister to Great Britain (1841-1845), and secretary of state (1852-1853).

ev·er·glade (ĕv'ər-glād') n. A tract of marshland, usually under water and covered in places with tall grass. [After the Everglades.]

Ev·er·glades (ĕv'ər-glādz') A subtropical swamp area of southern Florida including Everglades National Park. It is noted for its wildlife, especially crocodiles, alligators, and egrets.

ev·er·green (ĕv'ər-grĕn') adj. 1. Having foliage that persists and remains green throughout the year. 2. Perennially fresh or interesting; enduring. — n.

1. A tree, shrub, or plant having foliage that persists and remains green throughout the year. 2. evergreens. Twigs or branches of evergreen plants used as decoration. 3. Something that remains perennially fresh, interesting, or well liked.

Ev·er·green Park (ĕv'ər-grĕn' pärk) A village of northeast Illinois, a residential suburb of Chicago. Population, 20,874.

ev·er·last·ing (ĕv'ər-lās'tĩng) adj. 1. Lasting forever; eternal.

2. a. Continuing indefinitely or for a long period of time. b. Persisting too long; tedious: everlasting complaints. — n. 1. Everlasting. God. Used with the.

2. Eternal duration; eternity. 3. Any of various plants, such as the strawflower or one of the genus Anaphalis, that retain form and color long after they are dry.

—ev'·er·last'ing·ly adv. —ev'·er·last'ing·ness n.

ev·er·more (ĕv'ər-mōr', -mōr') adv. 1. Forever; always. 2. In a future time.

Ev·ers (ĕv'ərz), Medgar Wiley. 1925-1963. American civil rights worker in Mississippi who was killed by a sniper soon after the broadcast of a pro-civil rights speech by President John F. Kennedy. His work was continued by his brother Charles (born 1923).

e·ver·sion (ĭ-vûr'zhən, -shən) n. 1. a. The act of turning inside out. b. The condition of being turned inside out. 2. The condition of being turned outward. [Middle English *eversiou*n, from Old French eversion, from Latin ēversio, *ēversio*n-, from ēversus, past participle of ēvertere, to overturn. See EVERT.] —e·ver'si·ble (-sə-bəl) adj.

e·vert (ĭ-vûrt') v. tr. e·vert·ed, e·vert·ing, e·verts. To turn inside out or outward. [Back-formation from Middle English evrerted, turned upside down, from Latin ēvertus, past participle of ēvertere, to overturn : ē-, ex-, ex- + vertere, to turn; see wer-² in Appendix.]

Ev·ert (ĕv'ərt), Christine Marie. Born 1954. American tennis player who won women's singles titles at the U.S. Open (1975-1978, 1980, and 1982) and Wimbledon (1974, 1976, and 1981).

ev·er·where (ĕv'ər-hwâr', -wâr') adv. Chiefly Southern U.S. 1. Everywhere. 2. Wherever.

REGIONAL NOTE: Inversion—the reversal of the two halves of a compound word—is a common process in Southern dialects. It affects a number of indefinite pronouns (whichever, whatever, whoever) ending in -ever, yielding everwhich, everwhat, and everwho. The commonly occurring everwhere can be an example of inversion when it means “wherever” but illustrates elision of an unstressed syllable in its meaning “everywhere.” Other examples of Southern inversion cited by Craig M. Carver in American Regional Dialects are peckerwood, hoppergrass, doll-baby, tie-tongued, doghanged (meaning “hangdog”), and right-out (“outright”).

ev·er·which (ĕv'ər-hwĭch', -wĭch') pron. Chiefly Southern U.S. Whichever. See Regional note at everwhere.

eve·ry (ĕv'rĕ) adj. 1. a. Constituting each and all members of a group without exception. b. Being all possible: had every chance of winning, but lost. 2. Being each of a specified succession of objects or intervals: every third seat; every two hours. 3. Being the highest degree or expression of: showed us every attention; had every hope of succeeding. —idioms. every bit. Informal. In all ways; equally: He is every bit as mean as she is. every now and then (or every now and again). From time to time; occasionally. every once in a while. From time to time; occasionally. every other. Each alternate: She went to visit her aunt every other week. every so often. At intervals; occasionally. every which way. Informal. 6. In every direction. 7. In complete disorder. [Middle English everi, everich, from Old English ǣfre ǣlc : ǣfre, ever; see aiw- in Appendix + ǣlc, each; see lik- in Appendix.]

USAGE NOTE: Every is representative of a large class of English words and expressions that are singular in form but felt to be plural in sense. The class includes, for example, noun phrases introduced by every, any, and certain uses of some. These expressions invariably take a singular verb; we say Every car has (not have) been tested. Anyone is (not are) liable to fall ill. But when a sentence contains a pronoun whose antecedent is introduced by every, grammar and sense pull in different directions. The grammar of these expressions requires a singular pronoun, as in Every car must have its brakes tested, but people persist in using the plural pronoun, as in Every car must have their brakes tested. Although the latter pattern is common in the speech of all groups, it is still widely regarded as grammatically incorrect in writing. • The effort to adhere to the grammatical rule leads to various complications, however. The first is grammatical. When a pronoun refers to a phrase containing every or any that falls within a different independent clause, the pronoun cannot be singular. Thus it is simply not English to say Every man left; he took his raincoat with him. Nor can one say No one could be seen, could he? Writers unwilling to use plural forms in these examples must find another way of expressing their meaning, either by rephrasing the sentence so as to get the pronoun into the same clause (as in Every man left, taking his raincoat with him) or by substituting another word for every or any (as in All the men left; they took their raincoats with them.) • The second complication is political. When a phrase introduced by every or any refers to a group containing both men and women, what shall be the gender of the singular pronoun? This matter is discussed in the Usage Note at he. See Usage Note at all. See Usage Note at any. See Usage Note at each. See Usage Note at either. See Usage Note at he¹. See Usage Note at neither. See Usage Note at none.

eve·ry·bod·y (ěv'rē-bōd'ē, -būd'ē) pron. Every person; everyone.

eve·ry·day (ěv'rē-dā') adj. 1. Appropriate for ordinary days or routine occasions: a suit for everyday wear. 2. Commonplace; ordinary: everyday worries. — n. The ordinary or routine day or occasion: "It was not an isolated, violent episode. It had become part of the everyday" (Sherry Turkle). —eve'ry-day'ness n.

Eve-ry-man or eve-ry-man (ěv'rē-mān') n. An ordinary person, representative of the human race.

every man jack (ěv'rē mǎn jǎk) n. Informal. Every single person of a group.

eve-ry-one (ěv'rē-wŭn') pron. Every person; everybody. See Usage Note at every. See Usage Note at he¹.

eve-ry-place (ěv'rē-plās') adv. Informal. Everywhere.

USAGE NOTE: The forms everyplace (or every place), anyplace (or any place), someplace (or some place), and no place are widely used in speech and informal writing as equivalents for everywhere, anywhere, somewhere, and nowhere. Though these usages are not incorrect, they should be avoided in formal writing. But when the two-word expressions every place, any place, some place, and no place are used to mean “every (any, some, no) spot or location,” they are entirely appropriate at all levels of style. The distinction between the two meanings is often subtle, but acceptability can often be gauged by seeing whether an expression with -where can be substituted. Thus in the sentence She has taken extensive photographs of every place she's ever lived in, substitution of everywhere would make no sense, and one can conclude that the sentence would be inappropriate in formal writing.

eve-ry-thing (ěv'rē-thŭŋ') pron. 1. a. All things or all of a group of things.

b. All relevant matters: told each other everything. 2. The most important fact or consideration: In business, timing is everything.

eve-ry-where (ěv'rē-hwâr', -wâr') adv. In any or every place; in all places. See Usage Note at everyplace.

Eve-ry-wom-an or eve-ry-wom-an (ěv'rē-wŏm'ən) n. An ordinary woman, representative of all women.

evg. abbr. Evening.

e-vict (ĭ-vĭkt') v. tr. e-vict-ed, e-vict-ing, e-victs. 1. To put out (a tenant, for example) by legal process; expel. 2. To force out; eject. See Synonyms at eject.

3. Law. To recover (property, for example) by a superior claim or legal process. [Middle English evicten, from Latin ēvincere, ēvict-, to vanquish : ē-, ex-, intensive pref.; see EX- + vincere, to defeat; see weik⁻³ in Appendix.] —e-vict-ee' (ĭ-vĭk-tē', ĭ-vĭk'tē) n. —e-vic'tion n. —e-vic'tor n.

ev-i-dence (ěv'ĭ-dəns) n. 1. A thing or things helpful in forming a conclusion or judgment: The broken window was evidence that a burglary had taken place.

Scientists weigh the evidence for and against a hypothesis. 2. Something indicative; an outward sign: evidence of grief on a mourner's face. 3. Law. The documentary or oral statements and the material objects admissible as testimony in a court of law. — v. tr. ev-i-denced, ev-i-denc-ing, ev-i-denc-es. 1. To indicate clearly; exemplify or prove. 2. To support by testimony; attest. —idiom. in evidence.

1. Plainly visible; to be seen: It was early, and few pedestrians were in evidence on the city streets. 2. Law. As legal evidence: submitted the photograph in evidence. [Middle English, from Old French, from Late Latin ēvidentia, from Latin ēvidēns, ēvident-, obvious. See EVIDENT.]

ev·i·dent (ĕv'ī-dənt) adj. Easily seen or understood; obvious. See Synonyms at apparent. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin ēvidēns, ēvident-: ē-, ex-, ex- + vidēns, present participle of vidēre, to see; see weid- in Appendix.]

ev·i·den·tial (ĕv'ī-dĕn'shəl) adj. Law. Of, providing, or constituting evidence: evidential material. —ev'·i·den'tial·ly adv.

ev·i·den·tia·ry (ĕv'ī-dĕn'shə-rĕ, -shĕ-ĕr'ĕ) adj. Law. 1. Of evidence; evidential. 2. For the presentation or determination of evidence: an evidentiary hearing.

ev·i·dent·ly (ĕv'ī-dənt-lĕ, ĕv'ī-dĕnt'lĕ) adv. 1. Obviously; clearly.

2. According to the evidence available: The stranger approached the microphone, evidently intending to speak.

e·vil (ĕ'vəl) adj. e·vil·er, e·vil·est. 1. Morally bad or wrong; wicked: an evil tyrant. See Synonyms at bad¹. 2. Causing ruin, injury, or pain; harmful: the evil effects of a poor diet. 3. Characterized by or indicating future misfortune; ominous: evil omens. 4. Bad or blameworthy by report; infamous: an evil reputation. 5. Characterized by anger or spite; malicious: an evil temper. — n. 1. The quality of being morally bad or wrong; wickedness. 2. That which causes harm, misfortune, or destruction: a leader's power to do both good and evil. 3. An evil force, power, or personification. 4. Something that is a cause or source of suffering, injury, or destruction: the social evils of poverty and injustice. — adv.

Archaic. In an evil manner. [Middle English, from Old English yfel. See wep- in Appendix.] —e'vil·ly adv. —e'vil·ness n.

e·vil·do·er (ĕ'vəl-dō'ər) n. One that performs evil acts. —e'vil·do'ing n.

evil eye (ĕ'vəl ī) n. 1. A look or stare believed to cause injury or misfortune to others. 2. The presumed power to cause injury or misfortune to others by magic or supernatural means.

e·vil·mind·ed (ĕ'vəl-mīn'dīd) adj. Having evil thoughts, opinions, or intentions. —e'vil·mind'ed·ly adv. —e'vil·mind'ed·ness n.

e·vince (ī-vīns') v. tr. e·vinced, e·vinc·ing, e·vinc·es. To show or demonstrate clearly; manifest: evince distaste by grimacing. [Latin ēvincere, to prevail, prove. See EVICT.] —e·vinc'i·ble adj.

e·vis·cer·ate (ī-vīs'ə-rāt') v. e·vis·cer·at·ed, e·vis·cer·at·ing, e·vis·cer·ates. — v. tr. 1. To remove the entrails of; disembowel. 2. To take away a vital or essential part of: a compromise that eviscerated the proposed bill.

3. Medicine. a. To remove the contents of (an organ). b. To remove an organ, such as an eye, from (a patient). — v. intr. Medicine. To protrude through a wound or surgical incision. [Latin ēviscerāre, ēviscerāt-: ē-, ex-, ex- + viscera, internal organs; see VISCERA.] —e·vis'cer·a'tion n.

ev·i·ta·ble (ĕv'ī-tə-bəl) adj. Possible to avoid; avoidable. [Latin ēvītābilis, from ēvītāre, to shun : ex-, ex- + vītāre, to avoid.]

ev·o·ca·tion (ĕv'ə-kā'shən, ĕ'və-) n. 1. The act of evoking. 2. Creation anew through the power of the memory or imagination. —ev'ō·ca'tor n.

e·voc·a·tive (ī-vōk'ə-tīv) adj. Tending or having the power to evoke.

—e·voc'a·tive·ly adv. —e·voc'a·tive·ness n.

e·voke (ī-vōk') v. tr. e·voked, e·vok·ing, e·vokes. 1. To summon or call forth: actions that evoked our mistrust. 2. To call to mind by naming, citing, or suggesting: songs that evoke old memories. 3. To create anew, especially by means of the imagination: a novel that evokes the Depression in accurate detail. [Latin ēvocāre : ē-, ex-, ex- + vocāre, to call; see wek^w- in Appendix.] —ev'ō·ca·ble (ĕv'ə-kə-bəl, ĭ-vō'kə-) adj.

SYNONYMS: evoke, educe, elicit. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to draw forth or bring out something latent, hidden, or unexpressed”: evoke laughter; couldn't educe significance from the event; trying to elicit the truth.

ev·o·lute (ĕv'ə-lōōt', ĕ'və-) n. Mathematics. The locus of the centers of curvature of a given curve. [From Latin ēvolūtus, past participle of ēvolvere, to unroll. See EVOLVE.] ev·o·lu·tion (ĕv'ə-lōō'shən, ĕ'və-) n. 1. A gradual process in which something changes into a different and usually more complex or better form. See Synonyms at development. 2. a. The process of developing. b. Gradual development. 3. Biology. a. The theory that groups of organisms change with passage of time, mainly as a result of natural selection, so that descendants differ morphologically and physiologically from their ancestors. b. The historical development of a related group of organisms; phylogeny. 4. A movement that is part of a set of ordered movements. 5. Mathematics. The extraction of a root of a quantity. [Latin ēvolūtiō, ēvolūtiōn-, from ēvolūtus, past participle of ēvolvere, to unroll. See EVOLVE.] —ev'ō·lu'tion·al, ev'ō·lu'tion·ar'y (-shə-nĕr'ē) adj. —ev'ō·lu'tion·ar'i·ly adv.

ev·o·lu·tion·ism (ĕv'ə-lōō'shə-nĭz'əm, ĕ'və-) n. 1. A theory of biological evolution, especially that formulated by Charles Darwin. 2. Advocacy of or belief in biological evolution. —ev'ō·lu'tion·ist n.

e·volve (ī-vōlv') v. e·volved, e·volv·ing, e·volves. — v. tr. 1. a. To develop or achieve gradually: evolve a style of one's own. b. To work (something) out; devise: “the schemes he evolved to line his purse” (S.J. Perelman). 2. Biology. To develop (a characteristic) by evolutionary processes. 3. To give off; emit. — v. intr. 1. To undergo gradual change; develop: an amateur acting group that evolved into a theatrical company. 2. Biology. To develop or arise through evolutionary processes. [Latin ēvolvere, to unroll : ē-, ex-, ex- + volvere, to roll; see wel² in Appendix.] —e·volv'a·ble adj. —e·volve'ment n.

Év-reux (ā-vrœ') A town of northern France west-northwest of Paris. Founded in Roman times, it alternated between French and English control in the 15th century. Population, 46,045.

e·vul·sion (ĭ-vŭl'shən) n. A forcible extraction. [Latin ēvolsiō, ēvolsiōn-, from ēvulsus, past participle of ēvellere, to pull out : ē-, ex-, ex- + vellere, to pull.]

Ev-voia (ĕv'yä) See Euboea.

ev-zone (ĕv'zōn') n. An infantryman of a special corps of the Greek army. [Modern Greek euzōnos, from Greek, well-girded, dressed for exercise : eu-, well; see EU- + zōnē, girdle.]

EW abbr. Enlisted woman.

ewe (yōō) n. A female sheep, especially when full grown. [Middle English, from Old English ēwe, eōwu. See owi- in Appendix.]

E·we (ā'wā', ā'vā') n. pl. Ewe or E-wes. 1. A member of a people inhabiting southeast Ghana, southern Togo, and southern Benin. 2. The Gbe language of the Ewe people.

Ew·ell (yōō'əl), Richard Stoddert. 1817-1872. American Confederate general who took part in the battles of Gettysburg (1863) and the Wilderness (1864) and was captured in Pennsylvania with all his men (1865).

ewe-neck (yōō'nĕk') n. A defect in a horse or dog in which the neck is thin and has a concave arch. —ewe'-necked' adj.

E·wen·ki (ĭ-wĕng'kē) n. Variant of Evenki.

ew·er (yōō'ər) n. A pitcher, especially a decorative one with a base, an oval body, and a flaring spout. [Middle English euer, from Anglo-Norman, from Vulgar Latin aquāria*, from Latin aquārius, of water, from aqua, water. See ak^w-ā- in Appendix.]

Ew·ing (yōō'ing) A community of west-central New Jersey north-northwest of Trenton. It is mainly residential. Population, 34,842.

ex¹ (ĕks) prep. 1. Not including; without: a stock price ex dividend. 2. Abbr. x. Business. Free of any transport or handling charges incurred before removal from a given location: bought the goods ex warehouse. 3. From, but not having graduated with, the class of: a Columbia alumnus, ex '70. [Latin. See eghs in Appendix.]

ex² (ĕks) n. The letter x.

ex³ (ĕks) n. Slang. A former spouse or partner. [From EX-.]

Ex or Ex. abbr. Bible. Exodus.

ex. abbr. 1. Examination. 2. Example. 3. Except; exception. 4. Exchange. 5. Executive. 6. Express. 7. Extra.

ex- pref. 1. Outside; out of; away from: exodontia. 2. Not; without: excaudate.

3. Former: ex-president. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin. See eghs in Appendix.]

ex-ac-er-bate (ĭg-zās'ər-bāt') v. tr. ex-ac-er-bat-ed, ex-ac-er-bat-ing, ex-ac-er-bates. To increase the severity, violence, or bitterness of; aggravate: a speech that exacerbated racial tensions; a heavy rainfall that exacerbated the flood problems. [Latin exacerbāre, exacerbāt- : ex-, intensive pref.; see EX- + acerbāre, to make harsh (from acerbus, harsh); see ak- in Appendix.] —ex-ac'er-ba'tion n.

ex-act (ĭg-zākt') adj. 1. Strictly and completely in accord with fact; not deviating from truth or reality: an exact account; an exact replica; your exact words.

2. Characterized by accurate measurements or inferences with small margins of error; not approximate: an exact figure; an exact science. 3. Characterized by strict adherence to standards or rules: an exact speaker. — v. tr. ex-act-ed, ex-act-ing, ex-acts. 1. To force the payment or yielding of; extort: exact tribute from a conquered people. 2. To demand and obtain by or as if by force or authority: a harsh leader who exacts obedience. See Synonyms at demand. [Latin exāctus, past participle of exigere, to weigh out, demand : ex-, ex- + agere, to weigh; see ag- in Appendix.] —ex-act'a-ble adj. —ex-act'ness n. —ex-ac'tor, ex-act'er n.

ex-act-a (ĭg-zāk'tə) n. Sports & Games. A method of betting, as on a horserace, in which the bettor must correctly pick those finishing in the first and second places in precisely that sequence. Also called perfecta [From American Spanish quiniela exacta, exact quiniela (a game of chance), from Spanish exacta, feminine of exacto, from Latin exāctus. See EXACT.]

ex-act-ing (ĭg-zāk'tīng) adj. 1. Making severe demands; rigorous: an exacting instructor. 2. Requiring great care, effort, or attention: an exacting task. See Synonyms at burdensome. —ex-act'ing-ly adv. —ex-act'ing-ness n.

ex-ac-tion (ĭg-zāk'shən) n. 1. a. The act of exacting. b. Excessive or unjust demand; extortion. 2. Something exacted.

ex-ac-ti-tude (ĭg-zāk'tī-tōod, -tyōod') n. The state or quality of being exact.

ex-act-ly (ĭg-zākt'lē) adv. 1. In an exact manner; accurately. 2. In all respects; just: Do exactly as you please. 3. As you say. Used to indicate agreement.

ex-ag-ger-ate (ĭg-zāj'ə-rāt') v. ex-ag-ger-at-ed, ex-ag-ger-at-ing, ex-ag-ger-ates. — v. tr. 1. To represent as greater than is actually the case; overstate: exaggerate the size of the enemy force; exaggerated his own role in the episode. 2. To enlarge or increase to an abnormal degree: thick lenses that exaggerated the size of her eyes. — v. intr. To make overstatements. [Latin exaggerāre, exaggerāt-, to heap up, magnify : ex-, intensive pref.; see EX- + aggerāre, to pile up (from agger, pile, from aggerere, to bring to : ad-, ad- + gerere, to bring).]

—ex-ag'ger-at'ed-ly adv. —ex-ag'ger-a'tion n. —ex-ag'ger-a'tive, ex-ag'ger-a-to'ry (-ə-tōr'ē, -tōr'ē) adj. —ex-ag'ger-a'tor n.

SYNONYMS: exaggerate, inflate, magnify, overstate. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to represent something as being larger or greater than it actually is”: exaggerated the size of the fish he had caught; inflated her own importance; magnifying his part in their success; overstated their income on the mortgage application.

ANTONYM: minimize ex·alt (ĭg-zôltʹ) v. tr. ex·alt·ed, ex·alt·ing, ex·alts. 1. To raise in rank, character, or status; elevate: exalted the shepherd to the rank of grand vizier. 2. To glorify, praise, or honor. 3. To increase the effect or intensity of; heighten: works of art that exalt the imagination. 4. Obsolete. To fill with sublime emotion; elate. [Middle English exalten, from Latin exaltāre: ex-, up, away; see EX- + altus, high; see al-² in Appendix.] —ex·alt'er n.

ex·al·ta·tion (ĕg'zôl-tā'shən) n. 1. The act of exalting or the condition of being exalted. 2. A state or feeling of intense, often excessive exhilaration or well-being. See Synonyms at ecstasy. 3. A flight of larks. See Synonyms at flock¹.

ex·alt·ed (ĭg-zôl'tĭd) adj. 1. Elevated in rank, character, or status. 2. Lofty; sublime; noble: an exalted dedication to liberty. 3. Exaggerated; inflated: He has an exalted sense of his importance to the project. —ex·alt'ed·ly adv.

—ex·alt'ed·ness n.

ex·am (ĭg-zămʹ) n. An examination; a test.

ex·a·men (ĭg-zā'mən) n. An examination; an investigation. [Latin exāmen, a weighing out. See EXAMINE.]

ex·am·i·nant (ĭg-zăm'ə-nənt) n. 1. One who examines. 2. One who is examined; an examinee.

ex·am·i·na·tion (ĭg-zăm'ə-nā'shən) n. Abbr. ex. 1. The act of examining or the state of being examined. 2. A set of questions or exercises testing knowledge or skill. 3. A formal interrogation: examination of the witness. —ex·am'i·na'tion·al adj.

ex·am·ine (ĭg-zăm'ĭn) v. tr. ex·am·ined, ex·am·in·ing, ex·am·ines.

1. a. To observe carefully or critically; inspect: examined the room for clues.

b. To study or analyze: examine a tissue sample under a microscope; examine the structure of a novel; examine one's own motives. 2. To test or check the condition or health of: examine a patient. 3. To determine the qualifications, aptitude, or skills of by means of questions or exercises. 4. To question formally, as to elicit facts or information; interrogate: examine a witness under oath. See Synonyms at ask. [Middle English examinen, from Old French examiner, from Latin exāmināre, from exāmen, a weighing out, from exigere, to weigh out. See EXACT.]

—ex·am'in·a·ble adj. —ex·am'in·er n.

WORD HISTORY: A student who is being examined might prefer at times to deal with a swarm of bees rather than be weighed in the balance once again. The history of the word examine involves both phenomena. Examine, first recorded in English in a work composed before 1338, goes back to the Latin word exāmināre, which in turn is derived from exāmen, meaning both “a swarm of bees” and “the apparatus or process of weighing, balance.” Exāmen has these senses because it is formed from the prefix ex-, “out of,” and the root ·ag-, “to drive, force.” The semantic possibilities of this combination are shown by the senses of the related verb exigere, which meant “to drive out,” “to exact payment,” “to demand,” and “to inquire after or into.” The verb exāmināre derived from exāmen has the sense “to swarm” as well as the senses “to weigh, balance,” and “to consider critically.”

ex·am·in·ee (ĭg-zăm'ə-nē') n. One that is examined.

ex·am·ple (ĭg-zăm'pəl) n. Abbr. ex. 1. One that is representative of a group as a whole: the squirrel, an example of a rodent; introduced each new word with examples of its use. 2. One serving as a pattern of a specific kind: set a good example by arriving on time. 3. A similar case that constitutes a model or precedent: a unique episode, without example in maritime history. 4. a. A punishment given as a warning or deterrent. b. One that has been given such a punishment: made an example of the offender. 5. A problem or exercise used to illustrate a principle or method. —idiom. for example. As an illustrative instance: Wear something simple; for example, a skirt and blouse. [Middle English, from Old French example, essaumple, from Latin exemplum, from eximere, to take out : ex-, ex- + emere, to take; see em- in Appendix.]

SYNONYMS: example, instance, case, illustration, sample, specimen. Each of these nouns refers to what is representative of or serves to explain a larger group or class. An example represents, usually typically, something of which it is a part and thereby demonstrates the character of the whole: “Of the despotism to which unrestrained military power leads we have plenty of examples from Alexander to Mao” (Samuel Eliot Morison). An instance is an example that is cited to prove or invalidate a contention or to illustrate a point: an instance of flagrant corruption. A case is an action, an occurrence, or a condition that constitutes a specific instance of something being discussed, decided, or treated: a typical case of child neglect; very few cases of diphtheria. An illustration is an example that clarifies or explains: provided an illustration of the word in context; gave an illustration of her courage. A sample is an actual part of something larger, presented as evidence of the quality or nature of the whole: distributing samples of a new detergent; gave us a sample of her temper. Specimen is sometimes synonymous with sample, but it often denotes an individual, representative member of a group or class: This poem is a fair specimen of his work. See also Synonyms at ideal ex-an-the-ma (ĕg'zăn-thĕ'mə) also ex-an-them (ig-zăn'thəm) n. pl.

ex-an-them-a-ta (-thĕm'ə-tə) or ex-an-the-mas also ex-an-thems. Medicine. 1. A skin eruption accompanying certain infectious diseases. 2. A disease, such as measles or scarlet fever, accompanied by a skin eruption. [Late Latin exanthēma, from Greek, eruption, from exanthein, to burst forth : ex-, ex- + anthein, to blossom (from anthos, flower).] —ex-an'the-mat'ic (ig-zăn'-thə-măt'ik), ex-an-them'a-tous (ĕg'zăn-thĕm'ə-təs) adj.

ex-arch¹ (ĕk'särk') n. 1. A bishop in the Eastern Orthodox Church ranking immediately below a patriarch. 2. The ruler of a province in the Byzantine Empire. [Late Latin exarchus, an overseer, from Greek exarkhos, from exarkhein, to lead : ex-, ex- + arkhein, to rule.] —ex-arch'al adj. —ex'ar'chate (ĕk'sär'kāt), ex'ar'chy (-kĕ) n.

ex-arch² (ĕk'särk') adj. Botany. Of or relating to a xylem whose early development is away from the center and toward the periphery. [EX(O)- + Greek arkhē, beginning (from arkhein, to rule, begin).] —ex'arch' n.

ex-as-per-ate (ig-zäs'pə-rāt') v. tr. ex-as-per-at-ed, ex-as-per-at-ing, ex-as-per-ates. 1. To make very angry or impatient; annoy greatly. 2. To increase the gravity or intensity of: “a scene... that exasperates his rose fever and makes him sneeze” (Samuel Beckett). [Latin exasperāre, exasperāt- : ex-, intensive pref.; see EX- + asperāre, to make rough (from asper, rough).]

—ex-as'per-at'ed-ly adv. —ex-as'per-at'er n. —ex-as'per-at'ing-ly adv.

ex-as-per-a-tion (ig-zäs'pə-rā'shən) n. 1. The act or an instance of exasperating. 2. The state of being exasperated; frustrated annoyance.

exc. abbr. 1. Excellent. 2. Except; exception.

Exc. abbr. Excellency.

Ex-cal-i-bur (ĕk-skäl'ə-bər) n. In Arthurian legend, the sword belonging to King Arthur. [Middle English, alteration (perhaps influenced by Latin chalybs, steel), of Medieval Latin Caliburnus, from Middle Welsh Caletuwlch, or Middle Irish Caladbolg, a legendary sword.]

ex ca-the-dra (ĕks' kə-thĕ'drə) adv. & adj. With the authority derived from one's office or position: the pope speaking ex cathedra; ex cathedra determinations. [Latin ex cathedrā : ex, from + cathedrā, ablative of cathedra, chair.]

ex-cau-date (ĕk-skō'dāt') adj. Without a tail; tailless.

ex-ca-vate (ĕk'skə-vāt') v. ex-ca-vat-ed, ex-ca-vat-ing, ex-ca-vates. — v. tr. 1. To make a hole in; hollow out: excavate an ore-rich hillside. 2. To form by hollowing out. 3. To remove by digging or scooping out. 4. To expose or uncover by or as if by digging: excavate an archaeological site. — v. intr. To engage in digging, hollowing out, or removing. [Latin excavāre, excavāt-, to hollow out : ex-, ex- + cavāre, to hollow (from cavus, hollow); see keuə- in Appendix.]

ex-ca-va-tion (ĕk'skə-vā'shən) n. 1. The act or process of excavating. 2. A hole formed by excavating.

ex-ca-va-tor (ĕk'skə-vā'tər) n. One that excavates, especially a backhoe.

ex-ceed (ĭk-sēd') v. tr. ex-ceed-ed, ex-ceed-ing, ex-ceeds. 1. To be greater than; surpass. 2. To go beyond the limits of: exceeded their authority. See Synonyms at excel. [Middle English exceden, from Old French exceder, from Latin excēdere : ex-, ex- + cēdere, to go; see ked- in Appendix.]

ex-ceed-ing (ĭk-sē'dīng) adj. Extreme; extraordinary: a night of exceeding darkness. — adv. Archaic. Exceedingly.

ex-ceed-ing-ly (ĭk-sē'dīng-lē) adv. To an advanced or unusual degree; extremely.

ex-cel (ĭk-sĕl') v. ex-cel-led, ex-cel-ling, ex-cels. — v. tr. To do or be better than; surpass. — v. intr. To show superiority; surpass others. [Middle English excellen, from Latin excellere. See kel-² in Appendix.]

SYNONYMS: excel, surpass, exceed, transcend, outdo, outstrip. These verbs mean to be or go beyond a limit or standard. To excel is to be preeminent (excels at figure skating) or to be or perform at a level higher than that of another or others (excelled her father as a lawyer). To surpass another is to be superior in performance, quality, or degree: is surpassed by few as a debater; happiness that surpassed description. Exceed can refer to being superior, as in quality (an invention that exceeds all others in ingenuity), to being greater than another, as in degree or quantity (a salary exceeding 50 thousand dollars a year), and to going beyond a proper limit (exceed one's authority; exceed a speed limit). Transcend often implies the attainment of a level so high that comparison is hardly possible: Great art transcends mere rules of composition. To outdo is to excel in doing or performing: didn't want to be outdone in generosity. Outstrip is often interchangeable with outdo but strongly suggests leaving another behind, as in a contest: It is a case of the student outstripping the teacher.

ex-cel-lence (ĕk'sə-ləns) n. 1. The state, quality, or condition of excelling; superiority. 2. Something in which one excels. 3. Excellence. Excellency.

Ex-cel-len-cy (ĕk'sə-lən-sē) n. pl. Ex-cel-len-cies. Abbr. Exc. Used with His, Her, or Your as a title and form of address for certain high officials, such as vice-roys, ambassadors, and governors.

ex-cel-lent (ĕk'sə-lənt) adj. 1. Abbr. exc. Of the highest or finest quality; exceptionally good of its kind. 2. Archaic. Superior. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin excellēns, excellent- present participle of excellere, to excel. See EXCEL.] — ex'cel-lent-ly adv.

ex-cel-si-or (ĭk-sĕl'sĕ-ər) n. Slender, curved wood shavings used especially for packing. [Originally a trade name.]

ex-cept (ĭk-sĕpt') prep. Abbr. ex., exc. With the exclusion of; other than; but: everyone except me. — conj. 1. If it were not for the fact that; only: I would buy the suit, except that it costs too much. 2. Otherwise than: They didn't open their mouths except to complain. 3. Unless. — v. ex-cept-ed, ex-cept-ing, ex-cepts. — v. tr. To leave out; exclude: An admission fee is charged, but children are excepted. — v. intr. To object: Counsel excepted to the court's ruling. [Middle English, from Latin exceptus, past participle of excipere, to exclude : ex-, ex- + capere, to take; see kap- in Appendix.]

USAGE NOTE: Except in the sense of “with the exclusion of” or “other than” is generally construed as a preposition, not a conjunction. A personal pronoun that follows except is therefore in the objective case: No one except me knew it. Every member of the original cast was signed except her.

ex-cept-ing (ĭk-sĕp'tĭng) prep. With the exception of. — conj. Except.
ex-cep-tion (ĭk-sĕp'shən) n. Abbr. ex., exc. 1. The act of excepting or the condition of being excepted; exclusion. 2. One that is excepted, especially a case that does not conform to a rule or generalization. 3. An objection or a criticism: opinions that are open to exception. 4. Law. A formal objection taken in the course of an action or a proceeding.
ex-cep-tion-a-ble (ĭk-sĕp'shə-nə-bəl) adj. Open or liable to objection or debate; objectionable or debatable. — ex-cep'tion-a-bil'i-ty n. — ex-cep-tion-a-bly adv.

USAGE NOTE: Exceptionable and exceptional are not interchangeable. Only exceptionable is equivalent to “objectionable” or “debatable”; exceptional is equivalent to “uncommon” or “extraordinary.”

ex-cep-tion-al (ĭk-sĕp'shə-nəl) adj. 1. Being an exception; uncommon. 2. Well above average; extraordinary: an exceptional memory. See Usage Note at exceptionable. 3. Deviating widely from a norm, as of physical or mental ability: special educational provisions for exceptional children. — ex-cep-tion-al'i-ty, ex-cep'tion-al-ness n. — ex-cep'tion-al-ly (-shə-nəl'ĭ-tē) adv.
ex-cep-tive (ĭk-sĕp'tĭv) adj. 1. Of, being, or containing an exception. 2. Archaic. Captious; faultfinding.

ex-cerpt (ĕk'sŭrpt') n. A passage or segment taken from a longer work, such as a literary or musical composition, a document, or a film. — v. tr. ex-cerpt-ed, ex-cerpt-ing, ex-cerpts (ĭk-sŭrpt'). 1. To select or use (a passage or segment from a longer work). 2. To select or use material from (a longer work). [From

Middle English, excerpted, from Latin excerptus, past participle of excerpere, to pick out : ex-, ex- + carpere, to pluck; see kerp- in Appendix.]

ex-cess (ĭk-sēs', ěk'sēs') n. 1. The state of exceeding what is normal or sufficient: rains that filled the reservoirs to excess. 2. An amount or quantity beyond what is normal or sufficient; a surplus. 3. The amount or degree by which one quantity exceeds another: Profit is the excess of sales over costs. 4. Intemperance; overindulgence: drank to excess. 5. A behavior or an action that exceeds proper or lawful bounds: tried to avoid engaging in emotional excesses such as hysteria and fits of temper. — adj. Being more than is usual, required, or permitted: skimming off the excess fat. See Synonyms at superfluous. — v. tr. ex-cessed, ex-cess-ing, ex-cess-es. To eliminate the job or position of. — idiom. in excess of. Greater than; more than: unit sales in excess of 20 million. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin excessus, past participle of excēdere, to exceed. See EXCEED.]

ex-ces-sive (ĭk-sēs'iv) adj. Exceeding a normal, usual, reasonable, or proper limit. — ex-ces'sive-ly adv. — ex-ces'sive-ness n.

SYNONYMS: excessive, exorbitant, extravagant, immoderate, inordinate, extreme, unreasonable. These adjectives mean exceeding a normal, usual, reasonable, or proper limit. Excessive describes a quantity, an amount, or a degree that is more than what is justifiable, tolerable, or desirable: excessive speed; excessive drinking. Exorbitant usually refers to a quantity or degree that far exceeds what is customary or fair: exorbitant interest rates; an exorbitant price. Extravagant sometimes specifies excessive or unwise expenditure of money (extravagant gifts); often it implies unbridled divergence from the bounds of reason or sound judgment (extravagant claims; extravagant praise). Immoderate denotes lack of due moderation: immoderate expenses; immoderate enthusiasm. Inordinate implies an overstepping of bounds imposed by authority or dictated by good sense: inordinate vanity; inordinate demands. Extreme suggests the utmost degree of excessiveness: extreme joy; extreme danger; extreme opinions. Unreasonable applies to what exceeds reasonable limits: charged an unreasonable rent; made an unreasonable request.

exch. abbr. 1. Exchange. 2. Also Exch. Exchequer.

ex-change (ĭks-chānj') v. ex-changed, ex-chang-ing, ex-chang-es. — v. tr. 1. To give in return for something received; trade: exchange dollars for francs; exchanging labor for room and board. 2. To give and receive reciprocally; interchange: exchange gifts; exchange ideas. 3. To give up for a substitute: exchange a position in the private sector for a post in government. 4. To turn in for replacement: exchange defective merchandise at a store. — v. intr. 1. To give something in return for something received; make an exchange. 2. To be received in exchange: At that time the British pound exchanged for $2.80. — n. Abbr. exch., ex. 1. The act or an instance of exchanging: a prisoner exchange; an exchange of greetings. 2. One that is exchanged. 3. A place where things are exchanged, especially a center where securities or commodities are bought and sold: a stock exchange. 4. A telephone exchange. 5. a. A system of payments using instruments, such as negotiable drafts, instead of money. b. The fee or percentage charged for participating in such a system of payment. 6. A bill of exchange. 7. A rate of exchange. 8. The amount of difference in the actual value of two or more currencies or between values of the same currency at two or more places. [Middle English eschaungen, from Anglo-Norman eschaungier, from Vulgar Latin excambiāre*: Latin ex-, ex- + Late Latin cambīre, to exchange, barter; see CHANGE.] —ex·change'able adj.

exchange rate (ɪks-čānj' rāt) n. A rate of exchange.

ex·cheq·uer (ɛks'čĕk'ər, ɪks-čĕk'ər) n. 1. Exchequer. The British governmental department charged with the collection and management of the national revenue. 2. Exchequer. In Great Britain, the Court of Exchequer. 3. Abbr.

exch., Exch. A treasury, as of a nation or an organization. 4. Financial resources; funds. [Alteration of Middle English escheker, from Old French eschequier, counting table, chessboard, from eschec, check. See CHECK.]

ex·ci·mer (ɛk'sə-mər) n. A diatomic molecule existing in an energy level above the ground state. [EXC(ITED) + (D)IMER.]

ex·cip·i·ent (ɪk-sɪp'ē-ənt) n. An inert substance used as a diluent or vehicle for a drug. [Latin excipiēns, excipient- present participle of excipere, to take out, exclude. See EXCEPT.]

ex·cis·a·ble (ɪk-sɪ'zə-bəl) adj. Subject to an excise: excisable commodities.

ex·cise¹ (ɛk'sɪz') n. 1. An internal tax imposed on the production, sale, or consumption of a commodity or the use of a service within a country: excises on tobacco, liquor, and long-distance telephone calls. 2. A licensing charge or a fee levied for certain privileges. — v. tr. ex·cised, ex·cis·ing, ex·cis·es. To levy an excise on. [Middle Dutch excijis, alteration (influenced by Latin excīsus, past participle of excīdere, to cut out); see EXCISE², of accijis, tax, probably from Old French acceis, partly from Vulgar Latin accēsum* (Latin ad-, ad- + Latin cēnsus, tax); see CENSUS, and partly from Old French assise, legislative ordinance; see ASSIZE.]

ex·cise² (ɪk-sɪz') v. tr. ex·cised, ex·cis·ing, ex·cis·es. To remove by or as if by cutting: excised the tumor; excised two scenes from the film. [Latin excīdere, excīs-: ex-, ex- + caedere, to cut; see kaə-id- in Appendix.] —ex·ci'sion (-sɪz'hən) n.

ex·cit·a·ble (ɪk-sɪ'tə-bəl) adj. 1. Easily excited. 2. Capable of responding to stimuli. —ex·cit'a·bil'i·ty, ex·cit'a·ble·ness n. —ex·cit'a·bly adv.

ex·ci·tant (ɪk-sɪt'nt) adj. Tending to excite; stimulating. — n. An agent or stimulus that excites; a stimulant.

ex·ci·ta·tion (ɛk'sɪ-tā'shən) n. 1. The act or process of exciting or an instance of it. 2. The state or condition of being excited. 3. Physiology. The activity produced in an organ, a tissue, or a part, such as a nerve cell, as a result of stimulation.

ex-ci-ta-tive (ĭk-sī'tā-tĭv) or ex-ci-ta-to-ry (-sī'tā-tōr'ē, -tōr'ē) adj. Causing or tending to cause excitation.

ex-cite (ĭk-sīt') v. tr. ex-cit-ed, ex-cit-ing, ex-cites. 1. To stir to activity. 2. To call forth (a reaction or emotion, for example); elicit: odd noises that excited our curiosity. 3. To arouse strong feeling in: speakers who know how to excite a crowd. See Synonyms at provoke. 4. Physiology. To produce increased activity or response in (an organ, a tissue, or a part); stimulate. 5. Physics. a. To increase the energy of. b. To raise (an atom, for example) to a higher energy level. [Middle English exciten, from Latin excitāre, frequentative of excĭere: ex-, ex- + ciĕre, to set in motion; see kei-² in Appendix.]

ex-cit-ed (ĭk-sī'tĭd) adj. 1. Being in a state of excitement; emotionally aroused; stirred. 2. Physics. Being at an energy level higher than the ground state.

—ex-cit'ed-ly adv.

ex-cite-ment (ĭk-sīt'mənt) n. 1. a. The act or an instance of exciting. b. The condition of being excited. 2. Activity; agitation. 3. Something that excites: the dancing tigers and other circus excitements.

ex-cit-er (ĭk-sīt'ər) n. 1. One that excites: an exciter of animosity. 2. An auxiliary generator used to provide field current for a larger generator or alternator. 3. Electronics. An oscillator for generating the carrier frequency of a transmitter.

ex-cit-ing (ĭk-sīt'ĭŋ) adj. Creating or producing excitement: an exciting adventure story. —ex-cit'ing-ly adv.

ex-ci-ton (ĕk'sī-tōn', -sī-) n. Physics. An electrically neutral excited state of an insulator or semiconductor, often regarded as a bound state of an electron and a hole. [EXCIT(ATION) + -ON¹.]

ex-ci-ton-ics (ĕk'sī-tōn'ĭks, -sī-) n. (used with a sing. verb). Physics. The study of excitons and their behavior in semiconductors and dielectrics.

ex-ci-tor (ĭk-sīt'ər) n. A nerve whose stimulation induces an increase in activity of the part it supplies.

excl. abbr. 1. Exclamation. 2. Exclusive.

ex-claim (ĭk-sklām') v. ex-claim-ed, ex-claim-ing, ex-claims. — v. intr. To cry out suddenly or vehemently, as from surprise or emotion: The children exclaimed with excitement. — v. tr. To express or utter (something) suddenly or vehemently: exclaimed her surprise. [French exclamer, from Latin exclāmāre: ex-, ex- + clāmāre, to call; see kelə-² in Appendix.] —ex-claim'er n.

ex-cla-ma-tion (ĕk'sklə-mā'shən) n. 1. An abrupt, forceful utterance: an exclamation of delight. 2. An outcry, as of protest. 3. Abbr. excl. Grammar. An interjection.

exclamation point (ĕk'sklə-mā'shən point) n. A punctuation mark (!) used after an exclamation. Also called exclamation mark ex-clam·a·tory (ɪk-sklām'ə-tôr'ē, -tôr'ē) adj. Constituting, containing, relating to, or using exclamation.

ex-clave (ɛk'sklāv') n. A part of a country that is isolated from the main part and is surrounded by foreign territory. [EX- + (EN)CLAVE.]

ex-clude (ɪk-sklōd') v. tr. ex-clud-ed, ex-clud-ing, ex-cludes. 1. To prevent from entering; keep out; bar: a jar sealed to exclude outside air; an immigration policy that excludes undesirables. 2. To prevent from being included, considered, or accepted; reject: The court excluded the improperly obtained evidence. 3. To put out; expel. [Middle English excluden, from Latin exclūdere: ex-, ex- + cludere, to shut.] —ex-clud'a·bil'i·ty n. —ex-clud'a·ble, ex-clud'i·ble adj., n. —ex-clud'er n.

ex-clu·sion (ɪk-sklō'zhən) n. 1. The act or practice of excluding. 2. The condition or fact of being excluded. [Middle English exclusioun, from Latin exclūsiō, exclūsiōn-, from exclūsus, past participle of exclūdere, to shut. See EXCLUDE.]

—ex-clu'sion-ar'y (-zhə-nēr'ē) adj.

exclusionary rule (ɪk-sklō'zhə-nēr'ē rōol) n. Law. A rule that forbids the use of illegally obtained evidence in a criminal trial.

ex-clu·sion·ist (ɪk-sklō'zhə-nĭst) n. One that advocates the exclusion of another or others, as from having or exercising a right or privilege. —ex-clu'sion·ism n. —ex-clu'sion·ist, ex-clu'sion·is'tic adj.

exclusion principle (ɪk-sklō'zhən prĭn'sə-pəl) n. The principle that two particles of a given type, such as electrons, protons, or neutrons, cannot simultaneously occupy a particular quantum state. Also called Pauli exclusion principle ex-clu·sive (ɪk-sklō'sĭv) adj. Abbr. excl. 1. Excluding or tending to exclude: exclusive barriers. 2. Not divided or shared with others: exclusive publishing rights. 3. Not accompanied by others; single or sole: your exclusive function. 4. Complete; undivided: gained their exclusive attention. 5. Excluding some or most, as from membership or participation: an exclusive club. 6. Catering to a wealthy clientele; expensive: exclusive shops. — n. 1. A news item initially released to only one publication or broadcaster. 2. An exclusive right or privilege, as to market a product. —ex-clu'sive·ly adv. —ex-clu'sive·ness, ex'-clu·siv'i·ty (ɛk'sklō-sĭv'ĭ-tē) n.

exclusive of (ɪk-sklō'sĭv ūv) prep. Not including or considering: bought the house, exclusive of the outbuildings.

ex-cog·i·tate (ɪk-skōj'ĭ-tāt') v. tr. ex-cog-i-tat-ed, ex-cog-i-tat-ing, ex-cog-i·tates. To consider or think (something) out carefully and thoroughly. [Latin excōgitāre, excōgitāt-, to find out by thinking : ex-, ex- + cōgitāre, to think; see COGITATE.] —ex-cog'i·ta'tion n. —ex-cog'i·ta'tive adj.

ex-com·mu·ni·ca·ble (ɛks'kə-myō'nĭ-kə-bəl) adj. Meriting, liable to, or punishable by excommunication: excommunicable behavior.

ex-com-mu-ni-cate (ĕks/'kə-myōō/'nī-kāt') v. tr. ex-com-mu-ni-cat-ed, ex-com-mu-ni-cat-ing, ex-com-mu-ni-cates. 1. To deprive of the right of church membership by ecclesiastical authority. 2. To exclude by or as if by decree from membership or participation in a group. — n. (-kīt) A person who has been excommunicated. — adj. (-kīt, -kāt') Having been excommunicated.

[Middle English excommunicaten, from Late Latin excommūnicāre, excommūnicāt- : Latin ex-, ex- + Latin commūnicāre, to share (from Latin commūnis, common); see COMMON.] — ex'com-mu'ni-ca'tive (-kā'tīv, -kə-), ex'com-mu'ni-ca-to'ry (-kə-tōr'ē, -tōr'ē) adj. — ex'com-mu'ni-ca'tor n.

ex-com-mu-ni-ca-tion (ĕks/'kə-myōō/'nī-kā'shən) n. 1. The act of excommunicating. 2. The state of being excommunicated. 3. A formal ecclesiastical censure that deprives a person of the right to belong to a church.

ex-co-ri-ate (īk-skōr'ē-āt', -skōr'-) v. tr. ex-co-ri-at-ed, ex-co-ri-at-ing, ex-co-ri-ates. 1. To tear or wear off the skin of; abrade. See Synonyms at chafe.

2. To censure strongly; denounce: an editorial that excoriated the administration for its inaction. [Middle English excoriaten, from Latin excoriāre, excoriāt- : ex-, ex- + corium, skin; see sker¹ in Appendix.] — ex-co'ri-a'tion n.

— ex-co'ri-a'tor n.

ex-cre-ment (ĕk/'skrə-mənt) n. Waste material, especially fecal matter, that is expelled from the body after digestion. [Latin excrēmentum, from excrētus, past participle of excernere, to excrete. See EXCRETE.] — ex'cre-men'tal (-mĕn'tl) adj.

— ex'cre-men-ti'tious (-mĕn-tīsh'əs) adj.

ex-cres-cence (īk-skrĕs'əns) n. 1. An abnormal outgrowth or enlargement, such as a wart. 2. A normal outgrowth, such as a fingernail or a beard. 3. A usually unwanted or unnecessary accretion: "Independent agencies were an excrescence on the Constitution" (Los Angeles Times). [Middle English, from Latin excrĕscēntia, from neuter pl. of excrĕscēns, excrĕscēnt- present participle of excrĕscere, to grow out : ex-, ex- + crĕscere, to grow; see ker² in Appendix.]

ex-cres-cen-cy (īk-skrĕs'ən-sē) n. pl. ex-cres-cen-cies. 1. The state or condition of being excrescent. 2. An excrescence.

ex-cres-cent (īk-skrĕs'ənt) adj. 1. Growing out abnormally, excessively, or superfluously. 2. Linguistics. Of or relating to epenthesis; epenthetic.

— ex-cres'cent-ly adv.

ex-cre-ta (īk-skrĕ'tə) pl.n. Waste matter, such as sweat, urine, or feces, discharged from the body. [Latin excrĕta, from neuter pl. past participle of excernere, to excrete. See EXCRETE.] — ex-cre'tal adj.

ex-crete (īk-skrĕt') v. tr. ex-cret-ed, ex-cret-ing, ex-cretes. To separate and discharge (waste matter) from the blood, tissues, or organs. [Latin excernere, excrĕt- : ex-, ex- + cernere, to separate; see krei- in Appendix.]

ex·cre·tion (ĭk-skrĕ'shən) n. 1. The act or process of discharging waste matter from the blood, tissues, or organs. 2. The matter, such as urine or sweat, that is so excreted.

ex·cre·to·ry (ĕk'skrĭ-tôr'ĕ, -tôr'ĕ) adj. Of, relating to, or used in excretion: excretory organs.

ex·cru·ci·ate (ĭk-skrōō'shĕ-āt') v. tr. ex·cru·ci·at·ed, ex·cru·ci·at·ing, ex·cru·ci·ates. 1. To inflict severe pain on; torture. 2. To inflict great mental distress on. See Synonyms at afflict. [Latin excruciāre, excruciat- : ex-, intensive pref.; see EX- + cruciāre, to crucify, torture (from crux, cruc-, cross); see CROSS.] —ex·cru·ci·a'tion n.

ex·cru·ci·at·ing (ĭk-skrōō'shĕ-ā'tĭng) adj. 1. Intensely painful; agonizing. 2. Very intense or extreme: wrote with excruciating precision. —ex·cru·ci·at'ing·ly adv.

ex·cul·pate (ĕk'skəl-pāt', ĭk-skŭl'-) v. tr. ex·cul·pat·ed, ex·cul·pat·ing, ex·cul·pates. To clear of guilt or blame. [Medieval Latin exculpāre, exculpāt- : Latin ex-, ex- + culpa, guilt.] —ex·cul'pa·ble (ĭk-skŭl'pə-bəl) adj. —ex'cul·pa'tion n.

ex·cul·pa·to·ry (ĭk-skŭl'pə-tôr'ĕ, -tôr'ĕ) adj. Acting or tending to exculpate.

ex·cur·rent (ĭk-skŭr'ənt, -skŭr'-) adj. 1. a. Running or flowing in an outward direction. b. Marked by an outward flow of current. 2. Botany. a. Having a single, undivided trunk with lateral branches, as in spruce trees. b. Extending beyond the apex of a leaf, as a midrib or vein. [Latin excurrĕns, excurrent- present participle of excurrere, to run out. See EXCURSION.]

ex·cur·sion (ĭk-skŭr'zhən) n. 1. A usually short journey made for pleasure; an outing. 2. A roundtrip on a passenger vehicle at a special low fare. 3. A group taking a short pleasure trip together. 4. A diversion or deviation from a main topic; a digression. 5. Physics. a. A movement from and back to a mean position or axis in an oscillating or alternating motion. b. The distance traversed in such a movement. [Latin excursiō, excursiōn-, from excursus, past participle of excurrere, to run out : ex-, ex- + currere, to run; see kers- in Appendix.]

ex·cur·sion·ist (ĭk-skŭr'zhə-nĭst) n. A person who goes on an excursion.

ex·cur·sive (ĭk-skŭr'sĭv) adj. Of, given to, characterized by, or having the nature of digression. —ex·cur'sive·ly adv. —ex·cur'sive·ness n.

ex·cur·sus (ĭk-skŭr'səs) n. pl. ex·cur·sus·es. 1. A lengthy, appended exposition of a topic or point. 2. A digression. [Latin, from past participle of excurrere, to run out. See EXCURSION.]

ex·cus·a·to·ry (ĭk-skyōō'zə-tôr'ĕ, -tôr'ĕ) adj. Tending or serving to excuse.

ex·cuse (ĭk-skyōōz') v. tr. ex·cused, ex·cus·ing, ex·cus·es. 1. a. To explain (a fault or an offense) in the hope of being forgiven or understood: He arrived late and excused his tardiness in a flimsy manner. b. To seek to remove the blame from: She excused herself for being late. 2. a. To grant pardon to; forgive: We quickly excused the latecomer. b. To make allowance for; overlook: Readers must excuse the author's youth and inexperience. See Synonyms at forgive. 3. To serve as justification for: Brilliance does not excuse bad manners. 4. To free, as from an obligation or duty; exempt: In my state, physicians and lawyers are excused from jury duty. 5. To give permission to leave; release: The child ate quickly and asked to be excused. — n. (ĭk-skyōōs') 1. An explanation offered to justify or obtain forgiveness. 2. A reason or grounds for excusing: Ignorance is no excuse for breaking the law. 3. The act of excusing. 4. A note explaining an absence. 5. Informal. An inferior example: a poor excuse for a poet; a sorry excuse for a car. [Middle English excusen, from Old French excuser, from Latin excūsāre : ex-, ex- + causa, accusation; see CAUSE.] — ex·cus'a·ble adj.

—ex·cus'a·ble·ness n. —ex·cus'a·bly adv. —ex·cus'er n.

ex·ec (ĭg-zĕk') n. Informal. 1. An executive. 2. The executive officer of a unit of the armed forces.

exec. abbr. Executor.

ex·e·cra·ble (ĕk'sī-krə-bəl) adj. 1. Deserving of execration; hateful.

2. Extremely inferior; very bad: an execrable meal. [Middle English, from Latin execrābilis, from execrārī, exsecrārī, to execrate. See EXECRATE.]

—ex'e·cra·ble·ness n. —ex'e·cra·bly adv.

ex·e·crate (ĕk'sī-krāt') v. tr. ex·e·crat·ed, ex·e·crat·ing, ex·e·crates. 1. To declare to be hateful or abhorrent; denounce. 2. To feel loathing for; abhor.

3. Archaic. To invoke a curse on. [Latin execrārī, execrāt- : ex-, ex- + sacrāre, to consecrate (from sacer, sacred); see sak- in Appendix.] —ex'e·cra'tive adj.

—ex'e·cra'tor n. —ex'e·cra-to'ry (-krə-tōr'ē, -tōr'ē) adj.

ex·e·cra·tion (ĕk'sī-krā'shən) n. 1. The act of cursing. 2. A curse.

3. Something that is cursed or loathed.

ex·ec·u·tant (ĭg-zĕk'yə-tənt) n. One who performs or carries out, especially a skilled performer: The dancer is the choreographer's executant.

ex·e·cute (ĕk'sī-kyōōt') v. tr. ex·e·cut·ed, ex·e·cut·ing, ex·e·cutes. 1. To put into effect; carry out: a government that executes the decisions of the ruling party. 2. To perform; do: execute a U-turn. See Synonyms at perform. 3. To create (a work of art, for example) in accordance with a prescribed design. 4. To make valid, as by signing: execute a deed. 5. To perform or carry out what is required by: execute the terms of a will. 6. To put to death, especially by carrying out a lawful sentence. 7. Computer Science. To run (a program or an instruction). [Middle English executen, from Old French executer, from Medieval Latin execūtāre, from Latin execūtor, executor, from execūtus, past participle of exequī, exsequī : ex-, ex- + sequī, to follow; see sek^w-1 in Appendix.] —ex'e·cut'a·ble adj. —ex'e·cut'er n.

ex·e·cu·tion (ĕk'sī-kyōō'shən) n. 1. a. The act of executing something.

b. The state of being executed. 2. The manner, style, or result of performance:

The plan was sound; its execution, faulty. 3. The act or an instance of putting to death or being put to death as a lawful penalty. 4. Law. a. The carrying into effect of a court judgment. b. A writ empowering an officer to enforce a judgment. c. Validation of a legal document by the performance of all necessary formalities. 5. Archaic. Effective, punitive, or destructive action.

ex·e·cu·tion·er (ĕk'sī-kyōō'shə-nər) n. One who executes, especially one who puts a condemned person to death.

execution time (ĕk'sī-kyōō'shən tīm) n. Computer Science. The time required for a computer to decode and perform a compiled instruction.

ex·ec·u·tive (ig-zĕk'yə-tĭv) n. Abbr. ex. 1. A person or group having administrative or managerial authority in an organization. 2. The chief officer of a government, state, or political division. 3. The branch of government charged with putting into effect a country's laws and the administering of its functions.

4. Computer Science. A set of coded instructions designed to process and control other coded instructions. — adj. Abbr. ex. 1. Of, relating to, capable of, or suited for carrying out or executing: an advisory body lacking executive powers.

2. Having, characterized by, or relating to administrative or managerial authority: the executive director of a drama troupe; executive experience and skills. 3. Of or relating to the branch of government charged with the execution and administration of the nation's laws. [Middle English, to be carried out, from Old French exécutif, from executer, to carry out. See EXECUTE.]

executive agreement (ig-zĕk'yə-tĭv ə-grĕ'mənt) n. An agreement made between the executive branch of the U.S. government and a foreign government without ratification by the Senate.

executive council (ig-zĕk'yə-tĭv koun'səl) n. 1. A council that advises or assists a political executive. 2. A council having the highest executive power or authority.

executive officer (ig-zĕk'yə-tĭv ô'fĭ-sər) n. 1. a. The officer second in command of a military unit smaller than a division. b. The officer second in command of a naval unit. 2. A person holding executive power in an organization.

executive order (ig-zĕk'yə-tĭv ôr'dər) n. Abbr. EO See regulation (n., sense 3).

executive privilege (ig-zĕk'yə-tĭv prĭv'ə-lĭj) n. The principle that members of the executive branch of government cannot legally be forced to disclose their confidential communications when such disclosure would adversely affect the operations or procedures of the executive branch.

executive routine (ig-zĕk'yə-tĭv rōō-tĕn') n. Computer Science. A set of coded instructions designed to use a digital computer to develop or control other routines.

executive secretary (ig-zĕk'yə-tĭv sĕk'rĭ-tĕr'ē) n. A secretary having administrative duties and responsibilities.

executive session (ig-zĕk'yə-tĭv sĕsh'ən) n. A session, as of a legislature or committee, often closed to the public, in which executive business is transacted.

ex-ec-u-tor (ig-zĕk'yə-tər, ĕk'sĭ-kyōō'tər) n. Abbr. exec., exr. 1. A person who carries out or performs something. 2. Law. A person who is appointed by a testator to execute the testator's will. —ex-ec'u-to'ri-al (-tôr'ē-əl, -tôr'-) adj. —ex-ec'u-tor-ship' n.

ex-ec-u-to-ry (ig-zĕk'yə-tôr'ē, -tôr'ē) adj. 1. Of or relating to execution or administration; executive. 2. In effect; operative. 3. Law. Intended to go into effect or having the potential of becoming effective at a future time; contingent.

ex-ec-u-trix (ig-zĕk'yə-trĭks') n. pl. ex-ec-u-trix-es or ex-ec-u-tri-ces (-trĭ'sĕz'). Abbr. exrx. Law. A woman who is appointed by a testator to execute the testator's will.

ex-e-dra (ĕk'sĭ-drə, ĭk-sĕ'-) n. 1. A usually curved outdoor bench with a high back. 2. An often semicircular portico with seats that was used in ancient Greece and Rome as a place for discussions. [Latin, from Greek : ex-, ex- + hedra, seat; see sed- in Appendix.]

ex-e-ge-sis (ĕk'sə-jĕ'sĭs) n. pl. ex-e-ge-ses (-sĕz). Critical explanation or analysis, especially of a text. [Greek exĕgĕsis, from exĕgeisthai, to interpret : ex-, ex- + hĕgeisthai, to lead; see sāg- in Appendix.]

ex-e-gete (ĕk'sə-jĕt') also ex-e-get-ist (ĕk'sə-jĕt'ĭst) n. A person skilled in exegesis. [Greek exĕgĕtēs, from exĕgeisthai, to interpret. See EXEGESIS.]

ex-e-get-ic (ĕk'sə-jĕt'ĭk) also ex-e-get-i-cal (-ĭ-kəl) adj. Of or relating to exegesis; critically explanatory. —ex'e-get'i-cal-ly adv.

ex-e-get-ist (ĕk'sə-jĕt'ĭst) n. Variant of exegete.

ex-em-pla (ig-zĕm'plə) n. Plural of exemplum.

ex-em-plar (ig-zĕm'plār', -plər) n. 1. One that is worthy of imitation; a model. See Synonyms at ideal. 2. One that is typical or representative; an example. 3. An ideal that serves as a pattern; an archetype. 4. A copy, as of a book. [Middle English exemplere, from Late Latin exemplārium, from Latin exemplum, example. See EXAMPLE.]

ex-em-pla-ry (ig-zĕm'plə-rē) adj. 1. Worthy of imitation; commendable: exemplary behavior. 2. Serving as a model. 3. Serving as an illustration; typical. 4. Serving as a warning; admonitory. [From Middle English exaumplarie, exemplere, an exemplar. See EXEMPLAR.] —ex'em-plar'i-ly (ĕg'zəm-plār'ĭ-lē) adv. —ex-em'pla-ri-ness, ex'em-plar'i-ty (ĕg'zəm-plār'ĭ-tē) n.

ex-em-pli-fi-ca-tion (ig-zĕm'plə-fĭ-kā'shən) n. 1. The act of exemplifying. 2. One that exemplifies; an example. 3. Law. An officially certified copy of a document.

ex-em-pli-fy (ig-zĕm'plə-fĭ') v. tr. ex-em-pli-fied, ex-em-pli-fy-ing, ex-em-pli-fies. 1. a. To illustrate by example: exemplify an argument. b. To serve as an example of: scenes that exemplify the film director's style. 2. Law. To make a certified copy of (a document). [Middle English exemplifien, from Old French exemplifier, from Medieval Latin exemplificāre : Latin exemplum, example; see EXAMPLE + Latin -ficāre, -fy.] —ex-em'pli-fi'a-ble adj. —ex-em'pli-fi'er n.

ex-em·pli gra·ti·a (ĭg-zĕm'plĕ grā'shĕ-ə, ĕk-sĕm'plĕ grā'tĕ-ă') adv. Abbr.

e.g. For example. [Latin exempli grātiā, for the sake of example : exempli, genitive of exemplum, example + grātiā, ablative of grātia, favor.]

ex-em·plum (ĭg-zĕm'pləm) n. pl. ex-em·pla (-plə). 1. An example. 2. A brief story used to make a point in an argument or to illustrate a moral truth. [Latin. See EXAMPLE.]

ex-empt (ĭg-zĕmpt') v. tr. ex-empt-ed, ex-empt-ing, ex-empts. 1. To free from an obligation, a duty, or a liability to which others are subject: exempting the disabled from military service. 2. Obsolete. To set apart; isolate. — adj.

1. Freed from an obligation, a duty, or a liability to which others are subject; excused: persons exempt from jury duty; income exempt from taxation; a beauty somehow exempt from the aging process. 2. Obsolete. Set apart; isolated. — n. One who is exempted from an obligation, a duty, or a liability. [Middle English exempten, from Old French exempter, from exempt, exempt, from Latin exemptus, past participle of eximere, to take out. See EXAMPLE.] —ex-empt'i-ble adj.

ex-emp·tion (ĭg-zĕmp'shən) n. 1. The act or an instance of exempting.

2. The state of being exempt; immunity. 3. One that is exempted, especially an amount of income that is exempted from taxation.

ex-en·ter·ate (ĭg-zĕn'tə-rāt') v. tr. ex-en·ter·at-ed, ex-en·ter·at-ing, ex-en·ter·ates. 1. To disembowel; eviscerate. 2. Medicine. To remove the contents of (an organ). [Latin exenterāre, exenterāt-, to disembowel : ex-, ex- + Greek enteron, entrails; see en in Appendix.] —ex-en'ter-a'tion n.

ex-er·cise (ĕk'sər-sīz') n. 1. An act of employing or putting into play; use: the free exercise of intellect; the exercise of an option. 2. The discharge of a duty, function, or office. 3. Activity that requires physical or mental exertion, especially when performed to develop or maintain fitness: took an hour of vigorous daily exercise at a gym. 4. A task, problem, or other effort performed to develop or maintain fitness or increase skill: a piano exercise; a memory exercise.

5. exercises. A program that includes speeches, presentations, and other ceremonial activities performed before an audience: graduation exercises. — v.

ex-er-cised, ex-er-cis-ing, ex-er-cis-es. — v. tr. 1. To put into play or operation; employ: Proceed, but exercise caution. 2. To bring to bear; exert: "The desire to be re-elected exercises a strong brake on independent courage" (John F. Kennedy).

3. a. To subject to practice or exertion in order to train, strengthen, or develop: exercise the back muscles; exercise the memory. b. To put through exercises: exercise a platoon. See Synonyms at practice. 4. To carry out the functions of; execute: exercise the role of disciplinarian. 5. a. To absorb the attentions of, especially by worry or anxiety. b. To stir to anger or alarm; upset: an injustice that exercised the whole community. — v. intr. To take exercise. [Middle English, from Old French exercice, from Latin exercitium, from exercitus, past participle of exercēre, to exercise : ex-, ex- + arcēre, to restrain.]

—ex'er-cis'a-ble adj.

exercise bicycle (ĕk'sər-sīz' bī'sīk'əl) n. A stationary piece of fitness equipment having a saddle seat, handlebars, and pedals that can be adjusted to a desired degree of tension, pedaled chiefly to strengthen the user's cardiovascular system. Also called stationary bicycle exercise book (ĕk'sər-sīz' böök) n. A booklet for use by students, usually containing problems or exercises and blank space for writing answers or practicing a lesson.

ex-er-cis-er (ĕk'sər-sī'zər) n. 1. One that exercises: an exerciser of racehorses. 2. A device for exercising the body.

ex-er-ci-ta-tion (ĭg-zûr'sī-tā'shən) n. The act or an instance of exercising. [Middle English exercitacioun, from Latin exercitātiō, exercitātiōn-, from exercitāre, frequentative of exercēre, to exercise. See EXERCISE.]

Ex-er-cy-cle A trademark used for a brand of exercise bicycle. This trademark often occurs in print in lowercase: "all sorts of weight equipment, rowing machines, exercycles" (Chicago Tribune).

ex-er-gon-ic (ĕk'sər-gŏn'īk) adj. Releasing energy. [EX(O)- + Greek ergon, work; see werg- in Appendix + -IC.]

ex-ergue (ĕk'sûrg', ĕg'zûrg') n. A space on the reverse of a coin or medal, usually below the central design and often giving the date and place of engraving. [French, from New Latin exergum : Greek ex-, ex- + Greek ergon, work; see werg- in Appendix.]

ex-ert (ĭg-zûrt') v. tr. ex-ert-ed, ex-ert-ing, ex-erts. 1. To put to use or effect; put forth: exerted all my strength to move the box. 2. To bring to bear; exercise: exert influence. 3. To put (oneself) to strenuous effort: exerted ourselves mightily during the campaign to raise funds. [Latin exserere, exsert-, to put forth, stretch out : ex-, ex- + serere, to join; see ser-² in Appendix.]

ex-er-tion (ĭg-zûr'shən) n. The act or an instance of exerting, especially a strenuous effort. See Synonyms at effort.

Ex-e-ter (ĕk'sī-tər) 1. A borough of southwest England northeast of Plymouth. It has been important since Roman times because of its strategic location. Population, 99,200. 2. A town of southeast New Hampshire southwest of Portsmouth. Settled in 1638, it is the site of Phillips Exeter Academy (opened 1783). Population, 11,024.

ex-e-unt (ĕk'sē-ənt, -ōŏnt') Used as a stage direction to indicate that two or more performers leave the stage. [Latin, third person pl. of exīre, to go out. See EXIT.]

ex·fo·li·ate (ĕks-fō'lē-āt') v. ex·fo·li·at·ed, ex·fo·li·at·ing, ex·fo·li·ates.

— v. tr. 1. To remove (a layer of bark or skin, for example) in flakes or scales; peel. 2. To cast off in scales, flakes, or splinters. — v. intr. To come off or separate into flakes, scales, or layers. [Latin exfoliāre, exfoliāt-, to strip of leaves : ex-, ex- + folium, leaf; see bhel⁻³ in Appendix.] —ex·fo'li·a'tion n.

—ex·fo'li·a'tive adj. —ex·fo'li·a'tor n.

ex·ha·lant also ex·ha·lent (ĕks-hā'lənt, ĕk-sā'-) adj. Functioning in exhalation. — n. An organ, such as the siphon of a clam, that is used for exhalation.

ex·ha·la·tion (ĕks'hə-lā'shən, ĕk'sə-) n. 1. The act or an instance of exhaling.

2. Something, such as air or vapor, that is exhaled.

ex·hale (ĕks-hāl', ĕk-sāl') v. ex·haled, ex·hal·ing, ex·hales. — v. intr.

1. a. To breathe out. b. To emit air or vapor. 2. To be given off or emitted. — v. tr. 1. To blow (something) forth or breathe (something) out. 2. To give off; emit: chimneys exhaling dense smoke. [Middle English exalen, from Latin exhālāre : ex-, ex- + hālāre, to breathe.]

ex·ha·lent (ĕks-hā'lənt, ĕk-sā'-) adj. & n. Variant of exhalant.

ex·haust (ĭg-zōst') v. ex·haust·ed, ex·haust·ing, ex·hausts. — v. tr.

1. To wear out completely. See Synonyms at tire¹. 2. To drain of resources or properties; deplete: tobacco crops that exhausted the soil. See Synonyms at deplete. 3. To use up completely: exhausted our funds before the month was out.

4. To treat completely; cover thoroughly: exhaust a topic. 5. To draw out the contents of; drain: exhaust a tank gradually. 6. To let out or draw off: exhaust vaporous wastes through a pipe. — v. intr. To escape or pass out: Steam exhausts through this valve. — n. 1. a. The escape or release of vaporous waste material, as from an engine. b. The fumes or gases so released. 2. A duct or pipe through which waste material is emitted. 3. An apparatus for drawing out noxious air or waste material by means of a partial vacuum. [Latin exhaurīre, exhaust- : ex-, ex- + haurīre, to draw.] —ex·haust'ed·ly adv. —ex·haust'er n.

—ex·haust'i·bil'i·ty n. —ex·haust'i·ble adj. —ex·haust'ing·ly adv.

ex·haus·tion (ĭg-zōs'tʃən) n. 1. The act or an instance of exhausting. 2. The state of being exhausted; extreme fatigue: The runner collapsed from exhaustion.

ex·haus·tive (ĭg-zō'stĭv) adj. 1. Treating all parts or aspects without omission; thorough: an exhaustive study. 2. Tending to exhaust. —ex·haus'tive·ly adv.

—ex·haus'tive·ness n. —ex'haus·tiv'i·ty n.

ex·haust·less (ĭg-zōst'lis) adj. Impossible to exhaust; inexhaustible.

—ex·haust'less·ly adv. —ex·haust'less·ness n.

exhaust pipe (ĭg-zōst' pĭp) n. See tailpipe.

exhaust trail (ĭg-zōst' trāl) n. A condensation trail that is visible when water vapor in aircraft exhaust mixes with the air in the vehicle's wake and saturates it.

ex·hib·it (ĭg-zĭb'it, ĕg-) v. ex·hib·it·ed, ex·hib·it·ing, ex·hib·its. — v. tr.

1. To show outwardly; display: exhibited pleasure by smiling. 2. a. To present for others to see: rolled up his sleeve to exhibit the scar. b. To present in a public exhibition or contest: exhibited her paintings at a gallery. See Synonyms at show.

3. To give evidence or an instance of; demonstrate: young musicians eager to exhibit their talent; a plant that exhibits dimorphism. 4. Law. a. To submit (evidence or documents) in a court. b. To present or introduce officially. — v. intr. To put something on public display. — n. 1. The act or an instance of exhibiting. 2. Something exhibited: studied the dinosaur exhibits at the museum.

3. A public showing; an exhibition: spent the afternoon at the space exhibit.

4. Law. Something, such as a document, formally introduced as evidence in court. [Middle English exhibiten, from Latin exhibēre, exhibit- : ex-, ex- + habēre, to hold; see ghabh- in Appendix.] — ex·hib/i·tor, ex·hib/it·er n.

— ex·hib/i·to·ry (-ĭ-tôr'ē, -tôr'ē) adj.

ex·hi·bi·tion (ĕk'sə-bīsh'ən) n. 1. The act or an instance of exhibiting.

2. Something exhibited; an exhibit. 3. A large-scale public showing, as of art objects or industrial or agricultural products. 4. Chiefly British. A grant given to a scholar by a school or university.

ex·hi·bi·tion·ism (ĕk'sə-bīsh'ən-ĭz'm) n. 1. The act or practice of deliberately behaving so as to attract attention. 2. Psychiatry. A psychosexual disorder marked by the compulsive exposure of the genitalia in public. — ex'hi·bi·tion·ist n. — ex'hi·bi·tion·is'tic adj.

ex·hib·i·tive (ĭg-zĭb'ī-tĭv) adj. Tending to exhibit: *bird behavior exhibitiv*e of the nest-building instinct. — ex·hib/i·tive·ly adv.

ex·hil·a·rant (ĭg-zĭl'ər-ənt) adj. Serving to exhilarate; exhilarating. — n. Something that exhilarates or stimulates.

ex·hil·a·rate (ĭg-zĭl'ə-rāt') v. tr. ex·hil·a·rat·ed, ex·hil·a·rat·ing, ex·hil·a·rates. 1. To cause to feel happily refreshed and energetic; elate: We were exhilarated by the cool, pine-scented air. 2. To invigorate; stimulate: bold designs that exhilarate the viewer's imagination. [Latin exhilarāre, exhilarāt- : ex-, intensive pref.; see EX- + hilarāre, to make cheerful (from hilaris, hilarus, cheerful, from Greek hilaros).] — ex·hil/a·ra'tive adj. — ex·hil/a·ra'tor n.

ex·hil·a·rat·ing (ĭg-zĭl'ə-rā'tĭng) adj. Causing exhilaration; invigorating. — ex·hil/a·rat'ing·ly adv.

ex·hil·a·ra·tion (ĭg-zĭl'ə-rā'shən) n. The state of being stimulated, refreshed, or elated: "Few Yosemite visitors ever see snow avalanches and fewer still know the exhilaration of riding on them" (John Muir).

ex·hort (ĭg-zōrt') v. ex·hort·ed, ex·hort·ing, ex·horts. — v. tr. To urge by strong, often stirring argument, admonition, advice, or appeal: exhorted the troops to hold the line. See Synonyms at urge. — v. intr. To make urgent appeal. [Middle English exhorten, from Latin exhortārī : ex-, intensive pref.; see EX- + hortārī, to encourage; see gher-² in Appendix.] — ex·hort'er n.

ex-hor-ta-tion (ĕg'zôr-tā'shən, ĕk'sôr-) n. 1. The act or an instance of exhorting. 2. A speech or discourse that encourages, incites, or earnestly advises.

ex-hor-ta-tive (ĭg-zôr'tā-tĭv) also ex-hor-ta-to-ry (-tôr'ē, -tôr'ē) adj. Acting or intended to encourage, incite, or advise.

ex-hume (ĭg-zōom', -zyōom', ĭk-syōom', ĕks-hyōom') v. tr. ex-humed, ex-hum-ing, ex-humes. 1. To remove from a grave; disinter. 2. To bring to light, especially after a period of obscurity. [French exhumer, from Medieval Latin exhumāre: Latin ex-, ex- + Latin humus, ground; see dhghem- in Appendix.] —ex'hu-ma'tion (ĕg'zyōō-mā'shən, ĕks'hyōō-) n. —ex-hum'er n.

ex-i-gence (ĕk'sə-jəns) n. Exigency.

ex-i-gen-cy (ĕk'sə-jən-sē, ĭg-zĭj'ən-) n. pl. ex-i-gen-cies. 1. The state or quality of requiring much effort or immediate action. 2. A pressing or urgent situation. See Synonyms at crisis. 3. Often exigencies. Urgent requirements; pressing needs. See Synonyms at need.

ex-i-gent (ĕk'sə-jənt) adj. 1. Requiring immediate action or remedy. See Synonyms at urgent. 2. Requiring much effort or expense; demanding. [Latin exigēns, exigent- present participle of exigere, to demand. See EXACT.]

—ex'i-gent-ly adv.

ex-i-gu-i-ty (ĕk'sĭ-gyōō'ĭ-tē) n. The quality or condition of being scanty or meager.

ex-ig-u-ous (ĭg-zĭg'yōō-əs, ĭk-sĭg'-) adj. Extremely scanty; meager. [From Latin exiguus, from exigere, to measure out, demand. See EXACT.]

—ex-ig'u-ous-ly adv. —ex-ig'u-ous-ness n.

ex-ile (ĕg'zil', ĕk'sil') n. 1. a. Enforced removal from one's native country. b. Self-imposed absence from one's country. 2. The condition or a period of living away from one's native country. 3. One who lives away from one's native country, whether because of expulsion or voluntary absence. — v. tr. ex-iled, ex-il-ing, ex-iles. To send into exile; banish. See Synonyms at banish. [Middle English exil, from Old French, from Latin exilium, from exul, exsul, exiled person, wanderer.] —ex-il'ic (ĭg-zĭl'ĭk, ĭk-sĭl'-), ex-il'ian (ĭg-zĭl'yən, -zĭl'ē-ən, ĭk-sĭl'yən, -sĭl'ē-ən) adj.

ex-ine (ĕk'sēn', -sĭn') n. Botany. The outer layer of the wall of a spore or pollen grain. Also called exosporium [EX(O)- + Greek is, in-, tendon; see wei- in Appendix.]

ex-ist (ĭg-zĭst') v. intr. ex-ist-ed, ex-ist-ing, ex-ists. 1. To have actual being; be real. 2. To have life; live. See Synonyms at be. 3. To live at a minimal level; subsist: barely enough income on which to exist. 4. To continue to be; persist: old customs that still exist in rural areas. 5. To be present under certain circumstances or in a specified place; occur: "Wealth and poverty exist in every demographic category" (Thomas G. Exter). [Latin existere, existere, to come forth, be manifest: ex-, ex- + sistere, to stand; see stā- in Appendix.]

ex-is-tence (ɪg-zɪs'təns) n. 1. The fact or state of existing; being. 2. The fact or state of continued being; life: our brief existence on earth. 3. a. All that exists: sang the beauty of all existence. b. A thing that exists; an entity. 4. A mode or manner of existing: scratched out a meager existence. 5. Specific presence; occurrence: The Geiger counter indicated the existence of radioactivity.

SYNONYMS: existence, actuality, being. The central meaning shared by these nouns is “the fact or state of existing”: laws in existence for centuries; a fantasy that progressed from possibility to actuality; a point of view gradually coming into being.

ANTONYM: nonexistence

ex-is-tent (ɪg-zɪs'tənt) adj. 1. Having life or being; existing. See Synonyms at real¹. 2. Occurring or present at the moment; current. — n. One that exists.

ex-is-ten-tial (ɛg'zɪ-stən'shəl, ɛk'si-) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or dealing with existence. 2. Based on experience; empirical. 3. Of or as conceived by existentialism or existentialists: an existential moment of choice. —ex'is-ten'tial-ly adv.

ex-is-ten-tial-ism (ɛg'zɪ-stən'shə-lɪz'əm, ɛk'si-) n. Philosophy. A philosophy that emphasizes the uniqueness and isolation of the individual experience in a hostile or indifferent universe, regards human existence as unexplainable, and stresses freedom of choice and responsibility for the consequences of one's acts. —ex'is-ten'tial-ist adj. & n.

ex-it (ɛg'zɪt, ɛk'sit) n. 1. The act of going away or out. 2. A passage or way out: an emergency exit in a theater; took the second exit on the thruway. 3. The departure of a performer from the stage. 4. Death. 5. Computer Science. A computer programming technique for ending a repeated cycle of operations. — v.

ex-it-ed, ex-it-ing, ex-its. — v. intr. To make one's exit; depart. — v. tr. To go out of; leave: exited the plane through a rear door. — Used as a stage direction for a specified actor to leave the stage. [From Latin, third person sing. of exīre, to go out : ex-, ex- + īre, to go; see ei- in Appendix. N., sense 2 from Latin exitus, from past participle of exīre, to go out.]

exit poll (ɛg'zɪt pōl) n. A poll taken of a sample of voters as they leave a polling place, used especially to predict the outcome of an election or determine the opinions and characteristics of the candidates' supporters.

ex li-bris (ɛks lɪ'brɪs, lē'-) n. pl. ex libris. See bookplate. [Latin ex librīs, from the books : ex, from + librīs, ablative pl. of liber, book.]

Ex-moor (ɛk'smōr', -smōr', -smōr') A moorland plateau of Cornwall in southwest England. It is a popular tourist area with notable prehistoric ruins.

ex ni-hi-lo (ɛks nē'ə-lō', nī'-, nī'-) adv. & adj. Out of nothing. [Latin ex nihilō : ex, out of + nihilō, ablative of nihil, nihilum, nothing.]

exo- pref. Outside; external: exoskeleton. [From Greek exō, outside, from ex, out of. See eghs in Appendix.]

ex·o·bi·ol·o·gy (ĕk'sō-bī-ōl'ə-jē) n. The branch of biology that deals with the search for extraterrestrial life and the effects of extraterrestrial surroundings on living organisms. Also called astrobiology, space biology. —ex'·o·bi'o·log'i·cal (-ə-lōj'ī-kəl) adj. —ex'·o·bi·ol'·o·gist n.

ex·o·carp (ĕk'sō-kārp') n. Botany. The outermost layer of the fruit wall. Also called epicarp ex·o·crine (ĕk'sə-krīn, -krēn, -krīn') adj. 1. Secreting externally, directly or through a duct: exocrine cells. 2. Of, relating to, or produced by an exocrine gland. [EXO- + Greek krinein, to separate; see krei- in Appendix.]

exocrine gland (ĕk'sə-krīn glānd) n. Physiology. An externally secreting gland, such as a salivary gland or sweat gland that releases its secretions directly or through a duct.

ex·o·cy·clic (ĕk'sō-sī'klīk, -sīk'līk) adj. External to a chemical ring structure: an exocyclic double bond.

ex·o·cy·to·sis (ĕk'sō-sī-tō'sīs) n. pl. ex·o·cy·to·ses (-sēz'). Biology. A process of cellular secretion or excretion in which substances contained in vesicles are discharged from the cell by fusion of the vesicular membrane with the outer cell membrane. —ex'·o·cy·tose' (-tōs') v. —ex'·o·cy·tot'ic (-tōt'īk) adj.

Exod. abbr. Bible. Exodus.

ex·o·don·tia (ĕk'sə-dōn'shə, -shē-ə) n. Exodontics.

ex·o·don·tics (ĕk'sə-dōn'tīks) n. (used with a sing. verb). The dental specialty that deals with extraction of teeth. —ex'·o·don'tist n.

ex·o·dus (ĕk'sə-dəs) n. 1. A departure of a large number of people.

2. Exodus. a. The departure of the Israelites from Egypt. b. Abbr. Ex, Ex.,

Exod. A book of the Bible. See Table at Bible. [Late Latin, from Greek exodos: ex-, out; see EXO- + hodos, way, journey.]

ex·o·en·zyme (ĕk'sō-ĕn'zīm') n. An enzyme, such as a digestive enzyme, that functions outside the cell from which it originates.

ex·o·er·gic (ĕk'sō-ūr'jīk) adj. Exothermic. [EXO- + Greek ergon, work; see werg- in Appendix + -IC.]

ex of·fi·ci·o (ĕks' ə-fīsh'ē-ō') adv. & adj. By virtue of office or position. [Latin ex officio: ex, from + officiō, ablative of officium, office.]

ex·og·a·my (ĕk-sōg'ə-mē) n. pl. ex·og·a·mies. 1. The custom of marrying outside the tribe, family, clan, or other social unit. 2. Biology. The fusion of two gametes that are not closely related. —ex'·o·gam'ic (ĕk'sə-gām'īk), ex·og'a·mous (ĕk-sōg'ə-məs) adj.

ex·og·e·nous (ĕk-sōj'ə-nəs) adj. 1. Biology. Derived or developed from outside the body; originating externally. 2. Botany. Characterized by the addition of layers of woody tissue. 3. Medicine. Having a cause external to the body. Used of diseases. [French exogène : Greek exō-, outside; see EXO- + French -gène, -gen.]

—ex·og′e·nous·ly adv.

ex·on (ĕk′sŏn) n. Genetics. A nucleotide sequence in DNA that carries the code for the final messenger RNA molecule and thus defines the amino acid sequence during protein synthesis. [ex(pressed) + *-ON*¹.] —ex·on′ic adj.

ex·on·er·ate (ĭg-zŏn′ə-rāt′) v. tr. ex·on·er·at·ed, ex·on·er·at·ing, ex·on·er·ates. 1. To free from blame. 2. To free from a responsibility, obligation, or task. [Middle English exoneraten, from Latin exonerāre, exonerāt-, to free from a burden : ex-, ex- + onus, oner-, burden.] —ex·on′er·a′tion n.

—ex·on′er·a′tive adj.

ex·o·nu·cle·ase (ĕk′sŏ-nŏŏ′klē-ās′, -āz′, -nyŏŏ′-) n. Any of a group of enzymes that catalyze the hydrolysis of single nucleotides from the end of a DNA or RNA chain.

ex·o·pep·ti·dase (ĕk′sŏ-pĕp′tī-dās′, -dāz′) n. Any of a group of enzymes that catalyze the hydrolysis of single amino acids from the end of a polypeptide chain.

ex·oph·thal·mic goiter (ĕk′səf-thäl′mĭk goi′tər) n. See Graves′ disease.

ex·oph·thal·mos also ex·oph·thal·mus (ĕk′səf-thäl′məs) n. Abnormal protrusion of the eyeball. [New Latin exophthalmus, from Greek exophthalmos, with prominent eyes : ex-, ex- + ophthalmos, eye; see ok^w- in Appendix.]

—ex′oph·thal′mic adj.

ex·or·bi·tance (ĭg-zŏr′bī-təns) n. 1. Excessiveness, as of price or amount.

2. Behavior or an action that exceeds what is right or proper.

ex·or·bi·tant (ĭg-zŏr′bī-tənt) adj. Exceeding all bounds, as of custom or fairness: exorbitant prices. See Synonyms at excessive. [Middle English, aberrant, flagrant, from Old French, excessive, extreme, from Late Latin exorbitāns, exorbitant- present participle of exorbitāre, to deviate : ex-, ex- + orbita, path, track; see ORBIT.] —ex·or′bi·tant·ly adv.

ex·or·cise (ĕk′sŏr-sīz′, -sər-) v. tr. ex·or·cised, ex·or·cis·ing, ex·or·cis·es.

1. To expel (an evil spirit) by or as if by incantation, command, or prayer. 2. To free from evil spirits or malign influences. [Middle English exorcisen, from Late Latin exorcizāre, from Greek exorkizein : ex-, ex- + horkizein, to make one swear (from horkos, oath).] —ex′or·cis′er n.

WORD HISTORY: An oath is to be found at the etymological heart of exorcise, a term going back to the Greek word exorkizein, meaning “to swear in,” “to take an oath by,” “to conjure,” and “to exorcise.” Exorkizein in turn is formed from the prefix ex-, “thoroughly,” and the verb horkizein, “to make one swear, administer an oath to,” derived from horkos, “oath.” Our word exorcise is first recorded in English in a work composed possibly before the beginning of the 15th century, and in this use exorcise means “to call up or conjure spirits” rather than “to drive out spirits,” a sense first recorded in 1546.

ex-or-cism (ĕk'sôr-sîz'əm, -sər-) n. 1. The act, practice, or ceremony of exorcising. 2. A formula used in exorcising. —ex'or-cist n.

ex-or-di-um (ig-zôr'dē-əm, ĭk-sôr'-) n. pl. ex-or-di-ums or ex-or-di-a (-dē-ə). A beginning or introductory part, especially of a speech or treatise. [Latin, from exōrdīrī, to begin : ex-, intensive pref.; see EX- + ōrdīrī, to begin; see ar- in Appendix.] —ex-or'di-al adj.

ex-o-skel-e-ton (ĕk'sō-skĕl'ī-tŋ) n. A hard outer structure, such as the shell of an insect or a crustacean, that provides protection or support for an organism. —ex'o-skel'e-tal (-ī-tl) adj.

ex-os-mo-sis (ĕk'sōz-mō'sīs, -sōs-) n. The passage of a fluid through a semi-permeable membrane toward a solution of lower concentration, especially the passage of water through a cell membrane into the surrounding medium. [EX(O)- + OSMOSIS.] —ex'os-mot'ic (-mōt'ĭk) adj.

ex-o-sphere (ĕk'sō-sfīr') n. 1. The outermost region of a planet's atmosphere. 2. The outermost layer of Earth's atmosphere, lying above the thermosphere and extending thousands of kilometers into space, from which molecules having sufficient velocity can escape Earth's gravitation. —ex'o-spher'ic (-sfīr'ĭk, -sfēr'-) adj.

ex-o-spore (ĕk'sō-spôr', -spôr') n. Botany. The outermost layer of a spore in some algae and fungi.

ex-o-spor-i-um (ĕk'sō-spôr'ē-əm, -spôr'-) n. pl. ex-o-spor-i-a (-ē-ə). Botany. See exine. [New Latin : EXO- + spora, spore; see SPORE.]

ex-os-to-sis (ĕk'sō-stō'sīs) n. pl. ex-os-to-ses (-sēz). A bony growth on the surface of a bone or tooth. [Greek exostōsis : ex-, out of; see EXO- + osteon, bone; see ost- in Appendix + -ōsis, -osis.]

ex-o-ter-ic (ĕk'sə-tĕr'ĭk) adj. 1. Not confined to an inner circle of disciples or initiates. 2. Comprehensible to or suited to the public; popular. 3. Of or relating to the outside; external. [Latin exōtericus, external, from Greek exōterikos, from exōterō, comparative of exō, outside, from ex, out. See eghs in Appendix.] —ex'o-ter'i-cal-ly adv.

ex-o-ther-mic (ĕk'sō-thûr'mĭk) also ex-o-ther-mal (-məl) adj. Releasing heat: an exothermic reaction. —ex'o-ther'mi-cal-ly adv.

ex-ot-ic (ig-zōt'ĭk) adj. 1. From another part of the world; foreign: exotic tropical plants in a greenhouse. See Synonyms at foreign. 2. Intriguingly unusual or different; excitingly strange: exotic costumes from the Far East. See Synonyms at fantastic. 3. Of or involving striptease: an exotic dancer. — n. 1. One that is exotic. 2. A striptease performer. [Latin exōticus, from Greek exōtikos, from exō, outside, from ex, out. See eghs in Appendix.] —ex-ot'i-cal-ly adv. —ex-ot'ic-ness n.

ex·ot·i·ca (ĭg-zōt'ī-kə) pl.n. Things that are curiously unusual or excitingly strange: such gustatory exotica as killer bee honey and fresh catnip sauce. [Latin exōtica, from neuter pl. of exōticus, exotic. See EXOTIC.]

ex·ot·i·cism (ĭg-zōt'ī-sīz'əm) n. The quality or condition of being exotic.

ex·o·tox·in (ĕk'sō-tōk'sīn) n. A poisonous substance secreted by a microorganism and released into the medium in which it grows.

exp abbr. Mathematics. Exponent; exponential.

exp. abbr. 1. Expenses. 2. Experiment; experimental. 3. Expiration. 4. Export. 5. Express.

ex·pand (ĭk-spānd') v. ex·pand·ed, ex·pand·ing, ex·pands. — v. tr. 1. To increase the size, volume, quantity, or scope of; enlarge: expanded her store by adding a second room. See Synonyms at increase. 2. To express at length or in detail; enlarge on: expanded his remarks afterward. 3. To open (something) up or out; spread out: The bird expanded its wings and flew off. 4. Mathematics. To write (a quantity) as a sum of terms in an extended form. — v. intr. 1. To become greater in size, volume, quantity, or scope: Air expands when heated. This critic's influence is expanding. 2. To speak or write at length or in detail: expand on a favorite topic. 3. To open up or out; unfold: The chair expands to form a day bed. 4. To feel expansive. [Middle English expanden, to spread out, from Latin expandere : ex-, ex- + pendere, to spread; see petə- in Appendix.] —ex·pan·d'a·ble adj. —ex·pand'er n.

ex·pand·ing universe theory (ĭk-spān'dīng yōō'nə-vûrs' thē'ə-rē) n.

1. The cosmological theory holding that the universe is expanding, based on the interpretation of the color shift in the spectra of all the galaxies as being the result of the Doppler effect and indicating that all galaxies are moving away from one another. 2. The cosmogonical theory holding that a violent eruption from a point source led to the formation of elementary particles, the subsequent formation of hydrogen and helium, and the dispersion of the galaxies that developed from these elements.

ex·pan·dor (ĭk-spān'dər) n. A transducer designed for a given range of input voltages that produces a larger range of output voltages.

ex·pans (ĭk-spāns') n. 1. A wide and open extent, as of surface, land, or sky.

2. a. Expansion. b. The distance or amount of expansion. [Latin expānsus, from neuter past participle of expandere, to spread out. See EXPAND.]

ex·pan·si·ble (ĭk-spān'sə-bəl) adj. That can expand or be expanded: an expansible antenna. —ex·pan'si·bil'i·ty n.

ex·pan·sile (ĭk-spān'səl, -sīl') adj. Of, relating to, or capable of expansion.

ex·pan·sion (ĭk-spān'shən) n. 1. a. The act or process of expanding: the new nation's expansion westward. b. The state of being expanded. 2. a. An expanded part: an expansion of a river. b. A product of expanding: a book that is an expansion of the author's Ph.D. thesis. 3. The extent or amount by which something has expanded. 4. Increase in the dimensions of a body. 5. Mathematics. a. A quantity written in an extended form, as a sum of terms or a continued product. b. The process of obtaining this form. 6. An expanse. 7. A period of increased economic or business activity.

ex·pan·sion·ar·y (ĭk-spăn'shə-nĕr'ē) adj. Tending toward or causing expansion: the empire's expansionary policies in Asia.

expansion bolt (ĭk-spăn'shən bōlt) n. A bolt having an attachment that expands as the bolt is driven into a surface.

ex·pan·sion·ism (ĭk-spăn'shə-nĭz'əm) n. A nation's practice or policy of territorial or economic expansion. —ex·pan'sion·ist adj. & n.

ex·pan·sive (ĭk-spăn'sĭv) adj. 1. Capable of expanding or tending to expand. 2. Broad in size or extent; comprehensive: expansive police powers. 3. Disposed to be open, communicative, and generous; outgoing: Wine made the guest expansive. 4. Grand in scale: an expansive lifestyle. 5. Psychiatry. Marked by euphoria and delusions of grandeur. —ex·pan'sive·ly adv. —ex·pan'sive·ness, ex'pan-siv'i·ty (ĕk'spăn-sĭv'ĭ-tē) n.

ex par·te (ĕks pār'tē) adv. & adj. 1. Law. From or on one side only, with the other side absent or unrepresented: testified ex parte; an ex parte hearing. 2. From a one-sided or strongly biased point of view. [Latin : ex, from + parte, ablative of pars, part, side.]

ex·pa·ti·ate (ĭk-spā'shē-āt') v. intr. ex·pa·ti·at·ed, ex·pa·ti·at·ing, ex·pa·ti·ates. 1. To speak or write at length: expatiated on the subject until everyone was bored. 2. To wander freely. [Latin expatiārī, expatiāt- : ex-, ex- + spatiārī, to spread (from spatium, space).] —ex·pa'ti·a'tion n.

ex·pa·tri·ate (ĕk-spā'trē-āt') v. ex·pa·tri·at·ed, ex·pa·tri·at·ing, ex·pa·tri·ates. — v. tr. 1. To send into exile. See Synonyms at banish. 2. To remove (oneself) from residence in one's native land. — v. intr. 1. To give up residence in one's homeland. 2. To renounce allegiance to one's homeland. — n. (-ĭt, -āt') 1. One who has taken up residence in a foreign country. 2. One who has renounced one's native land. — adj. (-ĭt, -āt') Residing in a foreign country; expatriated. [Medieval Latin expatriāre, expatiāt- : Latin ex-, ex- + Latin patria, native land (from patrius, paternal, from pater, father); see pater- in Appendix.] —ex·pa'tri·a'tion n.

ex·pect (ĭk-spĕkt') v. ex·pect·ed, ex·pect·ing, ex·pects. — v. tr. 1. a. To look forward to the probable occurrence or appearance of: expecting a telephone call; expects rain on Sunday. b. To consider likely or certain: expect to see them soon. See Usage Note at anticipate. 2. To consider reasonable or due: We expect an apology. 3. To consider obligatory; require: The school expects its pupils to be on time. 4. Informal. To presume; suppose. — v. intr. 1. To look forward to the birth of one's child. Used in progressive tenses: His sister is expecting in May. 2. To be pregnant. Used in progressive tenses: My wife is expecting again.

[Latin expectāre : ex-, ex- + spectāre, to look at, frequentative of specere, to see; see spek- in Appendix.] —ex·pect'a·ble adj. —ex·pect'a·bly adv.
—ex·pect'ed·ly adv. —ex·pect'ed·ness n.

SYNONYMS: expect, anticipate, hope, await. These verbs are related in various ways to the idea of looking ahead to something in the future. To expect is to look forward to the likely occurrence or appearance of someone or something: You can expect us for lunch. “We should not expect something for nothing—but we all do and call it Hope” (Edgar W. Howe). Anticipate is sometimes used as a synonym of expect, but usually it involves more than expectation. Sometimes it refers to taking advance action, as to forestall or prevent the occurrence of something expected or to meet a wish or request before it is articulated: anticipated the attack and locked the gates; anticipating her desires. The term can also refer to having a foretaste of something expected before its occurrence: anticipate trouble. To hope is to look forward with desire and usually with a measure of confidence in the likelihood of gaining what is desired: I hope to see you soon. Hope for the best, but expect the worst. To await is to wait in expectation of; it implies certainty: eagerly awaiting your letter.

ex·pec·tance (ĭk-spĕk'təns) n. Expectancy.

ex·pec·tan·cy (ĭk-spĕk'tən-sē) n. pl. ex·pec·tan·cies. 1. The act or state of expecting; expectation: Tense with expectancy, I waited for my name to be called.

2. The state of being expected. 3. Something expected. 4. An expected amount calculated on the basis of actuarial data: a life expectancy of 70 years. In this sense, also called expectation ex·pec·tant (ĭk-spĕk'tənt) adj. 1. Having or marked by expectation: an expectant look; an expectant hush. 2. Pregnant: expectant mothers.

—ex·pec'tant n. —ex·pec'tant·ly adv.

ex·pec·ta·tion (ĕk'spĕk-tā'shən) n. 1. a. The act of expecting. b. Eager anticipation: eyes shining with expectation. 2. The state of being expected.

3. a. Something expected: a result that was beyond my wildest expectation.

b. expectations. Prospects, especially of success or gain. 4. Statistics. a. The expected value of a random variable. b. The mean of a random variable. 5. See expectancy (n., sense 4). —ex'pec·ta'tion·al adj.

ex·pec·ta·tive (ĭk-spĕk'tə-tĭv) adj. Of, relating to, or characterized by expectation.

ex·pect·ed value (ĭk-spĕk'tĭd vāl'yōō) n. 1. The sum of all possible values for a random variable, each value multiplied by its probability of occurrence.

2. The integral of the probability density function and a continuous random variable over its range of values.

ex·pec·to·rant (ĭk-spĕk'tər-ənt) adj. Promoting or facilitating the secretion or expulsion of phlegm, mucus, or other matter from the respiratory tract. — n. An expectorant medicine.

ex·pec·to·rate (ĭk-spĕk'tə-rāt') v. ex·pec·to·rat·ed, ex·pec·to·rat·ing, ex·pec·to·rates. — v. tr. 1. To eject from the mouth; spit. 2. To cough up and eject by spitting. — v. intr. 1. To spit. 2. To clear out the chest and lungs by coughing up and spitting out matter. [Latin expectorāre, expectorāt-, to drive from the chest : ex-, ex- + pectus, pector-, chest.] — ex·pec'to·ra'tion n.

ex·pe·di·ence (ĭk-spĕ'dē-əns) n. Expediency.

ex·pe·di·en·cy (ĭk-spĕ'dē-ən-sē) n. pl. ex·pe·di·en·cies. 1. Appropriateness to the purpose at hand; fitness. 2. Adherence to self-serving means: an ambitious politician, guided by expediency rather than principle. 3. A means; an expedient. 4. Obsolete. Speed; haste.

ex·pe·di·ent (ĭk-spĕ'dē-ənt) adj. 1. Appropriate to a purpose. 2. a. Serving to promote one's interest: was merciful only when mercy was expedient. b. Based on or marked by a concern for self-interest rather than principle; self-interested. 3. Obsolete. Speedy; expeditious. — n. 1. Something that is a means to an end. 2. Something contrived or used to meet an urgent need. See Synonyms at make-shift. [Middle English, from Latin expediēns, expedient- present participle of expedire, to make ready. See EXPEDITE.] — ex·pe'di·ent·ly adv.

ex·pe·di·en·tial (ĭk-spĕ'dē-ĕn'shəl) adj. Of, relating to, or concerned with what is expedient. — ex·pe'di·en'tial·ly adv.

ex·pe·dite (ĕk'spī-dīt') v. tr. ex·pe·dit·ed, ex·pe·dit·ing, ex·pe·dites.

1. To speed up the progress of; facilitate. 2. To perform quickly and efficiently: could be trusted to expedite the matter. 3. To issue officially; dispatch. [Latin expedire, expedit-, to free from entanglements, make ready. See ped- in Appendix.] — ex'pe-dit'er, ex'pe-di'tor n.

ex·pe·di·tion (ĕk'spī-dīsh'ən) n. 1. a. A journey undertaken by a group of people with a definite objective: an expedition against the enemy stronghold; a scientific expedition to the South Pole. b. The group undertaking such a journey. 2. Speed in performance; promptness. See Synonyms at haste. [Middle English expedicioun, military campaign, from Old French expedition, from Latin expeditiō, expeditiōn-, from expeditus, past participle of expedire, to make ready. See EXPEDITE.]

ex·pe·di·tion·ar·y (ĕk'spī-dīsh'ə-nĕr'ē) adj. 1. Relating to or constituting an expedition. 2. Sent on or designed for military operations abroad: the French expeditionary force in Indochina.

ex·pe·di·tious (ĕk'spī-dīsh'əs) adj. Acting or done with speed and efficiency. See Synonyms at fast¹. — ex'pe-di'tious·ly adv. — ex'pe-di'tious·ness n.

ex·pel (ĭk-spĕl') v. tr. ex·pel·led, ex·pel·ling, ex·pels. 1. To force or drive out: expel an invader. 2. To discharge from or as if from a receptacle: expelled a sigh of relief. 3. To force to leave; deprive of membership: expelled the student from college for cheating. See Synonyms at eject. [Middle English expellen, from Latin expellere : ex-, ex- + pellere, to drive; see pel-⁵ in Appendix.]

—ex·pel/'la·ble adj. —ex·pel/'ler n.

ex·pel·lant also ex·pel·lent (ɪk-spəl'ənt) adj. Expelling or tending to expel.

ex·pel·lee (ək'spəl-lē') n. One who is expelled.

ex·pel·lent (ɪk-spəl'ənt) adj. Variant of expellant.

ex·pend (ɪk-spənd') v. tr. ex·pend·ed, ex·pend·ing, ex·pends. 1. To lay out; spend: expending tax revenues on government operations. See Synonyms at spend. 2. To use up; consume: "Every effort seemed to expend her spirit's force" (George Meredith). [Middle English expenden, from Latin expendere, to pay out : ex-, ex- + pendere, to weigh; see (s)pen- in Appendix.]

ex·pend·a·ble (ɪk-spən'də-bəl) adj. 1. Subject to use or consumption: an expendable source. 2. Not worth salvaging or reusing: expendable rocket boosters. 3. Not strictly necessary; dispensable: an expendable budget item; expendable personnel. 4. Open to sacrifice in the interests of gaining an objective, especially a military one: expendable civilian targets. — n. Something expendable.

ex·pen·di·ture (ɪk-spən'də-tʃər) n. 1. The act or process of expending; outlay. 2. a. An amount expended. b. An expense. [Medieval Latin expeditus, past participle of expendere, to expend; see EXPEND + -URE.]

ex·pense (ɪk-spəns') n. 1. a. Something spent to attain a goal or accomplish a purpose: an expense of time and energy on the project. b. A loss for the sake of something gained; a sacrifice: achieved speed at the expense of accuracy. See Synonyms at price. 2. An expenditure of money; a cost: an improvement that was well worth the expense; a trip with all expenses paid. 3. expenses. Abbr. exp.

a. Charges incurred by an employee in the performance of work: was reimbursed for her travel expenses. b. Informal. Money allotted for payment of such charges.

4. Something requiring the expenditure of money: Redecorating the house will be a considerable expense. 5. Archaic. The act of expending. — v. tr. ex·pensed, ex·pens·ing, ex·pens·es. 1. To charge with expenses. 2. To write off as an expense. — idiom. at (one's) expense. To (one's) detriment or chagrin: telling jokes at my expense. [Middle English, from Anglo-Norman, from Latin (pecunia) expēnsa, (money) paid out, from feminine past participle of expendere, to pay out. See EXPEND.]

expense account (ɪk-spəns' ə-kount') n. An account of expenses for repayment to an employee.

ex·pen·sive (ɪk-spən'siv) adj. 1. Requiring a large expenditure; costly.

2. Marked by high prices: expensive stores. See Synonyms at costly. —ex·pen/'sive·ly adv. —ex·pen/'sive·ness n.

ex·pe·ri·ence (ɪk-spîr'ē-əns) n. 1. The apprehension of an object, a thought, or an emotion through the senses or mind: a child's first experience of snow.

2. a. Active participation in events or activities, leading to the accumulation of knowledge or skill: a lesson taught by experience; a carpenter with experience in wall and roof repair. b. The knowledge or skill so derived. 3. a. An event or a series of events participated in or lived through. b. The totality of such events in the past of an individual or a group. — v. tr. ex·per·i·enced, ex·per·i·enc·ing, ex·per·i·enc·es. To participate in personally; undergo: experience a great adventure; experienced loneliness. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin experientia, from experiēns, experient- present participle of experīrī, to try. See per⁻³ in Appendix.] —ex·pe'ri·enc·er n.

SYNONYMS: experience, suffer, sustain, taste, undergo. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to encounter or partake of personally”: experience happiness; suffer a loss; sustained an injury; tasted freedom; has undergone a religious conversion.

ex·pe·ri·enced (ĭk-spĭr'ē-ənst) adj. 1. Having had experience in an activity or in life in general: a highly experienced traveler. 2. Skilled or knowledgeable as the result of active participation or practice: consulted an experienced investment counselor.

ex·pe·ri·en·tial (ĭk-spĭr'ē-ən'shəl) adj. Relating to or derived from experience. —ex·pe'ri·en'tial·ly adv.

ex·per·i·ment (ĭk-spĕr'ə-mənt) n. Abbr. exp., expt. 1. a. A test under controlled conditions that is made to demonstrate a known truth, examine the validity of a hypothesis, or determine the efficacy of something previously untried. b. The process of conducting such a test; experimentation. 2. An innovative act or procedure: “Democracy is only an experiment in government” (William Ralph Inge). 3. The result of experimentation: “We are not [nature’s] only experiment” (R. Buckminster Fuller). — v. intr. ex·per·i·ment·ed, ex·per·i·ment·ing, ex·per·i·ments (-mənt'). 1. To conduct an experiment. 2. To try something new, especially in order to gain experience: experiment with new methods of teaching. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin experimentum, from experīrī, to try. See per⁻³ in Appendix.] —ex·per'i·ment'er n.

ex·per·i·men·tal (ĭk-spĕr'ə-mĕn'tl) adj. Abbr. exp., exptl., X, x

1. a. Relating to or based on experiment: experimental procedures; experimental results. b. Given to experimenting. 2. Of the nature of an experiment; constituting or undergoing a test: an experimental drug. 3. Founded on experience; empirical. —ex·per'i·men'tal·ly adv.

ex·per·i·men·tal·ism (ĭk-spĕr'ə-mĕn'tl-ĭz'əm) n. Use of empirical or experimental methods in determining the validity of ideas. —ex·per'i·men'tal·ist n.

ex·per·i·men·ta·tion (ĭk-spĕr'ə-mĕn-tā'shən) n. The act, process, or practice of experimenting.

experiment station (ĭk-spĕr'ə-mĕnt stā'shən) n. An establishment in which scientific experiments are conducted in a specific field, such as agriculture, and practical uses are developed.

ex·pert (ĕk'spûrt') n. 1. A person with a high degree of skill in or knowledge of a certain subject. 2. a. The highest grade that can be achieved in marksmanship. b. A person who has achieved this grade. — adj. (ĕk'spûrt, ĭk-spûrt') Having or demonstrating great skill, dexterity, or knowledge as the result of experience or training. See Synonyms at proficient. [Middle English, from Old French, experienced, from Latin expertus, past participle of experiri, to try. See per-³ in Appendix.] — ex'pert'ly adv. — ex'pert'ness n.

ex·per·tise (ĕk'spûr-tĕz') n. 1. Expert advice or opinion. 2. Skill or knowledge in a particular area. See Synonyms at art¹. [French, from expert, experienced. See EXPERT.]

expert system (ĕk'spûrt' sĭs'təm) n. Computer Science. A program that uses available information, heuristics, and inference to suggest solutions to problems in a particular discipline.

ex·pi·a·ble (ĕk'spĕ-ə-bəl) adj. Possible to expiate: expiable offenses.

ex·pi·ate (ĕk'spĕ-āt') v. ex·pi·at·ed, ex·pi·at·ing, ex·pi·ates. — v. tr. To make amends or reparation for; atone: expiate one's sins by acts of penance. — v. intr. To make amends; atone. [Latin expiāre, expiāt-: ex-, intensive pref.; see EX- + piāre, to atone (from pius, devout).] — ex'pi-a'tor n.

ex·pi·a·tion (ĕk'spĕ-ā'shən) n. 1. The act of expiating; atonement. 2. A means of expiating or atoning. — ex'pi-a-to'ry (-ə-tôr'ĕ, -tôr'ĕ) adj.

ex·pi·ra·tion (ĕk'spĕ-rā'shən) n. Abbr. exp. 1. The act of coming to a close; termination. 2. The act of breathing out; exhalation. 3. Archaic. Death.

ex·pi·ra·to·ry (ĭk-spĭ'rə-tôr'ĕ, -tôr'ĕ) adj. Of, relating to, or involving the expiration of air from the lungs.

ex·pire (ĭk-spĭr') v. ex·pired, ex·pir·ing, ex·pires. — v. intr. 1. To come to an end; terminate: My membership in the club has expired. 2. To breathe one's last breath; die: The patient expired early this morning. 3. To exhale; breathe out. — v. tr. 1. To breathe (something) out. 2. Archaic. To give (something) off. [Middle English expiren, from Old French expirer, from Latin exspirāre: ex-, ex- + spirāre, to breathe.]

ex·pi·ry (ĭk-spĭr'ĕ) n. pl. ex·pi·ries. 1. An expiration, especially of a contract or an agreement. 2. Death.

ex·plain (ĭk-splān') v. ex·plained, ex·plain·ing, ex·plains. — v. tr. 1. To make plain or comprehensible. 2. To define; expound: We explained our plan to the committee. 3. a. To offer reasons for or a cause of; justify: explain an error. b. To offer reasons for the actions, beliefs, or remarks of (oneself). — v. intr.

To make something plain or comprehensible: Let me explain. —phrasal verb. explain away. 1. To dismiss or get rid of by or as if by explaining. 2. To minimize by explanation. [Middle English explanen, from Latin explānāre : ex-, intensive pref.; see EX- + plānus, clear; see pelə-² in Appendix.] —ex·plain/a·ble adj.

SYNONYMS: explain, elucidate, expound, explicate, interpret, construe. These verbs mean to make understandable the nature or meaning of something. Explain is the most widely applicable: explained the difficult words and obscure symbols; tried to explain himself. To elucidate is to throw light on something complex: “Man’s whole life and environment have been laid open and elucidated” (Thomas Carlyle). Expound and explicate imply detailed and usually learned and lengthy exploration or analysis: “We must never forget that it is a constitution we are expounding” (John Marshall). “Ordinary language philosophers tried to explicate the standards of usage underlying the linguistic behavior of those who do not abuse this freedom” (Jerrold J. Katz). To interpret is to reveal the underlying meaning of something by the application of special knowledge or insight: “If a poet interprets a poem of his own he limits its suggestibility” (William Butler Yeats). Construe involves putting a particular construction or interpretation on something: “I take the official oath today... with no purpose to construe the Constitution or laws by any hypercritical rules” (Abraham Lincoln). Why do you construe my silence as a sign of disapproval?

ex·pla·na·tion (ĕk’splə-nā’shən) n. 1. The act or process of explaining: launched into a detailed explanation. 2. Something that explains: That was supposedly the explanation for their misdeeds. 3. A mutual clarification of misunderstandings; a reconciliation.

ex·plan·a·tive (ĭk-splān’ə-tĭv) adj. Explanatory. —ex·plan/a·tive·ly adv.

ex·plan·a·to·ry (ĭk-splān’ə-tōr’ē, -tōr’ē) adj. Serving or intended to explain: an explanatory paragraph. —ex·plan/a·to’ri·ly adv.

ex·plant (ĕk-splānt’) v. tr. ex·plant·ed, ex·plant·ing, ex·plants. To remove (living tissue) from the natural site of growth and place in a medium for culture. — n. (ĕks’plānt’) Explanted tissue. —ex’plan·ta’tion n.

ex·ple·tive (ĕk’splĭ-tĭv) n. 1. An exclamation or oath, especially one that is profane, vulgar, or obscene. 2. a. A word or phrase that does not contribute any meaning but is added only to fill out a sentence or a metrical line. b. A word that stands in place of and anticipates a following word or phrase. In the sentence There are many books on the table, the word there functions as an expletive. — adj. Added or inserted in order to fill out something, such as a sentence or a metrical line. [From Late Latin explētīvus, serving to fill out, from Latin explētus, past participle of explēre, to fill out : ex-, ex- + plēre, to fill; see pelə-¹ in Appendix.]

ex·ple·to·ry (ĕk’splĭ-tōr’ē, -tōr’ē) adj. Expletive.

ex·pli·ca·ble (ĕk'splĭ-kə-bəl) adj. Possible to explain: explicable phenomena; explicable behavior. —ex'pli-ca-bly adv.

ex·pli·cate (ĕk'splĭ-kāt') v. tr. ex·pli·cat·ed, ex·pli·cat·ing, ex·pli·cates. To make clear the meaning of; explain. See Synonyms at explain. [Latin explicāre, explicāt-, to unfold, explain : ex-, ex- + plicāre, to fold; see plek- in Appendix.]

—ex·pli·ca'tion n. —ex'pli-ca'tor n.

ex·pli·ca·tion de texte (ĕk-splĕ-kä-syôn də tĕkst') n. pl. ex·pli·ca·tions de texte (ĕk-splĕ-kä-syôn də tĕkst'). A method of literary criticism in which the interrelated details of a written work are examined and analyzed in an effort to understand its structure and discover meanings. [French : explication, explanation + de, of + texte, text.]

ex·pli·ca·tive (ĕk'splĭ-kā'tĭv, ĭk-splĭk'ə-tĭv) adj. Serving to explain; explanatory. —ex'pli-ca'tive n. —ex'pli-ca'tive-ly adv.

ex·plic·it (ĭk-splĭs'ĭt) adj. 1. a. Fully and clearly expressed; leaving nothing implied. b. Fully and clearly defined or formulated: “generalizations that are powerful, precise, and explicit” (Frederick Turner). 2. Forthright and unreserved in expression: They were explicit in their criticism. 3. a. Readily observable: an explicit sign of trouble. b. Describing or portraying nudity or sexual activity in graphic detail. [Latin explicitus, past participle of explicāre, to unfold. See EXPLICITATE.] —ex·plic'it-ly adv. —ex·plic'it-ness n.

SYNONYMS: explicit, categorical, definite, express, specific. The central meaning shared by these adjectives is “entirely clear and unambiguous”: explicit statements; a categorical refusal; a definite answer; my express wishes; a specific purpose.

ANTONYM: ambiguous explicit function (ĭk-splĭs'ĭt fŭngk'shən) n. Mathematics. A function, such as $y = 4x + 3$, whose value may be computed from the independent variable.

ex·plode (ĭk-splōd') v. ex·plod·ed, ex·plod·ing, ex·plodes. — v. intr.

1. To release mechanical, chemical, or nuclear energy by the sudden production of gases in a confined space: The bomb exploded. 2. To burst violently as a result of internal pressure. 3. To shatter with a loud noise: I threw the vase on the floor and it exploded into tiny pieces. 4. To burst forth or break out suddenly and often violently: My neighbor exploded in rage at the trespassers. 5. To increase suddenly, sharply, and without control: The population level in this area has exploded during the past 12 years. 6. To change state or appearance suddenly: Over the weekend the trees exploded with color. 7. Sports. To hit a golf ball out of a sand trap with a shot that scatters the sand. — v. tr. 1. To cause to release energy or burst violently and noisily: The children exploded three firecrackers. 2. To show to be false or unreliable: explode a hypothesis. 3. Sports. To hit (a golf ball) out of a sand trap with an explosive shot. [Latin explōdere, to drive out by clapping : ex-, ex- + plaudere, to clap.] —ex·plod'er n.

ex·plod-ed view (ĕk-splō'dīd vyōō) n. An illustration or a diagram of a construction that shows its parts separately but in positions that indicate their proper relationships to the whole.

ex·ploit (ĕk'splɔɪt', ĭk-splɔɪt') n. An act or deed, especially a brilliant or heroic one. See Synonyms at feat¹. — v. tr. ex·ploit-ed, ex·ploit-ing, ex·ploits (ĭk-splɔɪt', ĕk'splɔɪt'). 1. To employ to the greatest possible advantage: exploit one's talents. 2. To make use of selfishly or unethically: a country that exploited peasant labor. See Synonyms at manipulate. 3. To advertise; promote. [Middle English, from Old French exploit, from Latin explicitum, neuter past participle of explicāre, to unfold. See EXPLICATE.] —ex·ploit'a-bil/i-ty n. —ex·ploit'a-ble adj. —ex·ploit'a-tive, ex·ploit'ive adj. —ex·ploit'a-tive-ly, ex·ploit'ive-ly adv. —ex·ploit'er n.

ex·ploi-ta-tion (ĕk'splɔɪ-tā'shən) n. 1. The act of employing to the greatest possible advantage: exploitation of copper deposits. 2. Utilization of another person or group for selfish purposes: exploitation of unwary consumers. 3. An advertising or a publicity program.

ex·plo-ra-tion (ĕk'splə-rā'shən) n. The act or an instance of exploring: Arctic exploration; exploration of new theories. —ex·plor'a-to'ry (ĭk-splōr'ə-tōr'ē, -splōr'ə-tōr'ē) adj.

ex·plore (ĭk-splōr', -splōr') v. ex·plo-red, ex·plor-ing, ex·plo-res. — v. tr. 1. To investigate systematically; examine: explore every possibility. 2. To search into or travel in for the purpose of discovery: exploring outer space. 3. Medicine. To examine for diagnostic purposes. — v. intr. To make a careful examination or search: scientists who have been known to explore in this region of the earth.

[Latin explōrāre : ex-, ex- + perhaps plōrāre, to cry out, as to rouse game.]

ex·plor-er (ĭk-splōr'ər, -splōr'-) n. 1. One that explores, especially one that explores a geographic area. 2. An implement or a tool used for exploring; a probe. 3. Explorer. A person aged 14–20 who is a participant in the exploring program of the Boy Scouts of America.

ex·plo-sion (ĭk-splō'zhən) n. 1. a. A release of mechanical, chemical, or nuclear energy in a sudden and often violent manner with the generation of high temperature and usually with the release of gases. b. A violent bursting as a result of internal pressure. c. The loud, sharp sound made as a result of either of these actions. 2. A sudden, often vehement outburst: an explosion of rage. 3. A sudden, great increase: a population explosion; the explosion of illegal drug use.

4. Linguistics. See plosion. [Latin explōsiō, explōsiōn-, a driving off, from explōsus, past participle of explōdere, to drive out by clapping. See EXPLODE.]

ex·plo-sive (ĭk-splō'sīv) adj. 1. Relating to or having the nature of an explosion. 2. Tending to explode. — n. 1. A substance, especially a prepared chemical, that explodes or causes explosion. 2. Linguistics. A plosive.

—ex·plo'sive·ly adv. —ex·plo'sive·ness n.

ex·po (ĕk'spō) n. pl. ex·pos. Informal. An exposition.

ex·po·nent (ĭk-spō'nənt, ĕk'spō'nənt) n. 1. One that expounds or interprets.

2. One that speaks for, represents, or advocates: Our senator is an exponent of free trade. 3. Abbr. exp Mathematics. A number or symbol, as 3 in $(x + y)^3$, placed to the right of and above another number, symbol, or expression, denoting the power to which that number, symbol, or expression is to be raised. In this sense, also called power — adj. Expository; explanatory. [Latin expōnēns, expōnent- present participle of expōnere, to expound. See EXPOUND.]

ex·po·nen·tial (ĕk'spə-nĕn'shəl) adj. Abbr. exp 1. Of or relating to an exponent. 2. Mathematics. a. Containing, involving, or expressed as an exponent.

b. Expressed in terms of a designated power of e, the base of natural logarithms. —ex'po·nen'tial·ly adv.

ex·po·nen·ti·a·tion (ĕk'spə-nĕn'shĕ-ā'shən) n. Mathematics. The act of raising a quantity to a power.

ex·port (ĭk-spōrt', -spōrt', ĕk'spōrt', -spōrt') v. ex·port·ed, ex·port·ing, ex·ports. — v. tr. 1. To send or transport (a commodity, for example) abroad, especially for trade or sale. 2. To cause the spread of (an idea, for example) in another part of the world; transmit. — v. intr. To send or transport abroad merchandise, especially for sale or trade. — n. (ĕk'spōrt', -spōrt') Abbr. exp.

Exportation. [Middle English export, from Latin exportāre: ex-, ex- + portāre, to carry; see per² in Appendix.] —ex·port'a·bil'i·ty n. —ex·port'a·ble adj.

—ex·port'er n.

ex·por·ta·tion (ĕk'spōr-tā'shən, -spōr-) n. 1. The act of exporting.

2. Something exported; an export.

ex·pose (ĭk-spōz') v. tr. ex·posed, ex·pos·ing, ex·pos·es. 1. a. To subject or allow to be subjected to an action or an influence: exposed themselves to disease; exposed their children to classical music. b. To subject (a photographic film, for example) to the action of light. 2. To make visible: Cleaning exposed the grain of the wood. See Synonyms at show. 3. a. To make known (something discreditable). b. To reveal the guilt or wrongdoing of: expose a criminal. See Synonyms at reveal¹. 4. a. To deprive of shelter or protection. b. To subject to needless risk: an officer who exposed the troops to enemy crossfire. [Middle English exposen, from Old French exposer, alteration (influenced by poser, to put, place); see POSE¹, of Latin expōnere, to set forth. See EXPOUND.] —ex·pos'er n.

ex·po·sé (ĕk'spō-zā') n. 1. An exposure or a revelation of something discreditable. 2. A formal exposition of facts. [French, past participle of exposer, to expose, from Old French. See EXPOSE.]

ex·po·si·tion (ĕk'spə-zīsh'ən) n. 1. A setting forth of meaning or intent.

2. a. A statement or rhetorical discourse intended to give information about or an explanation of difficult material. b. The art or technique of composing such discourses. 3. Music. a. The first part of a composition in sonata form that introduces the themes. b. The opening section of a fugue. 4. The part of a play that provides the background information needed to understand the characters and the action. 5. An act or example of exposing. 6. A public exhibition or show, as of artistic or industrial developments. [Middle English exposicioun, from Old French exposition, from Latin expositiō, expositiōn-, from expositus, past participle of expōnere, to expound. See EXPOUND.] —ex·pos'i-tive (ĭk-spōz'ī-tĭv), ex·pos'i-to'ry (-tōr'ē, -tōr'ē) adj. —ex·pos'i-tor n.

ex post fac-to (ĕks' pōst fāk'tō) adj. Formulated, enacted, or operating retroactively. Used especially of a law. [Latin ex postfactō: ex, from + postfactō, ablative of postfactum, that which is done afterward.]

ex·pos-tu-late (ĭk-spōs'chə-lāt') v. intr. ex·pos-tu-lat-ed, ex·pos-tu-lat-ing, ex·pos-tu-lates. To reason earnestly with someone in an effort to dissuade or correct; remonstrate. See Synonyms at object. [Latin expostulāre, expostulāt-: ex-, intensive pref.; see EX- + postulāre, to demand; see prek- in Appendix.] —ex·pos'tu-la'tion n. —ex·pos'tu-la'tor n.

—ex·pos'tu-la-to'ry (-lə-tōr'ē, -tōr'ē), ex·pos'tu-la'tive adj.

ex-po-sure (ĭk-spōz'hər) n. 1. The act or an instance of exposing, as: a. An act of subjecting or an instance of being subjected to an action or an influence: their first exposure to big city life. b. Appearance in public or in the mass media: an actor with much recent exposure in television. c. Revelation, especially of crime or guilt: exposure of graft in county government. 2. The condition of being exposed, especially to severe weather or other forces of nature: was hospitalized for the effects of exposure. 3. A position in relation to climatic or weather conditions or points of the compass: Our house has a southern exposure. 4. a. The act of exposing sensitized photographic film or plate. b. A photographic plate or a piece of film so exposed. c. The amount of radiant energy needed to expose a photographic film.

exposure meter (ĭk-spōz'hər mē'tər) n. A photoelectric instrument that measures the light intensity in a given area and, in photographic use, indicates the correct settings for an optimum exposure. Also called light meter ex-pound (ĭk-spound') v. ex-pound-ed, ex-pound-ing, ex-pounds. — v. tr. 1. To give a detailed statement of; set forth: expounded the intricacies of the new tax law. 2. To explain in detail; elucidate: The speaker expounded the approach of positive thinking. See Synonyms at explain. — v. intr. To make a detailed statement: The professor was expounding on a favorite topic. [Middle English expouden, from Anglo-Norman espoundre, from Latin expōnere: ex-, ex- + pōnere, to place; see apo- in Appendix.] —ex-pound'er n.

ex-press (ĭk-sprēs') v. tr. ex-pressed, ex-press-ing, ex-press-es. 1. To set forth in words; state. 2. To manifest or communicate, as by a gesture; show. See

Synonyms at vent¹. 3. To make known the feelings or opinions of (oneself), as by statement or art. 4. To convey or suggest a representation of; depict: The painting expresses the rage of war victims. 5. To represent by a sign or a symbol; symbolize: express a fraction as a decimal. 6. To squeeze or press out, as juice from an orange. 7. To send by special messenger or rapid transport: express a package to Los Angeles. 8. Genetics. a. To cause (itself) to produce an effect or a phenotype. Used of a gene: The gene expressed itself under specific environmental conditions. b. To manifest the effects of (a gene): Half of the people who inherit the gene express it. c. To manifest (a genetic trait): All the mice in the study expressed the defect. — adj. Abbr. ex., exp. 1. Definitely and explicitly stated: their express wish. See Synonyms at explicit. 2. Particular; specific: an express plan. 3. a. Sent out with or moving at high speed. b. Direct, rapid, and usually nonstop: express delivery of packages; an express bus. c. Of, relating to, or appropriate for rapid travel: express lanes on a freeway. — adv. By express delivery or transport. — n. Abbr. ex., exp. 1. a. A rapid, efficient system for the delivery of goods and mail. b. Goods and mail conveyed by such a system. 2. A means of transport, such as a train, that travels rapidly and makes few or no stops before its destination. 3. Chiefly British. a. A special messenger. b. A message delivered by special courier. [Middle English expressen, from Old French expresser, from Medieval Latin expressāre, frequentative of Latin exprimere: Latin ex-, ex- + Latin primere, to press; see per⁴ in Appendix.] — ex·press'er n. — ex·press'i·ble adj.

ex·pres·sion (ĭk-sprĕsh'ən) n. 1. The act of expressing, conveying, or representing in words, art, music, or movement; a manifestation: an expression of rural values. 2. Something that expresses or communicates: Let this plaque serve as an expression of our esteem. 3. Mathematics. An operation or a quantity stated in symbolic form, such as x , y^2 , or $x + y$. 4. The manner in which one expresses oneself, especially in speaking, depicting, or performing. 5. A particular word or phrase: "an old Yankee expression... 'Stand up and be counted'" (Charles Kuralt). 6. The outward manifestation of a mood or a disposition: My tears are an expression of my grief. 7. A facial aspect or a look that conveys a special feeling: an expression of scorn. 8. The act of pressing or squeezing out. 9. Genetics. The act or process of expressing a gene.

ex·pres·sion·ism (ĭk-sprĕsh'ən-ĭz'əm) n. A movement in the arts during the early part of the 20th century that emphasized subjective expression of the artist's inner experiences. — ex·pres'sion·ist n. — ex·pres'sion·is'tic adj. — ex·pres'sion·is'ti·cal·ly adv.

ex·pres·sion·less (ĭk-sprĕsh'ən-lĭs) adj. Lacking expression: Their faces remained expressionless as they listened to the bad news.

ex·pres·sive (ĭk-sprĕs'ĭv) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or characterized by expression. 2. Serving to express or indicate: actions expressive of frustration. 3. Full of expression; significant: an expressive glance. —ex-pres'sive-ly adv.

—ex-pres'sive-ness n.

SYNONYMS: expressive, eloquent, meaningful, significant. The central meaning shared by these adjectives is “effectively conveying a feeling, an idea, or a mood”: an expressive gesture; an eloquent speech; a meaningful look; a significant smile.

ex-pres-siv-i-ty (ĕk'sprĕ-sĭv'ĭ-tĕ) n. pl. ex-pres-siv-i-ties. 1. The quality of being expressive. 2. Genetics. The degree to which an expressed gene produces its effects in an organism.

ex-press-ly (ĭk-sprĕs'lĕ) adv. 1. In an express or a definite manner; explicitly: I expressly ordered the visitor to leave. 2. Especially; particularly: tools designed expressly for left-handed workers.

ex-pres-so (ĭk-sprĕs'ō, ĕk-) n. Variant of espresso.

ex-press-way (ĭk-sprĕs'wā') n. Abbr. expy A major divided highway designed for high-speed travel. Also called freeway, superhighway, thruway.

ex-pro-pri-ate (ĕk-sprō'prĕ-āt') v. tr. ex-pro-pri-at-ed, ex-pro-pri-at-ing, ex-pro-pri-ates. 1. To deprive of possession: expropriated the property owners who lived in the path of the new highway. 2. To transfer (another's property) to oneself. [Medieval Latin expropriāre, expropriāt- : Latin ex-, ex- + Latin propriāre, to appropriate (from proprius, one's own); see PROPER.]

—ex-pro'pri-a'tion n. —ex-pro'pri-a'tor n. —ex-pro'pri-a-to'ry (-ə-tōr'ē, -tōr'ē) adj.

expt. abbr. Experiment.

exptl. abbr. Experimental.

ex-pul-sion (ĭk-spŭl'shən) n. The act of expelling or the state of being expelled. [Middle English expulsioun, from Old French expulsion, from Latin expulsiō, expulsiōn-, from expulsus, past participle of expellere, to expel. See EXPEL.]

ex-punc-tion (ĭk-spŭngk'shən, -spŭng'shən) n. The act of expunging or the condition of being expunged: expunction of the records of the crime. [Late Latin expunctiō, expunctiōn-, execution, from Latin expunctus, past participle of expungere, to strike out. See EXPUNGE.]

ex-punge (ĭk-spŭnj') v. tr. ex-punged, ex-pung-ing, ex-pung-es. 1. To erase or strike out: “I have corrected some factual slips, expunged some repetitions” (Kenneth Tynan). 2. To eliminate completely; annihilate. See Synonyms at erase. [Latin expungere : ex-, ex- + pungere, to prick; see PEUK- in Appendix.] —ex-pung'er n.

ex-pur-gate (ĕk'spər-gāt') v. tr. ex-pur-gat-ed, ex-pur-gat-ing, ex-pur-gates. To remove erroneous, vulgar, obscene, or otherwise objectionable material from (a book, for example) before publication. [Latin expurgāre, expūrgāt-, to purify : ex-, intensive pref.; see EX- + pūrgāre, to cleanse; see peuə- in Appendix.] —ex'pur-ga'tion n. —ex'pur-ga'tor n.

ex-pur-ga-to-ry (ĭk-spūr'gə-tōr'ē, -tōr'ē) also ex-pur-ga-to-ri-al (-tōr'ē-əl, -tōr'-) adj. Of or relating to expurgation or an expurgator.

expy abbr. Expressway.

ex-qui-site (ĕk'skwī-zīt, ĭk-skwīz'īt) adj. 1. Characterized by intricate and beautiful design or execution: an exquisite chalice. 2. Of such beauty or delicacy as to arouse delight: an exquisite sunset. See Synonyms at delicate. 3. Excellent; flawless: plays the piano with exquisite technique. 4. Acutely perceptive or discriminating: an exquisite sense of color. 5. Intense; keen: suffered exquisite pain. 6. Obsolete. Ingeniously devised or thought out. — n. One who is excessively fastidious in dress, manners, or taste. [Middle English exquisit, carefully chosen, from Latin exquīsītus, past participle of exquīrere, to search out : ex-, ex- + quaerere, to seek.] —ex'qui-site-ly adv. —ex'qui-site-ness n.

exr. abbr. Executor.

exrx. abbr. Executrix.

ex-san-gui-nate (ĕks-säng'gwə-nāt') v. tr. ex-san-gui-nat-ed, ex-san-gui-nat-ing, ex-san-gui-nates. To drain of blood. [From Latin exsanguinātus, drained of blood : ex-, ex- + sanguis, sanguin-, blood.]

—ex-san'gui-na'tion n.

ex-san-guine (ĕks-säng'gwīn) adj. Lacking blood; anemic. [Latin exsanguis, exsanguin- : ex-, ex- + sanguis, blood.]

ex-scind (ĭk-sīnd') v. tr. ex-scind-ed, ex-scind-ing, ex-scinds. To cut out; excise. [Latin exscindere : ex-, ex- + scindere, to cut; see skei- in Appendix.]

ex-sert (ĭk-sûrt') v. tr. ex-sert-ed, ex-sert-ing, ex-serts. To thrust (something) out or forth; cause to protrude. — adj. Also ex-sert-ed (-sûrt'ĭd) Thrust outward or protruding, as stamens projecting beyond petals. [Latin exsertere, exsert-. See EXERT.] —ex-ser'tion n.

ex-sic-cate (ĕk'sī-kāt') v. intr. tr. ex-sic-cat-ed, ex-sic-cat-ing, ex-sic-cates. To dry up or cause to dry up. [Middle English exsiccaten, from Latin exsiccare, exsiccat- : ex-, ex- + siccāre, to dry (from siccus, dry).] —ex'sic-ca'tion n.

—ex'sic-ca'tive adj. —ex'sic-ca'tor n.

ex-stip-u-late (ĕks-stīp'yə-līt) adj. Botany. Having no stipules.

ext. abbr. 1. Extension. 2. a. External. b. Externally. 3. Extinct. 4. Extra. 5. Extract.

ex-tant (ĕk'stənt, ĕk-stānt') adj. 1. Still in existence; not destroyed, lost, or extinct: extant manuscripts. 2. Archaic. Standing out; projecting. [Latin exstāns, exstant- present participle of exstāre, to stand out : ex-, ex- + stāre, to stand; see stā- in Appendix.]

ex-tem-po-ral (ĭk-stĕm'pər-əl) adj. Archaic. Extemporaneous. [Latin extemporālis, from ex tempore. See EXTEMPORE.] ex·tem·po·ra·ne·ous (ĭk-stĕm'pə-rā'nē-əs) adj. 1. Carried out or performed with little or no preparation; impromptu: an extemporaneous piano recital. 2. Prepared in advance but delivered without notes or text: an extemporaneous speech. 3. Skilled at or given to unrehearsed speech or performance: an accomplished extemporaneous speaker. 4. Provided, made, or adapted as an expedient; makeshift: an extemporaneous policy decision. [From Late Latin extemporāneus, from Latin ex tempore. See EXTEMPORE.] —ex·tem'po·ra·ne'i·ty (-pər-ə-nē'ī-tē) n. —ex·tem'po·ra'ne·ous·ly adv.

—ex·tem'po·ra'ne·ous·ness n.

SYNONYMS: extemporaneous, extemporary, extempore, impromptu, offhand, unrehearsed, unpremeditated, ad-lib. These adjectives mean spoken, performed, done, or composed with little or no preparation or forethought. Extemporaneous, extemporary, and extempore most often apply to discourse, as a public speech, that is delivered without the assistance of a written text, though it may have been planned in advance: an extemporaneous address; an extemporary lecture; an extempore skit. Impromptu even more strongly suggests action or expression that comes on the spur of the moment in response to an unforeseen need: an impromptu speech; an impromptu dinner. Offhand implies not only spontaneity but also a casual or even cavalier manner: an offhand remark. What is unrehearsed is said or done without rehearsal or practice though not necessarily without forethought: a few unrehearsed comments. Unpremeditated applies to action taken without prior thought or plan; often the term implies impulsiveness prompted by strong feeling: asked an unpremeditated question. Something that is ad-lib is spontaneous and improvised and therefore not part of a prepared script or score: an ad-lib joke; an ad-lib solo.

ex·tem·po·rar·y (ĭk-stĕm'pə-rĕr'ē) adj. Spoken, done, or composed with little or no preparation or forethought. See Synonyms at extemporaneous. [From EXTEMPORE.] —ex·tem'po·rar'i·ly (-râr'ə-lē) adv.

ex·tem·po·re (ĭk-stĕm'pə-rē) adj. Spoken, carried out, or composed with little or no preparation or forethought. See Synonyms at extemporaneous. — adv. In an extemporaneous manner. [Latin ex tempore : ex, of; see EX- + tempore, ablative of tempus, time.]

ex·tem·po·ri·ze (ĭk-stĕm'pə-rīz') v. ex·tem·po·ri·zed, ex·tem·po·ri·zing, ex·tem·po·ri·zes. — v. tr. To do or perform (something) without prior preparation or practice: extemporized an acceptance speech. — v. intr. To perform an act or utter something in an impromptu manner; improvise: “bravely demonstrating his ability to extemporize intelligently” (William Safire).

—ex·tem'po·ri·za'tion (-pər-ĭ-zā'shən) n. —ex·tem'po·ri·z'er n.

ex-tend (ĭk-stĕnd/) v. ex-tend-ed, ex-tend-ing, ex-tends. — v. tr. 1. To open or straighten (something) out; unbend: extended the legs of the folding table. 2. To stretch or spread (something) out to greater or fullest length: extended the radio antenna. 3. a. To exert (oneself) vigorously or to full capacity: Few mountain climbers have extended themselves as those two have. b. To cause to move at full gallop. Used of a horse. 4. a. To increase in quantity or bulk by adding a cheaper substance: used rice or pasta to extend leftover casseroles. b. To adulterate. 5. a. To enlarge the area, scope, or range of. b. To expand the influence of. c. To make more comprehensive or inclusive. See Synonyms at increase. 6. a. To offer: extend one's greetings. b. To make available; provide: extend credit to qualified purchasers. 7. a. To cause (something) to be or last longer: extended our visit by a day. b. To prolong the time allowed for payment of: extend a loan for three more months. 8. Chiefly British. a. To appraise or assess; value. b. To seize or make a levy on for the purpose of settling a debt. — v. intr. To be or become long, large, or comprehensive: influence that extended to other continents; table legs that extend by unscrewing. [Middle English extenden, from Old French extendre, from Latin extendere: ex-, ex- + tendere, to stretch; see ten- in Appendix.] —ex-tend'i-bil/i-ty n. —ex-tend'a-ble, ex-tend'i-ble adj.

ex-tend-ed (ĭk-stĕn/'dĭd) adj. 1. Stretched or pulled out: an extended telescope. 2. Continued for a long period of time; protracted: had an extended vacation in the Alps. 3. Enlarged or broad in meaning, scope, or influence: an extended sense of the word honest. —ex-tend/ed-ly adv.

extended family (ĭk-stĕn/'dĭd fām'ə-lē) n. 1. A family group that consists of parents, children, and other close relatives, often living in close proximity. 2. A group of relatives, such as those of three generations, who live in close geographic proximity rather than under the same roof.

ex-tend-er (ĭk-stĕn/'dər) n. A substance added to another substance to modify, dilute, or adulterate it: meat loaf that contained oatmeal as an extender.

ex-ten-si-ble (ĭk-stĕn/'sə-bəl) adj. 1. Capable of being extended or protruded: an extensible tongue; extensible tables. 2. Computer Science. Of or relating to a programming language or a system that can be modified by changing or adding features. —ex-ten'si-bil/i-ty n.

ex-ten-sile (ĭk-stĕn/'sĭl) adj. Extensible.

ex-ten-sion (ĭk-stĕn/'shən) n. Abbr. ext. 1. The act of extending or the condition of being extended. 2. The amount, degree, or range to which something extends or can extend: The wire has an extension of 50 feet. 3. a. The act of straightening or extending a limb. b. The position assumed by an extended limb. 4. Medicine. The application of traction to a fractured or dislocated limb to restore the normal position. 5. a. An addition that increases the area, influence, operation, or contents of something: an extension for the vacuum cleaner; built a new extension onto the hospital wing. b. An additional telephone connected to a main line. 6. a. An allowance of extra time, especially for the repayment of a debt. b. The period of this extra time: three months' extension on the loan.

7. The property of an object by which it occupies space. 8. A program in a university, college, or school that offers instruction, as by television or correspondence, to persons unable to attend at the usual time or in the usual place.

9. Logic. The class of objects designated by a specific term or concept; denotation.

10. Mathematics. A set that includes a given and similar set as a subset. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: an extension ladder; an extension cord. [Middle English extensioun, from Old French extension, from Latin extēnsiō, extēnsiōn-, from extēnsus, past participle of extendere, to extend. See EXTEND.]

—ex·ten'sion-al adj.

ex·ten·si·ty (ĭk-stĕn'sĭ-tĕ) n. pl. ex·ten·si·ties. 1. a. The quality of having extension or being extensive. b. A specific degree or range of extension. 2. The attribute of sensation that enables one to perceive space or size.

ex·ten·sive (ĭk-stĕn'sĭv) adj. 1. Large in extent, range, or amount. 2. Of or relating to the cultivation of vast areas of land with a minimum of labor or expense. —ex·ten'sive-ly adv. —ex·ten'sive-ness n.

ex·ten·som·e·ter (ĕk'stĕn-sŏm'ĭ-tĕr) n. An instrument used to measure minute deformations in a test specimen of a material. [EXTENS(ION) + -METER.]

ex·ten·sor (ĭk-stĕn'sĕr) n. A muscle that extends or straightens a limb or body part. [New Latin, from Latin extēnsus, past participle of extendere, to stretch out. See EXTEND.]

ex·tent (ĭk-stĕnt') n. 1. a. The range, magnitude, or distance over which a thing extends: landowners unaware of the extent of their own holdings. b. The degree to which a thing extends: prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law. 2. An extensive space or area: an extent of desert. 3. Law. a. A writ allowing a creditor to assume temporary ownership of a debtor's property. b. In Great Britain, a writ allowing a creditor to seize a debtor's property temporarily. c. The seizure in execution of such a writ. 4. Archaic. An assessment or a valuation, as of land in Britain, especially for taxation. [Middle English extente, assessment on land, from Anglo-Norman, from feminine past participle of extendre, to extend, from Latin extendere. See EXTEND.]

ex·ten·u·ate (ĭk-stĕn'yŏŏ-āt') v. tr. ex·ten·u·at·ed, ex·ten·u·at·ing, ex·ten·u·ates. 1. To lessen or attempt to lessen the magnitude or seriousness of, especially by providing partial excuses. See Synonyms at palliate. 2. Archaic. a. To make thin or emaciated. b. To reduce the strength of. 3. Obsolete. To belittle; disparage. [Latin extenuāre, extenuāt- : ex-, ex- + tenuāre, to make thin (from tenuis, thin); see ten- in Appendix.] —ex·ten'u-a'tive adj., n. —ex·ten'u-a'tor n. —ex·ten'u-a-to'ry (-ə-tŏr'ĕ, -tŏr'ĕ) adj.

ex·ten·u·a·tion (ĭk-stĕn'yŏŏ-ā'shən) n. 1. The act of extenuating or the condition of being extenuated; partial justification. 2. A partial excuse.

ex·te·ri·or (ĭk-stîr'ē-ər) adj. 1. Outer; external: the exterior door.

2. Originating or acting from the outside: exterior influences on the negotiations.

3. Suitable for use outside: an exterior paint. — n. 1. A part or a surface that is outside: the exterior of the house. 2. An external or outward appearance: a friendly exterior. 3. A representation in visual art of the outdoors: The film includes some striking exteriors. [Latin, comparative of exter, outward. See eghs in Appendix.] —ex·te·ri·or·ly adv.

exterior angle (ĭk-stîr'ē-ər äng'gəl) n. Mathematics. 1. The angle between any side of a polygon and an extended adjacent side. 2. Any of the four angles that do not include a region of the space between two lines intersected by a transversal.

ex·te·ri·or·i·ty (ĭk-stîr'ē-ôr'ĭ-tē, -ör'-) n. Outwardness; externality.

ex·te·ri·or·ize (ĭk-stîr'ē-ə-rīz') v. tr. ex·te·ri·or·ized, ex·te·ri·or·iz·ing, ex·te·ri·or·izes. To turn outward; externalize: They had exteriorized their feelings of sympathy so much that it was hard to tell what they truly felt inside.

ex·ter·mi·nate (ĭk-stûr'mə-nāt') v. tr. ex·ter·mi·nat·ed, ex·ter·mi·nat·ing, ex·ter·mi·nates. To get rid of by destroying completely; extirpate. See Synonyms at abolish. [Latin extermināre, extermināt-, to drive out : ex-, ex- + termināre, to mark boundaries (from terminus, boundary marker).] —ex·ter·mi·na'tion n. —ex·ter·mi·na'tive, ex·ter·mi·na-to'ry (-nə-tôr'ē, -tōr'ē) adj.

ex·ter·mi·na·tor (ĭk-stûr'mə-nā'tər) n. One that exterminates, especially one whose occupation is the extermination of vermin.

ex·tern or ex·terne (ĕk'stûrn') n. A person associated with but not officially residing in an institution, especially a nonresident physician on a hospital staff. [Latin externus, external. See EXTERNAL.] —ex'tern·ship' n.

ex·ter·nal (ĭk-stûr'nəl) adj. Abbr. ext. 1. Relating to, existing on, or connected with the outside or an outer part; exterior. 2. Suitable for application to the outside: external paints. 3. Existing independently of the mind. 4. Acting or coming from the outside: external pressures. 5. Of or relating chiefly to outward appearance; superficial: "An internal sense of righteousness dwindles into an external concern for reputation" (A.R. Gurney, Jr.). 6. Of or relating to foreign affairs or foreign countries: the country's minister of external affairs. — n. 1. An exterior part or surface. 2. externals. a. Outer circumstances. b. Outward appearances: was charming as far as the externals went. [Middle English, from Latin externus, outward, from exter. See eghs in Appendix.] —ex·ter'nal·ly adv.

external auditory canal (ĭk-stûr'nəl ô'dī-tôr'ē kə-nāl') n. See ear canal.

ex·ter·nal·com·bus·tion engine (ĭk-stûr'nəl-kəm-bŭs'chən ĕn'jĭn) n. An engine, such as a steam engine, in which the fuel is burned outside the engine cylinder.

external ear (ĭk-stûr'nəl ĭr) n. The outer portion of the ear including the auricle and the passage leading to the eardrum. Also called outer ear ex·ter·nal·ism (ĭk-stûr'nə-lĭz'əm) n. Excessive concern with outer circumstances or appearances. —ex·ter·nal·ist n.

ex·ter·nal·i·ty (ĕk'stər-nāl'ĭ-tē) n. pl. ex·ter·nal·i·ties. 1. The condition or quality of being external or externalized. 2. a. Something that is external. b. An incidental condition that may affect a course of action: “Our economic system treats environmental degradation as an externality—a cost that does not enter into the conventional arithmetic that determines how we use our resources” (Barry Commoner).

ex·ter·nal·ize (ĭk-stûr'nə-lĭz') v. tr. ex·ter·nal·ized, ex·ter·nal·iz·ing, ex·ter·nal·iz·es. 1. a. To make external. b. To manifest externally: “Marriage is a nice way to externalize the private commitments made between you” (Patti Davis). 2. To attribute to outside causes. 3. To project or attribute (inner conflicts or feelings) to external circumstances or causes. —ex·ter·nal·i·za'tion (-nə-lĭ-zā'shən) n.

external respiration (ĭk-stûr'nəl rĕs'pə-rā'shən) n. The exchange of oxygen and carbon dioxide between the environment and respiratory organs such as gills or lungs.

ex·ter·o·cep·tor (ĕk'stə-rō-sĕp'tər) n. A sense organ, such as the ear, that receives and responds to stimuli originating from outside the body. [Latin exter, outside; see EXTERIOR + (RE)CEPTOR.] —ex·ter·o·cep'tive adj.

ex·ter·ri·to·ri·al (ĕks'tĕr-ĭ-tôr'ē-əl, -tôr'-) adj. Extraterritorial.

—ex·ter·ri·to·ri·al·i·ty (-ăl'ĭ-tē) n. —ex·ter·ri·to·ri·al·ly adv.

ex·tinct (ĭk-stĭŋkt') adj. Abbr. ext. 1. No longer existing or living: an extinct species. 2. No longer burning or active: an extinct volcano. 3. No longer in use: an extinct custom. See Synonyms at dead. 4. Law. Lacking a claimant; void: an extinct title. [Middle English, from Latin extinctus, past participle of extinguere, to extinguish. See EXTINGUISH.]

ex·tinc·tion (ĭk-stĭŋk'tʃən) n. 1. a. The act of extinguishing. b. The condition of being extinguished. 2. The fact of being extinct or the process of becoming extinct: “The most effective agent in the extinction of species is the pressure of other species” (Alfred R. Wallace). 3. Psychology. A reduction or a loss in the strength or rate of a conditioned response when the unconditioned stimulus or reinforcement is withheld. 4. Physiology. A gradual decrease in the excitability of a nerve to a previously adequate stimulus, usually resulting in total loss of excitability.

ex·tinc·tive (ĭk-stĭŋk'tĭv) adj. Tending to extinguish or make extinct.

ex·tin·guish (ĭk-stĭŋg'gwĭʃ) v. tr. ex·tin·guished, ex·tin·guish·ing, ex·tin·guish·es. 1. To put out (a fire, for example); quench. 2. To put an end to (hopes, for example); destroy. See Synonyms at abolish. 3. To obscure; eclipse.

4. Law. a. To settle or discharge (a debt). b. To nullify: extinguished their title to the property. 5. Psychology. To bring about the extinction of (a conditioned response). [Latin extinguere : ex-, intensive pref.; see EX- + stinguere, to quench; see steig- in Appendix.] —ex·tin·guish·a·ble adj. —ex·tin·guish·ment n.

ex·tin·guish·er (ĭk-stĭng'gwĭ-shər) n. One that extinguishes, especially:

a. Any of various portable mechanical devices for spraying and extinguishing a fire with chemicals. b. A small metal cone or cup on a long handle, used for snuffing out candles; a snuffer.

ex·tir·pate (ĕk'stər-pāt') v. tr. ex·tir·pat·ed, ex·tir·pat·ing, ex·tir·pates.

1. To pull up by the roots. 2. To destroy totally; exterminate. See Synonyms at abolish. 3. To remove by surgery. [Latin extirpāre, extirpāt- : ex-, ex- + stirps, root.] —ex'tir·pa'tion n. —ex'tir·pa'tive adj. —ex'tir·pa'tor n.

ex·tol also ex·toll (ĭk-stōl') v. tr. ex·tolled also ex·tolled, ex·tol·ling also ex·toll·ing, ex·tols also ex·tolls. To praise highly; exalt. See Synonyms at praise. [Middle English extollen, from Latin extollere, to lift up, praise : ex-, up from; see EX- + tollere, to lift; see telə- in Appendix.] —ex·tol'ler n. —ex·tol'·ment n.

ex·tort (ĭk-stōrt') v. tr. ex·tort·ed, ex·tort·ing, ex·torts. To obtain from another by coercion or intimidation. [Latin extorquēre, extort-, to wrench out, extort : ex-, ex- + torquēre, to twist; see terk^w- in Appendix.] —ex·tort'er n. —ex·tor'tive adj.

ex·tor·tion (ĭk-stōr'shən) n. 1. The act or an instance of extorting. 2. Illegal use of one's official position or powers to obtain property, funds, or patronage. 3. An excessive or exorbitant charge. 4. Something extorted. —ex·tor'tion·ar'y (-shə-nĕr'ē) adj. —ex·tor'tion·ist, ex·tor'tion·er n.

ex·tor·tion·ate (ĭk-stōr'shə-nĭt) adj. 1. Characterized by extortion.

2. Exorbitant; immoderate: extortionate interest rates. —ex·tor'tion·ate·ly adv.

ex·tra (ĕk'strə) adj. Abbr. ext., ex., X 1. More than or beyond what is usual, normal, expected, or necessary. See Synonyms at superfluous. 2. Better than ordinary; superior: extra fineness. 3. Subject to an additional charge: a pizza with extra cheese. — n. 1. Something more than is usual or necessary. 2. Something, such as an accessory on a motor vehicle, for which an additional charge is made. 3. A special edition of a newspaper. 4. a. An additional or alternate worker. b. A performer hired to play a minor part, as in a crowd scene. 5. Something of exceptional quality. — adv. To an exceptional extent or degree; unusually: extra dry. [Probably short for EXTRAORDINARY.] extra- or extro- pref. Outside; beyond: extraterritorial. [Late Latin, from Latin extrā. See eghs in Appendix.]

ex·tra·base hit (ĕk'strə-bās' hĭt) n. Baseball. A double, a triple, or a home run.

ex·tra·cel·lu·lar (ĕk'strə-sĕl'yə-lər) adj. Located or occurring outside a cell or cells: extracellular fluid. —ex'tra·cel'lu·lar·ly adv.

ex·tra·chro·mo·so·mal (ĕk'strə-krō'mə-sō'məl) adj. Genetics. Occurring or operating outside the chromosomes.

ex·tra·code (ĕk'strə-kōd') n. Computer Science. A sequence of machine code instructions used to simulate hardware functions.

ex·tra·con·sti·tu·tion·al (ĕk'strə-kōn'stī-tōō'shə-nəl, -tyōō'-) adj. Beyond what is provided for in a constitution.

ex·tra·cor·po·re·al (ĕk'strə-kōr-pōr'ē-əl, -pōr'-) adj. Situated or occurring outside the body. —ex'tra·cor·po're·al·ly adv.

ex·tra·cra·ni·al (ĕk'strə-krā'nē-əl) adj. Located or occurring outside the cranium.

ex·tract (ĭk-străkt') v. tr. ex·tract·ed, ex·tract·ing, ex·tracts. 1. To draw or pull out, using great force or effort: extract a wisdom tooth. 2. To obtain despite resistance: extract a promise. 3. To obtain from a substance by chemical or mechanical action, as by pressure, distillation, or evaporation. 4. To remove for separate consideration or publication; excerpt. 5. a. To derive or obtain (information, for example) from a source. b. To deduce (a principle or doctrine); construe (a meaning). c. To derive (pleasure or comfort) from an experience.

6. Mathematics. To determine or calculate (the root of a number). — n.

(ĕk'străkt') Abbr. ext. 1. A passage from a literary work; an excerpt. 2. A concentrated preparation of the essential constituents of a food, a flavoring, or another substance; a concentrate: maple extract. [Middle English extracten, from Latin extrahere, extract-: ex-, ex- + trahere, to draw.] —ex·tract'a·ble, ex·tract'i·ble adj. —ex·trac'tor n.

ex·trac·tion (ĭk-străk'shən) n. 1. The act of extracting or the condition of being extracted. 2. Something obtained by extracting; an extract. 3. Origin; lineage: of Spanish extraction.

ex·trac·tive (ĭk-străk'tĭv) adj. 1. Used in or obtained by extraction.

2. Possible to extract. — n. 1. Something that may be extracted. 2. The insoluble portion of an extract. —ex·trac'tive·ly adv.

ex·tra·cur·ric·u·lar (ĕk'strə-kə-rĭk'yə-lər) adj. 1. Being outside the regular curriculum of a school or college: Sports and drama are the school's most popular extracurricular activities. 2. Being outside the usual duties of a job or profession: The attorney's work for the legal aid society was extracurricular. 3. Informal. Extramarital.

ex·tra·dit·a·ble (ĕk'strə-dī'tə-bəl) adj. 1. Subject to extradition: extraditable fugitives. 2. Making liable to extradition: an extraditable crime.

ex·tra·dite (ĕk'strə-dīt') Law. v. ex·tra·dit·ed, ex·tra·dit·ing, ex·tra·dites. — v. tr. 1. To give up or deliver (a fugitive, for example) to the legal jurisdiction of another government or authority. 2. To obtain the extradition of. See Synonyms at banish. — v. intr. To perform the act of extradition or engage in the process of extradition: “Rio or Uruguay or wherever it is that they do not extradite for murder” (Scott Turow). [Back-formation from EXTRADITION.]

ex·tra·di·tion (ĕk'strə-dīsh'ən) n. Law. Legal surrender of a fugitive to the jurisdiction of another state, country, or government for trial. [French : Latin ex-, ex- + Latin trāditiō, trāditiōn-, a handing over; see TRADITION.]

ex·tra·dos (ĕk'strə-dōs', -dō', -dōs') n. pl. ex·tra·dos (-dōz') or ex·tra·dos·es. The upper or exterior curve of an arch. [French : Latin extrā, outside; see EXTRA- + French dos, back (from Latin dorsum).]

ex·tra·ga·lac·tic (ĕk'strə-gə-lăk'tik) adj. Located or originating beyond the Milky Way.

ex·tra·he·pat·ic (ĕk'strə-hī-păt'ik) adj. Originating or occurring outside the liver.

ex·tra·high voltage (ĕk'strə-hī' vōl'tij) n. Abbr. EHV A voltage higher than 345 kilovolts.

ex·tra·ju·di·cial (ĕk'strə-jō-dīsh'əl) adj. Law. 1. Outside of the authority of a court. 2. Outside of the usual judicial proceedings. —ex'tra·ju·di'cial·ly adv.

ex·tra·le·gal (ĕk'strə-lē'gəl) adj. Law. Not permitted or governed by law. —ex'tra·le'gal·ly adv.

ex·tra·mar·i·tal (ĕk'strə-măr'ī-tl) adj. Being in violation of marriage vows; adulterous: an extramarital affair.

ex·tra·mun·dane (ĕk'strə-mŭn-dān', -mŭn'dān') adj. Occurring or existing outside of the physical world or universe.

ex·tra·mu·ral (ĕk'strə-myōōr'əl) adj. Occurring or situated outside of the walls or boundaries, as of a community: the university's extramural courses.

ex·tra·mu·si·cal (ĕk'strə-myōō'zī-kəl) adj. Not relating to music: the extra-musical importance of this opera, which led to a revolution.

ex·tra·ne·ous (ik-strā'nē-əs) adj. 1. Not constituting a vital element or part. 2. Inessential or unrelated to the topic or matter at hand; irrelevant. See Synonyms at irrelevant. 3. Coming from the outside: extraneous interference. See Synonyms at extrinsic. [From Latin extrāneus, from extrā, outside. See EXTRA-.] —ex'tra·ne·ous·ly adv. —ex'tra'ne·ous·ness n.

ex·tra·nu·cle·ar (ĕk'strə-nōō'klē-ər, -nyōō'-) adj. 1. Located or occurring outside the nucleus of a cell. 2. Existing or acting outside the nucleus of an atom.

ex·tra·oc·u·lar muscle (ĕk'strə-ōk'yə-lər müs'əl) n. Any of the six small muscles that control movement of the eyeball within the socket.

ex·tra·or·di·naire (ĕk'strə-ôr'dn-âr', -dē-nâr') adj. Extraordinary: a jazz singer extraordinaire. [French, from Old French, from Latin extrāordinārius. See EXTRAORDINARY.]

ex·traor·di·nar·y (ik-strôr'dn-ēr'ē, ĕk'strə-ôr'-) adj. 1. Beyond what is ordinary or usual: extraordinary authority. 2. Highly exceptional; remarkable: an extraordinary achievement. 3. Employed or used for a special service, function, or occasion: a minister extraordinary; an extraordinary professor. [Middle English extraordinarie, from Latin extraordinarius: extrā, outside; see EXTRA- + ōrdō, ōrdin-, order; see ORDER.] —ex·traor·di·nar·i·ly (-dn-âr'ə-lē) adv.

ex·trap·o·late (ĭk-străp'ə-lāt') v. ex·trap·o·lat·ed, ex·trap·o·lat·ing, ex·trap·o·lates. — v. tr. 1. To infer or estimate by extending or projecting known information. 2. Mathematics. To estimate (a value of a variable outside a known range) from values within a known range by assuming that the estimated value follows logically from the known values. — v. intr. To engage in the process of extrapolating. [EXTRA- + (INTER)POLATE.] —ex·trap·o·la'tion n.

—ex·trap·o·la'tive adj. —ex·trap·o·la'tor n.

ex·tra·py·ram·i·dal (ĕk'strə-pī-răm'i-dl) adj. Relating to or involving neural pathways situated outside or independent of the pyramidal tracts.

ex·tra·sen·so·ry (ĕk'strə-sĕn'sə-rē) adj. Being outside the normal range or bounds of the senses.

extrasensory perception (ĕk'strə-sĕn'sə-rē pər-sĕp'shən) n. ESP.

ex·tra·sys·to·le (ĕk'strə-sīs'tə-lē) n. Medicine. A premature contraction of the heart, resulting in momentary cardiac arrhythmia.

ex·tra·ter·res·tri·al (ĕk'strə-tə-rĕs'trē-əl) adj. Originating, located, or occurring outside Earth or its atmosphere: intelligent extraterrestrial life.

—ex'tra·ter·res'tri·al n.

ex·tra·ter·ri·to·ri·al (ĕk'strə-tĕr'i-tôr'ē-əl, -tôr'-) adj. 1. Located outside territorial boundaries: fishing in extraterritorial waters. 2. Of or relating to persons exempt from the legal jurisdiction of the country in which they reside.

—ex'tra·ter'ri·to'ri·al·ly adv.

ex·tra·ter·ri·to·ri·al·i·ty (ĕk'strə-tĕr'i-tôr'ē-ăl'i-tē, -tôr'-) n. Exemption from local legal jurisdiction, such as that granted to foreign diplomats.

ex·tra·u·ter·ine (ĕk'strə-yoō'tər-ĭn, -tə-rĭn') adj. Located or occurring outside the uterus: an extrauterine pregnancy.

ex·trav·a·gance (ĭk-străv'ə-gəns) n. 1. The quality of being extravagant. 2. Immoderate expense or display. 3. Something extravagant. See Synonyms at luxury.

ex·trav·a·gan·cy (ĭk-străv'ə-gən-sē) n. pl. ex·trav·a·gan·cies.

1. Extravagance. 2. Something extravagant.

ex·trav·a·gant (ĭk-străv'ə-gənt) adj. 1. Given to lavish or imprudent expenditure: extravagant members of the imperial court. 2. Exceeding reasonable bounds: extravagant demands. See Synonyms at excessive. 3. Extremely abundant; profuse: extravagant vegetation. 4. Unreasonably high; exorbitant: extravagant fees. 5. Archaic. Straying beyond limits or bounds; wandering. [Middle English, unusual, rambling, from Old French, from Medieval Latin extrāvagāns, extrāvagant- present participle of extrāvagārī, to wander : Latin extrā, outside; see EXTRA- + Latin vagārī, to wander.] —ex·trav'a·gant·ly adv.

—ex·trav'a·gant·ness n.

ex·trav'a·gan·za (ĭk-strāv'ə-gān'zə) n. 1. An elaborate, spectacular entertainment or display: “Washington is an extravaganza of great buildings, greenery, and monuments” (Larry Griffin). 2. Music. A light orchestral composition marked by freedom and diversity of form, often with burlesque elements. [Italian estravaganza, extravagance, from estravagante, extravagant, from Medieval Latin extrāvagāns, extrāvagant- present participle of extrāvagārī, to wander. See EXTRAVAGANT.]

ex·trav'a·gate (ĭk-strāv'ə-gāt') v. intr. ex·trav'a·gat·ed, ex·trav'a·gat·ing, ex·trav'a·gates. Archaic. To exceed reasonable limits or bounds. [Medieval Latin extrāvagārī, extrāvagāt-, to wander. See EXTRAVAGANT.]

ex·trav'a·sate (ĭk-strāv'ə-sāt') v. ex·trav'a·sat·ed, ex·trav'a·sat·ing, ex·trav'a·sates. — v. tr. 1. Pathology. To force the flow of (blood or lymph) from a vessel out into surrounding tissue. 2. Geology. To cause (molten lava) to pour forth from a volcanic vent. — v. intr. 1. Pathology. To exude from a vessel into surrounding tissue. 2. Geology. To erupt. [EXTRA- + VAS(O)- + -ATE¹.]

—ex·trav'a·sa'tion n.

ex·tra·vas·cu·lar (ĕk'strə-vās'kyə-lər) adj. 1. Located or occurring outside a blood or lymph vessel. 2. Lacking vessels; nonvascular.

ex·tra·ve·hic·u·lar activity (ĕk'strə-vē-hĭk'yə-lər äk-tĭv'ĭ-tē) n. Abbr. EVA Activity or maneuvers performed by an astronaut outside a spacecraft in space.

ex·tra·ver·sion (ĕk'strə-vûr'zhən) n. Variant of extroversion.

ex·tra·vert (ĕk'strə-vûrt') n. Variant of extrovert.

ex·tra·vert·ed (ĕk'strə-vûr'tĭd) adj. Variant of extroverted.

ex·treme (ĭk-strēm') adj. 1. Most remote in any direction; outermost or farthest: the extreme edge of the field. 2. Being in or attaining the greatest or highest degree; very intense: extreme pleasure; extreme pain. 3. Extending far beyond the norm: an extreme conservative. See Synonyms at excessive. 4. Of the greatest severity; drastic: took extreme measures to conserve fuel. 5. Archaic. Final; last.

— n. 1. The greatest or utmost degree or point. 2. Either of the two things situated at opposite ends of a range: the extremes of boiling and freezing. 3. An extreme condition. 4. An immoderate, drastic expedient: resorted to extremes in the emergency. 5. Mathematics. a. The first or last term of a ratio or a series. b. A maximum or minimum value of a function. 6. Logic. The major or minor term of a syllogism. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin extrēmus. See eghs in Appendix.] —ex·treme'ly adv. —ex·treme'ness n.

extremely high frequency (ĭk-strēm'lē hĭ frē'kwən-sē) n. Abbr. EHF A radio-frequency band with a range of 30,000 to 300,000 megahertz.

extremely low frequency (ĭk-strēm'lē lō frē'kwən-sē) n. Abbr. ELF A radio frequency below 300 hertz.

extreme unction (ĭk-strēm' ŭngk'shən) n. Roman Catholic Church. The rite formerly in practice in which a priest anointed and prayed for a sick or an injured person, especially one in danger of death. In 1972 the name and rite were changed to Anointing of the Sick.

ex-trem-ist (ĭk-strē'mĭst) n. One who advocates or resorts to measures beyond the norm, especially in politics. —ex-trem/ism n. —ex-trem/ist adj.

ex-trem-i-ty (ĭk-strēm'ĭ-tē) n. pl. ex-trem-i-ties. 1. The outermost or farthest point or portion. 2. The greatest or utmost degree: the extremity of despair.

3. a. Grave danger, necessity, or distress. b. A moment at which death or ruin is imminent. 4. An extreme or severe measure. 5. a. A bodily limb or appendage. b. A hand or foot.

ex-tri-cate (ĕk'strĭ-kāt') v. tr. ex-tri-cat-ed, ex-tri-cat-ing, ex-tri-cates.

1. To release from an entanglement or difficulty; disengage. 2. Archaic. To distinguish from something related. [Latin extricāre, extricāt- : ex-, ex- + trīcae, hindrances, perplexities.] —ex'tri-ca-ble (-kə-bəl) adj. —ex'tri-ca'tion n.

SYNONYMS: extricate, disengage, disentangle, untangle. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to free from something that entangles”: extricated himself from an embarrassing situation; trying to disengage her attention from the subject that obsesses her; disentangled the oar from the water lilies; the efforts of a trapped animal to untangle itself from a net.

ex-trin-sic (ĭk-strĭn'sĭk, -zĭk) adj. 1. Not forming an essential or inherent part of a thing; extraneous. 2. Originating from the outside; external. [Latin extrĭnsecus, from outside : exter, outside; see EXTERIOR + -im, adv. suff. + secus, alongside; see sek^{w-1} in Appendix.] —ex-trin'si-cal-ly adv.

SYNONYMS: extrinsic, extraneous, foreign, alien. These adjectives mean not part of the essential nature of a thing. Extrinsic applies to what is either outside of a thing or derived from something external to it: “How is it possible to write about Frank Sinatra in a manner that suggests his music is in some way extrinsic to him?” (Barbara Grizzuti Harrison). What is extraneous comes from without and is inessential or irrelevant: an issue extraneous to the debate. Something foreign is markedly different from and incompatible with the thing in question: Jealousy is foreign to his nature. What is alien is irreconcilably different: an economic theory alien to the spirit of capitalism.

extrinsic factor (ĭk-strĭn'sĭk fāk'tər) n. See vitamin B 12.

extro- pref. Variant of extra-.

ex-torse (ĕk'strōrs') adj. Botany. Facing outward; turned away from the axis: extrorse anthers. [Late Latin extrōrsus, turned outward, blend of Latin extrā, outside; see EXTRA-, and Latin versus, past participle of vertere, to turn; see wer-² in Appendix.]

ex-tro-ver-sion also ex-tra-ver-sion (ĕk'strə-vûr'zhən) n. 1. Interest in one's environment or in others as opposed to or to the exclusion of oneself. 2. A turning inside out, as of an organ or a part. —ex'tro-ver'sive adj. —ex'tro-ver'sive-ly adv.

ex-tro-vert also ex-tra-vert (ĕk'strə-vûrt') n. An individual interested in others or in the environment as opposed to or to the exclusion of self. [Alteration (influenced by INTROVERT), of extravert : EXTRA- + Latin vertere, vers-, to turn; see wer-² in Appendix.]

ex-tro-vert-ed also ex-tra-vert-ed (ĕk'strə-vûr'tid) adj. Marked by interest in others or in the environment as opposed to or to the exclusion of self; gregarious or outgoing: “the hearty and extroverted types who dominated public life in Boston” (Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr.).

ex-trude (ĭk-strōōd') v. ex-trud-ed, ex-trud-ing, ex-trudes. — v. tr. 1. To push or thrust out. 2. To shape (a plastic, for instance) by forcing it through a die. — v. intr. To protrude or project. [Latin extrūdere : ex-, ex- + trūdere, to thrust; see treud- in Appendix.]

ex-tru-sion (ĭk-strōō'zhən) n. 1. The act or process of pushing or thrusting out. 2. The act or process of shaping by forcing through a die. 3. An object or material produced by extruding. [Medieval Latin extrūsio, extrūsion-, from Latin extrūsus, past participle of extrūdere, to thrust out. See EXTRUDE.]

ex-tru-sive (ĭk-strōō'siv, -zīv) adj. 1. Tending to push or thrust out. 2. Tending to protrude or project. 3. Derived from magma poured out or ejected at the earth's surface. Used of igneous rocks.

ex-u-ber-ance (ĭg-zōō'bər-əns) n. 1. The quality or condition of being exuberant. 2. An exuberant act or expression.

ex-u-ber-ant (ĭg-zōō'bər-ənt) adj. 1. Full of unrestrained enthusiasm or joy. 2. Lavish; extravagant. 3. Extreme in degree, size, or extent. 4. Growing, producing, or produced abundantly; plentiful: “Threads of her exuberant hair showed up at the bottom of the sink” (Anne Tyler). See Synonyms at profuse. [Middle English, overabundant, from Old French, from Latin exūberāns, exūberant- present participle of exūberāre, to exuberate. See EXUBERATE.] —ex-u'ber-ant-ly adv.

ex-u-ber-ate (ĭg-zōō'bə-rāt') v. intr. ex-u-ber-at-ed, ex-u-ber-at-ing, ex-u-ber-ates. 1. Usage Problem. To be exuberant. 2. Archaic. To abound; overflow. [Middle English exuberaten, to make fruitful, from Latin exūberāre, exūberāt- : ex-, intensive pref.; see EX- + ūberāre, to be fruitful (from ūber, fertile); see euə-dh-r̥ in Appendix.]

USAGE NOTE: Exuberate is not well established in its use to mean “to be exuberant.” In an earlier survey it was unacceptable to a majority of the Usage Panel.

ex·u·date (ĕks'yōō-dāt') n. A substance that has oozed forth. [Latin exsūdātum, neuter past participle of exsūdāre, to exude. See EXUDE.]

ex·u·da·tion (ĕks'yōō-dā'shən) n. 1. The act or an instance of oozing forth. 2. An exudate. —ex'·u·da'tive adj.

ex·ude (ig-zōōd', ik-sōōd') v. ex·ud·ed, ex·ud·ing, ex·udes. — v. intr. To ooze forth. — v. tr. 1. To discharge or emit (a liquid or gas, for example) gradually. 2. To exhibit in abundance: a face that exuded self-satisfaction. [Latin exsūdāre: ex-, ex- + sūdāre, to sweat; see sweid- in Appendix.]

ex·ult (ig-zŭlt') v. intr. ex·ult·ed, ex·ult·ing, ex·ults. 1. To rejoice greatly; be jubilant or triumphant. 2. Obsolete. To leap upward, especially for joy. [Latin exsultāre: ex-, ex- + saltāre, to dance, frequentative of salīre, to leap; see sel- in Appendix.] —ex·ul'tance, ex·ul'tan·cy n. —ex·ul'ting·ly adv.

ex·ul·tant (ig-zŭlt'tənt) adj. Marked by great joy or jubilation; triumphant. —ex·ul'tant·ly adv.

ex·ul·ta·tion (ĕk'səl-tā'shən, ěg'zəl-) n. The act or condition of rejoicing greatly.

ex·urb (ĕk'sŭrb') n. A region lying beyond the suburbs of a city, especially one inhabited principally by wealthy people. [EX- + (SUB)URB.] —ex·ur'ban adj.

ex·ur·ban·ite (ĕk-sŭr'bə-nīt', ěg-zŭr'-) n. A resident of an exurb.

ex·ur·bi·a (ĕk-sŭr'bē-ə, ěg-zŭr'-) n. A typically exurban area.

ex·u·vi·ae (ig-zōō'vē-ē') pl.n. The cast-off skins or coverings of various organisms, such as the shells of crabs or the external coverings of the larvae and nymphs of insects. [Latin, from exuere, to take off. See eu-¹ in Appendix.] —ex·u'vi·al (-vē-əl) adj.

ex·u·vi·ate (ig-zōō'vē-āt') v. ex·u·vi·at·ed, ex·u·vi·at·ing, ex·u·vi·ates. — v. tr. To shed or cast off (a covering). — v. intr. To shed or cast off exuviae; molt. [EXUVI(AE) + -ATE¹.] —ex·u'vi·a'tion n.

-ey suff. Variant of -y¹.

ey·as (ī'əs) n. A nestling hawk or falcon, especially one to be trained for falconry. [Middle English eias, from an eias, alteration of a nias*, an eyas, from Old French niais, from Latin nīdus, nest.]

Eyck (īk), Jan van. 1390?-1441. Flemish painter who with his brother Hubert (died 1426) founded the Flemish school of painting. Jan's works, characterized by brilliant coloring and minute realistic detail, include Arnolfini and His Wife (1434). No existing works can be positively attributed to Hubert.

eye (ī) n. 1. An organ of vision or of light sensitivity. 2. a. The vertebrate organ of vision; either of a pair of hollow structures located in bony sockets of the skull, functioning together or independently, each having a lens capable of focusing incident light on an internal photosensitive retina from which nerve impulses are sent to the brain. b. The external, visible portion of this organ together with its associated structures, especially the eyelids, eyelashes, and eyebrows. c. The pigmented iris of this organ. 3. The faculty of seeing; vision. 4. The ability to make intellectual or aesthetic judgments: has a good eye for understated fashion. 5. a. A way of regarding something; a point of view: To my eye, the decorations are excellent. b. Attention: The lavish window display immediately got my eye.

6. Something suggestive of the vertebrate organ of vision, especially: a. An opening in a needle. b. The aperture of a camera. c. A loop, as of metal, rope, or thread. d. A circular marking on a peacock's feather. e. Chiefly Southern U.S.

The round flat cover over the hole on a wood-burning stove. 7. A photosensitive device, such as a photoelectric cell. 8. Botany. a. A bud on a twig or tuber: the eye of a potato. b. The often differently colored center of the corolla of some flowers. 9. a. Meteorology. The circular area of relative calm at the center of a hurricane. b. The center or focal point of attention or action: right in the eye of the controversy. 10. Informal. A detective, especially a private detective. 11. A choice center cut of meat, as of beef: eye of the round. — v. tr. eyed, eye-ing or ey-ing (ī'ing), eyes. 1. To look at: eyed the passing crowd with indifference.

2. To watch closely: eyed the shark's movements. 3. To supply with an eye.

—idioms. all eyes. Fully attentive. an eye for an eye. Punishment in which an offender suffers what the victim has suffered. clap (one's) eyes on (or lay (one's) eyes on) (or set (one's) eyes on). To look at. eye to eye. In agreement: We're eye to eye on all the vital issues. have eyes for. To be interested in.

have (one's) eye on. 6. To look at, especially attentively or continuously. 7. To have as one's objective. in a pig's eye. Slang. Under no condition; never: In a pig's eye will I ever do that. in the eye of the wind. Nautical. In a direction opposite that of the wind; close to the wind. in the public eye. 10. Frequently seen in public or in the media. 11. Widely publicized; well-known. my eye. Slang. In no way; not at all. Used interjectionally. with an eye to. With a view to: redecorated the room with an eye to its future use as a nursery. with (one's) eyes closed. Unaware of the risks involved. with (one's) eyes open. Aware of the risks involved. [Middle English, from Old English ēge, ēage. See ok^w- in Appendix.]

eye-ball (ī'bôl') n. 1. The globe-shaped portion of the eye surrounded by the socket and covered externally by the eyelids. 2. The eye itself. — v. tr. eye-balled, eye-ball-ing, eye-balls. Informal. 1. To look over carefully; scrutinize. 2. To measure or estimate roughly by sight: eyeballed the area of the wall that needed paint.

eye-ball-to-eye-ball (ī'bôl'tə-ī'bôl') adv. & adj. Informal. Face to face.

eye bank (ī bāngk) n. A place at which corneas obtained from human bodies immediately after death are stored and preserved for subsequent transplantation to patients with corneal defects.

eye bath (ī bāth) n. See eyecup (n., sense 1).

eye-bolt (ī' bōlt') n. A bolt having a looped head designed to receive a hook or rope.

eye-bright (ī' brīt') n. Any of several plants of the genus Euphrasia, having small, opposite, toothed leaves and white and purplish flowers grouped in spikes.

eye-brow (ī' brou') n. 1. The bony ridge extending over the eye. 2. The arch of short hairs covering this ridge.

eyebrow pencil (ī' brou' pĕn'səl) n. A cosmetic pencil used for extending or darkening the eyebrows.

eye-catching (ī' kăch' ĭng) adj. Visually attractive: an eye-catching dress.
—eye'-catch'er n.

eye chart (ī chārt) n. A chart of letters and figures of various sizes, used to test visual acuity.

eye contact (ī kŏn'tăkt') n. Direct visual contact with another's eyes: "He managed to say hello to 12 people in five seconds without making eye contact with a single one" (Village Voice).

eye-cup (ī' kŭp') n. 1. A small cup with a rim contoured to fit the socket of the eye, used for applying a liquid medicine or wash to the eye. Also called eye bath, eyeglass. 2. Embryology. See optic cup.

eyed (īd) adj. Having eyes of a specified number or kind. Often used in combination: one-eyed; blue-eyed.

eye dialect (ī dī' ə- lĕkt') n. The use of misspellings, such as enuf for enough, or luv for love, to represent dialectal or nonstandard speech.

eyed-ness (īd' nīs) n. A preference for use of one eye rather than the other.

eye-dropper (ī' drŏp' ər) n. A dropper for administering liquid medicines, especially one for dispensing medications into the eye.

eye-ful (ī' fŏol') n. 1. A complete view. 2. One that is pleasing to the sight, especially an attractive person. 3. Sufficient observation to discover more than one had expected or enough to be satisfied: After an eyeful of his art collection, she decided to leave. 4. An amount of material blown or directed into the eye: got an eyeful of water from the squirt gun.

eye-glass (ī' glăs') n. 1. a. eyeglasses. Glasses for the eyes. b. A single lens in a pair of glasses; a monocle. 2. See eyepiece. 3. See eyecup (n., sense 1).

eye-hole (ī' hŏl') n. 1. The socket of an eye. 2. See peephole.

eye-hook (ī' hŏok') n. A hook attached to a ring at the end of a rope or chain.

eye-lash (ī' lăsh') n. 1. Any of the short hairs fringing the edge of the eyelid. 2. A row of the hairs fringing the eyelid.

eye-let (ī' lit) n. 1. a. A small hole or perforation, usually rimmed with metal, cord, fabric, or leather, used for fastening with a cord or hook. b. A metal ring designed to reinforce such a hole; a grommet. 2. A small hole edged with embroidered stitches as part of a design. 3. A peephole. 4. A small eye. [Alteration (influenced by EYE), of Middle English oilet, from Old French oillet, diminutive of oil, eye, from Latin oculus. See ok^w- in Appendix.]

eye-lid also eye-lid (ī'līd') n. Either of two folds of skin and muscle that can be closed over the exposed portion of the eyeball.

eye-lift (ī'līft') n. Cosmetic plastic surgery of the tissue surrounding the eye to reduce or eliminate folds, wrinkles, and sags.

eye-lin-er (ī'lī'nər) n. Makeup used to outline the eyes.

eye opener (ī ō'pə-nər) n. Informal. 1. A startling or shocking revelation.

2. A drink of liquor, taken to stimulate, especially upon awakening.

eye-piece (ī'pēs') n. The lens or lens group closest to the eye in an optical instrument; an ocular. Also called eyeglass eye-pop-ping (ī'pöp'īng) adj. Informal. Eliciting wonder or astonishment: an eye-popping display of fireworks. —eye'-pop'per n.

eye rhyme (ī rīm) n. A rhyme consisting of words, such as lint and pint, with similar spellings but different sounds. Also called sight rhyme eye-shade (ī'shād') n. A visor fastened about the head and used for protection against glare.

eye shadow (ī shād'ō) n. A cosmetic available in various colors or tints and applied especially to the eyelids to enhance the eyes.

eye-shot (ī'shōt') n. The range of vision; sight.

eye-sight (ī'sīt') n. 1. The faculty of sight; vision. 2. Range of vision; view.

eyes-on-ly (īz'ōn'lē) adj. Of or relating to privileged information: "Never before... had he been ordered to write a secret eyes-only memo" (Jeff Kamen).

eye-sore (ī'sōr', ī'sōr') n. Something, such as a distressed building, that is unpleasant or offensive to view.

eye-spot (ī'spōt') n. 1. A small, light-sensitive patch of pigment in certain algae and unicellular organisms. 2. A simple visual organ of certain invertebrates consisting of a sensory ending covered by light-sensitive, pigmented cells. 3. A rounded eyelike marking, as on the tail of a peacock. 4. Botany. Either of two fungal diseases that affect grasses and are characterized by oval lesions.

eye-stalk (ī'stōk') n. A movable stalklike structure in certain crustaceans, such as crabs and shrimp, that bears an eye at the tip.

eye-strain (ī'strān') n. Pain and fatigue of the eyes, often accompanied by headache, resulting from prolonged use of the eyes, uncorrected defects of vision, or an imbalance of the eye muscles.

eye-tooth (ī'tōōth') n. A canine tooth of the upper jaw. [Perhaps so called from its location immediately below the eye.]

eye-wash (ī'wōsh', ī'wōsh') n. 1. A solution, medicated or nonmedicated, applied as a cleanser for the eyes. 2. Informal. Actions or remarks intended to conceal the facts of a situation.

eye·wear (ī'wâr') n. 1. Eyeglasses, goggles, or other objects worn over the eyes.

2. Fashionable eyeglasses.

eye·wink (ī'wīngk') n. 1. A wink of the eye. 2. An instant. 3. Obsolete. A glance.

eye·wit·ness (ī'wīt'nīs) n. A person who has seen someone or something and can bear witness to the fact.

ey·ra (âr'ə) n. The reddish-brown color phase of the jaguarundi. [American Spanish eirá, a kind of fox, from Guarani eirara.]

eyre (âr) n. A circuit court held by itinerant royal justices in medieval England. [Middle English, from Anglo-Norman eire, from Latin iter, journey. See ei- in Appendix.]

Eyre (âr), Lake. A shallow salt lake of south-central Australia. It is the largest lake in the country and the lowest point on the continent.

Eyre Peninsula (âr pə-nīn'syə-lə) A peninsula of southern Australia between Spencer Gulf and the Great Australian Bight.

ey·rie (âr'ē, îr'ē) n. Variant of aerie.

ey·rir (ā'rîr') n. pl. au·rar (ou'rär', œ'rär'). A unit of currency in Iceland. See Table at currency. [Icelandic, from Old Norse, money, probably from Latin aurum, gold.]

eyr·y (âr'ē, îr'ē) n. Variant of aerie.

Ezek. abbr. Bible. Ezekiel.

Ez·e·ki·as (ěz'ī-kī'əs) See Hezekiah.

E·ze·ki·el (ī-zē'kē-əl) n. Bible. 1. A Hebrew prophet of the sixth century B.C. who called for the Jews exiled in Babylon to return to godliness and faith. 2.

Abbr. Ezek., Ezk A book of the Bible. See Table at Bible.

Ez·ra (ěz'rə) n. Bible. 1. A Hebrew high priest of the fifth century B.C. who led many Jews back to Jerusalem after their Babylonian exile. 2. Abbr. Ezr A book of the Bible. See Table at Bible.

f¹ or F (ĕf) n. pl. f's or F's. 1. The sixth letter of the modern English alphabet. 2. Any of the speech sounds represented by the letter f. 3. The sixth in a series. 4. F. A failing grade in schoolwork. 5. Something shaped like the letter F. 6. Or F. Music. a. The fourth tone in the scale of C major or the sixth tone in the relative minor scale. b. A key or scale in which F is the tonic. c. A written or printed note representing this tone. d. A string, key, or pipe tuned to the pitch of this tone.

f² abbr. 1. Focal length. 2. Or F. Music. Forte. 3. Mathematics. Function.

F¹ The symbol for the element fluorine.

F² abbr. 1. Fahrenheit. 2. Farad. 3. Or F. Fellow (of a university or another institution). 4. Filial generation.

f. abbr. 1. Farthing. 2. Or F. Female. 3. Or F. Grammar. Feminine. 4. Or F. Metallurgy. Fine. 5. Or F. Folio. 6. Following. 7. Sports. Foul. 8. Franc.

F. abbr. 1. French. 2. Friday.

f/ abbr. Relative aperture of a lens.

fa (fä) n. Music. The fourth tone of the diatonic scale in solfeggio. [Middle English, from Medieval Latin. See GAMUT.]

FA abbr. 1. Or F.A. Fine art. 2. Sports. Football Association.

f.a. abbr. Fire alarm.

FAA abbr. Federal Aviation Administration.

f.a.a. or F.A.A. abbr. Free of all average.

fab¹ (fäb) n. Informal. Fabrication: building a shed of metal fab.

fab² (fäb) adj. Slang. Fabulous; wonderful.

Fa-ber-gé (fäb'är-zhä'), Peter Carl. 1846-1920. Russian goldsmith and jeweler who created ornate gifts, notably a series of jeweled and enameled Easter eggs for European royalty.

Fa-bi-an (fä'bē-än) adj. 1. a. Of or relating to the caution and avoidance of direct confrontation typical of the Roman general Quintus Fabius Maximus. b. Cautious or dilatory, as in taking action. 2. Of, relating to, or being a member of the Fabian Society, which was committed to gradual rather than revolutionary means for spreading socialist principles. [Latin Fabiānus, after Quintus FABIUS MAXIMUS VERRUCOSUS.] —Fa'bi-an n. —Fa'bi-an-ism n. —Fa'bi-an-ist n.

Fa-bi-us Max-i-mus Ver-ru-co-sus (fä'bē-əs mäk'sə-məs vër-yōō-kō'səs, -ōō-), Quintus. Known as "the Cunctator." Died 203 B.C. Roman general who ultimately defeated (209) the superior forces of Hannibal through delay tactics, thereby avoiding direct conflict and giving Rome sufficient time to muster a great army.

fa-ble (fä'bəl) n. 1. A usually short narrative making an edifying or cautionary point and often employing as characters animals that speak and act like human beings. 2. A story about legendary persons and exploits. 3. A falsehood; a lie. — v. fa-bled, fa-bling, fa-bles. — v. tr. To recount as if true. — v. intr.

Archaic. To compose fables. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin fābula, from fārī, to speak. See bhā-² in Appendix.] —fa'bler n.

fa·bled (fā'bəld) adj. 1. Made known or famous by fables; legendary.

2. Existing only in fables; fictitious.

fab·li·au (fāb'lē-ō') n. pl. fab·li·aux (-lē-ō', -ōz'). A medieval verse tale characterized by comic, ribald treatment of themes drawn from life. [French, from Old North French, from Old French fablel, diminutive of fable, fable. See FABLE.]

Fa·bre (fā'brə), Jean Henri. 1823-1915. French entomologist noted for his descriptive and behavioral studies of bees and wasps, grasshoppers and crickets, and beetles.

fab·ric (fāb'rīk) n. 1. a. A cloth produced especially by knitting, weaving, or felting fibers. b. The texture or quality of such cloth. 2. A complex underlying structure: destroyed the very fabric of the ancient abbey during wartime bombing; needs to protect the fabric of civilized society. 3. a. A method or style of construction. b. A structural material, such as masonry or timber. c. A physical structure; a building. [Middle English fabryke, something constructed, from Old French fabrique, from Latin fabrica, craft, workshop, from faber, fabr-, workman, artificer.]

fab·ric·a·ble (fāb'rī-kə-bəl) adj. Capable of being shaped or formed: a fabricable alloy; fabricable materials. —fab'ric·a·bil'i·ty n.

fab·ri·cant (fāb'rī-kənt) n. A manufacturer.

fab·ri·cate (fāb'rī-kāt') v. tr. fab·ri·cat·ed, fab·ri·cat·ing, fab·ri·cates.

1. To make; create. 2. To construct by combining or assembling diverse, typically standardized parts: fabricate small boats. 3. To concoct in order to deceive: fabricated an excuse. [Middle English fabricaten, from Latin fabricārī, fabricāt-, to make, from fabrica, craft. See FABRIC.] —fab'ri·ca'tion n. —fab'ri·ca'tor n.

fab·u·late (fāb'yə-lāt') v. intr. fab·u·lat·ed, fab·u·lat·ing, fab·u·lates. To engage in the composition of fables or stories, especially those in which the element of fantasy comes into heavy play: "a land which... had given itself up to dreaming, to fabulating, to tale-telling" (Lawrence Durrell). "The [writer's] voice... has matured, [has] been brought to a level where it can at once be... able to praise and curse, laugh and cry, fabulate and sing and when called upon, take off and soar" (Thomas Pynchon). [Latin fābulārī, fābulāt-, to talk, from fābula, tale, talk. See FABLE.] —fab'·u·la'tion n. —fab'·u·la'tor n.

fab·u·list (fāb'yə-līst) n. 1. A composer of fables. 2. An inventor or teller of falsehoods; a liar. [French fabuliste, from Latin fābula, fable. See FABLE.]

fab·u·lous (fāb'yə-ləs) adj. 1. Barely credible; astonishing: the fabulous endurance of a marathon runner. 2. Extremely pleasing or successful: a fabulous vacation. 3. a. Of the nature of a fable or myth; legendary. b. Told of or celebrated in fables or legends. [Middle English, mythical, from Old French fabuleux, from Latin fābulōsus, from fābula, fable. See FABLE.] —fab’u-lous-ly adv.

—fab’u-lous-ness n.

fac. abbr. 1. Facsimile. 2. Faculty.

fa-çade also fa-cade (fə-sād’) n. 1. Architecture. The face of a building, especially the principal face. 2. An artificial or deceptive front: ideological slogans that were a façade for geopolitical power struggles. [French, from Italian facciata, from faccia, face, from Vulgar Latin facia*, from Latin faciēs. See dhē- in Appendix.]

fa-çad-ism also fa-cad-ism (fə-sā’-dīz’əm) n. Architecture. The technique of preserving the fronts of notable old buildings while demolishing the backs and interiors, often constructing modern interiors behind the old façades.

face (fās) n. 1. a. The surface of the front of the head from the top of the forehead to the base of the chin and from ear to ear. b. A person: We saw many new faces on the first day of classes. 2. A person’s countenance. 3. A contorted facial expression; a grimace: made a face at the prospect of eating lemons. 4. Outward appearance: the modern face of the city. 5. a. Value or standing in the eyes of others; prestige: lose face. b. Self-assurance; confidence: The team managed to maintain a firm face even in times of great adversity. 6. Effrontery; impudence: had the face to question my judgment. 7. The most significant or prominent surface of an object, especially: a. The surface presented to view; the front. b. A façade. c. Outer surface: the face of the earth. d. A marked side: the face of a clock; the face of a playing card. e. The right side, as of fabric. 8. Geometry. A planar surface of a geometric solid. 9. Any of the surfaces of a rock or crystal. 10. The end, as of a mine or tunnel, at which work is advancing. 11. The appearance and geologic surface features of an area of land; topography. 12. Printing. A typeface or range of typefaces. — v. faced, fac-ing, fac-es. — v. tr. 1. To occupy a position with the face toward: stood and faced the audience. 2. To front on: a window that faces the south. 3. a. To confront with complete awareness: had to face the facts. b. To overcome by confronting boldly or bravely: “What this generation must do is face its problems” (John F. Kennedy). c. To confront with impudence. 4. a. To be certain to encounter; have in store: An unskilled youth faces a difficult life. b. To bring or to be brought face to face with: “The prospect of military conflict... faced us with nightmarish choices” (Henry A. Kissinger). 5. To cause (troops) to change direction by giving a command. 6. Games. To turn (a playing card) so that the face is up. 7. To furnish with a surface or cover of a different material: bronze that is faced with gold foil. 8. To line or trim the edge of, especially with contrasting material: face a hem with lace. 9. To treat the surface of so as to smooth. — v. intr. 1. To be turned or placed with the front toward a specified direction. 2. To turn the face in a specified direction.

—phrasal verbs. face down. To attain mastery over or overcome by confronting in a resolute, determined manner: face down an opponent in a debate; faced the enemy down. face off. Sports. To start play in ice hockey, lacrosse, and other games by releasing the puck or ball between two opposing players. face up. To confront, an unpleasant situation, for example, with resolution and assurance: had to face up or get out; finally faced up to the problem. —idioms. face the music. To accept the unpleasant consequences, especially of one's own actions. face to face. 2. In each other's presence; in direct communication: The two world leaders at last spoke face to face. 3. Directly confronting: We were face to face with death during the avalanche. in (the) face of. Despite the opposition of; notwithstanding: "This statement flies in the face of accepted wisdom" (S. Fred Singer). on the face of it. From appearances alone; apparently: On the face of it, the problem seems minor. show (one's) face. To make an appearance: Don't show your face on my property again. to (one's) face. In the view or hearing of: criticized the supervisor to her face. [Middle English, from Old French, from Vulgar Latin facia*, from Latin faciēs. See dhē- in Appendix.]

—face/a-ble adj. —face/less adj. —face/less-ness n.

SYNONYMS: face, countenance, kisser, mug, pan, physiognomy, puss, visage. The central meaning shared by these nouns is "the front surface of the head": turned her face away; a happy countenance; punched him in the kisser; caught a glimpse of his ugly mug; tripped and fell on her pan; caught him staring at my physiognomy; a menacing look on his puss; a noble-looking visage. See also Synonyms at defy face angle (fās äng'gəl) n. Mathematics. The angle formed between two edges of a polyhedral angle.

face card (fās kärd) n. Games. A king, queen, or jack of a deck of playing cards. Also called picture card face-cloth also face cloth (fās'klôth', -klöth') n. See washcloth.

face-down (fās'doun') n. A determined, resolute, often hostile confrontation with an opponent or enemy: tried to avert a facedown between the two nations; a political facedown during the primaries. — adv. (fās'doun') In a position so that the face is down: a victim floating facedown in the water.

face-hard-en (fās'här'dn) v. tr. face--hard-ened, face--hard-en-ing, face--hard-ens. To harden the surface of (a metal).

face-lift (fās'lift') also face-lift-ing (-lif'ting) n. 1. Plastic surgery to remove facial wrinkles, sagging skin, fat deposits, or other visible signs of aging for cosmetic purposes. Also called rhytidectomy 2. A restyling or modernization, as of a building.

face-mask (fās'mäsk') n. A protective or disguising cover for the face, often enveloping the entire head: wore a facemask while diving; a skier's facemask; armed robbers who wore facemasks.

face-off (fās'ôf', -ôf') n. 1. Sports. A method of starting play in ice hockey, lacrosse, and other games in which an official drops the puck or ball between two opposing players who contend for its control. 2. A confrontation: "Marshall's face-off with Jefferson in Marbury v. Madison in 1803" (Newsweek).

face-plate (fās'plāt') n. 1. A disk attached to the mandrel of a lathe to hold the work to be turned. 2. The glass front of a cathode-ray tube upon which the image is displayed. 3. A protective plate covering the human face, as of a welder or diver.

fac·er (fā'sər) n. 1. One that faces, especially a device used in smoothing or dressing a surface. 2. An unexpected, stunning blow or defeat.

face-sav·er (fās'sāv'vər) n. Something that prevents loss of dignity or self-esteem: The compromise was a face-saver for all concerned. —face'-sav'ing n.

fac·et (fās'it) n. 1. One of the flat polished surfaces cut on a gemstone or occurring naturally on a crystal. 2. Anatomy. A small, smooth, flat surface, as on a bone or tooth. 3. Biology. One of the lenslike visual units of a compound eye, as of an insect. 4. One of numerous aspects, as of a subject; a phase. See Synonyms at phase. [French facette, from Old French, diminutive of face, face. See FACE.] —fac'et·ed, fac'et·ted adj.

fa·cete (fə-sēt') adj. Archaic. Witty; facetious. [Latin facētus.]

fa·ce·ti·ae (fə-sē'shē-ē') pl.n. Witty or humorous writings and sayings. [Latin, pl. of facētia, jest. See FACETIOUS.]

fa·ce·tious (fə-sē'shəs) adj. Playfully jocular; humorous: facetious remarks. [French facétieux, from facétie, jest, from Latin facētia, from facētus, witty.] —fa·ce'tious·ly adv. —fa·ce'tious·ness n.

face-up (fās'ŭp') adv. In a position so that the face is up: a patient lying faceup on the stretcher.

face value (fās vāl'yōō) n. 1. The value printed or written on the face, as of a bill or bond. 2. Apparent significance or value: took their compliments at face value.

fa·cial (fā'shəl) adj. Of or concerning the face: facial cosmetics; facial hair. — n. A treatment for the face, usually consisting of a massage and the application of cosmetic creams. —fa'cial·ly adv.

facial index (fā'shəl ĩn'děks') n. The ratio of facial length to facial width multiplied by 100.

facial nerve (fā'shəl nŭrv) n. Either of the seventh pair of cranial nerves that control facial muscles and relay sensation from the taste buds of the front part of the tongue.

-facient suff. 1. Causing; bringing about: somnifacient. 2. Something that causes or brings about: abortifacient. [From Latin faciēns, facient- present participle of facere, to do. See dhē- in Appendix.]

fa·ci·es (fā'shē-ēz', -shēz) n. pl. facies. 1. Biology. The general aspect or outward appearance, as of a given growth of flora. 2. Medicine. The appearance or expression of the face, especially when typical of a certain disorder or disease. 3. Geology. A rock or stratified body distinguished from others by its appearance or composition. [Latin faciēs. See dhē- in Appendix.]

fac·ile (fäs'əl) adj. 1. Done or achieved with little effort or difficulty; easy. See Synonyms at easy. 2. Working, acting, or speaking with effortless ease and fluency. See Synonyms at nimble. 3. Arrived at without due care, effort, or examination; superficial: proposed a facile solution to a complex problem. 4. Readily manifested, together with an aura of insincerity and lack of depth: a facile slogan devised by politicians. 5. Archaic. Pleasingly mild, as in disposition or manner. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin facilis. See dhē- in Appendix.]
—fac'ile·ly adv. —fac'ile·ness n.

fa·cil·i·tate (fə-sīl'i-tāt') v. tr. fa·cil·i·tat·ed, fa·cil·i·tat·ing, fa·cil·i·tates.
To make easy or easier: political agreements that facilitated troop withdrawals.
[From French faciliter, from Old French, from Italian facilitare, from facile, facile, from Latin facilis. See FACILE.] —fa·cil'i·ta'tive (-tā'tiv) adj. —fa·cil'i·ta'tor n.

fa·cil·i·ta·tion (fə-sīl'i-tā'shən) n. 1. a. The act of making easy or easier. b. The state of being made easy or easier. 2. Physiology. The process of lowering the threshold for propagation of the action potential of a neuron, especially by repeated use of a neural pathway or the summation of two or more subthreshold impulses.

fa·cil·i·ty (fə-sīl'i-tē) n. pl. fa·cil·i·ties. 1. Ease in moving, acting, or doing; aptitude: “an extreme facility in acquiring new dialects” (W.H. Hudson). 2. Readiness to be persuaded; pliability. 3. Often facilities. Something that facilitates an action or process. See Synonyms at amenity. 4. Something created to serve a particular function: hospitals and other health care facilities.

fac·ing (fā'sing) n. 1. a. A piece of material sewn to the edge of a garment, such as a dress or coat, as lining or decoration. b. Material used for such a lining or decoration. 2. An outer layer or coating applied to a surface for protection or decoration.

FACP or F.A.C.P. abbr. Fellow of the American College of Physicians.

FACS or F.A.C.S. abbr. Fellow of the American College of Surgeons.

fac·sim·i·le (fāk-sīm'ə-lē) n. Abbr. fac. 1. An exact copy or reproduction, as of a document. 2. a. A method of transmitting images or printed matter by electronic means. b. An image so transmitted. In this sense, also called fax — adj.
Abbr. fac. 1. Of or used to produce exact reproductions, as of documents. 2. Exactly reproduced; duplicate. [Latin fac simile, make similar : fac, imperative of facere, to make; see dhē- in Appendix + simile, neuter of similis, similar; see SIMILAR.] fact (fäkt) n. 1. Information presented as objectively real. 2. A real occurrence; an event: had to prove the facts of the accident. 3. a. Something having real, demonstrable existence: Genetic engineering is now a fact. b. The quality of being real or actual: a blur of fact and fancy. 4. A thing that has been done, especially a crime: an accessory before the fact. 5. Law. The aspect of a case at law comprising events determined by evidence: The jury made a finding of fact. —idiom. in (point of) fact. In reality or in truth; actually. [Latin factum, deed, from neuter past participle of facere, to do. See dhē- in Appendix.]

USAGE NOTE: Fact has a long history of usage in the sense “allegation of fact,” as in “This tract was distributed to thousands of American teachers, but the facts and the reasoning are wrong” (Albert Shanker). This practice has led inevitably to the introduction of the phrases true facts and real facts, as in The true facts of the case may never be known. These usages may occasion qualms among critics who hold that facts cannot be other than true, but they often serve a useful purpose.

fact-find·ing (fäkt'fīn'dīng) n. Discovery or determination of facts or accurate information. — adj. Of, relating to, or used in the discovery or determination of facts: a fact-finding committee; a fact-finding tour. —fact'-find'er n.

fac·tic·i·ty (fäk-tīs'ī-tē) n. The quality or condition of being a fact: historical facticity.

fac·tion¹ (fäk'shən) n. 1. A group of persons forming a cohesive, usually contentious minority within a larger group. 2. Conflict within an organization or nation; internal dissension: “Our own beloved country... is now afflicted with faction and civil war” (Abraham Lincoln). [French, from Latin factiō, factiōn-, from factus, past participle of facere, to do. See dhē- in Appendix.] —fac'tion·al adj. —fac'tion·al·ism n. —fac'tion·al·ly adv.

fac·tion² (fäk'shən) n. 1. A form of literature or filmmaking that treats real people or events as if they were fictional or uses real people or events as essential elements in an otherwise fictional rendition. 2. A literary work or film that is a mix of fact and fiction. [Blend of FACT, and FICTION.]

-faction suff. Production; making: petrification. [Middle English -faccioun, from Old French -faction, from Latin -factiō, -factiōn-, from factus, past participle of facere, to make. See dhē- in Appendix.]

fac·tion·al·ize (fäk'shə-nə-līz') v. tr. fac·tion·al·ized, fac·tion·al·iz·ing, fac·tion·al·iz·es. To split (a group, for example) into disputatious factions: “Once a faculty is factionalized, of course, the process of appointments becomes partly a competition for allies” (Calvin Trillin).

fac·tious (fäk'shəs) adj. 1. Of, relating to, produced by, or characterized by internal dissension. 2. Given to or promoting internal dissension. See Synonyms at insubordinate. —fac'tious·ly adv. —fac'tious·ness n.

fac-ti-tious (făk-tîsh'əs) adj. 1. Produced artificially rather than by a natural process. 2. Lacking authenticity or genuineness; sham: speculators responsible for the factitious value of some stocks. [Latin facticius, from factus, past participle of facere, to make. See dhē- in Appendix.] —fac-ti'tious-ly adv. —fac-ti'tious-ness n.

fac-ti-tive (făk'tî-tîv) adj. Of or constituting a transitive verb, such as elect, that in some constructions takes an objective complement to modify its direct object. [New Latin factitivus, from Latin factitāre, to do, practice, frequentative of facere, to do. See dhē- in Appendix.] —fac'ti-tive-ly adv.

fact of life (făkt ūv lif) n. pl. facts of life. 1. Something unavoidable that must be faced or dealt with. 2. facts of life. The basic physiological functions involved in sex and reproduction. Often used with the.

fac-toid (făk'toid) n. Unverified or inaccurate information that is presented in the press as factual, often as part of a publicity effort, and that is then accepted as true because of constant repetition: "What one misses finally is what might have emerged beyond both facts and factoids—a profound definition of the Marilyn Monroe phenomenon" (Christopher Lehmann-Haupt). —fac-toid'al adj.

fac-tor (făk'tər) n. 1. One that actively contributes to an accomplishment, a result, or a process: "Surprise is the greatest factor in war" (Tom Clancy). See Synonyms at element. 2. a. One who acts for someone else; an agent. b. A person or firm that accepts accounts receivable as security for short-term loans.

3. Mathematics. One of two or more quantities that divides a given quantity without a remainder: 2 and 3 are factors of 6; a and b are factors of ab. 4. A quantity by which a stated quantity is multiplied or divided, so as to indicate an increase or decrease in a measurement: The rate increased by a factor of ten. 5. A gene. No longer in technical usage. 6. Physiology. A substance that functions in a specific biochemical reaction or bodily process, such as blood coagulation. — v. tr.

fac-tored, fac-tor-ing, fac-tors. To determine or indicate explicitly the factors of. —phrasal verb. factor in. To figure in: We factored sick days and vacations in when we prepared the work schedule. [Middle English factour, perpetrator, agent, from Old French facteur, from Latin factor, maker, from facere, to make. See dhē- in Appendix.] —fac'tor-a-ble adj. —fac'tor-ship' n.

factor VIII (făk'tər) n. See antihemophilic factor.

factor IX (făk'tər) n. A protein substance in blood plasma that participates in and is essential for the blood-clotting process. A deficiency of this factor is the cause of Christmas disease.

fac-tor-age (făk'tər-ij) n. 1. The business of a factor. 2. The commission or fee paid to a factor.

fac-to-ri-al (făk-tôr'ē-əl, -tôr'-) n. The product of all the positive integers from 1 to a given number: 4 factorial, usually written 4!, is equal to 24 (1 × 2 × 3 × 4 = 24). — adj. Of or relating to a factor or factorial.

fac·tor·ize (făk'tə-rīz') v. tr. fac·tor·ized, fac·tor·iz·ing, fac·tor·iz·es.

Mathematics. To factor. —fac'tor·i·za'tion (-tər-ĭ-zā'shən) n.

fac·to·ry (făk'tə-rē) n. pl. fac·to·ries. 1. a. A building or group of buildings in which goods are manufactured; a plant. b. A vessel in which newly caught seafood is prepared for shipment and sale: a floating fish factory. 2. A business establishment for commercial agents or factors in a foreign country. 3. The source of prolific production: a group of singers who really were a hit-tune factory; an old house that served as an illegal drug factory. [Late Latin factōria, oil press, mill, and Medieval Latin factōria, establishment for factors both from Latin factor, factor. See FACTOR.]

fac·to·tum (făk-tō'təm) n. An employee or assistant who serves in a wide range of capacities. [Medieval Latin factōtum: Latin fac, imperative of facere, to do; see dhē- in Appendix + Latin tōtum, everything, from neuter of tōtus, all; see teutā- in Appendix.]

fac·tu·al (făk'chōō-əl) adj. 1. Of the nature of fact; real. 2. Of or containing facts. —fac'tu·al'i·ty (-ăl'ĭ-tē) n. —fac'tu·al·ly adv. —fac'tu·al·ness n.

fac·tu·al·ism (făk'chōō-ə-līz'əm) n. Devotion or adherence to fact. —fac'tu·al·ist n.

fac·u·la (făk'yə-lə) n. pl. fac·u·lae (-lē'). Any of various large, bright spots or veined patches on the sun's photosphere, usually near sunspots. [Latin, small torch, diminutive of fax, fac-, torch.]

fac·ul·ta·tive (făk'əl-tā'tiv) adj. 1. Of or relating to a mental faculty. 2. a. Capable of occurring or not occurring; contingent. b. Not required or compulsory; optional. 3. Granting permission or authority. 4. Biology. Capable of functioning under varying environmental conditions. Used of certain organisms, such as bacteria that can live with or without oxygen. —fac'ul·ta'tive·ly adv.

facultative apomict (făk'əl-tā'tiv əp'ə-mīkt') n. A plant capable of reproducing either sexually or asexually.

fac·ul·ty (făk'əl-tē) n. pl. fac·ul·ties. Abbr. fac. 1. An inherent power or ability. 2. Any of the powers or capacities possessed by the human mind. See Synonyms at ability. 3. The ability to perform or act. 4. a. Any of the divisions or comprehensive branches of learning at a college or university: the faculty of law. b. The teachers and instructors within such a division. c. A body of teachers. 5. All of the members of a learned profession: the medical faculty. 6. Authorization granted by authority; conferred power. 7. Archaic. An occupation; a trade. [Middle English faculte, from Old French, from Latin facultās, power, ability, from facilis, easy. See dhē- in Appendix.]

fad (făd) n. A fashion that is taken up with great enthusiasm for a brief period of time; a craze. [Possibly from fidfad, fussy person, fussy, from FIDDLE-FADDLE.]

—fad'dism n. —fad'dist n. —fad'dy adj.

WORD HISTORY: Although we do not know for certain the origin of fad, first recorded in 1834 with the sense “whim, crotchet,” we can suggest one possibility. In 1754, 80 years before this occurrence of fad, we find an instance of the word fidfad, meaning “a fussy person”: “The youngest... is, in everything she does, an absolute fidfad.” Fidfad is found in the latter part of the 19th century with the sense “small detail, frill,” and the adjective fidfad, meaning “frivolous, fussy, petty,” is recorded in 1830. Fad could thus be a shortened form of fidfad, itself shortened from fiddle-faddle.

FAD abbr. Flavin adenine dinucleotide.

fad-dish (fād'ish) adj. 1. Having the nature of a fad. 2. Given to fads.

—fad'dish-ly adv. —fad'dish-ness n.

fade (fād) v. fad-ed, fad-ing, fades. — v. intr. 1. To lose brightness, loudness, or brilliance gradually; dim: The lights and music faded as we set sail from the harbor. 2. To lose freshness; wither: summer flowers that had faded. 3. To lose strength or vitality; wane: youthful energy that had faded over the years. 4. To disappear gradually; vanish: a hope that faded. See Synonyms at disappear.

— v. tr. 1. To cause to lose brightness, freshness, or strength: Time has faded her beauty. 2. Football. To move back from the scrimmage line. Used of a quarterback. 3. Games. To meet the bet of (an opposing player) in dice. — n. 1. A gradual diminution in the brightness or visibility of an image in cinema or television. 2. A periodic reduction in the received strength of a radio transmission.

—phrasal verbs. fade in. 1. To appear gradually. 2. To cause to appear or be heard gradually. Used of a cinematic or television image or of a sound. fade out. 3. To disappear gradually. 4. To cause to disappear gradually. Used of a cinematic or television image or of a sound. [Middle English faden, from Old French fader, from fade, faded, probably from Vulgar Latin fatidus*, alteration of Latin fatuus, insipid.]

fade-a-way (fād'ə-wā') n. 1. The act or an instance of gradually diminishing in brightness, loudness, or strength until actual disappearance occurs.

2. Baseball. a. A screwball. b. An act of sliding by a base runner during which the runner veers sideways to avoid being tagged.

fade-in or fade-in (fād'in') n. A gradual increase in the visibility of an image or the audibility of a sound, as in cinema, television, or radio.

fade-less (fād'lis) adj. Not fading or not subject to fading: fadeless fabric.

—fade/less-ly adv.

fade-out or fade-out (fād'out') n. 1. A gradual disappearance of an image or a sound, as in cinema, television, or radio. 2. A gradual and temporary loss in reception of a radio or television signal, often generated by interference in transmission.

- Fad-i-man (făd'ə-mən), Clifton Paul. Born 1904. American writer and editor. A book reviewer for the New Yorker (1933-1943), he hosted the Information Please! radio program (1938-1948) and has edited numerous anthologies.
- fading (fā'dĩng) n. 1. A waning; a decline: "The final factor in the fading of the Renaissance was the Counter Reformation" (Will Durant). 2. Fluctuation in the strength of radio signals because of variations in the transmission medium.
- fa-do (fă'thōō, făth'ō) n. pl. fa-dos. Music. A sad Portuguese folksong. [Portuguese, from Latin fātum, fate. See FATE.]
- fa-e-na (fă-ā'nă) n. The series of final passes performed by a matador preparatory to killing a bull in a bullfight. [Spanish, manual labor, from Catalan feyna, from Latin facienda, things to be done, neuter pl. gerundive of facere, to do. See FACT.]
- Fa-en-za (fă-ĕn'zə) A city of north-central Italy southwest of Ravenna. It is noted for its richly colored pottery, produced here since the 12th century. Population, 39,700.
- fa-er-ie also fa-er-y (fă'ə-rĕ, făr'ĕ) n. pl. fa-er-ies. 1. A tiny, mischievous, imaginary form; a fairy. 2. The land or realm of the fairies. [Middle English faerie, fairie. See FAIRY.] —fa'er-ie, fa'er-y adj.
- Faer-oe Islands or Far-oe Islands (făr'ō ī'ləndz) A group of volcanic islands in the northern Atlantic Ocean between Iceland and the Shetland Islands. Originally settled by Celtic peoples, the islands passed to Denmark in 1380.
- Faer-o-ese or Far-o-ese (făr'ō-ĕz', -ĕs') n. pl. Faeroese or Faroese. 1. A member of the Scandinavian people inhabiting the Faeroe Islands. 2. The North Germanic language spoken by the inhabitants of the Faeroe Islands.
—Fae'ro-ese' adj.
- FAF abbr. Financial Aid Form.
- Faf-nir (fäv'nər, -nĭr') n. Mythology. The Norse dragon that guarded the treasure of the Nibelungs and was slain by Sigurd.
- fag¹ (făg) n. 1. a. A student at a British public school who is required to perform menial tasks for a student in a higher class. b. A drudge. 2. Chiefly British. Fatiguing or tedious work; drudgery. — v. fagged, fag-ging, fags. — v. intr. 1. To work to exhaustion; toil. 2. To function as the servant of another student in a British public school. — v. tr. To exhaust; weary: Four hours on the tennis court fagged me out. [From fag, to droop (obsolete), perhaps from Middle English fagge. See FAG END.]
- fag² (făg) n. Slang. A cigarette. [Short for FAG END.]
- fag³ (făg) n. Offensive Slang. Used as a disparaging term for a gay or homosexual man. [Short for FAGGOT².]
- fag end (făg ĕnd) n. 1. The frayed end of a length of cloth or rope. 2. a. An inferior or worn-out remnant. b. The last part: "the fag end of this crisis-ridden century” (Wallace Irwin, Jr.). [Middle English fagge, fag, broken thread in cloth, something that hangs loose.]

fag-got¹ (fäg'ət) n. & v. Variant of fagot.

fag-got² (fäg'ət) n. Offensive Slang. Used as a disparaging term for a gay or homosexual man. [Perhaps from faggot, variant of FAGOT, bundle, lump, old woman.]

fag-got-ing (fäg'ə-tĩng) n. Variant of fagoting.

fag-ot also fag-got (fäg'ət) n. 1. A bundle of twigs, sticks, or branches bound together. 2. A bundle of pieces of iron or steel to be welded or hammered into bars. — v. tr.

fag-ot-ed also fag-got-ed, fag-ot-ing also fag-got-ing, fag-ots also fag-gots. 1. To collect or bind into a fagot; bundle. 2. To decorate with fagoting. [Middle English, from Old French, from Old Provençal, possibly from Vulgar Latin facus*, from Greek phakelos, bundle.]

fag-ot-ing also fag-got-ing (fäg'ə-tĩng) n. 1. A method of decorating cloth by pulling out horizontal threads and tying the remaining vertical threads into hour-glass-shaped bunches. 2. A method of joining hemmed edges by crisscrossing thread over an open seam.

Fahd (fäd), Full name Fahd ibn Abdel Aziz al-Saud. Born 1922. King of Saudi Arabia (since 1982) who earlier served as interior minister (1962-1975) and helped shape Saudi domestic and foreign policy.

Fahr-en-heit (fär'ən-hīt') adj. Abbr. F, Fahr. Of or relating to a temperature scale that registers the freezing point of water as 32°F and the boiling point as 212°F at one atmosphere of pressure. See Table at measurement. [After Gabriel Daniel FAHRENHEIT.]

Fahr-en-heit (fä'ən-hīt', fä'-), Gabriel Daniel. 1686-1736. German-born physicist who invented the mercury thermometer (1714) and devised the Fahrenheit temperature scale.

FAIA or F.A.I.A. abbr. Fellow of the American Institute of Architects.

Fa-ial also Fa-yal (fə-yäl', fä-) An island of the central Azores in the northern Atlantic Ocean. Faial is noted for its abundant plant life.

fa-ience also fa-ience (fī-äns', -äns', fā-) n. 1. Earthenware decorated with colorful, opaque glazes. 2. Color. A moderate to strong greenish blue. [French faïence, after Faïence, Faenza, Italy.]

fail (fāl) v. failed, fail-ing, fails. — v. intr. 1. To prove deficient or lacking; perform ineffectively or inadequately. 2. To be unsuccessful: a valiant attempt that failed. 3. To receive an academic grade below the acceptable minimum. 4. a. To prove insufficient in quantity or duration; give out: The water supply failed during the drought. b. To fall short, as in what is expected of one: failed in her obligations to the family. 5. To decline, as in strength or effectiveness: The patient's heart failed. 6. To cease functioning properly: The engine failed. 7. To become bankrupt or insolvent: Our family business failed in 1929. — v. tr. 1. To disappoint or prove undependable to: Our sentries failed us. 2. To abandon; forsake: His strength failed him. 3. To omit to perform (an expected duty, for example): “We must... hold... those horrors up to the light of justice. Otherwise we would fail our inescapable obligation to the victims of Nazism: to remember” (Anthony Lewis). 4. To leave (something) undone; neglect: failed to wash the dishes.

5. a. To receive an academic grade below the acceptable minimum in (a course, for example): failed algebra twice. b. To give such a grade of failure to (a student): failed me in algebra. — n. a. Failure to deliver securities to a purchaser within a specified time. b. Failure to receive the proceeds of a transaction, as in the sale of stock or securities, by a specified date. — idiom. without fail. With no chance of failure: Be here at noon without fail. [Middle English failen, from Old French faillir, from Vulgar Latin fallire*, variant of Latin fallere, to deceive.]

failed (fāld) adj. Having undergone failure: new economic policies intended to replace the failed ones of a past administration.

fail-ing (fā'līng) n. 1. The act of a person or thing that fails; a failure. 2. A minor fault. See Synonyms at fault. — adj. Undergoing failure: failing health; failing kidneys; a failing business. — prep. In the absence of; without: Failing a rainstorm, the game will be played this afternoon.

faile (fil) n. A slightly ribbed, woven fabric of silk, cotton, or rayon. [French, from Old North French, cloth head-covering worn by women in Flanders, possibly from Middle Dutch falie, scarf.]

fail-safe (fāl'sāf') adj. 1. Capable of compensating automatically and safely for a failure, as of a mechanism or power source. 2. Acting to discontinue a military attack on the occurrence of any of a variety of predetermined conditions.

3. Guaranteed not to fail: “There is no fail-safe mechanism guaranteed either to contain or to restore presidential authority” (Arthur M. Schlesinger, Jr.). — n. A fail-safe mechanism. — v. intr. fail-safed, fail-saf-ing, fail-safes. To compensate automatically for failure.

fail-soft (fāl'sōft', -sōft') adj. Capable of operating at a reduced level of efficiency after the failure of a component or power source. Used of electronic equipment.

fail-ure (fāl'yər) n. 1. The condition or fact of not achieving the desired end or ends: the failure of an experiment. 2. One that fails: a failure at one's career.

3. The condition or fact of being insufficient or falling short: a crop failure. 4. A cessation of proper functioning or performance: a power failure.

5. Nonperformance of what is requested or expected; omission: failure to report a change of address. 6. The act or fact of failing to pass a course, a test, or an assignment. 7. A decline in strength or effectiveness. 8. The act or fact of becoming bankrupt or insolvent. [Alteration of failer, default, from Anglo-Norman, from Old French faillir, to fail. See FAIL.]

fain (fān) adv. 1. Happily; gladly: “I would fain improve every opportunity to wonder and worship, as a sunflower welcomes the light” (Henry David Thoreau). 2. Archaic. Preferably; rather. — adj. Archaic. 1. Ready; willing. 2. Pleased; happy. 3. Obligated or required. [Middle English, from Old English fægen, joyful, glad.]

fai-né-ant (fā'nā-än') adj. Given to doing nothing; idle. See Synonyms at lazy. — n. An irresponsible idler; a sluggard. [French, alteration (influenced by fait néant, does nothing), of Old French faignant, idler, from present participle of faindre, feindre, to feign. See FEIGN.]

faint (fānt) adj. faint-er, faint-est. 1. Lacking strength or vigor; feeble. 2. Lacking conviction, boldness, or courage; timid. 3. a. Lacking brightness: a faint light in the gloom. b. Lacking clarity or distinctness: a faint recollection. 4. Likely to fall into a faint; dizzy and weak: felt faint for a moment. — n. An abrupt, usually brief loss of consciousness, generally associated with failure of normal blood circulation. See Synonyms at blackout. — v. intr. faint-ed, faint-ing, faints. 1. To fall into a usually brief state of unconsciousness. 2. Archaic. To weaken in purpose or spirit. [Middle English, deceitful, cowardly, from Old French, past participle of feindre, to feign. See FEIGN.] — faint'er n. — faint'ly adv. — faint'ness n.

faint-heart-ed (fānt'här'tid) adj. Deficient in conviction or courage; timid. — faint'-heart-ed-ly adv. — faint'-heart-ed-ness n.

fair¹ (fâr) adj. fair-er, fair-est. 1. Of pleasing appearance, especially because of a pure or fresh quality; comely. 2. a. Light in color, especially blond: fair hair. b. Of light complexion: fair skin. 3. Free of clouds or storms; clear and sunny: fair skies. 4. Free of blemishes or stains; clean and pure: one's fair name. 5. Promising; likely: We're in a fair way to succeed. 6. a. Having or exhibiting a disposition that is free of favoritism or bias; impartial: a fair mediator. b. Just to all parties; equitable: a compromise that is fair to both factions. 7. Being in accordance with relative merit or significance: She wanted to receive her fair share of the proceeds. 8. Consistent with rules, logic, or ethics: a fair tactic. 9. Moderately good; mildly satisfying: gave only a fair performance of the sonata.

10. Superficially true or appealing; specious: Don't trust his fair promises.

11. Lawful to hunt or attack: fair game. 12. Archaic. Free of all obstacles. — adv. 1. In a proper or legal manner: playing fair. 2. Directly; straight: a blow caught fair in the stomach. — v. tr. faired, fair-ing, fairs. To join (pieces) so as to be smooth, even, or regular: faired the aircraft's wing into the fuselage. — n. 1. Archaic. A beautiful or beloved woman. 2. Obsolete. Loveliness; beauty.

— phrasal verb. fair off (or fair up). Chiefly Southern U.S. To become clear. Used of weather. — idioms. fair and square. Just and honest. for fair. To the greatest or fullest extent possible: Our team was beaten for fair in that tourna- ment. no fair. Something contrary to the rules: That was no fair. [Middle English, from Old English fæger, lovely, pleasant.] —fair/ness n.

SYNONYMS: fair, just, equitable, impartial, unprejudiced, unbiased, objective, dispassionate. These adjectives mean free from favoritism, self-interest, or bias in judgment. Fair is the most general: a fair referee; a fair deal; a fair fight; on a fair footing. Just stresses conformity with what is legally or ethically right or proper: a kind and just man; “a just and lasting peace” (Abraham Lincoln). Equitable also implies justice, but justice dictated by reason, conscience, and a natural sense of what is fair to all concerned: an equitable distribution of gifts among the children. Impartial emphasizes lack of favoritism: “the cold neutrality of an impartial judge” (Edmund Burke). Unprejudiced means without favorable or unfavorable preconceived opinions or judgments: an unprejudiced evaluation of the arguments for and against the proposal. Unbiased implies absence of the preference or inclination inhibiting impartiality: gave an unbiased account of her family problems. Objective implies detachment that permits observation and judgment without undue reference to one’s personal feelings or thoughts: Try to be objective as you listen to the testimony. Dispassionate means free from or unaffected by strong personal emotions: A journalist should be a dispassionate reporter of fact. See also Synonyms at average beautiful REGIONAL NOTE: American folk speech puts Standard English to shame in its wealth of words for describing weather conditions. When the weather goes from fair to cloudy, New Englanders say that it’s “breedin’ up a storm” (Maine informant in the Linguistic Atlas of New England). If the weather is clear, however, a New Englander might call it open. Southern fair off and fair up, meaning “to become clear,” were originally Northeastern terms and were brought to the South as settlement expanded southward and westward. They are now “regionalized to the South,” according to Craig M. Carver, author of American Regional Dialects. These phrases may be the origin of modern and less regional coinings, such as mild up, used on a television weather forecast: “The Southwest is beginning to mild up just a tad.”

WORD HISTORY: The history of the word fair illustrates how words can weaken in meaning over time. In Old English the ancestor of fair, fæger, had senses such as “lovely, beautiful, pleasant, agreeable,” a far cry from our modern sense “mildly good or satisfying.” The Old English senses passed into Middle English, where the word fair started to take a slight turn in the direction already alluded to. Fair could mean “highly to be approved of, splendid, good,” but it could also be used ironically, as in Chaucer’s observation after a horse threw the Cook on the pilgrimage to Canterbury: “that was a fair feat of horsemanship by the Cook.” This ironic use was probably not responsible for the semantic weakening of fair, but it shows how a positive word can have its meaning reversed. The weakening of fair was most likely caused by “the determined optimism which led to the use of fair... rather than direct expression of discontent,” in the words of George H. McKnight. One might add as another cause the desire to avoid hurting other people’s feelings.

fair² (fâr) n. 1. A gathering held at a specified time and place for the buying and selling of goods; a market. 2. An exhibition, as of farm products or manufactured goods, usually accompanied by various competitions and entertainments: a state fair. 3. An exhibition intended to inform people about a product or business opportunity: a computer fair; a job fair. 4. An event, usually for the benefit of a charity or public institution, including entertainment and the sale of goods; a bazaar: a church fair. [Middle English faire, from Old French feire, from Late Latin fēria, sing. of Latin fēriae, holidays. See dhēs- in Appendix.]

fair ball (fâr bôl) n. Baseball. A batted ball that first strikes the ground or leaves the playing field beyond first or third base within the foul lines or that is within the foul lines as it bounces past first or third base or that comes to rest or is touched by a fielder in front of first or third base within the foul lines.

Fair-banks (fâr’bängks’) A city of central Alaska north-northeast of Anchorage. It was founded in 1902 as a gold-mining camp. Population, 30,843.

Fair-banks (fâr’bängks’), Charles Warren. 1852-1918. Vice President of the United States (1905-1909) under Theodore Roosevelt.

Fair-banks (fâr’bängks’), Douglas. 1883-1939. American actor known for his swashbuckling roles in silent films such as Robin Hood (1922). His son Douglas, Jr. (born 1909), played similar roles in motion pictures such as Gunga Din (1939).

Fair-born (fâr’bôrn’) A city of southwest Ohio northeast of Dayton. It was formed in 1950 by the consolidation of two former villages. Population, 31,300.

fair catch (fâr käch) n. Football. A catch of a punt on the fly by a defensive player who has signaled that he or she will not run with the ball and who therefore may not be tackled.

Fair-fax (fâr’fäks’) An independent city of northeast Virginia, a residential suburb of Washington, D.C. Population, 19,622.

Fair-fax¹ (fâr’fäks’), Thomas Third Baron Fairfax of Cameron. 1612-1671. English general who commanded (1642-1650) Parliamentary forces during the English Civil War.

Fair-fax² (fâr’fäks’), Thomas Sixth Baron Fairfax. 1692-1782. British colonist in America who remained a steadfast Loyalist throughout the Revolutionary War.

Fair-field (fâr’fēld’) 1. A city of southeast Australia, a suburb of Sydney. Population, 143,500. 2. A city of western California north-northeast of Oakland. It was founded in 1859. Population, 77,211. 3. A town of southwest Connecticut on Long Island Sound southwest of Bridgeport. Settled in 1639, it is mainly residential and has varied light industries. Population, 53,418. 4. A city of southwest Ohio north of Cincinnati. It is an industrial center. Population, 39,729.

fair-ground (fâr'ground') n. Open land where fairs or exhibitions are held.

fair-haired (fâr'hârd') adj. 1. Having blond hair: a fair-haired toddler.

2. Favorite: "master linguist, Yale dropout and fair-haired boy of the OSS" (Edward Klein).

Fair-ha-ven (fâr'hâ'vən) A town of southeast Massachusetts on Buzzards Bay opposite New Bedford. It was formerly a whaling port. Population, 16,132.

fair-ing¹ (fâr'ing) n. An auxiliary structure or the external surface of a vehicle, such as an aircraft, that serves to reduce drag.

fair-ing² (fâr'ing) n. Chiefly British. A gift, especially one bought or given at a fair.

fair-ish (fâr'ish) adj. Of moderately large size or good quality. —fair-ish-ly adv.

Fair Isle (fâr il) A small island between the Orkney Islands and the Shetland Islands of northern Scotland. Fair Isle is famous for its knitted woolen garments with distinctive colored patterns.

Fair Lawn (fâr lôn) A borough of northeast New Jersey across the Passaic River from Paterson. Population, 30,548.

fair-lead (fâr'lêd') also fair-lead-er (-lê'dər) n. Nautical. A device such as a ring or block of wood with a hole in it through which rigging is passed to hold it in place or prevent it from snagging or chafing.

fair-ly (fâr'lē) adv. 1. a. In a fair or just manner; equitably. b. Legitimately; suitably. 2. Clearly; distinctly. 3. Actually; fully: The walls fairly shook with their bellowing. 4. a. Moderately; rather: a fairly good dinner. b. To a reasonable degree: I was fairly sure that I would go to the party. 5. Obsolete. a. Gently. b. Courteously.

fair-mar-ket value (fâr'mär'kît vâl'yōō) n. The price, as of a commodity or service, at which both buyers and sellers agree to do business.

fair-mind-ed (fâr'mîn'dîd) adj. Just and impartial; not prejudiced. —fair'-mind'ed-ly adv. —fair'-mind'ed-ness n.

Fair-mont (fâr'mönt') A city of northern West Virginia near the Pennsylvania border northeast of Clarksburg. It was settled in 1793 around Prickett's Fort (built 1774). Population, 20,210.

fairness doctrine (fâr'nîs dôk'trîn) n. A basic tenet of the licensed broadcasting industry in the United States that ensures reasonable opportunity for the airing of opposing viewpoints on controversial issues.

Fair Oaks (fâr ôks) 1. An unincorporated community of central California east-northeast of Sacramento. It is in a citrus-growing region. Population, 26,867.

2. A locality just east of Richmond, Virginia, where Union troops defeated the Confederates at the Battle of Seven Pines (May 31-June 1, 1862).

fair play (fâr plā) n. Conformity to established rules.

fair shake (fâr shāk) n. Informal. A fair chance, as at achieving success.

fair-spo-ken (fâr'spō'kən) adj. Civil, courteous, and gentle in speech.

fair trade (fâr trād) n. Trade that conforms to a fair-trade agreement.

fair-trade (fâr'trād') v. tr. fair·trad·ed, fair·trad·ing, fair·trades. To sell (a commodity) at a price consistent with a fair-trade agreement.

fair-trade agreement (fâr'trād' ə-grē'mənt) n. A commercial agreement under which distributors sell products of a given class at no less than a minimum price set by the manufacturer.

Fair-view Park (fâr'vyōō' pārk) A city of northeast Ohio, a residential suburb of Cleveland. Population, 18,028.

fair-wa-ter (fâr'wô'tər, -wöt'ər) n. Nautical. 1. A device used to fair the lines of an underwater fitting. 2. The bridge and conning tower on a submarine.

fair-way (fâr'wā') n. 1. A stretch of ground free of obstacles to movement. 2. Sports. The part of a golf course covered with short grass and extending from the tee to the putting green. 3. Nautical. a. A navigable deep-water channel in a river or harbor or along a coastline. b. The usual course taken by vessels through a harbor or coastal waters.

fair-weath-er (fâr'wēth'ər) adj. 1. Suitable or used only during fair weather: fair-weather hiking gear. 2. Present and dependable only in good times: fair-weather friends.

Fair-weath-er (fâr'wēth'ər), Mount. A peak, 4,666.5 m (15,300 ft) high, on the border between southeast Alaska and western British Columbia, Canada.

fair-y (fâr'ē) n. pl. fair-ies. 1. A tiny imaginary being in human form, depicted as clever, mischievous, and possessing magical powers. 2. Offensive Slang. Used as a disparaging term for a gay or homosexual man. [Middle English fairie, fairy-land, enchanted being, from Old French faerie, from fae, fairy, from Vulgar Latin Fāta, goddess of fate, from Latin fātum, fate. See FATE.]

fairy godmother (fâr'ē göd'mūth'ər) n. A generous benefactor.

fair-y-land (fâr'ē-länd') n. 1. The imaginary land of fairies. 2. A charming, enchanting place.

fairy lily (fâr'ē līl'ē) n. See zephyr lily.

fairy primrose (fâr'ē pŕim'rōz') n. A Chinese ornamental (Primula mal-coides) grown for its large, rose to pink flowers that are grouped in many-flowered umbels.

fairy ring (fâr'ē rīng) n. A circle of mushrooms in a grassy area, marking the periphery of perennial underground mycelial growth. [From the belief that it is a dancing place for fairies.]

fairy shrimp (fâr'ē shrĭmp) n. Any of various transparent freshwater crustaceans of the order Anostraca that lack a carapace and characteristically swim upside-down.

fairy tale (fâr'ē tāl) n. 1. A fanciful tale of legendary deeds and creatures, usually intended for children. 2. A fictitious, highly fanciful story or explanation.

fair-y-tale (fâr'ē-tāl') adj. 1. Of or relating to a fairy tale. 2. Likened to a fairy tale: a fairy-tale romance that preceded the royal wedding.

Fai-sal also Fei-sal or Fei-sul (fī'səl), Full name Faisal ibn Abdel Aziz al-Saud. 1906?-1975. King of Saudi Arabia (1964-1975) who used oil revenue to increase industrialization and improve educational and medical facilities. He was assassinated by his nephew.

Fai-sal I also Feisal I or Feisul I (fī'səl), 1885-1933. King of Iraq (1921-1933) who negotiated with Great Britain for the complete independence of Iraq (1930).

Fai-sal II also Feisal II or Feisul II (fī'səl), 1935-1958. King of Iraq (1939-1958) who sided with Egypt during the Suez Canal crisis (1956) and was assassinated in a coup d'état.

Fai-sa-la-bad (fī'sä-lə-bäd') Formerly Ly-all-pur (lī'əl-pōor'). A city of northeast Pakistan west of Lahore. Founded in 1892, it is a cloth and grain market. Population, 1,092,000.

fait ac-com-pli (fā'tä-kōN-plē', fēt'ä-) n. pl. faits ac-com-plis (fā'tä-kōN-plē', -plēz', fēt'ä-). An accomplished, presumably irreversible deed or fact.

[French : fait, fact + accompli, accomplished.]

faith (fāth) n. 1. Confident belief in the truth, value, or trustworthiness of a person, an idea, or a thing. 2. Belief that does not rest on logical proof or material evidence. See Synonyms at belief. See Synonyms at trust. 3. Loyalty to a person or thing; allegiance: keeping faith with one's supporters. 4. Often Faith. Theology. The theological virtue defined as secure belief in God and a trusting acceptance of God's will. 5. The body of dogma of a religion: the Muslim faith. 6. A set of principles or beliefs. —idiom. in faith. Indeed; truly. [Middle English, from Anglo-Norman fed, from Latin fidēs. See bheidh- in Appendix.]

faith-ful (fāth'fəl) adj. 1. Adhering firmly and devotedly, as to a person, a cause, or an idea; loyal. 2. Having or full of faith. 3. Worthy of trust or belief; reliable. 4. Consistent with truth or actuality: a faithful reproduction of the portrait. — n. pl. faithful or faith-fuls. 1. The practicing members of a religious faith, especially of Christianity or Islam: a pilgrimage to Mecca made by the faithful. 2. A steadfast adherent of a faith or cause: a meeting of the party faithful.

—faith'ful-ly adv. —faith'ful-ness n.

SYNONYMS: faithful, loyal, true, constant, fast, steadfast, staunch. These adjectives mean adhering firmly and devotedly to someone or something, such as a person, cause, or duty, that elicits or demands one's fidelity. Faithful and loyal both suggest undeviating attachment; the words are often interchangeable, though loyal is the term more often applied to political allegiance: a faithful employee; gave faithful service; a loyal companion; a loyal citizen. True implies steady-ness, sincerity, and reliability: “I would be true, for there are those who trust me” (Howard Arnold Walter). Constant stresses uniformity and invariability: “But I am constant as the northern star” (Shakespeare). Fast suggests loyalty that is not easily deflected: fast friends. Steadfast strongly implies fixed, unswerving loyalty: a steadfast ally. Staunch even more strongly suggests unshakable attachment or allegiance: “He lived and died a staunch loyalist” (Harriet Beecher Stowe).

faith healer (fāth hē'lər) n. One who treats disease with prayer. — faith healing n.

faith-less (fāth'lis) adj. 1. Not true to duty or obligation; disloyal. 2. Having no religious faith. 3. Unworthy of faith or trust; unreliable. — faith/less-ly adv. — faith/less-ness n.

SYNONYMS: faithless, unfaithful, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, perfidious, recreant. These adjectives mean not true to duty or obligation. Faithless and unfaithful are approximately interchangeable and imply failure to adhere to promises, obligations, or allegiances: has never been faithless to her ideals; an unfaithful spouse. False emphasizes a tendency to be faithless or deceitful: a false friend. “To thine own self be true,/And it must follow, as the night the day,/Thou canst not then be false to any man” (Shakespeare). One who is disloyal is false to persons or things that are due allegiance: Disloyal staff members exposed the senator's indiscretions to the press. Traitorous most commonly refers to disloyalty to a government or nation: a lying, traitorous insurrectionist. Treacherous suggests a propensity for betraying trust or faith: “She gave the treacherous impulse time to subside” (Henry James). Perfidious applies to what is abominably treacherous; it suggests vileness of behavior and often deceitfulness: the victim of a perfidious murder. Recreant implies a reprehensible, often cowardly disloyalty: “while [Holland's] sister provinces had proved recreant to [William of Orange]” (John Lothrop Motley).

fai-tour (fā'tər) n. Archaic. An impostor; a deceiver. [Middle English, from Anglo-Norman, from Latin factor, maker. See FACTOR.]

fa-ji-ta (fə-hē'tə, fā-hē'tā) n. pl. fa-ji-tas. An appetizer consisting of marinated skirt steak or other meat, such as chicken, fish, or duck, that is grilled over an open fire and then placed in a tortilla. [American Spanish, diminutive of faja, band, strip, from Latin fascia, band, bandage.]

fake¹ (fāk) adj. Having a false or misleading appearance; fraudulent. — n. 1. One that is not authentic or genuine; a sham. 2. Sports. A brief feint or aborted change of direction intended to mislead one's opponent or the opposing team. — v. faked, fak-ing, fakes. — v. tr. 1. To contrive and present as genuine; counterfeit. 2. To simulate; feign. See Synonyms at pretend.

3. Music. To improvise (a passage). 4. Sports. To deceive (an opponent) with a fake. — v. intr. 1. To engage in feigning, simulation, or other deceptive activity.

2. Sports. To perform a fake. [Origin unknown.]

fake² (fāk) n. One loop or winding of a coiled rope or cable. — v. tr. faked, fak-ing, fakes. To coil (a rope or cable). [Middle English faken, to coil a rope.]

fak-er (fā'kər) n. One who fakes or produces fakes. See Synonyms at impos-tor. — fak'er-y (-kə-rē) n.

fa-kir (fə-kîr', fä-, fä-) n. 1. A Muslim religious mendicant. 2. A Hindu ascetic or religious mendicant, especially one who performs feats of magic or endurance. [Arabic faqîr, from faqura, to be poor.]

fa-la-fel or fe-la-fel (fə-lä'fəl) n. 1. Ground spiced chickpeas and fava beans shaped into balls and fried. 2. A sandwich filled with such a mixture. [Arabic falāfil, pl. of filfil, pepper, probably from Sanskrit pippalī, from pippalam, peppercorn.]

Fa-lan-gist (fə-län'gîst, fā'län'-) n. A member of a fascist organization constituting the official ruling party of Spain after 1939. [Spanish Falangista, from Falange (Española), (Spanish) Phalanx, from Latin phalanx, phalang-. See PHALANX.]

Fa-la-sha (fə-lä'shə, fä-) n. pl. Falasha or Fa-la-shas. Offensive. Used as a disparaging term for an Ethiopian Jew. [Amharic fälasha, from fälasi, stranger.]

fal-cate (fāl'kāt') also fal-cat-ed (-kā'tîd) adj. Curved and tapering to a point; sickle-shaped. [Latin falcātus, from falx, falc-, sickle.]

fal-ces (fāl'sēz', fôl'-) n. Plural of falx.

fal-chion (fôl'chən) n. 1. A short, broad sword with a convex cutting edge and a sharp point, used in medieval times. 2. Archaic. A sword. [Middle English fau-choun, from Old French fauchon, from Vulgar Latin falcio*, falcioñ-, from Latin falx, falc-, sickle.]

fal-ci-form (fāl'sə-fôrm') adj. Curved or sickle-shaped; falcate. [Latin falx, falc-, sickle + -FORM.]

fal-con (fāl'kən, fôl'-, fô'kən) n. 1. a. Any of various birds of prey of the family Falconidae and especially of the genus Falco, having a short, curved beak and long, pointed, powerful wings adapted for swift flight. b. Any of several species of these birds or related birds such as hawks, trained to hunt small game. c. A female bird of this type used in falconry. 2. A small cannon in use from the 15th to the 17th century. [Middle English, from Old French faucon, falcun, from Late Latin falcō, falcōn-. See pel¹ in Appendix.]

fal-con-er (fāl'kə-nər, fôl'-, fô'kə-) n. 1. One that breeds and trains falcons. 2. One that hunts with falcons.

fal-con-et (fāl'kə-nět', fôl'-, fô'kə-) n. 1. A small or young falcon. 2. Any of several small falcons, especially of the genus Microhierax native to tropical Asia.

fal·con·gen·tle (fāl'kən-jěn'tl, fôl'-, fô'kən-) n. A female falcon, especially a peregrine falcon. [Middle English faucon gentil, from Old French faucon gentil, noble falcon.]

fal·con·ry (fāl'kən-rē, fôl'-, fô'kən-) n. Sports. 1. Hunting of game with falcons. 2. The art of training falcons for hunting. [Alteration of French fauconnerie, from Old French, from faucon, falcon. See FALCON.]

fal·de·ral (fāl'də-räl') n. Variant of folderol.

fald·stool (fôld'stōōl') n. 1. A folding or small desk stool at which worshipers kneel to pray, especially one on which the British sovereign kneels at the time of coronation. 2. A folding chair or stool, especially one used by a bishop when not occupying the throne or when presiding away from the cathedral. 3. A desk at which the litany is recited. [Partial translation of Medieval Latin faldistolium, folding stool, of Germanic origin. See pel-² in Appendix.]

Fa·lis·can (fə-līs'kən) n. 1. A member of an ancient Italic people of southern Etruria. 2. The language of this people, closely related to Latin and known from place and personal names and from inscriptions. — adj. Of or relating to the Faliscans or their language or culture. [From Latin Faliscus, from Falerii, a city of ancient Etruria.]

Fal·kirk (fôl'kûrk') A burgh of central Scotland west of Edinburgh. At the Battle of Falkirk (1298), said to be the first battle in which the longbow proved decisive, the troops of Edward I defeated the Scots. Population, 37,800.

Falk·land Islands (fôk'lænd ī'lændz, fôlk'-) A group of islands in the southern Atlantic Ocean east of the Strait of Magellan. Controlled by Great Britain since the 1830's, the islands are also claimed by Argentina and were occupied briefly by Argentinian troops in 1982.

Falk·ner (fôk'nər), William. See William Faulkner.

fall (fôl) v. fell (fěll), fall·en (fô'lən), fall·ing, falls. — v. intr. 1. To drop or come down freely under the influence of gravity. 2. To drop oneself to a lower or less erect position: I fell back in my chair. The pilgrims fell to their knees. 3. a. To lose an upright or erect position suddenly. b. To drop wounded or dead, especially in battle. 4. To go or come as if by falling: All grief fell from our hearts. Night fell quickly. 5. To come to rest; settle: The light fell on my book. 6. To hang down: The child's hair fell in ringlets. 7. To be cast down: Her eyes fell. 8. To assume an expression of consternation or disappointment: His face fell when he heard the report. 9. To undergo conquest or capture, especially as the result of an armed attack: The city fell after a long siege. 10. a. To experience defeat or ruin: After 300 years the dynasty fell. b. To lose office: The disgraced prime minister fell from power. 11. To slope downward: The rolling hills fall gently toward the coast. 12. a. To lessen in amount or degree: The air pressure is falling. b. To decline in financial value: Last year, stock prices fell sharply. c. To lose weight. 13. To diminish in pitch or volume: My friend's voice fell to a whisper. 14. a. To give in to temptation; sin. b. To lose one's chastity. 15. To pass into a particular state, condition, or situation: fell silent; fall in love. 16. To occur at a specified time: New Year's Day falls on a Tuesday this year. 17. To occur at a specified place: The stress falls on the last syllable. 18. To come, as by chance. 19. a. To be given by assignment or distribution: The greatest task fell to me. b. To be given by right or inheritance. 20. To be included within the range or scope of something: The specimens fall into three categories. 21. To come into contact; strike: My gaze fell on a small book in the corner. 22. To come out; issue: Insincere compliments fell from their lips. 23. To begin vigorously: fell to work immediately. 24. To be born. Used chiefly of lambs. — v. tr. To cut down (a tree); fell. — n. 1. The act or an instance of falling. 2. A sudden drop from a relatively erect to a less erect position. 3. Something that has fallen: a fall of hail. 4. a. An amount that has fallen: a fall of two inches of rain. b. The distance that something falls: The victim suffered a fall of three stories to the ground. 5. Autumn. 6. falls. (used with a sing. or pl. verb). A waterfall. 7. A downward movement or slope. 8. Any of several pendent articles of dress, especially: a. A veil hung from a woman's hat and down her back. b. An ornamental cascade of lace or trimming attached to a dress, usually at the collar. c. A woman's hairpiece with long, free-hanging hair. 9. a. An overthrow; a collapse: the fall of a government. b. Armed capture of a place under siege: the fall of Dien Bien Phu. 10. A reduction in value, amount, or degree. 11. A marked, often sudden, decline in status, rank, or importance: "turned them in, set them up for prosecution; positioned them, as it were, for the fall" (Joan Didion). 12. a. A moral lapse. b. A loss of chastity. 13. Often Fall. Theology. The loss of innocence and grace resulting from Adam's eating the forbidden fruit in the Garden of Eden. 14. Sports. a. The act of throwing or forcing a wrestling opponent down on his or her back. Also called pin. b. Any of various wrestling maneuvers so used. 15. Nautical. a. A break or rise in the level of a deck. b. falls. The apparatus used to hoist and transfer cargo or lifeboats. 16. The end of a cable, rope, or chain that is pulled by the power source in hoisting. 17. a. The birth of an animal, especially a lamb. b. All the animals born at one birth; a litter. 18. A family of woodcock in flight. See Synonyms at flock¹. 19. Botany. The outer series of perianth in the irises and related plants. —phrasal verbs. fall apart. To break down; collapse: The rickety chair fell apart. He fell apart after years as a POW. fall away. 2. To withdraw one's friendship and support. 3. To become gradually diminished in size. 4. To drift off an established course. fall back. 5. To give ground; retreat. 6. To recede: The waves fell back. fall behind. 7. To fail to keep up a pace; lag behind. 8. To be financially in arrears. fall down. To fail to meet expectations; lag in performance: fell down on the job. fall for. 10. To feel love for. 11. To be deceived or swindled by: fell for the con artist's scheme and lost $200,000. fall in. 12. To take one's place in a military formation. 13. To sink inward; cave in: The roof of the old barn fell in. fall off. 14. To become less; decrease: Stock prices have fallen off. The number of staff meetings fell off after a few months. 15. Nautical. To change course to leeward. fall on (or fall upon). 16. To attack suddenly and viciously: Snipers and irregulars fell on the hapless patrol. 17. To meet with; encounter: a stockbroker who fell on hard times. fall out. 18. a. To leave a barracks, for example, in order to take one's place in a military formation. b. To leave a military formation. 19. To quarrel: The siblings fell out over their inheritance. 20. To happen; occur. 21. a. To leave a barracks, for example, in order to take one's place in a military formation. b. To leave a military formation. fall through. To fail; miscarry: Our plans fell through at the last minute. fall to. To begin an activity energetically: "The press fell to with a will" (Russell Baker). —idioms. fall back on (or fall back upon). 1. To rely on: fall back on old friends in time of need. 2. To resort to: I had to fall back on my savings when I was unemployed. fall between (the) two stools. To fail because of an inability to reconcile or choose between two courses of action. fall flat. 4. To fail miserably when attempting to achieve a result. 5. To have no effect: The jokes fell flat. fall foul (or fall afoul). 6. Nautical. To collide. Used of vessels. 7. To clash: fell foul of the law. fall from grace. To experience a major reduction in status or prestige. fall into line. To adhere to established rules or predetermined courses of action. fall in with. 10. To agree with or be in harmony with: Their views fall in with ours. 11. To associate or begin to associate with: fell in with the wrong crowd. fall on deaf ears. To go unheeded; be ignored completely: "Moscow's own familiar charges... will also fall on deaf ears" (Foreign Affairs). fall over backward (or fall over backwards). To overexert oneself to do or accomplish something: We fell over backward to complete the project on time. fall over (oneself). To display inordinate, typically effusive, enthusiasm: fell over themselves to impress the general's wife. fall prey to. To be put into such a vulnerable position as to be at risk of harm, destruction, or invasion: a person who fell prey to swindlers; did not want the country to fall prey to terrorists. fall short. 16. To fail to attain a specified amount, level, or degree: an athlete whose skill fell far short of expectations. 17. To prove inadequate: Our supplies of sugar and rice fell short. fall through the cracks. To pass unnoticed, neglected, or unchecked: "Much of the wisdom... seems to have fallen through the cracks, and only in the last third of the book do the central characters find their way out of its swampy narrative" (Boston Globe). [Middle English fallen, from Old English feallan.]

Fall (fôl), Albert Bacon. 1861-1944. American politician who as U.S. secretary of the interior (1921-1923) unlawfully transferred ownership of government land to private businessmen in the Teapot Dome scandal.

fal·la·cious (fə-lā'shəs) adj. 1. Containing or based on a fallacy: a fallacious assumption. 2. Tending to mislead; deceptive: fallacious testimony. —fal·la·cious·ly adv.

fal·la·cy (fāl'ə-sē) n. pl. fal·la·cies. 1. A false notion. 2. A statement or an argument based on a false or an invalid inference. 3. Incorrectness of reasoning or belief; erroneousness. 4. The quality of being deceptive. [Alteration of Middle English fallace, from Old French, from Latin fallācia, deceit, from fallāx, fallāc-, deceitful, from fallere, to deceive.]

fal·lal (fă-lăl', făl'ăl') n. A showy article of dress. [Origin unknown.]
—fal·lal'er·y n.

fall·back (fôl'băk') n. 1. a. Something to which one can resort or retreat. b. A retreat. 2. Computer Science. A mechanism for carrying forth programmed instructions despite malfunction or failure of the primary device. 3. Something that falls back: the fallback of a huge explosion. — adj. Of, relating to, or constituting a resort or place of retreat: a fallback proposal; a fallback position behind our own lines.

fall·board (fôl'bôrd', -bôrd') n. Music. The hinged cover protecting the keyboard of a piano.

fall·en (fô'lən) v. Past participle of fall.

fall·fish (fôl'fish') n. pl. fallfish or fall·fish·es. A small, silvery freshwater fish (Semotilus corporalis) of streams and rivers in eastern North America.

fall guy (fôl gī) n. Slang. 1. A scapegoat. 2. A gullible victim; a dupe.

fal·li·ble (făl'ə-bəl) adj. 1. Capable of making an error: Human beings are only fallible. 2. Tending or likely to be erroneous: fallible hypotheses. [Middle English, from Medieval Latin fallibilis, from Latin fallere, to deceive.]

—fal'li·bil'i·ty, fal'li·ble·ness n. —fal'li·bly adv.

Fal·lières (făl-yěr'), (Clément) Armand. 1841-1931. French politician and president (1906-1913) of the Third Republic.

fall·ing action (fô'lĩng äk'shən) n. The events of a dramatic or narrative plot following the climax.

fall·ing·out (fô'lĩng-out') n. pl. fall·ings·out or fall·ing·outs. A disagreement; a quarrel: a falling-out among family members.

falling rhythm (fô'lĩng rĩth'əm) n. A rhythmic pattern in which the stress regularly occurs on the first syllable of each foot, as in Jack and Jill went up the hill.

falling star (fô'lĩng stăr) n. See meteor.

fall line (fôl lĩn) n. 1. A line connecting the waterfalls of nearly parallel rivers that marks a drop in land level. 2. The natural line of descent, as for skiing, between two points on a slope.

fall·off (fôl'ôf', -ôf') n. A reduction or decrease: a falloff in car sales.

fal·lo·pi·an tube also Fal·lo·pi·an tube (fə-lō'pē-ən tōōb) n. Either of a pair of slender ducts through which ova pass from the ovaries to the uterus in the female reproductive system of human beings and higher mammals. [After Gabriele Fallopio (1523-1562), Italian anatomist.]

Fal·lot's tetralogy (fă-lōz' tĕ-trăl'ə-jē) n. Tetralogy of Fallot.

fall-out (fôl'out') n. 1. a. The slow descent of minute particles of debris in the atmosphere following an explosion, especially the descent of radioactive debris after a nuclear explosion. b. The particles that descend in this fashion. 2. An incidental result or side effect: "Other social trends also have psychiatric fallout, and the people who suffer can't afford treatment" (Martha Farnsworth Riche).

fallow (făl'ō) adj. 1. Plowed but left unseeded during a growing season: fallow farmland. 2. Characterized by inactivity: a fallow gold market. — n. 1. Land left unseeded during a growing season. 2. The act of plowing land and leaving it unseeded. 3. The condition or period of being unseeded. — v. tr. fal·lowed, fal·low-ing, fal·lows. 1. To plow (land) without seeding it afterward. 2. To plow and till (land), especially to eradicate or reduce weeds. [Middle English falow, from Old English fealh, fallow land.] — fal'low-ness n.

fallow deer (făl'ō dîr) n. A small Eurasian deer (Dama dama) having a yellowish-red coat spotted with white in summer and broad, flattened antlers in the male. [Obsolete fallow, reddish-yellow, from Middle English falow, falwe, from Old English fealu. See pel-¹ in Appendix.]

Fall River (fôl rîv'ər) A city of southeast Massachusetts on the Rhode Island border west-northwest of New Bedford. Formerly a thriving textile center, it now has various diversified industries. Lizzie Borden lived here. Population, 92,703.

Fal·mouth (făl'məth) A town of southeast Massachusetts on southwest Cape Cod. Once a whaling and shipbuilding center, it is now a popular summer resort and the site of Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution. Population, 27,960.

false (fôls) adj. fals-er, fals-est. 1. Contrary to fact or truth: false tales of bravery. 2. Deliberately untrue: delivered false testimony under oath. 3. Arising from mistaken ideas: false hopes of writing a successful novel. 4. Intentionally deceptive: a suitcase with a false bottom; false promises. 5. Not keeping faith; treacherous: a false friend. See Synonyms at faithless. 6. Not genuine or real: false teeth; false documents. 7. Erected temporarily, as for support during construction. 8. Resembling but not accurately or properly designated as such: a false thaw in January; the false dawn peculiar to the tropics. 9. Music. Of incorrect pitch. 10. Unwise; imprudent: Don't make a false move or I'll shoot. — adv. In a treacherous or faithless manner: play a person false. [Middle English fals, from Old French, from Latin falsus, from past participle of fallere, to deceive.] — false'ly adv. — false'ness n.

false alarm (fôls ə-lärm') n. 1. An emergency alarm, such as a fire alarm, that is set off unnecessarily. 2. A signal or warning that is groundless.

false arrest (fôls ə-rĕst') n. Law. Unlawful or unjustifiable arrest.

False Bay (fôls bā) An inlet of the Atlantic Ocean southwest of Cape Town, South Africa.

false fruit (fôls frōot) n. 1. See accessory fruit. 2. See pome.

false-heart·ed (fôls'hâr'tîd) adj. Of a deceitful nature; treacherous.

—false'-heart'ed-ness n.

false·hood (fôls'hôod') n. 1. An untrue statement; a lie. 2. The practice of lying. 3. Lack of conformity to truth or fact; inaccuracy.

false imprisonment (fôls ĩm-prĭz'ən-mənt) n. Law. Detention or imprisonment of a person contrary to the provisions of law.

false indigo (fôls ĩn'dĭ-gō') n. 1. A shrub (Amorpha fruticosa) of eastern North America, having compound leaves with numerous leaflets and long clusters of purplish flowers. 2. A plant (Baptisia australis) of the southeast United States, having compound leaves with three leaflets and deep blue or purplish flowers.

false ipecac (fôls ĩp'ĭ-kăk') n. A shrubby plant (Psychotria emetica) native to Central and South America, having small white flowers and strong-smelling roots that are the source of an inferior quality of ipecac.

false miterwort (fôls mĭ'tər-wŭrt') n. See foamflower.

false pretense (fôls prĕ'tĕns') n. Law. False representation of fact or circumstance, calculated to mislead.

false rib (fôls rĭb) n. Any of the lower ribs that do not unite directly with the sternum. The five lower pairs of ribs in human beings are false ribs.

false Sol·o·mon's seal (fôls sŏl'ə-mənz sĕl) n. Any of several plants of the genus Smilacina, native to North America and Asia and having a plumelike cluster of small greenish-white flowers with a persistent perianth. Also called Solomon's feather, Solomon's plume.

false spikenard (fôls spĭk'nărd') n. A perennial herb (Smilacina racemosa) native to eastern North America, having fleshy rhizomes, white flowers, and usually red fruits. Also called Solomon's zigzag.

fal·set·to (fôl-sĕt'ō) n. pl. fal·set·tos. Music. 1. A male singing voice marked by artificially produced tones in an upper register beyond the normal range especially of a tenor. 2. One that sings in this way. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: a falsetto voice; falsetto singers. [Italian, diminutive of falso, false, from Latin falsus. See FALSE.] —fal·set'to adv.

fals·ie (fôl'sĕ) n. Informal. Padding or a pad worn inside a brassiere to make the breasts appear larger. Often used in the plural.

fal·si·fy (fôl'sə-fĭ') v. fal·si·fied, fal·si·fy·ing, fal·si·fies. — v. tr. 1. To state untruthfully; misrepresent. 2. a. To make false by altering or adding to: falsify testimony. b. To counterfeit; forge: falsify a visa. 3. To declare or prove to be false. — v. intr. To make untrue statements; lie. [Middle English falsifien, from Old French falsifier, from Late Latin falsificāre: Latin falsus, false; see FALSE + Latin -ficāre, -fĭy.] —fal'si-fi-ca'tion (-fĭ-kă'shən) n. —fal'si-fi'er n.

fal·si·ty (fôl'sĭ-tĕ) n. pl. fal·si·ties. 1. The quality or condition of being false. 2. Something false; a lie.

Fal-staff-i-an (fôl-stăf'ē-ən) adj. Characterized by joviality and conviviality. [After Sir John Falstaff, a character in Henry IV, Parts I and II, and The Merry Wives of Windsor by William Shakespeare.]

Fal-ster (făl'stər, fôl'-) An island of southeast Denmark in the Baltic Sea off the southern tip of Sjaelland, with which it is connected by bridge.

falt-boat (fălt'böt', fôlt'-) n. Nautical. See foldboat. [Partial translation of German Faltboot, folding boat : falten, to fold (from Middle High German valten, from Old High German faldan); see pel⁻² in Appendix + Boot, boat.]

fal-ter (fôl'tər) v. intr. fal-tered, fal-ter-ing, fal-ters. 1. To be unsteady in purpose or action, as from loss of courage or confidence; waver. See Synonyms at hesitate. 2. To speak hesitatingly; stammer. 3. a. To move ineptly or haltingly; stumble. b. To operate or perform unsteadily or with a loss of effectiveness: The automobile engine faltered. — n. 1. Unsteadiness in speech or action. 2. A faltering sound. [Middle English falteren, to stagger, possibly from Old Norse fal-trask, to be puzzled, hesitate.] — fal'ter-er n. — fal'ter-ing-ly adv.

falx (făłks, fôłks) n. pl. fal-ces (făl'sēz', fôl'-). A sickle-shaped anatomical structure. [Latin, sickle.]

FAM abbr. Free and Accepted Masons.

fam. abbr. 1. Familiar. 2. Family.

Fa-ma-gu-sta (fä'mə-gōō'stə, făm'ə-) A city of eastern Cyprus on the Bay of Famagusta, an inlet of the Mediterranean Sea. Famagusta was a refugee center for Christians after Acre fell to the Saracens (1291). Population, 50,000.

fame (fām) n. 1. a. Great renown: a concert violinist of international fame. b. Public estimation; reputation: a politician of ill fame. 2. Archaic. Rumor. — v. tr. famed, fam-ing, fames. 1. To make renowned or famous. 2. Archaic. To report to be. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin fāma. See bhā⁻² in Appendix.]

famed (fāmd) adj. Having great fame; famous. See Synonyms at noted.

fa-mil-ial (fə-mil'yəl) adj. 1. Of or relating to a family. 2. Occurring or tending to occur among members of a family, usually by heredity: familial traits; familial disease.

fa-mil-iar (fə-mil'yər) adj. Abbr. fam. 1. Often encountered or seen; common. 2. Having fair knowledge; acquainted: was familiar with those roads. 3. Of established friendship; intimate: on familiar terms. 4. Natural and unstudied; informal: lectured in a familiar style. 5. Taking undue liberties; presumptuous: Students should not try to be familiar in their behavior toward an instructor.

6. Familial. 7. Domesticated; tame. Used of animals. — n. Abbr. fam. 1. A close friend or associate. 2. An attendant spirit, often taking animal form. 3. One who performs domestic service in the household of a high official. 4. A person who frequents a place. [Middle English, from Old French familier, from Latin familiāris, domestic, from familia, family. See FAMILY.] — fa-mil'iar-ly adv.

SYNONYMS: familiar, close, intimate, confidential, chummy. These adjectives describe relationships marked by intimacy. Familiar implies an easy, often informal association based on frequent contact or shared interests: a familiar song; a familiar guest. Close implies strong emotional attachment: close friendship; close to my brothers and sisters. Intimate suggests bonds of affection or understanding resulting from the sharing of interests, problems, and experiences: intimate friends; on an intimate footing. Confidential suggests closeness founded on trust: the prime minister's confidential secretary. Chummy implies the comfortable, casual sociability shared by close friends: The bartender was chummy with the regular customers. See also Synonyms at common fa·mil·iar·i·ty (fə-mil'yär'ĭ-tē, -mil'ē-är'-) n. pl. fa·mil·iar·i·ties.

1. Considerable acquaintance with.
2. Established friendship; intimacy.
3. a. An excessively familiar or informal act; an impropriety. b. A sexual advance.
4. The quality or condition of being familiar.

fa·mil·iar·ize (fə-mil'yə-rīz') v. tr. fa·mil·iar·ized, fa·mil·iar·iz·ing,

- fa·mil·iar·iz·es. 1. To make known, recognized, or familiar. 2. To make acquainted with. —fa·mil'iar·i·za'tion (-yər-ĭ-zā'shən) n. —fa·mil'iar·iz'er n.

fam·i·ly (fām'ə-lē, fām'lē) n. pl. fam·i·lies. Abbr. fam. 1. a. A fundamental social group in society typically consisting of a man and woman and their offspring. b. Two or more people who share goals and values, have long-term commitments to one another, and reside usually in the same dwelling place. 2. All the members of a household under one roof. 3. A group of persons sharing common ancestry. See Usage Note at collective noun. 4. Lineage, especially distinguished lineage. 5. A locally independent organized crime unit, as of the Cosa Nostra. 6. a. A group of like things; a class. b. A group of individuals derived from a common stock: the family of human beings. 7. Biology. A taxonomic category of related organisms ranking below an order and above a genus. A family usually consists of several genera. See Table at taxonomy. 8. Linguistics. A group of languages descended from the same parent language, such as the Indo-European language family. 9. Mathematics. A set of functions or surfaces that can be generated by varying the parameters of a general equation. 10. Chemistry. A group of elements with similar chemical properties. 11. Chemistry. A vertical column in the periodic table of elements. — adj. 1. Of or having to do with a family: family problems. 2. Being suitable for a family: family movies. [Middle English familie, from Latin familia, household, servants of a household, from famulus, servant.]

family Bible (fām'ə-lē bī'bəl) n. A Bible with special pages to record births, deaths, and marriages.

family circle (fām'ə-lē sūr'kəl) n. A section of theater seats that are less expensive than some others.

family doctor (fām'ə-lē dök'tər) n. 1. A physician who practices the specialty of family medicine. Also called family physician, family practitioner. 2. See general practitioner.

family hour (fām'ə-lē our) n. A period of time during the evening, typically between 6 and 8 P.M., during which television and radio programs suitable for family viewing and listening are broadcast. Also called family time family jewels (fām'ə-lē jōō'əlz) pl.n. 1. Jealously guarded assets or secrets. 2. Slang. The male genitals.

family man (fām'ə-lē măn) n. 1. A man having a wife and children. 2. A man devoted to his family.

family medicine (fām'ə-lē mēd'ī-sīn) n. The branch of medicine that deals with provision of comprehensive health care to people regardless of age or sex while placing particular emphasis on the family unit. Also called family practice family name (fām'ə-lē nām) n. See surname (n., sense 1).

family physician (fām'ə-lē fī-zīsh'ən) n. See family doctor (n., sense 1).

family plan·ning (fām'ə-lē plăn'īng) n. A program to regulate the number and spacing of children in a family through the practice of contraception or other methods of birth control.

family practice (fām'ə-lē prăk'tīs) n. See family medicine.

family practitioner (fām'ə-lē prăk-tīsh'ə-nər) n. See family doctor (n., sense 1).

family room (fām'ə-lē rōōm) n. A recreation room especially for the use of family members.

family style (fām'ə-lē stīl) adv. & adj. Having serving dishes of food placed on the table at a sit-down meal so that each participant in the meal can select his or her own portions: students eating family style in the dorm; a family style restaurant.

family therapy (fām'ə-lē thēr'ə-pē) n. A form of psychotherapy in which the interrelationships of family members are examined in group sessions in order to identify and alleviate the problems of one or more members of the family.

family time (fām'ə-lē tīm) n. See family hour.

family tree (fām'ə-lē trē) n. 1. A genealogical diagram of a family's ancestry. 2. The ancestors and descendants of a family considered as a group.

family way (fām'ə-lē wā) n. Informal. The state of being pregnant: My neighbor is in a family way.

fam·ine (fām'īn) n. 1. A drastic, wide-reaching food shortage. 2. A drastic shortage; a dearth. 3. Severe hunger; starvation. 4. Archaic. Extreme appetite. [Middle English, from Old French, from faim, hunger, from Latin famēs.]

fam-ish (fām'ish) v. fam-ished, fam-ish-ing, fam-ish-es. — v. tr. 1. To cause to endure severe hunger. 2. To cause to starve to death. — v. intr. 1. To endure severe deprivation, especially of food. 2. To undergo starvation and die. [Middle English famishen, alteration of Middle English famen, from Old French afamer, from Vulgar Latin affamāre*: Latin ad-, ad- + Latin famēs, hunger.] —fam'ish-ment n.

fa-mous (fā'məs) adj. 1. Well or widely known. See Synonyms at noted. 2. Informal. First-rate; excellent: had a famous old time at the party. [Middle English, from Anglo-Norman, from Latin fāmōsus, from fāma, fame. See bhā-² in Appendix.] —fa'mous-ly adv. —fa'mous-ness n.

fam-u-lus (fām'yə-ləs) n. pl. fam-u-li (-lī'). A private secretary or other close attendant. [German, from Latin.]

fan¹ (fän) n. 1. A device for creating a current of air or a breeze, especially: a. A machine using an electric motor to rotate thin, rigid vanes in order to move air, as for cooling. b. A collapsible, usually wedge-shaped device made of a light material such as silk, paper, or plastic. 2. A machine for winnowing. 3. Something resembling an open fan in shape: a peacock's fan. — v. fanned, fan-ning, fans. — v. tr. 1. To move or cause a current of (air) with or as if with a fan. 2. To direct a current of air or a breeze upon, especially in order to cool: fan one's face. 3. To stir (something) up by or as if by fanning: fanned the flames in the fireplace; an otherwise quiet employee who fanned resentment among her colleagues. 4. To open (something) out into the shape of a fan: The bird fanned its colorful tail. 5. a. To fire (an automatic gun) in a continuous sweep by keeping one's finger on the trigger. b. To fire (a nonautomatic gun) rapidly by chopping the hammer with the palm. 6. To winnow. 7. Baseball. To strike out (a batter). — v. intr. 1. To spread out like a fan: The troops fanned out in a northerly direction. 2. Baseball. To strike out. [Middle English, winnowing fan, from Old English fann, from Latin vannus. See wet-¹ in Appendix.]

fan² (fän) n. Informal. An ardent devotee; an enthusiast. [Short for FANATIC.]

fan-ac or FAN-AC (fän'äk') n. Slang. The activities of fans, especially fans of science fiction or skateboarding, usually involving the organization of conventions or writing of articles. [Perhaps FAN² + AC(TIVITY).]

fa-nat-ic (fə-năt'ik) n. A person marked or motivated by an extreme, unreasoning enthusiasm, as for a cause. — adj. Fanatical. [Latin fānāticus, inspired by orgiastic rites, pertaining to a temple, from fānum, temple. See dhēs- in Appendix.]

SYNONYMS: fanatic, zealot, enthusiast. These nouns denote persons who are ardently and usually excessively devoted to a particular cause, subject, or activity. Fanatic implies the pursuit of a given interest to inordinate and even irrational lengths, often to the exclusion of all other interests: "A fanatic is one who can't change his mind and won't change the subject" (Winston S. Churchill). A zealot is immoderately devoted to a cause or goal and seeks to advance it with passionate fervor: "those furious zealots who blow the bellows of faction until the whole furnace of politics is red-hot" (Washington Irving). Enthusiast can denote a religious zealot holding visionary opinions: "It is unfortunate, considering that enthusiasm moves the world, that so few enthusiasts can be trusted to speak the truth" (A.J. Balfour). More commonly, however, it merely implies strong interest in something, such as a hobby, and lacks the unfavorable connotations of the other terms: a hockey enthusiast.

fa·nat·i·cal (fə-năt'ī-kəl) adj. Possessed with or motivated by excessive, irrational zeal. —fa·nat'·i·cal·ly adv. —fa·nat'·i·cal·ness n.

fa·nat·i·cism (fə-năt'ī-sīz'əm) n. Excessive, irrational zeal.

fa·nat·i·cize (fə-năt'ī-sīz') v. fa·nat·i·cized, fa·nat·i·ciz·ing, fa·nat·i·ciz·es. — v. tr. To make fanatical. — v. intr. To behave as a fanatic.

fan belt (făn bĕlt) n. A taut rubber belt that transfers torque from the crankshaft to the shaft of the cooling fan on an engine.

fan·ci·er (făn'sē-ər) n. 1. One who has a special enthusiasm for or interest in something: a fancier of antiques. 2. One who breeds a plant or an animal for those features held to be desirable.

fan·ci·ful (făn'sī-fəl) adj. 1. Created in the fancy; unreal: a fanciful story. 2. Tending to indulge in fancy: a fanciful mind. 3. Showing invention or whimsy in design; imaginative. See Synonyms at fantastic. —fan'·ci·ful·ly adv.

—fan'·ci·ful·ness n.

fan·cy (făn'sē) n. pl. fan·cies. 1. The mental faculty through which whims, visions, and fantasies are summoned up; imagination, especially of a whimsical or fantastic nature. See Synonyms at imagination. 2. An image or a fantastic invention created by the mind. 3. A capricious notion; a whim. 4. A capricious liking or inclination. 5. Critical sensibility; taste. 6. Amorous or romantic attachment; love. 7. a. The enthusiasts or fans of a sport or pursuit considered as a group. b. The sport or pursuit, such as boxing, engaging the interest of such a group. — adj. fan·ci·er, fan·ci·est. 1. Highly decorated: a fancy hat.

2. Arising in the fancy; capricious. 3. Executed with skill; complex or intricate: the fancy footwork of a figure skater. 4. Abbr. fcy. Of superior grade; fine: fancy preserves. 5. Excessive or exorbitant: paid a fancy price for the car. 6. Bred for unusual qualities or special points. — v. tr. fan·cied, fan·cy·ing, fan·cies.

1. To visualize; imagine: "She tried to fancy what the flame of a candle looks like after the candle is blown out" (Lewis Carroll). 2. To take a fancy to; like. See Synonyms at like¹. 3. To suppose; guess. [From Middle English fantsy, imagination, fantasy, from fantasie. See FANTASY.] —fan'·ci·ly adv. —fan'·ci·ness n.

fancy dress (făn'sē drĕs) n. A masquerade costume.

fan-cy-free (făn'sē-frē') adj. 1. Having no commitments or restrictions; care-free. 2. Not in love or married; unattached.

fan-cy-work (făn'sē-wûrk') n. Decorative needlework, such as embroidery.

fan-dan-go (făn-dăng'gō) n. pl. fan-dan-gos. 1. a. An animated Spanish or Spanish-American dance in triple time. b. A piece of music for this dance.

2. Informal. Nonsense; tomfoolery. [Spanish, possibly alteration of fadango*, from fado, from Portuguese, sad song. See FADO.]

fan-dom (făn'dəm) n. All the fans of a sport, an activity, or a famous person.

Fan-euil (făn'l, făn'yəl), Peter. 1700-1743. American merchant who built Faneuil Hall in Boston (1742) and donated it to the city. The building was a meeting place for patriots during the Revolutionary period.

fan-fare (făn'fâr') n. 1. Music. A loud flourish of brass instruments, especially trumpets. 2. Informal. A spectacular public display. [French, possibly of imitative origin.]

fan-far-o-nade (făn'fâr-ə-nād', -nād') n. 1. Bragging or blustering manner or behavior. 2. A fanfare. [French fanfaronnade, from Spanish fanfarronada, bluster, from fanfarrón, a braggart, perhaps from Arabic farfār.]

fang (făng) n. 1. A long, pointed tooth, especially: a. Any of the hollow or grooved teeth of a venomous snake with which it injects its poison. b. Any of the canine teeth of a carnivorous animal with which it seizes and tears its prey. 2. A fanglike structure, especially a chelicera of a venomous spider. 3. The root of a tooth. [Middle English, booty, spoils, something seized, from Old English. See pag- in Appendix.] —fanged adj.

Fang (făng, fäng, fän) n. pl. Fang or Fangs. 1. A member of a people inhabiting Gabon, Equatorial Guinea, and Cameroon. 2. The Bantu language of the Fang.

fan-in (făn'in') n. Computer Science. The number of inputs available to a given logic circuit.

fan-ion (făn'yən) n. A small flag for marking a position, used especially by surveyors or soldiers. [French, alteration of fanillon*, diminutive of fanon, maniple, from Old French, from Frankish fanō*.]

fan-jet also fan-jet (făn'jět') n. 1. A jet engine that provides extra thrust by means of a ducted fan in its forward end that draws in extra air. 2. An airplane with such an engine.

fan letter (făn lět'ər) n. A piece of fan mail.

fan-light (făn'līt') n. 1. Architecture. A half-circle window, often with sash bars arranged like the ribs of a fan. 2. Chiefly British. A transom.

fan mail (făn māl) n. Mail sent to a public figure by admirers.

fan-ny (făn'ē) n. pl. fan-nies. Slang. The buttocks. [Perhaps from Fanny, a nickname for Frances.]

fan-out (fän'out') n. Computer Science. The number of circuits that can be fed input signals from an output device.

fan palm (fän pä'm) n. A palm tree having palmately divided, fanlike leaves.

fan·tab·u·lous (fän-täb'yə-ləs) adj. Slang. Marvelously excellent: "a really fantabulous find, just magnificent" (Mel Fisher). [Blend of FANTASTIC, and FABULOUS.]

fan-tail (fän'täl') n. 1. Any of a breed of domestic pigeons having a rounded, fan-shaped tail. 2. Any of several birds of the genus Rhipidura of eastern Asia and Australia, having a long, fan-shaped tail. 3. Any of a breed of goldfish having a wide, fanlike double tail fin. 4. A fanlike tail or end. 5. Nautical. The stern overhang of a ship. —fan'tailed' adj.

fan-tan (fän'tän') n. Games. 1. A Chinese betting game in which the players lay wagers on the number of counters that will remain when a hidden pile of them has been divided by four. 2. A card game in which sevens and their equivalent are played in sequence and the first player out of cards is the winner. [Chinese fān tān: fān, turn, chance + tān, to spread out.]

fan-ta·sia (fän-tā'zhə, -zhē-ə, fän'tə-zē'ə) n. Music. 1. A free composition structured according to the composer's fancy. Also called fantasy 2. A medley of familiar themes, with variations and interludes. [Italian, from Latin phantasia, fantasy. See FANTASY.]

fan-ta·sist (fän'tə-sīst) n. One that creates a fantasy.

fan-ta·size (fän'tə-sīz') v. fan-ta-sized, fan-ta-siz-ing, fan-ta-siz-es. — v. tr. To portray in the mind; imagine. — v. intr. To indulge in fantasies.

fan-tast (fän'täst') n. A visionary; a dreamer. [German, from Medieval Latin phantasta, from Greek phantastēs, boaster, from phantasia, imagination. See FANTASY.]

fan-tas-tic (fän-täs'tik) also fan-tas-ti-cal (-tī-kəl) adj. 1. Quaint or strange in form, conception, or appearance. 2. a. Unrestrainedly fanciful; extravagant: fantastic hopes. b. Bizarre, as in form or appearance; strange: fantastic attire; fantastic behavior. c. Based on or existing only in fantasy; unreal: fantastic ideas about her own superiority. 3. Wonderful or superb; remarkable: a fantastic trip to Europe. — n. An eccentric person. [Middle English fantastik, imagined, from Old French fantastique, from Late Latin phantasticus, imaginary, from Greek phantastikos, able to create mental images, from phantazesthai, to appear. See FANTASY.] —fan-tas'ti-cal'i-ty (-tī-käl'ī-tē) n. —fan-tas'ti-cal-ly adv. —fan-tas'ti-cal-ness n.

SYNONYMS: fantastic, bizarre, grotesque, fanciful, exotic. These adjectives apply to what is very strange or strikingly unusual. Fantastic in this comparison describes what seems to have slight relation to the real world because of its strangeness or extravagance: fantastic imaginary beasts such as the unicorn. Bizarre stresses oddness of character or appearance that is heightened by striking contrasts and incongruities and that shocks or fascinates: a bizarre art nouveau façade. Grotesque refers principally to appearance or aspect in which deformity and distortion approach the point of caricature or even absurdity: rainspouts terminating in gargoyles and other grotesque creatures. Fanciful applies to a character, nature, or design strongly influenced by imagination, caprice, or whimsy: a fanciful pattern with intertwined vines and flowers. Something exotic is unusual and intriguing in appearance or effect: exotic birds.

fan·tas·ti·cate (fän-täs'tī-kāt') v. tr. fan·tas·ti·cat·ed, fan·tas·ti·cat·ing, fan·tas·ti·cates. To make fantastic: “[his] splendidly baroque style adorns and fantasticates his thought” (New York Times). — fan·tas'ti·ca'tion n.

fan·tas·ti·co (fän-täs'tī-kō) n. pl. fan·tas·ti·coes. Informal. An extremely bizarre person. [Italian, imaginary, from Late Latin phantasticus. See FANTASTIC.]

fan·ta·sy (fän'tə-sē, -zē) n. pl. fan·ta·sies. 1. The creative imagination; unrestrained fancy. See Synonyms at imagination. 2. Something, such as an invention, that is a creation of the fancy. 3. A capricious or fantastic idea; a conceit. 4. a. Fiction characterized by highly fanciful or supernatural elements. b. An example of such fiction. 5. An imagined event or sequence of mental images, such as a daydream, usually fulfilling a wish or psychological need. 6. Music. See fantasia (n., sense 1). 7. A coin issued especially by a questionable authority and not intended for use as currency. 8. Obsolete. A hallucination. — v. tr. fan·ta·sied, fan·ta·sy·ing, fan·ta·sies. To imagine; visualize. [Middle English fantasie, fantasy, from Old French fantasie, from Latin phantasia, from Greek, appearance, imagination, from phantazesthai, to appear, from phantos, visible, from phainesthai, to appear. See bhā¹ in Appendix.]

fan·ta·sy·land (fän'tə-sē-länd', -zē-) n. A place conjured up by the imagination, often populated by bizarre inhabitants: the fantasyland of an operetta; television's latest excursion into fantasyland; a fantasyland on the order of Versailles. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: fantasyland sales projections; a fantasyland park near a castle.

Fan·te or Fan·ti (fän'tē, fän'-) n. pl. Fante or Fanti also Fan·tes or Fan·tis. 1. A member of a people inhabiting Ghana. 2. The variety of Akan spoken by this people.

fan·toc·ci·ni (fän'tə-chē'nē) pl.n. 1. Puppets animated by moving wires or mechanical means. 2. A play or show employing such puppets. [Italian, pl. of fantoccino diminutive of fantoccio, puppet augmentative of fante, child, short for infante, from Latin infāns, infant-, infant. See INFANT.]

fan·tod (fän'tōd') n. 1. fantods. a. A state of nervous irritability. b. Nervous movements caused by tension. 2. An outburst of emotion; a fit. [Origin unknown.]

fan·tom (făn'təm) n. & adj. Variant of phantom.

fan vaulting (făn vól'tĩng) n. Architecture. An intricate style of traceried vaulting, common in late English Gothic, in which ribs arch out like a fan.

fan·wort (făn'wûrt', -wôrt') n. Any of several aquatic plants of the genus Cabomba, having opposite, finely divided, fanlike submersed leaves and alternate, entire, peltate floating leaves. Also called cabomba fan·zine (făn'zēn) n. An amateur-produced fan magazine distributed by mail to a subculture readership and devoted to the coverage of interests such as science fiction, rock music, or skateboarding. [FAN² + (MAGA)ZINE.]

FAQ abbr. Fair average quality.

far (fär) adv. far·ther (fär'thər) or fur·ther (fûr'thər), far·thest (fär'thĩst) or fur·thest (fûr'thĩst). 1. To, from, or at considerable distance: a cat that had strayed far from home. 2. To or at a specific distance, degree, or position: Just how far are you taking this argument? 3. To a considerable degree; much: felt far better yesterday; eyes that seemed far too close together. 4. Not at all; anything but: seems far from content; a test of strength that was far from a failure. 5. To an advanced point or stage: a brilliant student who will go far. — adj. farther or further, farthest or furthest. 1. a. Being at considerable distance; remote: a far country. b. Going back a considerable extent in time: the far past. See Synonyms at distant. 2. More distant than another: the far corner. 3. Extensive or lengthy: a far trek. 4. Far-seeing and comprehensive in thought or outlook: a commander of far vision. 5. Marked by political views of the most advanced or extreme nature: the far right; the far left. 6. Being on the right side of an animal or a vehicle. 7. Being the animal or vehicle on the right. — idioms. as far as. To or at a specific point, degree, or extent: They will arrive at nine, as far as we know. by far. To the most extreme or evident degree: She is by far the best executive in the company. far and away. By a great margin: “That made him, far and away, the best known of the Democrats who started the presidential race this year” (Tom Wicker). far cry. A long way: The climate in Alaska is a far cry from that of Florida. how far. To what degree, distance, or extent: didn't know how far to believe them; tried to decide how far she could ski in such cold. so far. 6. Up to the present moment: So far there's been no word from them. 7. To a limited extent: You can go only so far on five dollars. thus far. Up to this point; so far: Our success has been limited thus far. [Middle English, from Old English feor. See per¹ in Appendix.]

Far. abbr. Faraday.

far·ad (fär'əd, -äd') n. Abbr. F The unit of capacitance in the meter-kilogram-second system equal to the capacitance of a capacitor having an equal and opposite charge of 1 coulomb on each plate and a potential difference of 1 volt between the plates. See Table at measurement. [After Michael FARADAY.]

far·a·da·ic (fär'ə-dā'ik) adj. Variant of faradic.

far·a·day (fär'ə-dā') n. Abbr. Far. The quantity of electricity that is capable of depositing or liberating 1 gram equivalent weight of a substance in electrolysis, approximately 9.6494×10^4 coulombs. [After Michael FARADAY.]

Far·a·day (fär'ə-dā', -dē), Michael. 1791-1867. British physicist and chemist who discovered electromagnetic induction (1831) and proposed the field theory later developed by Maxwell and Einstein.

Faraday effect (fär'ə-dā' ĭ-fěkt') n. The rotation of the plane of polarization of either a plane-polarized light beam passed through a transparent isotropic medium or a plane-polarized microwave passing through a magnetic field along the lines of that field. Also called Faraday rotation [After Michael FARADAY.]

far·rad·ic (fə-räd'ik) also far·a·da·ic (fär'ə-dā'ik) adj. Of, relating to, or using an intermittent asymmetrical alternating electric current produced by an induction coil. [After Michael FARADAY.]

far·a·dism (fär'ə-dīz'əm) n. Faradization.

far·a·di·za·tion (fär'ə-dī-zā'shən) n. The application of faradic current to stimulate muscles and nerves.

far·a·dize (fär'ə-dīz') v. tr. far·a·dized, far·a·diz·ing, far·a·diz·es. To treat or stimulate (a muscle or nerve) with faradic current.

far·an·dole (fär'ən-dōl') n. 1. A spirited circle dance of Provençal derivation. 2. The music for this circle dance. [French, from Provençal farandoulo.] far and wide (fär ənd wīd) adv. Everywhere: looked far and wide for the lost puppy.

far·a·way (fär'ə-wā') adj. 1. Very distant; remote. See Synonyms at distant. 2. Abstracted; dreamy: a faraway look.

farce (färs) n. 1. a. A light dramatic work in which highly improbable plot situations, exaggerated characters, and often slapstick elements are used for humorous effect. b. The broad or spirited humor characteristic of such works. 2. A ludicrous, empty show; a mockery: The election was a farce, for it was fixed. 3. A seasoned stuffing, as for roasted turkey. — v. tr. farced, farc·ing, farc·es.

1. To pad or fill out (a speech, for example) with jokes or witticisms. 2. To stuff, as for roasting. [Middle English farse, stuffing, from Old French farce, stuffing, interpolation, interlude, from Vulgar Latin farsa*, from Latin farsa, feminine past participle of farċire, to stuff.]

far·ceur (fär-soer') n. 1. One who acts in or writes a farce. 2. A comic; a wag. [French, from Old French, from farcer, to joke, from farce, farce. See FARCE.]

far·ci or far·cie (fär-sē') adj. Stuffed, especially with finely ground meat: mushrooms farci. [French, past participle of farcir, to stuff, from Old French, from Latin farċire.] far·ci·cal (fär'sī-kəl) adj. 1. Of or relating to farce. 2. a. Resembling a farce; ludicrous. b. Ridiculously clumsy; absurd. —far'ci-cal'i-ty (-käl'ĭ-tē) n.

—far'ci-cal·ly adv. —far'ci-cal-ness n.

far·cie (fär-sē') adj. Variant of farci.

far·cy (fär'sē) n. Veterinary Medicine. A chronic form of glanders that affects chiefly the skin and superficial lymph vessels. [Middle English farsi, farsin, from Old French farcin, from Latin farcimen, sausage, from farciare, to stuff.]

farcy bud (fär'sē būd) n. Veterinary Medicine. A craterlike ulcer characteristic of farcy.

far·del (fär'dl) n. 1. A pack; a bundle. 2. A burden. [Middle English, from Old French, diminutive of farde, package, from Arabic fardah.]

fare (fâr) v. intr. fared, far·ing, fares. 1. To get along: How are you faring with your project? 2. To travel; go. 3. To dine; eat. — n. 1. A transportation charge, as for a bus. 2. A passenger transported for a fee. 3. Food and drink; diet: simple home-cooked fare. [Middle English fares, from Old English faran. See per² in Appendix.] —far'er n.

Far East (fär ēst) The countries and regions of eastern and southeast Asia, especially China, Japan, North Korea, South Korea, and Mongolia. —Far' East'ern adj.

Far Eastern U.S.S.R. (fär ē'stærn;) A historical region of the U.S.S.R. bordering on the Pacific Ocean.

fare·beat (fâr'bēt') v. intr. fare·beat, fare·beat·en (-bēt'n) or fare·beat, fare·beat·ing, fare·beats. Slang. To avoid paying the fare for public transportation, especially subway transportation. —fare'beat·er n.

Fare·ham (fâr'əm) An urban district of southern England on Portsmouth harbor north-northwest of Portsmouth. It is a shipbuilding center. Population, 88,100.

fare·thee·well (fâr'thē-wēl') n. 1. A condition of utmost perfection: played the part of the martyr to a fare-thee-well. 2. The most extreme degree: beat his opponent in the match to a veritable fare-thee-well.

fare·well (fâr-wēl') interj. Used to express good-bye. — n. 1. An acknowledgment at parting; a good-bye. 2. The act of departing. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: a farewell party; a farewell glance. [Middle English fare wel: imperative of fares, to fare; see FARE + wel, well; see WELL².]

Fare·well (fâr-wēl', fâr'wēl'), Cape. The southernmost point of Greenland.

far·fel or far·fal (fär'fəl) n. Noodles shaped like small grains or pellets. [Yiddish farfl, from Middle High German varveln.]

far·fetched (fär'fēcht') adj. Not readily believable because of improbable elements therein: a far-fetched analogy; a far-fetched excuse.

far·flung (fär'flüŋg') adj. 1. Remote; distant. 2. Widely distributed; wide-ranging.

Far·go (fär'gō) A city of eastern North Dakota on the Red River east of Bismarck. Founded with the coming of the railroad in 1871, it is the largest city in the state. Population, 74,111.

- Far-go (fär'gō), William George. 1818-1881. American transportation pioneer who organized the American Express Company (1850) and Wells, Fargo and Company (1852) to provide safe, swift transcontinental express service.
- far-gone (fär'gôn', -gōn') adj. Very close to or nearing the end: a drug addict too far-gone for rehabilitation.
- Far-i-bault (fär'ə-bō') A city of southeast Minnesota south of Minneapolis. It was built on the site of a trading post established in 1826. Population, 17,085.
- Fa-ri-da-bad (fə-rē'də-bād') A city of north-central India south-southeast of New Delhi. It is a grain and cotton market. Population, 330,864.
- fa-ri-na (fə-rē'nə) n. Fine meal prepared from cereal grain and various other plant products and often used as a cooked cereal or in puddings. [Middle English, from Latin farīna, from far, a kind of grain. See bhares- in Appendix.]
- far-i-na-ceous (fär'ə-nā'shəs) adj. 1. Made from, rich in, or consisting of starch. 2. Having a mealy or powdery texture. [Latin farīnāceus, mealy, from farīna, farina. See FARINA.]
- far-i-nose (fär'ə-nōs') adj. 1. Similar to or yielding farina. 2. Biology. Covered with mealy dust or powder. [Late Latin farīnōsus, mealy, from Latin farīna, farina. See FARINA.]
- far-kle-ber-ry (fär'kəl-bēr'ē) n. A shrub or small tree (Vaccinium arboreum) of the southeast United States, having leathery leaves and hard black berries. Also called sparkleberry [farkle (of unknown origin) + BERRY.]
- Far-ley (fär'lē), James Aloysius. 1888-1976. American politician who managed Franklin D. Roosevelt's 1932 and 1936 presidential campaigns and served as U.S. postmaster general (1933-1940).
- farm (färm) n. 1. A tract of land cultivated for the purpose of agricultural production. 2. a. A tract of land devoted to the raising and breeding of domestic animals. b. An area of water devoted to the raising, breeding, or production of a specific aquatic animal: a trout farm; an oyster farm. 3. An area of land devoted to the storage of a commodity or the emplacement of a group of devices: a tank farm; an antenna farm. 4. Baseball. A minor-league club affiliated with a major-league club for the training of recruits and the maintenance of temporarily unneeded players. 5. Obsolete. a. The system of leasing out the rights of collecting and retaining taxes in a certain district. b. A district so leased. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: farm machinery; farm buildings; farm policy. — v. farmed, farm-ing, farms. — v. tr. 1. To cultivate or produce a crop on. 2. To pay a fixed sum in order to have the right to collect and retain profits from (a business, for example). 3. To turn over (a business, for example) to another in return for the payment of a fixed sum. — v. intr. To engage in farming. — phrasal verb. farm out. 1. To send (work, for example) from a central point to be done elsewhere. 2. Baseball. To assign (a player) to a minor-league team. [Middle English, lease, leased property, from Old French ferme, from Medieval Latin firma, fixed payment, from Latin firmāre, to establish, from firmus, firm. See dher- in Appendix.]

Far·man (fär'mən, fär-män'), Henri. 1874-1958. French aviation pioneer who with his brother Maurice (1877-1964) produced the first long-distance passenger plane, which began regular flights between Paris and London in 1919.

farm·er (fär'mər) n. 1. One who works on or operates a farm. 2. One who has paid for the right to collect and retain certain revenues or profits.

Far·mer (fär'mər), Fannie Merritt. 1857-1915. American cookery expert who edited the Boston Cooking School Cook Book (1896), which has undergone many revisions as the Fannie Farmer Cookbook.

Far·mer (fär'mər), James Leonard. Born 1920. American civil rights leader who founded the Congress of Racial Equality (1942), served as its national director (1961-1966), and advocated nonviolent forms of protest.

Far·mer (fär'mər), Moses Gerrish. 1820-1893. American electrical pioneer who invented an incandescent lamp (1859) and a dynamo (1866) and with them electrically lit a house (1868).

farmer cheese (fär'mər chēz) n. An unripened cheese similar to cottage cheese but drier and firmer in texture.

Far·mers Branch (fär'mərz brānch) A town of northeast Texas, a residential and industrial suburb of Dallas. Population, 24,250.

farm·er's lung (fär'mərz lüŋ) n. An occupational disease affecting the lungs and characterized by chronic shortness of breath caused by an allergic reaction to fungal spores present in moldy hay dust that has been inhaled.

farm·ers' market (fär'mərz mär'kīt) n. A public market at which farmers and often other vendors sell produce directly to consumers. Also called green-market farm hand (färm händ) n. A hired farm laborer.

farm·house (färm'hous') n. A dwelling on a farm.

Far·ming·ton (fär'mīŋ-tən) 1. A town of central Connecticut southwest of Hartford. Settled in 1640, it is chiefly residential. Population, 20,608. 2. A city of northwest New Mexico south-southwest of Durango, Colorado. It is the trade center of an irrigated farming area. Population, 33,997.

Farmington Hills (fär'mīŋ-tən hīlz) A city of southeast Michigan, an industrial suburb of Detroit. Population, 74,652.

farm·land (färm'länd', -lənd) n. An expanse of land suitable or used for farming.

farm·stead (färm'stēd') n. A farm, including its land and buildings.

farm·wom·an (färm'wōm'ən) n. A woman who works on or operates a farm.

farm·yard (färm'yärd') n. An area surrounded by or adjacent to farm buildings.

- Far·ne·se (fär-nā'zē, -nē'zē), Alessandro Duke of Parma. 1545-1592. Italian general and diplomat in service to Philip II of Spain. He engaged the Turks in the Battle of Lepanto (1571), in which the Ottoman fleet was destroyed.
- Farns·worth (färnz'wûrth'), Philo Taylor. 1906-1971. American electrical engineer who as early as 1927 demonstrated a working television system.
- far·o (fâr'ō) n. Games. A card game in which the players lay wagers on the top card of the dealer's pack. [Alteration of PHARAOH.]
- Far·oe Islands (fâr'ō ī'lændz) See Faeroe Islands.
- Far·o·ese (fâr'ō-ēz', -ēs') n. Variant of Faeroese.
- far·off (fâr'ôf', -ôf') adj. Remote in space or time. See Synonyms at distant.
- fa·ro·li·to (fâr'ə-lē'tō, fâr'-) n. pl. fa·ro·li·tos. Southwestern U.S. See luminaria (n., sense 1). [Spanish, paper lantern, diminutive of farol, lantern, from faro, lighthouse, lantern, from Latin pharus, from Pharus, Pharos.]
- fa·rouche (fä-rōosh') adj. 1. Fierce; wild: an artist who was farouche even in everyday life. 2. Exhibiting withdrawn temperament and shyness coupled with an air of cranky, often sullen fey charm: "small, farouche poems illustrated with doodles, a cross between Ogden Nash and Blake" (Rosemary Dinnage). [French, from Old French farouche, alteration of forasche, from Late Latin forāsticus, belonging outside, from Latin forās, out of doors. See FOREIGN.]
- Fa·rouk I also Fa·ruk I (fə-rōok'), 1920-1965. King of Egypt (1936-1952) who lost support of his army after Egypt's military loss to Israel (1948) and was overthrown (1952) by a coup d'état led by Gamal Nasser.
- far·out (fär'out') adj. Slang. Extremely unconventional: "all kinds of far-out and unique inventions" (Peter Nissenson).
- far point (fär point) n. The farthest point at which an object can be seen distinctly by the eye.
- Far·quhar (fär'kwär), George. 1678-1707. Irish playwright of the Restoration whose comedic works include The Recruiting Officer (1706) and The Beaux' Stratagem (1707).
- far·rag·i·nous (fə-rāj'ə-nəs) adj. Composed of a variety of substances. [From Latin farrāgō, farrāgin-, medley, hodgepodge. See FARRAGO.]
- far·ra·go (fə-rä'gō, -rā'-) n. pl. far·ra·goes. An assortment or a medley; a conglomeration: "their special farrago of resentments" (William Safire). [Latin farrāgō, mixed fodder, hodgepodge, from far, farr-, a kind of grain. See bhares- in Appendix.]
- Far·ra·gut (fär'ə-gət), David Glasgow. 1801-1870. American admiral who commanded Union ships on daring Civil War missions, including the capture of New Orleans (1862) and the taking of Mobile Bay (1864), during which he uttered his famous rallying cry, "Damn the torpedoes—full speed ahead!"

Far·rar (fə-rär'), Geraldine. 1882-1967. American operatic soprano. A member of the Metropolitan Opera of New York (1906-1922), she was noted for her roles in Carmen and Madame Butterfly.

far-reach·ing (fär'rē'chīng) adj. Having a wide range, influence, or effect: the far-reaching implications of a major new epidemic; far-reaching plans for curriculum development; the far-reaching questions of a nuclear physicist.

far-red (fär'rēd') adj. 1. Of, relating to, or being electromagnetic radiation in the infrared spectrum farthest from visible red light, having wavelengths between 50,000 nanometers and 1 millimeter. 2. Of, relating to, or being electromagnetic radiation in the infrared spectrum closest to visible red light, having a wavelength of about 0.8 micron.

Far·rell (fär'əl), Eileen. Born 1920. American soprano noted for her voice of exceptional power and clarity. She began her career in radio and debuted in New York City at Carnegie Hall (1950).

Far·rell (fär'əl), James Thomas. 1904-1979. American writer best known for his Studs Lonigan trilogy of novels (1932-1935), which concerns the hardships that faced Irish-American Catholics in the early 20th century.

Far·rell (fär'əl), Suzanne. Born 1945. American ballerina noted for her performances with the New York City Ballet.

far·ri·er (fär'ē-ər) n. One that shoes horses. [Obsolete French ferrier, from Latin ferrārius, of iron, blacksmith, from ferrum, iron.] —far'ri·er·y n.

far·row¹ (fär'ō) n. A litter of pigs. — v. far·rowed, far·row·ing, far·rows. — v. tr. To give birth to (a litter of pigs). — v. intr. To produce a litter of pigs. [Ultimately from Old English fearh. See porko- in Appendix.]

far·row² (fär'ō) adj. Not pregnant. Used of a cow. [Middle English ferow.]

Fars (färz, färs) or Far·si·stan (fär'sī-stän', -stän') A historical region of southern Iran along the Persian Gulf. It was more or less identical with the ancient province of Pars, which formed the nucleus of the Persian Empire. The Arabs changed the name after they conquered the region in the seventh century.

far·see·ing (fär'sē'īng) adj. 1. Prudent; foresighted. 2. Able to see far; keen-sighted.

Far·si (fär'sē) n. 1. The modern Iranian language, dating from about the ninth century A.D., that is the national language of Iran and is written in an Arabic alphabet; Persian. 2. a. A speaker of Farsi. b. A member of the predominant ethnic group of Iran. [Persian fārsī, from Arabic Fārs, Persia.]

far·sight·ed or far·sight·ed (fär'sī'tīd) adj. 1. Able to see distant objects better than objects at close range; hyperopic. 2. Capable of seeing to a great distance. 3. Planning prudently for the future; foresighted: large goals that required farsighted policies. —far'sight'ed·ly adv.

far·sight·ed·ness (fär'sī'tīd-nīs) n. See hyperopia.

Far·si·stan (fär'sī-stän', -stän') See Fars.

fart (färt) Vulgar Slang. v. intr. fart-ed, fart-ing, farts. 1. To expel intestinal gas through the anus; break wind. 2. To fool around; fritter time away. — n. 1. A usually audible discharge of intestinal gas. 2. A person regarded as annoying or foolish. [Middle English farten, from Old English feortan*. See perd- in Appendix.]

far·ther (fär'thər) Usage Problem. adv. A comparative of far. 1. To or at a more distant or remote point: ran farther than the others. 2. To or at a more advanced point or stage: I went no farther that day. 3. To a greater extent or degree: carried the idea farther. — adj. A comparative of far. More distant; remoter: the farther shore. [Middle English, variant (influenced by far, far); see FAR, of further. See FURTHER.]

USAGE NOTE: Farther and further have been used interchangeably by many writers since the Middle English period. According to a rule of relatively recent origin, however, farther should be reserved for physical distance and further for advancement along a nonphysical dimension. Thus 74 percent of the Usage Panel prefers farther in the sentence If you are planning to drive any farther than Ukiah, you'd better carry chains; whereas 64 percent prefers further in the sentence We won't be able to answer these questions until we are further along in our research. In many cases, however, the distinction is not easy to draw. If we may speak metaphorically of a statement that is far from the truth, for example, the analogous use of farther should be allowed in a sentence such as Nothing could be farther from the truth, though Nothing could be further from the truth is also justifiable.

far·ther·most (fär'thər-mōst') adj. Most distant; farthest.

far·thest (fär'thĭst) adj. A superlative of far. Most remote or distant. — adv. A superlative of far. 1. To or at the most distant or remote point. 2. To or at the most advanced point or stage. 3. By the greatest extent or degree. [Middle English ferthest, superlative of farther. See FARTHER.]

far·thing (fär'thĭng) n. Abbr. f. 1. A coin formerly used in Great Britain worth one fourth of a penny. 2. Something of very little value. [Middle English ferthing, from Old English fēorthung. See k^wetwer- in Appendix.]

far·thin·gale (fär'thĭn-gāl', -thĭng-) n. A support, such as a hoop, worn beneath a skirt to extend it horizontally from the waist, used by European women in the 16th and 17th centuries. [Alteration of obsolete verdynggale, from Old French verdugale, from Old Spanish verdugado, from verdugo, stick, shoot of a tree, from verde, green, from Latin viridis, from virēre, to be green.]

Fa·ruk I (fə-rōok') See Farouk I.

Far West (fär wĕst) A region of the United States originally comprising all territories west of the Mississippi River. It is now generally restricted to the area west of the Great Plains. — Far' West'ern adj.

f.a.s. also F.A.S. abbr. Free alongside ship.

fasc. abbr. Fascicle.

fas·ces (fäs'ēz') pl.n. A bundle of rods bound together around an ax with the blade projecting, carried before ancient Roman magistrates as an emblem of authority. [Latin, pl. of fascis, bundle.]

fas·ci·a (fäsh'ē-ə) n. pl. fas·ci·ae (fäsh'ē-ē', fā'shē-ē). 1. Anatomy. A sheet or band of fibrous connective tissue enveloping, separating, or binding together muscles, organs, and other soft structures of the body. 2. A broad and distinct band of color. 3. (also fā'shē-ə) Architecture. A flat horizontal band or member between moldings, especially in a classical entablature. 4. (fā'shə) Chiefly British. The dashboard of a motor vehicle. [Latin, band.] —fas'ci·al adj.

fas·ci·ate (fäsh'ē-āt') also fas·ci·at·ed (-ā'tīd) adj. 1. Botany. Abnormally flattened or coalesced, as certain stems. 2. Zoology. Marked by broad bands of color, as certain insects. [Latin fasciātus, from fascia, band.]

fas·ci·a·tion (fäs'ē-ā'shən, fäsh'ē-) n. 1. The act of binding up or fastening, as with bandages. 2. The manner in which something is bound up or fastened. 3. Botany. An abnormal flattening or coalescence of stems, as in broccoli.

fas·ci·cle (fäs'ī-kəl) n. Abbr. fasc. 1. A small bundle. 2. One of the parts of a book published in separate sections. Also called fascicule 3. Botany. A bundle or cluster of stems, flowers, or leaves. 4. See fasciculus. [Latin fasciculus, diminutive of fascis, bundle.] —fas'ci·cled adj.

fas·cic·u·lar (fə-sīk'yə-lər) adj. Of, relating to, or composed of fascicles. —fas'cic'u·lar·ly adv.

fascicular cambium (fə-sīk'yə-lər kām'bē-əm) n. Botany. Cambium that develops within the vascular bundle.

fas·cic·u·late (fə-sīk'yə-līt) also fas·cic·u·lat·ed (-lā'tīd) adj. Arranged in or formed of fascicles; fascicular. —fas'cic'u·late·ly adv. —fas'cic'u·la'tion n.

fas·ci·cule (fäs'ī-kyōōl') n. See fascicle (n., sense 2).

fas·cic·u·lus (fə-sīk'yə-ləs) n. pl. fas·cic·u·li (-lī'). A bundle of anatomical fibers, as of muscle or nerve. Also called fascicle [Latin, fascicle. See FASCICLE.]

fas·ci·nate (fäs'ə-nāt') v. fas·ci·nat·ed, fas·ci·nat·ing, fas·ci·nates. — v. tr. 1. To hold an intense interest or attraction for. See Synonyms at charm. 2. To hold motionless; spellbind. 3. Obsolete. To bewitch. — v. intr. To be irresistibly charming or attractive. [Latin fascināre, fascināt-, to cast a spell on, from fascinum, an evil spell, a phallic-shaped amulet.]

fas·ci·nat·ing (fäs'ə-nā'tīng) adj. Possessing the power to charm or allure; captivating. —fas'ci·nat'ing·ly adv.

fas·ci·na·tion (fäs'ə-nā'shən) n. 1. The capability of eliciting intense interest or of being very attractive. 2. The state of being intensely interested or attracted: listened in fascination. 3. An intensely interesting, attractive quality or trait.

fas·ci·na·tor (fäs'ə-nā'tər) n. 1. One that fascinates. 2. A woman's head scarf.

fas·cine (fă-sēn', fə-) n. A cylindrical bundle of sticks bound together for use in construction, as of fortresses, earthworks, sea walls, or dams. [French, from Latin fascīna, from fascis, bundle.]

fas·ci·o·li·a·sis (fə-sē'ə-lī'ə-sīs, -sī'-) n. pl. fas·ci·o·li·a·ses (-sēz'). Infestation with parasitic flukes of the family Fasciolidae, especially infestation of the liver and bile ducts with the liver fluke. [New Latin Fasciola, genus name (from Latin, diminutive of fascia, band) + -IASIS.]

fas·cism (făsh'iz'əm) n. 1. Often Fascism. a. A system of government marked by centralization of authority under a dictator, stringent socioeconomic controls, suppression of the opposition through terror and censorship, and typically a policy of belligerent nationalism and racism. b. A political philosophy or movement based on or advocating such a system of government. 2. Oppressive, dictatorial control. [Italian fascismo, from fascio, group, from Late Latin fascium, neuter of Latin fascis, bundle.] —fas·cis'tic (fə-shīs'tik) adj.

fas·cist (făsh'ist) n. 1. Often Fascist. An advocate or adherent of fascism. 2. A reactionary or dictatorial person. — adj. 1. Often Fascist. Of, advocating, or practicing fascism. 2. Fascist. Of or relating to the regime of the Fascisti. [Italian fascista, from fascio, group. See FASCISM.]

Fa·scis·ti (fă-shē'stē) pl.n. The members of an Italian political organization that controlled Italy under the fascist dictatorship of Benito Mussolini from 1922 to 1943. [Italian, pl. of fascista, fascist. See FASCIST.]

fash·ion (făsh'ən) n. 1. The prevailing style or custom, as in dress or behavior: out of fashion. 2. Something, such as a garment, that is in the current mode: Her dress is the latest fashion. 3. The style characteristic of the social elite: a man of fashion. 4. a. Manner or mode; way: Set the table in this fashion. b. A personal, often idiosyncratic manner: played the violin in his own curious fashion. 5. Kind or variety; sort: people of all fashions. 6. Shape or form; configuration. — v. tr.

fash·ioned, fash·ion·ing, fash·ions. 1. To give shape or form to; make: fashioned a table from a redwood burl. 2. To train or influence into a particular state or character. 3. To adapt, as to a purpose or an occasion; accommodate.

4. Obsolete. To contrive. —idiom. after a fashion (or in a fashion). In some way or other, especially to a limited extent: She sings after a fashion. [Middle English facioun, from Old French façon, appearance, manner, from Latin factiō, factiōn-, a making, from factus, past participle of facere, to make, do. See dhē- in Appendix.] —fash·ion·er n.

SYNONYMS: fashion, style, mode, vogue. These nouns refer to a prevailing or preferred manner of dress, adornment, behavior, or way of life at a given time. Fashion, the broadest term, usually refers to what accords with conventions adopted by polite society or set by those in the forefront of the artistic or intellectual sphere: wears clothes in the height of fashion; a time when pop art was very much in fashion. Style is sometimes used interchangeably with fashion (a gown that is out of style), but style, like mode, often stresses adherence to standards of elegance: The couple travels in style. Miniskirts were the mode in the late sixties. Vogue is applied to fashion that prevails widely (the voluptuous figure in vogue at the time of Rubens); the term often suggests enthusiastic but short-lived acceptance (a game that enjoyed a vogue in its day). See also Synonyms at method fash-ion-a-ble (făsh'ə-nə-bəl) adj. 1. Conforming to the current style; stylish. 2. Associated with or frequented by persons of fashion. — n. A stylish person. — fash'ion-a-bil-i-ty, fash'ion-a-ble-ness n. — fash'ion-a-bly adv.

SYNONYMS: fashionable, chic, dashing, in, modish, posh, sharp, smart, stylish, swank, trendy. The central meaning shared by these adjectives is “being or in accordance with the current fashion”: a fashionable restaurant; a chic dress; a dashing hat; the in place to go; modish jewelry; a posh address; a sharp jacket; a smart hotel; stylish clothes; a swank apartment; a trendy neighborhood.

ANTONYM: unfashionable fash-ion-mon-ger (făsh'ən-mŭng'gər, -mŏng'-) n. One concerned with following, spreading, or setting the fashion.

fashion plate (făsh'ən plăt) n. 1. A person who consistently wears the latest fashions. 2. An illustration of current styles in dress.

Fass-bind-er (fäs'bĭn'dər), Rainer Werner. 1946-1982. German filmmaker whose works, such as The Bitter Tears of Petra von Kant (1972), concern the social and psychological problems of post-World War II Germany.

fast¹ (făst) adj. fast-er, fast-est. 1. Acting, moving, or capable of acting or moving quickly; swift. 2. Accomplished in relatively little time: a fast visit. 3. Indicating a time somewhat ahead of the actual time: The clock is fast. 4. Adapted to or suitable for rapid movement: a fast running track. 5. Designed for or compatible with a short exposure time: fast film. 6. a. Disposed to dissipation; wild: ran with a fast crowd. b. Flouting conventional moral standards; sexually promiscuous. 7. Resistant, as to destruction or fading: fast colors. 8. Firmly fixed or fastened: a fast grip. 9. Fixed firmly in place; secure: shutters that are fast against the rain. 10. Firm in loyalty: fast friends. 11. Lasting; permanent: fast rules and regulations. 12. Deep; sound: in a fast sleep. — adv. 1. In a secure manner; tightly: hold fast. 2. To a sound degree; deeply: fast asleep. 3. In a rapid manner; quickly. 4. In quick succession: New ideas followed fast. 5. Ahead of the correct or expected time: a watch that runs fast. 6. In a dissipated, immoderate way: living fast. 7. Archaic. Close by; near. [Middle English, from Old English făst, firm, fixed. See past- in Appendix.]

SYNONYMS: fast, rapid, swift, fleet, speedy, quick, hasty, expeditious. These adjectives refer to something, such as activity or movement, marked by great speed. Fast and rapid are often used interchangeably, though fast is more often applied to the person or thing in motion, and rapid, to the activity or movement involved: a fast car; a fast plane; a rapid mountain stream; rapid development; a fast runner; rapid strides. Swift suggests smoothness and sureness of movement (a swift current; swift but unclear handwriting), and fleet, lightness of movement (The cheetah is the fleetest of animals). Speedy refers to velocity (a speedy worker) or to promptness or hurry (hoped for a speedy resolution to the problem). Quick most often applies to what takes little time or to promptness of response or action: Let's eat a quick snack. Only her quick reaction prevented an accident. Hasty implies hurried action (a hasty visit) and often a lack of care or thought (regretted the hasty decision). Expeditious suggests rapid efficiency: sent the package by the most expeditious means. See also Synonyms at faithful fast² (făst) v. intr. fast-ed, fast-ing, fasts. 1. To abstain from food. 2. To eat very little or abstain from certain foods, especially as a religious discipline. — n. 1. The act or practice of abstaining from or eating very little food. 2. A period of such abstention or self-denial. [Middle English fasten, from Old English fæstan. See past- in Appendix.]

fast-back (făst'băk') n. An automobile designed with a curving downward slope from roof to rear.

fast-ball (făst'bôl') n. Baseball. A pitch thrown at the pitcher's maximum speed.

fast break (făst brāk) n. Sports. A rush by the offense, as in basketball, toward the goal in an attempt to score before the opposing team readies a defense.

fast-breed-er reactor (făst'brē'dər rē-ăk'tər) n. A breeder reactor that requires high-speed neutrons to produce fissionable material.

fast buck (făst бүk) n. Slang. Money acquired quickly with little effort and sometimes unscrupulously: made a fast buck in the stock market.

fas-ten (făs'ən) v. fas-tened, fas-ten-ing, fas-tens. — v. tr. 1. To attach firmly to something else, as by pinning or nailing. 2. a. To make fast or secure. b. To close, as by fixing firmly in place. 3. To fix or direct steadily: fastened her gaze on the stranger. 4. To place; attribute: fastened the blame on the weather. 5. To impose (oneself) without welcome. — v. intr. 1. To become attached, fixed, or joined. 2. To take firm hold; cling fast: fasten on a notion. 3. To focus steadily; concentrate: All eyes fastened on the speaker. [Middle English fastnen, from Old English fæstnian. See past- in Appendix.] — fas'ten-er n.

SYNONYMS: fasten, anchor, fix, moor, secure. The central meaning shared by these verbs is “to cause to remain firmly or fast in position or place”: fastened our seat belts; anchored the television antenna to the roof; fixed the flagpole in concrete; mooring the rowboat at the dock; secures her chignon with hairpins.

ANTONYM: unfasten

fas·ten·ing (fäs'ə-nĭng) n. Something, such as a hook, used to attach one thing to another firmly.

fast food (fäst fōōd) n. Inexpensive food, such as hamburgers and fried chicken, prepared and served quickly for consumption on the premises or elsewhere. —fast'-food' (fäst'fōōd') adj.

fast-for·ward (fäst-fôr'wərd) n. or fast forward 1. a. A function on an electronic recording device, such as a videocassette or tape player, that permits rapid advancement of the tape. b. The mechanism, such as a button, used to activate this function. 2. Informal. A rapidly changing situation or series of events: “The trial was on fast forward” (Nelson DeMille). — v. fast-for·ward·ed, fast-for·ward·ing, fast-for·wards. — v. intr. To advance a tape rapidly on an electronic recording device. — v. tr. To advance (a tape) rapidly on such a device.

fas·tid·i·ous (fä-stĭd'ē-əs, fə-) adj. 1. Possessing or displaying careful, meticulous attention to detail. 2. Difficult to please; exacting. 3. Excessively scrupulous or sensitive, especially in matters of taste or propriety. See Synonyms at meticulous. 4. Microbiology. Having complicated nutritional requirements. [Middle English, squeamish, particular, haughty, from Old French fastidieux, from Latin fastīdiōsus, from fastīdium, squeamishness, haughtiness, probably from fastus, disdain.] —fas·tid/i·ous·ly adv. —fas·tid/i·ous·ness n.

fas·tig·i·ate (fä-stĭj'ē-ĭt) also fas·tig·i·at·ed (-ē-ā'tĭd) adj. Botany. Having erect and almost parallel branches tapering toward the top, as in the Lombardy poplar. [Medieval Latin fastigiātus, high, from Latin fastĭgium, apex, height.] —fas·tig/i·ate·ly adv.

fas·tig·i·um (fä-stĭj'ē-əm) n. The period of maximum severity or intensity of a disease or fever. [Latin, apex, height.]

fast lane (fäst lān) n. Informal. A reckless, self-indulgent, and free-spending sphere of activity, often involving dissipation: “the culinary fast lane... where sea urchins and arugula salads flourish” (Boston Globe). —fast'-lane' (fäst'lān') adj.

fast·ness (fäst'nĭs) n. 1. The condition or quality of being fast, especially: a. Firmness; security. b. Rapidity; swiftness. 2. The quality or condition of color retention; colorfastness. 3. a. A secure or fortified place; a stronghold. b. A remote, secret place.

fast one (fäst wün) n. Informal. A shrewd trick or swindle; a deceitful or treacherous act.

fast-talk (fäst'tôk') v. tr. fast-talked, fast-talk-ing, fast-talks. Informal. To persuade, mislead, or obtain with a smooth line of talk: fast-talked him out of his money; fast-talked her way into the show. —fast-talk'er n.

fast track (fäst träk) n. Informal. The quickest and most direct route to achievement of a goal, as in competing for professional advancement: “Making complaints against the public is hardly the fast track to elective office” (New Yorker). —fast-track' (fäst'träk') adj. —fast track'er n.

fat (fät) n. 1. a. The ester of glycerol and one, two, or three fatty acids. b. Any of various soft, solid, or semisolid organic compounds constituting the esters of glycerol and fatty acids and their associated organic groups. c. A mixture of such compounds occurring widely in organic tissue, especially in the adipose tissue of animals and in the seeds, nuts, and fruits of plants. d. Animal tissue containing such substances. e. A solidified animal or vegetable oil. 2. Obesity; corpulence. 3. The best or richest part: living off the fat of the land. 4. Unnecessary excess: “would drain the appropriation's fat without cutting into education's muscle” (New York Times). — adj. fat-ter, fat-test. 1. Having much or too much fat or flesh; plump or obese. 2. Full of fat or oil; greasy. 3. Abounding in desirable elements. 4. Fertile or productive; rich: “It was a fine, green, fat landscape” (Robert Louis Stevenson). 5. Having an abundance or amplitude; well-stocked: a fat larder. 6. a. Yielding profit or plenty; lucrative or rewarding: a fat promotion. b. Prosperous; wealthy: grew fat on illegal profits. 7. a. Thick; large: a fat book. b. Puffed up; swollen: a fat lip. — v. tr. intr. fat-ted, fat-ting, fats. To make or become fat; fatten. —idioms. a fat lot. Slang. Very little or none at all: a fat lot of good it will do him. fat chance. Slang. Very little or no chance. [Middle English, from Old English fætt. See peiə- in Appendix.] —fat'ly adv. —fat'-ness n.

SYNONYMS: fat, obese, corpulent, fleshy, portly, stout, pudgy, rotund, plump, chubby. These adjectives mean having an abundance and often an excess of flesh. Fat implies excessive weight and is generally unfavorable in its connotations: not merely overweight but downright fat. Obese and corpulent imply gross overweight: “a woman of robust frame... though stout, not obese” (Charlotte Brontë). Her father is too corpulent to play handball. Fleshy implies a not necessarily excessive abundance of flesh: firm, fleshy arms. Portly and stout are sometimes used as polite terms to describe fatness. In stricter application portly refers to a person whose bulk is combined with a stately or imposing bearing, and stout, to a person with a thickset, bulky figure: “a portly, rubicund man of middle age” (Winston Churchill). Even slim girls can become stout matrons. Pudgy means short and fat: pudgy fingers. Rotund suggests roundness of figure, often in a squat person: “this pink-faced rotund specimen of prosperity" (George Eliot). Plump applies to a pleasing fullness of figure: a plump, rosy little girl. A chubby person is round and plump: a chubby toddler; chubby cheeks.

fa·tal (fāt'1) adj. 1. Causing or capable of causing death. 2. Causing ruin or destruction; disastrous: "Such doctrines, if true, would be absolutely fatal to my theory" (Charles Darwin). 3. Of decisive importance; fateful. 4. Determining destiny; controlled by fate. 5. Obsolete. Having been destined; fated. [Middle English, fateful, from Old French, from Latin fātālis, from fātum, prophecy, doom. See FATE.]

SYNONYMS: fatal, deadly, mortal, lethal. These adjectives apply to what causes or is likely to cause death. Fatal describes conditions, circumstances, or events that have caused or are destined inevitably to cause death or dire consequences: a fatal accident; a fatal illness. "It is fatal to enter any war without the will to win it" (Douglas MacArthur). Deadly means capable of killing: a deadly weapon; a deadly poison. Mortal describes a condition or action that has produced or is about to produce death: a mortal wound. Lethal refers to a sure agent of death that may have been created solely for the purpose of killing: execution by lethal injection; a lethal dose of barbiturates.

fa·tal·ism (fāt'1-iz'əm) n. 1. The doctrine that all events are predetermined by fate and are therefore unalterable. 2. Acceptance of the belief that all events are predetermined and inevitable. —fa'tal·ist n. —fa'tal·is'tic adj.
—fa'tal·is'ti·cal·ly adv.

fa·tal·i·ty (fā-tāl'i-tē, fə-) n. pl. fa·tal·i·ties. 1. a. A death resulting from an accident or a disaster: highway fatalities. b. One that is killed as a result of such an occurrence: The driver was one of the fatalities. 2. The ability to cause death or disaster. 3. The quality of being determined by fate. 4. A decree made by fate; destiny. 5. The quality of being doomed to disaster.

fatality rate (fā-tāl'i-tē rāt) n. See death rate.

fa·tal·ly (fāt'1-ē) adv. 1. So as to cause death; mortally: fatally injured. 2. So as to result in disaster or ruin. 3. According to the decree of fate; inevitably.

fa·ta mor·ga·na (fā'tə mōr-gä'nə) n. See mirage (n., sense 1). [Italian, mirage, Morgan le Fay (from the belief that the mirage was caused by her witchcraft) : fata, fairy (from Vulgar Latin fāta, goddess of fate); see FAIRY + Morgana, Morgan (probably from Old Irish Morrigan).]

fat·back (fāt'1bāk') n. The strip of fat from the upper part of a side of pork, usually dried and salt-cured.

fat body (făt böd'ē) n. 1. A food reserve of fatty tissue in the larval stages of certain insects. 2. A mass of fatty tissue located near the genital glands in some amphibians, including the frogs and toads.

fat cat (făt kăt) n. Slang. 1. A wealthy and highly privileged person. 2. A wealthy person who is a heavy contributor to a political campaign.

fat cell (făt sěl) n. Any of various cells found in adipose tissue that are specialized for the storage of fat. Also called adipocyte

Fat City or fat city (făt sīt'ē) n. Slang. A condition or set of circumstances characterized by great prosperity.

fate (fāt) n. 1. a. The supposed force, principle, or power that predetermines events. b. The inevitable events predestined by this force. 2. A final result or consequence; an outcome. 3. Unfavorable destiny; doom. 4. Fates. Greek Mythology & Roman Mythology. The three goddesses, Clotho, Lachesis, and Atropos, who control human destiny. Used with the. [Middle English, from Old French fat, from Latin fātum, prophecy, doom, neuter past participle of fārī, to speak. See bhā-² in Appendix.]

SYNONYMS: fate, destiny, kismet, lot, portion. The central meaning shared by these nouns is “something that is inevitably destined to happen to a person”: deserved a worse fate; complained about their miserable destiny; a meeting foreordained by kismet; has a happy lot; success that was her portion.

fat·ed (fā'tīd) adj. 1. Governed by fate; predetermined. 2. Condemned to death or destruction; doomed: the fated city of Troy.

fate·ful (fāt'fəl) adj. 1. Vitally affecting subsequent events; being of great consequence; momentous: a fateful decision to counterattack. 2. Controlled by or as if by fate; predetermined. 3. Bringing death or disaster; fatal. 4. Ominously prophetic; portentous: a fateful sign. —fate'ful·ly adv. —fate'ful·ness n.

fath or fath. abbr. Fathom.

fat·head (făt'hēd') n. Slang. A person regarded as stupid. —fat'head'ed adj. —fat'head'ed·ly adv. —fat'head'ed·ness n.

fa·ther (fä'thər) n. 1. A man who begets or raises or nurtures a child. 2. A male parent of an animal. 3. A male ancestor. 4. A man who creates, originates, or founds something: Chaucer is considered the father of English poetry. 5. An early form; a prototype. 6. Father. a. God. b. The first person of the Christian Trinity. 7. An elderly or venerable man. Used as a title of respect. 8. A member of the senate in ancient Rome. 9. One of the leading men, as of a city: the town fathers. 10. Or Father. A church father. 11. Abbr. Fr. a. A priest or clergyman in the Roman Catholic or Anglican churches. b. Used as a title and form of address with or without the clergyman's name. — v. fa·thered, fa·ther·ing, fa·thers. — v. tr. 1. To procreate (offspring) as the male parent. 2. Usage Problem. To act or serve as a father to (a child). 3. To create, found, or originate. 4. To acknowledge responsibility for. 5. a. To attribute the paternity, creation, or origin of. b. To assign falsely or unjustly; foist. — v. intr. Usage Problem. To act or serve as a father. [Middle English fader, from Old English fæder. See pater in Appendix.]

USAGE NOTE: The verb father has come to be used widely to mean specifically to “perform the child-rearing functions of a father,” particularly in the gerund fathering, as in Fathering a step-child takes considerable tact and understanding. This usage reflects the same social changes that have led to the analogous use of the verb parent and has met with the same kinds of critical resistance. In the most recent survey the example cited was rejected by 64 percent of the Usage Panel. A problem particular to this use of father is that it may occasion opportunities for humorous misconstruction, since it is in direct competition with the older sense of “beget.” • It is notable that the analogous use of mother as a verb meaning specifically “to perform the child-rearing functions of a mother” is encountered only rarely. It is likely that the discrepancy in the frequency of these new uses of mother and father reflects the fact that recent writers on family life have tended to place more emphasis on a reconceptualization of the traditional paternal role in child-rearing. See Usage Note at parent.

Father Christmas (fä'thər krīs'məs) n. Chiefly British. Santa Claus.

father confessor (fä'thər kən-fēs'ər) n. 1. A priest who hears confessions. 2. A person in whom one confides.

father figure (fä'thər fīg'yər) n. An older man, often one in a position of power or influence, who elicits the emotions usually reserved for a father.

fa·ther·hood (fä'thər-hööd') n. 1. The state of being a father. 2. The qualities of a father. 3. Fathers considered as a group.

fa·ther-in-law (fä'thər-ın-lô') n. pl. fa·thers-in-law (fä'thərz-). 1. The father of one's husband or wife. 2. Archaic. A stepfather.

fa·ther·land (fä'thər-länd') n. 1. One's native land. 2. The land of one's ancestors.

fa·ther·less (fä'thər-līs) adj. 1. Having no living father. 2. Having no known father. —fa'ther-less-ness n.

fa·ther·ly (fä'thər-lē) adj. 1. Of, like, or appropriate to a father: fatherly love. 2. Showing the affection of a father. — adv. In a manner befitting a father. —fa'ther-li-ness n.

Fa·ther's Day (fä'thərz dā) n. The third Sunday in June, observed in the United States in honor of fathers.

fath·om (fäth'əm) n. pl. fathom or fath·oms. Abbr. fath, fath., fm., fth. A unit of length equal to 6 feet (1.83 meters), used principally in the measurement and specification of marine depths. — v. tr. fath·omed, fath·om·ing, fath·oms. 1. To determine the depth of; sound. 2. To penetrate to the meaning or nature of; comprehend. [Middle English fathme, from Old English fæthm, outstretched arms. See petə- in Appendix.] —fath'om·a·ble adj.

Fa·thom·e·ter (fă-thŏm'ī-tər) A trademark used for a sonic depth finder.

fath·om·less (făth'əm-līs) adj. 1. Too deep to be fathomed or measured.

2. Too obscure or complicated to be understood. —fath'om·less·ly adv.

—fath'om·less·ness n.

fa·tid·ic (fə-tīd'īk) also fa·tid·i·cal (-ī-kəl) adj. Relating to or characterized by prophecy; prophetic. [Latin fātīdicus : fātum, prophecy, doom; see FATE + dīcere, to say; see deik- in Appendix.]

fat·i·ga·ble (făt'ī-gə-bəl) adj. Subject to fatigue. [French, from Old French, from Late Latin fatīgābilis, from Latin fatīgāre, to fatigue.] —fat'ī·ga·bil'ī·ty n.

fa·tigue (fə-tēg') n. 1. Physical or mental weariness resulting from exertion.

2. Something, such as tiring effort or activity, that causes weariness: the fatigue of a long hike. 3. Physiology. The decreased capacity or complete inability of an organism, an organ, or a part to function normally because of excessive stimulation or prolonged exertion. 4. The weakening or failure of a material, such as metal or wood, resulting from prolonged stress. 5. a. Manual or menial labor, such as barracks cleaning, assigned to soldiers. b. fatigues. Clothing worn by military personnel for labor or for field duty. — v. fa·tigated, fa·tigu·ing, fa·tigues. — v. tr. 1. To tire with physical or mental exertion; weary. 2. To create fatigue in (a metal or other material). — v. intr. To be or become fatigued. See Synonyms at tire¹. [French, from Old French, from fatiguer, to fatigue, from Latin fatīgāre.]

Fat·i·ma also Fat·i·mah (făt'ə-mə), 616?-633. Daughter of the Islamic prophet Mohammed. She married Ali, among the first to embrace Islam, and is considered by Muslims to be one of the Four Perfect Women.

Fá·ti·ma (făt'ə-mə) A village of west-central Portugal north-northeast of Lisbon. It became a pilgrimage site after the reported appearance of the Virgin Mary to three children in 1917.

Fat·i·mah (făt'ə-mə) See Fatima.

Fat·i·mid (făt'ə-mīd') also Fat·i·mite (-mīt') A Muslim dynasty that ruled North Africa and parts of Egypt (909-1171).

fat·ling (făt'līng) n. A young animal, such as a lamb or calf, fattened for slaughter.

fat pine (făt pīn) n. Chiefly Southern U.S. Easily ignited, resin-rich kindling.

Regional. Also called fatwood See Regional note at lightwood.

fat·so (făt'sō) n. pl. fat·soes. Slang. A fat person.

fat·sol·u·ble (făt'söl'yə-bəl) adj. Soluble in fats or fat solvents.

fat·ten (făt'n) v. fat·tened, fat·ten·ing, fat·tens. — v. tr. 1. To make plump or fat. 2. To fertilize (land). 3. To increase the amount or substance of; swell: fatten one's bank account. — v. intr. To grow fat or fatter. —fat'ten·er n.

fat·tish (făt'ish) adj. Somewhat fat. —fat'tish·ness n.

fat·ty (făt'ē) adj. fat·ti·er, fat·ti·est. 1. Containing or composed of fat: fatty food; fatty deposits. 2. Characteristic of fat; greasy. 3. Derived from or chemically related to fat. — n. pl. fat·ties. Informal. A fat person. —fat'ti·ly adv. —fat'ti·ness n.

fatty acid (făt'ē äs'id) n. Any of a large group of monobasic acids, especially those found in animal and vegetable fats and oils, having the general formula $C_nH_{2n+1}COOH$. Characteristically made up of saturated or unsaturated aliphatic compounds with an even number of carbon atoms, this group of acids includes palmitic, stearic, and oleic acids.

fatty alcohol (făt'ē ä'l'kə-hôl') n. Any of various alcohols derived from plant or animal oils and fats and used in plastics and pharmaceuticals.

fatty degeneration (făt'ē dī-jěn'ə-rā'shən) n. Pathology. The accumulation of fat globules within the cells of a bodily organ, such as the liver or heart, resulting in deterioration of tissue and diminished functioning of the affected organ.

fa·tu·i·ty (fə-tōō'ī-tē, -tyōō'-, fä-) n. pl. fa·tu·i·ties. 1. Smug stupidity; utter foolishness. 2. Something that is utterly stupid or silly. [Latin fatuitās, from fatuus, silly, foolish.]

fat·u·ous (fäch'ōō-əs) adj. 1. Vacuously, smugly, and unconsciously foolish. See Synonyms at foolish. 2. Delusive; unreal: fatuous hopes. [From Latin fatuus.] —fat'u·ous·ly adv. —fat'u·ous·ness n.

fat·wood (făt'wōōd') n. Chiefly Southern U.S. See fat pine. See Regional note at lightwood.

fau·bourg (fō'bōōr', -bōōrg') n. New Orleans. A district of metropolitan New Orleans lying outside the original city limits. See Regional note at beignet. [Middle English faubourgh, from Old French faubourg, alteration (influenced by faux, false, from Latin falsus); see FALSE, of forsborc: fors, outside (from Latin foris); see dhwer- in Appendix + borc, town (from Late Latin burgus, fort, of Germanic origin); see bhergh-² in Appendix.]

REGIONAL NOTE: The close political ties between Scotland and France during the 15th through 17th centuries were reflected in linguistic borrowing from French to Scots, as in the case of faubourg, a synonym for suburb. In England fau-bourg seems to have lost the competition with the more popular suburb. However, in contemporary American English the word still exists, although it is virtually confined to the city of New Orleans, where, in fact, faubourg remains in use because of the city's French background. Even there it is used not as a common noun like suburb but in combination in the names of various quarters of the city, for example, Faubourg Sainte Marie. These city districts, like their counterparts in Paris, such as Faubourg Saint-Germain and Faubourg Saint-Antoine, originally lay outside the city limits, hence the designation faubourg, originally from Old French fors, “outside,” and borc, “town.” As the population grew outward, these former suburbs became part of the city proper.

fau-cal (fô'kəl) adj. Botany. Relating to the throat of a corolla with fused petals. [From Latin faux, fauc-, throat.]

fau-ces (fô'sēz') pl.n. (used with a sing. or pl. verb). The passage from the back of the mouth to the pharynx, bounded by the soft palate, the base of the tongue, and the palatine arches. [Middle English, from Latin faucēs.] —fau'cal (-kəl), fau'cial (-shəl) adj.

fau-cet (fô'sīt) n. A device for regulating the flow of a liquid from a reservoir such as a pipe or drum. [Middle English, from Old French fausset, cask stopper, from fausser, to break in, from Late Latin falsāre, to falsify, from Latin falsus, false. See FALSE.]

Faulk-ner also Falk-ner (fôk'nər), William. 1897-1962. American writer who set many of his works, such as the novels The Sound and the Fury (1929) and The Unvanquished (1938), in the imaginary Yoknapatawpha County, a microcosm of the postbellum South, in which he explored the decay of traditional Southern values. He won the 1949 Nobel Prize for literature. —Faulk-ner'i-an (fôk-nîr'ē-ən) adj.

fault (fôlt) n. 1. a. A character weakness, especially a minor one. b. Something that impairs or detracts from physical perfection; a defect. c. A mistake; an error. d. A minor offense or misdeed. 2. Responsibility for a mistake or an offense; culpability. 3. Geology. A fracture in the continuity of a rock formation caused by a shifting or dislodging of the earth's crust, in which adjacent surfaces are differentially displaced parallel to the plane of fracture. Also called shift. 4. Electronics. A defect in a circuit or wiring caused by imperfect connections, poor insulation, grounding, or shorting. 5. Sports. A bad service, as in tennis. 6. Obsolete. A lack or deficiency. — v. fault-ed, fault-ing, faults. — v. tr. 1. To find error or defect in; criticize or blame. 2. Geology. To produce a fault in; fracture. — v. intr. 1. To commit a mistake or an error. 2. Geology. To shift so as to produce a fault. —idioms. at fault. 1. Deserving of blame; guilty: admitted to being at fault. 2. Confused and puzzled. find fault. To seek, find, and complain about faults; criticize: found fault with his speech. to a fault. To an excessive degree: generous to a fault. [Middle English faulte, from Old French, from Vulgar Latin fallita*, feminine past participle of Latin fallere, to deceive, fail.]

SYNONYMS: fault, failing, weakness, frailty, foible, vice. These nouns denote an imperfection or deficiency of character. A fault is a quality or trait that detracts from moral excellence: “If we had no faults of our own, we would not take so much pleasure in noticing those of others” (La Rochefoucauld). A failing is a minor fault or shortcoming: “An inability to stay quiet... is one of the most conspicuous failings of mankind” (Walter Bagehot). Weakness suggests deficiency of moral strength or force of character: “We must touch his weaknesses with a delicate hand. There are some faults so nearly allied to excellence, that we can scarce weed out the fault without eradicating the virtue” (Oliver Goldsmith). The term is related to but stronger than frailty, which implies the likelihood of yielding to temptation: “Our frailties are invincible, our virtues barren” (Robert Louis Stevenson). Even weaker in imputing censure is foible, which refers to a minor defect that is easily overlooked and may even be endearing: “Science is his forte, and omniscience his foible” (Sydney Smith). Vice in this comparison refers to a moral flaw or in a weaker sense to a defect of character: “Lord, Lord, how subject we old men are to this vice of lying!” (Shakespeare). “Obstinacy, Sir, is certainly a great vice” (Edmund Burke). See also Synonyms at blame blemish fault·find·er (fôlt'fîn'dər) n. One who is given to petty criticism and constant complaint.

fault·find·ing (fôlt'fîn'dĩng) n. Petty or nagging criticism; carping. — adj. Disposed to find fault. See Synonyms at critical.

fault·less (fôlt'lis) adj. Being without fault. See Synonyms at perfect. — fault/less·ly adv. — fault/less·ness n.

fault plane (fôlt plān) n. Geology. The plane along which the break or shear of a fault occurs.

fault·y (fôl'tē) adj. fault·i·er, fault·i·est. 1. Containing a fault or defect; imperfect or defective. 2. Obsolete. Deserving of blame; guilty. — fault/i·ly adv. — fault/i·ness n.

faun (fôn) n. Roman Mythology. Any of a group of rural deities represented as having the body of a man and the horns, ears, tail, and sometimes legs of a goat. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin Faunus, Faunus.]

fau·na (fô'nə) n. pl. fau·nas or fau·nae (-nē'). 1. Animals, especially the animals of a particular region or period, considered as a group. 2. A catalog of the animals of a specific region or period. [Late Latin Fauna, sister of Faunus.] — fau/nal adj. — fau/nal·ly adv.

fau·nis·tic (fô-nĩs'tik) adj. Of or relating to the geographic distribution of animals. — fau·nis'ti·cal·ly adv.

Fau·nus (fô'nəs) n. Roman Mythology. A god of nature and fertility. [Latin.]

Faure (fôr, fōr), François Félix. 1841-1899. French politician who served as president (1895-1899) of the Third Republic.

Fau·ré (fō-rā'), Gabriel Urbain. 1845-1924. French composer chiefly noted for his songs, including the cycle La Bonne Chanson (1891-1892), and for his Requiem (1887).

Faust (foust) also Faus·tus (fou'stəs, fô'-) n. A magician and alchemist in German legend who sells his soul to the devil in exchange for power and knowledge. [German, after Johann Faust (1480?-1540?), German magician and alchemist.]

—Faust'i-an (fou'stē-ən) adj.

faute de mieux (fôt də myœ') adv. For lack of something better. [French : faute, lack + de, of + mieux, better.]

fau·teuil (fō'tīl, fō-tœ'yə) n. An upholstered armchair usually having open sides. [French, from Old French faldestoel, of Germanic origin. See pel⁻² in Appendix.]

fau·vism (fō'vīz'əm) n. An early 20th-century movement in painting begun by a group of French artists and marked by the use of bold, often distorted forms and vivid colors. [French fauvisme, from fauve, wild animal, from fauve, wild, reddish-yellow, from Old French falve, reddish-yellow, from Frankish falw-. See pel⁻¹ in Appendix.] —fau'vist adj.

faux (fō) adj. Artificial; fake: faux pearls. [French, from Old French fals. See FALSE.]

faux-na·if also faux-naif (fō-nä-ēf') adj. Marked by a false show of innocent simplicity: “Their gee-whiz, faux-naif comportment is not always convincing” (Madison Bell). [French : faux, false + naïf, naive.]

faux pas (fō pä') n. pl. faux pas (fō pätz'). A social blunder. [French : faux, false + pas, step.]

fa·va bean (fä'və bēn) n. See broad bean. [Italian fava, from Latin faba, broad bean. See bha-bhā- in Appendix.]

fa·ve·la (fə-vē'lə) n. A shantytown or slum, especially in Brazil. [Portuguese, possibly from diminutive of favo, honeycomb (from Latin favus), or from favelas, probably from pl. of favela, spurge (from fava, bean, from Latin faba); see FAVA BEAN.]

fa·ve·o·late (fə-vē'lə-lāt') adj. Pitted with cavities or cells; honeycombed. [From New Latin faveolus : Latin favus, honeycomb + (ALV)EOLUS.]

fa·vo·ni·an (fə-vō'nē-ən) adj. 1. Of or relating to the west wind. 2. Mild; benign. [Latin Favōniānus, from Favōnius, the west wind.]

fa·vor (fä'vər) n. 1. A gracious, friendly, or obliging act that is freely granted: do someone a favor. 2. a. Friendly or favorable regard; approval or support: won the favor of the monarch; looked with favor on the plan. b. A state of being held in such regard: a style currently in favor. 3. Unfair partiality; favoritism. 4. a. A privilege or concession. b. favors. Sexual privileges, especially as granted by a woman. 5. a. Something given as a token of love, affection, or remembrance. b. A small decorative gift given to each guest at a party. 6. Advantage; benefit:

sailed under favor of cloudless skies. 7. Behalf; interest: an error in our favor.
8. Obsolete. A communication, especially a letter. 9. Archaic. a. Aspect or appearance. b. Countenance; face. 10. Obsolete. A facial feature. — v. fa·vored, fa·vor·ing, fa·vors. — v. tr. 1. To perform a kindness or service for; oblige. See Synonyms at oblige. 2. To treat or regard with friendship, approval, or support. 3. To be partial to; indulge a liking for: favors bright colors.
4. To be or tend to be in support of. 5. To make easier or more possible; facilitate: Darkness favored their escape. 6. To treat with care; be gentle with: favored my wounded leg. 7. Chiefly Southern U.S. To resemble in appearance: She favors her father. — v. intr. Chiefly Southern U.S. To resemble another in appearance: She and her father favor. — idiom. in favor of. 1. In support of; approving: We are in favor of her promotion to president. 2. To the advantage of: The court decided in favor of the plaintiff. 3. Inscribed or made out to the benefit of: a check in favor of a charity. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin, from favēre, to be favorable.] — fa'vor·er n. — fa'vor·ing·ly adv.

REGIONAL NOTE: When a Southerner favors a relative, he or she is not giving that person special privileges; rather, the Southerner looks like that relative. Favor can be either transitive—She favors her father—or intransitive with a compound subject: She and her father favor. This sense of favor goes back to early modern English: “This young lord Chamont/Favors my mother” (Ben Jonson). The verb derives from the noun favor, which was used from the 15th to the 19th century to mean “appearance, aspect; the countenance, face”: “What makes thy favor like the bloodless head/Fall’n on the block?” (Tennyson). This sense of the noun is now archaic, but the verb thrives in the English of the Southern United States.

fa·vor·a·ble (fā'vər-ə-bəl, fāv'rə-) adj. 1. Advantageous; helpful: favorable winds. 2. Encouraging; propitious: a favorable diagnosis. 3. Manifesting approval; commendatory: a favorable report. 4. Winning approval; pleasing: a favorable impression. 5. Granting what has been desired or requested: a favorable reply. 6. Indulgent or partial: listened with a favorable ear. — fa'vor·a·ble·ness n. — fa'vor·a·bly adv.

SYNONYMS: favorable, propitious, auspicious, benign, conducive. These adjectives describe what is indicative of a successful outcome. Favorable can refer to people, conditions, or circumstances that contribute in a positive way to the attainment of a goal: I hope you will give favorable consideration to my suggestion. The performance received a favorable review. Propitious implies a favorable tendency or inclination: “Miracles are propitious accidents, the natural causes of which are too complicated to be readily understood” (George Santayana). Auspicious refers to what by its favorable nature presages good fortune: The project had an auspicious beginning. Benign applies to people or things that exert a beneficial influence: "I lingered round them, under that benign sky... and wondered how anyone could ever imagine unquiet slumbers, for the sleepers in that quiet earth" (Emily Brontë). Something conducive leads or contributes to a result, often a desirable one: "Nothing is more conducive to happiness than the free exercise of the mind in pursuits congenial to it" (Macaulay).

fa·vored (fā'vərd) adj. 1. Treated or thought of with great kindness or partiality: the favored child. 2. Endowed with special gifts, talents, or advantages. 3. Having an appearance of a specified kind. Often used in combination: ill-favored; well-favored.

fa·vor·ite (fā'vər-īt, fāv'rit) n. 1. a. One that enjoys special favor or regard. b. One that is trusted, indulged, or preferred above all others, especially by a superior: a favorite of the monarch. 2. A contestant or competitor regarded as most likely to win. — adj. Liked or preferred above all others; regarded with special favor. [Obsolete French favorit, from Old Italian favorito, past participle of favorire, to favor, from favore, favor, from Latin favor. See FAVOR.]

favorite son (fā'vər-īt sŭn) n. 1. A man favored for nomination as a presidential candidate by his own state delegates at a national political convention. 2. A famous man viewed with much favor by his hometown for his achievements.

fa·vor·it·ism (fā'vər-ī-tīz'əm, fāv'ri-) n. 1. A display of partiality toward a favored person or group. 2. The state of being held in special favor.

fa·vour (fā'vər) n. & v. Chiefly British. Variant of favor.

fa·vus (fā'vəs) n. A chronic skin infection, usually of the scalp, caused by fungi of the genus Trichophyton and characterized by the development of thick, yellow crusts over the hair follicles. [Latin, honeycomb.]

Fawkes (fôks), Guy. 1570-1606. English conspirator executed for his role in the Gunpowder Plot, an attempt to kill James I and blow up Parliament on November 5, 1605, to avenge the persecution of Roman Catholics in England.

fawn¹ (fôn) v. intr. fawned, fawn·ing, fawns. 1. To exhibit affection or attempt to please, as a dog does by wagging its tail, whining, or cringing. 2. To seek favor or attention by flattery and obsequious behavior. [Middle English faunen, from Old English fagnian, to rejoice, from fagen, fægen, glad.]

—fawn'er n. —fawn'ing·ly adv.

SYNONYMS: fawn, apple-polish, bootlick, kowtow, slaver, toady, truckle. The central meaning shared by these verbs is "to curry favor by behaving obsequiously and submissively": fawned on her superior; students apple-polishing the teacher; bootlicked to get a promotion; lawyers kowtowing to a judge; slavered over his rich uncle; toadying to members of the occupation force; nobles truckling to the king.

fawn² (fôn) n. 1. A young deer, especially one less than a year old. 2. Color. A grayish yellow brown to light grayish or moderate reddish brown. [Middle English, from Old French foun, faon, feon, young animal, from Vulgar Latin fētō*, ·fētōn-, from Latin fētus, offspring. See dhē(i)- in Appendix.]

fawn lily (fôn līl'ē) n. Any of several North American lilies of the genus Erythronium, especially E. californicum of western North America, having nodding, usually yellow flowers and often mottled leaves.

fax (fäks) n. See facsimile (n., sense 2). — v. tr. faxed, fax-ing, fax-es. To transmit (printed matter or an image) by electronic means. [Shortening and alteration of FACSIMILE.]

fay¹ (fā) v. tr. intr. fayed, fay-ing, fays. To join or fit closely or tightly. [Middle English feien, from Old English fēgan. See pag- in Appendix.]

fay² (fā) n. A fairy or an elf. [Middle English faie, enchanted person or place, from Old French fae. See FAIRY.]

fay³ (fā) n. Archaic. Faith: “Sirrah, by my fay, it waxes late” (Shakespeare). [Middle English fai, from Anglo-Norman fei, fed. See FAITH.]

Fa·yal (fə-yäl', fä-) See Faial.

fay-a·lite (fā'ə-līt') n. A yellowish to black mineral, Fe₂SiO₄, of the olivine group. [German Fayalit, from Fayal, Faial.]

Fay-ette-ville (fā'īt-vīl', -vəl) 1. A city of northwest Arkansas in the Ozark Plateau north-northeast of Fort Smith. The University of Arkansas (established 1871) is here. Population, 42,099. 2. A city of south-central North Carolina south-southwest of Raleigh. Founded by Scottish colonists in 1739, it was a Tory center during the American Revolution. Population, 75,695.

faze (fāz) v. tr. fazed, faz-ing, faz-es. To disrupt the composure of; disconcert. See Synonyms at embarrass. [Middle English fesen, to drive away, frighten, from Old English fēsian.]

fb also f.b. abbr. Sports. Fullback.

F.B. abbr. 1. Foreign body. 2. Freight bill.

FBI also F.B.I. abbr. Federal Bureau of Investigation.

fc abbr. Foot-candle.

f.c. abbr. Printing. Follow copy.

FCA abbr. Farm Credit Administration.

fcap. abbr. Foolscap.

FCC abbr. Federal Communications Commission.

F clef (ěf' klěf) n. Music. See bass clef.

fcp. abbr. Foolscap.

FCS or F.C.S. abbr. Fellow of the Chemical Society.

fcy. abbr. Fancy.

FD abbr. 1. Fatal dose. 2. Fire department. 3. Focal distance.

F.D. abbr. Latin. Fidei Defensor (Defender of the Faith).

FDA abbr. Food and Drug Administration.

FDIC abbr. Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

Fe The symbol for the element iron (n., sense 1). [Latin ferrum, iron.]

fe·al·ty (fē'əl-tē) n. pl. fe-al-ties. 1. a. The fidelity owed by a vassal to his feudal lord. b. The oath of such fidelity. 2. Faithfulness; allegiance. See Synonyms at fidelity. [Middle English fealtye, from Old French fealte, from Latin fidēlitās, faithfulness, from fidēlis, faithful, from fidēs, faith. See bheidh- in Appendix.]

fear (fîr) n. 1. a. A feeling of agitation and anxiety caused by the presence or imminence of danger. b. A state or condition marked by this feeling: living in fear. 2. A feeling of disquiet or apprehension: a fear of looking foolish. 3. Extreme reverence or awe, as toward a supreme power. 4. A reason for dread or apprehension: Being alone is my greatest fear. — v. feared, fear-ing, fears. — v. tr. 1. To be afraid or frightened of. 2. To be uneasy or apprehensive about: feared the test results. 3. To be in awe of; revere. 4. To consider probable; expect: I fear you are wrong. I fear I have bad news for you. 5. Archaic. To feel fear within (oneself). — v. intr. 1. To be afraid. 2. To be uneasy or apprehensive. [Middle English fer, from Old English fær, danger, sudden calamity. See per³ in Appendix.] — fear'er n.

SYNONYMS: fear, fright, dread, terror, horror, panic, alarm, dismay, consternation, trepidation. These nouns all denote the agitation and anxiety caused by the presence or imminence of danger. Fear is the most general term: fear of change; fear of flying; fear of death. “Fear is the parent of cruelty” (J.A. Froude). Fright is sudden, usually momentary fear characterized by great agitation: In her fright she forgot to lock the door. Dread is strong fear of something impending, especially of what one is powerless to avoid: He looked forward with dread to the scheduled surgery. Terror is intense, overpowering fear: “the weapon which most readily conquers reason: terror and violence” (Adolf Hitler). Horror is a combination of fear and aversion or repugnance: Murder arouses widespread horror. Panic is sudden frantic fear, often groundless: The fire caused a panic among the horses. Rumors of the President’s illness resulted in panic on the world stock markets. Alarm is fright aroused by the first realization of danger: I watched with alarm as the current carried the raft and its passengers toward the dam. Dismay is apprehension that robs one of courage or the power to act effectively: The appearance of a comet caused universal dismay in the ancient world. Consternation is a state of often paralyzing dismay characterized by confusion and helplessness: Consternation spread throughout the city as the invading army approached. Trepidation is dread characteristically marked by trembling or hesitancy: “They were... full of trepidation about things that were never likely to happen” (John Morley).

WORD HISTORY: Old English fæ̅r, the ancestor of our word fear, meant “calamity, disaster,” but not the emotion engendered by such an event. This is in line with the meaning of the prehistoric Common Germanic word ·fēraz, “danger,” which is the source of words with similar senses in other Germanic languages, such as Old Saxon and Old High German fār, “ambush, danger,” and Old Icelandic fār, “treachery, damage.” Scholars, in fact, have determined the form and meaning of Germanic ·fēraz by working backward from the forms and the meanings of its descendants. The most important cause of the change of meaning in the word fear was probably the existence in Old English of the related verb fæ̅ran, which meant “to terrify, take by surprise.” Fear is first recorded in Middle English with the sense “emotion of fear” in a work composed around 1290.

Fear (fîr), Cape. A promontory on Smith Island off the coast of southeast North Carolina at the mouth of the Cape Fear River.

fear·ful (fîr'fəl) adj. 1. Causing or capable of causing fear; frightening: a fearful howling. 2. Experiencing fear; frightened. See Synonyms at afraid.

3. Feeling or inclined to feel anxiety or apprehension; timid; nervous.

4. Indicating anxiety, fear, or terror: a fearful, nervous glance. 5. Feeling reverence, dread, or awe. 6. Extreme, as in degree or extent; dreadful: a fearful blunder; fearful poverty. —fear'ful·ly adv. —fear'ful·ness n.

fear·less (fîr'lis) adj. Without fear; brave. See Synonyms at brave. —fear'less·ly adv. —fear'less·ness n.

fear·some (fîr'səm) adj. 1. Causing or capable of causing fear: “The Devil is a fearsome enemy” (Jimmy Breslin). 2. Fearful; timid. —fear'some·ly adv. —fear'some·ness n.

fea·si·ble (fē'zə-bəl) adj. 1. Capable of being accomplished or brought about; possible: a feasible plan. See Synonyms at possible. 2. Used or dealt with successfully; suitable: feasible new sources of energy. 3. Logical; likely: a feasible explanation. [Middle English fesable, from Old French faisable, from faire, fais-, to do, from Latin facere. See dhē- in Appendix.] —fea'si·bil'i·ty, fea'si·ble·ness n. —fea'si·bly adv.

feast (fēst) n. 1. a. A large, elaborately prepared meal, usually for many persons and often accompanied by entertainment; a banquet. b. A meal that is well prepared and abundantly enjoyed. 2. A periodic religious festival commemorating an event or honoring a god or saint. 3. Something giving great pleasure or satisfaction: a book that is a veritable feast for the mind. — v. feast·ed, feast·ing, feasts. — v. tr. To give a feast for; entertain or feed sumptuously: feasted the guests on venison. — v. intr. 1. To partake of a feast; eat heartily. 2. To experience something with gratification or delight: feasted on the view. —idiom.

feast (one's) eyes on. To be delighted or gratified by the sight of: We feasted our eyes on the paintings. [Middle English feste, from Old French, from Vulgar Latin fēsta*, from Latin, pl. of fēstum, from fēstus, festive. See dhēs- in Appendix.] —feast'er n.

Feast of Dedication (fēst ÷v dēd'ī-kā'shən) n. Judaism. See Hanukkah.

Feast of Lights (fēst ÷v līts) n. Judaism. See Hanukkah.

feat¹ (fēt) n. 1. A notable act or deed, especially an act of courage; an exploit.

2. An act of skill, endurance, imagination, or strength; an achievement.

3. Obsolete. A specialized skill; a knack. [Middle English fet, from Anglo-Norman, from Latin factum, from neuter past participle of facere, to make, do. See dhē- in Appendix.]

SYNONYMS: feat, achievement, exploit, masterstroke. The central meaning shared by these nouns is “an extraordinary deed or action”: feats of bravery; achievements of diplomacy; military exploits; a masterstroke of entrepreneurship.

feat² (fēt) adj. feat-er, feat-est. Archaic. 1. Adroit; dexterous. 2. Neat; trim.

[Middle English fet, suitable, from Old French fait, from Latin factus, done, made. See FEATURE.] —feat'ly adv.

feath-er (fēth'ər) n. 1. One of the light, flat growths forming the plumage of birds, consisting of numerous slender, closely arranged parallel barbs forming a vane on either side of a horny, tapering, partly hollow shaft. 2. feathers. Plumage. 3. feathers. Clothing; attire. 4. A feathery tuft or fringe of hair, as on the legs or tail of some dogs. 5. Character, kind, or nature: Birds of a feather flock together. 6. Something small, trivial, or inconsequential. 7. a. A strip, wedge, or flange used as a strengthening part. b. A wedge or key that fits into a groove to make a joint. 8. The vane of an arrow. 9. A feather-shaped flaw, as in a precious stone. 10. The wake made by a submarine's periscope. 11. The act of feathering the blade of an oar in rowing. — v. feath-ered, feath-er-ing, feath-ers. —

v. tr. 1. To cover, dress, or decorate with or as if with feathers. 2. To fit (an arrow) with a feather. 3. a. To thin, reduce, or fringe the edge of by cutting, shaving, or wearing away. b. To shorten and taper (hair) by cutting and thinning. 4. To connect with a tongue-and-groove joint. 5. To turn (an oar blade) almost horizontal as it is carried back after each stroke. 6. a. To alter the pitch of (a propeller) so that the chords of the blades are parallel with the line of flight. b. To alter the pitch of (the rotor of a helicopter) while in forward flight. 7. To turn off (an aircraft engine) while in flight. — v. intr. 1. To grow feathers or become feathered. 2. To move, spread, or grow in a manner suggestive of feathers. 3. To feather an oar. 4. To feather a propeller. — idioms. feather in (one's) cap. An act or deed to one's credit; a distinctive achievement. feather (one's) nest. To grow wealthy by taking advantage of one's position or by making use of property or funds left in one's trust. in fine feather (or in good feather) (or in high feather). In excellent form, health, or humor. [Middle English fether, from Old English. See pet- in Appendix.]

feath·er·bed (fĕth'ər-bĕd') v. intr. feath·er·bed·ded, feath·er·bed·ding, feath·er·beds. To engage in or promote featherbedding. — adj. Relating to or promoting featherbedding: featherbed rules.

feather bed (fĕth'ər bĕd) n. 1. A mattress stuffed with feathers. 2. A bed having a feather mattress.

feath·er·bed·ding (fĕth'ər-bĕd'ing) n. The practice of requiring an employer to hire more workers than are needed or to limit their production in keeping with a safety regulation or union rule.

feath·er·bone (fĕth'ər-bōn') n. A lightweight corset bone originally made from the quills of domestic fowl as a substitute for whalebone.

feath·er·brain (fĕth'ər-brān') n. A silly, flighty, or empty-headed person. —feath'·er·brained' adj.

feather duster (fĕth'ər dūs'tər) n. A brush made of a bundle of long feathers fastened to the end of a stick, used for dusting delicate objects.

feath·ered (fĕth'ərd) adj. 1. Covered, provided, or adorned with feathers. 2. Moving swiftly: feathered feet. 3. Having the chords of propeller blades parallel to the line of flight.

feath·er·edge (fĕth'ər-ĕj') n. 1. A thin fragile edge, especially a tapering edge of a board. 2. See deckle edge.

feather grass (fĕth'ər grās) n. Any of various grasses of the genus Stipa, having clusters of featherlike spikelets. Also called needle grass, spear grass.

feath·er·head (fĕth'ər-hĕd') n. A featherbrain. —feath'·er·head'ed adj.

feath·er·ing (fĕth'ər-ing) n. 1. Plumage. 2. The feathers fitted to an arrow. 3. A fringe of hair on an animal's coat, especially on the leg of a dog.

feather palm (fĕth'ər pām) n. A palm having pinnately compound, feather-like leaves.

Feath·er River (fĕth'ər rĭv'ər) A river of central California flowing about 161 km (100 mi) southwest to the Sacramento River near the city of Sacramento.

feather rot (fĕth'ər rōt) n. A disease of tree trunks caused by the fungus Poria subacida that causes the trunk to become spongy or stringy.

feather star (fĕth'ər stār) n. Any of numerous crinoids of the genus Antedon and related genera, having a free-swimming, stalkless adult stage with branched, feathery arms.

feath·er·stitch (fĕth'ər-stĭch') n. An embroidery stitch that produces a decorative zigzag line. —feath'·er·stitch' v.

feath·er·weight (fĕth'ər-wāt') n. 1. Sports. a. A professional boxer weighing more than 118 and not more than 126 pounds (approximately 53.5-57 kilograms), heavier than a bantamweight and lighter than a lightweight. b. A contestant in various other sports in a similar weight class. 2. A person or thing of little weight or size. 3. An insignificant person: a political featherweight. — adj.

1. Of or relating to featherweights. 2. Unimportant; trivial: featherweight political issues.

feath·er·y (fĕth'ə-rē) adj. 1. Covered with or consisting of feathers.

2. Resembling or suggestive of a feather, as in form or lightness.

—feath'er-i-ness n.

fea·ture (fē'chər) n. 1. a. Any of the distinct parts of the face, as the eyes, nose, or mouth. b. Often features. The overall appearance of the face or its parts.

2. A prominent or distinctive aspect, quality, or characteristic: a feature of one's personality; a feature of the landscape. 3. a. The main film presentation at a theater. b. A special attraction at an entertainment. 4. A prominent or special article, story, or department in a newspaper or periodical. 5. An item advertised or offered as particularly attractive or as an inducement: a washing machine with many features. 6. Archaic. a. Outward appearance; form or shape. b. Physical beauty. — v. tr. fea·tured, fea·tur·ing, fea·tures. 1. To give special attention to; display, publicize, or make prominent. 2. To have or include as a prominent part or characteristic: The play featured two well-known actors. 3. To depict or outline the features of. 4. Informal. To picture mentally; imagine: Can you feature her in that hat? [Middle English feture, from Old French faiture, from Latin factūra, a working or making, from factus, past participle of facere, to make, do. See dhē- in Appendix.]

fea·tured (fē'chərd) adj. 1. Given special prominence, attention, or publicity: a featured item at a sale; a featured actor. 2. Having a specified kind of facial features. Often used in combination: sharp-featured; plain-featured.

fea·ture·less (fē'chər-līs) adj. Lacking distinguishing characteristics or features: the featureless landscape of the steppe.

Feb. also Feb abbr. February.

fe·bric·i·ty (fī-brīs'ī-tē) n. The condition of having a fever. [Medieval Latin febricitās, from Latin febricitāre, to have a fever, from febris, fever.]

feb·ri·fa·cient (fĕb'rə-fā'shənt) n. A substance that produces fever. — adj. Causing or producing fever. [Latin febris, fever + -FACIENT.]

fe·brif·ic (fī-brīf'ik) adj. 1. Producing fever. 2. Having a fever; feverish. [Latin febris, fever + -FIC.]

feb·ri·fuge (fĕb'rə-fyōj') n. An agent or a medication that reduces a fever; an antipyretic. — adj. Acting to reduce fever. [Latin febris, fever + -FUGE.]

feb·rile (fĕb'rəl, fē'brəl) adj. Of, relating to, or characterized by fever; feverish. [Late Latin febrilis, from Latin febris, fever.]

Feb·ru·ar·y (fĕb'rō-ər'ē, fĕb'yō-) *n. pl. Feb·ru·ar·ies. Abbr. Feb., Feb The second month of the year in the Gregorian calendar. See Table at calendar. [Middle English Februarie, from Februārius (mēnsis), (month) of purification, from februa, expiatory offerings, possibly of Sabine origin.]*

fec. abbr. Latin. Fecit (he or she made or did it).

fe·cal (fē'kəl) adj. Of, relating to, or composed of feces.

fe·ces (fē'sēz) pl.n. Waste matter eliminated from the bowels; excrement. [Middle English, from Latin faecēs, pl. of faex, dregs.]

Fech·ner (fĕk'nər, fĕKH'-), Gustav Theodor. 1801-1887. German psychologist and physicist who studied the relationship between strength of stimulus and intensity of sensation, thereby founding psychophysics.

feck·less (fĕk'lis) adj. 1. Lacking purpose or vitality; feeble or ineffective.

2. Careless and irresponsible. [Scots feck, effect (alteration of EFFECT) + -LESS.]

—feck'less·ly adv. —feck'less·ness n.

fec·u·lent (fĕk'yə-lənt) adj. Full of foul or impure matter; fecal. [Middle English, from Latin faeculentus, heavy with sediment, from faex, faec-, dregs.]

—fec'u·lence n.

fe·cund (fē'kənd, fĕk'ənd) adj. 1. Capable of producing offspring or vegetation; fruitful. 2. Marked by intellectual productivity. See Synonyms at fertile. [Middle English, from Old French fecond, from Latin fĕcundus. See dhē(i)- in Appendix.]

fe·cun·date (fē'kən-dāt', fĕk'ən-) v. tr. fe·cun·dat·ed, fe·cun·dat·ing, fe·cun·dates. 1. To make fecund or fruitful. 2. To impregnate; fertilize. [Latin fĕcundāre, fĕcundāt-, from fĕcundus, fruitful. See FECUND.] —fe'cun·da'tion n.

fe·cun·di·ty (fī-kŭn'dī-tē) n. 1. The quality or power of producing abundantly; fertility. 2. The capacity for producing offspring, especially in abundance; productiveness. 3. Productive or creative power: fecundity of the mind.

fed (fĕd) v. Past tense and past participle of feed.

Fed (fĕd) n. Informal. 1. a. The Federal Reserve System. b. The Federal Reserve Board. 2. Often fed. A federal agent or official.

fed. abbr. 1. Federal. 2. Federated. 3. Federation.

fe·da·yee (fĕ-dā'yē', -dā'ē', -dā'-) n. pl. fe·da·yees (-yēn', -ēn'). A commando or guerrilla, especially an Arab commando operating in the Middle East. [Arabic fedā'yūn, commandos, from fidā'iy, one who sacrifices himself for his country, from fidā', sacrifice, ransom.]

fed·er·a·cy (fĕd'ər-ə-sē) n. pl. fed·er·a·cies. Archaic. An alliance; a confederacy. [Short for CONFEDERACY.]

fed·er·al (fĕd'ər-əl, fĕd'rəl) adj. Abbr. fed. 1. Of, relating to, or being a form of government in which a union of states recognizes the sovereignty of a central authority while retaining certain residual powers of government. 2. Of or constituting a form of government in which sovereign power is divided between a central authority and a number of constituent political units. 3. Of or relating to the central government of a federation as distinct from the governments of its member units. 4. Favorable to or advocating federation: The senator's federal leanings were well known. 5. Relating to or formed by a treaty or compact between constituent political units. 6. Federal. a. Of, relating to, or supporting Federalism or the Federalist Party. b. Of, relating to, or loyal to the Union cause during the American Civil War. 7. Often Federal. Of, relating to, or being the central government of the United States. 8. Federal. Relating to or characteristic of a style of architecture, furniture, and decoration produced in the United States especially in the late 18th and early 19th centuries and characterized by adaptations of classical forms combined with typically American motifs. — n. 1. Federal. a. A supporter of the Union during the American Civil War, especially a Union soldier. b. A Federalist. 2. Often Federal. A federal agent or official. [From Latin foedus, foeder-, league, treaty. See bheidh- in Appendix.] — fed'er-al-ly adv.

federal case (fěd'ər-əl kās) n. 1. Law. An action or a cause that falls under the jurisdiction of a federal court. 2. Informal. A major issue that has evolved from a minor problem or complaint: made a federal case out of our tardiness.

federal district also Federal District (fěd'ər-əl dīs'trīkt) n. An area, such as the District of Columbia, that is reserved as the site of the national capital of a federation.

fed·er·al·ism (fěd'ər-ə-līz'əm, fěd'rə-) n. 1. a. A system of government in which power is divided between a central authority and constituent political units. b. Advocacy of such a system of government. 2. Federalism. The doctrine of the Federalist Party.

fed·er·al·ist (fěd'ər-ə-līst, fěd'rə-) n. 1. An advocate of federalism. 2. Federalist. A member or supporter of the Federalist Party. — adj. 1. Of or relating to federalism or its advocates. 2. Federalist. Of or relating to Federalism or Federalists.

Federalist Party (fěd'ər-ə-līst pär'tē) n. A U.S. political party founded in 1787 to advocate the establishment of a strong federal government and the adoption by the states of the Constitution. The party gained prominence in the 1790's under the leadership of Alexander Hamilton.

fed·er·al·ize (fěd'ər-ə-līz', fěd'rə-) v. tr. fed·er·al·ized, fed·er·al·iz·ing, fed·er·al·iz·es. 1. To unite in a federal union. 2. To subject to the authority of a federal government; put under federal control. — fed'er-al-i-za'tion (-lī-zā'shən) n.

Federal Reserve System (fěd'ər-əl rī-zûrv' sīs'təm) n. A U.S. banking system that consists of 12 federal reserve banks, with each one serving member banks in its own district. This system, supervised by the Federal Reserve Board, has broad regulatory powers over the money supply and the credit structure.

fed·er·ate (fěd'ə-rāt') v. fed·er·at·ed, fed·er·at·ing, fed·er·ates. — v. tr. To cause to join into a league, federal union, or similar association. — v. intr. To become united into a federal union. — adj. (fěd'ər-īt, fěd'rīt) United in a federation. [Latin foederāre, foederāt-, to ratify an agreement, from foedus, foeder-, league, treaty. See bheidh- in Appendix.]

Fed-er-at-ed Ma-lay States (fěd'ə-rā'tīd mə-lā' stāts, mā'lā) A former federation of British-protected Malayan states, part of present-day Malaysia.

fed-er-a-tion (fěd'ə-rā'shən) n. Abbr. fed. 1. The act of federating, especially a joining together of states into a league or federal union. 2. A league or association formed by federating, especially a government or political body established through federal union.

fed-er-a-tive (fěd'ə-rā'tiv, fěd'ər-ə-, fěd'rə-) adj. Forming, belonging to, or of the nature of a federation; federal. —fed'er-a'tive-ly adv.

fe-do-ra (fī-dōr'ə, -dōr'ə) n. A soft felt hat with a fairly low crown creased lengthwise and a brim that can be turned up or down. [After Fédora, a play by Victorien Sardou.]

fed up (fěd ūp) adj. Unable or unwilling to put up with something any longer: She was fed up with their complaints. I resigned from the company because I was fed up.

fee (fē) n. 1. A fixed sum charged, as by an institution or by law, for a privilege: a license fee; tuition fees. 2. A charge for professional services: a surgeon's fee. 3. A tip; a gratuity. 4. Law. An inherited or heritable estate in land. 5. a. In feudal law, an estate in land granted by a lord to his vassal on condition of homage and service. Also called *feud*², fief. b. The land so held. — v. tr. feed, fee-ing, fees. 1. To give a tip to. 2. Scots. To hire. —idiom. in fee. Law. In absolute and legal possession. [Middle English fe, from Anglo-Norman fee, fief, from Old French fie, fief, of Germanic origin. See peku- in Appendix.]

fee-ble (fē'bəl) adj. fee-bler, fee-blest. 1. a. Lacking strength; weak. b. Indicating weakness. 2. Lacking vigor, force, or effectiveness; inadequate. See Synonyms at weak. [Middle English feble, from Old French, from Latin flēbilis, lamentable, from flēre, to weep.] —fee'ble-ness n. —fee'bly adv.

fee-ble-mind-ed (fē'bəl-mīn'dīd) adj. 1. Offensive. Deficient in intelligence. 2. Exhibiting a marked lack of intelligent consideration and forethought: feeble-minded excuses; a feeble-minded plan doomed to failure. 3. Obsolete. Irresolute and weak-willed. —fee'ble-mind'ed-ly adv. —fee'ble-mind'ed-ness n.

feed (fēd) v. fed (fěd), feed-ing, feeds. — v. tr. 1. a. To give food to; supply with nourishment: feed the children. b. To provide as food or nourishment: fed fish to the cat. 2. a. To serve as food for: The turkey is large enough to feed a dozen. b. To produce food for: The valley feeds an entire county. 3. a. To provide for consumption, utilization, or operation: feed logs to a fire; feed data into a computer. b. To supply with something essential for growth, maintenance, or operation: Melting snow feeds the reservoirs. c. To distribute (a local radio or television broadcast) to a larger audience or group of receivers by way of a network or satellite. 4. a. To minister to; gratify: fed their appetite for the morbid. b. To support or promote; encourage: His unexplained absences fed our suspicions.

5. To supply as a cue: feed lines to an actor. 6. Sports. To pass a ball or puck to (a teammate), especially in order to score. — v. intr. 1. To eat: pigs feeding at a trough. 2. To be nourished or supported: an ego that feeds on flattery. 3. a. To move steadily, as into a machine for processing. b. To be channeled; flow: This road feeds into the freeway. — n. 1. a. Food for animals or birds. b. The amount of such food given at one time. 2. Informal. A meal, especially a large one. 3. The act of eating. 4. a. Material or an amount of material supplied, as to a machine or furnace. b. The act of supplying such material. 5. a. An apparatus that supplies material to a machine. b. The aperture through which such material enters a machine. 6. Distribution of a locally broadcast radio or television program by way of a network or satellite to a larger audience or group of receivers. — idiom. off (one's) feed. Suffering a lack of appetite; sick: The dog is off its feed this week. [Middle English fedan, from Old English fēdan. See pā- in Appendix.]

feed·back (fēd'bāk') n. 1. a. The return of a portion of the output of a process or system to the input, especially when used to maintain performance or to control a system or process. b. The portion of the output so returned. 2. The return of information about the result of a process or activity; an evaluative response: asked the students for feedback on the new curriculum.

feedback inhibition (fēd'bāk' in'hə-bīsh'ən) n. A cellular control mechanism in which an enzyme that catalyzes the production of a particular substance in the cell is inhibited when that substance has accumulated to a certain level, thereby balancing the amount provided with the amount needed.

feed·bag (fēd'bäg') n. A bag that fits over a horse's muzzle and holds feed. Also called nosebag feed·er (fē'dər) n. 1. One that supplies food: a nation that is the feeder of millions in developing countries. 2. One that is fed, especially an animal that is being fattened for market. 3. A worker or device that feeds materials into a machine for further processing. 4. Something that contributes to the operation, maintenance, or supply of something else, especially: a. A tributary stream. b. A branch line of a transport system, as of an airline or a railroad. 5. Any of the medium-voltage lines used to distribute electric power from a substation to consumers or to smaller substations. 6. A transmission line between an antenna and a transmitter.

feed·hole (fēd'hōl') n. Computer Science. One of a noninformational series of holes in a paper tape that engages a driving sprocket to carry the tape through a reading or punching device.

feed·lot (fēd'lōt') n. A plot of ground on which livestock are fattened for market.

feed·stock (fēd'stōk') n. Raw material required for an industrial process.

feed·stuff (fēd'stūf') n. Food for livestock; fodder.

feed·through (fēd'thrōō') n. A conductor connecting two circuits on opposite sides of a printed circuit board.

feel (fēl) v. felt (fēlt), feel·ing, feels. — v. tr. 1. a. To perceive through the sense of touch: feel the velvety smoothness of a peach. b. To perceive as a physical sensation: feel a sharp pain; feel the cold. 2. a. To touch. b. To examine by touching. See Synonyms at touch. 3. To test or explore with caution: feel one's way in a new job. 4. a. To undergo the experience of: felt my interest rising; felt great joy. b. To be aware of; sense: felt the anger of the crowd. c. To be emotionally affected by: She still feels the loss of her dog. 5. a. To be persuaded of (something) on the basis of intuition, emotion, or other indefinite grounds: I feel that what the informant says may well be true. b. To believe; think: She felt his answer to be evasive. — v. intr. 1. To experience sensations of touch. 2. a. To produce a particular sensation, especially through the sense of touch: The sheets felt smooth. b. To produce a particular impression; appear to be; seem: It feels good to be home. See Usage Note at well². 3. To be conscious of a specified kind or quality of physical, mental, or emotional state: felt warm and content; feels strongly about the election. 4. To seek or explore something by the sense of touch: felt for the light switch in the dark. 5. To have compassion or sympathy: I feel for him in his troubles. — n. 1. Perception by or as if by touch; sensation: a feel of autumn in the air. 2. The sense of touch: a surface that is rough to the feel. 3. The nature or quality of something as perceived by or as if by the sense of touch: “power steering that seems overassisted, eliminating road feel” (Mark Ginsburg). 4. Overall impression or effect; atmosphere: “gives such disparate pictures... a crazily convincing documentary feel” (Stephen King). 5. Intuitive awareness or natural ability: has a feel for decorating. —phrasal verbs. feel out. To try cautiously or indirectly to ascertain the viewpoint or nature of. feel up. Vulgar Slang. To touch or fondle (someone) sexually. —idioms. feel in (one's) bones. To have an intuition of. feel like. Informal. To have an inclination or desire for: felt like going for a walk. feel like (oneself). To sense oneself as being in one's normal state of health or spirits: I just don't feel like myself today. [Middle English felen, from Old English fēlan. See pōl- in Appendix.]

feel·er (fē'lər) n. 1. Something, such as a hint or question, designed to elicit the attitudes or intentions of others. 2. Zoology. A sensory or tactile organ, such as an antenna, a tentacle, or a barbel.

feel·ing (fē'līng) n. 1. a. The sensation involving perception by touch. b. A sensation experienced through touch. c. A physical sensation: a feeling of warmth. 2. An affective state of consciousness, such as that resulting from emotions, sentiments, or desires: experienced a feeling of excitement. 3. An awareness or impression: He had the feeling that he was being followed. 4. a. An emotional state or disposition; an emotion: expressed deep feeling. b. A tender emotion; a fondness. 5. a. Capacity to experience the higher emotions; sensitivity; sensibility: a man of feeling. b. feelings. Susceptibility to emotional response; sensibilities: The child's feelings are easily hurt. 6. Opinion based more on emotion than on reason; sentiment. 7. A general impression conveyed by a person, place, or thing: The stuffy air gave one the feeling of being in a tomb. 8. a. Appreciative regard or understanding: a feeling for propriety. b. Intuitive awareness or aptitude; a feel: has a feeling for language. — adj. 1. Having the ability to react or feel emotionally; sentient; sensitive. 2. Easily moved emotionally; sympathetic: a feeling heart. 3. Expressive of sensibility or emotion: a feeling glance.

—feel/ing·ly adv.

SYNONYMS: feeling, emotion, passion, sentiment. These nouns refer to complex and usually strong subjective human response, such as love or hate. Although feeling and emotion are sometimes interchangeable, feeling is the more general and neutral: feelings of hope and joy; a feeling of inferiority; religious feelings. “I have said that poetry is the spontaneous overflow of powerful feelings: it takes its origin from emotion recollected in tranquillity” (William Wordsworth). Emotion is often considered to be the stronger of the two terms and to imply the presence of excitement or agitation: He has difficulty controlling his emotions. “Poetry is not a turning loose of emotion, but an escape from emotion” (T.S. Eliot). Passion is intense, compelling emotion: “They seemed like ungoverned children inflamed with the fiercest passions of men” (Francis Parkman). Sentiment often applies to a thought or opinion arising from or influenced by emotion: What are your sentiments about the government's policies? The word can also refer to the delicate, sensitive, or higher or more refined feelings: “The mystic reverence, the religious allegiance, which are essential to a true monarchy, are imaginative sentiments that no legislature can manufacture in any people” (Walter Bagehot). See also Synonyms at opinion fee simple (fē sīm'pəl) n. pl. fees simple. Law. 1. An estate in land of which the inheritor has unqualified ownership and power of disposition. 2. Private ownership of real estate in which the owner has the right to control, use, and transfer the property at will.

fee splitting (fē splīt'ing) n. The practice of sharing fees with professional colleagues, such as physicians, for patient or client referrals.

feet (fēt) n. Plural of foot.

fee tail (fē tāl) n. pl. fees tail. Law. An estate in land limited in inheritance to a particular class of heirs.

Feh-ling's solution (fā'lingz sə-lōō'shən) n. An aqueous solution of copper sulfate, sodium hydroxide, and potassium sodium tartrate used to test for the presence of sugars and aldehydes in a substance, such as urine. [After Hermann von Fehling (1812-1885), German chemist.]

Feif·fer (fī'fər), Jules. Born 1929. American cartoonist who won a 1986 Pulitzer Prize for his sarcastic comic strip, which features a middle-class intellectual struggling with contemporary social issues.

feign (fān) v. feigned, feign·ing, feigns. — v. tr. 1. a. To give a false appearance of: feign sleep. b. To represent falsely; pretend to: feign authorship of a novel. See Synonyms at pretend. 2. To imitate so as to deceive: feign another's voice. 3. To fabricate: feigned an excuse. 4. Archaic. To invent or imagine. — v. intr. To pretend; dissemble. [Middle English feinen, from Old French feindre, from Latin ingere, to shape, form. See dheigh- in Appendix.]

feigned (fānd) adj. 1. Not real; pretended: a feigned modesty. 2. Made-up; fictitious.

fei·jo·a·da (fā'zhōō-ä'dä, -jwä'də) n. A dish of black beans cooked with meat such as sausage, served with rice and traditionally garnished with cassava meal, collard greens or kale, onions, oranges, and a hot pepper sauce. [Portuguese, from feijão, bean, from Latin phaseolus. See FRIJOL.]

Fei·ning·er (fī'nīng-ər), Lyonel Charles Adrian. 1871-1956. American-born artist who was influenced by cubism and the Bauhaus movement and developed a delicate geometric style with intersecting planes of translucent colors.

feint (fānt) n. 1. A feigned attack designed to draw defensive action away from an intended target. 2. A deceptive action calculated to divert attention from one's real purpose. See Synonyms at artifice. — v. feint·ed, feint·ing, feints. — v. intr. To make a feint. — v. tr. 1. To deceive with a feint. 2. To make a deceptive show of. [French feinte, from Old French, from past participle of feindre, to feign. See FEIGN.]

Fei·ra de San·ta·na (fā'rə də sän-tän'ə, fā'rä dĩ sän-tän'nä) A city of eastern Brazil west-northwest of Salvador. It is a distribution center for a large agricultural region. Population, 227,004.

Fei·sal (fī'səl) See Faisal.

feist (fīst) also fice (fīs) n. Chiefly Southern U.S. A small mongrel dog. [Variant of obsolete fist, short for fisting dog, from Middle English fisten, to break wind. See pezd- in Appendix.]

REGIONAL NOTE: Feist, also fice, is one of several regional terms for a small mixed-breed dog or mongrel. Used throughout the Midland and Southern states, feist connotes a snappy, nervous, belligerent little dog—hence the derived adjective feisty, meaning “touchy, quarrelsome, or spirited,” applicable to animals and to people.

feist·y (fī'stē) adj. feist·i·er, feist·i·est. 1. Touchy; quarrelsome. 2. Full of spirit or pluck; frisky or spunky. See Regional note at feist. [From FEIST.]

—feist'i·ness n.

Fei·sul (fī'səl) See Faisal.

Feke (fēk), Robert. 1705?-1750?. American painter known for his portraits of colonists, such as The Bowdoin Family (c. 1749).

fe·la·fel (fə-lä'fəl) n. Variant of falafel.

feld·spar (fēld'spär', fēl'-) also fel·spar (fēl'-) n. Any of a group of abundant rock-forming minerals occurring principally in igneous, plutonic, and some metamorphic rocks, and consisting of silicates of aluminum with potassium, sodium, calcium, and, rarely, barium. About 60 percent of the earth's outer crust is composed of feldspar. [Partial translation of obsolete German Feldspath : Feld, field (from Middle High German veld, from Old High German feld); see pelə-² in Appendix + Spath, spar.]

feld·spath·ic (fēld-späth'ik, fēl-) adj. Of, relating to, or containing feldspar. [From obsolete German Feldspath, feldspar. See FELDSPAR.]

fe·li·cif·ic (fē'li-sif'ik) adj. Producing or intended to produce happiness. [Latin fēlix, fēlic-, fortunate; see dhē(i)- in Appendix + -FIG.]

fe·lic·i·tate (fī-līs'ī-tāt') v. tr. fe·lic·i·tat·ed, fe·lic·i·tat·ing, fe·lic·i·tates.

1. To offer congratulations to: “I felicitate you on your memory, sir” (John Fowles). 2. Archaic. To make happy. — adj. Obsolete. Made happy. [Late Latin fēlicitāre, fēlicitāt-, to make happy, from fēlix, fēlic-, fortunate. See dhē(i)- in Appendix.] —fe·lic'i·ta'tor n.

fe·lic·i·ta·tion (fī-līs'ī-tā'shən) n. Congratulations. Often used in the plural.

fe·lic·i·tous (fī-līs'ī-təs) adj. 1. Admirably suited; apt: a felicitous comparison. See Synonyms at fit¹. 2. Exhibiting an agreeably appropriate manner or style: a felicitous writer. 3. Marked by happiness or good fortune: a felicitous life.

—fe·lic'i·tous·ly adv. —fe·lic'i·tous·ness n.

fe·lic·i·ty (fī-līs'ī-tē) n. pl. fe·lic·i·ties. 1. a. Great happiness; bliss. b. An instance of great happiness. 2. A cause or source of happiness. 3. a. An appropriate and pleasing manner or style: felicity of expression. b. An instance of appropriate and pleasing manner or style. 4. Archaic. Good fortune. [Middle English felicite, from Old French felicite, from Latin fēlicitās, from fēlix, fēlic-, fortunate. See dhē(i)- in Appendix.]

fe·lid (fē'līd) adj. Feline. [From New Latin Felidae, family name, from Fēlis, type genus, from Latin fēlēs, cat.] —fe'līd n.

fe·line (fē'līn') adj. 1. Of or belonging to the family Felidae, which includes the lions, tigers, jaguars, and wild and domestic cats; felid. 2. Suggestive of a cat, as in suppleness or stealthiness. — n. An animal of the family Felidae. [Latin fēlinus, or Late Latin fēlineus both from Latin fēlēs, cat.] —fe'line'ly adv.

—fe'line'ness, fe·lin'i·ty (fī-līn'ī-tē) n.

feline distemper (fē'līn' dīs-tēm'pər) n. See distemper¹ (n., sense 1b).

fell¹ (fĕl) v. tr. felled, fell-ing, fells. 1. a. To cause to fall by striking; cut or knock down: fell a tree; fell an opponent in boxing. b. To kill: was felled by an assassin's bullet. 2. To sew or finish (a seam) with the raw edges flattened, turned under, and stitched down. — n. 1. The timber cut down in one season. 2. A felled seam. [Middle English fellēn, from Old English fellan, fyllan.]

—fell'a-ble adj.

fell² (fĕl) adj. 1. Of an inhumanly cruel nature; fierce: fell hordes. 2. Capable of destroying; lethal: a fell blow. 3. Dire; sinister: by some fell chance. 4. Scots. Sharp and biting. —idiom. at one fell swoop (or in one fell swoop). All at once. [Middle English fel, from Old French, nominative of felon. See FELON¹.]

—fell'ness n.

fell³ (fĕl) n. 1. The hide of an animal; a pelt. 2. A thin membrane directly beneath the hide. [Middle English fel, from Old English fell. See pel-³ in Appendix.]

fell⁴ (fĕl) n. Chiefly British. 1. An upland stretch of open country; a moor. 2. A barren or stony hill. [Middle English fel, from Old Norse fell, fjall, mountain, hill.]

fell⁵ (fĕl) v. Past tense of fall.

fel·la (fĕl'ə) n. Informal. A man or boy; a fellow.

fel·lah (fĕl'ə, fə-lā') n. pl. fel·la·hin or fel·la·heen (fĕl'ə-hĕn', fə-lā-hĕn'). A peasant or agricultural laborer in an Arab country, such as Syria or Egypt. [Arabic fellāh, dialectal variant of fallāh, from falaḥa, to cultivate, till.]

fel·late (fə-lāt') v. fel·lat-ed, fel·lat-ing, fel·lates. — v. tr. To perform fellatio on. — v. intr. To engage in fellatio. [Latin fellāre, fellāt-, to suck. See FELLATIO.] —fel·la'tion (-lā'shən) n. —fel·la'tor n.

fel·la·ti·o (fə-lā'shē-ō', -lā'tē-ō', fĕ-) n. Oral stimulation of the penis. [New Latin, from Latin fellātus, past participle of fellāre, to suck. See dhē(i)- in Appendix.]

fell·er¹ (fĕl'ər) n. 1. A lumberjack. 2. One that fells seams.

fell·er² (fĕl'ər) n. Informal. A man or boy; a fellow.

Fel·li·ni (fə-lē'nē, fĕl-), Federico. 1920-1994. Italian filmmaker whose works, including La Dolce Vita (1960) and Amarcord (1973), combine social satire with elements of fantasy.

fel·loe (fĕl'ō) n. Variant of felly.

fel·low (fĕl'ō) n. 1. a. A man or boy. b. Informal. A boyfriend. 2. A comrade or an associate. 3. a. A person of equal rank, position, or background; a peer. b. One of a pair; a mate: found the lost shoe and its fellow. 4. Abbr. F, F. A member of a learned society. 5. Abbr. F, F. A graduate student appointed to a position granting financial aid and providing for further study. 6. Abbr. F, F. Chiefly British. a. An incorporated senior member of certain colleges and universities. b. A member of the governing body of certain colleges and universities. 7. Obsolete. A person of a lower social class. — adj. Being of the same kind, group, occupation, society, or locality; having in common certain characteristics or interests: fellow workers. [Middle English felau, from Old English fēolaga, from Old Norse fēlagi, business partner, fellow, from fēlag, partnership : fē, property, money; see peku- in Appendix + lag, a laying down; see legh- in Appendix.]

WORD HISTORY: A jolly good fellow might or might not be the ideal business associate, but the ancestor of our word fellow definitely referred to a business partner. Fellow, borrowed into English from Old Norse, is related to the Old Icelandic word fēlagi, meaning “a partner or shareholder of any kind.” Old Icelandic fēlagi is derived from fēlag, “partnership,” a compound made up of fē, “livestock, property, money,” and lag, “a laying in order” and “fellowship.” The notion of putting one’s property together lies behind the senses of fēlagi meaning “partner” and “consort.” In Old Icelandic fēlagi also had the general sense “fellow, mate, comrade,” which fellow has as well, indicating perhaps that most partnerships turned out all right for speakers of Old Icelandic.

fellow feeling (fĕl'ō fē'līng) n. 1. Sympathetic awareness of others; rapport. 2. Community of interest.

fellow man also fel·low·man (fĕl'ō-măn') n. A kindred human being.

fellow servant (fĕl'ō sūr'vənt) n. Law. One of a group of employees working together under such circumstances that the employer, under common law, is not considered liable for injury to one worker resulting from the negligence of another.

fel·low·ship (fĕl'ō-shīp') n. 1. a. The condition of sharing similar interests, ideals, or experiences, as by reason of profession, religion, or nationality. b. The companionship of individuals in a congenial atmosphere and on equal terms. 2. A close association of friends or equals sharing similar interests. 3. Friendship; comradeship. 4. a. The financial grant made to a fellow in a college or university. b. The status of having been awarded such a grant. c. A foundation established for the awarding of such a grant.

fellow traveler (fĕl'ō trāv'əl-ər) n. One who sympathizes with or supports the tenets and program of an organized group, such as the Communist Party, without being a member.

Fell·tham also Fel·tham (fĕl'thəm), Owen. 1602?-1668. English writer noted for his moral essays.

fel·ly (fĕl'ē) also fel·loe (fĕl'ō) n. pl. fel·lies also fel·loes. The rim or a section of the rim of a wheel supported by spokes. [Middle English felie, felwe, from Old English felg.]

fel·on¹ (fĕl'ən) n. 1. Law. One who has committed a felony. 2. Archaic. An evil person. — adj. Archaic. Evil; cruel. [Middle English feloun, from Old French felon, wicked, a wicked person, from Medieval Latin fellō, fellōn-, possibly of Germanic origin.]

fel·on² (fĕl'ən) n. A painful, purulent infection at the end of a finger or toe in the area surrounding the nail. Also called whitlow [Middle English feloun, probably from Latin fel, gall, bile. See ghel-² in Appendix.]

fe·lo·ni·ous (fə-lō'nē-əs) adj. 1. Law. Having the nature of, relating to, or concerning a felony: felonious intent. 2. Archaic. Evil; wicked. — fe·lo·ni·ous·ly adv. — fe·lo·ni·ous·ness n.

fel·o·ny (fĕl'ə-nē) n. pl. fel·o·nies. Law. 1. One of several grave crimes, such as murder, rape, or burglary, punishable by a more stringent sentence than that given for a misdemeanor. 2. Any of several crimes in early English law that were punishable by forfeiture of land or goods and by possible loss of life or a bodily part.

fel·sic (fĕl'sĭk) adj. Relating to or containing a group of light-colored silicate minerals that occur in igneous rocks. [FEL(DSPAR) + S(ILICA) + -IC.]

fel·site (fĕl'sīt') n. A fine-grained, light-colored igneous rock, composed chiefly of feldspar and quartz. [FELS(PAR) + -ITE¹.] — fel·sit'ic (-sīt'ĭk) adj.

fel·spar (fĕl'spär') n. Variant of feldspar.

felt¹ (fĕlt) n. 1. a. A fabric of matted, compressed animal fibers, such as wool or fur, sometimes mixed with vegetable or synthetic fibers. b. A material resembling this fabric. 2. Something made of this fabric. — adj. Made of, relating to, or resembling felt. — v. felt·ed, felt·ing, felts. — v. tr. 1. To make into felt. 2. To cover with felt. 3. To press or mat (something) together. — v. intr. To become like felt; mat together. [Middle English, from Old English. See pel-⁵ in Appendix.] — felt'y adj.

felt² (fĕlt) v. Past tense and past participle of feel.

Fel·tham (fĕl'thəm), Owen. See Owen Felltham.

felt·ing (fĕl'tĭng) n. 1. The practice or process of making felt. 2. The materials from which felt is made. 3. Felted fabric.

Fel·ton (fĕl'tən), Rebecca Ann Latimer. 1835-1930. American writer, reformer, and politician who in 1922 served out the term of a deceased senator from Georgia, thereby becoming the first woman to sit in the U.S. Senate.

fe·luc·ca (fə-lōō'kə, -lŭk'ə) n. Nautical. A narrow, swift, lateen-rigged sailing vessel, such as that used on the Nile or in the Mediterranean Sea. [Italian feluca, from Arabic fulk, ship.]

fel·wort (fĕl'wŭrt', -wŏrt') n. An annual gentian (Gentianella amarella) having small, lilac to creamy white flowers with fringed corollas. [Middle English feldwort*, from Old English feldwyr̥t: feld, field; see FIELD + wyr̥t, wort; see WORT¹.]

fem. abbr. Female; feminine.

fe·male (fē'māl') adj. Abbr. fem., f., F 1. a. Of, relating to, or denoting the sex that produces ova or bears young. b. Characteristic of or appropriate to this sex; feminine. See Synonyms at feminine. c. Consisting of members of this sex.

2. Botany. a. Relating to or designating an organ, such as a pistil or an ovary, that functions in producing seeds after fertilization. b. Bearing pistils but not stamens; pistillate: female flowers. 3. Having a recessed part, such as a slot or receptacle, designed to receive a complementary male part: the female section of an electrical outlet. — n. Abbr. fem., f., F 1. A member of the sex that produces ova or bears young. 2. A woman or girl. 3. Botany. A plant having only pistillate flowers. [Middle English, alteration (influenced by male, male); see MALE, of femelle, from Old French, from Latin fēmella, diminutive of fēmīna, woman. See dhē(i)- in Appendix.] —fe'male'ness n.

feme (fēm) n. 1. Law. A wife. 2. Obsolete. A woman. [Anglo-Norman, from Latin fēmīna. See FEMALE.]

feme cov·ert (fēm kŭv'ərt) n. Law. A married woman. [Anglo-Norman : feme, woman + Old French covert, covered.]

feme sole (fēm sōl) n. Law. A single woman, whether divorced, widowed, or never married. [Anglo-Norman feme soule : feme, woman + soule, single.]

fem·i·nine (fēm'ə-nīn) adj. 1. Of or relating to women or girls; female.

2. Characterized by or possessing qualities generally attributed to a woman.

3. Effeminate; womanish. 4. Abbr. fem., f., F. Grammar. Designating or belonging to the gender of words or grammatical forms that refer chiefly to females or to things classified as female. — n. Abbr. fem., f., F. Grammar.

1. The feminine gender. 2. A word or form belonging to the feminine gender.

[Middle English, from Old French, from Latin fēmīnīnus, from fēmīna, woman. See dhē(i)- in Appendix.] —fem'i-nine-ly adv. —fem'i-nine-ness n.

SYNONYMS: feminine, female, womanly, womanish, effeminate, ladylike. These adjectives mean “of, relating to, characteristic of, or appropriate to women.” Feminine as the opposite of masculine often refers to what is considered characteristic of women: feminine intuition. Female, like male, categorizes by gender or sex; the term is not limited in application to human beings: the female population; a female kitten; a female plant. Womanly describes qualities regarded as becoming to a woman: womanly virtue; womanly sympathy. Womanish applies to qualities associated with women and traditionally considered undesirable in men: womanish tears. Effeminate is largely restricted in reference to men and implies lack of manliness or strength: an effeminate walk. Ladylike is applicable to what befits women of good breeding: ladylike manners.

feminine ending (fĕm'ə-nĭn ěn'dĭng) n. 1. An extra unstressed syllable at the end of a line of verse. 2. Grammar. A final syllable or termination that marks or forms words in the feminine gender.

feminine rhyme (fĕm'ə-nĭn rĭm) n. A rhyme in which the final syllable is unstressed, as in feather/heather.

fem·i·nin·i·ty (fĕm'ə-nĭn'ĭ-tē) n. pl. fem·i·nin·i·ties. 1. The quality or condition of being feminine. 2. A characteristic or trait traditionally held to be female. 3. Women considered as a group. 4. Effeminacy.

fem·i·nism (fĕm'ə-nĭz'əm) n. 1. Belief in the social, political, and economic equality of the sexes. 2. The movement organized around this belief.

fem·i·nist (fĕm'ə-nĭst) n. A person whose beliefs and behavior are based on feminism. — adj. Of or relating to feminism. — fem'·i·nis'tic adj.

USAGE NOTE: The term feminist may be applied to a person of either sex, according to 86 percent of the Usage Panel.

fem·i·nize (fĕm'ə-nĭz') v. tr. fem·i·nized, fem·i·niz·ing, fem·i·niz·es. 1. To give a feminine appearance or character to. 2. To cause (a male) to assume feminine characteristics. — fem'·i·ni·za'tion (-nĭ-zā'shən) n.

femme (fĕm) n. Informal. A woman or girl. [French, from Old French, from Latin fēmina. See FEMININE.]

femme fa·tale (fĕm' fə-tāl', -tāl', fām') n. pl. femmes fa·tales (fĕm' fə-tāl', -tālz', -tāl', -tälz', fām'). 1. A woman of great seductive charm who leads men into compromising or dangerous situations. 2. An alluring and mysterious woman. [French : femme, woman + fatale, deadly.]

fem·o·ra (fĕm'ər-ə) n. A plural of femur.

fem·o·ral (fĕm'ər-əl) adj. Of, relating to, or located in the thigh or femur. [From Latin femur, femor-, thigh.]

femoral artery (fĕm'ər-əl är'tə-rē) n. The main artery of the thigh, supplying blood to the groin and lower extremity.

femto- pref. One quadrillionth (10^{-15}): femtovolt. [From Danish, and Norwegian femten, fifteen from Old Norse fimmtān. See penk^we in Appendix.]

fe·mur (fē'mər) n. pl. fe·murs or fem·o·ra (fĕm'ər-ə). 1. A bone of the leg situated between the pelvis and knee in human beings. It is the largest and strongest bone in the body. Also called thighbone. 2. A functionally similar bone in the leg or hind limb of a vertebrate animal. 3. The thick, most muscular segment of the insect leg, situated between the trochanter and the tibia. [Latin, thigh.]

fen (fĕn) n. Low, flat, swampy land; a bog or marsh. [Middle English, from Old English fenn.]

fence (fĕns) n. 1. A structure serving as an enclosure, a barrier, or a boundary, usually made of posts or stakes joined together by boards, wire, or rails. 2. The art or sport of fencing. 3. a. One who receives and sells stolen goods. b. A place where stolen goods are received and sold. 4. Archaic. A means of defense; a protection. — v. fenced, fenc-ing, fenc-es. — v. tr. 1. To enclose with or as if with a fence. See Synonyms at enclose. 2. To separate or close off by or as if by means of a fence. 3. a. To ward off; keep away. b. To defend. 4. To sell (stolen goods) to a fence. — v. intr. 1. To practice the art or sport of fencing. 2. To use tactics similar to the parry and thrust of fencing. 3. To avoid giving direct answers; hedge. 4. To act as a conduit for stolen goods. — idiom. on the fence. Informal. Undecided as to which of two sides to support; uncommitted or neutral. [Middle English fens, short for defens, defense. See DEFENSE.] — fenc'er n.

fence-row (fěns'rō') n. The uncultivated land on each side of a fence.

fence sitter (fěns sīt'ər) n. Informal. One who takes a position of neutrality or indecision, as in a controversial matter. — fence'-sit'ting (fěns'sit'ing) n.

fenc-ing (fěns'ing) n. 1. The art or sport of using a foil, an épée, or a saber in attack and defense. 2. Skillful repartee, especially as a defense against having to give direct answers. 3. Material, such as wire, stakes, and rails, used in the construction of fences. 4. A barrier or an enclosure of fences.

fend (fěnd) v. fend-ed, fend-ing, fends. — v. tr. 1. To ward off. Often used with off: fend off an attack. 2. Archaic. To defend. — v. intr. 1. To make an effort to resist: fend against the cold. 2. To attempt to manage without assistance: The children had to fend for themselves while their parents worked. [Middle English fenden, short for defenden, to defend. See DEFEND.]

fend-er (fěn'dər) n. 1. a. A guard over each wheel of a motor vehicle, for example, that is shaped and positioned so as to block the splashing of water or mud. b. A device at the front end of a locomotive or streetcar designed to push aside obstructions. 2. A cushioning device, such as a bundle of rope or a piece of timber, used on the side of a vessel or dock to absorb impact or friction. 3. A screen or metal framework placed in front of a fireplace to keep hot coals and debris from falling out.

fend-er-bend-er or fender bender (fěn'dər-běn'dər) n. Informal. A collision involving motor vehicles that results in minor damage.

Fé-ne-lon (fā-nə-lōn'), François de Salignac de la Mothe. 1651-1715.

French prelate and writer who tutored the grandson of Louis XIV and created controversy with his quietistic views and his epic Télémaque (1699), which the king considered to be a satire of his court.

fe-nes-tra (fə-nēs'trə) n. pl. fe-nes-trae (-trē'). 1. Anatomy. A small opening, especially either of two windowlike apertures in the medial wall of the middle ear. 2. The opening in a bone made by surgical fenestration. 3. Zoology. A transparent spot or marking, as on the wing of a moth or butterfly. 4. Architecture. A windowlike opening. [Latin, window.] — fe-nes'tral adj.

fen-es-trat-ed (fĕn'ĩ-strā'tid) also fen-es-trate (fĕn'ĩ-strāt', fĩ-nĕs'trāt') adj.

1. Architecture. Having windows or windowlike openings. 2. Biology. Having fenestrae. [From Latin fenestrātus, past participle of fenestrāre, to furnish with windows, from fenestra, window.]

fen-es-tra-tion (fĕn'ĩ-strā'shən) n. 1. Architecture. The design and placement of windows in a building. 2. An opening in the surface of a structure, as in a membrane. 3. The surgical creation of an artificial opening in the bony part of the inner ear so as to improve or restore hearing.

Feng Yu-xiang also Feng Yu-hsiang (fŭng' yü'shyāng'), 1880-1948. Chinese Nationalist military leader who twice seized Peking (1924 and 1928) but later criticized the government of Chiang Kai-shek.

Fe-ni-an (fĕ'nĕ-ən) n. 1. One of a legendary group of heroic Irish warriors of the second and third centuries A.D. 2. A member of a secret revolutionary organization in the United States and Ireland in the mid-19th century, dedicated to the overthrow of British rule in Ireland. [From alteration (influenced by féne, body of freemen under early Irish law), of Irish Gaelic fianna, bands of young warriors, from Old Irish fianna, pl. of fian.] —Fe'ni-an adj. —Fe'ni-an-ism n.

fen-nec (fĕn'ik) n. A small nocturnal fox (Vulpes zerda, formerly Fennecus zerda) of desert regions of northern Africa, having fawn-colored fur and large, pointed ears. [Arabic dialectal fenek, fox, small furry animal.]

fen-nel (fĕn'əl) n. 1. A Eurasian plant (Foeniculum vulgare) having pinnate leaves, clusters of small yellow flowers grouped in umbels, and aromatic seeds used as flavoring. 2. The edible seeds or stalks of this plant. [Middle English fenel, from Old English fenol, from Latin fēnuculum, variant of faeniculum, diminutive of faenum, fēnum, hay. See dhē(i)- in Appendix.]

fen-ny (fĕn'ē) adj. 1. Having the nature of a fen; marshy. 2. Relating to or found in fens.

Fens (fĕnz) A lowland district of eastern England west and south of the Wash. Early attempts by the Romans to drain the area were abandoned by Anglo-Saxon times. Modern-day reclamation of the Fens began in the 17th century.

fen-ta-nyl (fĕn'tə-nil) n. A narcotic analgesic used in combination with other drugs before, during, or following surgery. [Alteration of phentanyl, alteration of the chemical name.]

fen-u-greek (fĕn'yə-grĕk', fĕn'ə-) n. 1. A cloverlike Eurasian plant (Trigonella foenum-graecum) having white flowers and pungent, aromatic seeds used as flavoring. 2. The seeds of this plant. [Middle English fenigrek, from Old French fenegrec, from Latin fēnugraecum, from fēnum graecum: fēnum, hay; see FENNEL + Graecus, Greek; see GREEK.]

fen-u-ron (fĕn'yə-rŏn') n. A white compound, C₉H₁₂N₂O, used as a herbicide. [fen- (alteration of PHEN-) + UR(EA) + -ON³.]

feoff-ee (fĕf-ē', fĕ-fē') n. Law. One to whom a feoffment is granted.

feoff·er also feof·for (fĕf'ər, fē'fər) n. Law. One who grants a feoffment.

feoff·ment (fĕf'mənt, fēf'-) n. Law. A grant of lands as a fee.

feof·for (fĕf'ər, fē'fər) n. Law. Variant of feoffer.

FEP abbr. Computer Science. Front-end processor.

FEPC abbr. Fair Employment Practices Commission.

-fer suff. One that bears: aquifer. [Latin, bearer, bearing, from ferre, to carry. See bher¹ in Appendix.]

FERA abbr. Federal Emergency Relief Administration.

fe·ral (fīr'əl, fēr'-) adj. 1. a. Existing in a wild or untamed state. b. Having returned to an untamed state from domestication. 2. Of or suggestive of a wild animal; savage: a feral grin. [From Latin fera, wild animal, from ferus, wild. See ghwer- in Appendix.]

fer·bam (fūr'bām') n. A black powder, C₉H₁₈FeN₃S₆, used as an agricultural fungicide. [fer(ric dimethyl-dithiocar)bam(ate).]

Fer·ber (fūr'bər), Edna. 1887-1968. American writer who wrote several popular novels, including So Big (1924), which won a Pulitzer Prize.

fer-de-lance (fēr'dl-āns', -āns') n. pl. fer-de-lance. A venomous tropical American pit viper (Bothrops atrox) having brown and grayish markings. [French, from fer de lance, spearhead : fer, iron + de, of + lance, spear.]

Fer·di·nand I¹ (fūr'dn-ānd'), Known as "Ferdinand the Great." Died 1065. King of Castile (1035-1065) and León (1037-1065) who reconquered much of present-day Portugal from the Moors.

Fer·di·nand I² (fūr'dn-ānd'), 1503-1564. Holy Roman emperor (1558-1564) and king of Bohemia and Hungary (1526-1564). In 1555 he ended the religious wars in Germany by concluding the Peace of Augsburg.

Fer·di·nand II (fūr'dn-ānd'), 1578-1637. Holy Roman emperor (1619-1637) and king of Bohemia (1617-1619 and 1620-1627) and Hungary (1618-1625). A leader of the Counter Reformation, he waged constant war against Protestant forces.

Fer·di·nand III (fūr'dn-ānd'), 1608-1657. Holy Roman emperor (1637-1657) and king of Hungary (1625-1647) and Bohemia (1627-1656). He signed the Peace of Westphalia (1648), thus ending the Thirty Years' War.

Fer·di·nand V (fūr'dn-ānd'), Known as "Ferdinand the Catholic." 1452-1516. King of Castile and León (1474-1504) who ruled jointly with his wife, Isabella I. He was also king of Sicily (1468-1516) and Aragon (1479-1516) as Ferdinand II and of Naples (1504-1516) as Ferdinand III. His marriage to Isabella (1469) marked the beginning of the modern Spanish state.

Fer·di·nand VI (fūr'dn-ānd'), Known as "Ferdinand the Wise." 1713-1759. Bourbon king of Spain (1746-1759) who kept his country out of the Seven Years' War.

Fer-di-nand VII (fûr'dn-änd'), 1784-1833. Bourbon king of Spain (1808 and 1814-1833) who was imprisoned by Napoleon in France (1808-1814) but returned to the throne after Napoleon's downfall.

ferē (fîr) n. Archaic. 1. A companion. 2. A spouse. [Middle English, from Old English gefēra. See per² in Appendix.]

fer·e·to·ry (fēr'î-tôr'ē, -tôr'ē) n. pl. fer·e·to·ries. 1. A receptacle to hold the relics of saints; a reliquary. 2. An area of a church in which reliquaries are kept. [Middle English, from Anglo-Norman fertre, from Latin feretrum, from Greek pheretron, from pherein, to carry. See bher¹ in Appendix.]

Fer-ga-na also Fer-gha-na (fər-gä'nə, fyır-gə-nä') A city of eastern Uzbekistan southwest of Andizhan. It is the center of the fertile Fergana Valley, a densely populated agricultural and industrial region. Population, 195,000.

Fer-gu-son (fûr'gə-sən) A city of eastern Missouri, a suburb of St. Louis. Population, 22,286.

fe·ri·a (fîr'ē-ə, fēr'-) n. pl. fe·ri·as or fe·ri·ae (-ē-ē'). A weekday on a church calendar on which no feast is observed. [Medieval Latin, ordinary day, weekday, from Late Latin, feast day (used with ordinals to name the days of the week), from Latin fēriæ, religious festival, holidays. See dhēs- in Appendix.] —fe·ri·al adj.

fe·rine (fîr'in') adj. Untamed; feral. [Latin ferīnus, from fera, wild animal. See FERAL.]

fer·i·ty (fēr'î-tē) n. 1. The state of being wild or untamed. 2. The state of being savage; ferocity. [Latin feritās, from ferus, wild. See FERAL.]

Fer-mat (fēr-mä'), Pierre de. 1601-1665. French mathematician who formulated modern number theory and probability theory.

fer·ma·ta (fēr-mä'tə) n. Music. 1. The prolongation of a tone, chord, or rest beyond its indicated time value. 2. The sign indicating this prolongation. [Italian, from feminine past participle of fermare, to stop, from Latin firmāre, to make firm, from firmus, firm. See dher- in Appendix.]

fer·ment (fûr'měnt') n. 1. Something, such as a yeast, a bacterium, a mold, or an enzyme, that causes fermentation. 2. Fermentation. 3. a. A state of agitation or of turbulent change or development. b. An agent that precipitates or is capable of precipitating such a state. See Synonyms at catalyst. — v.

fer-ment-ed, fer-ment-ing, fer-ments (fər-měnt'). — v. tr. 1. To produce by or as if by fermentation. 2. To cause to undergo fermentation. 3. To make turbulent; excite or agitate. — v. intr. 1. To undergo fermentation. 2. To be in an excited or agitated state; seethe. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin fermentum. See bhreu- in Appendix.] —fer-ment'a-bil/i-ty n.

—fer-ment'a-ble adj.

fer-men-ta-tion (fûr'mən-tā'shən, -mĕn-) n. 1. Any of a group of chemical reactions induced by living or nonliving ferments that split complex organic compounds into relatively simple substances, especially the anaerobic conversion of sugar to carbon dioxide and alcohol by yeast. 2. Unrest; agitation.

fer·men·ta·tive (fər-mĕn'tə-tĭv) adj. 1. a. Causing fermentation. b. Capable of causing or undergoing fermentation. 2. Relating to or of the nature of fermentation.

fer·ment·er (fər-mĕn'tər) n. 1. An organism that causes fermentation. 2. Also fer·men·tor. An apparatus that maintains optimal conditions for the growth of microorganisms, used in large-scale fermentation and in the commercial production of antibiotics and hormones.

fer·mi (fûr'mē, fĕr'-) n. A unit of length equal to one femtometer (10^{-15} meter). [After Enrico FERMI.]

Fer·mi (fĕr'mē), Enrico. 1901-1954. Italian-born American physicist. He won a 1938 Nobel Prize for his work on artificial radioactivity caused by neutron bombardment. In 1942 he produced the first controlled nuclear chain reaction, in a squash court at the University of Chicago.

fer·mi·on (fûr'mē-ŏn', fĕr'-) n. A particle, such as an electron, a proton, or a neutron, having half-integral spin and obeying statistical rules requiring that not more than one in a set of identical particles may occupy a particular quantum state. [After Enrico FERMI.]

fer·mi·um (fûr'mē-əm, fĕr'-) n. Symbol Fm A synthetic transuranic metallic element (atomic number 100) having 10 isotopes with mass numbers ranging from 248 to 257 and corresponding half-lives ranging from 0.6 minute to approximately 100 days. [After Enrico FERMI.]

fern (fûrn) n. Any of numerous flowerless, seedless vascular plants having roots, stems, and fronds and reproducing by spores. [Middle English, from Old English fearn. See per⁻² in Appendix.] —fern'y adj.

Fer·nán·dez (fər-năn'dĕz, fĕr-năn'dĕth, -dĕs), Juan. 1536?-1602?. Spanish navigator who discovered the Juan Fernández Islands off the coast of Chile (1563).

Fernández de Cór·do·ba (fər-năn'dĕz də kôr'də-bə, thĕ kôr'thō-vä), Gonzalo. Known as "El Gran Capitán." 1453-1515. Spanish general who was instrumental in driving the Moors from Granada (1492) and brought all of Naples under Spanish rule (1503).

Fer·nan·do de No·ro·nha (fər-năn'dō də nə-rŏn'yə, fĕr-năn'dŏŏ də nô-rô'nyə) An island group in the Atlantic Ocean off the northeast coast of Brazil. The islands were once used as a penal colony.

Fer·nan·do Po (fər-năn'dō pŏ') See Bioko.

Fern·dale (fûrn'dāl') A city of southeast Michigan, a residential suburb of Detroit. Population, 25,084.

fern·er·y (fûr'nə-rĕ) n. pl. fern·er·ies. 1. A place or container in which ferns are grown. 2. A bed or collection of ferns.

fer·ninst (fər-nɪnstʹ) also for·nent (fər-nɛntʹ) prep. Upper Southern U.S.

Opposite, near to, or against: Their barn is ferninst the house. [Dialectal fornent, fornest : FORE + anent, anenst (from Middle English); see ANENT.]

REGIONAL NOTE: Ferninst, meaning “opposite, next to, against,” has been attributed to Irish English, brought over during the peak years of Irish immigration to the United States in the mid-19th century. However, other, earlier citations with various spellings date further back: “I walked with them to a room nearly fornent the old state-house” (Davy Crockett). These variant forms are traceable to the American colonial period, when the source of ferninst was probably Scotland or other parts of the British Isles. The term is now dying out; Craig M. Carver, in his book American Regional Dialects, reports that “only nine [DARE] informants, all well over sixty-five years of age, used this term.” A derived noun ferninster, meaning “someone who is deliberately contrary,” is also used: “The trouble with the Republican leaders in Congress... is that they are just ferninsters” (William Allen White).

fern seed (fûrn sêd) n. The dustlike spores of ferns, formerly believed to be seeds and once thought to have the power of making their possessor invisible.

fe·ro·cious (fə-rōʹshəs) adj. 1. Extremely savage; fierce. See Synonyms at cruel. 2. Marked by unrelenting intensity; extreme: ferocious heat. [From Latin ferōx, ferōc-, fierce. See ghwer- in Appendix.] —fe·roʹcious·ly adv. —fe·roʹcious·ness n.

fe·roc·i·ty (fə-rōsʹi-tē) n. The state or quality of being ferocious; fierceness.

-ferous suff. Bearing; producing; containing: carboniferous. [-FER + -OUS.]

ferr- pref. Variant of ferro-.

Fer·ra·ra (fə-rärʹə, fě-räʹrä) A city of northern Italy southwest of Venice. In the early 13th century the Este family established a powerful principality here and made it a flourishing center of Renaissance learning and the arts. Population, 123,200.

fer·rate (fěʹrātʹ) n. See ferrite (n., sense 1).

fer·re·dox·in (fěʹrʹi-dōkʹsɪn) n. An iron-containing protein present in green plants and certain anaerobic bacteria that functions in electron transport reactions in biochemical processes, such as photosynthesis. [FER(RO)- + REDOX + -IN.]

fer·ret¹ (fěʹrʹit) n. 1. A weasel-like, usually albino mammal (Mustela putorius furo) related to the polecat and often trained to hunt rats or rabbits. 2. A black-footed ferret. — v. fer·ret·ed, fer·ret·ing, fer·rets. — v. tr. 1. a. To hunt (rabbits, for example) with ferrets. b. To drive out, as from a hiding place; expel. 2. To uncover and bring to light by searching. Often used with out: ferret out the solution to a mystery. 3. To hound or harry persistently; worry. — v. intr. 1. To engage in hunting with ferrets. 2. To search intensively. [Middle English fuRET, ferret, from Old French furet, from Vulgar Latin fūrītus*, diminutive of Latin fūr, thief. See bher¹ in Appendix.] —fer/ret-er n. —fer/ret-y adj.

fer-ret² (fēr'īt) also fer-ret-ing (-ī-tīng) n. A narrow piece of tape used to bind or edge fabric. [Probably alteration of Italian fioretti, floss silk, pl. of fioretto diminutive of fiore, flower, from Latin flōs, flōr-, flower. See bhel³ in Appendix.]

ferri- pref. Iron, especially ferric iron: ferricyanide. [From Latin ferrum, iron.]

fer-ri-age (fēr'ē-ij) n. 1. The act or business of carrying by ferry. 2. The toll charged for a ferry passage.

fer-ric (fēr'īk) adj. Of, relating to, or containing iron, especially with a valence of 3 or a valence higher than in a corresponding ferrous compound.

ferric ammonium citrate (fēr'īk ə-mō'nē-əm sīt'rāt') n. An iron-containing salt, $\text{Fe}(\text{NH}_4)_3(\text{C}_6\text{H}_5\text{O}_7)_2$, used in the treatment of some forms of anemia.

ferric chloride (fēr'īk klōr'īd') n. A salt, FeCl_3 , used medicinally as an astringent and a hematinic and industrially as a coagulant.

ferric oxide (fēr'īk ök'sīd') n. A dark red compound, Fe_2O_3 , occurring naturally as hematite ore and rust and used in pigments and metal polishes and on magnetic tapes.

fer-ri-cy-a-nide (fēr'ī-sī'ə-nīd', fēr'ī-) n. Any of various salts containing the negative trivalent radical $\text{Fe}(\text{CN})_6$ and used in making blue pigments.

fer-rif-er-ous (fə-rīf'ər-əs, fē-) adj. Containing or yielding iron.

Fer-ris wheel also fer-ris wheel (fēr'īs hwēl) n. An amusement ride consisting of a large upright, rotating wheel having suspended seats that remain in a horizontal position as the wheel revolves. [After George Washington Gale Ferris (1859-1896), American engineer.]

fer-rite (fēr'īt') n. 1. Any of a group of nonmetallic, ceramiclike, usually ferromagnetic compounds of ferric oxide with other oxides, especially such a compound characterized by extremely high electrical resistivity and used in computer memory elements, permanent magnets, and various solid-state devices. Also called ferrate 2. Iron that has not combined with carbon, occurring commonly in steel, cast iron, and pig iron below 910°C.

ferrite core (fēr'īt' kōr) n. A magnetic core used in a computer core memory.

fer-ri-tin (fēr'ī-tīn) n. An iron-containing protein complex, found principally in the intestinal mucosa, spleen, and liver, that functions as the primary form of iron storage in the body.

ferro- or ferr- pref. 1. Iron: ferromagnetic. 2. Ferrous iron: ferricyanide. [From Latin ferrum, iron.]

fer-ro-al-loy (fēr'ō-āl'oi', -ə-loi') n. Any of various alloys of iron and one or more other elements, such as manganese or silicon, used as a raw material in the production of steel.

fer-ro-con-crete (fēr'ō-kōn'krēt', -kōng'-, -kōn-krēt', -kōng-) n. See reinforced concrete.

fer·ro·cy·a·nide (fĕr'ō-sī'ə-nīd') n. A salt containing the negative tetravalent radical $\text{Fe}(\text{CN})_6$, used in making blue pigments, blueprint paper, and ferricyanide.

fer·ro·e·lec·tric (fĕr'ō-ĭ-lĕk'trĭk) adj. Of or relating to a crystalline dielectric that can be given a permanent electric polarization by application of an electric field. — n. A ferroelectric substance. — fer'ro·e·lec·tric'ity (-ĭ-lĕk-trĭs'ĭ-tē, -ĕ'lĕk-) n.

fer·ro·mag·ne·sian (fĕr'ō-măg-nĕ'zhən, -shən) adj. Containing iron and magnesium.

fer·ro·mag·net (fĕr'ō-măg'nĭt) n. 1. a. A ferromagnetic substance. b. A substance with magnetic properties resembling those of iron. 2. A ferromagnetic magnet.

fer·ro·mag·net·ic (fĕr'ō-măg-nĕt'ĭk) adj. Relating to or characteristic of substances such as iron, nickel, or cobalt and various alloys that exhibit extremely high magnetic permeability, the ability to acquire high magnetization in relatively weak magnetic fields, a characteristic saturation point, and magnetic hysteresis. — fer'ro·mag'ne·tism (-măg'nĭ-tĭz'əm) n.

fer·ro·man·ga·nese (fĕr'ō-măng'gə-nĕz', -nĕs') n. An alloy of iron and manganese used in the production of steel.

fer·ro·sil·i·con (fĕr'ō-sĭl'ĭ-kən, -kŏn') n. An alloy of iron and silicon used in the production of carbon steel.

fer·ro·type (fĕr'ə-tĭp') n. 1. A positive photograph made directly on an iron plate varnished with a thin sensitized film. Also called tintype 2. The process by which such photographs are made.

fer·rous (fĕr'əs) adj. Of, relating to, or containing iron, especially with a valence of 2 or a valence lower than in a corresponding ferric compound.

ferrous oxide (fĕr'əs ɔk'sīd') n. A black powder, FeO , used in the manufacture of steel, green heat-absorbing glass, and enamels.

ferrous sulfate (fĕr'əs sŭl'fāt') n. A greenish crystalline compound, $\text{FeSO}_4 \cdot 7\text{H}_2\text{O}$, used as a pigment, fertilizer, and feed additive, in sewage and water treatment, and as a medicine in the treatment of iron deficiency. Also called copperas ferrous sulfide (fĕr'əs sŭl'fīd') n. A black to brown sulfide of iron, FeS , used in making hydrogen sulfide.

fer·ru·gi·nous (fə-rōō'jə-nəs, fĕ-) adj. 1. Of, containing, or similar to iron. 2. Having the color of iron rust; reddish-brown. [From Latin ferrūginus, from ferrūgō, ferrūgin-, iron rust, from ferrum, iron.]

fer·rule (fĕr'əl) n. 1. A metal ring or cap placed around a pole or shaft for reinforcement or to prevent splitting. 2. A bushing used to secure a pipe joint. [Alteration (influenced by Latin ferrum, iron), of Middle English verrele, from Old French virole, from Latin viriola, little bracelet, diminutive of viriae, bracelets. See wei- in Appendix.] —fer'rule v.

fer-ry (fēr'ē) v. fer-ried, fer-ry-ing, fer-ries. — v. tr. 1. Nautical. a. To transport (people, vehicles, or goods) by boat across a body of water. b. To cross (a body of water) by a ferry. 2. a. To deliver (a vehicle, especially an aircraft) under its own power to its eventual user. b. To transport (people or goods) especially by aircraft. — v. intr. To cross a body of water on or as if on a ferry. — n. pl. fer-ries. 1. Nautical. a. A ferryboat. b. A place where passengers or goods are transported across a body of water, such as a river or bay, by a ferryboat. 2. A franchise or legal right to operate a ferrying service for a fee. 3. A service and route for delivering an aircraft under its own power to its eventual user. [Middle English ferien, from Old English ferian. See per-² in Appendix.]

fer-ry-boat (fēr'ē-bōt') n. Nautical. A boat used to ferry passengers, vehicles, or goods.

fer-tile (fūr'tl) adj. 1. Biology. a. Capable of initiating, sustaining, or supporting reproduction. b. Capable of growing and developing; able to mature: a fertile egg. 2. Botany. Bearing functional reproductive structures such as seeds or fruit or material such as spores or pollen. 3. Bearing or producing crops or vegetation abundantly; fruitful. 4. Rich in material needed to sustain plant growth: fertile soil. 5. Highly or continuously productive; prolific: a fertile imagination; a fertile source of new ideas. 6. Physics. Capable of producing fissionable material: fertile thorium 232. [Middle English fertil, from Old French fertile, from Latin fertilis, from ferre, to bear. See bher-¹ in Appendix.] —fer'tile-ly adv. —fer'tile-ness n.

SYNONYMS: fertile, fecund, fruitful, productive, prolific. The central meaning shared by these adjectives is “marked by great productivity”: fertile farmland; a fecund imagination; fruitful efforts; a productive meeting; a prolific writer.

ANTONYM: infertile

Fer-tile Cres-cent (fūr'tl krēs'ənt) A region of the Middle East arching across the northern part of the Syrian Desert and extending from the Nile Valley to the Tigris and Euphrates rivers. Historically, it was the site of massive migrations and bloody invasions.

fer-til-i-ty (fər-tīl'ī-tē) n. 1. The condition, quality, or degree of being fertile. 2. The birthrate of a population.

fertility factor (fər-tīl'ī-tē fāk'tər) n. See sex factor (n., sense 1).

fer-til-i-za-tion (fūr'tl-ī-zā'shən) n. 1. The act or process of initiating biological reproduction by insemination or pollination. 2. The union of male and female gametes to form a zygote. 3. The act or process of applying a fertilizer. —fer'til-i-za'tion-al adj.

fer·til·ize (fûr'tl-îz') v. fer·til·ized, fer·til·iz·ing, fer·til·iz·es. — v. tr.

1. To cause the fertilization of (an ovum, for example). 2. To make (soil, for example) fertile: Compost fertilizes the soil. 3. To spread fertilizer on: used a mechanical spreader to fertilize the lawn. — v. intr. To spread fertilizer. — fer·'til·iz'·a·ble adj.

fer·til·iz·er (fûr'tl-îzəɾ) n. Any of a large number of natural and synthetic materials, including manure and nitrogen, phosphorus, and potassium compounds, spread on or worked into soil to increase its capacity to support plant growth.

fer·ule (fě'r'əl) n. An instrument, such as a cane, stick, or flat piece of wood, used in punishing children. — v. tr. fer·uled, fer·ul·ing, fer·ules. To punish with a ferule. [Middle English ferul, fennel stalk, from Latin ferula, fennel stalk, rod.]

fe·ru·lic acid (fə-roō'lik əs'îd) n. A compound, C₁₀H₁₀O₄, related to vanillin and obtained from certain plants. [From New Latin Ferula, plant genus, from Latin ferula, giant fennel.]

fer·ven·cy (fûr'vən-sē) n. pl. fer·ven·cies. The condition or quality of being fervent.

fer·vent (fûr'vənt) adj. 1. Having or showing great emotion or zeal; ardent: fervent protests; a fervent admirer. 2. Extremely hot; glowing. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin fervēns, fervent- present participle of fervēre, to boil. See bhreu- in Appendix.] — fer·vent·ly adv. — fer·vent·ness n.

fer·vid (fûr'vid) adj. 1. Marked by great passion or zeal: a fervid patriot. 2. Extremely hot; burning. [Latin fervidus, from fervēre, to boil. See bhreu- in Appendix.] — fer·vid·ly adv. — fer·vid·ness n.

fer·vor (fûr'vər) n. 1. Great warmth and intensity of emotion. See Synonyms at passion. 2. Intense heat. [Middle English fervour, from Old French, from Latin fervor, from fervēre, to boil. See FERVID.] fer·vour (fûr'vər) n. Chiefly British. Variant of fervor.

Fès (fěs) See Fez.

fes·cen·nine (fěs'ə-nīn', -nēn') adj. Licentious; obscene. [Latin Fescinnīnus, of Fescennia, a town of ancient Etruria known for its licentious poetry.]

fes·cue (fěs'kyōō) n. Any of various grasses of the genus Festuca, often cultivated as pasturage. [Alteration of Middle English festu, straw, from Old French, from Late Latin festūcum, from Latin festūca.]

fess¹ also fesse (fěs) n. Heraldry. A wide horizontal band forming the middle section of an escutcheon. [Middle English fesse, from Old French, from Latin fascia, band.]

fess² (fěs) v. intr. fessed, fess·ing, fess·es. Informal. To admit to something; confess: “won't fess up to being even vaguely liberal” (Jonathan Alter). [Short for CONFESS.] fesse (fēs) n. Heraldry. Variant of fess¹.

Fes-sen-den (fēs'ən-dən), Reginald Aubrey. 1866-1932. Canadian-born engineer and inventor who made the first radio broadcast combining voice and music (1906).

Fes-sen-den (fēs'ən-dən), William Pitt. 1806-1869. American politician and financier who played a major part in the Union's financial administration during the Civil War.

fess point (fēs point) n. Heraldry. The center point of an escutcheon.

fest (fĕst) n. A gathering or an occasion characterized by a specified activity.

Often used in combination: a music fest; a food fest. [From German Fest, festival, from Middle High German vĕst, from Latin fĕstum. See FEAST.]

fes-tal (fēs'təl) adj. Of, relating to, or of the nature of a feast or festival; festive. [Middle English, from Old French, from Late Latin fĕstālis, from Latin fĕstum, feast. See FEAST.] —fes'tal-ly adv.

fes-ter (fēs'tər) v. fes-tered, fes-ter-ing, fes-ters. — v. intr. 1. To generate pus; suppurate. 2. To form an ulcer. 3. To undergo decay; rot. 4. a. To be or become an increasing source of irritation or poisoning; rankle: bitterness that festered and grew. b. To be subject to or exist in a condition of decline: allowed the once beautiful park to fester. — v. tr. To infect, inflame, or corrupt. — n. A small festering sore or ulcer; a pustule. [Middle English festren, from festre, fistula, from Old French, from Latin fistula.]

fes-ti-nate (fēs'tə-nīt) adj. Hasty. — v. intr. fes-ti-nat-ed, fes-ti-nat-ing, fes-ti-nates (-nāt'). To hasten. [Latin festinātus, past participle of festināre, to hasten.] —fes'ti-nate-ly adv.

fes-ti-val (fēs'tə-vəl) n. 1. An occasion for feasting or celebration, especially a day or time of religious significance that recurs at regular intervals. 2. An often regularly recurring program of cultural performances, exhibitions, or competitions: a film festival; a high-school music festival. 3. Revelry; conviviality. — adj. Of, relating to, or suitable for a feast or festival; festive. [From Middle English, festive, from Old French, from Medieval Latin fĕstivālis, from Latin fĕstīvus, from fĕstus. See dhēs- in Appendix.]

fes-ti-val-go-er (fēs'tə-vəl-gō'ər) n. One who attends a festival.

fes-tive (fēs'tiv) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or appropriate for a feast or festival.

2. Merry; joyous: The birthday party was a festive occasion. [Latin fĕstīvus, from fĕstus. See dhēs- in Appendix.] —fes'tive-ly adv. —fes'tive-ness n.

fes-tiv-i-ty (fĕ-stiv'ī-tē) n. pl. fes-tiv-i-ties. 1. A joyous feast, holiday, or celebration; a festival. 2. The pleasure, joy, and gaiety of a festival or celebration.

3. festivities. The proceedings or events of a festival.

fes-toon (fĕ-stōon') n. 1. A string or garland, as of leaves or flowers, suspended in a loop or curve between two points. 2. A representation of such a string or garland, as in painting or sculpture. — v. tr. fes-tooned, fes-toon-ing, fes-toons. 1. To decorate with or as if with festoons; hang festoons on. 2. To form or make into festoons. [French feston, from Italian festone, from feſta, feast, from Vulgar Latin fēſta*. See FEAST.]

fes-toon-er-y (fě-stōō'nə-rē) n. pl. fes-toon-er-ies. 1. An arrangement of festoons. 2. Festoons considered as a group.

fest-schrift (fěſt'shrif't') n. pl. fest-schriſt-ten (-shrif'tən) or fest-schriſts. A volume of learned articles or essays by colleagues and admirers, serving as a tribute or memorial especially to a scholar. [German : Fest, festival; see FEST + Schrift, writing from Middle High German ſchrift, from Old High German ſcrift, from ſcriban, to write, from Latin ſcribere. See skriġbh- in Appendix.]

FET abbr. 1. Federal estate tax. 2. Also F.E.T. Federal Excise Tax. 3. Field-effect transistor.

fet- pref. Variant of feto-.

fet-a (fět'ə, fē'tə) n. A white semisoft Greek cheese made usually of goat's or ewe's milk and preserved in brine. [Modern Greek (turi) pheta, (cheese) slice, from Italian ſetta, slice, from offetta*, diminutive of ·offa, from Latin offa, morsel of food.]

fe-tal also foe-tal (fēt'l) adj. Of, relating to, characteristic of, or being a fetus.

fetal alcohol syndrome (fēt'l əl'kə-hôl' sġn'drôm') n. A complex of birth defects including cardiac, cranial, facial, or neural abnormalities and physical and mental growth retardation, occurring in an infant as a result of excess alcohol consumption by the mother during pregnancy.

fetal distress syndrome (fēt'l dġ-strēs' sġn'drôm') n. An abnormal condition of a fetus during gestation or at the time of delivery, marked by altered heart rate or rhythm and leading to compromised blood flow or changes in blood chemistry.

fetal hemoglobin (fēt'l hē'mə-glô'bġn) n. The predominant form of hemoglobin in a fetus and a newborn. Normally present in small amounts in an adult, it may be abnormally elevated in certain forms of anemia.

fetal position (fēt'l pə-zġsh'ən) n. A position of the body at rest in which the spine is curved, the head is bowed forward, and the arms and legs are drawn in toward the chest. [From its resemblance to the position of a fetus in the womb.]

fetch¹ (fěch) v. fetched, fetch-ing, fetch-es. — v. tr. 1. To come or go after and take or bring back: The puppy fetched the stick that we had tossed. 2. a. To cause to come. b. To bring in as a price: fetched a thousand dollars at auction. c. To interest or attract. 3. a. To draw in (breath); inhale. b. To bring forth (a sigh, for example) with obvious effort. 4. Informal. To deliver (a blow) by striking; deal. 5. Nautical. To arrive at; reach: fetched port after a month at sea. — v. intr. 1. a. To go after something and return with it. b. To retrieve killed game. Used of a hunting dog. 2. To take an indirect route. 3. Nautical. a. To hold a course. b. To turn about; veer. — n. 1. The act or an instance of fetching.

2. Computer Science. A program routine that brings a module of a program from storage into main memory for immediate use. 3. A stratagem or trick. 4. a. The distance over which a wind blows. b. The distance traveled by waves with no obstruction. —phrasal verb. fetch up. 1. To reach a stopping place or goal; end up. 2. To make up (lost time, for example). 3. To bring forth; produce. 4. To bring to a halt; stop. [Middle English fecchen, from Old English feccean. See ped- in Appendix.] —fetch'er n.

fetch² (fěch) n. Chiefly British. 1. A ghost; an apparition. 2. A doppelgänger. [Origin unknown.]

fetch-ing (fěch'ing) adj. Very attractive; charming: a fetching new hairstyle.
—fetch'ing-ly adv.

fete also fête (fāt, fět) n. 1. A festival or feast. 2. a. An elaborate, often outdoor entertainment. b. An elaborate party. — v. tr. fet-ed also fêt-ed, fet-ing also fêt-ing, fetes also fêtes. 1. To celebrate or honor with a festival, a feast, or an elaborate entertainment. 2. To pay honor to. [French fête, from Old French feste. See FEAST.] fet-er-i-ta (fět'ə-rē'tə) n. A grass (Sorghum vulgare var. caudatum) native to Sudan, grown in warm regions for its grain and as forage. [Arabic dialectal.]

feti- pref. Variant of feto-.

fet-ich (fět'ish, fē'tish) n. Variant of fetish.

fet-ich-ism (fět'i-shiz'əm, fē'tī-) n. Variant of fetishism.

fe-ti-cide (fē'tī-sīd') n. Intentional destruction of a human fetus.
—fe'ti-cid'al (-sīd'l) adj.

fet-id (fět'id, fē'tid) also foe-tid (fē'tid) adj. Having an offensive odor. [Middle English, from Latin fētidus, from fētēre, to stink.] —fet'id-ly adv.
—fet'id-ness n.

fet-ish also fet-ich (fět'ish, fē'tish) n. 1. An object that is believed to have magical or spiritual powers, especially such an object associated with animistic or shamanistic religious practices. 2. An object of unreasonably excessive attention or reverence: made a fetish of punctuality. 3. Something, such as a material object or a nonsexual part of the body, that arouses sexual desire and may become necessary for sexual gratification. 4. An abnormally obsessive preoccupation or attachment; a fixation. [French fétiche, from Portuguese feitiço, artificial, charm, from Latin factīcius, artificial. See FACTITIOUS.] fet-ish-ism also fet-ich-ism (fět'i-shiz'əm, fē'tī-) n. 1. Worship of or belief in magical fetishes. 2. Excessive attachment or regard. 3. The displacement of sexual arousal or gratification to a fetish. —fet'ish-ist n. —fet'ish-is'tic adj.

—fet'ish-is'ti-cal-ly adv.

fet-ish-ize (fět'i-shīz') v. tr. fet-ish-ized, fet-ish-iz-ing, fet-ish-iz-es. To make a fetish of: “The American public schools... have in the space of a few years gone from neglecting computers to fetishizing them” (James Traub).

fet-lock (fĕt'lŏk') n. 1. a. A projection on the lower part of the leg of a horse or related animal, above and behind the hoof. b. A tuft of hair on such a projection. 2. The joint marked by such a projection. [Middle English fitlok. See ped- in Appendix.]

feto- or feti- or fet- pref. Fetus; fetal: fetology. [From FETUS.]

fe-tol-o-gy (fĕ-tŏl'ə-jĕ) n. The medical study and treatment of the fetus, especially within the uterus. — fe-tol'o-gist n.

fe-to-pro-tein (fĕ'tə-prŏ'tĕn, -tĕ-ĭn) n. Any of several antigens normally present in a fetus and occurring abnormally in adults as a result of certain neoplastic conditions or diseases of the liver.

fe-tor (fĕ'tər, -tŏr') also foe-tor (fĕ'tər) n. An offensive odor; a stench. See Synonyms at stench. [Middle English fetoure, from Latin fĕtor, from fĕtĕre, to stink.]

fe-to-scope (fĕ'tə-skŏp') n. A flexible fiberoptic device used to view a fetus in utero. — fe-tos'co-py (fĕ-tŏs'kə-pĕ) n.

fet-ter (fĕt'ər) n. 1. A chain or shackle for the ankles or feet. 2. Something that serves to restrict; a restraint. — v. tr. fet-tered, fet-ter-ing, fet-ters. 1. To put fetters on; shackle. 2. To restrict the freedom of. See Synonyms at hamper¹. [Middle English feter, from Old English. See ped- in Appendix.]

fet-ter-bush (fĕt'ər-bŏŏsh') n. Any of several deciduous or evergreen shrubs of the genus Leucothoe, having clusters of white to pink flowers and many-seeded capsules with five valves.

fet-tle (fĕt'l) n. 1. a. Proper or sound condition. b. Mental or emotional state; spirits: was in fine fettle. 2. Metallurgy. Loose sand or ore used to line the hearth of a reverberatory furnace in preparation for pouring molten metal. — v. tr. fet-tled, fet-ting, fet-tles. Metallurgy. To line the hearth of (a reverberatory furnace) with loose sand or ore in preparation for pouring molten metal. [From Middle English fetlen, to make ready, possibly from Old English fetel, girdle.]

fet-ting (fĕt'liŋ) n. Metallurgy. Fettle.

fet-tuc-ci-ne (fĕt'ə-chĕ'nĕ) n. (used with a sing. or pl. verb). 1. Narrow, flat strips of pasta. 2. A dish made with such strips of pasta. [Italian, pl. diminutive of fettuccia, ribbon possibly diminutive of fetta, slice. See FETA.]

fettuccine Al-fre-do (fĕt'ə-chĕ'nĕ ăl-fră'dŏ, ăl-) n. A dish consisting of fettuccine in a rich cream sauce with Parmesan cheese. [After Alfredo all'Augusteo, a restaurant in Rome.]

fe-tus also foe-tus (fĕ'təs) n. pl. fe-tus-es. 1. The unborn young of a viviparous vertebrate having a basic structural resemblance to the adult animal. 2. In human beings, the unborn young from the end of the eighth week after conception to the moment of birth, as distinguished from the earlier embryo. [Middle English, from Latin. See dhē(i)- in Appendix.]

Feucht-wang-er (foikt'väng'ər, foɪkht'-), Lion. 1884-1958. German-born writer known for his historical novel The Ugly Duchess (1923).

feud¹ (fyōōd) n. A bitter, often prolonged quarrel or state of enmity, especially such a state of hostilities between two families or clans. — v. intr. feud-ed, feud-ing, feuds. To carry on or perpetuate a bitter quarrel or state of enmity. [Alteration (probably influenced by FEUD²), of Middle English fede, from Old French faide, of Germanic origin.]

feud² (fyōōd) n. See fee (n., sense 5a). [Medieval Latin feudum, of Germanic origin. See peku- in Appendix.]

feud. abbr. Feudal; feudalism.

feu-dal (fyōōd'l) adj. Abbr. feud. 1. Of, relating to, or characteristic of feudalism. 2. Of or relating to lands held in fee or to the holding of such lands. — feu'dal-ly adv.

feu-dal-ism (fyōōd'l-iz'əm) n. Abbr. feud. 1. A political and economic system of Europe from the 9th to about the 15th century, based on the holding of all land in fief or fee and the resulting relation of lord to vassal and characterized by homage, legal and military service of tenants, and forfeiture. 2. A political, economic, or social order resembling this medieval system. — feu'dal-ist n. — feu'dal-is'tic adj.

feu-dal-i-ty (fyōō-dāl'ī-tē) n. pl. feu-dal-i-ties. 1. The quality or state of being feudal. 2. A feudal holding, system, or regime.

feu-dal-ize (fyōōd'l-īz') v. tr. feu-dal-ized, feu-dal-iz-ing, feu-dal-iz-es. To make feudal. — feu'dal-i-za'tion (-ī-zā'shən) n.

feu-da-to-ry (fyōō'də-tōr'ē, -tōr'ē) n. pl. feu-da-to-ries. 1. A person holding land by feudal fee; a vassal. 2. A feudal fee. — adj. 1. Of, relating to, or characteristic of the feudal relationship between vassal and lord. 2. Owing feudal homage or allegiance. [Medieval Latin feudatōrius, from feudātus, past participle of feudāre, to enfeoff, from feudum, fee, fief. See FEUD².]

feud-ist¹ (fyōō'dīst) n. A participant in a feud.

feud-ist² (fyōō'dīst) n. A specialist in feudal law.

Feu-er-bach (foi'ər-bākH'), Ludwig Andreas von. 1804-1872. German philosopher whose major work, The Essence of Christianity (1841), maintains that religion and divinity are projections of human nature.

Feuil-let (fœ-yā'), Octave. 1821-1890. French writer who published several novels, including La Petite Comtesse (1857) and Monsieur de Camors (1867).

feuil-le-ton (fœ'yə-tōN') n. 1. a. The part of a European newspaper devoted to light fiction, reviews, and articles of general entertainment. b. An article appearing in such a section. 2. a. A novel published in installments. b. A light, popular work of fiction. 3. A short literary essay or sketch. [French, from feuille-let, sheet of paper, little leaf, diminutive of feuille, leaf, from Old French foille, from Latin folium. See bhel⁻³ in Appendix.] —feuil'le-ton'ism (-tôn'iz'əm, -tôn'niz'-) n. —feuil'le-ton'ist n. —feuil'le-ton-is'tic adj.

fe-ver (fē'vər) n. 1. a. Abnormally high body temperature. b. Any of various diseases characterized by abnormally high body temperature. 2. a. A condition of heightened activity or excitement: a fever of anticipation. b. A contagious, usually short-lived enthusiasm or craze: disco fever. — v. fe-vered, fe-ver-ing, fe-vers. — v. tr. To effect fever in. — v. intr. To be or become feverish. [Middle English, from Old English fefor, and from Old French fièvre both from Latin febris.]

fever blister (fē'vər blis'tər) n. See cold sore.

fe-ver-few (fē'vər-fyōō') n. An aromatic plant (Chrysanthemum parthenium) native to Eurasia, having clusters of buttonlike, white-rayed flower heads. [Middle English feverfu, from Old English feferfuge, and from Anglo-Norman fevre-fue* both from Late Latin febrifugia : febris, fever + fuga, flight.]

fe-ver-ish (fē'vər-ish) adj. 1. a. Of, relating to, or resembling a fever. b. Having a fever or symptoms characteristic of a fever. c. Causing or tending to cause fever. 2. Marked by intense agitation, emotion, or activity: worked at a feverish pace. —fe'ver-ish-ly adv. —fe'ver-ish-ness n.

fever pitch (fē'vər pīch) n. A state of extreme agitation or excitement.

fever tree (fē'vər trē) n. Any of several trees, such as certain species of eucalyptus or Pinckneya pubens, of the southeast United States, having leaves or bark used to allay fever.

fe-ver-weed (fē'vər-wēd') n. Any of various plants considered to have medicinal properties.

fe-ver-wort (fē'vər-wûrt', -wôrt') n. See horse gentian.

few (fyōō) adj. few-er, few-est. 1. Amounting to or consisting of a small number: one of my few bad habits. 2. Being more than one but indefinitely small in number: bowled a few strings. — n. (used with a pl. verb). 1. An indefinitely small number of persons or things: A few of the books have torn jackets. 2. An exclusive or limited number: the discerning few; the fortunate few. — pron. (used with a pl. verb). A small number of persons or things: "For many are called, but few are chosen" (Matthew 22:14). [Middle English fewe, from Old English fēawe. See pau- in Appendix.] —few'ness n.

USAGE NOTE: The traditional rule holds that fewer is used with expressions denoting things that can be counted (fewer than four players), while less is used with mass terms denoting things of measurable extent (less paper; less than a gallon of paint). However, less is idiomatic in certain constructions where fewer would occur according to the traditional rule. Less than is used before a plural noun that denotes a measure of time, amount, or distance: less than three weeks; less than $400; less than 50 miles. Less is sometimes used with plural nouns in the expressions no less than (as in No less than 30 of his colleagues signed the letter) and or less (as in Give your reasons in 25 words or less).

fey (fā) adj. 1. a. Having or displaying an otherworldly, magical, or fairylike aspect or quality: “She’s got that fey look as though she’s had breakfast with a leprechaun” (Dorothy Burnham). b. Having visionary power; clairvoyant. c. Appearing touched or crazy, as if under a spell. 2. Scots. a. Fated to die soon. b. Full of the sense of approaching death. [Middle English feie, fated to die, from Old English fæge.] —fey’ly adv. —fey’ness n.

WORD HISTORY: The history of the words fey and fay illustrates a rather fey coincidence. Our word fay, “fairy, elf,” the descendant of Middle English faie, “a person or place possessed of magical properties,” and first recorded around 1390, goes back to Old French fae, “fairy,” the same word that has given us fairy. Fae in turn comes from Vulgar Latin Fāta, “the goddess of fate,” from Latin fātum, “fate.” If fay goes back to fate, so does fey in a manner of speaking, for its Old English ancestor fæge meant “fated to die.” The sense we are more familiar with, “magical or fairylike in quality,” seems to have arisen partly because of the resemblance in sound between fay and fey.

Feyn·man (fīn’mən), Richard Phillips. 1918-1988. American physicist. He shared a 1965 Nobel Prize for research in quantum electrodynamics.

fez (fěz) n. pl. fez-zes. A man’s felt cap in the shape of a flat-topped cone, usually red with a black tassel hanging from the crown, worn chiefly in the eastern Mediterranean region. [French, from Turkish fes, from Fez.]

Fez (fěz) also Fès (fěs) A city of north-central Morocco northeast of Casablanca. The oldest part of the city was founded in the 9th century and reached the height of its influence in the mid-14th century. Population, 448,823.

Fez-zan (fə-zăn’) A region of southwest Libya. It was under Turkish control from the 16th century until 1912.

ff abbr. Music. Fortissimo.

ff. abbr. 1. Folios. 2. Following.

FFA abbr. Future Farmers of America.

F.F.A. or f.f.a. abbr. Business. Free from alongside.

f factor (ěf fāk’tər) n. See sex factor (n., sense 1). [F(ERTILITY) FACTOR.]

fff abbr. Music. Fortississimo.

FFV abbr. First Family of Virginia.

FG abbr. 1. Football & Basketball. Field goal. 2. Fine grain.

FHA abbr. 1. Federal Housing Administration. 2. Future Homemakers of America.

FHLBB abbr. Federal Home Loan Bank Board.

fhp or f.hp. abbr. Friction horsepower.

fi-a-cre (fē-ä'krə) n. A small hackney carriage. [French, after the Hôtel de Saint Fiacre in Paris.]

fi-an-cé (fē'an-sā', fē-än'sā') n. A man engaged to be married. [French, from past participle of fiancer, to betroth, from Old French fiancier, from fiance, trust, from fier, to trust, from Vulgar Latin fīdāre*, from Latin fīdere. See bheidh- in Appendix.]

fi-an-cée (fē'an-sā', fē-än'sā') n. A woman engaged to be married. [French, feminine of fiancé, fiancé. See FIANCÉ.] fi-an-chet-to (fē'an-kět'ō, -chět'ō) Games. n. pl. fi-an-chet-ti (-kět'ē, -chět'ē). The development in chess of a bishop from its original position to the second square of the adjacent knight's file. — v. tr. intr. fi-an-chet-toed, fi-an-chet-to-ing, fi-an-chet-tos. To develop as or set up a fianchetto. [Italian, diminutive of fianco, flank, from Old Italian, from Old French flanc. See FLANK.] fi-as-co (fē-äs'kō, -ä'skō) n. pl. fi-as-coes or fi-as-cos. A complete failure. [French, from Italian fare fiasco, to make a bottle, fail, from fiasco, bottle (translation of French bouteille, bottle, error, used by the French for linguistic errors committed by Italian actors on the 18th-century French stage), from Late Latin flascō. See FLASK.] fi-at (fē'ət, -ät', -ät', fī'ät', -ət) n. 1. An arbitrary order or decree.

2. Authorization or sanction: government fiat. [Medieval Latin, from Latin, let it be done, third person sing. present subjunctive of fieri, to become, to be done. See bheuə- in Appendix.]

fiat money (fē'ət mün'ē) n. Legal tender, especially paper currency, authorized by a government but not based on or convertible into gold or silver.

fib (fīb) n. An insignificant or childish lie. — v. intr. fibbed, fib-bing, fibs. To tell a fib. See Synonyms at lie². [Perhaps from obsolete and dialectal fible-fable, nonsense, reduplication of FABLE.] — fib'ber n.

fi-ber (fī'bər) n. 1. A slender, elongated, threadlike object or structure.

2. Botany. One of the elongated, thick-walled cells that give strength and support to plant tissue. 3. Anatomy. a. Any of the filaments constituting the extracellular matrix of connective tissue. b. Any of various elongated cells or threadlike structures, especially a muscle fiber or a nerve fiber. 4. a. A natural or synthetic filament, as of cotton or nylon, capable of being spun into yarn. b. Material made of such filaments. 5. a. Something that provides substance or texture. b. Essential character or structure: "stirred the deeper fibers of my nature" (Oscar Wilde).

c. Basic strength or toughness; fortitude: lacking in moral fiber. 6. Coarse, indigestible plant matter, consisting primarily of polysaccharides such as cellulose, that when eaten stimulates intestinal peristalsis. In this sense, also called bulk, roughage. [French fibre, from Old French, from Latin fibra.] — fi'bered adj.

fi-ber-board (fī'bər-bôrd', -bôrd') n. A building material composed of wood chips or plant fibers bonded together and compressed into rigid sheets.

fi-ber-fill (fī'bər-fīl') n. Lightweight synthetic fiber used as filling or insulation, as in comforters, pillows, and outerwear.

Fi-ber-glas (fī'bər-gläs') A trademark used for a type of fiberglass and for goods made of fiberglass.

fi-ber-glass (fī'bər-gläs') n. A material consisting of extremely fine glass fibers, used in making various products, such as yarns, fabrics, insulators, and structural objects or parts. Also called spun glass fi-ber-ize (fī'bə-rīz') v. tr. fi-ber-ized, fi-ber-iz-ing, fi-ber-iz-es. To break into fibers. —fi-ber-i-za'tion (-bər-ī-zā'shən) n.

fiber optics (fī'bər ɒp'tiks) n. (used with a sing. verb). 1. The science or technology of light transmission through very fine, flexible glass or plastic fibers.

2. A bundle of optical fibers. —fi-ber-op'tic (fī'bər-ɒp'tik) adj.

fi-ber-scope (fī'bər-skōp') n. A flexible fiber-optic instrument used to view an object or area, such as a body cavity, that would otherwise be inaccessible.

Fi-bi-ger (fē'bē-gər), Johannes Andreas Grib. 1867-1928. Danish pathologist. He won a 1926 Nobel Prize for his research on cancer.

Fi-bo-nac-ci number (fē'bə-nā'chē nŭm'bər) n. A number in the Fibonacci sequence.

Fibonacci sequence (fē'bə-nā'chē sē'kwəns) n. The sequence of numbers, 1, 1, 2, 3, 5, 8, 13, ..., in which each successive number is equal to the sum of the two preceding numbers. [After Leonardo Fibonacci (died c. 1250), Italian mathematician.]

fibr- pref. Variant of fibro-.

fi-branne (fī'brän') n. A linenlike fabric made of spun-rayon yarn. [French, from fibre, fiber. See FIBER.]

fi-bre (fī'bər) n. Chiefly British. Variant of fiber.

fi-bril (fī'brəl, fībrəl) n. 1. A small, slender fiber or filament. 2. Anatomy. Any threadlike fiber or filament, such as a myofibril or neurofibril, that is a constituent of a cell or larger structure. [New Latin fibrilla, diminutive of Latin fibra, fiber.] —fi-bril-lar (-lər), fi-bril-lar'y (-lēr'ē) adj. —fi-bril-lose' (-lōs') adj.

fib-ril-late (fīb'rə-lāt', fībrə-) v. intr. tr. fib-ril-lat-ed, fib-ril-lat-ing, fib-ril-lates. To undergo or cause to undergo fibrillation. [New Latin fibrilla, fibril; see FIBRIL + -ATE¹.]

fib-ril-la-tion (fīb'rə-lā'shən, fībrə-) n. 1. The forming of fibers. 2. a. Fine, rapid twitching of individual muscle fibers with little or no movement of the muscle as a whole. b. Rapid, uncoordinated twitching movements that replace the normal rhythmic contraction of the heart and may cause a lack of circulation and pulse.

- fi-brin (fī'brīn) n. An elastic, insoluble, whitish protein produced by the action of thrombin on fibrinogen and forming an interlacing fibrous network in the coagulation of blood. —fi'brin-ous adj.
- fi-brin-o-gen (fī-brīn'ə-jən) n. A protein in the blood plasma that is essential for the coagulation of blood and is converted to fibrin by the action of thrombin in the presence of ionized calcium. —fi'bri-nog'e-nous (fī'brə-nōj'ə-nəs) adj.
- fi-brin-o-gen-ic (fī'brə-nō-jěn'ik) adj. 1. Of or relating to fibrinogen. 2. Producing fibrin. —fi'brin-o-gen'i-cal-ly adv.
- fi-bri-noid (fī'brə-noid', fib'rə-) adj. Of or resembling fibrin. — n. A homogenous, acellular material similar to fibrin, found normally in the placenta and formed in connective tissue and in the walls of blood vessels in certain disease states.
- fi-bri-nol-y-sin (fī'brə-nōl'ī-sīn) n. See plasmin.
- fi-bri-nol-y-sis (fī'brə-nōl'ī-sīs) n. pl. fi-bri-nol-y-ses (-sēz'). The breakdown of fibrin, usually by the enzymatic action of plasmin. —fi'bri-no-lyt'ic (-nə-līt'ik) adj.
- fibro- or fibr- pref. Fiber, especially fibrous tissue: fibroma. [From Latin fibra, fiber.]
- fi-bro-blast (fī'brə-blāst') n. A cell that gives rise to connective tissue. —fi'bro-blast'ic adj.
- fi-bro-car-ti-lage (fī'brō-kār'tl-ij) n. Cartilage that contains numerous thick bundles of collagen fibers.
- fi-bro-cys-tic (fī'brō-sīs'tik) adj. Medicine. Characterized by increased fibrosis and cystic spaces, especially in glandular tissue: fibrocystic disease of the breast.
- fi-broid (fī'broid') adj. Composed of or resembling fibrous tissue. — n. A fibroma or myoma occurring especially in the uterine wall.
- fi-bro-in (fī'brō-īn) n. An insoluble white protein that is the essential component of raw silk and spider-web filaments.
- fi-bro-ma (fī-brō'mə) n. pl. fi-bro-mas or fi-bro-ma-ta (-mə-tə). A benign, usually enclosed neoplasm composed primarily of fibrous tissue. —fi-bro-m'a-tous (-brōm'ə-təs, -brō'mə-) adj.
- fi-bro-pla-sia (fī'brə-plā'zhə, -zhē-ə) n. The formation of fibrous tissue, as normally occurs in the healing of wounds. —fi'bro-plas'tic (-plās'tik) adj.
- fi-bro-sis (fī-brō'sīs) n. Pathology. The formation of excessive fibrous tissue, as in a reparative or reactive process. —fi-brot'ic (-brōt'ik) adj.
- fi-bro-si-tis (fī'brə-sī'tīs) n. Pathology. Inflammatory hyperplasia of white fibrous connective tissue, especially surrounding the muscles and causing pain and stiffness. [New Latin fibrōsus, fibrous (from Latin fibra, fiber) + -ITIS.]
- fi-brous (fī'brəs) adj. 1. Having, consisting of, or resembling fibers. 2. Full of sinews; tough. —fi'brous-ly adv. —fi'brous-ness n.

fibrous root (fī'brəs rōōt) n. A root system made up of many threadlike members of more or less equal length, as in most grasses.

fi-bro·vas·cu·lar (fī'brō-vās'kyə-lər) adj. Botany. Having fibrous tissue and vascular tissue, as in the woody tissue of plants.

fibrovascular bundle (fī'brō-vās'kyə-lər bŭn'dl) n. Botany. See vascular bundle.

fib·u·la (fīb'yə-lə) n. pl. fib·u·lae (-lē') or fib·u·las. 1. a. The outer and narrower of two bones of the human lower leg, extending from the knee to the ankle. b. The corresponding bone in the hind leg of an animal. 2. An often ornamented clasp or brooch used in ancient Greece and Rome to fasten clothing. [Latin fībula, clasp, from figere, to fasten. See dhīg^w- in Appendix.]

-fic suff. Causing; making: soporific. [Latin -ficus, from facere, to do. See dhē- in Appendix.]

FICA abbr. Federal Insurance Contributions Act.

-fication suff. Production; making: jollification. [Latin -ficātiō, -ficātiōn-, from -ficātus, past participle of -ficāre, to make, from -ficus, -fic.]

fice (fīs) n. Chiefly Southern U.S. Variant of feist.

fiche (fēsh) n. A microfiche.

Fich·te (fīk'tə, fīKH'-), Johann Gottlieb. 1762-1814. German philosopher whose concept of the moral order of the universe and the moral nature of societies was an important influence on Hegel.

Fich·tel·ge·bir·ge (fīk'təl-gə-bîr'gə, fīKH'-) A mountain range of east-central Germany near the Czechoslovakian border. The region is a popular resort area.

fich·u (fīsh'ōō, fē-shōō') n. A woman's triangular scarf of lightweight fabric, worn over the shoulders and crossed or tied in a loose knot at the breast. [French, from past participle of ficher, to fix, from Vulgar Latin figicāre*, from Latin figere. See dhīg^w- in Appendix.]

fick·le (fīk'əl) adj. Characterized by erratic changeableness or instability, especially with regard to affections or attachments; capricious. [Middle English fikel, from Old English ficol, deceitful.] —fick'le-ness n. —fick'ly adv.

fict. abbr. 1. Fiction. 2. Fictitious.

fic·tile (fīk'təl, -tīl') adj. 1. a. Capable of being molded; plastic. b. Formed of a moldable substance, such as clay or earth. 2. Of or relating to earthenware or pottery. [Latin fictilis, made of clay, from fictus, past participle of figere, to mold. See dheigh- in Appendix.]

fic·tion (fīk'shən) n. Abbr. fict. 1. a. An imaginative creation or a pretense that does not represent actuality but has been invented. b. The act of inventing such a creation or pretense. 2. A lie. 3. a. A literary work whose content is produced by the imagination and is not necessarily based on fact. b. The category of literature comprising works of this kind, including novels and short stories. 4. Law. Something untrue that is intentionally represented as true by the narrator. [Middle English ficcioun, from Old French fiction, from Latin fictiō, fictiōn-, from fic-tus, past participle of ingere, to form. See dheigh- in Appendix.] —fic'tion-al adj. —fic'tion-al'i-ty (-shə-nəl'ī-tē) n. —fic'tion-al-ly adv.

WORD HISTORY: “The latest fiction” to most people means the latest novels or stories rather than the most recently invented pretense or latest lie. All three senses of the word fiction point back to its source, Latin fictiō, “the action of shaping, a feigning, that which is feigned.” Fictiō in turn was derived from ingere, “to make by shaping, feign, make up or invent a story or excuse.” Our first instance of fiction, recorded in a work composed around 1412, was used in the sense “invention of the mind, that which is imaginatively invented.” It is not a far step from this meaning to the sense “imaginative literature,” first recorded in 1599.

fic-tion-al-ize (fɪk'shə-nə-līz') v. tr. fic-tion-al-ized, fic-tion-al-iz-ing, fic-tion-al-iz-es. To treat as or make into fiction: “has fictionalized his people and their town, but we know they are real” (Harper’s). —fic'tion-al-i-za'tion (-shə-nə-lī-zā'shən) n.

fic-tion-er (fɪk'shə-nîr') n. One who writes fiction, especially a prolific creator of commercial or pulp fiction. —fic'tion-er'ing n.

fic-tion-ist (fɪk'shə-nīst) n. A writer of fiction, especially a novelist.

fic-tion-ize (fɪk'shə-nīz') v. tr. fic-tion-ized, fic-tion-iz-ing, fic-tion-iz-es. To fictionalize. —fic'tion-i-za'tion (-shə-nī-zā'shən) n.

fic-ti-tious (fɪk-tīsh'əs) adj. Abbr. fict. 1. Of, relating to, or characterized by fiction; imaginary. 2. a. Accepted or assumed for the sake of convention: a fictitious belief. b. Adopted or assumed in order to deceive: a fictitious name. 3. Not genuinely believed or felt; sham: greeted me with a fictitious enthusiasm. [From Latin ficticius, from fictus, past participle of ingere, to form. See FICTION.] —fic-ti'tious-ly adv. —fic-ti'tious-ness n.

fic-tive (fɪk'tɪv) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or able to engage in imaginative invention. 2. Of, relating to, or being fiction; fictional. 3. Not genuine; sham. —fic'tive-ly adv. —fic'tive-ness n.

fi-cus (fī'kəs) n. pl. ficus or fi-cus-es. Any of numerous tropical trees, shrubs, or climbers of the genus Ficus, having pearlike multiple fruits. [Latin ficus, fig.]

fid (fɪd) n. 1. Nautical. A square bar used as a support for a topmast. 2. A large, tapering pin used to open the strands of a rope before splicing. [Origin unknown.]

fid. abbr. Fidelity.

-fid suff. Divided into parts or lobes: pinnatifid. [Latin -fidus, from findere, fid-, to split. See bheid- in Appendix.]

fid-dle (fɪd'l) n. 1. Music. a. A violin. b. A member of the violin family.

2. Nautical. A guardrail used on a table during rough weather to prevent things from slipping off. 3. Informal. Nonsensical, trifling matters: “There are things that are important/beyond all this fiddle” (Marianne Moore). 4. The act or an instance of cheating or swindling; fraud. — v. fid-dled, fid-dling, fid-dles. — v. intr. 1. Music. To play a violin. 2. a. To move one’s fingers or hands in a nervous fashion. b. To occupy oneself in an aimless or desultory way: liked to fiddle with all the knobs and dials. c. To meddle or tamper: a reporter who fiddled with the facts. 3. To commit a fraud, especially to steal from one’s employer. — v. tr. 1. Music. To play (a tune) on a violin. 2. To cheat or swindle. 3. To alter or falsify (accounts, for example) for dishonest gain. — phrasal verb. fiddle away. To waste or squander: fiddled away the morning with unnecessary tasks. [Middle English fidle, from Old English fithle.] — fid’ dler n.

fid-dle-de-dee (fɪd’l-dē-dē’) interj. Used to express mild annoyance or impatience. [From FIDDLE.]

fid-dle-fad-dle (fɪd’l-făd’l) n. Nonsense. — v. intr. fid-dle-fad-dled, fid-dle-fad-dling, fid-dle-fad-dles. To fritter away one’s time; dally. [Reduplication of FIDDLE.] — fid’ dle-fad’ dler n.

fid-dle-foot-ed (fɪd’l-fōot’id) adj. 1. Excitable or nervous: fiddle-footed ponies. 2. Inclined to roam or wander.

fid-dle-head (fɪd’l-hĕd’) n. 1. Nautical. A curved, scroll-like ornamentation at the top of a ship’s bow that resembles the neck of a violin. 2. Botany. The coiled young frond of any of various ferns, some of which are considered a delicacy when cooked. In this sense, also called crosier fiddler crab (fɪd’lär krăb) n. Any of various burrowing crabs of the genus Uca of coastal areas, the male of which has a greatly enlarged anterior claw.

fid-dle-sticks (fɪd’l-stɪks’) interj. Used to express mild annoyance or impatience. fid-dling (fɪd’lɪŋ) adj. Trivial; petty.

fi-de-ism (fē’dā-iz-əm, fī’dē-) n. Reliance on faith alone rather than scientific reasoning or philosophy in questions of religion. [Probably from French fidéisme, from Latin fidēs, faith. See FIDELITY.] — fi’ de-ist n. — fi’ de-is’ tic adj.

fi-del-i-ty (fī-dĕl’i-tē, fī-) n. pl. fi-del-i-ties. Abbr. fid. 1. Faithfulness to obligations, duties, or observances. 2. Exact correspondence with fact or with a given quality, condition, or event; accuracy. 3. The degree to which an electronic system accurately reproduces the sound or image of its input signal. [Middle English fidelite, from Old French, from Latin fidēlitās, from fidēlis, faithful, from fidēs, faith. See bheidh- in Appendix.]

SYNONYMS: fidelity, allegiance, fealty, loyalty. These nouns denote faithfulness, as to a person or a cause. Fidelity implies the unfailing fulfillment of one’s duties and obligations and strict adherence to vows or promises: fidelity to one’s spouse; fidelity to one’s word of honor. Allegiance is faithfulness, as to a government or state to which one is subject, considered as a duty: “I know no South, no North, no East, no West, to which I owe any allegiance.... The Union, Sir, is my country” (Henry Clay). Faalty, once applied to the obligation of a tenant or vassal to a feudal lord, now suggests faithfulness that one has pledged to uphold: swore fealty to the laws and Constitution of the United States. Loyalty implies a steadfast and devoted attachment that is not easily turned aside: loyalty to an oath; loyalty to one’s family; party loyalty; loyalty to an ideal.

fidg-et (fĭj’ĭt) v. fidg-et-ed, fidg-et-ing, fidg-ets. — v. intr. 1. To behave or move nervously or restlessly. 2. To play or fuss; fiddle: He fidgeted with his notes while lecturing. — v. tr. To cause to behave or move nervously or restlessly. — n. 1. Often fidgets. A condition of restlessness as manifested by nervous movements. Often used with the. 2. One that fidgets. [From obsolete and dialectal fidge, to move restlessly, perhaps from Middle English fiken, of Scandinavian origin.]

fidg-et-y (fĭj’ĭ-tē) adj. 1. Tending to fidget. 2. Creating unnecessary fuss.
—fidg’et-i-ness n.

fi-do (fĭ’dō) n. pl. fi-dos. A coin containing a minting error. [f(reaks), i(rregu-lars), d(effects), o(ddities).] fi-du-cial (fĭ-dōō’shəl, -dyōō’-, fĭ-) adj. 1. Based on or relating to faith or trust. 2. Relating to or characteristic of a legal trust; fiduciary. 3. Regarded or employed as a standard of reference, as in surveying. [Late Latin fīdūciālīs, from Latin fīdūcia, trust, from fīdere, to trust. See bheidh- in Appendix.] —fi-du-cial-ly adv.

fi-du-ci-ar-y (fĭ-dōō’shē-ēr’ē, -shə-rē, -dyōō’-, fĭ-) adj. 1. a. Of or relating to a holding of something in trust for another: a fiduciary heir; a fiduciary contract. b. Of, relating to, or being a trustee or trusteeship. c. Held in trust. 2. Of, relating to, or consisting of fiat money. 3. Of, relating to, or being a system of marking in the field of view of an optical instrument that is used as a reference point or measuring scale. — n. pl. fi-du-ci-ar-ies. One, such as an agent of a principal or a company director, that stands in a special relation of trust, confidence, or responsibility in certain obligations to others. [Latin fīdūciārius, from fīdūcia, trust. See FIDUCIAL.]

fi (fĭ) interj. Used to express distaste or disapproval.

Fied-ler (fēd’lər), Arthur. 1894-1979. American conductor who as director of the Boston Pops Orchestra (1930-1979) blended works of classical and popular music in his concerts.

fief (fēf) n. 1. See fee (n., sense 5a). 2. A fiefdom. [French, from Old French feu, fief, probably from Vulgar Latin feudum*. See FEUD².]

fief·dom (fēf' dəm) n. 1. The estate or domain of a feudal lord. 2. Something over which one dominant person or group exercises control: “long the independent head of a powerful fiefdom within the Police Department” (David Burnham).

field (fēld) n. Abbr. fld. 1. a. A broad, level, open expanse of land. b. A meadow: a field of buttercups. c. A cultivated expanse of land, especially one devoted to a particular crop: a field of corn. d. A portion of land or a geologic formation containing a specified natural resource. e. A wide, unbroken expanse, as of ice. 2. a. A battleground. b. A battle. c. The scene or an area of military operations or maneuvers. d. A military area away from headquarters. 3. a. A background area, as on a flag, painting, or coin: a blue insignia on a field of red. b. Heraldry. The background of a shield or one of the divisions of the background. 4. Sports. a. An area in which an athletic event takes place. b. The portion of a playing field having specific dimensions on which the action of a game takes place. c. All the contestants or participants in an event, especially all the contestants except the favorite or the winner in a contest of more than two. d. The members of a team engaged in active play. e. The body of riders following a pack of hounds in hunting. 5. a. An area of human activity or interest: several fields of endeavor. b. A topic, a subject, or an area of academic interest or specialization. c. Profession, employment, or business. d. An area or a setting of practical activity or application outside an office, a school, a factory, or a laboratory: biologists working in the field; a product tested in the field. e. An area or a region where business activities are conducted: sales representatives in the field. 6. Mathematics. A set of elements having two operations, designated addition and multiplication, satisfying the conditions that multiplication is distributive over addition and that both operations are associative and commutative for all elements of the set, with the exception of the additive identity element, which is not commutative in respect to multiplication. 7. Physics. A region of space characterized by a physical property, such as gravitational or electromagnetic force or fluid pressure, having a determinable value at every point in the region. 8. The usually circular area in which the image is rendered by the lens system of an optical instrument. Also called field of view 9. Computer Science. a. A defined area of a storage medium, such as a set of bit locations or a set of adjacent columns on a punch card, used to record a type of information consistently. b. An element of a database record in which one piece of information is stored. — adj.

1. Growing, cultivated, or living in fields or open land. 2. Made, used, or carried on in the field: field operations. 3. Working, operating, or active in the field: field representatives of a firm. — v. field·ed, field·ing, fields. — v. tr.

1. Sports. a. To retrieve (a ball) and perform the required maneuver, especially in baseball. b. To place in the field to play: field a team. 2. To give an unrehearsed response to: fielded tough questions from the press. 3. a. To place in competition. b. To put into action: field an army of campaign workers. — v. intr. Sports. To play as a fielder. —idiom. take the field. To begin or resume activity, as in military operations or in a sport. [Middle English, from Old English feld. See pelə-² in Appendix.]

SYNONYMS: field, bailiwick, domain, province, realm, sphere, territory. The central meaning shared by these nouns is “an area of activity, thought, study, or interest”: the field of comparative literature; considers psychology her bailiwick; the domain of physics; the province of politics; the realm of constitutional law; the nation’s sphere of influence; the territory of historical research.

Field (fēld), Cyrus West. 1819-1892. American merchant and financier who planned and oversaw the laying of the transatlantic telegraph cable (completed 1866).

Field (fēld), David Dudley. 1805-1894. American jurist known for his efforts to codify New York State law and regularize court procedures.

Field (fēld), Eugene. 1850-1895. American writer best known for his children’s verse, especially the lullabies “Wynken, Blynken, and Nod” and “Little Boy Blue.”

Field (fēld), Marshall. 1834-1906. American merchant who organized Marshall Field and Company, the largest wholesale and retail dry goods establishment of the late 1800’s.

Field (fēld), Stephen Johnson. 1816-1899. American jurist who served as an associate justice of the U.S. Supreme Court (1863-1897).

field artillery (fēld är-tīl’ə-rē) n. Artillery other than anti-aircraft artillery that is light enough to be mounted for use in the field.

field capacity (fēld kə-päs’i-tē) n. The maximum amount of water that a particular soil can hold.

field coil (fēld kōil) n. An electric coil around a field magnet used to generate a magnetic field, as in an electric motor or generator. Also called field winding field corn (fēld kôrn) n. Any of several varieties of corn used primarily as feed for livestock.

field day (fēld dā) n. 1. a. Sports. A day set aside for sports or athletic competition. b. An outdoor meeting, social event, or festivity. c. A day for military exercises, maneuvers, or display. 2. Informal. A time of great pleasure, activity, or opportunity: The media had a field day with the sensational story.

field-effect transistor (fēld’i-fēkt’ trăn-zīs’tər) n. Abbr. FET A transistor in which the output current is controlled by a variable electric field.

field emission (fēld ĭ-mīsh’ən) n. The emission of electrons from the surface of a conductor, caused by a strong electric field.

field-er (fēl’dər) n. Sports. One who plays a position in the field, especially an outfielder in baseball.

- field-er's choice (fēl'dərz chois) n. Baseball. A play made on a ground ball in which the fielder chooses to put out an advancing base runner, thus allowing the batter to reach first base safely.
- field event (fēld ǐ-věnt') n. Sports. A throwing or jumping event of a track-and-field meet.
- field-fare (fēld'fâr') n. An Old World thrush (Turdus pilaris) having gray and reddish-brown plumage. [Middle English feldfare, from Old English feldeware, error for feldefare* : felde, field; see FIELD + *-fare, goer (from faran, to go); see per-2 in Appendix.]
- field glass (fēld glās) n. A portable binocular telescope without prisms used especially outdoors for viewing distant objects. Often used in the plural.
- field goal (fēld gōl) n. Abbr. FG 1. Football. A score worth three points made on an ordinary down by place-kicking or drop-kicking the ball over the crossbar and between the goal posts. 2. Basketball. A score made by throwing the ball through the basket in regulation play, worth two points or, if attempted from beyond a specified distance, three points.
- field-grade officer (fēld'grād' ô'fī-sər) n. Abbr. FO, F.O. A military officer, such as a major, lieutenant colonel, or colonel, ranking above a captain and below a brigadier general. Also called field officer
- field hand (fēld hānd) n. An outdoor worker on a farm.
- field hockey (fēld hōk'ē) n. Sports. A game played on turf in which two opposing teams of players, using curved sticks, try to drive a ball into the opponents' goal.
- field hospital (fēld hōs'pī-tl) n. A hospital established on a temporary basis to serve troops in a combat zone.
- field house (fēld hous) n. Sports. 1. A building having locker rooms and storage and training facilities, located at an athletic field. 2. A building having one or more areas for different athletic events and usually grandstands for spectators.
- Field-ing (fēl'dĩng), Henry. 1707-1754. British writer whose works include the novels Joseph Andrews (1742) and Tom Jones (1749). He also wrote comedies for the stage and edited a number of periodicals.
- field-i-on microscope (fēld'ī'ən mī'krə-skōp', -ī'ŏn) n. A microscope that produces an image of the atoms on a metal surface by means of ions formed in a high-voltage electric field.
- field lens (fēld lěnz) n. The lens positioned farthest from the eye in a compound eyepiece.
- field magnet (fēld mǎg'nīt) n. A magnet used to produce a magnetic field in an electrical device such as a generator or motor.
- field marshal (fēld mār'shəl) n. Abbr. FM, F.M. An officer in some European armies, usually ranking just below the commander in chief.

field mouse (fēld mous) n. Any of various small mice or voles, especially of the genus Microtus, inhabiting meadows and fields and often causing damage to crops. Also called meadow mouse field officer (fēld ô'fī-sər) n. See field-grade officer.

field of force (fēld ùv fôrs) n. pl. fields of force. A region of space throughout which the force produced by a single agent, such as an electric current, is operative. Also called force field field of honor (fēld ùv òn'ər) n. pl. fields of honor. 1. The scene of a duel. 2. A battlefield.

field of view (fēld ùv vyōō) n. pl. fields of view. See field (n., sense 8).

field of vision (fēld ùv vīzh'ən) n. pl. fields of vision. See visual field.

Fields (fēldz), W.C. 1880-1946. American entertainer known for his raspy voice, bulbous nose, and sardonic disposition. His films include My Little Chickadee (1940) and Never Give a Sucker an Even Break (1941).

fields·man (fēldz'mən) n. Sports. A fielder in cricket.

field·stone (fēld'stōn') n. A stone occurring naturally in fields, often used as a building material. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: field-stone walls; a fieldstone fireplace.

field·strip (fēld'strīp') v. tr. field-stripped, field-strip-ping, field-strips.

1. To disassemble (a weapon) for cleaning, repair, or inspection. 2. To leave no trace of (a cigarette butt) by rolling up the paper and scattering the tobacco.

field·test (fēld'tĕst') v. tr. field-test-ed, field-test-ing, field-tests. To test (a technique or product, for example) under conditions of actual operation or use.

field theory (fēld thē'ə-rē) n. Physics. An explicit mathematical description of physical phenomena that takes into account the effects of one or more fields.

field trial (fēld trī'əl) n. 1. A test for young, untried hunting dogs to determine their competence in pointing and retrieving. Often used in the plural. 2. A trial of a new product in actual situations of use.

field trip (fēld trīp) n. A group excursion for the purpose of firsthand observation, as to a museum, the woods, or a historic place.

field wind·ing (fēld wīn'dīng) n. See field coil.

field·work (fēld'wûrk') n. 1. A temporary military fortification erected in the field. 2. Work done or firsthand observations made in the field as opposed to that done or observed in a controlled environment. 3. The collecting of sociological or anthropological data in the field. —field/work'er n.

fiend (fēnd) n. 1. a. An evil spirit; a demon. b. The Devil; Satan. c. A diabolically evil or wicked person. 2. Informal. One who is addicted to something: a dope fiend. 3. Informal. One who is completely absorbed in or obsessed with a given job or pastime: a crossword-puzzle fiend. 4. Informal. One who is particularly adept at something: a fiend with computers. [Middle English, from Old English fēond. See pē(i)- in Appendix.]

fiend-ish (fēn'dīsh) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or suggestive of a fiend; diabolical. 2. Extremely wicked or cruel. 3. Extremely bad, disagreeable, or difficult: a fiendish blizzard; a fiendish problem. —fiend'ish-ly adv. —fiend'ish-ness n.

fierce (fīrs) adj. fierc-er, fierc-est. 1. Having a savage and violent nature; ferocious. See Synonyms at cruel. 2. Extremely severe or violent; terrible: “the fierce thunders roar me their music” (Ezra Pound). 3. Extremely intense or ardent: fierce loyalty. See Synonyms at intense. 4. Strenuously active or resolute: a fierce attempt to escape. 5. Informal. Very difficult or unpleasant: a fierce exam.

6. Savage or threatening in appearance. [Middle English fiers, from Old French, from Latin ferus. See ghwer- in Appendix.] —fierce'ly adv. —fierce'ness n.

fi-er-i fa-ci-as (fī'ə-rē fā'shē-əs, fā'shəs) n. Law. A writ of execution authorizing a sheriff to lay a claim to and seize the goods and chattels of a debtor to fulfill a judgment against the debtor. [Middle English, from Medieval Latin : Latin fieri, to be done + Latin facias, second person sing. present subjunctive of facere, to do, cause (words used in the writ).]

fier-y (fīr'ē, fī'ə-rē) adj. fier-i-er, fier-i-est. 1. a. Consisting of or containing fire. b. Burning or glowing. c. Using or effected with fire. d. Easily ignited; flammable. 2. Having the color of fire; brightly red: fiery hair; a fiery sunset. 3. a. Torridly hot. b. Feverishly hot and flushed: fiery cheeks. c. Being in an inflamed, usually painful condition: a fiery boil. 4. a. Easily excited or emotionally volatile; tempestuous: a fiery temper. b. Charged with emotion; spirited: a fiery denunciation. [Middle English, from fier, fire. See FIRE.] —fier'i-ly adv. —fier'i-ness n. —fier'y adv.

Fie-so-le (fē-ā'zə-lē, fyě'zô-lě) A town of central Italy. It is primarily a tourist center, with villas and gardens on a hill overlooking the Arno River and the city of Florence. Population, 14,774.

Fie-so-le (fyě'zô-lā, -zô-lě), Giovanni Angelica da. See Fra. Angelico.

fi-es-ta (fē-ěs'tə) n. A festival or religious holiday, especially a saint's day celebrated in Spanish-speaking countries. [Spanish, from Vulgar Latin fēsta*. See FEAST.]

fife (fīf) n. Music. A small, high-pitched, transverse flute used primarily to accompany drums in a military or marching band. [Probably German Pfeife, from Middle High German pfīfe, from Old High German pfīffa, from Vulgar Latin pīpa*, from Latin pīpāre, to chirp.] —fif'er n.

Fife (fīf) A region of eastern Scotland between the Firths of Forth and Tay. It was once a Pict kingdom.

fife rail (fīf rāl) n. Nautical. A rail around the lower part of a ship's mast to which the belaying pins for the rigging are secured. [Possibly from its use by the ship's fifer.]

FIFO (fī'fō) n. Accounting. See first-in, first-out.

fif·teen (fĭf-tēn') n. 1. The cardinal number equal to 14 + 1. 2. The 15th in a set or sequence. [Middle English fiftene, from Old English fīftēne. See penk^we in Appendix.] —fif·teen' adj. & pron.

fif·teenth (fĭf-tēnth') n. 1. The ordinal number matching the number 15 in a series. 2. One of 15 equal parts. —fif·teenth' adv. & adj.

fifth (fĭth) n. 1. The ordinal number matching the number five in a series. 2. One of five equal parts. 3. One fifth of a gallon or four fifths of a quart of liquor. 4. Music. a. An interval encompassing five diatonic tones, such as C, D, E, F, and G. b. The harmonic combination of the two tones constituting the extremities of such an interval. c. The dominant in a given key or tonality. 5. Fifth. The Fifth Amendment. Used with the. [Middle English, from Old English fīfta. See penk^we in Appendix.] —fifth adv., adj. —fifth/ly adv.

Fifth Amendment (fĭth ə-měnd'mənt) n. An amendment to the Constitution of the United States, ratified in 1791, that deals with the rights of accused criminals by providing for due process of law, forbidding double jeopardy, and stating that no person may be forced to testify as a witness against himself or herself.

fifth column (fĭth kōl'əm) n. A clandestine subversive organization working within a country to further an invading enemy's military and political aims. [First applied in 1936 to rebel sympathizers inside Madrid when four columns of rebel troops were attacking that city.] —fifth col'um·nism (kōl'əm-nĭz'əm) n. —fifth columnist n.

fifth estate (fĭth ĭ-stāt') n. A class or group in society other than the nobility, the clergy, the middle class, and the press.

fifth wheel (fĭth hwēl) n. 1. a. A wheel or portion of a wheel placed horizontally over the forward axle of a carriage to provide support and stability during turns. b. A similar device over the rear axle or axles of a tractor or pickup truck, serving as a coupling for a semitrailer. 2. An additional wheel carried on a four-wheeled vehicle as a spare. 3. An extra and unnecessary person or thing.

fif·ti·eth (fĭf'tē-ĭth) n. 1. The ordinal number matching the number 50 in a series. 2. One of 50 equal parts. —fif'ti·eth adv. & adj.

fif·ty (fĭf'tē) n. 1. The cardinal number equal to 5×10 . 2. fifties. a. Often Fifties. The decade from 50 to 59 in a century. b. A decade or the numbers from 50 to 59: They began playing golf in their fifties. With the sunshine, the temperature reached the fifties. [Middle English fifti, from Old English fīftig. See penk^we in Appendix.] —fif'ty adj. & pron.

fif·ty·fif·ty (fĭf'tē-fĭf'tē) adj. 1. Divided or shared in two equal portions: a fifty-fifty split. 2. Being equally likely and unlikely or favorable and unfavorable: had a fifty-fifty chance of surviving. —fif'ty·fif'ty adv.

fig¹ (fĭg) n. 1. a. Any of several trees or shrubs of the genus Ficus, especially F. carica, native to the Mediterranean region and widely cultivated for its edible multiple fruit. b. The sweet, hollow, pear-shaped, multiple fruit of this plant, having numerous tiny seedlike fruits. 2. a. Any of several plants bearing similar fruit. b. The fruit of such a plant. 3. A trivial or contemptible amount: not worth a fig; didn't care a fig. [Middle English, from Old French figue, from Old Provençal figa, from Vulgar Latin fīca*, from Latin fīcus.]

fig² (fĭg) n. 1. Dress; array: in full fig. 2. Physical condition; shape: in fine fig. [Perhaps from fig, to trot out a horse in lively condition, dress up, variant of feague, to make a horse lively, probably from Dutch vegen, to brush, from Middle Dutch vēghen.]

fig. abbr. 1. Figurative. 2. Figure.

fight (fīt) v. fought (fôt), fight-ing, fight-s. — v. intr. 1. a. To attempt to harm or gain power over an adversary by blows or with weapons. b. Sports. To engage in boxing or wrestling. 2. To engage in a quarrel; argue: They are always fighting about money. 3. To strive vigorously and resolutely: fought against graft; fighting for her rights. — v. tr. 1. a. To contend with physically or in battle.

b. To wage or carry on (a battle). c. To contend for, by or as if by combat: “I now resolved that Calais should be fought to the death” (Winston S. Churchill).

2. a. Sports. To box or wrestle against in a ring. b. To participate in (a boxing match, for example). 3. To set (a boxer, for example) in combat with another.

See Synonyms at oppose. 4. To contend with or struggle against: fight cancer; fight temptation. 5. To try to prevent the development or success of. 6. To gain by struggle or striving: fought my way to the top. — n. 1. A confrontation between opposing groups in which each attempts to harm or gain power over the other, as with bodily force or weapons. 2. A quarrel or conflict. 3. a. A physical conflict between two or more individuals. b. Sports. A boxing or wrestling match. 4. A struggle to achieve an objective. See Synonyms at conflict. 5. The power or inclination to fight; pugnacity: I just didn't have any fight left in me.

—phrasal verb. fight off. To defend against or drive back (a hostile force, for example). —idioms. fight fire with fire. To combat one evil or one set of negative circumstances by reacting in kind. fight shy of. To avoid meeting or confronting. [Middle English fighten, from Old English feohtan, fihtan.]

—fight'a·bil'i·ty n. —fight'a·ble adj. —fight'ing·ly adv.

fight·er (fī'tər) n. 1. One that fights, as: a. A soldier; a warrior. b. Sports. A boxer; a pugilist. c. A fast, maneuverable combat aircraft used to engage enemy aircraft. 2. A pugnacious, unyielding, or determined person.

fight·er·bomb·er (fī'tər-bŏm'ər) n. A versatile aircraft capable of functioning as a fighter and a bomber chiefly in tactical and defensive operations.

fight·ing chair (fī'ŭŋg châr) n. A chair, often padded and equipped with a harness, used on a boat by a saltwater angler for support while landing a large fish.

fighting chance (fī'ŭŋg chăns) n. A chance to win but only with a struggle: had a fighting chance to recover.

fight-or-flight reaction (fīt'ôr-flīt' rē-ăk'shən) n. A set of physiological changes, such as increases in heart rate, arterial blood pressure, and blood glucose, initiated by the sympathetic nervous system to mobilize body systems in response to stress.

fig leaf (fĭg lēf) n. 1. A stylized representation of the leaf of a fig, used especially to conceal the genitalia depicted on statues of men and boys. 2. Something that serves as a usually insufficient concealment or camouflage: "Many fallen executives are still allowed the fig leaf of 'resignation'" (David Pauly).

fig marigold (fĭg măr'ĭ-göld') n. Any of various plants of the genus Mesembryanthemum, native to southern Africa and having thick, fleshy leaves and variously colored flowers. Also called icicle plant, pebble plant.

fig·ment (fĭg'mənt) n. Something invented, made up, or fabricated: just a figment of the imagination. [Middle English, from Latin figmentum, from figere, to form. See dheigh- in Appendix.]

fig·ur·al (fĭg'yər-əl) adj. Of, relating to, consisting of, or forming a pictorial composition or design of human or animal figures.

fig·u·rant (fĭg'yə-rănt', -rănt', -răN') n. 1. A member of a corps de ballet who does not perform solos. 2. A stage performer having no speaking part. [French, from present participle of figurer, to represent, from Old French, from Latin figūrāre, to form, from figūra, figure. See FIGURE.] fig·u·ra·tion (fĭg'yə-rā'shən) n. 1. The act of forming something into a particular shape. 2. A shape, a form, or an outline. 3. The act of representing with figures. 4. A figurative representation. 5. Music. Ornamentation of a passage by the use of embellishing and often repeating figures.

fig·u·ra·tive (fĭg'yər-ə-tĭv) adj. Abbr. fig. 1. a. Based on or making use of figures of speech; metaphorical: figurative language. b. Containing many figures of speech; ornate. 2. Represented by a figure or resemblance; symbolic or emblematic. 3. Of or relating to artistic representation by means of animal or human figures. —fig'u-ra-tive-ly adv. —fig'u-ra-tive-ness n.

figure (fĭg'yər) n. Abbr. fig. 1. a. A written or printed symbol representing something other than a letter, especially a number. b. figures. Mathematical calculations: good at figures. c. An amount represented in numbers: sold for a large figure. 2. a. Mathematics. A geometric form consisting of any combination of points, lines, or planes: A triangle is a plane figure. b. The outline, form, or silhouette of a thing. c. The shape or form of a human body. d. An indistinct object or shape: saw figures dashing down the street. 3. a. A person, especially a well-known one: a famous historical figure. b. A person's public image or presence: became a tragic figure overnight. 4. Impression or appearance made: cuts a dashing figure. 5. A person, an animal, or an object that symbolizes something. 6. A pictorial or sculptural representation, especially of the human body. 7. a. A diagram. b. A design or pattern, as in a textile: silk with a paisley figure. 8. An illustration printed from an engraved plate or block. 9. a. A configuration or distinct group of steps in a dance. b. A pattern traced by a series of movements, as in ice skating. 10. Music. A brief melodic or harmonic unit often constituting the base for a larger phrase or structure. 11. Logic. Any one of the forms that a syllogism can take, depending on the position of the middle term. — v.

fig-ured, fig-ur-ing, fig-ures. — v. tr. 1. Mathematics. To calculate with numbers. 2. To make a likeness of; depict. 3. To adorn with a design or figures. 4. Music. To indicate the chordal structure of (a bass line of single notes) with a sequence of conventionalized numbers. 5. Informal. a. To conclude, believe, or predict: I never figured that this would happen. b. To consider or regard: figured them as con artists. — v. intr. 1. Mathematics. To calculate; compute. 2. a. To be or seem important or prominent. b. To be pertinent or involved: politicians who figured in the scandal. 3. Informal. To seem reasonable or expected: It figures. — phrasal verbs. figure in. To include, as in making an account: figured in travel expenses. figure on. Informal. 2. To depend on: We figured on your support. 3. To take into consideration; expect: I figured on an hour's delay. 4. To plan: We figure on leaving at noon. figure out. Informal. 5. To discover or decide: Let's figure out a way to help. 6. To solve or decipher: Can you figure out this puzzle? [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin figūra. See dheigh- in Appendix.] — fig'ur-er n.

SYNONYMS: figure, design, device, motif, pattern. The central meaning shared by these nouns is “an element or a component in a decorative composition”: a tapestry with a floral figure; a rug with a geometric design; a brooch with a fanciful and intricate device; a scarf with a heart motif; fabric with a plaid pattern. See also Synonyms at calculate form fig-ured (fĭg'yərd) adj. 1. Shaped or fashioned in a particular way. 2. Decorated with a design; patterned: “My dress is richly figured” (Amy Lowell). 3. Represented, as in graphic art or sculpture; depicted.

figured bass (fĭg'yərd bās) n. Music. See continuo.

figure eight (fĭg'yər āt) n. A form or representation, such as a knot or an ice-skating maneuver, that has the shape of the numeral 8.

figure-head (fĭg'yər-hĕd') n. 1. A person given a position of nominal leadership but having no actual authority. 2. Nautical. A carved figure on the prow of a ship.

figure of speech (fĭg'yər ũv spĕch) n. pl. figures of speech. An expression such as a metaphor or simile or a device such as personification or hyperbole in which words are used in a nonliteral way to achieve an effect beyond the range of ordinary language.

figure skat-ing (fĭg'yər skā'tĭng) n. Sports. Ice skating in which the skater traces prescribed, usually elaborate figures. —figure skater n.

figures shift (fĭg'yərz shĭft) n. 1. A shift in a typewriter to uppercase.

2. Computer Science. A data control character after which characters are interpreted as having been typed in the uppercase mode.

fig-u-rine (fĭg'yə-rĕn') n. A small molded or sculptured figure; a statuette.

[French, from Italian figurina, diminutive of figura, figure, from Latin figūra. See FIGURE.]

fig wasp (fĭg wɔsp) n. A small wasp belonging to the family Agonidae, especially Blastophaga psenes, that breeds in caprifig and is active in the pollination of fig trees and shrubs.

fig-wort (fĭg'wŭrt', -wŏrt') n. Any of various plants of the genus Scrophularia having loose, branching clusters of small greenish or purple flowers. [FIG¹, piles (obsolete) + WORT¹ (from its use as a folk medicine).]

Fi-ji (fĕ'jĕ) An island country of the southwest Pacific Ocean comprising about 320 islands. The islands were discovered by the Dutch navigator Abel Tasman in 1643 and visited by Capt. James Cook in 1774. Annexed by Great Britain in 1874, they became independent in 1970. Suva, on the island of Viti Levu, is the capital. Population, 686,000.

Fi-ji-an (fĕ'jĕ-ən) n. 1. A native or inhabitant of Fiji. 2. The Austronesian language of Fiji. — adj. Of or relating to Fiji or its people, language, or culture.

fi-la (fĭ'lə) n. Plural of filum.

fil-a-ment (fĭl'ə-mənt) n. 1. A fine or thinly spun thread, fiber, or wire.

2. Botany. a. The stalk that bears the anther in a stamen. b. A chainlike series of cells, as in many algae. 3. a. A fine wire heated electrically to incandescence in an electric lamp. b. Electronics. A high-resistance wire or ribbon forming the cathode in some thermionic tubes. [New Latin filāmentum, from Late Latin fĭlāre, to spin, from Latin fĭlum, thread. See g^whĭ- in Appendix.] —fil'a-men/-tous (-mĕn'təs), fil'a-men/ta-ry (-mĕn'tə-rĕ, -mĕn'trĕ) adj.

fi-lar (fĭ'lər) adj. 1. Of or relating to a thread. 2. Having fine threads across the field of view for measuring small distances, as in the eyepiece of a telescope.

[From Latin fĭlum, thread. See g^whĭ- in Appendix.]

fil-a-ree (fĭl'ə-rĕ') n. See alfilaria. [Alteration of ALFILARIA.]

fi-lar-i-a (fə-lār'ĕ-ə) n. pl. fi-lar-i-ae (-ĕ-ĕ'). Any of various slender, threadlike nematode worms of the superfamily Filarioidea that are parasitic in vertebrates and are often transmitted as larvae by mosquitos and other biting insects. The adult form lives in the blood and lymphatic tissues, causing inflammation and obstruction that can lead to elephantiasis. [New Latin Filāria, former genus name, from Latin filum, thread. See g^whī- in Appendix.] —fi·lar'i·al (-ē-əl), fi·lar'i·an (-ē-ən) adj.

fil·a·ri·a·sis (fīl'ə-rī'ə-sīs) n. pl. fil·a·ri·a·ses (-sēz'). Disease caused by infestation of tissue with filariae. [FILAR(IA) + -IASIS.]

fil·a·ture (fīl'ə-choōr', -chər) n. 1. The act or process of spinning, drawing, or twisting into threads. 2. The act or process of reeling raw silk from cocoons.

3. A reel used in drawing silk from cocoons. 4. An establishment where silk is reeled. [French, from Late Latin filātus, past participle of filāre, to spin. See FILAMENT.]

fil·bert (fīl'bərt) n. 1. See hazel (n., sense 1). 2. See hazelnut. [Middle English, from Anglo-Norman philber, after Saint Philibert (died 684), whose feast day in late August coincides with the ripening of the nut.]

filch (fīlch) v. tr. filched, filch-ing, filch-es. To take (something, especially something of little value) in a furtive manner; snatch. See Synonyms at steal. [Middle English filchen.] —filch'er n.

Filch·ner Ice Shelf (fīlk'nər īs shēlf) An area of Antarctica bordering on Coats Land at the head of Weddell Sea. It was discovered in 1912.

file¹ (fīl) n. 1. A container, such as a cabinet or folder, for keeping papers in order. 2. a. A collection of papers or published materials kept or arranged in convenient order. b. Computer Science. A collection of related data or program records. 3. a. A line of persons, animals, or things positioned one behind the other. b. A line of troops or military vehicles so positioned. 4. Games. Any of the rows of squares that run vertically or between players on a playing board in chess or checkers. 5. Archaic. A list or roll. — v. filed, fil-ing, files. — v. tr. 1. To put or keep (papers, for example) in useful order for storage or reference. 2. To enter (a legal document) on public official record. 3. To send or submit (copy) to a newspaper. 4. To carry out the first stage of (a lawsuit, for example): filed charges against my associate. — v. intr. 1. To march or walk in a line. 2. To put items in a file. 3. To make application; apply: filed for a job with the state; file for a divorce. 4. To enter one's name in a political contest: filed for Congress.

—idiom. on file. In or as if in a file for easy reference: We will keep your résumé on file. [From Middle English filen, to put documents on file, from Old French filer, to spin thread, to put documents on a thread, from Late Latin filāre, to spin, draw out in a long line, from Latin filum, thread. See g^whī- in Appendix.]

file² (fīl) n. 1. Any of several hardened steel tools with cutting ridges for forming, smoothing, or reducing especially metallic surfaces. 2. A nail file. 3. Chiefly British. A crafty or artful person. — v. tr. filed, fil-ing, files. To smooth, reduce, or remove with or as if with a file. [Middle English, from Old English fīl. See peig- in Appendix.]

file³ (fīl) v. tr. filed, fil-ing, files. Archaic. To make sullied or corrupt; defile.

[Middle English filien, from Old English fȳlan. See pŭ- in Appendix.]

fi-lé (fē'lā, fī-lā') n. Powdered sassafras leaves used to thicken and season soups, stews, and gumbos. [Louisiana French, from French, past participle of filer, to spin thread (from its effect when added to hot liquids), from Old French. See FILE¹.]

file clerk (fīl klûrk) n. One who is employed to maintain the files and records of an office.

file-fish (fīl'fīsh') n. pl. filefish or file-fish-es. Any of various chiefly tropical marine fishes of the family Balistidae, related to and resembling the triggerfishes, with a flat body and rough, spiny scales.

Fi-lene (fī-lēn', fī-), Edward Albert. 1860-1937. American merchant who built William Filene and Sons, a successful dry goods store, and promoted the American credit union movement.

fi-let¹ (fī-lā', fīl'ā') n. A net or lace with a simple pattern of squares. [French, from Old French, diminutive of fil, thread, from Latin fīlum. See FILE¹.]

fi-let² (fī-lā', fīl'ā') n. Variant of fillet (n., sense 2). — v. Variant of fillet (v. tr., sense 2).

fi-let mi-gnon (fī-lā' mēn-yōn', fīl'ā) n. pl. fi-lets mi-gnons (fī-lā' mēn-yōn', fīl'ā). A small, round, very choice cut of beef from the loin. [French : filet, fillet + mignon, dainty.]

fil-i-al (fīl'ē-əl) adj. 1. Of, relating to, or befitting a son or daughter: filial respect. 2. Having or assuming the relationship of child or offspring to parent. 3. Genetics. Of or relating to a generation or the sequence of generations following the parental generation. [Middle English, from Old French, from Late Latin fīliālis, from Latin fīlius, son. See dhē(i)- in Appendix.] — fil'i-al-ly adv.

fil-i-ate (fīl'ē-āt') v. tr. fil-i-at-ed, fil-i-at-ing, fil-i-ates. Law. To determine judicially the paternity of (a child born out of wedlock, for example). [Medieval Latin fīliāre, fīliāt-, to acknowledge as a son, from Latin fīlius, son. See dhē(i)- in Appendix.]

fil-i-a-tion (fīl'ē-ā'shən) n. 1. a. The condition or fact of being the child of a certain parent. b. Law. Judicial determination of paternity. 2. A line of descent; derivation. 3. a. The act or fact of forming a new branch, as of a society or language group. b. The branch thus formed.

fil-i-bus-ter (fīl'ə-bŭs'tər) n. 1. a. The use of obstructionist tactics, especially prolonged speechmaking, for the purpose of delaying legislative action. b. An instance of the use of this delaying tactic. 2. An adventurer who engages in a private military action in a foreign country. — v. fil-i-bus-tered, fil-i-bus-ter-ing, fil-i-bus-ters. — v. intr. 1. To use obstructionist tactics in a legislative body. 2. To take part in a private military action in a foreign country. — v. tr. To use obstructionist tactics against (a legislative measure, for example).

[Spanish filibustero, freebooter, from French filibustier, from Dutch vrijbuitter, pirate. See FREEBOOTER.] —fil'i-bus'ter-er n.

fil-i-form (fĭl'ə-fôrm', fĭl'ə-) adj. Having the form of or resembling a thread or filament. [Latin filum, thread; see g^{wh}hī- in Appendix + -FORM.]

fil-i-gree (fĭl'ī-grē') n. 1. Delicate and intricate ornamental work made from gold, silver, or other fine twisted wire. 2. a. An intricate, delicate, or fanciful ornamentation. b. A design resembling such ornamentation: filigrees of frosting on a cake. — v. tr. fil-i-greed, fil-i-gree-ing, fil-i-grees. To decorate with or as if with filigree. [Alteration of French filigrane, from Italian filigrana: Latin filum, thread; see g^{wh}hī- in Appendix + Latin grānum, grain; see grə-no- in Appendix.]

fil-ing (fĭl'ĭng) n. 1. The act or an instance of using a file. 2. A particle or shaving removed by a file: metal filings.

fil-i-o-pi-e-tis-tic (fĭl'ē-ō-pī'ĭ-tĭs'tĭk) adj. Of or relating to an often immoderate reverence for forebears or tradition. [Latin filius, son; see FILLIAL + PIETISTIC.]

Fil-i-pi-no (fĭl'ə-pē'nō) n. pl. Fil-i-pi-nos. 1. A native or inhabitant of the Philippines. 2. Used as the name for the Austronesian language that is based on Tagalog, draws its lexicon from other Philippine languages, and is the official language of the Philippines. — adj. Of or relating to the Philippines or its peoples, languages, or cultures. [Spanish, from (Islas Filipinas, Philippine (Islands).)] fill (fĭl) v. filled, fill-ing, fills. — v. tr. 1. a. To put into as much as can be held: fill a glass with milk. b. To supply to the fullest extent: fill a concert hall. c. To build up the level of (low-lying land) with material such as earth or gravel. d. To stop or plug up (an opening, for example). e. To repair a cavity of (a tooth). f. To add a foreign substance to (cloth or wood, for example). 2. a. To satiate, as with food and drink. b. To satisfy or meet; fulfill: fill the requirements. See Synonyms at satisfy. c. To complete (something) by insertion or addition: fill in the blanks. d. To supply with material, such as writing, an inscription, or an illustration: filled the blank spaces on the page with notes. 3. To supply as required: fill a prescription; fill an order. 4. a. To place a person in: fill a job vacancy. b. To possess and discharge the duties of; hold: fill a post. 5. a. To occupy the whole of; pervade: Music filled the room. b. To spread throughout: Fear filled the city. c. To engage or occupy completely; make full: filled the child's mind with strange ideas; a story that filled our hearts with joy. 6. To cover the surface of (an inexpensive metal) with a layer of precious metal, such as gold. 7. Nautical. a. To cause (a sail) to swell. b. To adjust (a yard) so that wind will cause a sail to swell. — v. intr. To become full. — n. 1. An amount needed to make full, complete, or satisfied: eat one's fill. 2. Material for filling a container, cavity, or passage. 3. a. A built-up piece of land; an embankment. b. The material, such as earth or gravel, used for fill. —phrasal verbs. fill in. 1. Informal. To provide with information that is essential or newly acquired: I wasn't there—would you fill me in? 2. To act as a substitute; stand in: an understudy who filled in at the last minute. fill out. 3. To complete (a form, for example) by providing required information: carefully filled out the job application. 4. To become or make more fleshy: He filled out after age 35. —idioms. fill (someone's) shoes. To assume someone's position or duties. fill the bill. Informal. To serve a particular purpose. [Middle English fillen, from Old English fyllan. See pelə¹ in Appendix.]

filled gold (fild göld) n. A relatively inexpensive metal such as brass with a surface layer of bonded gold.

filled milk (fild mīlk) n. Skim milk with vegetable oils added to substitute for butterfat.

fill·er (fīl'ər) n. One that fills, as: a. Something added in order to augment weight or size or fill space. b. A composition, especially a semisolid that hardens on drying, used to fill pores, cracks, or holes in wood, plaster, or other construction surfaces before finishing. c. Tobacco used to form the body of a cigar. d. A short item used to fill space in a publication. e. Something, such as a news item, public-service message, or music, used to fill time in a radio or television presentation. f. A sheaf of loose papers used to fill a notebook or binder.

g. Architecture. An element, such as a plate, used to fill the space between two supporting members.

fil·lér (fīl'ār') n. pl. fillér or fil·lérs. A basic unit of currency in Hungary. See Table at currency. [Hungarian.]

fil·let (fīl'it) n. 1. A narrow strip of ribbon or similar material, often worn as a headband. 2. Also fi·let (fī-lā', fīl'ā'). a. A strip or compact piece of boneless meat or fish, especially the beef tenderloin. b. A boneless strip of meat rolled and tied, as for roasting. 3. Architecture. a. A thin, flat molding used as separation between or ornamentation for larger moldings. b. A ridge between the indentations of a fluted column. 4. A narrow decorative line impressed onto the cover of a book. 5. Heraldry. A narrow horizontal band placed in the lower fourth area of the chief. 6. Anatomy. A loop-shaped band of fibers, such as the lemniscus. — v. tr. fil·let·ed, fil·let·ing, fil·lets. 1. To bind or decorate with or as if with a fillet. 2. Also fi·let (fī-lā', fīl'ā'). To slice, bone, or make into fillets. [Middle English filet, from Old French, diminutive of fil, thread, from Latin fīlum. See g^whī- in Appendix.]

fill·in (fīl'in') n. Informal. 1. One that serves as a substitute for another. 2. A short, informative summary.

fill·ing (fīl'ing) n. 1. An act or instance of filling. 2. Something used to fill a space, cavity, or container: a gold filling in a tooth. 3. An edible mixture used to fill pastries, sandwiches, or cakes: a pie filling. 4. The horizontal threads that cross the warp in weaving; weft.

filling station (fīl'ing stā'shən) n. See service station (n., sense 1).

fil·lip (fĭl'əp) n. 1. A snap or light blow made by pressing a fingertip against the thumb and suddenly releasing it. 2. A slight goad or incentive; a small stimulus. — v. tr. fil·liped, fil·lip·ing, fil·lips. To strike, propel, arouse, or stimulate. [Imitative.]

Fill·more (fĭl'môr', -môr'), Millard. 1800-1874. The 13th President of the United States (1850-1853), who succeeded to office after the death of Zachary Taylor. He struggled to keep the nation unified but lost the support of his Whig Party by attempting to enforce the Fugitive Slave Act in the North.

fil·ly (fĭl'ē) n. pl. fil·lies. 1. A young female horse. 2. Informal. A lively, high-spirited girl. [Middle English filli, from Old Norse fylja. See pau- in Appendix.]

film (fĭlm) n. 1. A thin skin or membrane. 2. A thin, opaque, abnormal coating on the cornea of the eye. 3. A thin covering or coating: a film of dust on the piano. 4. A thin, flexible, transparent sheet, as of plastic, used in wrapping or packaging. 5. a. A thin sheet or strip of flexible material, such as a cellulose derivative or a thermoplastic resin, coated with a photosensitive emulsion and used to make photographic negatives or transparencies. b. A thin sheet or strip of developed photographic negatives or transparencies. 6. a. A movie. b. Movies considered as a group. 7. A coating of magnetic alloys on glass used in manufacturing computer storage devices. — v. filmed, film·ing, films. — v. tr. 1. To cover with or as if with a film. 2. To make a movie of or based on: film a rocket launch; film a scene from a ballet. — v. intr. 1. To become coated or obscured with or as if with a film: The window filmed over with moisture. 2. To make or shoot scenes for a movie. [Middle English, from Old English filmen. See pel-³ in Appendix.]

WORD HISTORY: One indication of the gulf between us and our Victorian predecessors is that the Oxford English Dictionary fascicle containing the word film, published in 1896, does not have the sense “a motion picture.” The one hint of the future to be found among still familiar older senses of the word, such as “a thin skin or membranous coating” or “an abnormal thin coating on the cornea,” is the sense of film used in photography, a sense referring to a coating of material, such as gelatin, that could substitute for a photographic plate or be used on a plate or on photographic paper. Thus a word that has been with us since Old English times took on this new use, first recorded in 1845, which has since developed and now refers to an art form, a sense first recorded in 1920.

film·card (fĭlm'kârd') n. A microfiche.

film·dom (fĭlm'dəm) n. 1. The movie industry. 2. The people employed in the movie industry. Also called moviedom film·go·er (fĭlm'gō'ər) n. One who frequently goes to see movies.

—film'go'ing adj.

film·ic (fĭl'mĭk) adj. Of, relating to, or characteristic of movies; cinematic.

—film/i·cal·ly adv.

film·mak·er (fĭlm'mā'kər) n. One who directs or produces movies.

film·mak·ing (fĭlm'mā'kĭng) n. The making of movies.

film·og·ra·phy (fĭl-mŏg'rə-fē) n. pl. film·og·ra·phies. 1. Writings about movies. 2. A list of movies, as of a given director or actor. —film·og/r·a·pher n.

film pack (fĭlm pāk) n. A pack of photographic sheet films that can be exposed in succession and withdrawn from the exposure position for storage at the rear of the pack.

film·set·ting (fĭlm'sēt'ĭng) n. Photocomposition.

film·strip (fĭlm'strĭp') n. A length of film containing photographs, diagrams, or other graphic matter prepared for still projection. Also called stripfilm film·y (fĭl'mē) adj. film·i·er, film·i·est. 1. Of, resembling, or consisting of film; gauzy: filmy lingerie. See Synonyms at airy. 2. Covered by or as if by a film; hazy. —film/i·ly adv. —film/i·ness n.

fil·o·plume (fĭl'ə-plŏm', fĭ'lə-) n. A hairlike feather having few or no barbs, usually located between contour feathers. [Latin filum, thread; see g^whī- in Appendix + PLUME.]

fi·lose (fĭ'lŏs') adj. 1. Threadlike. 2. Having or ending in a threadlike part or process. [Latin filum, thread; see g^whī- in Appendix + -OSE¹.]

fil¹ (fēs) n. Used to distinguish a son from his father when they have the same given name. [French, from Latin filius, son. See dhē(i)- in Appendix.]

fil² (fĭls) n. pl. fils. A unit of currency in Bahrain, Iraq, Jordan, Kuwait, United Arab Emirates, and Yemen. See Table at currency. [Arabic fals, fils, from Latin foliis, bellows, windbag, purse, piece of money. See bhel-² in Appendix.]

fil·ter (fĭl'tər) n. 1. a. A porous material through which a liquid or gas is passed in order to separate the fluid from suspended particulate matter. b. A device containing such a substance. 2. Any of various electric, electronic, acoustic, or optical devices used to reject signals, vibrations, or radiations of certain frequencies while passing others. — v. fil·tered, fil·ter·ing, fil·ters. — v. tr. 1. To pass (a liquid or gas) through a filter. 2. To remove by passing through a filter: filter out impurities. — v. intr. 1. To pass through or as if through a filter: Light filtered through the blinds. 2. To come or go gradually and in small groups: The audience filtered back into the hall. [Middle English filtre, from Old French, from Medieval Latin filtrum, of Germanic origin. See pel-⁵ in Appendix.] —fil'ter·er n. —fil'ter·less adj.

fil·ter·a·ble (fĭl'tər-ə-bəl, fĭl'trə-) also fil·tra·ble (-trə-bəl) adj. 1. That can be filtered or separated by filtering: filterable solutions of granular matter. 2. That can pass through a given pore size. —fil'ter·a·bil'i·ty n.

filterable virus (fĭl'tər-ə-bəl vī'rəs) n. A virus that is small enough to pass through a fine-pored filter, as of diatomite or porcelain. Also called ultravirus filter bed (fĭl'tər bĕd) n. A layer of sand or gravel on the bottom of a reservoir or tank, used to filter water or sewage.

filter feeder (fĭl'tər fē'dər) n. An aquatic animal, such as a clam, barnacle, or sponge, that feeds by filtering particulate organic material from water.

filter paper (fĭl'tər pā'pər) n. Porous paper suitable for use as a filter.

filth (fĭlth) n. 1. a. Foul or dirty matter. b. Disgusting garbage or refuse. 2. A dirty or corrupt condition; foulness. 3. Something, such as language or printed matter, considered obscene, prurient, or immoral. [Middle English, from Old English fylth. See pŭ- in Appendix.]

filth-y (fĭl'thē) adj. filth-i-er, filth-i-est. 1. Covered or smeared with filth; disgustingly dirty. See Synonyms at dirty. 2. Obscene; scatological. 3. Vile; nasty: a filthy traitor. — filth'i-ly adv. — filth'i-ness n.

fil-tra-ble (fĭl'trə-bəl) adj. Variant of filterable.

fil-trate (fĭl'trāt') v. tr. intr. fil-trat-ed, fil-trat-ing, fil-trates. To put or go through a filter. — n. Material, especially liquid, that has passed through a filter. [New Latin filtrāre, filtrāt-, to filter, from Medieval Latin filtrum, filter. See FILTER.]

fil-tra-tion (fĭl'trā'shən) n. The act or process of filtering.

fi-lum (fī'ləm) n. pl. fi-la (-lə). A threadlike anatomical structure; a filament. [Latin filum, thread. See g^whī- in Appendix.]

fim-bri-a (fĭm'brē-ə) n. pl. fim-bri-ae (-brē-ē'). A fringelike part or structure, as at the opening of the fallopian tubes. [Late Latin fimbria, fringe, feminine sing. of Latin fimbriae, threads, fringe.] — fim'bri-al adj.

fim-bri-ate (fĭm'brē-īt, -āt') also fim-bri-at-ed (-ā'tĭd) adj. Having fimbriae; fringed, as the edge of a petal or the opening of a duct. [Latin fimbriātus, from fimbriae, fringe.] — fim'bri-a'tion n.

fin¹ (fĭn) n. 1. A membranous appendage extending from the body of a fish or other aquatic animal, used for propelling, steering, or balancing the body in the water. 2. Something resembling a fin in shape or function, as: a. A fixed or movable airfoil used to stabilize an aircraft, a missile, or a projectile in flight. b. A projecting vane used for cooling, as on a radiator or an engine cylinder. c. See tail fin (n., sense 2). 3. See flipper (n., sense 2). — v. finned, fin-ning, fins. — v. tr. To equip with fins. — v. intr. 1. To emerge with the fins above water. 2. To swim, as a fish. 3. To lash the water with the fins. Used of a dying whale. [Middle English, from Old English finn.]

fin² (fĭn) n. Slang. A five-dollar bill. [Yiddish finf, five, from Old High German funf, finf. See penk^we in Appendix.]

fin. abbr. 1. Finance; financial. 2. Finish.

Fin. abbr. Finland; Finnish.

fi-na·gle (fə-nā'gəl) v. fi-na-gled, fi-na-gling, fi-na-gles. Informal. — v. tr.

1. To obtain or achieve by indirect, usually deceitful methods: finagle a day off from work. 2. To cheat; swindle: shady stockbrokers who finagle their clients out of fortunes. — v. intr. To use crafty, deceitful methods. [Probably from dialectal fainaigue, to cheat.] — fi-na'gler n.

fi-nal (fī'nəl) adj. 1. Forming or occurring at the end; last: the final scene of a film. 2. Of or constituting the end result of a succession or process; ultimate: an act with an immediate purpose and a final purpose. 3. Not to be changed or reconsidered; unalterable: The judge's decision is final. See Synonyms at last¹. — n. Something that comes at or forms the end, especially: a. The last or one of the last of a series of contests: the finals of a state spelling bee. b. The last examination of an academic course. [Middle English, from Old French, from Latin fīnālis, from fīnis, end.] — fi'nal-ly adv.

fi-nal·e (fə-nāl'ē, -nāl'lē) n. The concluding part, especially of a musical composition. [Italian, from Latin fīnālis, final. See FINAL.]

fi-nal·ist (fī'nə-līst) n. A contestant in the final session of a competition.

fi-nal·i·ty (fī-nāl'ī-tē, fə-) n. pl. fi-nal·i·ties. 1. The condition or fact of being final. 2. A final, conclusive, or decisive act or utterance.

fi-nal·ize (fī'nə-līz') v. tr. fi-nal·ized, fi-nal·iz·ing, fi-nal·iz·es. Usage Problem. To put into final form; complete or conclude: "They have jointly agreed... to drop all litigation when the merger is finalized" (Springfield MA Union-News). — fi'nal·i·za'tion (-nə-lī-zā'shən) n. — fi'nal·iz'er n.

USAGE NOTE: Finalize is frequently associated with the language of bureaucracy and so is objected to by many writers. The sentence We will finalize plans for a class reunion was unacceptable to 71 percent of the Usage Panel. Although finalize has no single exact synonym, a substitute can always be found from among complete, conclude, make final, and put into final form. See Usage Note at -ize.

Final Solution also final solution (fī'nəl sə-lōō'shən) n. The Nazi program of exterminating Jews during the German Third Reich: "The SS Jewish section kept the account books of the Final Solution" (Emanuel Litvinoff). [Translation of German Endlösung: end-, final + Lösung, solution.]

fi-nance (fə-nāns', fī-, fī'nāns') n. 1. Abbr. fin. The science of the management of money and other assets. 2. The management of money, banking, investments, and credit. 3. finances. Monetary resources; funds, especially those of a government or corporate body. 4. The supplying of funds or capital. — v. tr. fi-nanced, fi-nanc·ing, fi-nanc·es. 1. To provide or raise the funds or capital for: financed a new car. 2. To supply funds to: financing a daughter through law school. 3. To furnish credit to. [Middle English finaunce, settlement, money supply, from Old French finance, payment, from finer, to pay ransom, from fin, end, from Latin fīnis.] —fi·nance/'a·ble adj.

finance bill (fə-nāns/'bīl) n. A legislative act intended to raise public revenues.

finance company (fə-nāns/'kŭm/'pə-nē) n. A company that makes loans to clients.

fi·nan·cial (fə-nān/'shəl, fī-) adj. Abbr. fin. Of, relating to, or involving finance, finances, or financiers. —fi·nan/'cial·ly adv.

SYNONYMS: financial, pecuniary, fiscal, monetary. These adjectives mean of or relating to money (a financial adviser; pecuniary motives; a fiscal year; monetary considerations), but they often differ in application. Financial frequently refers to transactions involving money on a large scale: Many computer software corporations are experiencing financial reverses. Pecuniary is more appropriate to the private, small-scale dealings of individuals: He received thanks but no pecuniary compensation for his services. Fiscal applies especially to a nation's financial practices and policies: The Secretary of the Treasury is the chief fiscal officer of our government. Monetary has special reference to the coinage, printing, or circulation of currency: The basic monetary unit of the United States is the dollar.

fin·an·cier (fīn'ən-sīr', fə-nān'-, fī'nən-) n. One who is occupied with or expert in large-scale financial affairs. [French, from Old French, from finance, payment. See FINANCE.]

fin·back (fīn/'bāk') n. A porpoise, especially Balaenoptera physalus of the Atlantic and Pacific coasts, that attains a length of about 21 meters (70 feet). Also called fin whale fin·ca (fīng/'kə, fēng/'kə) n. A rural property, especially a large farm or ranch, in Spanish America. [American Spanish, from Spanish, real estate, from Old Spanish finçar, to pitch tents, reside, from Vulgar Latin fingicāre*, from Latin figere, to fasten. See dhīg^w- in Appendix.]

finch (fīnch) n. Any of various relatively small birds of the family Fringillidae, including the goldfinches, sparrows, cardinals, grosbeaks, and canaries, having a short, stout bill adapted for cracking seeds. [Middle English, from Old English finc.]

find (fīnd) v. found (found), find·ing, finds. — v. tr. 1. To come upon, often by accident; meet with. 2. To come upon after a search: found the hidden leak in the pipe. 3. To discover or ascertain through observation, experience, or study: found a solution; find the product of two numbers; found that it didn't really matter. 4. a. To perceive to be, after experience or consideration: found the gadget surprisingly useful; found the book entertaining. b. To experience or feel: found comfort in her smile. 5. To recover (something lost): found her keys. 6. To recover the use of; regain: found my voice and replied. 7. To succeed in reaching;

arrive at: The dart found its mark. 8. To obtain or acquire by effort: found the money by economizing. 9. To decide on and make a declaration about: The jury deliberated and found a verdict of guilty. All but one of the jurors found him guilty. 10. To furnish; supply. 11. a. To bring (oneself) to an awareness of what one truly wishes to be and do in life. b. To perceive (oneself) to be in a specific place or condition: found herself at home that night; found himself drawn to the stranger. — v. intr. To come to a legal decision or verdict: The jury found for the defendant. — n. 1. The act of finding. 2. Something that is found, especially an unexpectedly valuable discovery: the Rosetta stone, that providential archaeological find. —phrasal verb. find out. 1. To ascertain (something), as through examination or inquiry: I found out the phone number by looking it up. If you're not sure, find out. 2. To detect the true nature or character of; expose: Liars risk being found out. 3. To detect and apprehend; catch: Most embezzlers are found out in the end. [Middle English finden, from Old English findan. See pent- in Appendix.] —find/a·ble adj.

find·er (fīn'dər) n. 1. One that finds: a finder of great hidden treasure. 2. A viewfinder. 3. A low-power, wide-angle telescope fixed to the body of a more powerful telescope and pointed in the same direction for initially locating an object to be observed.

find·er's fee (fīn'dərz fē) n. pl. finders' fees. A fee paid to the finder of financial backing for a venture or to a party that brings the principals in a venture together.

fin-de-siè·cle (fān'də-sē-ĕk'lə) adj. Of or characteristic of the last part of the 19th century, especially with reference to its artistic climate of effete sophistication. [French : fin, end + de, of + siècle, century.]

find·ing (fīn'dīŋ) n. 1. Something that has been found. 2. a. A conclusion reached after examination or investigation: the finding of a grand jury; a coroner's findings. b. A statement or document containing an authoritative decision or conclusion: a presidential finding that authorized the covert operation.

3. findings. Small tools and materials used by an artisan: a jeweler's findings.

Find·lay (fīnd'lē) A city of northwest Ohio south of Toledo. It is a manufacturing center in an agricultural region. Population, 35,703.

fine¹ (fīn) adj. fin·er, fin·est. 1. Of superior quality, skill, or appearance: a fine day; a fine writer. 2. Very small in size, weight, or thickness: fine type; fine paper. 3. a. Free from impurities. b. Abbr. f., F. Metallurgy. Containing pure metal in a specified proportion or amount: gold 21 carats fine. 4. Very sharp; keen: a blade with a fine edge. 5. Thin; slender: fine hairs. 6. Exhibiting careful and delicate artistry: fine china. See Synonyms at delicate. 7. Consisting of very small particles; not coarse: fine dust. 8. a. Subtle or precise: a fine difference. b. Able to make or detect effects of great subtlety or precision; sensitive: has a fine eye for color. 9. Trained to the highest degree of physical efficiency: a fine racehorse.

10. Characterized by refinement or elegance. 11. Being in a state of satisfactory health; quite well: I'm fine. And you? 12. Used as an intensive: a fine mess. — adv. 1. Finely. 2. Informal. Very well: doing fine. — v. tr. intr. fined, fin-ing, fines. To make or become finer, purer, or cleaner. [Middle English fin, from Old French, from Latin fīnis, end.] — fine'ness n.

fine² (fīn) n. 1. A sum of money required to be paid as a penalty for an offense. 2. Law. a. A forfeiture or penalty to be paid to the offended party in a civil action. b. An amicable settlement of a suit over land ownership. 3. Obsolete. An end; a termination. — v. tr. fined, fin-ing, fines. To require the payment of a fine from; impose a fine on. — idiom. in fine. 1. In conclusion; finally. 2. In summation; in brief. [Middle English fin, from Old French, settlement, compensation, from Medieval Latin fīnis, from Latin fīnis, end.] — fin'a-ble, fine'a-ble adj.

fi-ne³ (fē'nā) n. Music. The end. [Italian, from Latin fīnis, end.]

fine art (fīn ärt) n. 1. Abbr. FA, F.A. a. Art produced or intended primarily for beauty rather than utility. b. Often fine arts. Any of the art forms, such as sculpture, painting, and music, that are used to create this art. 2. Something requiring highly developed techniques and skills: the fine art of teaching.

fine-drawn (fīn'drōn') adj. 1. Drawn out to a slender, threadlike state: fine-drawn wire. 2. Subtly or precisely fashioned: a fine-drawn theory. 3. Delicately formed: fine-drawn features.

fine-grained (fīn'grānd') adj. Having a fine, smooth, even grain: fine-grained wood.

fine-ly (fīn'lē) adv. 1. In a fine manner; splendidly. 2. To a fine point; discriminatingly. 3. In small pieces or parts; minutely: finely chopped nuts.

fine print (fīn prīnt) n. 1. The portion of a document, especially a contract, that contains qualifications or restrictions in small type or obscure language. 2. Something presented in a deliberately ambiguous or obscure manner. Also called small print fin-er-y (fī'nə-rē) n. pl. fin-er-ies. Elaborate adornment, especially fine clothing and accessories.

fines herbes (fēn zərb', fēn ěrb') pl.n. Finely chopped herbs, specifically parsley, chives, tarragon, and thyme, mixed together and used as a seasoning. [French : fines, feminine pl. of fin, fine + herbes, pl. of herbe, herb.]

fine-spun (fīn'spŭn') adj. 1. Developed to extreme fineness or subtlety; elaborate. 2. Developed to excessive fineness or subtlety; overwrought.

fi-nesse (fə-nēs') n. 1. Refinement and delicacy of performance, execution, or artisanship. 2. Skillful, subtle handling of a situation; tactful, diplomatic maneuvering. 3. Games. The playing of a card in a suit in which one holds a nonsequential higher card, either to induce an opponent to play an intermediate card that one's partner can then top or to win the trick economically. 4. A stratagem in which one appears to decline an advantage. — v. fi-nessed, fi-ness-ing, fi-ness-es. — v. tr. 1. To accomplish by the use of finesse. 2. To handle with a deceptive or evasive strategy. 3. Games. To play (a card) as a finesse. — v. intr. 1. To use finesse. 2. Games. To make a finesse in cards. [French, fineness, subtlety, from fin, fine. See FINE¹.]

fine structure (fīn strūk'chər) n. 1. Physics. The splitting of spectral lines caused by the magnetic moments of orbiting electrons in the atomic nucleus.

2. Biology. See ultrastructure.

fine-toothed comb (fīn'tōōtht' kōm, -tōōthd') n. 1. A comb with teeth set close together. 2. A method of searching or investigating in minute detail: examined the figures with a fine-toothed comb but found no errors.

fine-tune (fīn'tōōn', -tyōōn') v. tr. fine-tuned, fine-tun-ing, fine-tunes. To make small adjustments in for optimal performance or effectiveness: “Advertising agencies kept fine-tuning the coolly calculated machinery of merchandising and hype” (New Yorker).

fin·fish (fīn'fīsh') n. An aquatic vertebrate of the superclass Pisces.

Fin·gal's Cave (fīng'gəlz kāv) A cavern of western Scotland on Staffa Island in the Inner Hebrides. The cave is noted for its unusual beauty.

fin·ger (fīng'gər) n. 1. One of the five digits of the hand, especially one other than the thumb. 2. The part of a glove designed to cover a finger. 3. Something, such as an oblong peninsula, that resembles one of the digits of the hand. 4. The length or width of a finger. 5. A degree of participation; a share: “seems almost sure to have a finger or two in crafting the final blueprint” (George B. Merry).

6. An obscene gesture of defiance or derision made by pointing or jabbing the middle finger upward. Often used with the. — v. fin-gered, fin-ger-ing, fin-gers. — v. tr. 1. To touch with the fingers; handle. See Synonyms at touch. 2. Music. a. To mark (a score) with indications of which fingers are to play the notes. b. To play (an instrument) by using the fingers in a particular order or way. 3. Slang. a. To inform on. b. To designate, especially as an intended victim. — v. intr. 1. To handle something with the fingers. 2. Music. To use the fingers in playing an instrument. — idioms. have (one's) fingers crossed (or keep (one's) fingers crossed). To hope for a successful or advantageous outcome. twist around (one's) little finger (or wrap around (one's) little finger). To dominate utterly and effortlessly. [Middle English, from Old English. See penk^we in Appendix.] — fin'ger-er n. — fin'ger-less adj.

fin·ger-board (fīng'gər-bōrd', -bōrd') n. Music. A strip of wood on the neck of a stringed instrument against which the strings are pressed in playing.

finger bowl (fīng'gər bōl) n. A small bowl that holds water for rinsing the fingers at the table.

fin·ger-breadth (fīng'gər-brēdth') n. The breadth of one finger.

fin·gered (fɪŋg'gərd) adj. Having a finger or fingers, especially of a specific number, kind, or appearance. Often used in combination: four-fingered; rosy-fingered.

finger hole (fɪŋg'gər hōl) n. 1. Music. Any of the holes on a wind instrument that cause a change in pitch when covered by a finger. 2. A hole or an opening for a finger, as in a bowling ball or on the dial of a telephone.

fin·ger·ing (fɪŋg'gər-ɪŋ) n. Music. 1. The technique used in playing an instrument with the fingers. 2. The indication on a score of which fingers are to be used in playing.

Fin·ger Lakes (fɪŋg'gər lāks) A group of 11 elongated glacial lakes in west-central New York, including Cayuga and Seneca, the largest and deepest of the lakes. The region is a major grape-growing area with many resorts and recreational facilities.

fin·ger·ling (fɪŋg'gər-lɪŋ) n. A young or small fish, especially a young salmon or trout.

finger millet (fɪŋg'gər mɪl'ɪt) n. An annual plant (Eleusine coracana) in the grass family, native to the Old World tropics and an important cereal in India and Africa. Also called ragi fin·ger·nail (fɪŋg'gər-nāl') n. The nail on a finger.

fin·ger·paint (fɪŋg'gər-pānt') v. tr. intr. fin·ger·paint·ed, fin·ger·paint·ing, fin·ger·paints. To make by or engage in finger painting.

finger painting (fɪŋg'gər pān'tɪŋ) n. 1. The technique of painting by applying color to moistened paper with the fingers. 2. A picture made with this technique.

fin·ger·pick (fɪŋg'gər-pɪk') v. fin·ger·pick·ed, fin·ger·pick·ing, fin·ger·pick·s. Music. — v. intr. To play a stringed instrument, such as the guitar or banjo, by plucking individual strings with the fingers. — v. tr. To play (a stringed instrument) by plucking individual strings with the fingers. — fin'ger·pick'er n.

finger pick (fɪŋg'gər pɪk) n. A pointed, slightly curved plectrum worn on the fingertip, used in playing a stringed instrument such as the guitar or banjo.

finger post (fɪŋg'gər pōst) n. A guidepost in the shape of a pointing hand.

fin·ger·print (fɪŋg'gər-prɪnt') n. 1. An impression on a surface of the curves formed by the ridges on a fingertip, especially such an impression made in ink and used as a means of identification. 2. A distinctive or identifying mark or characteristic: “the invisible fingerprint that’s used on labels and packaging to sort out genuine products from counterfeits” (Gene G. Marcial). — v. tr.

fin·ger·print·ed, fin·ger·print·ing, fin·ger·prints. 1. To take the fingerprints of. 2. To identify by means of a distinctive mark or characteristic.

fin·ger·spell·ing (fɪŋg'gər-spɛl'ɪŋ) n. Communication by means of a manual alphabet. — fin'ger·spell' v.

fin·ger·tip (fɪŋg'gær-tɪp') n. The extreme end or tip of a finger. —idiom. at (one's) fingertips. Readily or instantly available.

finger wave (fɪŋg'gær wāv) n. A wave set into dampened hair using only the fingers and a comb.

fin·i·al (fɪn'ē-əl) n. 1. Architecture. An ornament fixed to the peak of an arch or arched structure. 2. An ornamental terminating part, such as the screw on top of a lampshade. [Middle English, last, finial, variant of final. See FINAL.]

fin·i·cal (fɪn'ī-kəl) adj. Finicky. [Probably from FINE¹.] —fin'·i·cal·ly adv. —fin'·i·cal·ness n.

fin·ick·y (fɪn'ī-kē) adj. fin·ick·i·er, fin·ick·i·est. Insisting capriciously on getting just what one wants; difficult to please; fastidious: a finicky eater. [From finick, a finical person, from FINICAL.] —fin'·ick·i·ness n.

fin·is (fɪn'is, fɪ'nɪs, fē-nē') n. The end; the conclusion: setbacks that wrote finis to our venture. [Middle English, from Latin fīnis.]

fin·ish (fɪn'ɪʃ) v. fin·ished, fin·ish·ing, fin·ish·es. — v. tr. 1. To arrive at or attain the end of: finish a race. 2. To bring to an end; terminate: finished cleaning the room. 3. To consume all of; use up: finish a pie. 4. To bring to a desired or required state: finish a painting. See Synonyms at complete. 5. To give (wood, for example) a desired or particular surface texture. 6. To destroy; kill: finished the injured horse with a bullet. 7. To bring about the ruin of: The stock market crash finished many speculators. — v. intr. 1. To come to an end; stop. 2. To reach the end of a task, course, or relationship. — n. 1. Abbr. fin. The final part; the conclusion: racers neck-and-neck at the finish. 2. The reason for one's ruin; downfall. 3. Something that completes, concludes, or perfects, especially: a. The last treatment or coating of a surface: applied a shellac finish to the cabinet. b. The surface texture produced by such a treatment or coating. c. A material used in surfacing or finishing. 4. Completeness, thoroughness, refinement, or smoothness of execution; polish. [Middle English finishen, from Old French finir, finiss-, to complete, from Latin fīnīre, from fīnis, end.] —fin'·ish·er n.

fin·ished (fɪn'ɪʃt) adj. 1. Highly accomplished or skilled; polished: a finished artist. 2. Exhibiting a high degree of skill or polish: an essay that was a finished piece of work.

fin·ish·ing school (fɪn'ī-shɪŋ skool) n. A private girls' school that stresses training in cultural subjects and social activities.

finishing touch (fɪn'ī-shɪŋ tʊç) n. A small change or addition that serves to complete something.

finish line (fɪn'ɪʃ lɪn) n. Sports. A line that marks the end of a course for racing.

Fin-is-terre (fɪn'ɪ-stār', fē'nē-stēr'rē), Cape. A rocky promontory of extreme northwest Spain on the Atlantic Ocean. Off the cape the British won two naval victories over the French (1747 and 1805).

fi-nite (fi'nīt') adj. 1. a. Having bounds; limited: a finite list of choices; our finite fossil fuel reserves. b. Existing, persisting, or enduring for a limited time only; impermanent. 2. Mathematics. a. Being neither infinite nor infinitesimal. b. Having a positive or negative numerical value; not zero. c. Possible to reach or exceed by counting. Used of a number. d. Having a limited number of elements. Used of a set. 3. Grammar. Limited by person, number, tense, and mood. Used of a verb that can serve as a predicate or the initial element of one. — n. A finite thing. [Middle English finit, from Latin fīnītus, past participle of fīnīre, to limit, from fīnis, end.] —fi'nite/ly adv. —fi'nite'ness n.

fin-i-tude (fɪn'ɪ-tōōd', -tyōōd', fī'nī-) n. The quality or condition of being finite.

fink (fɪŋk) Slang. n. 1. A contemptible person. 2. An informer. 3. A hired strikebreaker. — v. intr. finked, fink-ing, finks. 1. To inform against another person. 2. To withhold promised support or participation; back down: They said they would help us, but then finked out. [Origin unknown.]

Fink (fɪŋk), Mike. 1770?-1822. American frontiersman and folk hero known for his marksmanship, fighting skills, and braggadocio.

Fin-land (fɪn'lænd) Abbr. Fin. A country of northern Europe bordering on the Gulf of Bothnia and the Gulf of Finland. Controlled from the 13th century by Sweden and from the 19th century by Russia, it became independent in 1919. Helsinki is the capital and the largest city. Population, 4,893,748. —Fin'/land-er n.

Finland, Gulf of. An arm of the Baltic Sea bordered by Finland, Russia, and Estonia. An important shipping lane, the shallow gulf is usually frozen from December to March.

Fin-land-ize (fɪn'læn-dīz') v. tr. Fin-land-ized, Fin-land-iz-ing, Fin-land-iz-es. To cause (a country or other political unit) to adopt a neutral or conciliatory posture and policy in its relations with a great power. —Fin'-land-i-za'tion n.

Fin-lay (fɪn'lā, fēn-lī'), Carlos Juan. 1833-1915. Cuban-born American physician who identified the mosquito as the carrier of yellow fever.

Fin-lay River (fɪn'lē rɪv'ər) A river of northern British Columbia, Canada, flowing about 402 km (250 mi) to the Peace River.

Finn (fɪn) n. 1. A native or inhabitant of Finland. 2. One who speaks Finnish or a Finnic language. [From Swedish Finne.]

fin-nan had-die (fɪn'ən həd'ē) n. Smoked haddock. Also called finnan haddock [From alteration of Findon, or Findhorn, villages of northeast Scotland.]

Finn·bog·a·dót·tir (fɪn' bō-gə-dō'tər, -gä-dō'tŭr), Vigdís. Born 1930. President of Iceland (since 1980) and the first democratically elected woman head of state.

finned (fɪnd) adj. Having a fin, fins, or finlike parts. Often used in combination: single-finned; multifinned.

Fin·ney (fɪn' ē), Charles Grandison. 1792-1875. American religious leader and educator who was president of Oberlin College in Ohio (1851-1866).

Fin·nic (fɪn' ɪk) adj. Of or relating to Finland or the Finns. — n. A branch of Finno-Ugric that includes Finnish, Estonian, and Lapp.

Finn·ish (fɪn' ɪʃ) adj. Abbr. Fin. Of or relating to Finland or its people, language, or culture. — n. The Finno-Ugric language of the Finns.

Fin·no·U·gric (fɪn' ō-ōō' grɪk, -yōō'-) also Fin·no·U·gri·an (-ōō' grē-ən, -yōō'-) n. A subfamily of the Uralic language family that includes Finnish, Hungarian, and other languages of eastern Europe and the northwest Soviet Union. — adj. 1. Of or relating to the Finns and the Ugrians. 2. Of or relating to Finno-Ugric.

fin·ny (fɪn' ē) adj. fin·ni·er, fin·ni·est. 1. Having a fin or fins. 2. Resembling a fin; finlike. 3. Of, relating to, or full of fish.

fi·noc·chi·o also fi·no·chi·o (fə-nō'kē-ō') n. A variety of fennel (Foeniculum vulgare var. dulce) whose blanched aromatic, celerylike stalks are eaten as a vegetable. Also called Florence fennel, sweet fennel. [Italian, from Latin fēniculum, fennel, diminutive of fēnum, hay. See dhē(i)- in Appendix.]

Fin·sen (fɪn' sən), Niels Ryberg. 1860-1904. Danish physician. He won a 1903 Nobel Prize for developing a method of treating skin diseases with ultraviolet light.

Fin·ster·aar·horn (fɪn' stər-är' hōrn') A peak, 4,276.7 m (14,022 ft) high, of the Bernese Alps in south-central Switzerland. It is the highest elevation in the range.

fin whale (fɪn hwāl) n. See finback.

fiord (fyôrd, fyōrd) n. Variant of fjord.

fip·ple (fɪp' əl) n. Music. 1. A whistlelike mouthpiece for certain wind instruments, such as a recorder or flageolet, that channels the breath toward the sounding edge of a side opening. 2. An object similar to a fipple in an organ pipe. [Origin unknown.]

fipple flute (fɪp' əl flōōt) n. Music. A flute, such as a recorder, with a fipple.

fir (fûr) n. 1. a. Any of various evergreen trees of the genus Abies, having single, flattened needles and erect cones with deciduous scales. b. Any of several similar or related trees, such as the Douglas fir. 2. The wood of these trees. [Middle English firre, probably of Scandinavian origin. See perk^wu- in Appendix.]

—fir'ry adj.

Fir-bank (fîr'bāngk'), (Arthur Annesley) Ronald. 1886-1926. British writer known for his satiric novels, including Vainglory (1915) and Valmouth (1919).

Fir-dau-si (fîr-dou'sē) also Fir-du-si (fər-dōō'-), Pen name of Abul Kasim Mansur. 940?-1020?. Persian epic poet whose Book of Kings (1010) recounts the history of Persia from the arrival of the Persians to the Arab conquest.

fire (fîr) n. 1. a. A rapid, persistent chemical change that releases heat and light and is accompanied by flame, especially the exothermic oxidation of a combustible substance. b. Burning fuel or other material: a cooking fire; a forest fire.
2. a. Burning intensity of feeling; ardor. See Synonyms at passion.
b. Enthusiasm. 3. Luminosity or brilliance, as of a cut and polished gemstone.
4. Liveliness and vivacity of imagination; brilliance. 5. A severe test; a trial or torment. 6. A fever or bodily inflammation. 7. a. The discharge of firearms or artillery: heard the fire of cannon. b. The launching of a missile, rocket, or similar ballistic body. c. Discharged bullets or other projectiles: subjected enemy positions to heavy mortar fire; struck by rifle fire. 8. Intense, repeated attack or criticism: answered the fire from her political critics. — n. attributive. Often used to modify another noun: a fire chief; fire prevention. — v. fired, fir-ing, fires. — v. tr. 1. a. To cause to burn; ignite. b. To light (something) up as if by fire: The morning sun fired the tops of the trees. 2. a. To add fuel to (something burning). b. To maintain or fuel a fire in. 3. a. To bake in a kiln: fire pottery. b. To dry by heating. 4. To arouse the emotions of; make enthusiastic or ardent: warriors who were fired by patriotism. 5. a. To discharge (a firearm, for example). b. To detonate (an explosive). 6. a. To propel (a projectile); launch (a missile). b. Informal. To throw with force and speed; hurl: fire a ball at a batter. c. To utter or direct with insistence: fired questions at the senator. 7. Games. To score (a number) in a game or contest. 8. Informal. To discharge from a position; dismiss. See Synonyms at dismiss. — v. intr. 1. To become ignited; flame up. 2. a. To become excited or ardent. b. To become angry or annoyed. 3. To tend a fire. 4. a. To shoot a weapon: aimed and fired at the target. b. To detonate an explosive. c. To ignite fuel, as in an engine. 5. Informal. To project or hurl a missile: The pitcher wound up and fired. 6. Physiology. To generate an electrical impulse. Used of a neuron. 7. To become yellowed or brown before reaching maturity, as grain. — phrasal verbs. fire away. Informal. To start to talk or ask questions. fire off. 2. To utter or ask rapidly. 3. To write and send (a letter, for example) in haste. — idioms. between two fires. Being attacked from two sources or sides simultaneously. on fire. 2. Ignited; ablaze. 3. Filled with enthusiasm or excitement. start a fire under (or light a fire under) (or build a fire under). Slang. To urge or goad to action. under fire. 5. Exposed or subjected to enemy attack. 6. Exposed or subjected to critical attack or censure: an official who was under fire for mismanagement. [Middle English fir, from Old English fȳr. See pūr- in Appendix.] — fire'a-ble adj. — fir'er n.

- fire alarm (fīr ə-lärm') n. Abbr. f.a. 1. A device, such as a siren, used in announcing the outbreak of a fire. 2. The signal, especially the noise, produced by such a device.
- fire ant (fīr änt) n. Any of several ants of the genus Solenopsis, especially S. geminata or S. saevissima of the southern United States and tropical America, that build large mounds and are capable of inflicting a painful sting.
